East Side Seats For Students Get Approval

The Student Council decided Thursday to send a letter of recommendation to the Athletic Department approving the seating of students next season in the East, rather than the West stands for football games.

Dr. Carl E. Erickson, athletic director, who asked the Council's approval, also spoke on efforts of University representatives to persuade influential Southern Illinois businessmen to back SIU athletics.

Dr. Erickson presented the situation as this:

1. The present allocation to the Athletic Department is $25,000. This year's cost was $42,000 and the deficit must be made up at least in part by sales to the general public. If the students are seated on the east side, more and better seats will be available for the general public.

2. The present student section in the west stands is not large enough to accommodate all the students and with 1,000 more students expected next year the situation would become even more critical.

3. The possibility of a card section performing at home games would require a large block of seats, which is not available in the west stands.

Erickson announced hopes for a bigger and better athletic program, with competition against schools like William and Mary and Vanderbilt, in the not too distant future.

He pointed out that Florida State and Boston Universities—each about the same size as SIU—allocated $252,000 and $200,000 respectively to this athletic department.

"I want to grow with the rest of the University," he said. "And to do this we must make good athletes aware of SIU."

In this new program, he said, influential persons throughout Southern Illinois have been urged to obtain lacking funds and at Springfield, where the University's budget is allotted.

About 40 of these influential persons were guests of Pres. Morris at a dinner Wednesday night, according to Erickson.

To get other members of the Athletic Department have been touring Southern Illinois, trying to influence organizations such as Elks, Moose, Kiwanis and others to sponsor athletes attending Southern.

This program may influence many high school stars to enroll at SIU, he said.

Among high school stars he mentioned specifically were Bobby Joe Mason, Centerville; Joe Rulick, Princeton; Jack Morris, and Larry Henzen, Florida.

He said Rulick, a 17-year-old six feet eight senior, had considered attending SIU until he attracted attention in this year's "Sweet Sixteen" by scoring 37 points in one game. He has now received "generous offers from other schools," according to Erickson.

In discussing the recent letting of concessions at football games to the Carbondale Jaycees, Erickson explained the scholarship fund being set up would help the University in building. He stressed the point, however, that "athletes must be above average scholastically to get scholarships."

The possibility of scheduling some big schools for basketball next year and changing the students' small admission fees was tabled until next week.

In other business, the council had the second reading on the proposed changes in procedure for electing council members. The final reading and vote will be next week.

The election committee announced nominations for council membership must be in by today.

Jay Jednak moved the Council buy five tickets to the Journalism Day dinner in appreciation of the "fine job" done by the Journalism Council this year. The motion passed.

The International Relations Club applied for the right to set up a restricted account that would entitle it to a portion of Student Fees. The request was denied.

The cheerleaders were voted $12 to buy Honors Day gifts.

Two student members are to be chosen for the new Lectures and Entertainment Committee, which is composed of five faculty and two student members. The right of appointing the students was waived by the Council in favor of Pres. Bob Edgett.

A special meeting was called for 6:15 tonight in order to clear the crowded docket before the Council.

One member, Betty Erch, was absent.

Participation in the Wednesday test was "fine," Dr. Graham said.

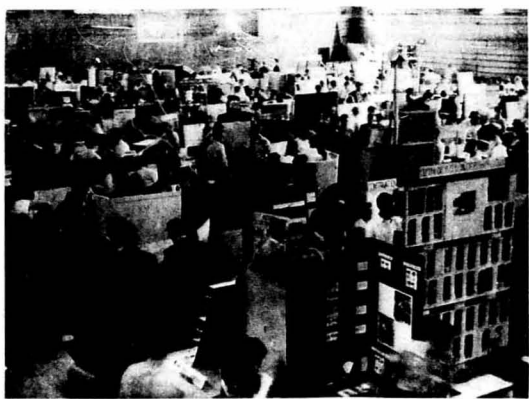

The test has five parts: literature, social studies, science, fine arts and mathematics.

It is hoped the results will help students to choose majors and minors and give them an opportunity to compare their achievements with sophomores across the country.

Geneticist Speaks To Science Group

You can identify people as "easy" by blood-type, as by fingerprints," Dr. Laurence H. Snyder said to Illinois State Academy members in University School Auditorium Friday night.

Dr. Snyder, dean of the graduate school at the University of Oklahoma, spoke after a banquet in Woody Hall cafeteria.

In his lecture, "Practical Applications of Human Heredity to Medical Problems," he emphasized the Rh blood-group and said that the wrong combination of Rh factors can cause the death of newborn babies.

According to Snyder, more than two hundred billion blood groups are known today.

He said, "It is possible to prevent and diagnose certain genetic diseases on the basis of family history. Advice on this must be passed on to the family."

Dr. Snyder's talk was in conjunction with the academy's meetings on campus Friday and Saturday.

Song Festival Draws Over 2,900; SIU Pianist Cited

The sixth annual Southern Illinois Music Festival, "Music Under the Stars," in McAndrew Stadium at Carbondale, drew almost 3,000 people to the "Music Under the Umbrellas" as threatening weather cut attendance.

A few drops of rain during the elementary chorus "Oh Didn't It Rain" caused a scramble for rain coats and umbrellas but the rain stopped almost immediately. However, Pres. Delmar W. Morris, the master of ceremonies, kept the program moving rapidly.

From the flag-raising to the final fireworks display, group music was featured. Over 2,900 students from 38 communities joined in the combined grade and high school bands and choruses.

