Pettit calls budget speech positive

By John Baldwin
Staff Writer

Chancellor Lawrence Pettit said Tuesday that Gov. James R. Thompson's remarks to a joint meeting of two top state education boards were "positive" even though the governor said he would not recommend a funding increase.

Pettit attended the meeting in Chicago. It was the first time the Illinois Board of Education and the Illinois Board of Higher Education had met.

At a press conference after the meeting, Pettit said the "economic pie needs to be enlarged" to provide more money in the many areas it is needed, including public service areas.

Thompson has been urging the Legislature to approve an income tax increase to help state funding.

Pettit said, "I can't recall specifically if he said an increase in income tax, but that is what everyone is talking about."

Illinois has the lowest income tax rate in the nation. The rate has not been increased since the 1960s.

Thompson said at the meeting that his budget recommendation "will not include an increase in appropriations for education."

Police, FBI seek student in kidnapping

By John Mohler
Staff Writer

Carbondale police and FBI agents are searching for a University student who allegedly kidnapped a Springfield woman Monday morning, Springfield police said.

Police say John A. Finley, 25, of 2012 S. Illinois Ave., abducted Lakshmi Karri, 21, of Springfield. Finley and Karri were last seen in Springfield about 8:30 a.m. They were driving in a rusted white 1977 Dodge Aspen station wagon with wood-grained panels.

Police reports said Finley visited Karri's residence in Springfield about 8 a.m. and Karri's father refused to allow him to speak to her. Finley left and returned at 8:30 a.m., after Karri's father left the house. Karri's mother also turned Finley away.

Finley then threw a brick through a living room window and entered the house carrying a 3- to 4-foot wooden board. Springfield Police Officer Neil Williamson said.

Finley pulled a telephone cord from the wall when Karri's mother attempted to call police, Williamson said. Finley then threatened the women, the police report said.

The two women locked themselves in the bathroom and Finley forced open the door,

Officials: Peace needs a chance

By Dana DeBeaumont
Staff Writer

Southern Illinois Congressmen say they want to give the Central American peace initiative a chance to work before supporting more aid for Nicaraguan rebels.

The House of Representatives will vote on President Reagan's $36.2 million aid package for the Contras today. The Senate will vote on the proposal Thursday if it passes in the House.

U.S. Rep. Ken Gray, D-West Frankfort, said he will vote against the aid package because it's premature to give aid to the Contras when there is a chance for peaceful solutions.

"We've had years of war. Why not give peace an opportunity," Jack O'Dell, Gray's administrative assistant, said. "Let's give them a chance, unswayed by American involvement."

WSIU-FM silenced

WSIU-FM will be off the air until Thursday afternoon because of a transmitter malfunction.

Lee D. O'Brien, director of broadcasting services, blamed the failure on outdated equipment.

"There wasn't any one specific incident," he said, "it just failed."

O'Brien said a tube socket failed in the transmitter Saturday morning. Temporary repairs were made, with the station operating at half power, he said.

Repairs to restore the station to full power were made Tuesday. However, in making the repairs, station engineers discovered other problems, including a broken power meter, O'Brien said.

The transmitter is about 15 years old and was made by RCA, which no longer manufactures broadcast equipment, he said.

Local pastor wants lesbian ordained

By Holly J. Corrington
Staff Writer

A local United Church of Christ pastor is leading an effort to get a former University student, who is a lesbian, ordained.

The Rev. Ted Braun, pastor of the Church of the Good Shepherd in Carbondale, has taken up the cause of Jeanette Oxford, who was denied a recommendation for ordination because of her sexual preference. Oxford is a member of Braun's congregation.

A student at Eden Seminary in Webster Groves, Mo., Oxford said she told church officials last fall she was a lesbian.

"I didn't begin this process to be a spokeswoman for gay rights," Oxford said Tuesday. "I began it to be honest."

The UCC's regional Church and Ministry committee voted to drop Oxford from in-care status, which made her ineligible for any financial assistance or scholarship money formerly provided by the committee.

The Illinois South Conference voted in December to uphold the decision and denied a recommendation for Oxford's ordination. The conference, based in St. Louis, governs 95 congregations in southwestern Illinois.

Marvin Dauderman, chairman of the Church and Ministries board of directors, defended the committee's decision, saying, "It was in the best interest of the church."

Braun, church leaders and seminary faculty who are unanimously in favor of Oxford's ordination, formed

Frenchman shot in Beirut; victim reported to be spy

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Gunmen ambushed and killed a Frenchman — reported to be a counterspy — during an attack Tuesday in east Beirut, police said. He was the fifth French citizen killed in a little more than a year in Christian areas of Lebanon. There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the slaying of Jacques Meurant, 27. In Paris, national news agencies reported the man was an agent for the French counterespionage agency.

U.S. soldiers en route from Panama busted

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — Alleged large-scale cocaine smuggling on a military flight from Panama by U.S. soldiers and a former Panamanian citizen with fake Army papers has sparked military concern, officials said Tuesday. The four were arrested Saturday at Roosevelt Roads Naval Base, Puerto Rico, after Customs agents checking their Military Air Command flight from Howard Air Force Base, Panama, found them carrying cocaine, said Raymond McGady, special agent in charge of the Naval Investigative Service at the base.

Iraqis seek Soviet arms embargo on Iran

BAGHDAD, Iraq (UPI) — A senior Iraqi official expressed hope Tuesday that the Soviet Union will move "very promptly" with other permanent members of the U.N. Security Council to impose an arms embargo on Iran. The U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, Vernon Walters, said last week the Security Council was working toward a new resolution intended to implement a cease-fire in the 7-year Iran-Iraq War as demanded in Resolution 598, which was adopted in July. The Soviet Union is Iraq's main arms supplier and principal ally outside the region.

