RSOs on hold after USG oversight

By Miguel Alba
Staff Writer

An oversight on the part of the Undergraduate Student Government has technically affected the standing of many Registered Student Organizations and their funding.

Two USG senators revealed that last semester's Committee of Internal Affairs, responsible for making recommendations on RSOs to the senate as well as other businesses, was never ratified by the senate, technically rendering all of the CIA's business last semester null and void.

Until the CIA is ratified, the standing of the RSOs and their funding is put on hold. The ratification oversight also affects senate business that was conducted in part through the CIA last semester.

Under the USG constitution, ratification of new CIA appointments are to be made at the next senate meeting.

Sen. Drayton Roose said many senators "turned a deaf ear" when he confronted them with the news.

Roose said he submitted a piece of legislation that would ratify last semester's CIA to Larvester Gaither, vice president of USG. The bill, however, was not on the agenda for USG's meeting Jan. 18.

Though the ratification matter can be resolved rather quickly, Sen. Vicki Aponte said there is still conflict within the USG that was present last semester. "I'm really discouraged," she said. "This is a reflection of how we had it last semester."

Roose and Aponte considered resigning their positions as senators but reconsidered after speaking with Bill Hall, president of USG.

Hall said Gaither essentially slowed the process of ratification by not adding Roose's bill to the agenda. However, Roose may have submitted the bill after deadline to be considered for the meeting, he said.

Sen. Rod Hughes said the situation is a continuance of last semester's problems.

"There are still some hard feelings between people over last semester," he said.

"Feelings were hurt, toes were stepped on, it will just take time for those feelings to mend."

Schools no longer taking SIU's paper

Source of bad jokes still unknown

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

The Carbondale school system will not accept any more printouts from SIU-C because of the recent discovery of offensive jokes on a printout found by a kindergarten student Larry Jacober, superintendent said.

All classrooms in the Carbondale school system, with the encouragement of the NAACP, have been rid of all printouts from SIU-C, Jacober said.

The printout, containing racially offensive jokes, was found by a Glendale Elementary School kindergarten. SIU-C donates used computer printouts to area elementary schools to use as scrap paper.

Lawrence Hengehold, director of computing affairs for SIU-C, explained that the printout may not have originated from SIU-C since the University uses the BIT-NET international system and countless universities and businesses have access to it.

Hengehold said, "The printout was given to the elementary school by an individual in the School of Curriculum and Instruction."

John C. Guyon, SIU-C president, is putting together a task force to investigate the source of the printout. Guyon

Students fear for Hong Kong's uncertain future

By Fernando Follu-Moggi
Staff Writer

University students from Hong Kong are worried about the uncertain social and economic future of their country that will become part of the People's Republic of China in 1997, Victor Yum, president of the Hong Kong Student Association, said.

Under a 1984 Sino-British agreement, the city, now a British colony, will become a special administrative region of China, but will maintain its capitalist system and lifestyle for at least 50 years.

Despite this promise, Hong Kong residents fear the future under Communist rule and many are leaving the country before the reunification occurs.

"My family is still there," Yum said, "but they want to leave too. Personally I wouldn't like to go back, not after '97 at least."

Yum said that although Hong Kong residents have British passports, they can't travel freely to the U.K.

"We are considered third-class citizens," he said.

Last November, Sir Percy Cradock, foreign policy adviser to Britain's Prime Minister, Margaret Thatcher, told the British Broadcasting Corporation, Britain's public broadcasting system, that the British government is sometimes urged to launch a massive immigration scheme to allow Hong Kong residents to settle in Britain and other western countries. Percy said that the scheme would contradict the confidence the U.K. has put in the Chinese promise of maintaining democracy in the colony.

Tint Chan, a University student from Hong Kong, said staying in the country is an unnecessary risk, although for many, it is the only option.

"It will be easy for the Chinese government to break their promise," she said.

Chan also said she doubted that Hong Kong could maintain its economic status quo after the reunification.

"Wealthy and well-educated people are moving to other countries, while the poor and uneducated will have to stay," she said. "When the Chinese take over, even if there is democracy in Hong Kong, the city will not keep its prosperity."

Chan said she will try to stay in the United States after she graduates.

The uncertainty of the situation also worries University student Mo Yen Leung.

Although five members of her family have already left Hong Kong, she plans to return to her country.

Aid for needy utility customers may be axed

12 percent plan needs funding to continue

By Marc Blumer
Staff Writer

At the current rate, Financing for the Customer's Illinois Residential Affordable Payment Plan will run out on April 30 if a permanent source of funding is not found.

The project, also known as the 12 percent plan, allows Illinois residents whose income falls below established standards to pay only 12 percent of their monthly income towards utility bills during winter months.

Earlier this month, Gov. James R. Thompson approved an extension of the plan that will run until 1992 or when existing funding runs out.

Bobbi Bennett, statewide coordinator for the Affordable Budget Coalition, is heading a search committee to find additional funding for the 12 percent plan, which Bennett feels will have a great impact on area residents, including students and faculty at SIU-C.

Bennett said that some students currently living in Evergreen Terrace and Southern Hills benefit from the program and would be greatly affected if funding were to run out.

"However, I really believe now that the governor and the state are behind this program, which will help a great deal in our search," Bennett said.

Information relating to the 12 percent plan can be obtained from the Southern Counties Action Movement offices in Herrin.

Legal adviser approves Israel using plastic bullets

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israel's attorney general told the Cabinet Sunday that new army guidelines easing restrictions on the use of plastic bullets against Palestinian protesters are legal, state-run Israel Radio reported. The ruling came amid controversy surrounding the use of the plastic bullets, which many Palestinians and left-wing Israelis charge have sharply increased casualties among protesters.

Shiite Moslem leader assails hostage-taking

TYRE, Lebanon (UPI) — A Shiite Moslem leader said Sunday the abduction of Marine Lt. Col. William Higgins 11 months ago triggered the fierce fighting between rival militias vying for control of Lebanon's Shiite population. Abdul Majed Saleh, political chief of the pro-Syrian Amal movement, also sharply criticized hostage-taking in Lebanon, saying it has resulted in the loss of world respect for all Shiites.

Communist Party demands probe in scandal

PARIS (UPI) — The Communist Party Sunday demanded a parliamentary probe of a mushrooming insider trading scandal in which a close friend of President Francois Mitterrand has been accused of profiting from a state-run French company's takeover of an American firm. Communist parliamentary leader Andre Lajoie said he will ask the lower chamber of Parliament to appoint a commission to investigate allegations of impropriety involving the friendly takeover Nov. 21 of Triangle Industries Inc. by Pechiney, a state-run French aluminum company.

Ghandi suffers when party concedes defeat

MADRAS, India (UPI) — Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi received a major setback Sunday when the Indian leader's ruling party conceded defeat in state elections considered a critical test of his prospects for re-election. G.K. Moonpanar, head of the ruling Congress (I) Party chapter in the southern state of Tamil Nadu, acknowledged that Gandhi's party had lost legislative elections Saturday even though final results were not yet announced.

Official: Cleanup unlikely at many N-plants

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Despite a cleanup effort expected to cost tens of billions of dollars, some badly contaminated nuclear weapons plant sites probably will never be returned to their natural state, an outgoing Energy Department official says. In an interview with United Press International, Joseph Salgado, whose tenure as deputy energy secretary ended Friday, also said there remains "deep-seated institutional resistance" within the department's weapons complex.

Official: Abortion regulation may go to states

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, anticipating that the Supreme Court might overturn its landmark Roe vs. Wade ruling handed down 16 years ago Sunday, said regulation of abortions would likely go to the states. Speaking on NBC's "Meet The Press," Thornburgh acknowledged, "There's nothing more vexing in public life than trying to deal with the abortion question."

