Millions unite on May Day

United Press International

Millions of people in Communist countries around the world Monday joined in noisy rallies and violent protests that dominated the May Day holiday as much as festive, official celebrations of the workers' paradise.

Officials appealed for an end to ethnic violence in the Soviet Union, while up to 100,000 Solidarity supporters held an independent rally for the first time in Warsaw, dwarfing the official Communist Party commemoration.

In Turkey, South Korea and the Philippines, violence erupted when police in those non-Communist nations tried to block May Day rallies. At least one person was reported to have been killed and 15 others injured in Turkey.

In Moscow, some 150,000 people waving red banners, posters and balloons marched through Red Square in an atmosphere carefully tuned to the theme of glasnost and internal reform.

Similar marches took place in virtually every major town and city across the Soviet Union. But in Tbilisi, Georgia, the traditional parade was canceled following the deaths of 20 Georgian nationalist demonstrators in a clash with security forces April 10.

Festivities also were canceled in Yerevan, Armenia, to remember the 24,800 victims of the earthquake of last Dec. 7. In Tallinn, Estonia, public meetings about perestroika substituted for the usual march of workers.

Moscow's two-hour parade ended with gymnasts gyrating to blaring rock music under a giant poster depicting a more gentle-looking image of the fathers of Communism — Marx, Engels and Lenin — draped across the Gum department store flanking the square.

With Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and other members of the ruling Politburo perched atop Lenin's tomb, waves of workers and school children paraded past in a traditional demonstration in praise of work and the Communist Party.

Complaints leave rangers with mounds of paperwork

By Richard Nunez

Forest ranger Larry Burkhart spends most of his time these days shuffling through paperwork, but he would rather be outside working in the woods.

As forest management becomes more technical, forest officials receive closer scrutiny from environmentalists and nature lovers. These pressures force Burkhart and other forest officials to concentrate most of their attention on appeals by groups demanding closer study of forest management projects.

"A lot of people probably think we ride a horse and carry a gun," Burkhart, district ranger of the Murphysboro Forest Service, said. "Nowadays, our job is mostly administrative."

Many projects, such as trail maintenance and timber cutting, are put on hold until appeals can be processed, Burkhart said. When he and other forestry officials make decisions involving forest management, those decisions are sent out for public review.

If anyone disagrees with a decision, Burkhart said an appeal can be made to the forest supervisor in Harrisburg. A decision then will be made on whether to proceed with the plan or submit it for further review by forestry officials.

If an appeal fails, the only recourse left is through the court system, he said.

Burkhart said he doesn't doubt the good intentions of the various environmental groups or that their concerns aren't well-founded, but he does believe appeals are costing the taxpayers money and also

Remains of SIU-C grad being flown to Illinois

After 17 years, Maj. Robert R. Lynn is finally coming home.

Lynn, a 1963 University graduate, was reported as missing in action on December 21, 1972, when his plane went down over Southeast Asia.

His remains were among those delivered in winter of 1998 to the military's casualty identification branch in Hawaii. The remains arrived in California yesterday and will be sent to Springfield to be buried in the Camp Butler National Cemetery on Wednesday afternoon.

Perry Murry, former staff adviser to the Veterans' Club, said there will be a memorial service for Lynn on Wednesday at 7:45 a.m. in front of the Old Main Flagpole. Representatives from the Veterans' Club and the Army and Air Force ROTC programs will be present at the service.

"I think this is a very appropriate ceremony because it shows that those guys missing could be real students, not just nameless faces from the east coast or wherever," Murry said.

Lynn, a former native of Jacksonville, was among six SIU-C students reported missing in action. The return of Lynn's remains bring the total number of Illinois MIA's to 102.

"We're just glad he's finally come home," Murry said.

City: Decision on Halloween near

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

City Council members say they would like to give University students a decision tonight on the city staff's recommendation to cancel Carbondale's annual Halloween celebration.

"We are going to have to make a decision" before the students leave, Councilman

Richard Morris said.

The council discussed ending the street party at its April 18 meeting, but no decision was reached.

"It has been pretty obvious," Councilman John Mills said. "Halloween as we knew it is a thing of the past."

When the Halloween issue comes before the council at its meeting tonight, the members could decide to eliminate Halloween Fair Days.

The Fair Days ordinance allows open consumption of alcohol during the street party.

The council also could make alterations to the party such as banning aluminum cans or limiting the drinking area to Grand Avenue.

Judge: Death penalty unconstitutional

DANVILLE (UPD) — A federal judge Monday ruled the Illinois death penalty violates a defendant's right to a fair trial and declared the law unconstitutional.

U.S. District Judge Harold Baker vacated the death penalty against convicted killer Charles Silagy on grounds the law does not allow the defendant due process.

The ruling put in question the futures of the state's 118 death row inmates. Among them are John Wayne Gacy, convicted of killing 33 young men and boys, and Charles Walker, who tied a couple to a tree, robbed and shot them while they were fishing at Silver Creek near Mascoutah.

Both are awaiting execution at Merard Correctional Center. Baker said under Illinois law prosecutors do not have to announce a prosecution is a capital punishment case until after a conviction. Baker said a defendant should know the severity of a case at the start of trial.

Illinois Appellate Defender Theodore Gottfried, whose office represented Silagy in the appeal, said it is unclear what impact the ruling will have.

"Legally, it's not clear what the implications are for the state. Clearly, it controls the Silagy case but to what impact it has in other cases depends on the individual case. Obviously, we think other Illinois courts should follow this opinion."

"They will all sink or swim with this case," said Assistant Attorney General Jack Donatelli, the prosecutor in the Silagy case. "That would include even the most notorious killers like Gacy and Walker. Either they'll all stay on death row or they'll all have to be sentenced."

Social work review being conducted

Accreditation team looks at 1-year-old master's program

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

The master's degree program for the University's School of Social Work is being reviewed by the Council on Social Work and Education from Washington D.C.

