Griping's Hot About Cost of Cool Hills Air

A letter complaining about the cost of hooking up air-conditioning units in the Southern Hills apartments was sent Wednesday to the Housing Office and to President Morris. The letter was signed "The Majority Opinion at Southern Hills."

Each apartment in the housing area, specially provided for married students and their families, has a jack outlet for an air conditioner that may be installed by the University Physical Plant, according to Joseph W. Gasser, director of University Housing.

"Any student living out there can have his own unit installed by the Physical Plant for an installation fee of $30," Gasser said.

The letter sent to the Housing Office said that printed information about Southern Hills living does not indicate the $30 installation fee.

"The actual labor involved in the installation is practically nil," the letter said. "Anyone can install his own air conditioner in less than 10 minutes. Therefore, on what basis is the installation charge made?"

"Many students would be willing to provide their own air conditioners and pay the extra charge for electricity, but the extra charge of $30 for the installation prevents them from doing so.

"Since the library, other buildings, and even some dormitories are air conditioned, why should we be discriminated against having air conditioning in our college homes?" it read.

Gasser said that because the letter was not signed with specific names, no action would be taken on the matter.

Nigerian Project Gets Third Grant

SIU has received the third installment of a grant to support its English language training program in Nigeria.

Announcement was made by the Ford Foundation that SIU has been granted $384,000 for training in the English language at three civil service institutions, the training of a Nigerian staff in English, and for an experimental programmed self-instruction course designed to produce skilled English language teachers.

The Ford Foundation grant for Southern's program in Nigeria now totals $1,024,000 since January, 1964.

Shakespeare Comedy Opens Tonight in New Playhouse

The Southern Players' second summer production, Shakespeare's "The Merry Wives of Windsor," will open at 8 p.m. today in the Southern Playhouse for a three-day run.

The leading role of Falstaff, a fat, lecherous cowardly knight, will be played by Mike Flanagan.

In the play, Falstaff assaults the virtue of two clever wives of Windsor, Mistress Page, played by Judy Mueller, and Mistress Ford, played by Marilyn Stedje.

In return for his attempts,

EDUCATIONAL MATERIALS EXHIBIT DRAWS A CROWD

Dick and Jane Are Gone!

Books, Recordings, Furniture Among Educational Displays

By Rose Astorino

Dick and Jane, the fictitious characters in primary readers, have disappeared forever.

Nowadays modern techniques, such as number games, tape recordings and filmstrips help to teach children.

Much of this material can be seen at the 29th annual Educational Materials Exhibit in the University Center Ballroom.

The textbook displays include books on a variety of subjects. They are used to develop interests in addition to teaching children to read. The stories focus on science, foreign countries, history, and old braggart.

Another teaching method on exhibit is the learning-by-record technique. Lessons on the new mathematics, improving reading skills, and game songs of other countries are just a few of the records offered.

For the older age group, there are displays for book clubs, scholastic magazines and world atlases.

Exhibits of electric eraser cleaners to library furniture are among the displays of school supplies. The electrostatic copier used in business offices has found its way into the educational field. Schools use this machine to reprint tests, articles and copies of the school newspaper.

Liquid plastic is a popular product offered by the art and craft supply companies. Figurines of different shapes and colors can be made with the liquid. However, tempera paints, water colors and crayons are still in demand.

One display which is different from the others, but which also conveys educational information, is by the Women's Christian Temperance Union. It provides pamphlets on the dangers of narcotics, smoking and drinking for all age groups.

Although many of the people browsing, collecting booklets or talking to representatives at the displays are in the educational field, the exhibits offer interesting information for everyone. So, if you happen to be passing through the Center between now and Friday stop in and view some of the displays.

President Morris Signs Contract

President Delyte W. Morris has signed a contract between SIU and the federal Agency for International Development for a team of educators to go into the Asian kingdom of Nepal.

SIU will develop an education program in this independent mountainous kingdom, which lies along the Himalayan Mountain range between Tibet on the north and India on the south.

The contract calls for a general secondary education program with strong emphasis on the vocational-technical element, business education, home economics and agriculture, according to Alfred Junz, assistant dean of the SIU International Services Division.

William J. McKeefery, dean of Academic Affairs who has been serving as acting dean of International Services, said the University is still in the process of developing the program.

Robert Jacobs of the International Services Division and John O. Anderson, University director of the Communications Media Services will leave Saturday to make a survey of program needs in Nepal. They will be there until July 20.

