Peace Corps Meeting Set For Feb. 10-14

Plans for the Feb. 10-14 visit of a Peace Corps team to SIU will be discussed this week.

James Gibson, Peace Corps representative from Washington, plans to attend a luncheon meeting Thursday at the University Center. I. Clark Davis, director of the Office of Student Affairs, said arrangements for the visit will be discussed.

The team will work with faculty members, organizations and the Student Government. Its purposes will be to outline the work of the Peace Corps, discuss its opportunities for seniors, and discuss how other students can prepare themselves for possible later work with the Peace Corps.

George Paluch and Emil Peterson are members of the Student Government committee for the team's visit, Davis said. They will assist any campus organizations or groups in securing a speaker from the Peace Corps team during its visit to SIU, Davis added.

Any groups meeting between Feb. 10-14 are invited to hear one of the team members. Arrangements can be made through the Student Government office, Davis said.

Thursday's luncheon will involve about 14 persons to whom the program will be outlined, he said.

Southern Acres Election Called

Southern Acres residents will elect a senator Feb. 12.

Petitions can be picked up at the Southern Acres head resident's office today and must be turned in by 5 p.m. Friday.

Bill Wade, student senator, has resigned the post because of a work conflict.

Gus says the Olympic Room ought to be turned into a laundromat; his friends have been taken to the cleaners there already.

Internal Rift Divides Anti-ROTC Factions

Committee Split on Role of Peace Union

The Committee to Abolish Compulsory ROTC suffered an internal split Tuesday, reportedly over cochairman Bill Moore's disenchantment with participation by Student Peace Union members.

Moore, a sophomore from Carbondale who originally began the protest movement, reportedly intended to resign.

A reliable committee source said that Moore, who was not available for comment, told him that either the peace union members would have to leave the organization or he would leave.

Moore has been instrumental in organizing the campaign against compulsory AFROTC. Late in the fall quarter, this took the form primarily in letters to the editor of the Daily Egyptian.

During the Christmas holidays, Moore wrote the Board of Trustees of the University of Illinois to obtain details on the board's decision in favor of voluntary ROTC there.

In mid-January, he outlined three possible courses of action for consideration in furthering the movement. The first was picketing and this has been a principal activity of the group since Moore first organized the movement.

The group had been picketing in front of the office of President Delyte W. Morris each Tuesday, the day when 3,000 ROTC cadets drill. At 10 a.m. Tuesday the picketing stopped.

Ed Clark, cochairman of the committee and chairman of the Peace Union had no comment about the failure of the committee to maintain its picket line. He indicated that the situation would be clarified after a meeting Tuesday night.

Electrical Overload Blacks-Out Library

Most of the lights at Morris Library went out for more than 15 minutes as the result of a power failure which was caused by an electrical system overload.

When the power was restored, an auxiliary motor let off some smoky fumes which leaked through the ventilation system into the library.

A spokesman said the failure was a temporary disorder resulting from construction and will be corrected when more electrical equipment is installed.

Exhibit to Feature Vietnamese Articles

Mr. and Mrs. William Bartlett will present an exhibit and travelog at 7:30 p.m. in the Ballroom of the University Center Thursday.

The new chapter of P.E.O. is sponsoring the show.

Vietnamese students at SIU will join the Bartletts in presenting the program.

A limited number of tickets are available at the information desk of the University Center.

ROBERT JAMES FEEDS PATILIA HIS AFTERNOON SNACK

Noontime Entertainer

Patilia Has Little to Say — Mostly Naughty; But His Vocabulary Is Growing Fast

By Ric Cox

Patilia is in the midst of his second quarter at SIU, and, although his vocabulary has grown 12.5 per cent, it still totals only 16 words.

Nevertheless, there is one school of thought that maintains his vocabulary increase will match that of the average college freshman.

His decidedly unacademic vocabulary includes:

"Naughty, naughty, naughty, you," "Shut up," "Pretty boy," "Watch it, Patilia," "Huh?"

For the birds, you say? Well, it is.

Patilia is an Indian Heel mynah bird and he has become a noted entertainer on the SIU campus. His audience is limited, however, to a few visitors at one of the physical plant greenhouses.

Several art students, as well as office workers and other visitors have found Patilia an added attraction to the botanical atmosphere of the greenhouse, located between the Life Science and Agriculture buildings.