Anti-klan demonstrators hold rally outside jail

ATLANTA (UPI) — Eight anti-Ku Klux Klan demonstrators held a rally outside an Atlanta jail Sunday to protest the incarceration of fellow activists locked up for a melee during a white supremacist march. Diane Mathiowetz, spokeswoman for a coalition of militant groups who oppose white supremacists, said the jailed activists, arrested in Saturday's disturbance, should be released and charges against them dropped.

Trial of Noah Robinson resumes again today

GREENVILLE, S.C. (UPI) — Bolstered by testimony from members of a Chicago street gang, prosecutors planned to call additional witnesses Monday in their bid to convict Jesse Jackson's half brother of murder. Noah Robinson, a 46-year-old millionaire who once worked for Jackson in his Operation PUSH civil rights organization, faces death in the electric chair if convicted of the slaying of his one-time friend, Leroy "Ham-bone" Barber.

Computers make research easier for students

Morris Library updates index system

By Scott Smith
Staff Writer

An updated computerized index system at Morris Library allows SIU-C students to have access to 1,100 magazines.

InfoTrac, a computerized magazine index system, has been at the library since last spring, but the new system installed last fall includes hardware that provides more resources for students.

"After a two month trial in spring '87, we determined to retain and subscribe to InfoTrac," Director of the Under Graduate Library, Judy Harwood, said. Since last fall, the present system uses the general periodical index called the academic edition.

InfoTrac helps students do periodical research faster and easier. It uses a CDRom (compact disk read only memory) system to access its library of periodicals including the New York Times and the Wall Street Journal. The disks are updated each month.

Assistant Undergraduate Librarian, Roland Person, contrasts InfoTrac to the paper periodical guides. InfoTrac can go back four years and contains 1,100 publications, he said. On the average, the paper periodical guides have a year of information and less than 400 publications.

Person said, "The student should not assume this is the only index available."

Another advantage of the system is how easy it is to use. The directions on how to search are color-coded and the special function keys on the keyboard are colored to match the directions.

Person said most people are able to use InfoTrac with few problems, but someone is there to help if needed.

The system allows the user to search for certain articles on the same subject and related subjects. InfoTrac will then provide the titles and dates of which publications have those articles. The user can have these titles printed out.

An informal survey of 78 students was done in 1987 by the undergraduate library. Seventy percent said that they would be willing to pay a semester fee for the service. Forty-eight said the system saves time and 46 said the system was easy to use.

"The cost of the printer, computer, video screen, CDRom machine and a year's subscription of disks is about $6,300," said Person.

Because of the high price, the library has only one InfoTrac unit.

Information center offers psychology, education indexes

By Scott Smith
Staff Writer

A computer system in Morris Library allows published and unpublished materials in education and psychology and their related subjects to be searched.

The Education Resources Information Center (ERIC), located on the fourth floor of the library, is a computer version of the paper periodical guides: Resources in Education and Current Index to Journals in Education.

"This is not InfoTrac, it is not that general of a system," Ruth Bauner, education and psychology librarian, said.

"(ERIC) is used heavily by graduate students, but undergraduates and faculty use it."

Similar to InfoTrac, ERIC uses a CDRom (compact disk read only memory) system to access information from two sources - published periodicals and unpublished materials - on one disk.

"I used the system for my thesis and it saved a lot of time," Jean Nathlich, graduate assistant in clothing and textiles, said.

ERIC is updated every three months and information can be dated back to 1982.

Honor society makes nomination for election

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer

Terry D. Mathias, director of the office of university relations, has been chosen to represent the University at the national election of officers for the Phi Kappa Phi honor society.

The University chapter of the organization nominated Mathias during the fall semester as one of the 250 members submitted for candidacy for the National Vice Presidency.

The national nomination committee then narrowed the field to four candidates for the position.

Elections will be held at the organization's national triennial convention next

Terry Mathias

August in Salt Lake City.

"The nomination took me completely by surprise. I was very pleased to be nominated, but it was almost over before I knew what was going on," he said.

Phi Kappa Phi is a national non-specialized organization founded to promote and encourage academic excellence.

"Unlike most other honoraries and honor societies which support academic achievement only in a particular field, Phi Kappa Phi recognizes truly superior scholarship in all academic disciplines. A student who is offered membership has the satisfaction of knowing that he or she has demonstrated a level of academic achievement which ranks at the very top in all fields of study," he said.

The National Vice President's duties include chairing the communications committee and the national selection committee for the scholar and artist awards, as well as overseeing any public relations matters.

The position also entails serving on the society's national board of directors, the corporate board of the Phi Kappa Phi Foundation.

The National Vice President is also asked to assume the duties of the president if he or she is unable to fulfill the position.

"The person elected needs to serve the individual chapter's needs. You start with the chapters and build from there to the regional and national levels," he said.

"I guess image perception is foremost on my mind. How does the public perceive Phi Kappa Phi? How to promote academic achievements of our members and enhance our image at the same time is very important," he added.

Mathias, first elected to membership in 1975 is a past president of the University chapter of Phi Kappa Phi and has served the organization in various other capacities. He currently serves on a North Central Region Committee that studies ways to increase the number of scholars who accept the offer of membership.

Mathias came to SIU-C as a 1970 graduate of the State University of New York at Albany.

He has since earned two degrees, Doctor of Philosophy and Master of Science, at the University

Press should defend freedom at all costs

SINCE JANUARY is Freedom of the College Press month, it is only fitting for the Daily Egyptian to use this freedom and speak out to keep it.

Most college papers, including the Daily Egyptian, enjoy control over the content of their pages, but since the Supreme Court's decision in Hazelwood vs. Kuhlmeier, censorship incidents have increased even on college papers.

Although the Court said, "We need not now decide whether the same degree of deference is appropriate with respect to school-sponsored activities at the college and university level," does this mean we are safe? Or does this decision open the door to administrative censorship?

IF WE ASSUME we are safe from censorship we may become vulnerable. Those involved with any aspect of the press must constantly be alert for even the most inconspicuous forms of censorship.

At several colleges and universities across the nation, censorship has come in forms other than administrators.

The Daily Lobo at the University of New Mexico had 4,000 copies of its paper stolen on the day they endorsed candidates for student government. Stolen papers also have plagued other college papers. Some reasons given were ignored racial issues and tasteless personal advertisements. In most cases, because the papers are distributed at no cost, the culprits are rarely charged with theft.

ALTHOUGH CENSORSHIP is often the main focus of the freedom of the press issue, there are other important areas that deserve attention.

Access of information also must be carefully guarded. It is not only the duty of a college newspaper to report crimes that occur on campus or the actions of the student government and administration, but to inform the students of these happenings.

A new state law in Pennsylvania mandates that colleges and universities reveal information about crime on their campuses to students and employees. This is the type of law that journalists should lobby for nationwide.

MANY TIMES THE press is denied access because groups or individuals don't want to "look bad" in the eyes of the public. The purpose of the press is not to make anyone look good or bad, but to inform the public accurately.

Granted, some members of the press do not abide by this principle, but young journalists in schools around the country are being taught to report as accurately. They are being taught their rights as members of the press, how to use the Freedom of Information Act and the Open Meetings Act.

WILLIAM MAKEPIECE Thackeray said of censorship in Victorian England, "Ah, ye knights of the pen! May honor be your shield and truth tip your lances! Be gentle to all peoples. Be modest to women. Be tender to children. As for Ogre Humbug, out sword and have at him!"

Those wishing to stifle the press be warned — we will meet the censorship dragon with a sword.

Opinions from elsewhere

The Kansas City Times

It is easy enough for skeptics to find fault with the recently concluded international conference on chemical weapons in Paris. Iraq did not receive the criticism that it should have received for its recent use of poison gas both on the battlefield and against civilians. The Paris conference declaration was written in general terms that left plenty of room for interpretation.

Yet the conference and the declaration are an important step in international diplomacy. They did what needed to be done, which was to draw attention to the growing threat that chemical weapons pose to peace. Until the conference, it could be said that the world had largely overlooked — and so accepted — the use of poison gas in the Iran-Iraq war.