Last June, the Illinois Board of Higher Education allowed the School of Social Work to administer a master's degree program on a trial basis. Mary Davidson, director of the school, said,

"We were thrilled to get the chance to have a master's program for social work here at the University," Davidson said. "Although the final decision to actually have the program has yet to be made, things are looking very optimistic."

The council will review the accreditation team's report and make the final decision, Davidson said.

The accreditation team will meet today with students and faculty in the master's program as well as University administrators to discuss their opinions and feelings toward the program, Davidson said.

The accreditation team will review the classes, curriculum, faculty and students within the master's degree program.

At present, the program is pre-accredited, Davidson said. This means students in the program can still graduate with a master's degree even if the University does not receive the accreditation.

"The visit is basically a fact-finding mission," she said. "The review team will compile a list of facts to take back to Washington." The team will then submit a report to the Council on Social Work and Education, she said.

"They've obviously heard some positive things about our program that they want to check out for themselves," Davidson said.

In the first year of the program, three University students took top honors in the statewide Fourth Annual Marguerite Tiefenthal School of Social Work Intern Symposium competition.

The first-place award went to Carole Nelson for her paper, "Attention Deficit Disorder."

Third place went to Shelia Ashby for her paper on "Childhood Autism: The School Social Worker's Role."

Fourth place went to Connie Clark for her paper on "Learning Disabled Children — A Special Population."

Graduate students from all social work programs that are accredited in Illinois competed.

Interns submitted papers on social work practice in school settings. The papers were selected by a panel of school social workers and University faculty, Davidson said.

"We are very hopeful about the master's degree program," Davidson said.

Cold fusion results refuted

Scientists at two leading research universities produced strong new evidence Monday casting doubt on work by two chemists who said they achieved nuclear fusion in a jar at room temperature at the University of Utah.

Researchers at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Cambridge, Mass., and the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena said they had been unable to reproduce the "cold fusion" experiment.

A 16-member team at MIT investigating the work by Stanley Pons and Martin Fleischmann said it determined that the Utah researchers overestimated the amount of neutrons their experiment produced — a pivotal piece of evidence.

At Caltech, chemistry professor Nathan Lewis said in a statement, "We have no evidence whatsoever for nuclear reactions or even for unusual chemical reactions."

Lewis was part of a team led by Caltech physicist Charles Barnes.

Data on cheaper source of energy disputed by Swedish researcher

By Alicia Hill
Staff Writer

A cheaper, more powerful and virtually unlimited energy source is the result many scientists are hoping is achieved through a fusion process at room temperature.

Researchers at the University of Utah claim they have detected fusion of heavy hydrogen atoms at about 60 degrees Fahrenheit.

Some researchers, however, are very doubtful such a process is possible. Roger Waeppling from the University of Uppsala in Sweden questioned the Utah research results.

Usually, the extremely high temperatures required to produce fusion reactions have been a major deterrent in achieving fusion in an atmosphere controlled by scientists who might be injured in the process.

Physicists have long sought a method for using the great amount of energy that can be produced through a fusion reaction.

Although fusion is the key source of energy in the sun and stars thus far, the reaction's potential has only been exercised in the development of the hydrogen bomb. Bary Malik, SIU-C professor of physics, said,

Discrepancies exist in the number of neutrons and protons produced in the fusion reaction.

If the reaction could be controlled, the world's energy shortage would be solved.

In a colloquium given at SIU-C, Waeppling explained why he thinks cold fusion is more like "coo-fusion."

Waeppling, who has worked with similar experiments for about five years, contradicted the claims of Utah's researchers.

He announced that an extreme discrepancy exists between the results of his experiments and the claims of Utah researchers.

The discrepancy is seen in the measurement of the number of neutrons and protons produced in such a fusion reaction.

The nucleus of each hydrogen atom contains protons and neutrons. If the fusion occurs, these must be released.

While Utah's group reports measuring a large amount of neutrons being released, Waeppling's groups see hardly any, implying that no fusion occurred, he said.

"At this stage (cold fusion) is not very probable, maybe impossible," Waeppling said.

The University of Uppsala has had more winners of the Nobel prize on its faculty than any other university in the world.

The Nobel prize is given for outstanding achievement on a particular piece of research.

"At this point, I would agree with Waeppling," Malik said. "Apart from the disagreement in measurements, Utah's own measurements of the number of fusions taking place per cubic centimeter and the number of neutrons detected contradict very sharply."

According to Frank Sanders, chairman for the department of physics, SIU-C is not involved with any research of its own on the topic.

Conditions of prison are not inappropriate

JUSTICE IS HARD to define. Especially when one is talking about the treatment of criminals.

Those who protested Saturday against the conditions at the Marion Penitentiary should remember that the inmates are there either because they caused trouble in other prisons or because they are considered extremely dangerous.

They are all criminals and are there to be punished, not to enjoy a comfortable life until their time is served.

Parts of the prisoners lives probably are far from comfortable, but it is another thing to claim that they are being abused simply because they are not allowed the privileges that the rest of us have.

THERE IS GOOD reason they are not allowed outside contact with people — it would be a security risk and could endanger guards and visitors.

As for inhuman treatment and abuse, prison officials have said that restraint of the prisoners is sometimes necessary.

Searches of body cavities also are conducted out of necessity according to prison officials, because contraband material such as razor blades, handcuff keys and drugs can be hidden there.

The type of inmates housed at Marion are violent and do occasionally obtain weapons. This was proven in 1933 when two guards were stabbed to death and two others were wounded by inmates.

A LOCKDOWN BEGAN after that incident. But the prison is not on lockdown now. Inmates are allowed recreation privileges and do get to interact with other prisoners.

Perhaps the reason many of the protesters are upset about the prison conditions is that they have friends or family members incarcerated there and are too close to the issue.

They have called the prison a dungeon and claim the prisoners are treated like animals. Some of the inmates may act like animals, but they are treated as they must be to maintain order and a relatively safe atmosphere.

As for the prison being a dungeon, maybe if the prisoners were to spend some time in a real dungeon they would appreciate the few privileges they do have at the Marion Penitentiary.