Office workers and students bring their lunches and use the greenhouse as a noon-hour oasis, according to Robert James, grounds gardener who acted as Patilia's interpreter, in the absence of the bird's owner.

Patilia was given to W.M. Marberry, supervisor of the greenhouse and professor in field biology and botany, by one of his students last fall.

James is quite enthusiastic when speaking about the bird. He has even pasted a list of Patilia's vocabulary inside one of the tool cabinets.

"Patilia is a remarkable bird," boasts James, "and he has a great sense of humor."

He recalls that one day a boy came in and said to Patilia, "Oh, you're just an of' black bird."

"Naughty, naughty, naughty, you," replied Patilia.

A nameless parakeet is Patilia's caged neighbor, but James says the two don't get along well.

13 Coeds Compete for Off-Campus Sweetheart

Thirteen candidates are competing for the crown in this year's annual Off-Campus Sweetheart Queen elections, according to James Strachan, president of the Off-Campus Students Association.

Students who live off campus can vote both Thursday and Friday to elect the queen.

The winner will be crowned at a dance Feb. 14 at the University Center.

Polls will be open from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. at the Caruthers Dorm, 601 S. Washington; Colonial House, 419 S. Washington; Stall's House, 202 E. Oak; La Juene Fille, 204 W. University; Johnson's Co-op, 712 S. University; Du Drop In, 205 W. Mill; Robinson's House, 401 Orchard; Mason Dixon, 306 W. College; and Blazine House, 505 W. Main.

On campus, there will be a booth set up just north of the entrance to Old Main. The candidates are:

Donna Wallace, sponsored by the Blazing House, from Maywood, Ill. She is 20 years old and an elementary education major.

Pamela Kennedy, sponsored by Johnson Hall, from Chester, Ill. She is 19 years old and a music major.

Nancy Bischoff, sponsored by Wilson Manor, from Granite City, Ill. She is 20 years old and a mathematics major.

Julie Jacks, sponsored by Robinsons, from Harvey, Ill. She is 19 years old and an English major.

Kathy Ganey, sponsored by Twin Oaks Dorm, from East St. Louis, Ill. She is 18 years old and a speech therapy major.

Lavowa Shea, sponsored by Washington Square, from Belleville, Ill. She is 20 years old and an elementary education major.

Margie Biehl, sponsored by College View, from Belleville, Ill. She is 18 years old and a kindergarten-primary education major.

Patricia Silliter, sponsored by University Manor, from Scott AFB, Ill. She is 18 years old and a business administration major.

Margaret Upchurch, sponsored by Saluki Arms, from Jacksonville, Ill. She is 18 years old and a retailing major.

Ginger Macchi, sponsored by La Casa Manana, from St. Louis, Mo. She is 19 years old and a sociology major.

Sandra Buttry, sponsored by Mason Dixon House, from Norris City, Ill. She is 18 years old and her major is undecided.

Kay Mayol, sponsored by the Townehouse, from Springfield, Ill. She is 19 years old and a psychology major.

Mary Shoemaker, sponsored by the Suburban Dorm, from Effingham, Ill. She is 19 years old and major is undecided.

Institute In German Wins Grant

SIU has been granted $60,000 to conduct a German institute this summer. Participating in the seven-week program will be 40 high school teachers and 20 ninth graders from southern Illinois.

The institute, sponsored by the U.S. Office of Education, is designed to help teachers increase their proficiency in the German language and German cultures, according to Helmut Liedloff, director of the institute.

Also, the institute will give ninth graders a chance to learn the rudiments of German through demonstration classes. They will be selected by applying to Southern's Foreign Language Department, Liedloff said.

The teachers will live at a Thompson Point residence hall where a German cultural island will be created. Programs of German songs, dances, movies and lectures will be arranged. The teachers will converse entirely in German.

About 14 staff members, including four native Germans, will conduct the institute beginning June 22.

Teachers accepted to the institute can receive stipends of $75 per week plus $15 for each dependent while in attendance.

Testing Study Done Here Is Published

Results of a study conducted at SIU two years ago were printed in Educational and Psychological Measurement recently.

Thomas C. Oliver, supervisor of testing, and Warren K. Willis, assistant supervisor of testing, prepared the study, "A Study of the Validity of the Programmer Aptitude Test."

The study indicated that the Programmer Aptitude Test was useful in predicting the ability to profit from a course in computer programming.

