IAC can approve Viet sponsors

By Michael DuPre
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Approval to process applications of area residents wishing to sponsor Vietnamese refugees has been given to the International Assistance Council of Southern Illinois.

The council, a non-profit organization of area volunteers attempting to aid in the resettlement of Vietnamese refugees, received the approval from the International Rescue Committee, one of nine voluntary agencies seeking sponsors for the refugees.

Doug Linson, council chairman, said, "The council can give field approval of a sponsor and complete the paperwork at this end and send a synopsis sheet to the International Rescue Committee. The refugees will be released on the basis of that."

Recognition of the council by the voluntary agency came with the realization by the council that there are no federal funds available for a secondary resettlement center like the one originally envisioned by Phil Baewer, Carbondale's economic development director, that would have used SIU-C facilities to house and train refugees.

Robert Jacobs, SIU professor emeritus, said, "There are no funds available from any source for intermediate resettlement and under the present rule of the Immigration Department no refugees can leave the camps unless they are sponsored."

The council, therefore, is shifting its emphasis to finding sponsors "primarily for the families of Vietnamese students already associated with SIU."

Joseph Chu, director of SIU's International Education program, said, "Charity begins at home and we should try to help first those people that we know."

Linson reported that he had firm and probable commitments from area individuals, churches and companies to sponsor 75 refugees.

The Vietnamese Students' Association is compiling a list of relatives and friends who were evacuated and who are waiting in military bases for sponsors.

Jared Dorn, assistant director of the International Education program, said that up to now, 18 of SIU's 38 Vietnamese students have received word that friends or relatives are waiting for sponsorship.

The 18 reported that 73 refugees—ranging from single individuals to a group of 15—are presently in the camps awaiting resettlement.

There are currently 19 refugees in Carbondale who have been privately sponsored. The council also received reports that two sponsored refugees are in Murphysboro and another is in Ava.

Jacobs said that there is still the possibility of sponsors receiving federal funds for educational expenses incurred by the refugees.

Linson said the federal government in some circumstances will also reimburse state or local assistance agencies that give aid, such as food stamps or unemployment benefits, to refugees.

The council is still attempting to correlate refugee information as some area individuals and churches are sponsoring families without the council's knowledge.

Jacobs said that this information is essential so that the council can plan "supportive programs for them."

Linson asked that any such information or donations of money, food, clothing or household utensils be forwarded to the council's office at the Episcopal Church of St. Andrew, 404 W. Mill St., 549-0251.

Trustees OK Student Center fee increase

By Lenore Sobota
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A $5 increase of the Student Center fee was approved unanimously by the Board of Trustees Thursday.

The charge for full-time students was increased from $15 to $20 a semester. The increase in the fee was needed to "bridge the gap in the projected deficit" in the Student Center operation, according to SIU President Warren W. Brandt.

That deficit, attributed primarily to rising utility costs, is expected to be $300,000, said Brandt.

Approval of the increase was tabled last month at the request of the Faculty Senate and students to allow them more time to study the increase.

Both Student President Doug Diggle and Graduate Student Council

President Ellen Schanzle voiced opposition to the fee increase as an unnecessary burden to students. Both stated students were not given sufficient input regarding how Student Center fees are spent.

Herbert Donow, president of the Faculty Senate, said the senate accepts the necessity of an increase but feels students should have a "good deal more influence on how the Student Center is run."

Students presently serve on the Student Center Advisory Board but have no policy making functions.

Trustee William Norwood, in voting for the increase, said that the administration should explore the possibility of giving students formal voting input into policy making.

The board also approved a $10 per semester "listener's permit" program beginning this fall which will allow non-students to sit in on any number of classes at SIU on a more or less regular basis.

The non-credit program is different from auditing a class in that no record is placed on the person's transcript and the individual will not take regularly-scheduled exams. It is designed for people who have been out of school for a number of years to help ease them back into normal classroom situations.

The board gave authorization for the implementation of scheduled salary raises effective July 1 subject to the availability of funds.

Board Chairman Ivan Elliott said that after Gov. Dan Walker's speech Wednesday night asking for a reduction in state spending, SIU may not receive all the funds that had been requested. This could affect the amount of the salary increases, he added.

Brandt said SIU employees will not be expected to absorb the total cost of any cutback and, if necessary, services would be reduced to absorb the loss of funds.

The board also approved budget requests for three new bachelor of science programs and one new master of science program.

The board authorized the beginning of bachelor of science programs in Black American Studies, Education in Theater Education and Human Resources as well as a master of science in Mining Engineering. Authorization of these new programs is contingent on approval from the Illinois Board of Higher Education.

Mace named to new veep position

President Warren Brandt announced Thursday the appointments of a vice president for University relations and a director of campus services.

George R. Mace, acting vice president for administration and campus treasurer, was named vice president for University relations. He will be responsible for development and alumni relations as well as offices dealing with public relations and area services.

The redefined position was formerly known as vice president for development and services and was held by T. Richard Mager until his resignation last May to join the law school faculty.

Clarence G. Dougherty, director of the Student Center was appointed to the newly-created post of director of campus services. He will be responsible for the Physical Plant, Facilities Planning Office, security police, airport operations, auxiliary enterprises, the SIU Arena and Shryock Auditorium. Dougherty will report directly to Brandt.

Formal approval of the two men is expected at next month's board meeting. Brandt declined to release salaries because they had not been presented to the board.

Mace and Dougherty will officially assume their new positions July 1, but will perform dual duties until replacements are named, Brandt said.

Mace, 41, joined the SIU-C administration in 1971. He had served at SIU-Edwardsville on the government and public affairs faculty.

He was assistant to the president, dean of students and acting vice president for student affairs at SIU-C before becoming acting vice president for administration and campus treasurer.

Dougherty, 52, became Student Center director in 1960. He came to SIU from Ohio State University where he was Union Center director.

News Roundup

Indian prime minister refuses to resign

New Delhi (AP)—Prime Minister Indira Gandhi defiantly refused Thursday to resign from office despite being convicted of using corrupt practices to win her parliamentary seat.

The crisis embroiled India in its worst constitutional tangle since independence 25 years ago.

The 57-year-old prime minister sent word through her aides that she would fight the conviction and the mandatory sentence of being barred from holding any public office or contesting any election until 1981.

Judge Jag Mohan Lal Sinha, the one-man tribunal who ruled against Mrs. Gandhi in her home city of Allahabad, gave the prime minister a 20-day reprieve before her ban on holding public office would become effective.

Sources close to the prime minister said she would use the period to file her appeal with the Supreme Court and get the reprieve further extended to remain in office until the issue is finally settled.

Task force issues report on aerosols

Washington (AP)—A federal task force said Thursday that the world's ozone shield, which protects against skin cancer, may be damaged by the gas used in aerosol deodorant and hair-spray cans.

The task force recommended immediate consideration of a requirement to label aerosol cans containing fluorocarbon propellants, but it said consideration of banning them could wait a year until completion of a further study by the National Academy of Science.

The task force concluded, however, that "there seems to be legitimate cause for serious concern" over the use of these propellants, strongly suspected of working their way into the earth's upper ozone.

Ozone in the stratosphere filters out much of the ultraviolet radiation from the sun. The task force warned that depletion of the ozone would let more radiation reach the earth's surface.

Soviets step up anti-Chinese campaign

Moscow (AP)—The Soviet Union's official press is flooded these days with anti-Chinese material that indicates a new intensity in the Soviet-Chinese feud.

A marked upsurge in the past few weeks of articles and comments range from accusations that Peking wasn't really happy about the Communist victory in Vietnam to an article implying that Chairman Mao Tseung had his son liquidated.

Western specialists who watch the Soviet-Chinese war of moves say it probably is a reaction to recent Chinese diplomatic moves around the globe and betrays Soviet concern.