Israeli says Demjanjuk created 'web of lies'

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israel's top prosecutor accused retired U.S. autoworker John Demjanjuk Tuesday of weaving "a web of lies" to create an alibi and cover up his crimes as the sadistic Nazi death camp guard "Ivan the Terrible." In the sixth day of the prosecution's closing arguments, Blattman attacked Demjanjuk's defense in detail, accusing him of developing an alibi in stages since he was first questioned in 1977 in Ohio by the U.S. Justice Department.

Meese's memory fails during Wedtech trial

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General Edwin Meese, under investigation himself, testified Tuesday he does not remember dealing with ex-presidential aide Lyn Notziger on a $32 million no-bid Army contract for the scandal-torn Wedtech Corp. Special prosecutor James McKay called Meese — also under scrutiny by McKay — as his final witness in the illegal lobbying trial of Notziger, who served as President Reagan's political director.

New abortion rules spur lawsuits nationwide

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lawsuits were filed across the nation Tuesday to block imposition of new regulations that forbid health care counselors who get government money from recommending — or even mentioning — abortion. The new rules, which had been expected, draw a sharp line between any service that gets federal funds and abortion. Critics call the regulations a "gag rule" and "mandatory malpractice."

Legislators snagged lifting Confederate flag

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — State Rep. Thomas Reed and at least 10 other legislators were arrested Tuesday at the state Capitol for trying to remove a Confederate flag former Gov. George Wallace hoisted after his "segregation forever" speech. Reed, who also is president of the Alabama NAACP, claimed the gathering of black leaders showed their unity and said he plans to regroup with state and national leaders.

Scientists: Genetically altered seeds studied

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — An agricultural research project designed to test the effectiveness and potential of genetically redesigned organisms is showing great promise, Clemson University scientists said Tuesday. The unique study began last November when Clemson researchers and Monsanto Co. scientists planted genetically engineered bacterium with ordinary winter wheat seeds in a test plot at the Edisto Research and Education Center in Blackville, S.C.

Council OKs plant changes

By Dana DeBeaumont
Staff Writer

Carbondale will spend more than $2 million on its south-west water treatment plant, and residents could pay more for water and sewer after May 1.

The City Council voted Tuesday to upgrade the plant to comply with Illinois Environmental Protection Agency pure water standards.

Carbondale has applied for an EPA permit to begin the project, and the city will solicit construction bids once it receives the permit, Bill Dixon, city manager, said.

The plant violated EPA standards from September to November 1987. During October, suspended solids and bacteria measurements were nine times higher than the standard.

Mayor Neil Dillard had said the EPA is allowing Carbondale to miss the July 1 deadline as long as the city is working to alleviate the problems.

The city will issue general obligation bonds to pay for the improvements, which include two new clarifiers to remove impurities in dry solid waste and 16 drying beds. The bonds will be repaid with money generated by an 8.9 percent water and sewer fee increase that could go into effect after May 1.

A Missouri consulting firm recommended the city increase its water rate 15.7 percent and its sewer by 4.1 percent. Under the increase, water rates would be $1.62 and sewer rates would be $2.02 for every 1,000 gallons used.

The increase, which the council could approve at its Feb. 16 meeting, would raise combined water and sewer fees from $3.34 to $3.64 for every 1,000 gallons used.

The current rate for every 1,000 gallons used is $1.40 for water and $1.94 for sewer. Customers pay a minimum of $4.20 a month for 3,000 gallons of water.

Individuals living outside of the city who purchase Carbondale water also are likely to have the increase passed on to them, Chuck Vaught, city revenue officer, said.

A Missouri consulting firm recommended the city increase its water rate 15.7 percent and its sewer by 4.1 percent. Under the increases, water rates would be $1.62 and sewer rates would be $2.02 for every 1,000 gallons used.

The University's sewer rate likely will increase from $1.94 to $2.02 for every 1,000 gallons used.

Dixon has said the increase is necessary for Carbondale to pay for improvements and to fulfill obligations with water facilities.

Strip gets horse show

By John Mohler
Staff Writer

Carbondale and University police had a round-up on the Strip Tuesday night—one that netted two horses.

The horses escaped from a field northeast of the intersection of Old Route 13 and Giant City Road at 8:20 p.m., Carbondale Police Sgt. Johnnie Knapp said.

The horses ran west on East Main Street from University Mall to the old train station on South Illinois Avenue. Police, assisted by several citizens, subdued the horses and tied them to parking meters with a nylon cord donated by an amateur cowpoke at the scene.

"We took them into custody there," Knapp said.

"The urban round up was nothing unusual for Knapp, though. "This was the third or fourth time we've had this happen," he said. "It was a lot of fun to see."

A third horse was still missing late Tuesday night.

Hearing set to consider dropping Reiman charges

A judge will rule Thursday on motions to dismiss 29 sex-related charges against Dale Reiman, assistant director of the Physical Plant.

The hearing will take place at 9:30 a.m. at the Jackson County Courthouse in Murphysboro.

Reiman, 36, was arrested in August on charges that he kidnapped and sexually assaulted a male student worker over a four-day period in December 1986.

Weather forecasters pooh-poo groundhogs

By Adam Broad
Staff Writer

It has been reported that local groundhogs did not see their shadows on Groundhog day, indicating an early spring for Carbondale, according to legend.

However, the National Weather Service held out little hope for an early spring in its 30 day forecast for the Southern Illinois area. It predicted February high and low temperatures to be an average of 46.6 and 27.8 degrees, with average precipitation to be 3.39 inches. These are normal averages for the month of February.

"I guarantee that the groundhog did not see his shadow," said Karol Abrams from the SIU-C weather station, "because it was low overcast all day." Abrams said she expected the area is due for "another snow."

A groundhog that sees its shadow on Groundhog day supposedly indicates six more weeks of winter, but local groundhogs may be too worried to make an honest effort to predict the weather.

Robert Frank, an advisor for the Jackson County Cooperative Extension Service in Murphysboro, said 12-15 years ago groundhogs were a nuisance to farmers because of crop-eating and hole-digging. To help farmers eliminate groundhogs, the Service would provide farmers with cartridges, he said, which were placed in groundhog holes in order to "burn the oxygen out of the hole and suffocate them in the hole."