A planning workshop is expected to be held in August, which will involve faculty people here, Nepalese, U. S. government representatives and resource people from other campuses. Means of developing areas of training in Nepal will be explored.

There is the probability that a chief of party and some team members can be there in September.

Nepal, which contains an estimated 10 million people, was almost completely isolated from the world until early in the 1950s.

In the spring of 1965 SIU trained 43 college graduates for Peace Corps work in Nepal.

Rows of buttons, numerous gauges and dials, an alarm system, an intercom and a large rectangular screen enhance the awesomeness of the steel leviathan. This product of modern engineering prowess is called the Central Utility Control System.

The apparatus controls the mechanical systems of various campus buildings. The heating, cooling, ventilating and amount of air moisture can be manipulated from the Physical Plant.

At present, three buildings are connected to the system; Morris Library, Wham Education Building and the SIU Arena. However, according to G. Don Shepherd, superintendent of utilities, seven buildings still in the planning or construction stage are scheduled to be added to the system. A maximum of 100 buildings can be connected into the system.

The actual control unit is a panel located in the Physical Plant. According to Shepherd, the panel has three functions which insure correct operation of the entire system.

The first is an alarm system. Every time a malfunction occurs, the panel prints the code number giving the exact location of the disorder. In addition, the time of the malfunction is recorded allowing the operator to check the tape at a later time and see if the trouble has been corrected.

The panel also has an important monitoring function to perform. The panel operator can check any system in any building by dialing the code number of the system. This gives a color diagram on the screen before the operator. The intercom allows the operator to hear the system work or talk to a technician working on the system.

The final function of the panel is the control function. The panel operator can start, stop, or make adjustments in any of the systems simply by dialing the proper code number and pushing a corresponding button.

The effectiveness of the operation enables the Physical Plant to maintain a 24-hour check on the building without having a special custodian on duty.

The Arena is possibly the most difficult building to control, Shepherd added, because of the nature of its activities. During a basketball game or stage show, the main problem is not one of heating or cooling but of maintaining proper ventilation. All of the air must be let in through vents at one end of the Arena and exhausted at the other without allowing any recirculation.

University plans are to add every new building erected on campus to the system until the maximum load is reached.

Shepherd said that much of installation has been reduced. Only a small cabinet and wiring is needed for additional buildings to hook into the central system. Shepherd estimated the bargain price to be approximately $20,000.

Anybody want to contribute to a building fund?

The comedy, although it contains some of the funniest dialog of any of Shakespeare's plays, is not produced as often as most of his other, better-known plays, according to Christian Moe, director of the production.

The play was written in response to the demand for another play featuring Shakespeare's comic character, Falstaff, who first appeared in "Henry VI," Moe said.

The production of "The Merry Wives of Windsor" uses 15th century costuming and Elizabethan music. The settings are designed by Darwin Payne, assistant professor of theater.

Tuition May Become Tariff-Like Barrier

The Board of Trustees at SIU and other state universities around the country might be wise to take a second look at tuition increases for out-of-state students.

The SIU trustees raised tuition for these students by $50 each quarter effective winter quarter, 1967. This means that nonresident students will be paying $210.50 each term compared to $80.50 for Illinois residents.

The tuition for a state resident is $42 and total costs are $80.50 when the $38.50 in required fees is added to the tuition. Out-of-state students pay the same amount in required fees, but their tuition will be $172 a term. In other words, they will be paying four times as much as a resident of Illinois.

The trustees explained that they took the action because of increasing enrollment pressures and in view of the fact that nonresident tuition at Southern is among the lowest in the country.

The Board's action in raising these fees can hardly be criticized when one examines the tuition charged at other colleges in the country where costs are still much higher.

Illinois taxpayers contribute to a major portion of revenues for the University. Why should these people have to provide low-cost educational facilities for a resident of another state who has state universities much closer to home?

But this practice could get out of hand nationwide if state universities continue raising tuition for nonresidents. It could, in effect, form a protective tariff-like barrier around state universities, discouraging and even preventing enrollment by students from other states.

This was brought out by one of the trustees at last week's meeting as something to keep in mind.

The relatively low tuition costs at Southern have been a definite factor in attracting more than 1,500 nonresidents to the University each year, particularly students from the East where resident tuition is often higher than nonresident fees at Southern.

The continued increase of such fees at Southern and other state universities could force these students to enroll at colleges in their home states where they may not receive the same quality of instruction or may not be as selective in their areas of specialization.