The chemical weapons threat to international stability is particularly grave in the Middle East, where many Arabs see them as the ultimate answer to Israeli military superiority. Arab countries argued in Paris that they were entitled to stock chemical weapons as long as Israel had atomic weapons.

Some will argue that war is terrible in any case, and chemical weaponry is just another form of war, and not a very effective one at that. While this may be true, trench warfare and Nazi genocide in the first half of this century left the world with a particular horror of gas. It would be a terrible mistake for the rest of the world to forget that horror.

Letters

Arafat should practice, not preach peace in the Middle Eastern conflict

Something very scary is taking place in this great country of ours. It seems a great number of Americans have forgotten some things. What things you ask? It seems that a lot of people in this country, not our Secretary of State, thank God, have forgotten the brutal acts of terrorism directed toward American citizens in the Middle East and in other places in the world.

In 1973 the PLO murdered Cleo A. Noel Jr., the U.S. Ambassador to Sudan, and his assistant George Moore. How could the PLO have had a gripe with our ambassador in Sudan? Does that have anything remotely to do with their 1000-year-old war with the Jews? No.

The list goes on. In 1972 the kidnapping of U.S. Ambassador to Lebanon France E. Meloy, TWA hijacking and murder of a U.S. serviceman in Lebanon. The man responsible for organizing this terrorist act sits on the PLO's executive council! Give us a break! How about the pirating of the Achille Lauro, where a terrorist involved commented that Leon Klinghoffer just wanted to take a swim. (Klinghoffer was brutally murdered as he sat in his wheelchair, then he was thrown overboard.) And to top it all off, the PLO was implicated in the bombing of the U.S. barracks in Lebanon. Granted, we should not have been there in the first place, but it seems like the PLO just figured, "Hey, you support Israel, might as well blow you up too."

I applaud Shultz's denial of a visa to Yasser Arafat. The PLO, the organization of which he is the chairman, has been terrorizing American citizens all over the world and then expects to come to the U.S. and voice his ideas to the whole world! The most ironic thing is that the American people, had to foot the bill to send the United Nations to Geneva to let him speak! That's right, we paid for it. Just like we pay a grossly high amount of the annual United Nations expenses. And what do we get from the rest of the world in turn? I'll tell you, we get voted against unanimously, except for Israel, that the denial was a terrible thing to do (Britain abstained).

I sincerely hope readers of this letter do not see more in my feelings than are actually there. The PLO is the recognized representative of the Palestinian people. Fine, everyone deserves to be represented. Both sides, Israel and the PLO, have distinctive goals that each wishes to pursue. Fine. My question is what is this irresistible desire the PLO has had to kill Americans? Arafat can talk peace and recognition until his face turns blue, but until he backs up his words with some peaceful action, the U.S. should take him for what he is, a supporter of terrorism against innocent people. —

Doug Koberts, sophomore, political science.

Plan offered to help Bush defeat deficit

Dear President Bush:

This is a proposal which could reduce our national debt by three billion dollars per year. I know that this debt is the most urgent problem facing your administration because it threatens the economic future for all of us.

I recommend that your request the Congress to create a National Lottery with tickets sold weekly throughout the United States at the cost of one dollar. Fifty percent of the intake would be paid out to the winners in twenty annual installments. Five percent would be allocated for administering the lottery program and 45 percent would go toward retirement of the national debt. There would be several advantages to this proposal.

Based on the pattern of state lottery sales, the program should take in $100 million per week. No increase in taxes is necessary to assure a $3 billion reduction in the debt. At a time when most Americans feel that they are unable to influence the complex forces of government policy and economics, this program would give every citizen the opportunity to directly influence the future by weekly participation in the Debt Reduction Program. This proposal would actually reduce the debt rather than diminishing its rate of growth.

I want to wish you success in carrying out your duties as President of the United States — Alvin H. Roberts, Carbondale.

Investing in precious metals may not have a bright future

Precious metals prices declined over the past year and analysts don't see a much brighter picture — at least not for the next six months to a year.

But the reasons for owning gold for the long term are not wiped out by the short-term market conditions, they said. And some believe the low prices provide a good opportunity to buy metals.

"It's appropriate for pretty much all investors to have at least a small part of their investments in precious metals and gold just as an insurance policy," said Adrian Day, editor of Investment Analyst, a Washington newsletter. "It's like a fire insurance policy. Gold acts as insurance against inflation and monetary disaster or a crisis."

Gold prices drifted from a 1988 high of $483.90 per ounce in January to around $400 by the end of the year, and that's where they remain.

Indications point to stable to lower prices for the next six to 12 months, said John Jonat, metals trader with Deak International in New York City.

For a while, the U.S. trade and federal budget deficits propped up prices as investors expected the deficits to trigger inflation, he said. "Inflation is good for precious metals."

D.L. Smith, publisher of Cyclical Investing, a quarter investment newsletter, sees no convincing evidence that metals prices are responding to inflation. "While the underlying trend for metals is positive, the short-term trend is not," he wrote.

He recommends that investors wait until gold moves to about $420 per ounce before buying.

Jonat said new mining technology, which has lowered the cost of production to $250 to $300 per ounce, has kept prices down. More producers are coming into the market — Australian gold production has doubled and U.S. production has increased substantially in the past year — and there is little industrial usage. Whenever prices have reached the $415 to $420 range recently, producers have increased sales, driving prices back down.

Franklin Sanders, a Memphis precious metals dealer, said charts of gold prices, show it at a "support level," meaning the level the price tends to stay above. However, if that support is broken, prices could fall another $50 to $100 per ounce, he said.

Day said because of the experience of the 1970s, when gold hit $850 per ounce, people have unrealistic expectations about the metal's price. But he sees little risk that gold will drop below $350 per ounce.

"If I could pick an investment that had a maximum foreseeable downside of 12 percent, I'd call that pretty conservative," he said.

Now is a good time to buy, he said. "When you're talking about insurance, you shop for the best policy at the best price, but you don't wait for the cost of premiums on fire insurance to come down to buy your fire insurance."

Sanders believes all the long-term reasons for investing in gold are still in place.

"It's money," he said. "When there is panic or distress, people run to it and that's the reason we buy it."

Sanders sees plenty of reasons for panic and distress. The economy is in the seventh year of the longest post-World War II recovery, the savings and loan industry problems are "a bomb waiting to explode" that may cost $75 billion or more to resolve, Third World debt problems have not been solved, there is continued unrest in the Middle East and the decline in the value of the dollar may not be over.

But Jonat does not believe gold prices are as "politically sensitive" as they once were. The Soviet downing of a Korean jetliner in 1983 was the first time gold prices didn't rise sharply in response to an international crisis, he said.

When the United States shot down the two Libyan jets five years ago, gold prices rose $20 to $30 per ounce. When U.S. pilots downed two Libyan MIG fighters Jan. 4, gold prices barely changed.

The reasons often cited for buying gold don't exist for buying other metals. Silver and platinum are primarily industrial metals. Silver has some monetary characteristics and platinum is also considered a strategic metal — one that has specialized uses in which it can't be replaced easily.

Silver, too, has traded at the low end of its support line of around $6 per ounce.

With a substantial amount of silver used in black and white photography and electronics, there is built-in demand for the metal that should make $5 an absolute bottom price, said Jonat. But he sees little up movement in prices this year.

Sanders said investors should commit no more than 20 percent of their precious metals portfolio to silver.

Day believes silver has the best potential of the three metals for price gains in the next six months.

said one of the main goals of the task force is to discover whether or not the printout actually came from SIU-C and, if it did, who is responsible. "I would like the task force to look into the computer files that presently exist to see if they can get some leads, but we're going to have to check the legality of doing so," Guyon said. "Some claim that looking into personal computer files is like going through someone else's mail."

Guyon also said he would have the names of the people on the task force by today.

happy," she said, "so I'll go back and adapt to whatever happens."

Leung said few people are worried about democracy in Hong Kong.

"Intellectuals and people with higher education are concerned about their political freedoms," she said, "but most people worry about their economic status."