One specialist cautioned that the propaganda increase by the Soviet Union "doesn't necessarily mean any increase in real tension" between the two countries.

Marshal Andrei A. Grechko, Soviet defense minister, made a hard-line speech May 28 to military cadets and told them imperialists are trying to form a united anti-Soviet front with Peking.

Jackson sheriff held in contempt

Murphysboro, Ill. (AP)—A Circuit Court judge held Jackson County Sheriff Don White in contempt of court Thursday in a dispute over the early release of a prisoner from the Jackson County Jail.

The court had ordered Norvell Haynes held for six months, ending June 27, for violation of parole. However, White released Haynes Saturday, contending he had earned 20 days off his sentence for good behavior.

Judge Peyton H. Kuncze disagreed and said he had ordered Haynes held for the full term.

Daley says Walker should cut budget

CHICAGO (AP)—Mayor Richard J. Daley said Thursday it is the responsibility of the governor and not the General Assembly to cut the state budget by $325 million.

In a television address Wednesday, Gov. Daniel Walker said his proposed budget for the coming fiscal year must be trimmed by $300 million or the state would be in a financial shambles.

He said the legislature should cut 6 per cent across the board from the $10.8 billion budget.

"It's Walker's budget," the mayor said. "If he wants to cut it, all he has to do is send a message to the legislature and produce the figures specifically."

Walker asked that the legislature cut 6 per cent from each item in the budget.

Daley opposed any cuts in social service programs. "If we have the wealthy society we say we have, in the name of God, how can we cut education? How can we cut senior citizens?"

In a City Hall news conference, the mayor added, "We shouldn't cut out welfare. Did you try to live on what some of them get a week yourself? Some people laugh about it because they've never been on welfare.

"We can't cut on aid to blind people and the things we're doing for the blind. How can you cut on the care of the mentally sick in our state when there are so many people sick today mentally than there ever was."

Daley also said Chicago would never have the financial problems of New York City.

"It can't happen under the present administration," he said.

He said he sympathizes with New York City Mayor Abraham Beame. "He is not responsible for it. That's the sad thing. He was left with a deficit of $1.6 billion.

"Lindsay was the one responsible for it...you can't have deficit spending for too long without being in trouble," Daley said.

He also said the federal government should have gone to New York City's aid. "The government, the president, should have lent his ear to them."

SIU professors seek grants to test alcohol as farming fuel

By Dan Ward
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer
SIU researchers may be going into the moonshine business.

However, they plan to use the 190-proof 'white lightning' for eating, not drinking.

A committee of professors, under the chairmanship of Richard Arnold, chairman of chemistry and biochemistry, has applied for grants with Research and Projects and the Energy Research and Development Administration to fund a project to determine the feasibility of using alcohol distilled from harvest wastes as fuel for farm machinery.

At a time when everyone is worried about shortages of gasoline, Arnold is concerned primarily with the farmer, who is dependent on liquid fuels to maintain the high degree of efficiency necessary in American agriculture.

"Think about it," he said. "In our country, only two per cent of the population farms. In a place like China, 85 per cent is out scratching the dirt.

"The reason why farmers in a technologically advanced nation can produce enough for the other 98 per cent to eat is that they have machinery, which requires liquid fuel. Electricity has been shown to be an inadequate substitute at this point.

"No matter how technologically advanced a country is, if the food is not produced, they've got you by the jugular vein. You can't eat ball bearings," Arnold added.

The project, if the necessary $75,000 to $80,000 is appropriated, will consist of converting stalks ordinarily plowed back into the soil into glucose with enzymes and converting that, through distillation, into 95 per cent ethanol.

One ton of cellulose, the principle component of harvest wastes, is necessary to produce 68 gallons of 95 per cent ethanol. The research team estimates that the average Illinois farmer can replace gasoline on his farm with 5,000 gallons of ethanol a year. With 10,000 gallons, he can fulfill all his energy needs, such as electricity, heating and grain drying.

Arnold said that the conversion from gasoline to ethanol in engines is "very minor." Part of the project will be to research the effects of prolonged use of ethanol in large internal combustion engines.

The project will be interdisciplinary with researchers from at least three departments. Members of the project committee are Arnold; J.N. BeMiller, professor of chemistry and biochemistry; J.W. Chen, chairman of thermal and environmental engineering; M.R. Dingson, director of research and projects; H. Hoerner, assistant professor of agricultural industries; and W.J. Wills professor of agricultural industries.

The committee maintains that no harm will be done to the soil humus by removing stalks. Returning wastes rich in yeasts and enzymes from the distillation process will in fact probably improve the soil, their proposal says.

Ethanol burns without emitting sulphur and is virtually pollution free, the committee says. In addition, the average Illinois farmer will save up to $4,000 per year by producing and using his own ethanol, the proposal states.

If the project supports the committee's expectations and conversion of ethanol becomes a feasible alternative to gasoline, the farmers will have only one roadblock to self-sufficiency. The Internal Revenue Service collects a tax of $19.95 per gallon on 190-proof drinkable alcohol.

As a result of a planned project at SIU, farmers may someday burn 190-proof in their tractors. Dick Mitchell, senior in plant and soil sciences, illustrates the point. (Staff photo by Jim Cook)

Rabin tells Ford new talks possible

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Ford and Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin of Israel concluded two days of talks Thursday with some optimism that Middle East peace negotiations can be resumed.

"The possibility of progress is by no means precluded," Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger told reporters.

Ford, in his meeting last week with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and now with Rabin, has found "an evolution in the thinking of both sides," Kissinger said.

Step-by-step talks broke down last March when Kissinger was unable to bridge Israeli and Egyptian positions on an interim agreement in the Sinai. At that time, a senior American official said Israel had missed an opportunity to move toward peace with the Arabs and that a resumption of the Geneva peace conference—and its breakdown—was inevitable.

Since then, however, Kissinger said, Israel and Egypt have reviewed their bargaining positions and told Ford of their interest in a negotiated settlement.

"But there hasn't been sufficient detail to say whether an agreement is possible," Kissinger told newsmen after an hour-and-a-half meeting between Ford and Rabin in the Oval Office.

Hinting that he will return to "shuttle diplomacy" in the area, Kissinger said: "A trip is not excluded."

Kissinger said Ford is continuing his reassessment of U.S. policy in the Middle East and hopes positive steps toward peace can begin within the next few weeks.

CIA must learn to respect laws

The Rockefeller Commission's review of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) thrusts the organization under a harsh spotlight.

The commission's findings point to innumerable illegal actions undertaken by the CIA. Apparently the agency has forgotten half its function—to preserve, as well as to protect, American democracy.

In many respects, the CIA has served the nation well. To superpower with the responsibilities of the United States, an effective intelligence-gathering organization is an absolute necessity if the information called upon in policy-making is to be reliable. In the minds of most lawmakers, this was probably the original design for the CIA when Congress approved its creation in 1947.

But since 1947 the CIA has abused its privilege of secret operations. Acting on its own initiative or on whims of Presidents Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon, the CIA has attacked the liberties of the very citizenry it was designed to protect.

The time has come for the public, and especially its representatives, to break down ignorance about the CIA's activities and put an end to the CIA's excesses. The CIA has "violated a trust," to use a phrase born of Watergate. It has investigated, manipulated and plotted against law-abiding citizens, often with the blessings of presidents.

In assembling files on 57,000 Americans, the CIA has opened private mail, monitored telephone conversations, infiltrated a congressional campaign, administered behavior-modifying drugs to unsuspecting persons and contributed money to a political project conceived by Nixon's White House staff.

Under the direction of Presidents Johnson and Nixon, the CIA has placed informants in 16 organizations ranging in ideology from the leftist Black Panthers to the moderate Washington Urban League, planted 32 wiretaps and 32 "bugs," and committed 12 break-ins.

All this despite the National Security Act of 1947, which in establishing the CIA forbade the agency from conducting intelligence operations within the United States.