Ag Students at University Farms Train for Future

Rising Early Is Part of Job At Cattle, Poultry Centers

SPRING LAMBS PLAY IN A PEN AT THE UNIVERSITY FARMS SHEEP CENTER

To most students at Southern, the thought of getting up at five in the morning is as repulsive as final exams.

Early rising is, however, a daily and profitable routine for 50 students who work on and maintain the 1,800-acre University Farms.

The farms include centers for poultry, dairy cattle, beef cattle, sheep, swine, small fruits, and an Ag greenhouse. The centers are operated and maintained by the student workers who average $650 to $700 a year for their work.

Under the direction of a full-time manager at each of the centers, the students do everything from milking cows to shearing sheep. And on occasion they double as midwife or play Florence Nightingale to an ailing animal.

The University Farms are operated just like any other farm except profit isn't their motive for existence, according to Eugene Wood, director of the farms.

"Our first purpose is to provide laboratories for teaching," Wood explained, "and our second is to provide research centers where the staff can carry out projects that will be of aid to all persons in agriculture."

"We have some of the latest machinery for the students to work with," Wood said. "It is a good source of experience and serves as a mutual help program."

The students who maintain the farms are mostly farm boys themselves, so the routine isn't exactly new to them. In addition to helping send themselves through college, most of them feel the farm jobs are an added teaching instrument.

Allan Ninness, a junior from Ottawa, Ill., who works in the greenhouses next to the Ag building feels he is fortunate to work in this program.

"There are many jobs on campus that help students understand their major fields of interest better. I am lucky to have such a job. Working in the greenhouse has broadened my knowledge of agriculture."

Another participant in this earn while you learn plan is Gene Offermann, a senior from Fuhs, Ill., who works at the dairy center.

"It certainly has helped me a lot. I have learned a good deal about dairy farming and hope to have my own farm some day."

Allan and Gene, like the other student farmers, come from rural areas and have had previous farm experience.

The farms' products are sold on the market "just the same way that others farmers sell," Wood said.

The University doesn't use a great deal of the products in its own operation, he explained. However, "the cafeteria uses some small fruits we produce," he added.

The farms are subject to the same problems as any other farm. Most of the time nature has been good to SIU.

Once, however, in a freak accident, three beef cattle were struck by lightning and killed.

Another tragedy occurred last December when 11 hogs were burned to death in what was probably the largest barbecue in SIU history.

"A heat lamp fell and set the barn on fire over the Christmas vacation," Wood recalled with a grim smile.

Why John Can't Read To Be Reconsidered

John Fisher, executive secretary of the Modern Languages Association, will speak on "Why Johnny Can't Read, Reconsidered" at 8 p.m. Monday in the Home Economics Lounge. The Department of English is sponsoring the lecture.

Scientist Will Talk On Cu-Ni-S System

A staff member of the Geophysical Laboratory in Washington, D.C., will lecture on the Cu-Ni-S (copper, nickel and sulphide) system today.

Dr. Gunter Moh, who has been making a two-year intensive study of sulphides, will speak at 8 p.m. in the Family Living Lab of the Home Economics Building.

F. Donald Bloss, SIU professor of geology, said Gunter will give only this one lecture during his brief visit to Southern.

Preceding Gunter's lecture, Geology Club members will hold a business meeting in the Family Living Lab beginning at 7 p.m.

Group From SIU Attending Kennedy Foundation Dinner

President and Mrs. Delyte W. Morris, several faculty members and an SIU student are attending the Joseph P. Kennedy international awards dinner today in New York City.

Present as guests of the Kennedy Foundation are Thomas Grace of Carbondale, a senior majoring in institutional recreation; Dr. and Mrs. William H. Freeburg, chairman of the recreation and outdoor education department; Oliver Kolstoe, chairman of the special education department; and Thomas E. Jordan, professor of guidance and special education.

The Foundation invited students from various universities across the nation who are majoring in teaching mentally retarded children. Awards to be presented today will go to persons who have made outstanding achievements in the field of instructing mentally handicapped persons.

One of the faculty members who is attending the dinner, Dr. Freeburg, is on the Foundation's advisory committee for recreation.

An activity of the foundation will be to work with a special workshop designed to train personnel who will be instructing retarded children.

This institute is scheduled for this spring at Little Grassy Lake. Community recreation directors, day camp supervisors and volunteers from 16 states are expected to attend the program. Last year Mrs. R. Sargent Shriver represented the Foundation at the workshop at Little Grassy.