Since a single groundhog has several holes, killing one groundhog with three attempts was "very lucky," said Frank. However, he added, "about 10 years ago" coyotes began moving into the area. Since then there has been a significant decline in farmers' complaints, as well as the groundhog population.

America must end scientific illiteracy

THERE IS LITTLE doubt U.S. schools must improve the teaching of reading, writing and arithmetic, but equally important is improving science education.

As technology has made quantum leaps over the past few decades, the gap between scientists and non-scientists has grown exponentially. Each major scientific breakthrough leaves more people thinking science is incomprehensible. Many stop trying to understand.

The result is a split society. One section is in the know while the other is stranded outside the world of science.

A 1985 POLL of a nationally representative sample of 2,000 adults, conducted by the Public Opinion Laboratory at Northern Illinois University, turned up striking figures about the lack of scientific knowledge among Americans. Some examples:

- two-thirds of adult Americans admit to not having a clear understanding of scientific study;
- 40 percent believe in lucky numbers;
- less than half believe in evolution;
- more than half believe research scientists are dangerous because of their knowledge.

THE SITUATION UNDOUBTEDLY will worsen if major changes are not made in the U.S. education system. Merely increasing required science classes is not enough. The science curriculum and the way it is treated must be revised.

Science courses must be much more flexible and in tune with current technological developments. Basic principles of chemistry, physics and other disciplines must be dealt with from a viewpoint that is not purely theoretical. Scientific principles must be explained in practical terms, so they can be applied to understanding such things as the Strategic Defense Initiative, or how microwave ovens work.

Only when Americans' fears of science are eliminated will their interest and understanding of the world improve.

ONCE AMERICANS NO longer fear technology, enrollment in science courses will increase. As it is, the United States rapidly is falling behind the rest of the world in scientific research.

In addition, Americans must improve their understanding of science to make responsible decisions about developing technology. It is a sad sign of how far education has fallen behind technology that decisions as important as the future of SDI research must be made by a small group of informed scientists. Meanwhile, the rest of the nation has very little concept of what SDI means and how it would work.

EVEN MORE BASIC than such technology as SDI research, Americans' lack of scientific understanding makes them unable to deal with new products. Advances in automotive and audio-visual technology, for example, have left many Americans out in the cold.

Many are puzzled as to what it means to have a trip computer in their cars, whether it is worth an extra $300 and how to use it once they buy it.

Likewise, they buy video cassette recorders they don't understand, and therefore can't operate to their fullest potential. This leads to an even greater resentment of technology and compounds the basic problem — Americans' fear of science.

America must acknowledge the scientific barrier and close the gap before it becomes too large to bridge.

Canceled classes are real rip-offs; teachers get paid to go to school

Ever since I was six years old I disliked school. When school was canceled I was overjoyed. Thirteen years later, I see it much differently.

Students are spending a great amount of money to learn — indirectly purchasing teachers. When a teacher cannot attend a class, the class is canceled. Are we still overjoyed — happy that a percentage of our tuition went to an empty classroom?

The line was cast by the University. The bait was education and we got caught. We students are reeled in every time a class is canceled. Aviation students are charged $50 for missing a flight class, yet it is acceptable when their instructors are absent. SIU-C is taking advantage of its students. We should not have to pay for canceled classes.

The University is obligated to teach. A canceled class breaches the contract it has with the students. If an employee cannot attend his job, then the employer has to have a substitute. It should be the same with SIU-C teachers.

A counterview is: Why can't teachers miss a couple of classes if students can? The point is that teachers get paid. A student who misses a class misses out. A teacher may miss a class, but again the student misses out. It is a no-win situation for the students. Every canceled class makes the class that much harder. The syllabus doesn't change.

The missing lecture is squeezed in and it makes exams much more difficult.

Besides the money loss, a canceled class is an inconvenience. Nobody wants to walk 20 minutes to a phantom class. It is not fair for a physically handicapped person to make the effort of going to a canceled class. I am sure that students have better things to do than to walk to a class that has the word CANCELED on the chalkboard.

The University should have the common courtesy at least to have cancellations posted in the Student Center or announced on the radio. After all, the students should get what they pay for.

Anthony M. Enright, freshman, journalism

Information on thread technology requested

We are writing this letter concerning a discovery we consider to be one of the most significant contributions to the advancement of technology.

One night, my roommate and I were sitting in the kitchen having a glass of milk, which left us with an empty jug. We began contemplating the concept of the threads that hold the cap on the milk jug.

Suddenly, we realized the importance of threads in holding together today's society. Threads are used alongside the advanced technology of the space shuttle all the way down to the simplicity of screwing in a light bulb.

This made us wonder why their discovery is not noted among other important technological discoveries such as the wheel or electricity. We know there are other more worthwhile things to think about, but just take a moment to consider how important threads are in our lives.

Any insight as to the discovery of threads would be appreciated. Arthur Collins, sophomore, psychology, and Jay Porter, sophomore, aviation

America has turned against the oppressed

When are we going to stop writing blank checks to every right-wing Third World dictator who gets Washington going by saying he may have a couple of peasants who know what communism is?

When will we stop pouring money into Israel while we watch them beat people into submission and fear on television?

What has happened to America? Where is this great country? Can't we be on the side of the oppressed just once?

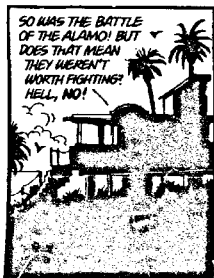

Is being poor and ignorant so distasteful to the greedy Reagan people that we have to turn our backs on them and support their oppressors?

Remember, we're supposed to be the guys in the white hats. Mike McGrann, Carbondale signed a peace plan on Aug. 7, 1987, calling for a cease-fire in the region and the halting of all foreign aid to insurgents.