The trustees at Southern and other colleges across the country should weigh these possibilities with their responsibilities to taxpaying residents of their respective states before extending the use of higher fees for nonresidents.

Willie Hits Ball With a Stick; He's a Natural-Born Leader

By Arthur Hoppe
(San Francisco Chronicle)

Once upon a time, there was a little boy named Willie Willis who liked to hit a ball with a stick. While all the other little boys were in school studying history, science and civics, Willie would sneak off to hit a ball with a stick.

This made his parents very angry. "Don't you want to learn about history, science and civics?" demanded his father.

"No, sir," said Willie. "I like to hit a ball with a stick." "Don't you want to grow up to be President?" thundered his father.

"No, sir," said Willie. "I just want to hit a ball with a stick."

Well, as time went on, all the little boys grew up. Some who had studied history became eminent historians and made $10,000 a year. Some who had studied science became eminent scientists and made $20,000 a year. And some who had studied civics became paving contractors and made $30,000 a year.

But all Willie knew how to do was to hit a ball with a stick. So he made $100,000 a year.

Admitting Red China to U. N.

Could Help Asian Problem

The recent bombing of oil storage facilities near Hai-phong and Hanoi in North Viet Nam shouldn't have come as a shock to anyone. It was inevitable, and continued raids close to the heart of the North Vietnamese supply areas are also inevitable.

The bombings brought predictable reactions from the hawks and the doves, and a torrent of criticism from the countries of the world that are not involved in the mess in Viet Nam.

What happens now? By bringing the war to Hanoi's doorstep, the U. S. hopes to reach some kind of settlement to the war that has dragged on too long at the cost of too many lives on both sides.

Any way one looks at it, in this kind of war everyone winds up a loser. The U. S., much like Great Britain in the last century, has the unwanted, inglorious job of playing policeman to the world. However optimistic one might be, it appears that even if the Vietnamese war is settled relatively soon trouble will spring up in other areas of Southeast Asia, and the U. S. will inevitably be involved.

With the Great Dragon, Red China, sitting on the back of Southeast Asia, how long can we expect things to remain calm in that area, even if peace is negotiated in Viet Nam?

There is no simple solution to the problem, of course; but our unrealistic attitude towards Red China, a major cause of unrest in Southeast Asia, will only serve to increase the problem.

The U. S. has no alternative but to establish diplomatic relations with Red China and press for her admittance to the U. N. The great fear up to now has been that letting Red China in would just add another veto vote for the Soviet bloc member nations.

Considering how ineffective the U. N. has been in recent times, how could this be significant? Getting Red China into the U. N. may be just the catalyst needed to soften up the hard-line relations between the western world and communist Asia to prevent further war.

For Willie could hit a ball with a stick better than anybody else in the whole wide world. Thousands and thousands of people paid millions and millions of dollars to come see Willie hit the ball with a stick. One year, he hit the ball over the fence 78 times. The entire country talked of nothing else for days.

Willie was very happy. He loved hitting a ball with a stick. In fact, he did absolutely nothing else 24 hours a day but eat, sleep and hit a ball with a stick.

Of course, this was a little hard on the ace newsmen assigned to write daily stories about his personal life. But they managed. They wrote about his "great second effort," his "magnificent team spirit," and the way this true champion loved little children, flowers, moms and dads and the flag. Which didn't bother Willie at all because he'd never learned to read.

So Willie became a genuine national idol. Naturally, he was asked to run for President. Once they explained to him what a President was and how he'd have plenty of Secret Service men to shag flies on the South Lawn, he agreed.

He went on nationwide television and made a speech saying, "We must all pull together and sock the old apple." And that same afternoon he hit the ball over the fence twice in a row. The people went wild.

The experts agreed that Willie was a natural born leader, that his program was "sound, constructive, moderate and broadly appealing," and that he would win in a landslide.

And he would have, too, because his opponents were all politicians and nobody likes politicians. But at the last moment, Rupert Lovelyhart, a matinee idol, entered the lists. He had wavier hair, whiter teeth, better diction and looked much more like a President than Willie. So he won by 20 million votes.

Moral: Merely being able to hit a ball with a stick does not qualify you for high office in this great land of ours. So study dramatics.

GIs Protest High Price of 'Saigon Tea'

By Joseph H. Brooks
Copley News Service

SAIGON—This city's bar owners are threatening to go to court against the American GI resistance movement known as STIF, or Saigon Tea Is Finis.