Education Unit Hears Ideas on Master Plan

CHICAGO -- The Illinois State Board of Higher Education heard suggestions Tuesday for a master plan for developing and coordinating colleges and universities.

The board is scheduled to meet March 3 to draft the master plan. Public hearings on the blueprint will be held after it has been spelled out.

A faculty advisory committee headed by Prof. Clarence L. Ver Steeg of Northwestern University presented a long proposal on what should be done.

The faculty men's suggestions included these:

- The Board of Higher Education would be at the summit of the state-supported college system in Illinois. Members would be appointed by the governor and would be given general authority in all matters of policy and budget affairs.

The Board of Regents of the Illinois State University System would have the responsibility for governing state-supported universities.

The regents, after consultation with the faculty advisory committee, would appoint a chancellor as its chief executive officer. The chancellor--a new officer--would be the chief administrator of the Illinois State University System.

The presidents of the senior colleges and universities would be directly responsible to the chancellor and, through him, to the Board of Regents.

The chancellor would prepare a unified budget for schools at the college and graduate level. It would be reviewed by the Board of Regents and then submitted to the Board of Higher Education.

The institutions to be administered by the chancellor would include "three new senior colleges to be established at population centers widely dispersed through the state," the University of Illinois, Southern Illinois, Western Illinois, Eastern Illinois, Northern Illinois, Illinois State, Chicago Teachers College and branches of the larger universities.

There also would be a Board of Trustees of the Illinois State Junior College System, its assignment would be to develop and govern state junior colleges. The junior system would have as an administrative head a provost, a new officer.

Tuskegee School Integration Showdown Expected Today

TUSKEGEE, Ala.--An expected showdown between state troopers and the federal government over court orders to integrate two rural schools was delayed Tuesday--probably for 24 hours.

A federal court order transferring 12 Negro pupils from recently closed Tuskegee High School to schools at Shorter and Notasulga apparently caused the delay.

The Justice Department has not revealed its plans for implementing the federal court order to transfer the pupils.

The mayor of Notasulga, Ala., James Rea, appealed to Gov. George Wallace to send troopers to the west Alabama area to prevent possible violence.

College Tax Credit Defeated by Senate

WASHINGTON--The Senate narrowly beat down, 48-45, a proposal to allow a special income tax credit for parents putting their children through college.

The vote Tuesday was a major victory for the Johnson administration, which had marshaled all its forces to try to defeat the proposal as an amendment to the $11.6 billion tax cut bill.

Democratic leaders said the cost of the college tax credit would be so great that, if it were adopted, it probably would be necessary to cut back on the individual income tax rate reduction in the bill. It could amount to $750 million the first year, they said.

Opponents of the plan said it would not benefit the poor families needing help the most.

Baker Reportedly Paid Off By Both Parties in Deal

WASHINGTON--Senate investigators disclosed testimony Tuesday that Bobby Baker is raking in money both from the seller and the buyer in a Haitian meat deal.

The testimony pictured Baker as helping to engineer the deal, which in the beginning involved Jose Benitez, who was identified as Puerto Rico's Democratic national committeeman.

The complex transaction was described by Francis E. Law and Thomas Webb Jr., Washington business partners, who said they also get a cut of the two-way profit.

Law and Webb testified at closed hearings last week of the Senate Rules Committee. The Senate group is investigating the outside business operations of Baker, who resigned under fire last Oct. 7 as secretary to the Senate's Democratic majority.

Transcripts of the testimony were released by the committee.

Law said Baker got into the picture while efforts were under way to arrange with the Agriculture and State departments for an export license for the Haitian American Meat & Provision Co. (Hampro), controlled by the Murchison interests of Texas.

Law said that beginning Dec. 1, 1962, Baker was to receive 10 per cent of the profits of Hampro up to $30,000 a year and to split this with Law and Webb.

In addition, Law said, Baker was to receive half of the half-cent a pound that Law and Webb got on each pound of meat imported from the Haitian meat plant.

Only Chinese Envoy to Paris To Be Red, Chou Declares

MOGADISHU, Somalia -- Premier Chou En-lai of Red China dismissed France's plan to maintain relations with Nationalist China as "a procedural question or a question of courtesy."

"I can say positively," he told reporters Tuesday, "that from the day the representative of the People's Republic of China appears in Paris, there can be no other man there who can pose as the diplomatic representative of China."

Appearing tired, Chou held a long news conference at the end of a seven-week tour of Africa that took him to 10 nations. Then he and his party left by plane for home.