Reagan has said that Nicaragua's leftist leaders won't comply with the peace plan without "a threat hanging over them," like his Contra aid package.

Most of the $36.2 million package, which is designed to keep the Contras supplied for four months, is for supplies other than arms and ammunition.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted 10-0 against the package Tuesday, Charlotte Ford, a staff assistant for the committee, said. Only Democrats voted on the 19-member committee because Republicans boycotted the vote.

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Makanda, serves on the committee and voted against the aid package by proxy.

Simon is campaigning in Iowa, but will return to Washington Thursday to vote against the package if it reaches the Senate, a spokeswoman for Simon said.

Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Belleville, has supported Contra aid in the past. But a press aide, Dan Maier, said Dixon is undecided on the current proposal. Dixon wants to see if the peace plan works,

TV networks veto Reagan's speech

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Decisions by the three major commercial television networks to pull the plug on President Reagan's 11th-hour pitch for Contra aid Tuesday night provoked White House charges of bad journalistic judgment.

ABC, CBS and NBC decided not to air the 8 p.m. Oval Office speech Reagan scheduled to deliver on the eve of a crucial vote in the House, marking the first time all three have shunned one of his prime-time addresses to the nation.

Their decisions left Cable News Network as the only national TV network to air the speech. TV Direct, an independent satellite service, planned to beam the speech to more than 700 local stations across the country that had the option to air it in its entirety, in part or not at all.

In a swipe at ABC, CBS and NBC, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater welcomed the move by TV Direct and the willingness of CNN and "numerous radio networks" to carry two speeches — Reagan's and a Democratic response by Rep. Lee Hamilton of Indiana — that "lay out the framework for Wednesday's decision on national policy in Central America."

Insisting the course of U.S. policy in the region is at stake, Fitzwater earlier accused the networks of a "journalistic failure to understand the historic significance of this vote."

White House chief of staff Howard Baker chimed in with a written statement in which he asserted that addressing the American people over television has been "the traditional right of presidents of the United States."

Maier said.

If the Central American nations follow their agreement, Dixon is confident democracy will take root, Maier said.

Maier said Dixon believes the vote probably will fail in the House and not reach the Senate.

an ecclesiastic council which will plan a strategy to obtain Oxford's ordination.

The council's most important meeting will be in 1989, when Oxford completes her seminary education. The group will evaluate her qualifications for the ministry. If they are favorable, Oxford will again be recommended to the Illinois South Conference for ordination.

If Oxford is not given recommendation this time, the council will go to another church association.

"Our church council is convinced of Jeanette's gifts of Christian ministry," Braun said. "That's why we support her and will continue to support her."

Williamson said. Karri's mother told police Finley grabbed Karri and forced her into his car, Williamson said.

Finley and Karri were acquaintances for at least five months, Finley's brother Paul, of Carbondale, said.

Police describe Finley as white, 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighing between 170 and 180 pounds, with black hair. Karri is described as a 5-foot, 6-inch Indian female weighing about 110 pounds with black hair and brown eyes. Karri was wearing a black, green and white sari, a long Hindu robe worn draped around the body.

PETTIT, from Page 1

He said legislators might need to accept a "standing" budget.

But Pettit said it would be a "budget of retreat," citing inflation and cutbacks that must be made in education without new funds.

Thompson normally announces his recommendations for education funding at his budget address, which will be given later this month.

"I'm giving you this early warning today because you deserve as much lead time from me as possible," Thompson said.

Pettit said he is urging legislators to vote for a tax increase, but doesn't expect commitments until after the primaries are over.

"We don't want to be the kind of shrill political force that threatens," Pettit said. "We look at it as our duty to make it politically possible for legislators to vote for a tax increase."

"We have to understand the forces upon them rather than demanding things from them," he added.

As part of the effort to get more money for higher education from the state, Keith Sanders, dean of the College of Communications and Fine Arts, will lobby in Springfield for the rest of the semester on behalf of all state universities.

Pettit said that providing a quality education is essential to "improving the economic climate in Illinois."

"There's so many people with a stake in this — the potential political coalition is massive," Pettit said.

"If you don't come up with the money for education, there isn't going to be any normal economic growth. You've got to build the basic human resources and the infrastructure for there to be economic growth."

Vice President pulls gun to prove point

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — Vice President George Bush pulled a small pistol out of his jacket to make a point about the danger of concealed weapons during a debate Tuesday with five other Republican presidential candidates before a major gun owners' group.

The six — together for only the second time in the Granite State — took turns making their appeals to a meeting of about 1,000 members of the Gun Owners of New Hampshire.

Bush, who is leading in the state, argued against gun registration, but in a maneuver his aides said was unplanned, pulled out of his jacket a .22-caliber, 5.5 ounce revolver to demonstrate to the group that police and other officials had legitimate concerns about the dangers of tiny weapons.

Bush's action came during a discussion about legislation that would ban plastic guns. All the candidates said they opposed the proposal, but Bush held up the chrome-colored pistol to illustrate the point that small, concealed and undetectable weapons could pose a major danger to police and other law enforcement officials.

Bush aides said the pistol was loaned to the vice president by the Treasury Department, which oversees the Secret Service.

Calculators and calculus

Profs disagree on classroom use of new technology

By John Baldwin
Staff Writer

Mathematics professors are divided over whether calculus courses need to be reformed to keep up with current technology.

At a National Academy of Sciences meeting in September in Washington, D.C., science and mathematics leaders said courses need to utilize powerful new computer tools and improve students' understanding of the subject.

Calculators have been developed that can solve many of the problems presented in a first-semester calculus course. Newer calculators can do calculations known as finding derivatives and integrals, even when the answer isn't a number.

Some professors, however, argue that the reforms being called for translate into an easier course that teaches students less. They contend students would rely too heavily on calculators to solve problems.

Worthen Hunsaker, associate dean of mathematics, said calculus courses need to "emphasize concepts as opposed to rote drill."

"The machine will do the rote drill just fine. The machine will get 95 percent on virtually any first-semester calculus test."