Leung said people are leaving because they fear the Chinese will establish a communist regime in Hong Kong and nationalize the means of production. Leung said this would mean that many people would lose their private businesses.

"Workers want to keep their cars and apartments, the economic status that they have accomplished with their work," she said.

Leung said that although the future is uncertain, it is not premature for the people to be leaving now. She said people don't want to live for the next eight years fearing that they can lose everything from one day to another.

Aponte and Roose said that Gaither is manipulating senate procedure to his advantage to get certain legislation approved.

"He uses his control over the senate to sway senators to stop certain bills from coming to the floor," Aponte said. "He is manipulating senate procedure."

Gaither denied any manipulation of parliamentary procedures, saying that the procedures are written in black and white for anyone to check.

African cinema will be featured at film festival

By Wayne Wallace
Entertainment Editor

The 11th annual Big Muddy Film Festival will celebrate the cinema of Black African filmmakers Feb. 5 through 12. Unlike routine Hollywood products, "African Cinema reflects a consciousness on the part of the filmmakers to contribute to the growth of their national film language and also to their culture," according to Dane Thompson, festival coordinator.

Thompson, a graduate student in cinema, said he hopes Big Muddy audiences will find the African films "refreshing after mindless Hollywood movies."

"AFRICAN CINEMA is virtually unknown in this country," Thompson said, noting the reason why the festival selection committee chose Black African filmmakers as this year's main focus.

At past festivals, the work of a particular filmmaker, such as Akira Kurosawa, Jean Renoir or Bernardo Bertolucci, has been exhibited.

Focusing on a cinematic theme, such as the 1986 retrospective on women's films, "is a better use of our time," Thompson said.

Education was Thompson's other motive for choosing African cinema.

The films range in subject matter from political statements on colonialism to the conflict of tradition vs. change under Western influence.

"FROM WHAT I've read, these filmmakers have been attempting to create a distinctive African voice in terms of film language, not a film aesthetic tied to Western cinema. I think this should result in a contribution to film language in general."

By allowing nine African films to speak for themselves over the course of a week,

Thompson hopes audience awareness about Africa will increase, dispelling myths and stereotypical perceptions of a backward, primitive continent, what Thompson calls "racist, imperialist notions."

Access to African films in America is mostly limited to art houses and specialized groups. However, some African artists, such as critically-acclaimed filmmaker Ousmane Sembene, do manage to find forums like the Big Muddy Film Festival as showcases for their work.

ALTHOUGH THOMPSON, like most Americans, has a limited background in viewing African films, his research for the festival has brought together nine of the African cinema's most acclaimed works.

The films range in subject matter from political statements on colonialism to the conflict of tradition vs. change under Western influence.

Films scheduled for screening during the week of the festival include "Camera d' Afrique," an introductory documentary on Africa's film industry, and "Visages de femmes," ("Faces of Women"), a comedy of manners which depicts the changing conditions of women in the Ivory coast and their escape from male domination.

"Visages de femmes" resembles African storytelling in that it shifts from symbols to reality and from what is told to what is shown.

SEMBENE'S "CEDDO" will also be shown. The film illustrates Sembene's "cinema of silence" reflecting the spirituality of the African and repression of African women.

Sembene compresses the history of Africa into the span of life of a traditional village, into which enter symbolic foreigners, including a slave trader, who threaten the village's culture by introducing the Islam and Christian religions.

In Sembene's "Kala," the spectator's involvement is enhanced not only by plot structure, but also by basic cinematic techniques such as editing, composition and inner-rhythms within the frame.

AS IS tradition at the Big Muddy Film Festival, three guest filmmakers from outside the community will bring samples of their work for presentation. Each filmmaker will hold a discussion session after his or her screening.

Ethiopian filmmaker Haile Gerima will show his 1976 drama "Bush Mama," the story of a Black L.A. ghetto woman driven to discover her identity and pride through political awareness.

Documentarist Carole Langer will present "Radium City," the saga of Ottawa, Ill., a town contaminated with radiation in the 1920's by the Radium Dial Company.

AMERICAN BLACK filmmaker Reggie Hudlin will screen "House Party," "The Kold Waves" and "World of Soul," three short satires dealing with "the young Black image" in 1980's America.

Tower expected to face tough hearing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Confirmation hearings expected to start this week for John Tower, nominated to be defense secretary, are likely to be the toughest and perhaps the longest of any accorded President Bush's Cabinet nominees.

"We're not going to play the 'old boy go-around' with him this time," said Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., of the Senate Armed Services Committee, after Bush announced last month that he wanted the former senator from Texas to run the Pentagon.

The committee, which Tower, 63, led as chairman from 1981-85, tentatively scheduled the first of the hearings for Wednesday.

Unlike Secretary of State-designate James Baker, who breezed through Senate committee confirmation last week, Tower is expected to face tough questioning on a number of fronts: political, professional and perhaps personal.

Questions and rumors have dogged the Texan since he was first mentioned as a candidate for the job he has sought for many years.

Tower served in the Senate for 23 years and after retiring in January 1985, he worked as a consultant to many of the nation's biggest defense contractors.

Critics contend those contacts do not inspire confidence in his promises to reform the Pentagon weapons procurement program.

Tower was also the subject of rumors about womanizing raised by his second wife in a bitter 1967 divorce and about excessive drinking. Tower has denied the allegations and associates said he is only a moderate drinker.

Tower's appointment was announced Dec. 16 after a lengthy FBI background check that Bush said "totally satisfied" him that Tower was above reproach.

"Anybody (who) knows me knows that I'm not going to be captured by the military, and I would recuse myself from contracts or decisions affecting the clients I have represented as a consultant."

—John Tower

The FBI investigation "looked into a lot of rumors that proved to be groundless," Bush said, and the report will "satisfy the most inquisitive" senators.

Nunn said that while he believes Tower to be well-qualified to be the nation's 17th defense secretary, he wants to see the full FBI report.

Because of Senate etiquette, it is unlikely that personal questions will be raised in public by committee members. But Tower's consulting work and his changed views regarding Pentagon spending are likely to be thoroughly examined.

Politically, Tower will be asked to explain his apparent conversion from a hawk who led the way for President Reagan's record military buildup in 1981 to the man who now laments the sudden infusion of cash.

"I regret my part in front-loading the budget," Tower said recently, acknowledging it led to the military receiving so much money so fast that much of it was spent unwisely.

He has indicated in public statements in the last month that, in the face of huge federal deficits, he would be willing to lead the fight for smaller budgets and overhaul the troubled military procurement process.

"I'm the consummate team player," he said. "We must provide at least as much, if not more, defense for less money."

He said Bush would accept zero growth in future Pentagon budgets, rather than the 2 percent increases Reagan sought for fiscal 1990 and beyond, provided Congress agrees to a long-term defense plan.

Also of concern to lawmakers is whether Tower's close association with the defense industry and the armed services means he would be their creature.

Since leaving the Senate, he has done consulting work for such major defense contractors as LTV, Martin-Marietta and Rockwell International.

"Anybody (who) knows me knows that I'm not going to be captured by the military, and I would recuse myself from contracts or decisions affecting the clients I have represented as a consultant," he has said in his defense.

Born in Houston Sept. 29, 1925, the son and grandson of Methodist ministers, Tower grew up in East Texas and enlisted in the Navy at 17 at the outbreak of World War II, seeing combat in the Pacific Ocean.

He earned bachelor's and master's degrees in political science from Southwestern University and did graduate work at the University of London.

Defeated for the Senate in 1960 when Lyndon Johnson ran simultaneously for re-election to his seat and for vice president, Tower took Johnson's place the next year and became Texas's first GOP senator in modern history.

He was re-elected three times and announced in 1983 that he would not seek a fifth term.

The three-man Tower Commission did not fault the president harshly but did, in its 1987 report, criticize his lax management style.

Tower recently underwent surgery for removal of a colon polyp. Doctors said the growth was found to be benign.