Allegro dancers, massed high school twirlers, and a pony cart covered with gas-filled balloons also were featured. While the audience sang "I'm Forever Blowing Bubbles," the pony cart circled the field releasing balloons.

Leroy Miller, pianist, and SIU student from Anna, selected earlier in the day as the outstanding winner.

Other units participating were the Southern Illinois "Singing Squad," directed by David Richardson and the Olney High School marching band, Leo Silva, director.

It's sort of like a vicious circle. The university spends thousands of dollars to construct elaborate concrete sidewalks. Within weeks heavy trucks and machines are allowed to travel over the new walkways in the process of hauling dirt. The result? Well, a number of the walkways intersected have cracked under the strain.

Phi Delta Kappa Initiates 55

Fifty-five recent male graduates of SIU in the field of education were initiated into a new chapter of Phi Delta Kappa, national education fraternity in the University School Saturday.

At the initial meeting of SIU's Gamma Lambda Chapter, nearly 40 SIU faculty men switched their affiliations from other campus chapters to Southern's branch.

Working for nearly two years to bring this honor fraternity to Southern has been a three-man steering committee composed of Dr. Clarence Samford, chairman, and Dr. J. H. Hall, both of the education department; and Dr. Charles Neal, director of teacher training.

Highlights of the day were a luncheon at the University cafeteria attended by national officers of Phi Delta Kappa which included members of the 1926 SIU graduating class. Dr. J. Roy Levey, second national vice president; chairman of the Purdue University sociology department; and Dr. Russell Marshall, district representative, chairman of the education department of Indiana Central College, Indianapolis.

Davy's Been Commercialized

TV Revised Frontiersmen's Popularity, Writer Says

Davy Crockett is "a typical example of folklore revived by commercial means," said Dr. Benjamin A. Botkin, Folklore Fellow of the Library of Congress at the Illinois Folklore Society meeting in Woods Hall's formal lounge Thursday.

"Davy's popularity is due to our workshop of frontier heroes made famous by mass commercial means, namely TV," he explained.

"The first Crockett show on TV was seen by 40 million people and over 100 million dollars of Crockett products from soup to underwear will be sold this year," he added.

The reason for folklore and hill-billy popularity, Dr. Botkin explained, is there are more common people than educated, cultured ones.

Dr. Botkin played tape recordings to supplement his talk.

His last book published was "Sidekicks of America."

He is in this area working on his new book, "A Treasure of Mississippi River Talk."

'Orderly Balance Between Man, Resources' Necessary—Sears

There must be an "orderly balance between man and his resources in our civilization," Dr. Paul B. Sears Life Science Building dedication speaker, told Illinois State Academy of Science members Friday morning.

Dr. Sears is director of conservation studies at Yale University and president-elect of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

His lecture, "Man and Nature in the Modern World," emphasized the need for scientists to adapt their findings to man in his political environment. "Scientists too often isolate themselves from reality and as a result, their findings are not easily applied in many cases," he said.

Without a spiritual application of scientific research, machines can come to rule men, he warned. Scientists must control this myth of "rising spiral" in mass production or the results will be chaotic.

"Our culture is driven by a desire for greater multiple production of consumer goods. How can we be so appreciative of this production and yet so wasteful and careless in handling our material and human resources?"

He then explained the waste, past and present, of natural resources that are "essential" in our highly productive culture. "Big businesses are the only agencies that have done much to insure a long-term supply of natural resources, and this is little enough."

"Science must not be just a system but a guide to responsibility in the use of its products."

Scientists should not be just "trouble shooters" called in for advice on technical problems by the government, but should assume some moral leadership, "particularly in the application of nuclear power."

Dr. Sears' lecture was in connection with the Illinois Academy of Science meeting on campus Friday and Saturday.

Kelley Attends 3 Archaelog Meets

The Archaic Conference Wednesday at the University of Indiana in Bloomington was the first of three meetings last week for Museum Director Dr. J. Charles Kelley.

The Archaic meeting's purpose was to discuss the relative cultures of the primitive inhabitants of the Eastern half of the United States.

Thursday, Kelley presented a paper, "The Cultural Affiliation and Apparent Temporal Position: Schroeder Site in Durango, Mexico," to a meeting of the Society of American Archaeologists, also in Bloomington. Last summer Kelley led students on a field trip to Durango, where they excavated Indian relics.

Kelley represented archaeology at the National Research Council meeting in Washington, D.C. Saturday. The NRC is a group of volunteer natural scientists who have served as an unofficial liaison service to the government since World War I.

He expressed his thanks to the Women's Physical Education Department, the WAAU and faculty members and students who played in the cancer benefit softball game.

Peithmann Feted At Cafeteria Tea

A tea honoring Irvin Peithmann, member of the SIU Museum staff and author of the recently published "Echoes Of The Red Man," was held Tuesday in the University cafeteria.

SIU faculty and friends of Peithmann from Southern Illinois attended the gathering.

Peithmann did most of his five years research for the book in Southern Illinois, although he did make trips to other parts of the country for material. He said "This area is richer in unexplored archaeological information about early inhabitants of North America than any comparable region in the nation."

Tea honoring members of the SIU faculty who have had writings published have almost become tradition at SIU. Miss Ruby Kelley of the library was in charge of Tuesday's tea. Mrs. Mae T. Smith of the English department and Miss Esther Benner of the SIU museum served the refreshments.