As the Rockefeller Commission recommended, Congress must act to make public parts of the CIA's secret budget, order the destruction of domestic files having no bearing on foreign affairs and establish a committee to monitor the CIA.

Whether through congressional action of presidential decree, the CIA must be forbidden from ever again undertaking domestic surveillance.

If the statement, "None stands above the Law," retains any veracity in modern America, the CIA must be brought to heel.

"Isn't our girls hot enough?"

To the Daily Egyptian:

What I would like to know is: When are the American people going to open their eyes to just what in the hell is going on in this so called "Good old U.S.A.?" I'll tell you what our government is doing. Our so called Freedom Government has no right to deprive every American of his or her rights.

And what do you think we are going to do with these "unwanted" Vietnam people? We are doing the same thing we did with the Cubans. We bring them here, feed them—clothe them—keep them going.

Letters

When we LAY-OFF our employed American people and then the government puts the Cubans to work! This is just what is now happening with the Vietnam Refugees. Where in the hell are we going when we have no more jobs or room for the true Red-White-Blue citizens? What about all the un-employed now in our country? Hell, man, we're not even taking care of our own people. What about the Indians?

Support voting rights

To the Daily Egyptian:

The Voting Rights Act of 1965 in order to remain in effect must be extended by the 94th U.S. Congress. A bill to amend the act to extend certain provisions for an additional ten years and to make permanent the ban against certain prerequisites to voting has been submitted and referred to the committee on the judiciary. I encourage each person to request the support of their Congressional representatives for the House version of this Bill, H.R. 5271.

"WELL, ALMOST NO STONE UNTURNED....."

Give a spy an even break

By Arthur Hoppe

"Mr. Homer T. Pettibone? And you wish to apply for unemployment compensation? What is your job experience, Mr. Pettibone?"

"I'm a spy."

"Ah, yes. It seems that all we get in here these days are unemployed auto workers and unemployed spies. Two of our hardest hit industries. I take it you were with the CIA?"

"Yes, for more than 20 years."
"And what exotic spots around the world did you serve in, Mr. Pettibone? Madagascar? Lisbon? Casablanca?"

"No, Anaheim, Omaha and Brooklyn."
"I take it you amassed a great deal of invaluable information for your nation?"

"Oh, yes. Like you can't get a drink anywhere in Disneyland, always pack your galoshes when going to Omaha, and never, never ride the subway after dark."

"I see. And the reason for termination of previous employment?"

"Well, to be frank, they caught me spying on Americans."

"Good heavens, Mr. Pettibone, that's shocking!"

"Yes. Yes, I know. The entire country was shocked to learn that we had compiled dossiers on 57,000 Americans. I always said, 'If you can't nail a Russian, nail an American.' But they had to let all of us go."

"All of you?"
"Well, spying's a one-on-one ballgame, you know. So there were 57,000 of us spies, plus the dossier filers, the secretary who made the coffee and..."

"But you have seen the error of your ways?"

"Oh, yes! The very idea of a government spying on its citizens is abhorrent in a democracy. I can see now why it caused such a furor. And I'm ready to come in out of the cold. But what kind of a job am I fit for?"

"We'll determine that, Mr. Pettibone. Now, do you operate any business machines?"

"Just the usual—tape recorder, Minox camera..."

"There's no need to photograph my time card, Mr. Pettibone. And please stop eating my appointment slips."

"Sorry, force of habit."
"Do you speak any foreign languages?"

"You betcha sweet..."
"Other than Brooklynes?"

"Well, naturally I'm fluent in gobbledygook and I have a smattering of grammatical English."

"Hmmm. It seems that the only position for which your education and experience qualifies you is spying on Americans."

"I knew it! My wretched betrayal of our cherished democratic heritage by spying on my fellow citizens has doomed me to walk the streets, alone, disgraced and jobless."

"Not at all, Mr. Pettibone. Just take this employment application form over to the FBI."

"The FBI! But with my disgraceful record, why would they..."

"You don't understand, Mr. Pettibone. While the nation was shocked to the core at the thought of the CIA doing a bit of spying on Americans, the FBI is revered for doing it all the time."

How do you think they would feel towards the U.S.A.?"

It's time we wake up and as people stand up for what's right and what's wrong. If the American soldiers wanted these women and girls—let them stay over there and live with them! Isn't our American girls hot enough or good enough? How may American soldiers had a wife and family here—but yet became father to all the half-breeds now coming into our U.S.A.??

I say if we want to help them-- then don't act like a country with a yellow stripe down its back. Get over there and blow them Commies off the map!! I think our government lacks intelligence and we have a bunch of ding-a-lings (who was not put in by public vote) to make the rich richer and the poor poorer. And I don't mean the welfare bums that's too lazy to work for what they need. I say we need an awakening in this U.S.A. And I believe its just around the corner.

Historic Illinois town recreates olden days

By Pat Corcoran
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The lively days of Mississippi fur trading and the first French colony in Illinois were recreated with a bang this weekend at the Prairie-du-Rocher and Fort de Chartres rendezvous.

For six years, the sleepy calm of Prairie-du-Rocher (population 700) has been broken by laughing crowds, numbering several thousand, shuttling between the street dances in the historic town to the equally historic French fort located four miles to the west.

The Illinois Department of Conservation has sponsored the fort's gathering since 1969. Park rangers say persons come from all over Illinois and adjoining states to observe and participate in the reenactment. The fort is located in northwestern Randolph County.

Brightly colored costumes and uniforms depicting the French colonial life around the fort and town were everywhere. Women and girls wore long dresses with lace and petticoats while men wore uniforms similar to ones worn on glory fields two centuries ago.

Outside the fort walls, some 30 authentic Indian lodges (tepees) sat, their painted canvas covers shining in the June sun. Several 18th century style lean-tos dotted the ground under the towering tepees. In another area, campers, trailers, modern tents and motorized homes stood in jumbled array.

Darrell Duensing, head ranger at Ford de Chartres State Park, said the rendezvous got bigger and better each year.

"It seems each year we have a bigger crowd and everyone seems to enjoy the event. We try to be as authentic as possible," Duensing said.

Inside the fort, 27 stands displayed various colonial French crafts and skills. Displays ranged from woodcarving to candlemaking.

Behind the fort, a drifting burnt sulfur smell and countless muzzle blasts told of buckskin-clad riflemen ranging away in several different matches. Some 15,000 entries were made, Duensing said, in events including a clay pipe shoot, splitting a rifle ball by hitting an ax blade and target shots designed to gauge a hunter's skill.

The blackpowder marksmen represented several of the area's muzzle-loading gun clubs and Duensing said many of them shot flintlocks which they made themselves from original 18th century guns.

Long-barrelled Pennsylvania rifles pushed lead balls at targets 50 and 75 yards away. The shooters wore the animal skins, beads, scalplocks and a bright calico shirt. Most said their buckskins were handmade.

"You never really finish working on your skins, there is always something to add to them some little detail, trying to get them perfect," one grinning sharpshooter said.

Dan Anderson, Decatur, was one of the muzzle-loaders who brought his tepee for the rendezvous. He summed up his interest in black powder shooting, wearing buckskins and tepee living by saying:

"In all the history courses I had in school, I always wanted to know what it was like to set up a lodge and live like the mountain man of the 1820's did. No one could ever tell me what it was like so I started doing this to recreate for myself and for others some of this country's heritage."

Others interested in historical reenactment included soldiers of American and British Revolutionary War reenactment units present at the fort. Also, a French fife and drum corps came from Lafayette, Ind., Duensing said.

One of the reenactment regiments was the 42nd Royal Highlanders, the famous Scottish Black Watch. Bob Fleisher, Detroit, Mich., was one of the red-coated blue green-kilted soldiers in the outfit. He said the Black Watch had 86 members nationwide. Though separation is a problem, he said different groups in the regiment meet and practice military drills once a week.