But David Kammler, mathematics professor, says the new calculators are helpful to students in a beginning calculus course only if "calculus is taught in a regurgitative manner."

"That's the way you teach math at a high school badly. That's the way you teach math at a junior college badly. That isn't how you teach mathematics at a university," Kammler said.

"Idiot questions that a calculator can answer don't have any place in a calculus course."

He said it is easy to rephrase questions to determine whether a student understands how to get the answer.

Several teachers feel that calculus can be reformed to make better use of modern technology without making the course too easy.

Hunsaker said: "We should devote more time to working on the fundamentals — emphasizing concepts as opposed to rote drill."

"There are no books available that take advantage of existing technology and use real data," or information that can be applied to real-life situations.

He said some people have reservations about using "real" data because the answers to such problems often are very complicated.

Complaints have been leveled against calculus courses nationwide for having too many students in a single classroom, having too many students withdraw or fail, and having graduate students teach the course.

The University, however, has a lower failure rate than the national average and allows only 40 students per class. Each class is taught by a professor.

About 15 to 20 percent of students enrolled in calculus at the University each semester fail, compared to the national average of about 35 percent, Ronald Kirk, chairman of the mathematics department, said.

Kammler said the new calculators can be very helpful in later courses that build on the information presented in a calculus course, but a basic understanding of calculus is necessary first.

Student values films sans script

By Laura Milbrath
Staff Writer

Rick Powell likes to be surprised by his own films.

Powell, a senior in cinema and photography, says when he produces films, he rarely follows a script.

"It's kind of a scary way to make films. They seem to develop as I'm shooting them," he said. "It just happens and you never know until you see it. I enjoy that kind of scary confrontation with the film."

Powell has a seven and a half minute experimental film entered in this week's Big Muddy Film Festival entitled "Pictures of Maleness."

"It's not a narrative. My film is basically me," Powell said of his entry. "My voice is on the soundtrack and I am in the images. Basically the film is political. It's about sexual politics and the construction of masculinity in society."

One of the film's most interesting aspects is the three voices on the soundtrack that overlap each other.

"It's meant to show that people are surrounded with different voices and different pressures of what it is to be male and female," Powell said.

As a student film maker, Powell is in charge of all aspects of film production, as opposed to Hollywood films where the jobs are divided among many people.

The films that are made in Hollywood today often are too restrictive and simplistic, Powell said, citing "Rambo" films as examples. "I can't see me fitting into that Hollywood. I'd like to produce independent films."

He added that he enjoys the creative process of film making more than the technical aspects, such as editing.

"There seems to be so much equipment between me and my idea that it really frustrates me," he said. "You spend a tremendous amount of time doing busywork in film making."

Powell said that although he has always enjoyed watching movies, it was his own thoughts and images and his desire to express them that led him to the field of film making.

"I think in images quite a bit and with the way film can encompass many senses, it seems to be more resonant than other media," he said.

Powell recalled that his first film was made on a home movie camera but he has since moved on to more technical equipment. "Pictures of Maleness" cost him about $1,500 to make.

Each film making experience must be a personal creative process that brings about a change in him, Powell said.

"If I had made a film where I didn't change along the way because of it, I would be very

Place: Student Center
Ballrooms A&B

Admission: FREE

Win a Short of Comedy (Name & Fortune)

The Competition: All SPC students are invited to enter the U.S. Comedy Competition. Every student who enters will be allowed three minutes to perform their best stand-up routine. Each contestant's performance will be videotaped for view by national judges, Larry "Bud" Melman and Gilbert Cortriel. Four finalists will be selected from all contestants and flown to Daytona Beach in March to perform for the title. All Students who enter receive a Comedy Competition T-Shirt and the satisfaction of being laughed at or with.

Win a Free Concert at Your School

The U.S. College Comedy Competition also offers your school the chance to win a free Comedy Concert featuring Larry "Bud" Melman and Gilbert Cortriel. The school that collects the most Sticklets wrappers and Doritos bags over a two week period will win!!!

Come out and support your favorite campus joker, and see a professional comedian from New York march down on some free Doritos and Sticklets, and help SPC bring Larry "Bud" Melman to our campus!!!

Reagan takes last Contra stand

WASHINGTON (UPI) — On the eve of a showdown with Congress, President Ronald Reagan staked the future of his policy in Central America on a final desperate drive Tuesday for $36.25 million in new aid to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

Denied a prime-time spotlight in which to plead his case, his battle boiled down to a tug-of-war over as few as 10 to 20 undecided votes in the House, where the fate of his new request for the rebels will be decided Wednesday.

In private meetings at the White House, Reagan lobbied fence-sitting lawmakers with the argument that only military pressure from the U.S.-backed Contras will force Nicaragua's government to negotiate a cease-fire.

At the same time, his 11th-hour blitz suffered a severe blow as the three broadcast television networks decided not to air a final presidential appeal to the nation from the Oval Office. Only Cable News Network chose to televise the 7 p.m. speech.

Officials of ABC, CBS and NBC declined on grounds that Reagan, on countless other occasions, has had ample opportunity — including at least three previous prime-time speeches, all carried by the networks — to take his case to the public.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater criticized the networks for "their journalistic failure to understand the historic significance" of the prelude to a vote that could shape U.S. policy at a "historic turning point in the struggle for democratic reform in Central America."

Hanging in the balance were a cornerstone of Reagan's foreign policy — support for anti-communist insurgents around the world — and, in the view of both sides, the prospects for a negotiated peace in Central America.

In a bid to take some of the edge off the $3.6 million military component of the aid package, Reagan promised to consult closely with Congress before arms or ammunition are released to the Contras in the absence of a cease-fire. His assurances were met with skepticism.

FBI agents went too far, chief admits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — FBI Director William Sessions acknowledged Tuesday that some agents may have gone too far in a controversial undercover investigation of U.S. citizens opposed to administration policy in Central America.