Police free dissident after week-long protests

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (UPI) — Police freed a human rights activist Sunday, but scores of other dissidents remained in prison after the worst week of protests in Prague since the 1968 Soviet-led invasion, activist sources said.

Members of Charter 77 — the oldest human rights organization in Eastern Europe — met Sunday to discuss whether to temporarily replace two of its spokespersons, who are in detention.

"We will wait at least until Tuesday because that is when their cases will be decided," said prominent activist Jiri Dienstbier.

The prospect of new political trials in Czechoslovakia is expected to sour relations with

One activist said the authorities have "completely lost their minds" because of the overwhelming use of force to break up protests.

Western countries, particularly the United States, which has been attacked by the Prague government as fomenting the protests.

Dienstbier said Charter 77 spokesman Tomas Hradilek was released from police detention Sunday.

He said, however, that another leading member,

Martin Palous, was freed but picked up again for questioning in the evening. Two other Charter 77 spokespersons, Dana Nemcova and Sasa Vondra, and several other activists have been told they will be charged with criminal offenses such as hooliganism. A conviction of hooliganism carries up to three years in prison.

Nemcova, Vondra and scores of other dissidents were detained for attempting to commemorate the 20th anniversary of the death of Jan Palach, a 21-year-old student who set himself on fire on Jan.

16, 1969, to shock the nation out of its apathy following the Warsaw Pact invasion the previous year.

The police attacks on crowds on Wenceslas Square in central Prague, the site of the protests all last week, have been condemned by the United States and other Western nations.

Czechoslovak authorities have staunchly defended their actions against "anti-state elements."

Wenceslas Square was quiet over the weekend, but in Budapest, Hungary, a group of 40 to 50 young people held a commemorative meeting Sunday to mark Palach's death, the official Hungarian news agency MTI reported.

After reading out a statement by the Federation of Young Democrats, the group wanted to place a wreath at the Czechoslovak Embassy in Budapest, but were told by police that international law prohibited such a move. The group laid the wreath instead in Heroes Square.

The activist said there were reports that city officials were considering more serious means of putting down the protests — even of shooting demonstrators — but this could not be confirmed.

Last week, several anonymous bomb threats were publicized in the official media and blamed on the activists, including one at the popular Kotva department store. The manager of the store, when telephoned by a Western reporter, said he had no knowledge of such a threat.

Manipulation of human genes brings hope, fear

San Francisco Examiner

Scientists' improving ability to understand and manipulate DNA, the chemical language that instructs a cell to function, may give them marvelous powers to heal.

They imagine giving sick cells life-saving instructions, delivered by a specially engineered gene placed into the chromosome. In diseases caused by rare genetic abnormalities, they envision plucking out the harmful genes and replacing them with codes for health.

Already, laboratories can diagnose a series of genetic diseases before birth.

"A host of genetic-engineering techniques are on the market all of a sudden," says Marsha Saxton, director of the Project on Women and Disability for the Massachusetts Office of Handicapped Affairs. "It's scary."

Many geneticists and social activists say this new medicine may revolutionize more than human health. Among non-scientists, the concept of tampering with the code of life brings general unease. Even microbiologists immersed in the field warn that society may not be prepared for the changes medical biotechnology will bring.

"The technology is developing faster than the mechanisms to deal with it," says Dr. Jonathan Beckwith, a geneticist at Harvard Medical School.

The idea of changing genetic codes challenges the very concept of being human, both doctors and ethicists say. Some wonder whether genetic engineering techniques will tempt scientists to try to make "perfect" people.

Already, the widespread availability of genetic tests is posing new questions about accepting physical and mental disabilities.

Cetus Corp., based in Emeryville, Calif., has developed a process that may make it simpler, quicker and cheaper to test for genetic diseases. The company is searching for connections between a person's genetic type and susceptibility to diseases such as diabetes and rheumatoid arthritis, says Bill Gerber, a vice president at Cetus.

Ultimately, he says, his company hopes to uncover genetic clues to cancer and heart disease.

The Office of Technology Assessment in Washington, D.C., says at least 12 companies are developing DNA-based tests for genetic disorders.

At least five young U.S. companies plan to develop techniques to insert new genes into human chromosomes. Others plan to use synthetic DNA segments to affect a cell's functions.

Within the next few months,

Dr. W. French Anderson of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute in Bethesda, Md., and Drs. Steven A. Rosenberg and R. Michael Blaese of the National Cancer Institute, also in Bethesda, hope to place altered genes in humans for the first time. They are using the genes to follow the progress of a novel cancer treatment.

Although the possibilities seem endless, companies are steering as far as possible from discussing the concept of extending gene therapy techniques to more subjective human characteristics such as height, weight and eye color.

TACOMA, Wash. (UPI) — Reports that death row killer Ted Bundy, who faces execution Tuesday, has confessed to killing at least eight young women in the Northwest in 1974 have left his family both disbelieving and devastated.

His confession "if, indeed, it was a confession, is totally unexpected, because we have staunchly believed — and I guess we still do until we hear what he really said — that he was not guilty of any of those crimes," Louise Bundy, the condemned killer's mother, said in an interview published Sunday in the Tacoma Morning News Tribune.

"But if this is true, if Ted did do these things, and if, indeed, he is substantiating it with facts that he really did do these things — oh, ...'s the most devastating news of our lives."

Bob Keppel, assistant Washington state attorney general, told reporters Saturday that Bundy had confessed to all the so-called "Ted" murders that horrified Western Washington as young women mysteriously disappeared and their remains later were found in secluded dumping sites, four of them on Taylor Mountain east of Seattle.

In a 95-minute interview with Keppel Friday, Bundy, who faces execution in Florida's electric chair, talked about the eight murders, including one in which the remains had not been identified and another in which no body was found.

One of the eight victims was a co-ed who disappeared from Oregon State University in Corvallis. Her body was found in Washington.

Officials investigating at least three dozen murders in five Western states have lined up to interview Bundy, who is scheduled to be executed Tuesday for the murder of a 12-year-old Kimberly Leach, of Lake City, Fla.

Bundy also faces a death sentence for bludgeoned murders of two Florida State University co-eds in their sorority house. Bundy reportedly also confessed to the murder of a woman in Colorado.

Louise Bundy, who repeatedly has spurned interviews as she stuck by her son through the years of trials and imprisonment, shook her head in pain in the living room of her north Tacoma home while speaking of Bundy's reported confession and the approach of his execution.

"But if he did those things it's a mental illness ... a person who would do those things is mentally ill," the mother told the News Tribune.

'Risk Pool' natural, fresh

Russo's minor characters add humor, subplots to story

By Scott Smith
Staff Writer

The sensation from the first sip of a 2-liter bottle of cola satisfies the greatest of thirsts. Richard Russo's "Risk Pool" (Random House, $19.95) is 479 pages of first sips.

Russo hooks the reader with his language and style. When Ned Hall, the narrator, is born, his father, Sam, visits his wife and child at the hospital. Ned narrates: "Well, my father said, and when she turned me over, he grinned at my little stem and said, 'What you know?' It must have been a tender moment".

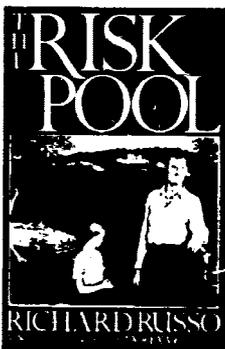

THE CENTRAL conflict is between Ned and Sam. Sam neglects the child after the divorce from Jenny Hall, and then becomes the child's guardian when Jenny is sent to an institution for her mental illness. The neglect continues as Ned grows up. Since the story is told from the perspective of a 33-year-old Ned, he realizes how much he resents his father.

The novel begins with the birth of Ned, and the reader follows him through his life. The story takes place in the fictional Mohawk, New York, after World War II.

Except for the bars, downtown Mohawk is slowly closing down. Parking lots are put in place of buildings. A downtown billboard states: "Shop Downtown Mohawk, Where There's Always Plenty Of Parking."