"We are dedicated to giving as accurate a picture of the 18th century soldier's life as we can. Most of us are of Scottish ancestry. History of the American Revolution is pretty one-sided and we try to show what the British soldier did," Fleisher said.

His regiment constantly improves their uniforms and equipment's authenticity, Fleisher said. The groups use a drill book written in 1764 for realism, he added.

"We are all history buffs in this group. Two of us are history professors at large universities," Fleisher commented.

Fleisher noted the 42nd Royal Highlanders was the British regiment which accepted the French surrender of Fort Chartres in 1722. The surrender, including a mock battle and bayonet charge, was reenacted Saturday afternoon. The highlanders standard weapon is British brown bess musket. The .75 calibre gun is tipped with a shining steel bayonet, Fleisher said.

In a more peaceful setting inside the fort, Paul Dyar, Waterloo, was demonstrating woodcarving and selling carved animal figures. Dyar said he also sells necklaces with painted designs ranging from delicate flowers to finely detailed birds.

"I started out as a painter and carving was just a sideline, but persons came to look at the paintings but bought the carvings. Now, the only paintings I sell at rendezvous are the designs on the necklaces," Dyar said in a rich melodious voice.

Taking great care with his carvings, Dyar said he oils each figurine to give it a warmer, fuller glow.

"One thing many people comment about is the sign I have which says 'Please Touch. Wood should be handled carefully.' I guess they think it is unusual but wood takes on more character after careful handling," Dyar said.

Also a folksinger, Dyar said he displays his crafts at state-sponsored events.

"Some persons have told me I charge too much for wood but I tell them I am not selling wood, I am selling time," Dyar said.

Most of his wood, Dyar said, is given to him but he does purchase rarer types like basswood and butternut. He prefers using the hardwoods for his carving rather than softwoods, he said.

Since he first came to the festival in 1970, Dyar said he has been helped by his five daughters and one son who work selling his carvings.

Late Sunday afternoon, Duensing said he estimated attendance at about 25,000 more importantly he noted the attendance was some 4,000 more than last year's and it appeared everyone enjoyed the rendezvous.

"The crowd this year has been really great, we have no problem at all with anything like litter or traffic problems. The local people have given this all kinds of support, we have 11 park rangers and six conservation department police working here today plus, we have dozens of volunteers from the community who helped make it a success," Duensing said.

Since he came to the fort four years ago, Duensing said he has worked to promote the festival and the fort's historical heritage. He said he tries to take part in as much of the events as he can and admitted he was still stiff from paddling seven miles down the Mississippi river in a canoe race Sunday morning.

"We went in 34-foot canoes and the boat I was in won second place," Duensing said.

"This has been a great time, I love it! I had a calendar on my desk just counting down the days waiting for the rendezvous to start," Duensing said.

Toyo-View Demonstration

The masters of photography have always needed a photographic system that would allow the full expression of their creativity. Their choice since photography's infancy has been the view camera, for in spite of the tremendous technological advances made in the field of photography since Alfred Stieglitz started taking pictures of the New York skyline through his apartment window, no system has ever been developed that can do the things a view camera is capable of doing.

The Toyo View is designed to take full advantage of the unique capabilities of large format photography. Its only limitation is your own imagination.

Airport gets funds for sewage plant

Southern Illinois Airport has received state funds to aid in construction of a sewage treatment plant as part of a statewide airport development program for fiscal year 1976, according to Gary Bullock, Blankinship Engineers, Murphysboro.

Two other projects, T-hangar relocations and runway overlays, are being delayed because federal funds for their completion have not been appropriated, Bullock said.

Those two projects were to be funded by the federal Airport Development Program (ADAP), which has since gone out of existence, Bullock said.

The state-funded sewage treatment plant project cost is estimated at $123,440, according to an Illinois Transportation press release. The state has allocated about $90,000 for the project with the remaining amount to be funded by the Southern Illinois Airport Authority, Bullock said.

Bids for the plant will be in by July and the project should be completed by Jan. 1, 1976, Bullock continued.

Bullock added the plans for the other two projects are complete but it is not yet known when construction will begin due to the delay in federal funds.

He said the airport's T-hangars need to be relocated due to clearance guidelines. He said they may be moved from the east side of the airport to south of the new office building or near the Aviation Technology Building.

The runway and taxiway system is to be overlaid with two to six inches of bituminous concrete, Bullock said. This would make the entire runway surface stronger, smoother and uniformly crowned, he said. Bullock added it would also enable the airport to handle heavier and larger planes in addition to improving the handling of current airport traffic.

Drug prevention moving in new directions

By Dan Ward
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

An upcoming workshop in Champaign may herald a higher level of integration of the social service and law enforcement approaches to drug abuse prevention.

"I feel that we are very close to some sort of change in the level of law enforcement-social service professional cooperation," said Bob Child of the Greater Egypt Regional Planning and Development Commission. The commission recently held similar workshops for law enforcement and social service professionals from a 15-county area of Southern Illinois.

"I'm not sure what form the change is going to take. We've been working with this thing since 1969, but now the different groups are beginning to come together as a team," Child said.

Child said that the purpose of the workshops is not only to inform each field of the views and work of the other, but to eventually change the behavior of participants to reconcile their approaches.

"Everyone naturally maintains stereotypes of other groups," he said. "When they (law enforcement and social service professionals) get together in a workshop they have to confront each other and learn what the other's work is like. By the end, some of the stereotypes get softened."

The seminar to be held June 27 through 28 in Champaign, will be attended by experts from both fields throughout the state. The seminar is being sponsored by the Illinois Dangerous Drug Commission, which also funded a workshop held in Marion recently.

About ten to fourteen representatives of the Southern Illinois area will be chosen to attend the seminar in Champaign. "A person from SIU has certainly got to be in that group," Child said.

Four members of the SIU community are members of the planning team that will choose half its members to represent the 15-county Greater Egypt area at the seminar.

Mike Norrington, security; John Snyder, Counseling Center; Nolan Nakamura, Counseling Center; and Joseph Dakin, academic supervisor of corrections and law enforcement, are members of the planning team. Dakin was a speaker at the Southern Illinois workshops.

The two workshops held in Marion drew about 130 people from the law enforcement and social service fields.

Youth Dynamics Corporation of Carbondale, which organized the workshops under contract with the Greater Egypt Regional Planning and Development Commission, is working to obtain government funding for workshops and other drug abuse prevention programs in the future, said Mary Mitchell of Youth Dynamics.

Graduate fashion show attracts hundreds

A 21-year-old SIU graduate has already attained what many fashion designers covet—a one-man show of his creations that attracted hundreds of viewers.

The show at SIU-C was a personal triumph for East St. Louisan Larry Richardson, who got hooked on fashion when he was in high school after some suits he'd made for a singing group seized the attention of a television talk-show host. The host had Richardson on his show.

Richardson came to SIU-C in 1971 via East St. Louis Senior High School and immediately plunged into a clothing and textiles major, specializing in apparel design. He made clothes for himself and his friends, and one of them—graduate student Stanford Jones—talked him into doing a show. Jones said he'd sponsor it.

They rented three connecting ballrooms in the University's Student Center, sent out a raft of invitations, engaged musicians, and ordered refreshments. The date was set for Saturday afternoon, April 26.

Working night and day, Richardson drove himself to complete the collection of 25 garments he wanted to show. They included things for both men and women, and for all occasions—sports, casual, formal.

The show knocked 'em dead.

"He shows remarkable creativity," says Mrs. Thelma Berry, professor in charge of the apparel design program. "He produced a tremendous amount in preparing for his fashion show."

Many of Richardson's designs for women show intricate shaping by means of cutting and draping. Bias cut complimentary sections are seamed together to produce flowing lines. Cape styles are extended into full-length gowns. Sleek formals may have pleats strategically placed to shape the slashed skirts smoothly.