Sessions briefed the Senate Intelligence Committee on the allegations of misconduct, making his first official appearance before the panel after three months on the job.

Leaders of the intelligence panel said they had asked for all pertinent FBI documents so they could conduct a "careful, thorough" investigation.

New tax laws affect students; help available

By Dena Schulte
Staff Writer

Students can no longer claim a personal exemption on their tax returns if they can be claimed as dependents by their parents or guardians, according to the new tax laws taking effect this year.

"It (the law) doesn't say 'if they want to claim you,' it says if someone else is 'eligible to claim you,'" Joyce Coffey, H and R Plock representative in Carbondale, said.

Dependent children still must file a return if their earned income was more than $2,540, if their unearned income was more than $500 or if a combination of the two averaged more than $500.

Earned income includes salaries, wages and other income from work. Unearned income includes interest, dividends and capital gains.

Other changes affecting students include the taxing of scholarships, grants and assistantships, Coffey said.

The difference between what you receive in a scholarship or grant and what you spend, is now taxable, she said. "It's very important that students keep track of receipts for fees, supplies and books they have to buy."

Unemployment compensation is now fully taxable. There no longer is a deduction for married couples who both work.

Filing will be difficult for students unaware of these changes and limitations, Coffey said.

The University's chapter of Beta Alpha Psi, an accounting fraternity, is participating in a nationwide voluntary income tax assistance program, member Kurt Edmark said.

Library stickers now being issued

The circulation desk at Morris Library has a new method of scanning student identification cards to speed up the process of checking out books.

The method, optical character recognition, consists of placing a machine-readable sticker on the back of student identification cards.

The sticker, which contains students' identification numbers, is scanned with a light pen instead of the number being typed into a computer.

Stickers have been printed with identification numbers for students, faculty and staff, and are ready to be attached to identification cards. Linda Davis, head of circulation, said.

Stickers can be obtained near the circulation desk in the library, Davis said. The table will be staffed during the day, and people should get their sticker before checking out books, she said.

At night, the stickers will be available at the circulation desk.

will hand out forms, answer questions and fill out tax returns for low-income students and the elderly until April 15, he said.

"We assume that a full-time student is low income," Edmark said. "We don't want to get bogged down with somebody for hours (due to a higher income)."

Edmark said there are five tax assistance locations in the Carbondale area:

—Carbondale Federal Building, Mondays, 2:30 to 4:30 p.m.

—Murphysboro Senior Citizens Center, 17 N. 14th, Wednesdays, 2 to 4 p.m.

—University Student Center, Activity Room D on the third floor, Thursdays, 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

—Jackson County Nursing Home, 1441 N. 14, Murphysboro, and Styrest Nursing Home, 120 Tower Road, Carbondale, alternate Wednesdays, 2 to 4 p.m.

John A. Logan College will host a satellite conference from noon to 2 p.m. today in Room 138, the small auditorium. The program will focus on the effects of the tax laws on those older than 55.

"It will increase their awareness of the resources available to them free of charge," said Carl Cottingham, dean of Learning Resources and Continuing Education at John A. Logan.

"There are free tax assistance programs that many people are not taking advantage of," Cottingham said. "Instead, they're going out and spending money they don't have to spend."

Representatives from the Internal Revenue Service in Springfield will host the conference and answer questions, Cottingham said. "We're the only place south of Springfield that will carry the conference."

In addition, direct phone lines to the representatives in Washington will be available, said Steve Wunderle, assistant dean of Continuing Education at the college.

Booklets and other literature also will be available, Wunderle said.

Students filling out their own tax returns can get help by calling a tax information hotline at 1-800-554-4477. The tape includes information on about 150 topics.

Questions also can be answered by calling the IRS at (312) 435-1040. Documents, publications and federal tax forms can be ordered by calling 1 800-424-3676 or writing to the IRS at P.O. Box 9903, Bloomington, Ill., 61799.

Nashville band's vinyl release fun, but not destined for Top 40

By Richard Nunez
Entertainment Editor

It is amazing that someone who looks like Buddy Holly and Elvis Costello can sound like both Holly and Costello and do it convincingly.

Andrew Roblin and his band The Upstarts, who hail from Nashville, Tenn., have released an album entitled "Up roar," and it's an album worth listening to.

"Up roar" is no ground-breaker for rock 'n' roll music, but its catchy and bouncy songs, reminiscent of such groups as the Hollies, the Everly Brothers and The Raspals, are satisfying and even fun, if you are in the mood to listen.

The album's most prominent song is "Forbidden Love," a jazzy, reggae influenced song that is featured as both a radio and dance mix. The dance mix of "Forbidden Love" is more satisfying because the saxophone solo is extended and more abandoned, which was what was hoped for in the radio mix.

The high point of the album would have to be the song "Dr. Ruth," a hilarious parody on Dr. Ruth's "Good Sex" cable television show. Roblin pokes fun at callers when he sings, "You say the good things I want to hear. You say I'm okay, I'm not too weird."

Roblin sings as though he was a view who has fallen in love with Dr. Ruth. Roblin wails, "Give me good sex, good sex, good sex with you."

The song is a striking reminder of the "Rawhide" theme, as the thrice repeated "good sex" imitates the chorus of "Rawhide."

The next song, "The Boy Who's Looking," is the rocker of the album. Complete with hiccoughs, it is the one song that sounds most like Buddy Holly. It also features raw and abandoned guitar playing by Roblin.

The first side of the album rounds out with "Watch Out for the Humans," which sounds like a parody of '60s political songs. "Man, watch out for the humans," Roblin sings, "the humans created the atom bomb."

The second side of the album features "Hey, Lonely Girl" and "Is Something Going On?" but it is a disappointment compared to the first side, which is livelier and more intriguing.

"Up roar" may not be destined for the Top Forty, but it is a brilliant first album by a group who may be destined for future fame.

