Charles R. Snyder, professor of sociology at SIU, is the director of the confer-

The conference centers around research done by social scientists on the problems of alcohol and drinking patterns.

One of the main problems of social research of this nature is the overlap of findings," said Snyder. "By bringing the scientists to-gether, findings can be disgether, findings can be discussed and plans for the future can be put into better perspective." A worker in the office who knew the original purchaser realized Sieber was using a false name. The Office of Student Affairs said that once the ticket was appealed, the jig was up.

Had Sieber used his own name, his file would have shown he was not supposed to have a car. Even if the student affairs employe had not caught the deception, the original owner's file would have shown him withdrawn from school.

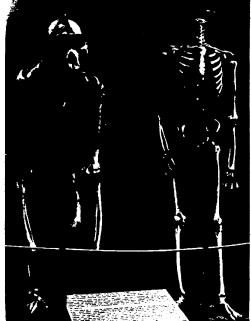

The office said Sieber told authorities he appealed the ticket because be did not want to lose his driving privileges.

8:00 CLASS; Just for the record, I thought you might like to see the statistics on "Students of the Week." Out of a total of 61 students, 33 of those selected were members of the Sphinx Club, 28 were non-members: 29 were members of social Greek organi-zations, 32 were not affiliated with any social Greek organizations; out of the entire total. 2 were Theatre majors. After my impromptu tabulation with Miss Mullins, she stated that Student of the Week is chosen on the basis of membership in the Sphinx Club or a major contributing achievement while an undergraduate at SIU. 10:00 COFFEE BREAK; Sigma Beta Gamma, professional radio and TV fraternity is working hand-in-hand with some members of the Student Council in trying to petition to present to University Council for the purpose of initiating an all-campus radio station for the students to run and operate. The Board of Trustees has said there shall be no student campus-political parties. This is done in the hope that the campus will never split into Greek vs. Independent. There are no objections to a group of students getting together to decide to back a candidate. The only group which has ever emerged with the organization to caucus in this manner is Greek Row. It is not surprising that the can-didates backed by Greek Row win. This leads the student body-at-large to complain that the campus is controlled by Greeks. This, in turn, leads the Greeks to be on the defensive in order to preserve their system.

Because of the defensive tactics which Greek Row feels the need to use, often their candidates are chosen for purely political reasons rather than for ability. While I cannot

There are two candidates this election who refuse to be pawns of any one sys-tem. They have rejected the small-time, blocking tactics of the caucus. IICPR Service Committee

by Y. Stevens

The Service Committee of the University Center Pro-gramming Board is somewhat different than the other eight committees. This committee has no weekly programs to plan. This lack of formal task enables it to be continually working on new ideas in an attempt to meet the needs and the desires of the campus.

The Service Committee reviews the suggestions that are placed in the box at the In-formation Desk in the Center, and thus, serves as a sounding board for students---married. graduates, disabled, in short, students in need. Every effort is made to channel these sug-gestions to the proper people r departments on campus for further action.

Currently, the committee is working on a new Rides-Home system. Also, a new Lost-and-Found system is being initiated this term. Articles are still to be turned in to the Incormation Desk at the Center.

One of the most recent innovations established by Sernovations established by service Committee is the SCRATCH SHEET, located in the University Center. Students may put up any notice, advertisement, wants, needs, activities reacon on this etc. (within reason) on this designated bulletin without clearing it through any office.

Individuals interested serving on this Committee should apply to the Activities Office Center. the University

Absurd Enjoyment

by Ken Blumenthal

Dr. J. B. Stephenson is one of the finest and bravest directors whose productions I have had the pleasure to see. His two plays, The American Dream and The Bald Soprano, were directed with an extremely skilled hand. He was brave in that his audience. for the most part, is not ready for this type of play. The Bald Soprano moved quickly and cleverly, and performances were on a good level. Randy Blunt, who was a shade better than the rest, deserves mention. His expression and voice made him more interesting character. The American Dream cast was also on a level with the exception of Burton Dikelsky whose acting was quite apparently inexperienced in an unfinished sense. Lynn unfinished sense. Lynn Leonard deserves mention for a sparkling performance. Her voice, sense of character, and every facial movement re-flected real talent. Eelin Harrison realized and satisfied the costuming demands of both plays in her usual insightful way. The set was interesting and never distracted; however the effect of imbalance which Mr. Payne hoped to create by slanting the pictures and chairs, was not quite carried out as well as it was pictured in the designer's drawing on the program cover. This the program cover. This caused the end product to lose some of its vitality. Humorous as the folk songs were, they weren't needed. Over-all this was an excellent evening, even though the Playhouse will probably lose future ticket sales due to the new style of the plays, which Southern Illinois (territory) simply