A man's jacket may have gathers around the back at the waistline, or may feature contrasting color piping.

Richardson plans further study and experience in the fashion industry before embarking on a full-time designing career. He already has been accepted at the Fashion Institute of Technology in Chicago, but has not decided whether to enroll there or to go to New York.

"I hope to go to New York this summer to see what's going on there," he said. "I need exposure to trends in the metropolitan area, for they are different from the fashions of the midwest. And I need to know more about merchandising, so I definitely plan more study."

Richardson's mother, Mrs. Mary Richardson of East St. Louis, was a special guest at his fashion show as were fashion merchants of the Carbondale area and representatives of some Chicago area business firms.

Chicago girls attracted to junior ROTC

Chicago (AP)—Girls have really taken to the junior Reserve Officers Training Corps program with 1,900 enrolled in Chicago's public schools.

They now make up 34 per cent of the 5,500 ROTC cadets in the program, says Lt. Col. Robert Eddy, acting director.

"When we opened the program to girls three years ago it was with the thought that having a few females around might attract more boys to the dwindling ranks," he said. "But now I'm beginning to think the opposite is happening. These girls are too good—that can be hard on the male ego."

He said the girls excel in classroom subjects like military history, tactics, map reading and first aid. They take the same subjects as the boys, including marching and drilling.

"Taking weapon training is voluntary for girls, but I don't know of a single one who has turned it down," said Eddy.

Fern Crim, a typing clerk at the University News Service models a black crepe formal sparked with a star of silver nailheads which trail around the hips to the back of the skirt. Pleats at the sides of the skirt add fullness. The gown was modeled recently in a one-man fashion show by Larry Richardson, SIU graduate.

SIU radar unit may alleviate residents' weather tensions

By Ken Johnson
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Louis "Lou" Ditzler hopes SIU's weather radar—being installed at Southern Illinois Airport and expected to be licensed for operation by the Federal Communications Commission—will ease local tensions about violent storms.

"The phone goes wild out here from people wanting information when violent storm systems are in the area," says Ditzler, chief weather observer at the airport. He believes that memory of a tornado which destroyed much of Murphysboro and took some 500 lives in 1925 has perhaps kept the fear alive that such a tragedy may occur again.

The RCA, Model CR-103 Radiomarine weather radar unit, however, is capable of monitoring all weather developments within an 80 to 100-mile radius of the airport and of projecting visual images of weather patterns on its radar screen.

Ditzler said he has made arrangements to broadcast emergency weather information directly from the airport weather room through the SIU, Murphysboro, and Jackson County Civil Defense communications systems should the need arise. He thinks relaying the information to the public this way will cut down on those phone calls.

Radar weather advisements have been sent to local weather watching stations on teletype, radio, and telephone hookups from Kansas City, Mo., and Lambert Field in St. Louis. Ditzler explained, however, that during adverse weather conditions those radar systems could not monitor weather in this area.

He said that within its 80 to 100-mile radius, the Radiomarine will detect the direction and speed of a storm's travel, and provide information about wind speeds, rain, hail, or snow that may be included in the total weather condition.

Complete, timely, and accurate weather advisement will be available for public safety and aviation safety on completion of the Radiomarine project that has been in the works for several months now, Ditzler said. Aid to flight operations is the project's main purpose, of course.

"Installing the unit can be finished within a few weeks, but it may take more than a month to receive an FCC license," said the chief weather observer. Ditzler and Pat Burns, technician at the airport who is in charge of the technical work of installing the Radiomarine, expect the FCC has a backlog of requests for communications permits which will cause the month delay.

Ditzler said Ward Montgomery, a resident of Olive Branch, is donating the radar equipment to SIU.

"We just got started talking about radar one day when I was repairing the radio in his plane. Ward just said he happened to have one," Burns related.

Montgomery repairs radar systems used by tugboats on the Mississippi River. Burns said. He said Montgomery needed a radar unit in operation to test parts of the units he repairs so he is donating a used Radiomarine to SIU on the agreement that he can test repair parts at the airport.

The Radiomarine came from a tugboat and is 20 years old, Pat said. He said he has checked the equipment over and the unit is in good working order. He said the Radiomarine's value is about $3,000, but he added that a comparable radar system would cost about $10,000 if SIU had to buy one today.

The installation of the system, including mounting the radar antenna 40 feet above an airport hangar and running electrical lines to the radar screen in the weather room will cost about $50 for materials. Assistant Airport Manager Ron Kelly said the cost would be shared by SIU and the Southern Illinois Airport Authority.

South Korea thriving despite war fears

By John Roderick
Associated Press Writer

SEOUL, Korea (AP)—A quarter century after the start of the Korean War fear of a new invasion from the Communist North has brought at least temporary political unity to South Korea.

Despite restrictions on freedom imposed by their present government, South Koreans still regard themselves as enjoying a better economic and political life than the North Koreans.

Their country is one of Asia's leaders economically. Seoul, the capital, now is a bustling metropolis with a subway system. Industry and commerce, although troubled by worldwide inflation and recession, has reached modern proportions.

American veterans of the Korean War, returning now, would find vast changes in society.

Begun June 25, 1950, and ended July 27, 1953, the Korean War resulted in nearly six million military and civilian casualties, including 33,000 American dead.

It touched off two decades of hostility between the United States and the People's Republic of China when Chinese "volunteers" poured in to help the retreating North Koreans. Less than 10 years later fear of Communist domination of Southeast Asia prompted the United States to become involved in Indochina.

The American setbacks in Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos coupled with a visit by North Korean leader Kim Il-sung to Peking—where he promised to come to the aid of any uprising in the South—has aroused anxious speculation here that he intends to test U.S. and South Korean resolve through stepped-up guerrilla activity, a short stab across the demilitarized zone or a full-scale invasion.

One of those who say he believes that Kim Il-sung might undertake a new invasion is the South Korean president, Chung Hee Park. Whether he is right or not, the threat has helped him bring unity among his 35 million people.

Until recently, South Koreans had been divided into camps supporting Park's measures that have deprived many of their civil liberties and those who opposed them. Park has contended that strict measures were necessary, not only to keep up a guard against the North, but to strengthen South Korea's economy and political life.

South Korea now has the larger army—620,000 men—as opposed to the North's 400,000.

The United States still has about 42,000 military personnel here, technically under the auspices of the United Nations.

Some of Park's opponents had demanded the withdrawal of American forces unless Park gave in to their demands for a restoration of full democratic processes.

But now most of the opponents have changed.

The U.S. presence is regarded here now as a mortgage on future American intentions, evidence that Washington's commitments to defend the South will be honored.

The Americans also remain a symbol of the close ties which have bound the United States and South Korea together since victory in World War II ousted the Japanese colonizers.

Kim Dae-jung, the most prominent of President Park's opponents, says: "The American troops here will encourage Russia and China to force Kim Il-sung to behave. They also will make Kim think it over before doing anything rash. He knows they have sophisticated weapons, including nuclear ones. And even though the Korean military will man 99 per cent of the front, the fact that the Americans are here will boost our morale."

University and high school students who not long ago were demonstrating against Park's policies have now lined up behind him in anti-Communist solidarity.

Even the opposition parties have called a halt to their campaign to have Park restore democratic liberties, judging the North Korean menace as more critical to the country's existence.

On May 21 an event occurred which underscored the drastically changed political mood. On that day Park received Kim Young-sam in a friendly two-hour conversation, only the fourth the president has had with an opposition leader in 12 years.

There is talk of making Park a nonparty president—he now heads the ruling Liberal Democratic Republican party—and leading the day-to-day governing to a coalition government which would include the opposition New Democrats.

Not everyone has jumped on the unity bandwagon, however. Some 400 Seoul National University students late in May staged a campus rally to denounce what they called an attempt by Park to use the Indochina defeat and national security as a pretext for more clampdowns. Most of them have been arrested.