Opinions from elsewhere

On a 15-acre compound in northern Idaho recently, Richard Girt Butler, a 71-year-old with the misnamed Church of Jesus Christ Christian and Aryan Nations, had a coming-out party for America's new young white segregationists.

The neo-Nazi and skinhead gathering was also a birthday celebration for Adolf Hitler. Nazi Germany's Hitler is a hero to these youngsters, who shave their hair close to their scalps and wear Third Reich paraphernalia.

The great irony is that these young people of twisted minds do not see themselves as antisocial misfits. The misfits, according to the American skinheads, are Crips and Bloods, black drug gangs notorious for violence. Jewish, Hispanic and homosexual persons are the other misfits, in skinhead opinion.

To fan their fires there are Butler and Rick Cooper of the National Socialist Vanguard in Oregon. "Today it's blacks, Crips and Bloods (who) rule the streets," Butler said, according to a Chicago journalist at the Idaho convalescence. "But in the future, it's going to be our white young who rule the streets — not with drugs, but with truth."

Butler is to a few white youngsters what Jim Jones was to a few black people. Like minister Jones, Butler has humans on the road to self-destruction. Skinheads are the sheep of shepherd Butler who intersperses his message with Christian-like prayers. Cooper teaches that Jews are agents "of Satan, just as it says in the Bible."

Neo-Nazi skinheads who act on their convictions are just as abominable as the Crips and Bloods. Each erodes the foundation of decent and law-abiding American society. In Portland, Ore., last year an Ethiopian man was beaten to death with baseball bats by a group of skinheads.

Last year the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith chronicled anti-Semitic acts that could be traced to skinheads and the movement. According to the group, there are about 2,000 avowed skinheads active in 21 states. But it only takes a few to do great damage to race relations.

These people are always ready to prop up any youngster with low self-esteem and inattentive, ignorant parents. Their remedy is a message of racial and ethnic hatred. How does one become superior? By believing everyone different is inferior.

Letters

Sexist language is restrictive to women, a serious problem

This letter is in response to a recent letter written by R. Smith, C. White and S. Parmley. The authors seem to believe that sexism in the English language does occur, yet it is of minimal importance in comparison to other issues.

While this opinion is valid, it is possible that sexist language contributes to much more important social issues.

Sexist language occurs when we use words such as "mankind" and phrases such as "all men were created equal." It is more subtle when we read about any person and they are continually referred to as "he."

It is possible that this type of language helps to enforce a social inequality in our world. We currently have more power in our society. While women and men are making strides for the equality of women, any seemingly small and insignificant structures make this very difficult.

I am not trying to discount the experiences of men. Men's career development can also be restricted when the pronoun "she" is used to refer to traditionally feminine occupations.

I know that violence against men exists as well. But I feel that women are in an inferior position and sexist language works to keep us there.

Inequality of women tends to put women in a "one down" position in our society. This position is one factor that can lead to problems such as physical and sexual violence against women, unequal wages for equal work and unequal protection under the law.

Another serious problem related to the use of sexist language is restricted career identity for women. When I was growing up, when a book talked about a doctor or firefighter or police officer or business executive, the pronoun "he" was used.

Children tend to choose occupations they can picture themselves doing. When most of us hear or read the word "he," we picture a man.

Social change begins with one person — you. If you can recognize sexism in your own life and work to change our language so that it shows more respect for women, then maybe you could start a larger chain reaction. — Maria L. Rago, graduate student, psychology.

Pro-choice ignores women's choice

The recent discussion concerning the Supreme Court decision on Roe v. Wade causes me to consider the pro-choice position and the premise upon which it stands. As I understand their position, the viability of the fetus is a non-issue.

Their only concern is the women's right to privately choose what happens to her own body. The underlying assumption is that prohibiting abortion is tantamount to removing a women's right to reproductive self determination.

It's true that our society cannot afford to lose these rights, but the hypothesis upon which this argument is based is fatally flawed. Though abortion could be made illegal in all but the most extreme cases, women, indeed humans, have reproductive choice.

The decision to engage in sex demands that the participants be responsible. The pro-abortion advocates would have the world believe that women are somehow unable to make these choices, portraying them as the most base of animals who have no capacity to make decisions.

Unwanted pregnancy is without a doubt a serious problem, and back alley abortions are not acceptable. But making it legal to take innocent human life only encourages our society to be less responsible. Are we to understand that women cannot learn responsibility?

Our world is plagued with problems which demand that its citizens become responsible and accountable.

The real issue is whether life does or doesn't begin at conception. No one has any business taking the lives of people who may or may not yet be human, least of all, those responsible for their conception. — Kim Ernst, senior, mathematics.

People should be proud of their tastes in music

This is in response to the letter from Lewis Whitten, which appeared in the April 24 DE.

I would like to defend Brad Seifert, whom you so close-mindedly branded a "hippie freak." As young adults, it is not "our job to express ourselves in ways that the older generations may not understand." Rather, it is a choice made by some.

I am not saying that any one type of music is the best, I am just trying to say that it is a person's right to choose what type of music he or she will listen to.

I do listen to the Moody Blues and CSNY, a bunch of "tried old gypsies." But they are still alive in the music industry, and deservedly so, because their music applies to problems that we are faced with in today's society.

You would not be able to listen to what you do today if it weren't for groups like the Moodies, who experimented with their music in the 60s and 70s.

It isn't a matter of hippies not being able to accept anything new (I also listen to music ranging from Madonna to U2), and it's not a matter of repeating history. It is simply that this "heavy metal debate" has gone on too long, with too many people trying to force their opinions on others.

And you seem to be one of the closed-minded in this situation, for you cannot accept the opinions of others. I am proud to be what I am, what you call a "hippie freak." — Rebecca L. Newburn, junior, German.

Variety of symptoms result from caffeine consumption

By Kimberly Hays
of the Counseling Center

Caffeine is one of the most readily available drugs in our culture. It is found in a variety of sources including soft drinks, pain relievers, chocolate, and of course coffees and teas. Caffeine is often taken to provide a quick lift or extra energy when one is feeling drowsy, but it also causes some negative side effects.