Rocker has more than glasses

By Richard Nunez
Entertainment Editor

Andrew Roblin of the Nashville rock 'n' roll band Andrew and the Upstarts readily admits that he looks like both Buddy Holly and Elvis Costello. But that contrary to the insistence of many critics of his music, he says he does not try to sound like either Holly or Costello.

"I play with my appearance and for fun I'll get up on stage and sing 'Peggy Sue,'" Roblin said. He said his music must stand on its own and he cannot depend on either Holly or Costello's image.

Roblin said he is influenced by groups such as The Beatles, The Everly Brothers, Buddy Holly and other '60s performers.

The Upstarts' first album, "Up roar," has been well received by critics. Roblin described the album as hook-laden, but irresistible.

When he was 8 years old, Roblin traded a toy racecar set to a neighbor for his first guitar. He grew up playing in a number of rock bands, but at the age of 16 his parents began to demand that he get a job.

Roblin grew up in Canada, where his father was premier of the province of Manitoba. He said it was not easy growing up as a politician's son.

"People would expect me to defend his policies," he said, "My father was very distant from me. We were never close and it's really taken me a whole lifetime to come to terms with it."

Besides being guitarist, lead singer, song writer and producer of the Upstarts, Roblin also works as a freelance reporter. On Aug. 16 of last year, Roblin said he was held prisoner by security guards at Elvis Presley's Graceland mansion.

"Elvis and I have something in common, because after seeing the huge crowd there, I think Elvis was a prisoner also," Roblin said.

Roblin said he was working as a free-lance reporter for the adult magazine Chic. His assignment was to cover the 10th anniversary of Presley's death.

"Graceland was swamped with millions of people milling past his grave," Roblin said. "When I was dictating my notes into a tape recorder a female security guard grabbed me and said that tape recording was not allowed."

The security guards led Roblin inside Graceland and demanded that he play his tape recorder for them.

"I was thoroughly intimidated and when they asked me to erase it, I cooperated," Roblin said. "I erased most of my tape."

The security guards told Roblin that people had been complaining about being interviewed by him. Roblin said no one had complained to him while he was doing his interviews and he believes that the personnel were only concerned about Graceland's image.

Roblin has written stories for several magazines, including Playboy, Billboard,

Andrew Roblin

Spin, Hustler and New York. After writing a story entitled "Who Killed Country Music," which included his opinions of country performers such as Randy Travis, Dwight Yoakam and Steve Earle, Roblin said he was threatened by personnel at the MCA recording company.

"They told me that no one at MCA would ever work with me again," Roblin said.

Roblin said he ignored the threat and submitted the story anyway.

supporting player to a shooting star this season. "The last couple of years I've had to get the ball to other people," Nurnberger said. "Last year, if I would score two or four points and have maybe eight or nine assists, then people would say, 'Yeah, he did his job. He got the ball to people.' This year people look for me to score.

Nurnberger's numbers are up substantially from a year ago. In 29 games last season, he scored 10.1 points per game on a .442 field-goal percentage and a .852 free-throw percentage. He hit 25 of 57 three-point attempts for a .439 percentage and had 123 assists.

This season, he's scoring 18.5 ppg on a .506 field-goal percentage and a .862 free-throw percentage. He's shooting more three-pointers,

"Sure, if you get the attention it's nice. But people expect the same thing I've been doing. It's going to put a lot more pressure on me to perform every game."

—Kai Nurnberger

51-106, and has a higher percentage, .481.

"He (Coach Rich Herrin) said before the season I was going to be a three-point shooter," Nurnberger said, "but I never really thought that I would get a lot of shots in a game. Then it just worked out that way. We didn't have the inside game so I had to take the shots. It was still tough for me until I became more confident."

With the increased numbers has come an increased amount of attention.

"Sure, if you get the attention it's nice," Nurnberger said. "But people expect the same thing I've been doing. It's going to put a lot more pressure on me to perform every game."

GOAL, from Page 20

Nurnberger sat out the 1985-86 season but has since become the director of the Salukis' offense during the last two seasons.

"Kai Nurnberger is as hard-nosed a young man as you can have," Herrin said.

"He has great courage and great confidence. I think this helps him out," Herrin said.

Coaches center attention on Kampwerth's defense

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

Cathy Kampwerth continues to improve her basketball skills and the coaching staff of the women's team continues to ask for more.

Kampwerth is ready to deliver.

A 12-point effort by Kampwerth against Bradley on Saturday put her season scoring average at 7.7 points, up from the 6.1 ppg she had in 1986-87.

"Cathy's really come along, really blossomed," assistant coach Julie Beck said. "She played well when we needed some big buckets."

Kampwerth, a 6-foot-4 junior center from Highland, has earned a starting position after having a total of only four starts in her first two seasons.

She was a member of the North squad at the U.S. Olympic Sports Festival last summer and also lifted weights. Even so, the coaches keep pushing her to do better.

"We need her to get more aggressive," Beck said.

Defense has been her forte this season, leading the team, along with Bridgett Bonds, with 18 blocks. "I felt like my defense was better," Kamphad three blocks and held them to seven points each.

The Bradley performance also was the fifth time Kampwerth reached double-figures. The 22 points against Indiana State on Jan. 23 was a career-high.

After scoring 14 points in last season's NCAA tournament victory over Louisiana State, Kampwerth had figured heavily in Coach Cindy Scott's plans.

"I believe Cathy knows how important she is to our team. Her mobility and size make her a very real threat inside," Scott said.

Other notes:

—Bonds, who leads the team in scoring with 11.8 ppg, also has been the top rebounder in the last four games. She leads with 225 points, 35 steals, 58 turnovers and 60.5 percent (95-157) field-goal shooting.

Athletics OKs class absence policy

By Sharon Waldo
Staff Writer

Emphasizing a student-first, athlete-second philosophy, the athletics department has instituted a policy on student athletes' absences from class and exams.

"As of this morning, it's (the policy) in good shape," Charlotte West, interim athletics director, said Tuesday.

"It was approved this morning by the administrative staff," she said. "I then will present it to the coaches as a policy, and I will present it to the IAAC as a policy."