While discussing French President Charles de Gaulle's two-Chinas policy, Chou avoided reference to a demand by Peking last week that France break with Nationalist China when it begins diplomatic relations with Red China. France has declared it has no intention of doing so.

ARF!

Benjamin Franklin (or The Louisville Slinger, as he is better known as) said, "A penny saved is a penny earned," and we, the college population of America, have taken to heart this sage advice. We spend prudently; we budget diligently. Yet, despite our wise precautions, we are always running short. Why? Because there is one item of expense that we consistently underestimate--the cost of travelling home for weekends.

Let us take the typical case of Basil Metabolism, a sophomore at UCLA majoring in avocados. Basil, a resident of Bangor, Maine, loved to go home each weekend to play with his faithful dog, Spot. What joy, what wretched smiles, when Basil and Spot were re-united! Basil would leap into his dogcart, and Spot, a genuine Alaskan husky, would pull Basil all over Bangor, Maine--Basil calling cheery halloos to the townfolk, Spot wagging his curly tail.

The results were not all Basil had hoped

But the cost, alas, of traveling from UCLA to Bangor, Maine, ran to $400 a week, and Basil's father, alas, earned only a meagre salary as a meter-reader for the Bangor water department. So, alas, after six months Basil's father told Basil he could raise no more money; he had already sold everything he owned, including the flashlight he used to read meters.

Basil returned to California to ponder his dilemma. One solution occurred to him--to ship Spot to UCLA and keep him in his room--but Basil had to abandon the notion because of his roommate, G. Fred Sigafoos, who was, alas, allergic to dog hair.

Then another idea came to Basil--a stroke of genius, you might call it. He would buy a Mexican hairless chihuahua! Thus he would have a dog to pull him around, and G. Fred's allergy would be undisturbed.

The results, alas, were not all Basil had hoped. The chihuahua, alas, was unable to pull Basil in the dogcart, no matter how energetically he beat the animal.

Defeated again, Basil sat down with G. Fred, his roommate, to smoke a Marlboro Cigarette and seek a new answer to the problem. Together they smoked and thought and--Eureka!--an answer quickly appeared. (I do not suggest, mark you, that Marlboro Cigarettes are an aid to celebration. All I say about Marlboros is that they taste good and are made of fine tobaccos and pure white filters and come in soft pack or Flip Top box.)

Well, sir, Basil and G. Fred got a great idea. Actually, the idea was G. Fred's, who happened to be majoring in genetics. Why not, said G. Fred, cross-breed the chihuahua with a Great Dane and thus produce an animal sturdy enough to pull a dogcart?

It was, alas, another plan doomed to failure. The cross-breeding was done, but the result (this is very difficult to explain) was a racoon.

But there is, I am pleased to report, a happy ending to this heart-rending tale. It seems that Basil's mother (this is also very difficult to explain) is a glamorous blond aged 19 years. One day she was spotted by a talent scout in Bangor, Maine, and was signed to a fabulous movie contract, and the entire family moved to California and bought Bel Air, and today one of the most endearing sights to be seen on the entire Pacific Coast is Spot pulling Basil down Sunset Boulevard--Basil cheering and Spot wagging. Basil's mother is also happy, making glamorous movies all day long, and Basil's father is likewise content, sitting at home and reading the water meter.

Poe's Life Remains a Puzzle Despite Apology for Foibles

Edgar Allan Poe: The Man Behind the Legend, by Edward Wagenknecht. New York: Oxford University Press, 1963. 276 pp. $5.75.

With the appearance of Edgar Allan Poe: The Man Behind the Legend we have an interesting, a readable, and in some respects a unique book. By setting out to investigate the character and personality of Poe the man as distinct from Poe the writer, Wagenknecht has eliminated the necessity of dealing with literary influences, analyses, and criticism and has instead concentrated on biographical facts.

As the title suggests, Wagenknecht is interested in distinguishing the real Poe from the legends that have grown up around him—that he was a drunkard, a drug addict, a necrophiliac, a plagiarist, an impotent man, a

Human Retooling

Henry Ford II Gave Company Rebirth After Long Decline

Ford: Decline and Rebirth 1933-1962, by Allan Nevins and Frank Ernest Hill. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1963. $8.95.

Henry Ford—inventor, industrialist, champion of world federation, autocrat, supreme individualist—maintaining a fucile rear guard action against the inevitable demise of laissez faire provides the basis of the Ford story through World War II.