MOHAWK'S MAIN purpose, in the novel, is not as a city, but as a mental state of being. The narrator refers to this as the rhythms of Mohawk. There's a rhythm to the conversations and actions that the characters perform.

Book Review

The best example of the rhythm is when Ned returns to Mohawk after ten years. He has changed in those years, so Russo adjusts the style of narration, but gradually eases Ned back into the Mohawk rhythm.

Russo understates dramatic and comic moments for more impact. Sam Hall has got a stump for a thumb (an old injury) and has recently injured his elbow, which swells to golf-ball size. Ned narrates: "It occurred to me then that my father was losing a subtle war of attrition."

THE READER keeps turning the pages for two reasons: Interesting character portrayals and subplots.

In "Risk Pool" the main conflict, Ned and Sam, is acted out by the ancillary characters and, therefore, giving depth to the story.

After the war, Sam binges on life. He begins drinking at his favorite bars, gambling whenever possible and talking with the inhabitants of Mohawk, but he does this at the expense of his marriage.

Sam's endearing quality is his logic. After he kicks his estranged wife's lawyer in the head, the lawyer gets a court order that prevents Sam from coming close to him.

A MOHAWK police officer informs Sam of the court order and tells him that he will have to find someone else to thrash the lawyer. Sam thinks that in a truly free country, he should be allowed to do it himself.

Sam's best friend is Wussy. He usually follows Sam into trouble and then tries to bail out before he loses his life.

Sam decides to kidnap Ned for a day and go fishing with Wussy. After a fishing adventure in which Sam gets a hook stuck in his thumb and Ned comes down with a serious attack of poison ivy, they finally take Ned home.

Ned's mother aims a revolver at the car, Sam and Wussy. She starts shooting and hits the tires and the windshield. From the floor of the car, Wussy exclaims: "I'm okay. She isn't reloading, is she?"

RUSSO'S MINOR characters keep the novel moving. Characters like Tree, who stutters and marries extremely large women. There is Irma, a hostess that dislikes seating people at the restaurant. The author offers the reader mini-stories that add to the character and the humor of the novel.

Some novels disappoint readers because of weak endings. "Risk Pool" ends strong because it isn't contrived, and evolves from the story as naturally as the changing of the seasons.

Free to all women

Self-defense classes for women will meet for five weeks, two hours each week, in the Student Recreation Center, Room 158. In each session there will be time for reviewing skills, doing warm-ups, learning and practicing the skills for that session, and "talk time" during which participants can discuss their feeling about the training exercises.

Come and learn physical and mental/emotional self-defense skills in a safe and supportive atmosphere. To register, contact Susan Powell at Women's Services, 453-3655. Co-sponsored by Women's Services, the Campus Safety Fee board, and the Office of Intramural-Recreation & Sports.

Rare photos put on display

University Museum will hold exhibit until March 9

By Kathleen DeBo
Staff Writer
and University News Service

Photographs by 29 of the best photographers in history, including Jacob Riis and Ansel Adams, went on display Sunday at the University Museum. The "Masters of Photography" exhibit will remain on display through March 9.

The museum, in the north end of Faner Hall, is open 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. weekdays and 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Sundays. Admission is free.

The 36 photographs cover periods from 19th century New York to contemporary photography by Bruce Davidson and Minor White.

Johnson said, "(Steichen) captured the essence of the exotic woman. I've told my wife, 'I love you, dear, but I'm in love with her, too.'"

Other artists include Henri Cartier-Bresson, Dorothy Lange, W. Eugene Smith and Edward Weston.

Another powerful photo is Riis' "Italian Mother and Baby, Jersey Street." The photo conveys the poverty of the 1890s. All of the Riis photos show scenes of urban poverty from that era.

The photograph collection is not displayed for the general public very often because the photos are vulnerable to both natural and fluorescent light, Johnson said.

"We have them pretty well protected now, but even so, we don't like to put them out for any long period of time," he said.

The museum does not have the space to display the photos on a permanent basis, Johnson said.

The photos were displayed in the Communications Building lounge for several years until the collections most important work, Alfred Stieglitz's "Steerage" was stolen.

Actor measures films by fun, not success

Providence Journal

NEW YORK (SHNS) — Kevin Kline, who is back on screen playing an eccentric police detective in the satirical thriller, "The January Man," has always done films because they sound like fun.

For instance, he never expected "A Fish Called Wanda," the British comedy in which he co-starred with Monty Python veterans John Cleese and Michael Palin, would make anything like the $60 million that it did.

Yet, thanks to his off-the-wall performance as a psychotic American crook who made love in Italian to Jamie Lee Curtis, Kline is a much more bankable movie box office name today.

"I knew I would enjoy it. It would be funny to me. But in terms of whether it would be a popular success, I didn't know or care. I knew that the process was going to be stimulating and fun and I would learn something. I can't think of two guys to do a comedy with better than Michael Palin and John Cleese!"

Have a mushroom monday.

Bush administration eager to work for a better planet

WASHINGTON (SHNS) — Besides promising to pursue "a kinder, gentler" America, President Bush seems eager to work also for a kinder, gentler planet.

In his inaugural address Friday, Bush said he would work to "make kinder the face of the nation and gentler the face of the world."

And at least by its declared intentions — though events have a way of intervening unexpectedly — the Bush administration will work harder on the world's economic, environmental and humanitarian problems than did the Reagan administration.

In statements Bush made before and since his election, and in remarks of Secretary of State-designate James Baker at his Senate confirmation hearing last week, the Bush administration has projected a greater concern to tackle difficult transnational problems than Reagan did.

Among them: the Third World's $1.3 trillion foreign debt, the rising tide of trade

"You'll see a new approach to acid rain from this administration . . . You have my commitment to work at (this) very serious matter."

—James Baker

protectionism, the plight of the world's refugees, and environmental calamities like the "greenhouse effect" and acid rain.

While Reagan stalled for eight years on the problem of the acid rain that denudes forests and kills lakes on both sides of the U.S.-Canadian border, Bush said "the time for study is past." Baker told senators, "You'll see a new approach to acid rain from this administration . . . You have my commitment to work at (this) very serious matter."

Bush has called for an international conference on global environmental issues, and Baker has pledged that the United States will lead an effort to find answers to the earth's long-term warning trend as well as cross-border water, air and soil pollution.

"We share with Mexico a host of bilateral interests — the interdiction of narcotics, the management of Mexico's debt . . . immigration, energy, the environment and trade, but there is none more important than our own national security," Bush said last April.

President Bush asks for prayers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President George Bush ended his five-day inaugural Sunday with services at Washington's National Cathedral, where a sermon asked the new government to give "hope for the destitute in our American Catholics."

In a national day of prayer and thanksgiving, the country's religious institutions took note of the change in secular authority with pealing bells at noon and prayers for the new president and vice president.

Unlike his predecessor, Ronald Reagan, who rarely entered a church during his presidency, Bush since his Nov. 8 election has attended weekly services at different churches in Washington and in his vacation spots.

Sunday's interfaith proceeding under the vaulted ceiling of the Gothic cathedral — where President Woodrow Wilson is buried — was aimed at giving thanks for American democracy and emphasizing the political challenges ahead.

Bush sent a letter to more than 200,000 of the nation's congregations asking them to offer special prayers Sunday for the new administration.

The president and his wife, Barbara, sat in the first pew next to Vice President Dan Quayle and his wife, Marilyn, and the Quayles' three young children sat behind their parents.

The first lady wore a lavender coat, matching dress and white gloves.

Before church, Bush made an early trip to the Oval Office with grandson George, 12, to write "a couple of thank-you notes." "Great day," he exclaimed during a surprise encounter with reporters on his way back to the executive mansion.

Later, he arranged a reception for inaugural committee officials, who organized dozens of events over the five days at an estimated cost of about $25 million. Family and friends were invited to the White House's family theater to watch the San Francisco 49ers play the Cincinnati Bengals in Super Bowl XXIII.