West presented a proposed policy to the Intercollegiate Athletic Advisory Committee, staff members and coaches in January. "They made some suggestions and Nancy Bandy rewrote it," West said.

Bandy, assistant athletics director, said last month that the department is "looking more closely at the exact number of classes missed" by student athletes. However, she said the number of absences is "not considered a major problem."

The policy stresses that "coaches should make every effort to minimize student-athlete absences from class and exams in scheduling athletic competitions." It also sets guidelines for conflicting class-practice schedules.

"Athletes could abuse the program by signing up for a class during a practice period," West said. "Now, if an athlete has to take a class during a regularly scheduled practice session, they need to clear that scheduling with an academic coordinator."

The policy also asks that each head coach submit a report on the number of classes missed by each student-athlete because of competition and travel. The coaches have up to one month after the final competition to submit this report.

"I don't see any immediate effect on our GPA really," West said. "This is something that, with some exceptions, we've worked toward. I just see it as another step forward in hoping that we maximize the academic potential of everybody."

"Where it's been violated in the past, we hope to correct that," she said.

Men's tennis team wins one, tires against Notre Dame

By Jeff Griesser
Staff Writer

The men's tennis team kicked off the season with a split, beating Northern Illinois and losing to Notre Dame in South Bend, Ind.

The Salukis downed NIU 7-2 and lost to the Fighting Irish by the same score. Coach Dick LeFevre said he was impressed with the players' efforts.

"It's tough to go up and play at Notre Dame, especially since we've only been practicing for a little over a week," LeFevre said. "Our timing was off and they were tired against Notre Dame. I thought we played well, though. It was an encouraging outing."

The Salukis have had limited practice time this year and the hectic schedule on Saturday left them weary.

"We played NIU from noon until four o'clock and only had half an hour to eat and be back to play Notre Dame," LeFevre said.

Against Northern, Saluki's No. 1 singles Jairo Aldana lost to Steve Weire 6-3, 6-3. No. 2 Fabiano Ramos and No. 3 Mickey Maule both won in straight sets.

No. 4 Juan Martinez came back to beat Brad Kramer 4-6, 6-3, 6-3.

No. 5 George Hime lost to Tim Halligan 6-4, 6-4, and No. 6 Dean Russell squeaked by Gary Hartendorf 4-6, 7-5, 6-3.

SIU-C dominated NIU in doubles play, with all three teams winning in straight sets.

After a short breather, the Salukis were on the court again, this time against Notre Dame.

"I really think we could have beaten them," LeFevre said. "We were just so tired. We played more tennis on Saturday than we have all year."

The key match against Notre Dame was the No. 4 singles, LeFevre said. Martinez won the first set 6-3 and was serving at 5-4 in the second before being knocked off 3-6, 7-5, 7-5 by Dan Walsh.

"I think things would have turned out much different if Juan could have pulled it out," LeFevre said. "He was exhausted, though, and it was tough out there for him."

In doubles, the No. 1 team of Maule and Ramos lost in straight sets, as did No. 2 Hime and Martinez, and No. 3 Aldana and Russell.

Hair-raising finishes are Kai's specialties

By Dave Miller
Staff Writer

Kai Nurnberger's miraculous finishes have prompted his backcourt partner, Steve Middleton, to dub him "The Miracle Child" after last Saturday's game.

Nurnberger, who has earned the name through his heroics, now looks the part. Like the mystic boy who possessed special powers in the movie, "The Golden Child," Nurnberger, through the help of a friend, now sports a smooth dome.

He said he almost received the haircut before Saturday's game but decided to put it off. Nurnberger, who also sported the "bald look" when he was a freshman, gave no reason as to why he did it this time.

But the lack of hair is not all "The Miracle Child" has in common with "The Golden Child." There has been something of a mystique surrounding Nurnberger in each of his game-saving exploits.

In his first fantastic finish, a series of things occurred before Nurnberger's short bank shot sent the Jan. 16 Indiana State game into overtime.

Middleton hit his first free throw and missed his second attempt on purpose. Then the big men in the lane tipped the ball to Nurnberger, whose shot bounced around the rim a couple of times before dropping through the basket as the clock ran out. The Salukis won 82-72 in overtime.

Against Illinois State on Jan. 23, Nurnberger's three-point attempt to tie the game seemingly left his hand after time expired. However, the referees did not hear the final buzzer sound over the roar of the crowd and, after a meeting, ruled Nurnberger's shot good. The Salukis lost 102-98 in overtime.

Nurnberger's latest shot heard around Carbondale came against Drake. The Salukis were down by four with fifteen seconds left in the second overtime. Nurnberger launched a three-pointer and was hacked by Drake guard Eric Berger. The missile came down through the net and Nurnberger hit the game-tying free throw with six seconds left. The Salukis won 99-98 in triple overtime.

Nurnberger's goal was to play in U.S.

By Dave Miller
Staff Writer

Kai Nurnberger has come a long way. The junior point guard came to Southern Illinois from Wolfenbuttel, West Germany. Although the national sport is soccer, Nurnberger grew up around a basketball court. His father coached his mother in a women's basketball league.

He wanted to play high school basketball in the United States after learning about a foreign exchange student program. He wound up playing his senior season for Benton High School under Coach Rich Herrin although he was originally headed elsewhere.

"At first I was going to go to Olney," Nurnberger said. "They had exchange students the last five years before I wanted to go there, but the Rotary Club said they didn't want me so I went to Benton."

After graduation, Nurnberger enrolled at SIU-C and played his first year under former coach Allen Van Winkle during the 1984-85 season. He scored 17 points in 13 games.

"It didn't work out too well so I quit," Nurnberger said.

After temporarily withdrawing from school, he was offered another chance when Herrin became the Salukis' coach.

"He (Herrin) asked me if I wanted to come back but I had to pay my own way through school the first year," Nurnberger said. "So I did and then got my scholarship back."