The election of Henry Ford II to the presidency on Sept. 21, 1945, ended an era of uncoordinated centralized organization and reversed the downward spiral of the Ford Motor Company.

Failure to utilize cost accounting techniques; Henry Ford's unwillingness to delegate authority; the Machiavellian machinations of Harry Bennett; the declining health of Henry Ford; the death of Edsel Ford; the loss of key Ford executives under the iron rule of Harry Bennett were all factors in the deteriorating image and operation of the company in the 1930s and early 1940s.

Consequently, when Henry Ford II took over in 1945, he acquired control of an organization that needed human retooling as well as the application of principles of scientific management.

Henry Ford II is pictured as the antithesis of his grandfather. Henry Ford refused to previsions left by Poe's early biographers, Wagenknecht scrutinizes Poe's life under six chapter headings entitled life, living, learning, art, love, and God.

It is evident in these chapters that Wagenknecht has taken a sympathetic view of his subject, for at crucial points, where equally substantial evidence conflicts, he remarks, for example, "Poe was culpable to the extent that he exposed himself to the danger (of drinking) but the temptations in his milieu were, as we have seen, great," and on Poe's morbidity, "if he was mad his whole generation was mad with him."

Fascination with death was typical of the Romantic movement; so was the attraction of incest; so was the association of death with love..."

and on his lying, "Poe was not an habitually untruthful man, but nobody can claim he was a slavish literalist..." and on his impotence, "we have no more reason for supposing that the marriage (of Poe and Virginia Clemm) did not become a normal one than we have in the case of any other marriage which fails to produce children..." and on Poe's pride, "some of his immodesty, such as it is, may be genuine arrogance, but some of it was coldly calculated to secure advantages from others, and more comes under the head of whistling to keep up your courage."

One sees, of course, that this sympathetic treatment is an effort to offset the outrageous charges made against Poe. At the same time, however, one gets too often the impression from this book that Poe was just a poor, ordinary fellow down on his luck and that he can be understood and perhaps even forgiven if we take a reasonable and moderate approach to his problems and his milieu.

But needless to say Poe does not need us: forgiveness, and where conflicting evidence is equally acceptable there is, of course, no necessity for us to take consistently a palliative interpretation.

If Wagenknecht has written a book that seems overly apologetic, he has also written one that is important in its documentation of the impressions which continue to make Poe's life a puzzle.

bargain collectively with elected representatives of labor as required by the Wagner Act until forced to capitulate in 1941 (General Motors and Chrysler had recognized the United Auto Workers union as a bargaining agent in 1937).

Henry Ford II, on the other hand, lead the automotive industry in 1955 by adopting the embryo of a guaranteed wage plan for his employees.

The elder Ford disdained college-trained personnel and ennobled the self-made man. Henry Ford II perceived these bright young men as the hope for the future of the Ford Motor Company.

elder Ford was ill defined. Under Henry Ford II heads of manufacturing, sales and advertising, purchasing, engineering, foreign operations, accounting, auditing and finance, industrial relations and a legal department were appointed and held responsible for their respective functions. The teamwork of these men replaced the autocratic control previously exercised. Although the reign of Harry Bennett (fired by Henry Ford II in 1945) had epitomized the old driver spirit in industry, Henry Ford II had successfully extirpated this influence by 1947 and emphasized the necessity for labor-management cooperation.

In 1956 the Ford Foundation offered part of its shares to the public. The transition was now complete. The spirit of individual family ownership and control of the Ford Motor Company had passed from the scene. The company stands today as a forward thinking industrial giant.

Nevins and Hill have successfully conveyed the political and social aspects of the struggle for power and maturity by the Ford Motor Company. National and international developments are well documented and one interested in the Ford story will find this book enjoyable and informative.

Criticism must be made, however, of the long parade of characters and statistics that frequently detract the reader from the main stream of incidents and impressions conveyed by the authors.

This review purposely neglected much of the interesting history between 1933 and 1945 because of the reviewer's penchant to emphasize the changing image of the Ford Motor Company after the ascendancy of Henry Ford II.

'Write and Be Quiet'

Maugham Found His Goals Early and Lived by Them

Somerset Maugham, A Guide, by Laurence Brander. New York: Barnes & Noble, 1963. $3.95.