Still Park in 14 years has been regarded as unifier and economic savior as well as the one responsible for the restrictions on freedom.

In 1961 he ended the political anarchy brought about by civilian rule, imposed a sense of discipline, brought about reconciliation with Japan, got the economy into first gear and attracted foreign investment.

South Korea today is one of the leading nations of Asia. Its people are better dressed, fed and housed than ever before. Seoul a city of six million, is studded with skyscrapers, criss-crossed by superhighways and boasting its first subway system.

Since 1971, when he barely won re-election, Park has moved not only to consolidate his rule but to put down dissent. His strictures were directed at students, Protestant and Roman Catholic social activists, the press and intellectuals.

In the midst of the moves toward unity he puzzled and dismayed his critics on May 13 by issuing still another decree which virtually eliminates all criticism of his actions.

Park points to a network of tunnels built by the North that cross the demilitarized zone and the rigorous training of North Korean militia as evidence the Communists mean business.

The president's dilemma is that in tolling the bell for wartime unity, he may be frightening away potential foreign investors.

Youth seminar to focus on international leaders

Youth World, a one-week seminar in leadership for high school seniors will be sponsored by SIUC July 6 to 11.

The 14th annual seminar will focus on acquainting students with some of the problems world and domestic leaders are encountering and the complexities involved in working toward solutions.

The program includes seminars, lectures, discussions and model sessions of the U.S. Congress and United Nations General Assembly.

International and domestic issues dealt with last year included terrorism, the Middle East crisis, pollution, and crime and punishment.

Participants usually receive sponsorship, which pays the $75 room, board and instructional costs for the week, from a variety of associations, clubs, civic organizations, Parent-Teacher Associations and veterans' groups.

Glenn E. Willis, Division of Continuing Education, is in charge of arrangements.

Pontiac man 'weighed down' over various dieting methods

PONTIAC, Ill. (AP)—There have been many tales of people having their jaws wired shut to solve weight problems. But Richard Belcher had his wired and solved hardly any.

Belcher, 34, has also tried pills, exercise, a raft of diets and steam-baths. They haven't cured his weight problem either, and he continues to fluctuate between 360 and 410 pounds.

"I just can't convince anybody that you don't have to eat to gain weight," says Belcher. Doctors refuse to believe that; they say he just eats too much. Belcher disagrees, noting that he seldom takes breakfast, has a soft drink for lunch, and eats supper "that is nothing unusual."

"I eat practically nothing," he said.

Belcher once entered a hospital to be fed intravenously, hoping that would shave off some unwanted weight. In three weeks he gained 32 pounds.

"The doctor accused me of smuggling in candy bars," he said. "But I didn't."

Last year, at 320 pounds, he decided to have his jaws wired shut. That was supposed to cut his weight by nearly half.

In two weeks he lost 12 pounds. But another two weeks went by and he lost nothing. Then several more weeks, and still nothing.

Belcher says that during the ordeal he had attempted to talk, and that his face became twisted and swollen.

"My jaw felt like it was out of its sockets," he said.

Doctors told him he was stuffing food into his mouth between the wires, and said that's what swelled his face.

"A doctor told me to get out of his office and never come back," recalls Belcher.

Though he says he eats like a bird, Belcher says there are disadvantages to not looking like one.

"I'm desperate," he said. "I can't get a job anywhere. People won't hire me because of insurance reasons."

But Belcher does admit to past sins. He has eaten three watermelons at one sitting, downed four pies in a matter of minutes, and obliged friends who once offered him $1 for each pancake he could eat. He ate 100 and fell from his stool.

"I got $100, but it wasn't that good a deal," he said. "I had to pay the hospital $53 to have my stomach pumped."

IPIRG works to inform, change society

By Diane Pasetti
Journalism Graduate Student
William Shakespeare said, "What's in a name?" In the case of IPIRG, most people probably don't know.

To put it simply, IPIRG is a PIRG—a public interest research group. The PIRG idea was a brainchild of consumer advocate Ralph Nader. Founded in 1970, the groups are now located on approximately 135 campuses in 20 states.

IPIRG is Southern Illinois University's version of a PIRG. The official name of the group is the Illinois Public Interest Research Group. IPIRG's office is located on the third floor of the Student Center.

The Illinois Public Interest Research Group was organized in 1971 as a corporate entity under the statutes of the state of Illinois. It was organized exclusively for educational purposes and operates within existing legal and political confines for constructive social change.

Although PIRGs are supposed to be—and many times are—state organizations, this is not the case on the SIU campus. Here, according to IPIRG president Vic Needham, the SIU group stands alone. There are no other PIRGs in Illinois. Needham lists this as one of the reasons IPIRG cannot be as effective as other groups.

In an article written in 1972, Ralph Nader described how PIRGs are supposed to operate by using the Minnesota and Oregon groups as examples. Nader said the PIRGs were formed after a majority of students in those states voted to raise their tuition by $3 per year. Although students volunteer for public interest research work, the money is used to hire full-time researchers and advocates who represent student social concerns in the community.

Nader went on to say that "a representative student board directs these PIRGs as independent institutions, with no connection to any of the schools. Nor do these student research groups get into partisan politics. They focus on community and state problems that need citizens' attention."

The Illinois Public Interest Research Group differs from Nader's description in several ways. The fee-allocation system described above does not exist at SIU. According to Needham, an earmarked fee system has been voted down by the SIU Board of Trustees several times. IPIRG is funded through student activities and its budget for 1974-75 was approximately $6,000, Needham said. For 1975-76, IPIRG asked $5,600—and was allocated $2,500.

In comparison, the Minnesota group operated during its first year on a $200,000 budget.

The SIU group is hampered not only by what Needham considers insufficient funds but by a lack of student volunteers as well. An article in the Daily Egyptian recently reported that IPIRG had offered part-time jobs with salary to attract workers.

Of the volunteer problem, Needham said "at the beginning of this semester, IPIRG had only four persons working approximately 15 hours per week each." Then, through articles published in the Daily Egyptian, "we recruited three or four more persons," he said.

Needham said there were about a dozen working members of IPIRG including two paid employees as the spring term drew to a close. The problem of volunteers is a continual one, however.

"With volunteers, there is a great lack of consistency," Needham said. "It's not hard to find people to run a survey if the survey is already set," he continued, "but what takes time is setting up new surveys."

Needham is not surprised that more persons are not volunteering. "Students find a lot of things to do with their time," he said. "I don't necessarily think that the reason they don't volunteer is apathy."

Although IPIRG's operation is much smaller than those of statewide groups, Needham said they "have put out a couple of surveys this year." Most of their time, however, has been spent "revamping the organization and getting the internal structure situated," he said. IPIRG conducted a grocery store price survey and a liquor store price survey this year.

The grocery store survey findings were published in a full-page ad in the Daily Egyptian. Although the ad cost IPIRG $156, Needham said the group could have afforded to do it every month but decided "that it would be awfully hard to save money going from store to store to buy the bargains. What you would save in the store, you would probably spend in transportation."

In addition to the grocery and liquor store surveys, Needham said IPIRG has been trying to establish an Office of Student Complaints. This office would serve the dual purpose of giving the research group some insight into the consumer problems of students as well as easing the work load of the University.

An Office of Student Complaints would be able to look into such things as how the health service designs its program or how area businesses treat students, Needham said. "IPIRG has also taken over a study on landlord-tenant policies from the Student Tenant Union," he said.

Although Needham concedes that there has been quite a bit of "inactivity" this year and the group has had trouble recruiting an adequate number of volunteers, he is optimistic about the future. While Needham feels that "most students are not aware of how it's going to affect them," he "definitely feels there is a place on campus for a public interest research group."

Needham added that by next year, there may be other PIRGs in Illinois.

"If there were other groups in the state," he said, "the Board might approve a fee-allocation system also."