High caffeine consumption can result in a variety of symptoms. These include anxiety, restlessness, nervousness, excitement, insomnia, flushed face, increased urination, gastrointestinal complaints, muscle twitching, rambling thought, irregular heartbeat, inexhaustibility, and agitation. Symptoms of caffeine intoxication, such as ringing in the ears, sweating, and irritability can occur if an individual is highly sensitive to caffeine.

To Your Health

Furthermore, medical research suggests that caffeine consumption is linked to an increased risk of heart disease and may play a role in the production of cancer, atherosclerosis, and diabetes.

If a dependency on caffeine has developed, one commonly experiences a headache upon trying to eliminate caffeine from the diet. This generally only lasts a few hours. After caffeine has been eliminated from the diet and the body has an opportunity to adjust, caffeine-related feelings of anxiety and nervousness fade.

"cheating" citizens of the worthwhile benefits of forestry projects.

Burkhart, whose office is on the western outskirts of Murphysboro on Walnut Street, is in charge of two assistant rangers and a handful of technicians, volunteers and clerks. His is one of five Forest Service offices in the Shawnee National Forest employing slightly more than 100 rangers. Other offices are in Harrisburg, Vienna, Jonesboro and Elizabethtown.

Burkhart said the workers in his charge mostly do outdoor work, which ranges from maintaining hiking trails to fighting forest fires.

Rangers have law enforcement powers, but most of the time they are responding to reports of loud noise and drinking on campgrounds, of all-terrain vehicles "running rampant" through the woods and occasionally of poachers, Burkhart said.

"As long as people respect the rules, we generally don't spend too much time on law enforcement," Burkhart said. "We try not to use a heavy-handed law approach."

Burkhart said rangers, technicians and volunteers mostly are involved in physical labor on the more important forestry projects, projects that could potentially make the Shawnee National Forest one of the nation's leaders in forest management.

One of the projects Burkhart and other forestry officials take pride in is natural area management.

Natural area management encourages the development of natural plant communities, such as prehistoric moss, glades and flowers, Burkhart said. The techniques used in more than 6,000 areas comprising more than 11,000 acres.

Burkhart said journals and records from early area citizens and explorers have provided information on the type of plant communities that now have become rare.

"The trails in the past are quite different than what we have now," Burkhart said.

Through the years, hardwoods, such as oak and hickory, have encroached upon the sites and forestry officials have used timber cutting and prescribed burning to restore the areas to their prehistoric states, Burkhart said.

Some people opposed these methods, which they believed displaced or killed numerous insects and small animals, Burkhart said.

Burkhart said a lot of complaints forestry officials receive are critical of the increasing reliance on forestry management, such as natural area management.

"Some people would like to see us go back to a pure wilderness," Burkhart said, adding that to do so would require many people to give up their reliance on technology, such as automobiles.

"I don't think they are willing to do so," he said.

When the country was comprised mostly of forest land, nature managed to regulate the wilderness through natural channels, such as floods, tornadoes and, primarily, fire, Burkhart said.

"Nature's way years and years ago was fire," Burkhart said.

Burkhart said new recreational strategies are being pushed to provide more visual emphasis in the Shawnee. The method could involve cutting a dozen or more trees to provide vistas of canyons, lakes or rivers.

HALLOWEEN, from Page 1

In a note to the council, City Manager Steven Hoffner said city staff does not recommend designating Grand Avenue as the only drinking area.

"This would not do anything to gain control of the crowd and event," he said.

Mayor Neil Dillard said the main issue is the possible elimination of Halloween Fair Days ordinance.

"The first thing we need to do is eliminate the Fair Days ordinance," Councilman John Yow said. "That is the root of the problem."

He added that a decision concerning Fair Days has to be reached as soon as possible before the students go home.

Yow would like to see student input into what events could replace the celebration.

"It doesn't have to be called a Halloween party," Yow said. "It could be a respectable event."

While the council wants to make a decision before the students leave for break, specific details about Halloween will take time over the summer, Dillard said.

Morris said, "We are going to need to take drastic steps."

Councilman Keith Tuxhorn could not be reached for comment.

The City Council meets at 7 tonight in the council chambers at 607 E. College St.

Largest cash donation given for engineering scholarships

University News Service

The largest cash gift ever received by SIU-C's College of Engineering and Technology will provide electrical engineering scholarships for two juniors and two seniors beginning in 1990.

OMRON Electronics Inc., a Schaumburg-based subsidiary of OMRON Tateisi, established the $100,000 scholarship endowment fund to celebrate its new manufacturing facility in St. Charles.

Interest from the endowment will underwrite four scholarships each year for students with financial need. Because sufficient interest will not have accrued by the beginning of the 1989-90 academic year, the company has given an additional $5,000 in scholarships for that period.

"We are extremely grateful for the support OMRON has given electrical engineering education in the state of Illinois and especially at SIU-C," Juh Wah Chen, dean of the college, said. "All technological advances are grounded in the fundamentals that students master in engineering classrooms."

The SIU-C gift was one of five similar donations made to engineering colleges. The Illinois Institute of Technology, Northern Illinois University, Northwestern University and the University of Illinois will also receive $100,000 endowments.

OMRON Tateisi manufactures components, equipment and systems for automation.

AFROTC secretary receives honor

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

Longtime secretary and "mother hen" of SIU-C's Air Force ROTC detachment was inducted into the detachment's Hall of Fame during its 38th annual awards ceremony.

Thelma Bobbitt was the secretary of AFROTC Detachment 205 for 23 years until her retirement in 1983. I. Clark Davis, emeritus professor of higher education, said Bobbitt acted as liaison and confidant and kept the commanding officer under control.

"She was the 'mother hen' on Detachment 205," Davis said. Bobbitt began her association with SIU-C as a freshman in 1935, then became secretary in 1960, he said.

More than 37 AFROTC students received awards at Saturday's ceremony in the Student Center Auditorium. The students presented a "pride program" that reviewed the year's activities.

Captain Melanie G. Olson, assistant professor of aerospace studies, said two awards of interest were the Bank of Carbondale Award and the Society of American Military Engineers Award.

