College Credit For Activities

If proper emphasis is to be placed on extra-curvi-cular activities at Southern, it seems that a plan to com-themsate those students who devote much time and ef-dict to various activities should be formulated.

d. It seems only logical that participation in such extra-curricular activities should mean college credit. The new professional degree program in music, which was set up recently, allows one-half credit each for participation in the band, chorus, and orchestra. All students musically able to do so will be required to earoll in two of these three ensemble groups. This plan was approved by the North Central Association. Men participating in football, basketball, and track are partially compensated for their time and effort by receiving two hours of college credit.

Giving credit for work contributed to these activities does, of course, necessitate the setting up of certain requirements and standards, which students would be forced to meet before receiving credit. The North Central Association would probably approve such a fit were set up in such a maner that appeal these activities would be equited to class time. One's immediate superior, as the band director, should be in a position to judge whether a student is entitled to credit.

WISHFUL THINKING

"Is there anything we can do that is unselfish?"
A successful business man made the above statement in an article describing the hiring of a minister to "do works that are good" without any thought of recompense to the business firm hiring him.

Selfishness, inherent in all humans and animals, is one of the heaviest milistones around the neck of society. Most of our actions through the centuries, from Neanderthal man to the present time, have been selfish actions. Is there anything we can do that is unselfish?

This writer knows that he does selfish things, Poristance, he drinks deeb by the gallons, while each day he passes a legiess man on the street without donating a nemny to his welfare. He gres sightly inchriated and talks in high-sounding phrase, about what should be done for the starving, Europeans, yet dontes not a cent to their welfare; he doesn't even support a cause helping them to get an education. He hears of a friend who is ill, confined to his bed, and doesn't have the decency to them to get an education. He hears of a friend who is ill, confined to his bed, and doesn't have the decency to send him a card of condolence. These are merely three of his selfish actions; he has more.

Let us look at the situation through the eyes o fthose who mooch their way on the streets. In Brooklyn, Joseph Bonavita, a former Bowery waif, could not GIVE his money away to human derelicts. They were so used to being refused when they beyged on the streets, that they could not comprehend a person who voluntarily give them money, drinks, and food. Ironically, he had to use the service of the budge of authority, a policeman, to convince them that he was real.

Maybe if we began looking AT other people instead of THROUGH them, this would might just possibly be a more congenial place to live. Then the question would not be, "how much money does he have?" but, "is he a nice guy?"

nice guy?"

Is there anything we can do that is unselfish?

Cooperative Entertainment Would Aid Students Who Spend Week Ends Here

By FRED SENTERS

Advantages derived from cooperative organizations have, in our opinion, been proven many times. We feel that when a group of persons has the same interests and the same likes and dislikes, generally it can work better if it works on a cooperative basis. Why then do we not form a cooperative entertainment organization at we not form a cooperative entertainment organization at Southern?

There seems to be many students at Southern while so far from Carbondale that a trip home each week is not feesible for them, and perhaps some stay to cut down on their expenses. To this group of students, an entertainment cooperative might be a decided advantage.

Such an organization could accomplish these results: (1) it could sponsor trips to points of interest such as Giant City state park, Pound's Hollow, Crab Orchard like, Grand Tower, and Baid Knob; (2) it could supply information concerning places of entertainment in and around a strong the state park of the strong state of the state park and similar entertainment.

By collecting a small weekly or monthly fee, the treasury could build up a fund to handle the expenses of party refreshments and chartered busses.

Such a plan would, provide economical entertainment for its members and give them something to do over the week end. Students, what do you think of the idea?

The Southern Parade By DAVE KENNEY

"Mr. Two-hands" bowed out brilliantly last Monday night... He must have known that the crowd which packed every corner of the gymnasium had come amuch to see Sebastian play his last game on Southern's horner loor, as to watch his team win the IIAC championalip. He wrapped up all the drive and daring and superb basket shooting which he's come to be known for a neat package and laid it on the line for us in 40 thill-packed muntical ordinen will probably not greater player, on the floor je years to cane, but their could hardly be one who will give now to his team and has been doing off and on time 1920.

Next year, and the year after, whenever someone arches one in from the content pine, or drives hard in under the backet to score, we'll think a little wisfully of "Mr, Twohands" and the way he used to do it.

Thanks, Johnny, we wen't forcet you...

Congratulations, new Sphinx clubbers, Fred Armstrong, Jeanne Haroldson, Allene Kauziarich, Rod Kauziarich, Rod Kelman, and Barbara Melvin; your grand service to Southern has earned you the honor.

Congratulations, too, to Coach Lynn Holder for giv-us a conference championship his "freshman" year here at Southern. Good luck at Kansas City, Coach Holder!

at Southern. Good luck at Kansas City, Coach Holder.

Some of us who thought the army or navy was prety wall fouled up have come to the conclusion that they can't hold a candle to the inter-office and departmental situations here at Southern as another registration time approaches. The student wishing information must go from place to place, follow down vague clues, and usually end up where he started, in order to get it. Then when he gets an answer he'll go no further if he's wise, for if he did would probably get a conflicting reply at his next port of inquiry.

One senior we know was sent from his adviser to the registrar's office to the dean of his college, and then back to his adviser to begin the vicious circle all over again. All he wanted was a simply "yes" from the anawer. If had been allowed to he was a confliction and the fine from the adviser. As a result, the poor guy can be seen beating his head in frustration, against the flagpole in front of Old Main, every hour on the hour. I that's hard on flagpoles, too.

How about setting up a clearing house to which all questions might be referred, or at least making certain people finally responsible for answering certain questions. That would eliminate all this dashing about from office to office in search of the buck that is being passed so cleaverly around.

There is a very strong rumor making the rounds that there is to be a MOM tally over at Riverside Park in Murphysboro tonight, complete with suds and salami on rye sandwiches. It might be worth investigating.

...Looking Elsewhere....

WE HOPE THAT Nick Dear, student at Texas Christian University, passes that speech course he's taking. But speech course he's taking. But frankly, we've got our doubts. Recently Dr. Walther Volharb, the instructor, formerly of Maint, Germany, told his class about the doubting of his home town by dyroup of U. S. B-17's. The target was a nearby muni-tions, but, due to bad weather-some of the bombs hit the town, destroying the professor's house