By an ironical twist from which Somerset Maugham doubtless derives amusement, few critics of the sort who take themselves seriously take Somerset Maugham seriously. No other English author of our time has entertained so many or had such a wide reading for such a long time, but the fashion has been to ignore him.

Relatively few people read James Joyce, D.H. Lawrence, F. Scott Fitzgerald, or Ernest Hemingway, all of whom have been subjected to thorough study and analysis. For this reason, it is a pleasure to have this brief study by Brander.

Director of

Plan A Curriculum

Somerset Maugham may have made some tactical blunders. He arrived fairly early in life at certain convictions and proceeded to live by them. "Write and be quiet." Clarity and simplicity should be the goals of a writer. Nor much can be done about human nature. "Human folly, alas, will continue to devastate the nations with war." "It may be that in the knowledge that man for all his weakness and sin is capable on occasion of such splendour of spirit, one may find some refuge from despair."

As a result of his settled philosophy, he wrote simply, directly, precisely. He never felt the need for experimental writing, daring innovations, symbolism, or impressionism.

His tactical errors may have been his steadfast refusal to pay attention to his most adverse critics, his failure to ally himself with one or another school or group, his avoidance of the academic environment.

One takes great pleasure in the success of another who bases his resolute actions upon common sense and succeeds in achieving a large measure of what he desires from life. Somerset Maugham, discovering that novels and stories did not bring the rewards he desired, turned to playwrighting for a period of nearly 20 years and having at length achieved the independence he desired, went back to novels and short stories and in the Thirties did what most readers consider his best work.

While my personal preference is for Of Human Bondage, there are sound reasons for thinking The Moon and Sixpence, Cakes and Ale, or 20 of his short stories even more entertaining.

Probably Rain (Sadie Thompson) has been more widely read and discussed than anything else. I recall with pleasure such stories as "The Facts of Life," "The Treasure," and "Mr. Know-All."

And of course the story of Larry Darrell (The Razor's Edge) stands the test of time well, as I have discovered by a recent rereading. Neither Dickens in the death of Little Nell or Paul Dombey, nor Thackeray in the death of George Osborne has handled this sort of scene as effectively as Maugham has described in muted tones the death of silly Elliott Templeton.

Let us hope that more detailed studies of Maugham will follow this brief outline of Mr. Brander.

Science Fiction, Vintage 1902, Follows Verne, Wells Tradition

Lord of the Sea, by M.P. Shiel. Xanadu Library. $1.45.

The unusual Xanadu Library has added another curiosity to its shelves with the reissue of M.P. Shiel's Lord of the Sea. Written in 1902 and all but forgotten since then, Lord of the Sea is neither as famous nor as good as the same author's Purple Cloud, but it does contain moments of inspiration.

It is a tidy bit of Edwardian science-fiction, but, like most of Shiel's work, the fantasy is permeated with large doses of verisimilitude that make it difficult to separate fact from fancy. This, along with a lavishly romantic style, is probably Shiel's chief merit.

The author has a habit of sacrificing all for plot, oftentimes even good taste. He outdoes himself in this one by spinning a vulgar tale of a man who is an anti-Semitic agitator. Imprisoned, he devises a scheme to control the sea, thus the world. He realizes his ambition, even becomes Regent of England, but falls when decay from within his structure and pressure from without destroy his empire.

One of his acts as Regent proves most decisive; he had banished all Jews from England and encouraged them to set up their own government in Palestine. After his fall from power, he discovers that he himself is a Jew and must leave England.

But he does so faithfully, and his former fame causes him to be treated as a Messiah by the Jews. He rules the new Israel for the rest of his days, wisely and benevolently.

To be fair to the author, we concede that the plot comes off worse in summary than in detail. Too, his remarkable foresight concerning the Jewish nation rivals some visions of his masters, Verne and Wells. But the book will hold interest for only a few students of the Edwardian novel, collectors of the curious, and perhaps the most avid fans of Verne and Wells.

7-Game Victory Skein Is Best in Two Years

Winning streaks don't mean too much, at least SIU basketball coach Jack Hartman doesn't regard them as the most important thing in the world.

Nevertheless, Hartman's quintet equaled its longest winning streak in two years with a gratifying victory over Tennessee A&I Monday night for their seventh in a row.

If the winning string is any indication of things to come, the Salukis might enjoy the success they achieved last year by finishing fourth in the NCAA-College Division.