Olson said the Bank of Carbondale, 216 E. Main St., awarded a plaque and a $100 savings bond for the first time to Jeffery Osborne. Olson said she was impressed with the support the bank offered to ROTC cadets.

The Society of American Military Engineers Award was given to Albert Lense for his accomplishments in engineering. Olson said Lense is one of the top 20 engineering students in the nation enrolled in ROTC.

Set to music, the pride program consisted of a slide presentation that showed University cadets both on campus and during exercises.

Girls hopes mother learns lesson after turning her in

ST. JOHNS, Mich. (UPI) — A 10-year-old girl who turned her mother in on drug charges — by drawing a picture for police — said she hopes her mother learns a lesson from the incident.

In an interview with WILX-TV in Lansing on Sunday, Angela Sigafoose encouraged other children to take heart from her experience, but said it was important that her mother learn something too.

"I hope this teaches her a good lesson," said Angela, whose parents are divorced. "I hope the best for her."

"No matter what, I love my Mom."

On April 12 Angela telephoned her father, Roger Sigafoose, that she thought her mother was using drugs. The father contacted the Clinton County Sheriff's Department. "I thought about it quite a bit

"I hope this teaches her a good lesson. No matter what, I love my mom."

and... I thought what's best for my children," Roger Sigafoose said in the interview. "If I just sit back and let it go on it's hard to say what might have happened."

Officers spoke to Angela in school the next day and persuaded her to sign a search warrant after she drew pictures of herself begging her mother not to take drugs.

In one of the pictures, the mother is telling a little girl not to tell anyone. Another shows a mirror holding cocaine and a razor blade.

"She tried to convince me it was gunpowder but I knew it could not have been gunpowder," Angela said. "I knew it was drugs."

Sheriff's deputies searched Angela's mother's apartment and found marijuana, cocaine and drug paraphernalia.

The mother and her boyfriend were arraigned on possession of marijuana and cocaine charges. The mother is also charged with operating a drug house.

During her television interview, Angela counseled other children, living in homes with drug abusing parents, to take heart.

"Let it out and tell somebody," she said. "It's the best thing you can do."

"Never take it too hard. Be easy on yourself."

Woman claims mouthwash burned ; tests reveal contaminants not found

MORRIS PLAINS, N.J. (UPI) — A bottle of Listerine mouthwash that an Arkansas woman claimed burned her mouth was not contaminated, indicating the woman was simply unfamiliar with the antiseptic product's strong taste, the manufacturer said Monday.

"There was nothing in there but 100 percent Listerine," Warner-Lambert spokesman Barry S. Cohen said after tests on the suspect bottle were completed.

Tests, including gas chromatography, were also performed on other bottles of mouthwash from the Wal-Mart Stores Inc. outlet where the suspect bottle was purchased, from other nearby stores and from samples from the same lot as the suspect bottle, Warner-Lambert said. All were negative, the company said.

The Wal-Mart chain released Listerine Monday for return to shelves in the approximately 1,300 stores in 26 states from which the product was removed over the weekend, Warner-Lambert said.

Wal-Mart spokesman Don Shinkle said the chain was confident it made the right decision in pulling the mouthwash over the weekend, even though eventually nothing was found to be wrong.

"Although we believed from the beginning that this was an isolated incident, we still felt we shouldn't take any chances and our customers come first," Shinkle said.

A woman returned a bottle of Listerine to the Wal-Mart store in Rogers, Ark., on Saturday, Shinkle said.

"She said that she had taken this into her mouth and immediately spit it out, and it had caused a burning irritation in her mouth," he said. The woman said she required medical treatment by a dentist, but apparently was not seriously injured, Shinkle said.

The contents of the bottle used by the woman "could not have caused any injury," Warner-Lambert said in a statement.

First-time users of Listerine who are unfamiliar with the "strong tingling sensation" the product creates in the mouth sometimes call Warner-Lambert thinking there is a problem with the mouthwash, Cohen said.

He said the company did not know if that sort of unfamiliarity was responsible for the Arkansas report, but "it's possible," he said.

Thompson selects Pettit to state group

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit has been selected by Gov. James R. Thompson to serve on the Illinois Coalition, a group dedicated to achieve dramatic increases in Illinois' scientific and technological endeavors.

"I'm pleased that SIU is starting to get a place at the table in matters of this kind," Pettit said in a news release. "This will be a very influential group in charting the technological future of Illinois."

Prominent business, education, government and labor leaders have been selected to serve on the coalition.

So far only 29 leaders including Donald Perkins, former chairman of Jewel Companies, and Stanley Ikenberry, University of Illinois president, have been named since the first Illinois Coalition Board meeting on Tuesday, April 25 in Chicago.

Some of the members of the Illinois Coalition are people who had attempted to bring the Superconducting Super Collider to Illinois, Perkins said. Although the SSC went to Texas, the coalition was one positive effort to come out of the loss.

"I'm surprised to be involved," Perkins said. "It makes the SSC effort the most successful failure I've ever been associated with."

Recipients of awards announced

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer

The acting dean of the College of Human Resources officially announced the recipients of its annual awards Monday at a year-end luncheon.

Anthony J. Cuvo, who presided over the ceremonies, said although the past year had been difficult, the honorees had risen to the academic challenge.

The College of Human Resources, the smallest college in the University, is in the process of reviewing their current structure.

■The Teacher of the Year Award was shared by Cheryl Hanley-Maxwell, an assistant professor in the Rehabilitation Institute, for her enthusiasm in teaching and Thomas C. Castellano, an assistant professor in the Center for Crime, Delinquency and Corrections, for his ability to heighten students' interest and his leadership qualities.

■The Outstanding Civil Service Award was given to Shelby J. Garner, an administrative stenographic secretary, for her "knowledge of the academic maze" and guidance to students.

■The Dean's Service Award was shared by Dennis B. Anderson, director for the Center for the Study of Crime, Delinquency and Corrections, for his work with the Faculty Senate and SIU Joint Benefits Committees and Gary F. Austin, director of the Rehabilitation Institute, for his work with the education and rehabilitation of the hearing impaired.