A big problem would still remain, however.

"If we had more volunteers, we could do more," Needham said. The group will be working through the summer. Anyone interested in joining or finding out more about the group, Needham suggested, should drop by the IPIRG office.

Freshmen foundry workers get red armbands for safety

MAPLETON, Ill. (AP) — Like newcomer beanies for college freshmen, red armbands are now being issued to new production employees at the giant Caterpillar tractor Co. foundry here.

The unusual safety program began in late March, and aims at correcting mistakes by new workers before they result in an industrial accident.

Readily identifiable by the red armband, the new employee can be told by an experienced worker he's doing something wrong.

"We did discuss the possible psychological reaction to being singled out on the part of new employees," said Robert Keller, plant safety manager. "But we felt that the safety benefits offset any potential problem like that."

"It should help us in cutting down the number of injuries due to ignorance," said Keller.

Robert Belknap, a National Safety Council official, said that the program is not the first of its kind in industry, but "it's not the type of program which is generally accepted or used, to the best of my knowledge."

The NSC estimates that there were 2.4 million disabling injuries in the United States as a result of industrial accidents last year, with 13,500 lives lost.

"We have in the course of various surveys found that new employees were more accident prone, because they aren't as familiar with the work," said Bob Waterbury, an NSC spokesman. "The Mapleton program sounds logical."

Keller said the program was suggested by a plant employee who had a relative working at a strip mine, where new miners were required to wear distinctive hard hats.

"It does make it a lot easier for any employee to go up to a guy or gal with a red armband and explain something to them, offer to help them," said Keller.

"Whereas if you do it to a real experienced employee basically you are giving the impression of harassing them or criticizing and so on," he said.

Keller anticipates that at any given time between 30 and 40 of the foundry's 3,000 employees will be wearing the bands, which must be worn for 30 days. One problem was simply getting the stretchable red armbands, which were finally specially ordered from a sheller workshop.

"It took us a hell of a time, to tell you the truth, to get the right thing," said Keller. "There's nothing on the market that could get the job done."

But Keller said the program has been readily accepted at the foundry, which makes engine blocks, engine heads and other items.

"I have had absolutely no negative feedback," he said.

canoe trip is planned for Missouri's Current River, Stonecipher said.

The YMCA will also be conducting a special summer day camp in weekly sessions from June 23 to August 8. The first three weeks of the program will be conducted at Lake Murphysboro, the last three weeks at Little Grassy Lake.

Among the YMCA's adult activities is "OK Parenting" which will teach parents how to deal with specific problems of child rearing. The course will involve the use of transactional analysis and will be aimed at teaching parents how to rear "productive children," Stonecipher said.

The YMCA's summer programs will run in two five-week sessions from June 9 to July 12 and July 14 to August 16. Registration for the first session closed Monday. YMCA members may register for the second session from June 30 to July 3 and open registration will be from July 7 to July 14 for the second session.

Area YMCA focusing on summer programs

The Jackson County YMCA is offering a number of varied programs for county residents this summer, says Mary Ann Stonecipher, YMCA program director.

Listed among the YMCA's preschool activities are "Mon & Tot" swimming and "Children's Hours." The swimming program is designed to increase physical coordination for children aged three months to three years and to familiarize the children with the pool, water and water safety. Mothers will be in the water with their children.

"Children's Hours" will be aimed at helping children 3 to 6 to increase their swimming and gym skills as well as providing time for stories, plays, snacks and art activities.

The YMCA is offering a canoe program for high school-age children. Safety, equipment and its care and skill fundamentals will be featured in the program which will be conducted at SIU's Lake-on-the-Campus. At the end of the course a Lyle Ward, managing director of the festival, said that the agency has pledged to do its utmost to arrange another date for Miss Newton-John for 1978. Single ticket orders for the event are now being refunded either by mail or in person at the SIU-E box office.

Olivia Newton-John bows out of scheduled SIU-E concert

The Mississippi River Festival has been notified by Olivia Newton-John that she must decline to appear at her scheduled performance July 11 at Southern Illinois University-Edwardsville.

According to Richard Halem of the International Creative Management Agency in Beverly Hills, Calif., "It has become necessary that Olivia Newton-John

Dogcatchers may become rabies officers

By Pat Corcoran
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer
Carbondale dog wardens will soon be sworn in as Jackson County rabies control officers, bettering dog bite investigation and clamping down on vicious dogs, a county board member said Thursday. A rabid was prepared earlier this

The expected signing of the agreement will come at the county board's July meeting, board member Susan Casey, D-Carbondale, said.
The contract allowing city dog catchers to investigate reports of bites from animals that might be month, Casey said, but county board consideration was delayed until the contract was approved by the Carbondale city attorney.

John Wornick, Carbondale city attorney, has been on vacation and will not return until Monday, Casey explained.
Provisions in the agreement include the city animal control wardens being deputized by the county health department to investigate dog bites and impound any suspected rabid dogs. Formerly, the investigation of dog bites was turned over to the county health department and a rabies officer would take over after the city caught the dogs, Casey said.

Under this procedure, all dog bites which occur inside Carbondale city limits will be handled by Carbondale's dog wardens without calling in county animal officials.

Provisions of the consolidation are:
—The city of Carbondale handles all dog bites which occur with the city limits.
—The county health department authorizes city dog wardens to become rabies control wardens.
—The county gives the city the $1 rabies tag fee for each dog license sold in Carbondale.
Trentacosti said the last provision was to defray the city's cost of taking the added job of bite investigation. Casey said the county feels it will be saving money in the long-run because the county wardens will be able to concentrate on bites occurring outside Carbondale.
Trentacosti noted the plan will go into effect as soon as the county board and city council sign the contract.

"The consolidation will prevent duplication since whoever is called, the health department or the Carbondale dog warden, the Carbondale dog warden will be sent to catch the dog inside city limits," Casey said.
In previous years, Ron Trentacosti, police department supervisor of services, said, the county has handled some dog bite cases in Carbondale and the city dog wardens others, leaving no one with a complete record of the rabies problem.
"With the city wardens becoming county rabies officers, we can know when a dog has bitten people before, our records will show all the calls for dog bites in the city," Trentacosti said.

Under Jackson County ordinances, all dogs over one-year of age must be vaccinated for rabies each year at $1 licensing fee.
Under Carbondale ordinances, all dogs over six months old must be licensed at the city clerk's office at a cost of $7 by July 1. The fee for sterilized dogs is $4.

Liquor store may relocate at Westown Shopping Mall

Leo's Liquors, presently located at 101 W. Monroe St., will move to a new location at the Westown Shopping Mall, pending authorization from the Liquor Commission for a transfer of their liquor license.

The Liquor Advisory Board voted to recommend the authorization in a meeting Wednesday night in the City Hall courtroom. The liquor commission will meet Monday night in the City Council Chambers.

The board also will recommend commission approval of a class "A" liquor license for the "Stumble Inn" located at 213-215 N. Washington St. The board also continued the review of a request to allow the Pinch Penny Pub to sell package liquors. According to zoning rulings by the Planning Department, the pub is considered a restaurant and is allowed to sell liquor only by the glass.
The board advised John Karagiannis of KAK, Inc., owners of the pub, to confer with the Planning staff.
The board also made a preliminary review of an application by Walgreen for a license to sell package liquors and reviewed a proposal for the selling of beer in the Downstairs Arcade.

Gray's missing wife returns

WASHINGTON (AP)—The wife of retired Illinois congressman Kenneth J. Gray, who disappeared Wednesday afternoon, returned home Thursday, a family spokesman said.

picked up his wife Thursday afternoon and brought her home.

Police reported that Mrs. Gray only left a note, written on an envelope, saying who was going to visit a doctor before she disappeared. The note did not name the physician, police said.

Gray, a Democrat, has continued to live in suburban McLean after retiring from Congress last year. He first was elected to the House in 1954.