Salukis suffer 2nd straight loss, 65-55 at Drake

By David Gallanetti
Staff Writer

A good triangle-and-two defense seems to be 'the Salukis' worst enemy. Just ask SIU-C guards Kai Nurnberger and Freddie McSwain.

The Drake Bulldogs held Nurnberger and McSwain scoreless for the first half, en route to a 65-55 victory over the Salukis Saturday in Des Moines, Ia.

The loss is the second in a row for SIU-C, the first time the Salukis have dropped two straight this season. SIU-C drops to 2-2 in the Missouri Valley, 13-5 overall.

Drake pulls into a fourth place tie with SIU-C in the Valley, while making up for a 75-70 loss to the Salukis in Carbondale Jan. 14. The loss was the 11th straight for SIU-C in Veterans Memorial Auditorium.

"Drake did a tremendous job in their triangle-and-two," Saluki coach Rich Herrin said. "You can't completely blame Freddie and Kai. I think you've got to get the other guys to operate. It doesn't matter what your offense is, you've got to hit the 13-footer."

The 55-point performance is the lowest by the Salukis this season. SIU-C entered the game with an 81 point per game average.

McSwain finished the game with four points and Nurnberger with eight, both well below their averages of 19.4 and 15.0 respectively.

Freshman Tony Harvey led

"This is probably the most disappointing loss we've had this year because I thought this was a basketball team we probably had more talent than."

the Salukis with 14 points, nine rebounds and two blocked shots. The 14 points matches Harvey's career high.

"I thought this was Tony Harvey's best game by far,"

Herrin said. "He played an outstanding game, and he had a good effort."

Herrin said the loss is more than just another conference defeat.

"This is probably the most disappointing loss we've had this year because I thought this was a basketball team we probably had more talent than," Herrin said.

"I didn't think we played with intensity and effort and I think we have got to see that. I'm very disappointed with that. When we play with intensity, we are a good basketball team."

The Salukis again suffered from below par free throw shooting. SIU-C netted 13 of 20 free throws for 65 percent. At Bradley Thursday night, the Salukis hit 10 of 19 for 52 percent.

SIU-C entered the Bradley game with a 73.2 free throw percentage.

Track team suffers in Illini meet

By Paul Pabst
Staff Writer

The men's indoor track team headed to the Illinois Invitational hoping to gain more momentum toward the Missouri Valley Conference Championships in late February.

It didn't. "We were flat. Everyone was sore from last week because it was our first meet since early December," Coach Bill Cornell said. "We trained hard all week, and on Saturday we had dead legs."

Cornell was not happy with the poor officiating at the meet sponsored by the University of Illinois.

"The officiating was terrible," Cornell said. "They (the officials) let the mile and the 3,000-meter go an extra lap. It messed up the runners' times."

Senior Kevin Steele and freshman Vaughn Harry let neither soreness nor officiating spoil their performances.

Steele ran a personal-best 1:21.03 in the fast field of the 600-meters.

Harry raced to a third-place finish in the 3,000-meters, in a personal-best time of 8:31.55.

"Both Kevin and Vaughn did well to not let their aches get to them," Cornell said.

Newcomer Lannell Smith and junior Billie King showed considerable improvement in their short sprint and short hurdle events.

"Smith and King showed good improvement," Cornell said.

"The team spirit wasn't there," Cornell stated. "We were feeling sorry for ourselves and complaining about aches and pains."

Charles, who leads Tennessee at 6.5 rebounds per game, has become a dependable top player for Coach Pat Summitt.

"Daedra is getting better," said Summitt, now in her 15th season at Tennessee. "She's becoming more of a consistent scorer. She is a stable rebounder who has been able to eliminate turnovers."

Tennessee is coming off victories over Stetson, Mississippi and Mississippi State. The team's only loss came in a 67-59 decision Jan. 7 at Auburn.

The Salukis are 9-6 and winners of seven straight. Even though they boast one of the better defenses in the nation, Tennessee has an elite offensive unit that averages 81.5 ppg.

"The biggest thing for us is to be respectable," Scott said. "We are going down to win, no question. But if they are going to beat us, we want Tennessee to know they had to play a hard basketball game to do it."

The only common opponent for the two schools is Long Beach State. Tennessee defeated Long Beach 88-74 Dec. 3. The Salukis were beaten 61-53 by the 49ers Dec. 19.

"Probably playing the unknown is our biggest concern," Summitt said. "We'll rely on our transition game and just really try to focus on how our team executes its offense."

Also starting for the Lady Vols will be 5-10 guard Melissa McCray and probably 6-3 forward Carla McGhee, a sophomore from Peoria Manual (H.S.) who missed last season after being injured in an automobile accident.

"If we play good defense and work the ball on offense, we have a shot," Saluki sophomore Amy Rakers said.

The two last met in 1984 at the Bowling Green Bank Invitational at neutral Diddle Arena. Tennessee won 56-54, spoiling what would have been one of the biggest upsets in the history of the SIU-C program.

"All we can do is play hard and play our best," freshman Colleen Heimstead said.

Tennessee is the defending SEC champion and NCAA East Region champion.

4. Drake, Northern Iowa, Bradley, Western Illinois and Southwest Missouri also have fallen to the maroon and white.

In the Gateway Conference standings, the Salukis have a 7-1 record. SIU-C is second behind Illinois State, which beat Bradley 88-56 Sunday to stay undefeated at 7-0. Wichita State is 3-12 overall and 1-6 in the conference.

The Salukis' defense, which is ranked ninth in the nation by the NCAA statistics service, was coupled with a balanced offensive display for the team's ninth victory in 15 appearances.

Center Cathy Kampwerth had 10 points, as did reserve guard Deanna Sanders. Dana Fitzpatrick added 9 while strong forward Amy Rakers contributed 8 points and 9 rebounds.

Rakers, who never moved farther away from the basket than the free throw line, made 4-of-6 shots and had two blocks in a performance that Scott said was successful because it was within the team concept.

"Rakers ran the offense well," Scott said. "She needs to play within herself and take what comes to her. She's got all the ability in the world, she only has to read it well."

Rakers kept the offense in motion even when she wasn't scoring. With 3 minutes left in the first half, Rakers slipped a pass through the collapsing Wichita State defense. Kampwerth took the assist and turned it into an easy layup, which broke the game's seventh tie and put the Salukis ahead for good, 22-20.

"The key was working the ball more," said Rakers, a 6-2 sophomore. "When we do that, the good shot selection is there. I also thought we played with a lot more intensity."

Wichita State was led by Treva Jones with 14 points. However, the season's top scorers, Tonya Lane and Janet Hund, were held to 8 and 4 points respectively.

Shockers' coach Karen Harden credited the Salukis' defense with keeping her team in check.

"We've a great deal of respect for Southern Illinois' defensive game," Harden said. "You can trust them to show great defense year after year."

"Tonight it was a tight ball game until 3½ minutes to go in the first half when (SIU-C) turned the pressure on. Our play became very tentative."

NFL championship claimed by 49ers

MIAMI (UPI) — Joe Montana hit John Taylor with a 10-yard touchdown pass with 34 seconds left Sunday, giving the San Francisco 49ers a 20-16 Super Bowl victory over the Cincinnati Bengals that stamped them the Team of the '80s.

In perhaps the best Super Bowl since the game began 22 years ago, Montana engineered a stirring 92-yard drive to give the 49ers their third title of the decade.

The Bengals stayed in the game all day thanks to their underrated defense and took the lead with 3:20 to play on the third field goal of the game by Jim Breech.

But the 49ers, relying on the big-game experience of Montana and the big-play talent of wide receiver Jerry Rice, broke the heart of the Bengals with the most dramatic drive in Super Bowl history.

The march climaxed a 357-yard passing performance by Montana and a 222-yard receiving show by Rice, both Super Bowl records. Rice caught three passes in the winning drive, as well as grabbing a touchdown pass on the third play of the fourth quarter that tied the score 13-13.