■The Dean's Research Award was given to James E. Bordieri, an associate professor in the Rehabilitation Institute, for his publishing of nationally-known research findings about vocational concerns for persons with disabilities.

University bands to perform concert

By Curtis Winston
Staff Writer

In what organizers say they hope will be an annual tradition, the University's Wind Ensemble and Symphonic Band will share an outdoor pops concert at 5 today on the Old Main Mall.

Mike Hanes, director of the Wind Ensemble, and Dan Phillips, director of the Symphonic Band, have prepared an old-fashioned "concert in the park" program of marches, overtures and show tunes.

Jeanine Wagner, who is a member of the School of Music's opera theater faculty, will be featured with the Symphonic Band as a vocal soloist in "Selections from Oliver."

The Symphonic Band will perform "National Emblem," by E.E. Ragley, which will be conducted by Hanes. Phillips will lead the Wind Ensemble in his arrangement of "Kamases," a march by J.J. Richards.

Rick Brady, senior in music education, will take the podium to conduct the Wind Ensemble's performance of "Rocky and Bullwinkle Strike Again," which is a medley of themes from the cartoon of the 1970s.

Another student, Paul Intraiva, graduate student in percussion, will conduct the Symphonic Band on "Jazz Variants," by John Beck.

Phillips said the audience is invited to bring lawn chairs or blankets and a picnic supper to enjoy the concert.

Hanes said the concert is an "experiment," and he hopes it will be an annual event.

have been able to hit any balls because there wouldn't be room on the fairway," he said.

Ball said cash donations for athletics go into the Saluki Athletic Fund.

In the fiscal year ending June 30, 1988, the Foundation raised $196,990 in contributions for the athletics department, Ball said.

In fiscal year 1983, that figure was $118,365 and in fiscal year 1979 it was $79,410, he said.

"We raised about $5.2 million last year, in general," Ball said. "We spent about $1 million, so it costs us something about 19 cents (on the dollar)."

Ball said he would like athletics fund-raising to become more efficient. He said University of Illinois only spends about 10 cents for every dollar raised.

Williams said the biggest expense in fund-raising is mailing brochures and letters.

He said one thing he would do differently is to stop putting dates on brochures.

"We've got a good, usable brochure here, but it says 1988. If it didn't, we could use it again," he said.

He also said he would prefer not putting the pictures of athletics staff in the brochure.

"Athletes, even if they graduate, are always at least former Salukis," Williams said. "We've got another brochure here with no date."

Men's golf looking for consistency

By David Gallianetti

With the Missouri Valley finals just three days away, the men's golf team has to decide which team will be showing up in Normal this weekend.

After turning in rounds of 295 and 293 in the Big Blue Classic in Milikin on April 21 and 22, the Salukis produced a last-place finish this past weekend in DeKalb at the Midwestern Invitational.

"We were attempting to play too well, it caused the kids to play poorly," coach Lew Hartzog said. "It's a feeble excuse, especially since last week's tournament was one of the best in my years."

The Salukis put together rounds of 311, 310 and 326 for a total 947. Individually for SIUC, Britt Pavelonis shot 79, 73 and 77 for 229, followed by Mark Bellas with 76, 77 and 80 for 233.

Also for the Salukis, Mike Cowen ended up at 242, Dirk Klapprott at 247 and Sean Leckrone at 256.

Ohio State won the tournament with an 854, while Illinois' Steve Stricker put together rounds of 68, 70 and 67 for 205 and top individual honors.

but Rick Rhoades' picture is in it, so we can't use it again."

Williams said athletics fund-raising is different here from the University of Illinois.

"At Illinois people gave because they couldn't get good tickets otherwise. They were almost knocking down your door to donate. Here we have to rely more on loyalty to Southern," he said.

Illinois has a wider range of contributors because it is a Big Ten school and has better known sports team, Williams said.

"Its alumni population is much larger. Illinois is centrally located. It's got 100,000 alumni in northern Illinois alone. There are 50,000 Chicago-area Illini Southern Illinois basically gets its money from southern Illinois," Williams said.

Cash gifts include restricted and unrestricted donations

"We find out what they're interests are," Ball said. "Some give to athletics only; it depends. Now we've got a fund-raiser (Williams) assigned to athletics, which is something we didn't do in the past."

Williams said the Foundation has raised $150,000 in unrestricted donations already this fiscal year. He said that amount was $50,000 more than last year's total unrestricted donations for athletics.

"Our biggest fund-raisers are still coming up. In May and June, we have a lot of big outings, golf games and so forth, and a lot of people just like to give at the end of the year. I'd be disappointed if we didn't top $200,000 this year," Williams said.

decision, Guyon said there will be an inactive period over the summer with the issue resurfacing in the fall.

"It depends on how long people want to study it," Guyon said.

Handler, who will be leaving Carbondale in early July for a resident fellowship at Harvard University's W.E.B. DuBois Institute for Afro-American Research, said his one year departure from the University should not affect his argument in the slightest.

"My original intention was to raise the issues so it could be publically discussed on campus and scrutinized by the Faculty Senate," Handler said. "That is what's going to be done."

"It's not my cause. If I'm the only one who wants to do something it's pointless."

Handler said Boston is just a short airplane ride or long-distance telephone call away should his presence be required.

"I'm not going to be on the moon," Handler said.

Amy Rakers alternate for Olympic Festival team

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

Amy Rakers, a 6-foot-2 forward for the women's basketball team, has been selected as an alternate to the 10-member North squad that will compete in the U.S. Olympic Festival.

During tryouts this past weekend in West Lafayette, Ind., Rakers survived a series of four eliminations, which cut the 227 trying out down to 12.

"I really didn't feel any pressure," Rakers said. "I just wanted to have fun."

Rakers averaged 10.5 points per game and 8.4 rebounds this season as a starting sophomore.

"I think it's a unique opportunity for those who try out because you are playing with the best. It's a great learning experience," said Saluki coach Cindy Scott, who coached the South to a gold medal in the 1985 Festival.