Electric cords found to cause many lip burns

CHICAGO (AP)—A rash of severe lip burns in children who have chewed electric cords has been seen in the Los Angeles area in recent years, a surgeon from the area reports.

The extent of the problem is not fully known because no study has been done, he said in an interview at the Second International Symposium on Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery of the Head and Neck, in session this week.

But the surgeon Dr. Stephen D. Proffitt, said he and his colleagues in the Pomona Valley Ear, Nose and Throat Medical Group have treated about a dozen cases in the past three or four years.

Members of the group teach at the University of California medical center at Los Angeles, so more such cases may be referred to them than other doctors, Proffitt said.

Usually the injury is seen in children under age 4, those in the "crawling, exploration stage," and it occurs when saliva caused contact and conduction after the protective covering of the wire is chewed into.

Because the wall plug is at eye level for a crawling child, it is a particular hazard, Proffitt said, adding that lack of parental attention to the child is to blame.

Proffitt said the injury is so severe when a child chews a plugged-in electrical cord that it must be described as a fourth-degree burn—even more severe than the third-degree burn which is usually recognized as the worst.

The burn is much deeper and more charring than other burns and causes coagulation of tissue and blood vessels, he said.

Best treatment results are obtained if the doctor does not provide immediate, aggressive treatment, which includes removal of damaged tissue, he told the symposium.

He advocates gentle treatment, using moist dressing and antibiotics, with careful watching of the burn for a few days or weeks until the wound and body have stabilized following injury.

Less repair surgery is required, sparing the child unnecessary pain, with a more cautious approach, he said.

The scarring is tremendous, he said, if the physician jumps in early to stimulate scar formation.

If treatment is too aggressive, the early scarring can obscure the individual muscles which must be realigned later in surgery, he said.

Skin grafting also is required later to cover the hole left by the burn, he said.

Arizona girl holds lead in Nationals

By Gary Marx
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

With only the floor exercises and uneven bar optionals remaining in the women's all-around competition, 15-year-old Tammy Manville from Tucson, Ariz. leads her competition Thursday in the Women's Elite National Championships.

Manville strengthened her slim lead after Wednesday night's compulsories by scoring a 9.5 vault and 9.45 on the beam routine bringing her total to 56.6. In both events she ranks second behind Kyle Gaynor who scored a 9.55 on the beam and Kolleen Casey who registered 9.7 in vaulting.

Casey held onto second place in all-around competition with a 54.85. Denise Cheshire is running a close third with a 54.75. Leslie Wolfsberger, who was tied for second place after the compulsory round, slipped to fourth place Thursday after falling from the beam in the optional round.

The top six girls in each event will compete in Friday's final round. Behind Gaynor and Manville on the beam are Jodi Yocum, Donna Payton, Donna Johnson and Jeanne Beadle. Tied with Manville for second place in vaulting are Trish Reed and Denise Cheshire. They are followed by Sharon Shapiro and Debbie Wilcox.

The top 12 all-around girls will travel to Miami Beach in October for the final Pan American Games Trials. The top 20 all-arounders will make up the U.S. National Team.

Several of the meet's favorites were unable to participate due to injuries suffered before the meet. Highest scoring qualifier Dianne Dunbar hyperextended her elbow last leek and second-ranked Ann Carr was out after a hernia operation. SIU gymnast Sandi Gross is suffering from multiple injuries received when she straddled the blanching beam during a practice session.

In action last Wednesday Tom Weeden from California held onto his lead in the Men's Elite National Championships and Pan American Games Trials during the Olympic compulsories. High school senior Bart Connor from Morton Grove, Ill. trails Weeden's 106.3 with a second-place 104.9.

AAU champion Mike Carter from Louisiana State is third with 103.15. SIU star Jon Hallberg runs tenth in a field of 19 with a score of 97.3 and Saluki Glenn Tidwell's 96.95 is good for twelfth place.

All-around champions will be decided after the optional competition with the top six scorers in each event earning a shot at the individual event championships to be decided Friday night.

The 16 highest scoring all-around competitors will go to the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs for the final Pan American Games Trials. The top 15 all-around men will make up the United States National Team.

Women's gymnastics soaring in popularity

By Diana Cannon
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Never underestimate the power of a woman.

The flesh and curves of the feminine form, always revered for beauty, may also be charged with the strength and energy of a superb athlete, as demonstrated by the women gymnasts competing Thursday at the Elite National Championships and Pan-American Trials.

Vaulting, tumbling and flying through space, these young women exhibited prowess in a sport whose recent growth one coach termed "phenomenal."

"Women can enjoy their bodies and experience the same thrill of accomplishment as men," said gymnastics trainer Fritz Reiter of Van Nuys, Calif. "Girls like to take chances," he said, "but in the past, society decreed that wasn't kosher."

Debbie Fike, a top contender who was out of competition after a painful foot injury Wednesday, observed the influence of Olga Korbett in the increasing popularity of women's gymnastics in this country. The young Russian gymnast, a gold medal winner at the 1972 Olympics, performed feats previously unattempted.

Fike suffered a chipped ankle bone after a faulty landing in the horse vaulting competition. The 17-year-old from Cypress, Calif. was third in the Elite Nationals last year and said she had been practicing for five hours daily over the past nine years. Examining her swollen, blue ankle, she predicted it would be three weeks before training could begin again. Smiling, she expressed no bitterness over her accident. "I don't do anything but gymnastics," she said. "I just wish I was doing it now."

Only three of the women participants were over 18. Tiny Janice Baker, weighing in at 75 pounds, is 13 and the youngest. The protégée of gymnastics trainer Phil Davoli, Baker displayed the spriteness of a cat in every movement.

Davoli, from Syracuse N.Y., also credited the Women's Liberation movement for the uptrend in women's gymnastics. "Women finally feel free to express their athletic ability," he said, "which can be incredible."

The operator of a private gymnastics club for the past 2½ years, Davoli has more than 500 students under his instruction. Private clubs are taking hold, he said, as the most effective way to develop gymnasts capable of competing with the Russians.

Davoli stressed gymnastic training as total physical and mental development.

Gymnastics is a sport of discipline and dedication, Davoli said. Thirteen-year-old Baker travels 40 miles one way to work with her coach from 4 to 9 p.m. every week day. She has mastered Olga Korbett's dismount from the uneven parallel bars, but as her coach said,

"one mistake, and you go from top to bottom."

Under the bright lights, on the blue mats, the tan, strong-legged women performed. Some made mistakes, some reached near-perfection. But all smiled. They fixed each other's hair, they wrapped each other's wounds, and like all women, they watched each other closely to see who was the best.

Carbondale Park District to sponsor Friendship Festival softball tourney

By Ken Johnson
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

The Carbondale Park District will begin its Friendship Festival Softball Tournament Friday night with five games and the dedication of the District's Jaycee Field at Evergreen Park.

The 19-team double-elimination tournament opens at 6 p.m. Friday with Carbondale Bowl and McDonalds squaring off on the field that the Carbondale Jaycees began developing four years ago.

According to George Whitehead, acting park district director, the Jaycees spent about $10,000 on fencing, lighting, and other field improvements. The park district spent another $10,000 completing the work, Whitehead said.

"We have the best lighting this side of Bush Stadium," Whitehead said of the field which will be dedicated by Jaycee officers and park district commissioners at 8 p.m.

In the second Friday game, Bob's Tavern faces Kappa Alpha Psi at 7 p.m.; the Turkey's meet Evergreen Terrace at 8, LKH&H faces Smith Liquors at 9 and Larry's Service meets the Herrin Knights of Columbus at 10 p.m. to complete the night's schedules.

Energy meets the Cherry Bombers at 8 a.m. Saturday, Peppermint Lounge takes on the Shakers at 9 and Gramman's Orchard meets Benton Dairy Queen at 10 a.m.