The high drama of the final quarter excited a string of dull and one-sided Super Bowls, but kept alive the NFC's streak of success in the NFL title game.

San Francisco, which won the Super Bowl in 1982 and 1985, gave the NFC its fifth straight victory. And this triumph may well serve as a sendoff for 49ers Coach Bill Walsh. Walsh hinted all week he would retire after this game and 49ers owner Edward DeBartolo said he fully expected Walsh to do so.

Until the final burst of excitement, the Super Bowl provided big plays, but few points.

A 41-yard field goal by San Francisco's Mike Cofer and a 34-yarder by Breech left the score 3-3 at the half.

The two exchanged field goals in the third period—a 43-yarder by Breech and a 32-yarder by Cofer—that left the score 6-6 with 50 seconds remaining in the quarter.

Then things broke loose. After Cofer's field goal tied the score, Stanford Jennings ran up the middle on the kickoff return and was not touched until he reached the end zone for a 98-yard dash that put the Bengals in front.

Montana drove the 49ers 85 yards in four plays—one a 40-yard pass to Roger Craig—and left Rice, voted the game's Most Valuable Player, with a 14-yard touchdown throw that tied the score.

Illini look to conquer No. 1 spot

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UPI) — No. 2 Illinois beat No. 2 Georgia Tech 103-92 in double overtime Sunday, giving the Illini the best record among major college basketball teams and an excellent chance to become No. 1 Monday.

Illinois 17-0 and the only undefeated team in Division I, rallied from a 14-point deficit to force overtime.

"We felt we could get it done if we kept going," Illinois Coach Lou Henson said. "The players hung in there, they showed great courage."

Illinois, with five players in double figures, was led by Dennis Battle, who scored 25 points and hit his last seven shots. Kendall Gill added 19. The Yellow Jackets, 11-5, were led by Dennis Scott with 29 points and Tom Hammonds with 20.

"We didn't rotate over to guard (Scott)," Henson said. "We were not getting back on the break. That changed in the second half. Scott seemed to be a different player in the second half than in the first half."

The same could be said of all the Illinois players. After shooting 36 percent in the opening half, Illinois finished the game shooting 42 percent.

Illinois likely will succeed Duke as the No. 1 team in the next poll by United Press International.

"I think being No. 1 will make it harder for us to win the Big Ten," Henson said. "Everyone will be shooting for us. We have a long way to go. We'll have to take them one at a time."

Illinois forward Nick Anderson sank a 3-point shot with 4:10 left in the second overtime for an 87-84 lead. Seconds later, Steve Bardo hit a short jumper in the lane for an 89-84 margin. Georgia Tech would not recover.

"Illinois is one of the best offensive rebounding teams I have ever seen," Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins said. "This is a very tough loss for us. We played our hearts out and played as well as we could. They just wore us out at the end."

The Yellow Jackets took an 80-76 lead in the first overtime on a basket by Hammonds. Bardo made two free throws with 1:47 left to cut the lead to 82-80. Bardo added two more from the line with 37 seconds remaining to tie it.

Senior guard Dana Fitzpatrick will lead the 8-6 women's basketball team against No. 2 Tennessee tonight in Knoxville. The Salukis have a 7-game win streak.

No. 2 Lady Vols threaten SIU-C's win streak

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

No. 2 Tennessee will be without All-American forward Bridgette Gordon, who injured her knee early last week, for tonight's 6:30 game against the SIU-C women's basketball team.

Saluki coach Cindy Scott isn't breathing any easier, though.

"That doesn't mean a thing," Scott said. "If they lose one All-American they'll just bring in another off the bench. They won't miss a beat."

So as far as the Salukis are concerned, nothing has changed about the contest, which will be played at Thompson-Boling Arena in Knoxville, where the Lady Vols average in attendance more than 5,000 and have sometimes had as many as 10,000.

"If anything, it gives Tennessee an added incentive to play harder, and that's what really scares you," Scott said.

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS AT NO. 2 TENNESSEE

Tipoff: Thompson-Boling Arena (25,000), Knoxville, Tenn., 6:30 p.m.

Records: Southern Illinois (5-7), Tennessee (14-1).

What to watch: The Salukis are riding a 7-game win streak behind the strength of the nation's 9th-ranked defense. Tennessee is minus star Bridgette Gordon, but still boasts a potent offensive unit.

Last meeting: Tennessee 58, Southern Illinois 64, Nov. 12, 1984 at Bowling Green, Ky.

Gordon, a 6-0 senior destined for player of the year honors prior to the injury, averages 17.5 points per game and leads the Lady Vols in assists.

Without Gordon in the lineup, the spotlight shifts to 6-4 Shelia Frost (12.9 ppg), 5-10 Tonya Edwards (9.9 ppg) and especially 6-3 center Daedra Charles (10.1 ppg).

Creighton to bring top league record

Herrin's team to battle 4-0 Blue Jays

By David Gallanetti
Staff Writer

Missouri Valley Conference leader Creighton will put its 4-0 record on the line in the Arena at 8 p.m. tonight.

"Right now they're a little surprise in the Valley, but they're playing great basketball," Salukis coach Rich Herrin said.

The Blue Jays, 9-6 overall, are hot off a 94-68 trouncing of Bradley in Omaha, Neb. Saturday.

To prove Creighton's value in league play, the Blue Jays knocked off Wichita State at the Shockers home, 81-80 in

CREIGHTON AT SOUTHERN ILLINOIS
Tipoff: Arena (10,014), Carbondale, 8 p.m.
Records: Creighton (9-6, 4-0), Southern Illinois (13-5, 2-2)
What to watch: Creighton seems unstoppable, having beaten two of the Missouri Valley's best — Wichita State and Bradley. Bob Harstad, James Farr and Chad Gallagher are all playing exceptional ball. The Salukis want to get on track after losing two straight.
Last meeting: Creighton 89, Southern Illinois 67, March 6, 1985 at Peoria.

overtime Jan. 16.

The good news for coach Tony Barone doesn't stop on the court. The Blue Jays recently learned they will be eligible for postseason play, despite failing to meet minimum sports sponsorship criteria.

"Creighton can shoot the basketball and is playing with great intensity and effort," Herrin said. "They're going to drop back and play a 2-1-2 zone, they'll match up a bit and play some man-to-man."

The Blue Jays are led by sophomores Chad Gallagher, Bob Harstad and James Farr, all three members of last year's MVC all-newcomer team.

Gallagher recently returned to the Blue Jays lineup, after having arthroscopic surgery. Farr also had surgery before the season started, but did not miss any games.

Harstad was named MVC Player of the Week Dec. 23. The 6-foot-6, 220 pound sophomore is among the leading rebounders in the Valley, averaging over 10 boards per game.

"Junior Matt) Roggenburk, Farr and (Sophomore Todd) Eisner are great three-point shooters," Herrin said. "They've got Gallagher back, and he and Harstad are good inside players. We definitely have our work cut out for us."

Herrin said despite the Salukis being on a two-game skid, a win at home over Creighton would set things right back in motion.

"Unfortunately for our sake we didn't win (at Drake), but I think you've still got to say we're a good basketball team," Herrin said. "All we've got to do is come back and win these next two at home (Creighton and Bradley, Jan. 28)."

"We'll be back in the Valley race if we can do that."

Women's team claims seventh straight win

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

The navy blue suit-coat and skirt that Cindy Scott has worn at women's basketball games since early January is looking a bit thread-bare these days.

But the Salukis' coach of 12 years will undoubtedly wear the outfit to its last stitch if she thinks it continues to bring good luck and a string of victories to her team.

Scott can count on putting it on at least one more time because the Salukis' man-toman defense turned back struggling Wichita State 67-42 Saturday.

The Arena crowd of 2,003 was the largest to ever watch a women's game, sports information reported. The attendance was in sharp contrast to the 377 that came to Thursday's game.

The victory extends the Salukis' win streak to seven games. Since beating Indiana State by one point back on Jan.