The North squad will be coached by Marynell Meadors of Florida State and assisted by Joe Ciampi of Auburn.

Members of the North team: Molly Goodenbour, 5-6 guard from Waterloo, Iowa who will play for Stanford; Bridgette Pettis, 5-8 guard from Chicago; Ann Halsne, 6-1 forward for Nebraska; Joy Holmes, 5-10 forward for Purdue; Karen Jennings, 6-2 forward who will play for Nebraska;

MaChelle Joseph, 5-9 guard for Purdue; Sarah Sharp, 5-10 guard for Illinois; Eleen Shea, 5-9 guard for Michigan State; Mya Whitmore, 6-3 center for Northwestern; and La'Shawn Brown, 6-4 center from Cleveland.

Joining Rakers as an alternate is Carol Madsen, a 6-0 guard who will play for Purdue.

Two other Salukis took part in the Festival tryouts: 5-10 guard Colleen Heimstead and 6-1 forward Amy Horstman.

Blackhawks gunning for hockey's biggest upset

CALGARY, Alberta (UPI) — The Chicago Blackhawks are looking to stage the biggest upset in NHL playoff history when the best-of-seven Campbell Conference final begins Tuesday against the Calgary Flames.

Since 1917, there has never been a series in which the team that trailed the other by 51 points during the regular season triumphed in the playoffs.

The Flames and the Blackhawks had the best and the worst records, respectively, of the 16 playoff qualifiers. Calgary finished with 117 to Chicago's 66. The Blackhawks won their final regular-season game in overtime to make the playoffs.

Both teams emphasize that the regular-season disparity means little in a playoff series. Calgary won all three regular-season meetings between the clubs, but the playoff Blackhawks are different from the regular-season team.

During those meetings, the Blackhawks for the most part were without star center Denis Savard, veteran defenseman Doug Wilson and left wing Steve Thomas due to injuries. Savard, who did play in one of the three games, is back in true form, scoring 17 playoff points, and Thomas has been strong after returning midway through the first round. Wilson, pulled a groin in the first round, but is expected to return to action against Calgary.

"We didn't have the same team playing against them as we do now," said Chicago coach Mike Keenan. "In the first game, we only had 19 players dressed. That makes a difference against a club with their kind of depth."

Calgary coach Terry Crisp said: "Chicago is not the same club as they were during the season. (Goaltender Alain) Chevrier is giving them good goaltending and Steve Thomas' return is a big plus."

Chevrier joined the team in January in a trade with Winnipeg. His play lifted Chicago late in the year and he's played all 11 playoff games, compiling a 2.55 goals-against average.

Rick is a starting pitcher while Mitch comes in from the bullpen.

The heart of the Murray batting order is Don McNamara and Gary Keepees, who combined for six hits and four runs against SIU-C.

Awards and honors

Saluki center fielder Doug Shields, who leads the team with a .379 batting average, received the Abe Martin Award.

The honor is bestowed annually to a baseball player that shows honesty, leadership, excellence, dedication and loyalty on and off the field. Dan Radison, who originally was drafted by St. Louis in 1972, won the first Abe Martin Award.

Meanwhile, Wrona was the third player selected as deserving the James J. Mundo Award, which is given to the player that shows the same enthusiasm and Hill Gang spirit as Mundo.

The Hill Gang is the name given to the group of students fans along the first base line.

50 and counting...

At the 50-game mark of the season, the Salukis have compiled the following team statistics. They have had 1,596 at bats, scored 285 runs, gotten 478 base hits (of which 86 are doubles, 7 triples and 25 home runs), batted in 248 runs, and have a .299 batting average. On the pitching side, the Salukis have allowed 435 hits, given up 230 earned runs, walked 226 and struck out 197 for a 5.32 ERA.

By comparison, here are some school records for those categories. The highest team average came in 1976, when the Salukis hit .355. In 1988 they set a record 612 hits. Also in 197 they scored 439 runs. The 1972 team had the lowest ERA, 1.37.

Individual leaders

The top batting averages through 50 games: Shields .379, Matt Giegling .328, Tim Davis .320, Shaun Lewis .320, Wrona .310, and Ed Janke .304.

The top ERA leaders: George Joseph 2.81, Shane Gooden 3.30, Sean Bergman 3.47 and Deje Meyer 5.06.

Gymnastics coach Karolyi U.S. citizen

HOUSTON (UPI) — Bela Karolyi, who guided gymnasts Mary Lou Retton, Julianne McNamara and Phoebe Mills to Olympic medals after defecting from Romania in 1981, became a United States citizen Monday.

Karolyi gained international fame when he coached Romanian Nadia Comaneci to world and Olympic championships. Then on March 23, 1981, Karolyi and his wife, Martha, defected in New York while on a tour of 15 American cities with the Romanian gymnastics team and sought political asylum.

The Karolyis since have been reunited with their daughter, Andrea, now 15, and all three stood together Monday and became U.S. citizens.

"You just cannot understand the feeling... the feeling of not belonging to a country," said Karolyi, who has a successful gymnastics training program in Houston. "When I step on the (gymnastics) floor from now on, it will be as an American and not as an immigrant."

The Karolyis were among 1,200 people representing 87 countries who became new citizens Monday. Sea. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, gave the keynote address and mentioned Karolyi.

The Karolyis have been teaching together since their marriage in 1963, each having earned doctoral degrees in physical education from the University of Bucharest.

In 1976, the 14-year-old Comaneci recorded perfect scores, the first ever in Olympic gymnastics.

Williams' work, effort pays off for SIU Foundation

By Kathleen DeBo
Staff Writer

The SIU Foundation has received more money for Saluki Athletics than ever before, and the credit goes to Wayne Williams' fund-raising efforts.

Williams, who is employed by the Foundation, said a good fund-raiser spends time cultivating possible donors everywhere he goes.

"You have to beat the drum about your program," he said. "Whether you're sitting in church or eating in a restaurant, you have to cultivate people." You have to ask for money or you won't get money."

The SIU Foundation, a private not-for-profit corporation, raises funds for Southern Illinois University Saluki Fund. Williams is in his first year as the athletics fund-raiser.