Southern had an on-again-off-again season last year until the last four games of the regular season, when they won all four. The club seemed to gather momentum with each victory and proceeded to go on to three post-season games, before losing by four points to Ogelthorpe in the semifinals.

The Salukis have seven regular season games remaining on their schedule and head down the wire on a seven-game tear. Ohio Central, which has lost only two games this year and defeated the same Tennessee State team that split with the Salukis, is next on the Saluki agenda.

After the Marauders come an even tougher foe, Evansville, which was rated number one in the country in last week's Associated Press small college poll.

The Salukis will then get a well-deserved and needed week of rest before tackling the Louisville Cardinals on Feb. 15. The Redbirds, who have had their ups and downs all year despite a good 12-4 record - including a win over previously undefeated DePaul - are the only Missouri Valley Conference team the Salukis play this year.

If the Salukis survive those three games without coming out on the short end, the rest of the schedule should be clear sailing with an eventual berth in the NCAA Regionals.

Only Kentucky Wesleyan, ranked third in last week's AP poll, will be a deterrent to the Saluki NCAA hopes, but that game comes at a good time. Although the Salukis were beaten by the Panthers earlier at Owensboro, SIU should be ready for an upset because it's a home game and the Salukis should be riding a three game winning streak.

Those three games will be against three Missouri teams, with which the Salukis have had so much success this year. The Salukis will be meeting Southwest Missouri for the second and third times and Central Missouri.

Swimmers to Meet Oklahoma, Seek 5th Straight SIU Victory

With three unbeaten performers in its lineup, SIU's swim team will be seeking its fifth straight victory of the season Saturday when it is host to Oklahoma.

Led by Jack Schiltz, a senior from Harvey, and sophomores Thomson McAnaney, Miami, Fla. and Dave Winfield, Little Silver, N.J., the Salukis have won 35 of a possible 44 events this season.

Schiltz and Winfield each have four blue ribbons to their credit as the former is undefeated in the 200-yard individual medley and Winfield in the 200-yard butterfly. McAnaney, meanwhile, has collected eight firsts, one in the 50-yard freestyle, three in the 200-yard freestyle and four in 500-yard freestyle events.

Best time recorded by Schiltz has been a 2:02.6 while Winfield has toured his specialty in 2:01.8. McAnaney has posted season lows of :23.2, 1:49.3 and 5:02.6, respectively, in 50, 200 and 500-yard freestyle competition.

Wrestlers Seek Fourth Victory After Oklahoma State Loss

A perfect season's record was spoiled by powerful Oklahoma State.

SIU's wrestlers hope to regain their winning touch this weekend when they will compete in a quadrangular meet at Colorado School of Mines in Golden, Colo.

The Salukis, now 3-1 after dropping a somewhat deceiving 27-7 dual match with the Cowboys, will be challenged by Western Colorado, Morehead State and the host Ore-diggers at Golden.

Southern's Larry Kristoff and Terry Finn, who were forced to settle with draws against OSU's Joe James and Dennis Dutsch, respectively, will take similar records into action at Golden. Kristoff, defending National AAU heavyweight champion, owns a 9-0-1 mark while Finn, a 123-pounder, is 10-0-1 for the season.

Roller Skating Open in DuQuoin

Roller skating in DuQuoin is being sponsored by the recreation committee of the University Center Programming Board for every Friday night.

The bus leaves at 6:15 and returns sometime before 11. Transportation is free, but students must pay for their skates.

Those wishing to go must sign up in the Activities Office by Friday noon.

Coach Jim Wilkinson is heavily counting on Don Millard, a veteran 167-pound performer who gained Southern's only win over Oklahoma State, Bill Hartzell, Don Devine and Don Schneider. Millard has lost only one of 11 matches this season while Hartzell, a 177-pounder, has a 6-1 record compared to 115-pound Devine's 5-1-1 and 130-pound Schneider's 10-2 marks.

Completing Southern's squad will probably be Dan DiVito, Terry Appleton and Dan Gesky. DiVito, who is carrying an impressive 9-2-1 record for the season, will be at the 147-pound level, one notch above Pieranunzi, while Appleton is expected to compete at 157-pounds and Gesky in the 191-pound division.

1,700 Sign Plea To Sen. Dirksen

The Student Nonviolent Freedom Committee reported Tuesday that it had collected about 1,700 names on petitions asking Sen. Everett Dirksen, R-Ill., to support civil rights legislation.

Each petition, which asks especially for support of the equal accommodations section of the bill, has space for 17 names.