Contributions include cash or cash-equivalent gifts such as stocks and gifts-in-kind. Foundation president Rex Ball said.

Gifts-in-kind are contributions of things other than money.

"It could be a gift of services or food. In the past, we've received horses for the horse program and Saluki dogs," Ball said.

Regene Shand, departmental business manager for Saluki Athletics, said in-kind gifts include courtesy cars or vans for a sport, notebooks, photographs, hotdogs for Booster Club functions and the designs for advertisements.

"We've got seven car dealers donating the use of cars," Williams said. "I'm still working on the year-end totals, and we've got $36,000 worth of cars right here that hasn't even been recorded yet."

"A lot of it is unreported. Somebody feeds the team after a game and the coach just says thank you. The information should be sent over here. It's one of the things I hope to clear up," he said.

Williams said once he asked a man why he did not contribute to athletics.

"He stood there for a moment and then told me he'd been feeding some team for the past five years. I felt dumb, but his name wasn't on any of my lists of contributors," Williams said.

Shand said the University only began keeping track of the in-kind donations at the behest of the Foundation two years ago.

The dollar value of the in-kind gifts is calculated in order to give the donors credit, but it is not included in the totals given for athletics contributions, Shand said.

Often the donors want to remain anonymous so that other people will not seek them out and ask for donations for other causes, Shand said.

Williams said the University of Illinois, where he worked before coming to the Foundation in October 1988, had a problem with in-kind donations.

"People wanted to give, in order to get tickets, but sometimes they didn't have the money. So they'd offer us in-kind gifts we didn't need. If we collected every tree promised us for the golf course, the team wouldn't

Guyon wants football study

Alumni, student views needed

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

Further study concerning the Saluki football program is needed, University President John C. Guyon said.

Discussion of the elimination of SIU-C's football program has stemmed from an argument presented to various University groups by anthropology professor Jerome Handler.

"I will make the final decision ultimately," Guyon said. "I need a lot of people to take a look at the matter, and the decision will be predicated by their involvement in the matter. I have no objection to the matter being discussed and widely considered."

"We need to try and get an opinion over a period of time. I don't think that will be done by me at all. The appropriate bodies need to look at all the matters."

Guyon said the Intercollegiate Athletics Advisory Committee could be one of the leading groups in dealing with the football issue, but their role is their choice.

"I don't want to say any (organization) would have a greater impact," Guyon said.

Several arguments favoring eliminating football have dealt with the enhancement of the Universities' basketball programs. Guyon said the upgrading of basketball is a factor SIU-C should always consider.

"It is something one ought to think about," Guyon said. "I think with the chance of success on the national level, it could be considered an investment."

Studying football, as well as the other programs in the athletics department, is an ongoing process, Guyon said.

"We have to remember this is not a novel kind of thing," Guyon said.

SIU-C's president pointed to the 1980 Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics and the 1986 Strategic Planning Committee as methods the University has used to examine and evaluate its athletics department.

"These issues are not new," Guyon said. "We look at these on a regular basis."

Guyon said Handler's argument is strong regarding economic losses, but there are some important variables missing.

"The effect on the students and alumni we don't have an answer to," Guyon said. "In that sense, no one's argument is strong."

Although he has no time table in mind for a final

Freshman Kurt Endebrock returns to first base as Wichita State's Bryant Winslow awaits the throw from his pitcher in Sunday's first game. The Salukis take on Murray State today at 3 p.m.

Baseball team seeks revenge

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

The only thing more humiliating than an 18-2 loss on the road would be suffering the same defeat at home.

That's exactly what the Saluki baseball team hopes to avoid when it plays host to Murray State at 3 p.m. today at Abe Martin Field.

The Salukis enter the game with an overall record of 23-27, ever-mindful of the 16-run defeat that took place last Thursday in Murray, Ky.

"Now it's our turn to get a little revenge," Saluki third baseman Dave Wrona said.

Scheduled to start for SIU-C is Ryan McWilliams, a righthander with a 1-2 record and 9.00 earned run average.

This time around the Salukis will be more wary of Murray's sophomore leadoff man, Willie Wilder, who ripped two homers off Saluki pitching.

The Racers rely on the pitching of the Grogan twins.

IAAC to examine new budget figures

The Intercollegiate Athletics Advisory Committee will have the fiscal year 1990 athletics department budget presented at its 2 p.m. meeting today in the Davies Gym Conference Room.

The IAAC will also elect a chairman for the 1989-90 year, hear an explanation of arena attendance count procedures.

Football player defends sport at dinner

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

Football player Pete Jansons made an unscheduled plea at the senior athlete awards banquet, in which he called for the athletics department to defend the program from a movement on campus that wants it eliminated.

"No one's speaking out. I ask why!" said Jansons, who slapped the podium to emphasize his closing remark.

In a four-minute impromptu address, Jansons surprised and stunned the athletes, coaches and administrators gathered Sunday in the reception room at the Days Inn motel. The event was sponsored by the Sauki Letterwinners Club.

Jansons took the podium when he accepted the Bobbitt Award on behalf of Brad Crouse, who lives in Indianapolis and could not attend.

"I have to address an issue," Jansons said. "I've heard Dr. (Jerome) Handler's statistics, and it seems it comes down to a lot of dollars and cents.

"Well, I've been here since 1983, and I heard nothing about football being cut when we won the (NCAA I-AA) national championship. I never heard anything in '85 when we almost beat Illinois, or in '86 when we were second in the (Gateway) conference."

"What kind of price tag can you put on the feeling of almost beating the No. 1 team (Illinois) in the state?"

Jansons' comments were received with applause. He and the delegation of football players left the banquet before its conclusion.

Athletics Director Jim Hart said: "I thought it was indicative about how the football players feel."

President John Guyon was in the audience, but he refused to comment on Jansons' speech.

Award presenter Dick Small, who immediately followed Jansons, referred to last December's elimination of the gymnastics and field hockey teams. "I hope this will be the last of any program, athletic or academic, being cut from SIU."