There wasn't much the bar owners could do when the GIs simply refused to buy tea for hostesses and urged their fellow GIs to do likewise. Recently, some GIs have distributed mimeographed handouts in downtown bars espousing their cause, which bar owners contend is illegal.

They cite a Vietnamese law which says any printed material for public distribution must be cleared by a government censor before it may be released.

The GI resistance movement is protesting the high price of "Saigon tea," the name they give to the non-alcoholic concoctions served to hostesses in many bars. The price for a small glass of tea, flavored water or whatever, for the hostesses has gone up to around $2.

The price of alcoholic drinks also has gone up, with a can or bottle of American beer frequently costing more than $1.

Bar hostesses, who would be called B-girls in the United States, are employed in most bars in downtown Saigon—particularly those bars frequented by GIs.

There are 3,000 licensed hostesses in Saigon.

By law the hostesses are not prostitutes and, in fact, many of them are not. Theoretically, they just provide company for GIs who want female companionship while they drink.

Silence Is Golden, But Not in Court

Whether or not Annette Buchanan's conviction for contempt of court is upheld on appeal, her case is entitled to serious consideration.

Assuming the facts are as stated in court, Miss Buchanan, 20-year-old editor of a student newspaper at the University of Oregon in Eugene, was on sound moral ground in refusing to divulge to a grand jury the names of seven fellow university students who told her they used marijuana. For refusing a court order to divulge the names Miss Buchanan was fined $300.

Miss Buchanan apparently promised the students she would keep their confidence. If she obtained the information in confidence, betrayal of that confidence would violate her conscience. A court ought not to be able to compel her to do that. If there were an overriding public interest she might be persuaded she had a duty to divulge the names, but it seems to us she has a constitutional as well as moral right to silence.

If Miss Buchanan takes her word seriously, as she obviously does, she could not very well live with herself if she betrayed those who had placed their trust in her unless there was some compelling reason, which does not appear in this case. At any rate, the decision ought to be hers.

Stability Is Illusion

Chinese Vie for Power

By Edward Neilan
Copley News Service

HONG KONG — There are plenty of skeletons—literally and figuratively—in the Communist Chinese leadership closet.

The current leadership power struggle and purge in Communist China is by no means the first that has occurred there.

When they say Red party boss Mao Tze-Tung has been around so long "he knows where all the bodies are buried," it is no joke.

A reputation for unity and stability has been attributed to the Peking regime that perhaps it does not fully deserve.

The symbol of this stability is, of course, Mao, 72-year-old chairman of the Chinese Communist Party's Central Committee. He has been at the helm for 31 years.

It is becoming apparent that Mao's associates are striving to perpetuate his name to continue the impression of stability at the top. This helps to camouflage the intense jockeying that is going on inside the palace walls of Peking.

Most observers in the West, noting that a man has been in power for 31 years, assume this to be a reflection of complete leadership stability and unity.

A leading American news-magazine, Time, said:

"Mao has worked for more than 30 years with the other six members of the standing committee of the 19-man politburo without an internal bloodbath—a record unmatched by any other modern tyranny, Communist or Fascist."

A noted Chinese scholar, Chao Kuo-chin, writing in the journal Annals, assumed:

"The first striking aspect is the high degree of solidarity in the CCP leadership. Internally the Chinese Communist Party leadership has demonstrated for the last 20 years a far higher level of political durability than of the Soviet Union or any other major Communist Party in the world."

Is this a true portrayal of the CCP elite?

What really went on over the years behind the mask of leadership unity at the highest levels?

Following is a chronology of major power struggles in the CCP culled from the best sources in Hong Kong:

1. 1950—Mao's long-time rival, Chen Shao-yu, CCP leader from 1935, was kicked upstairs. Though Chen is still listed as a member of the Central Committee, he retains no active role in administration.

2. 1951—Another long-time rival of Mao's, Li Li-san, was purged. Within two years he lost the chairmanship of the powerful National Labor Congress, minister of labor and vice minister of industry successively.

Li, the man who led the CCP from 1930 to 1931, now is carried on the rolls as secretary of the Northern Bureau of the Party but he's seldom seen or mentioned officially. (Another foe of Mao's in the CCP in the early 1930s was Chang Kuo-tao. He read of his followere, he wrote a self-criticism admitting his guilt. Nothing has been heard of him since.

5. 1958—A sweeping purge of local Communist leaders took place. Regional leaders rebelled against the central government's high-handed rule.

More than 100 were killed or disappeared. These included three governors of provinces, eight lieutenant governors, 14 bureau directors, a provincial party first secretary and more than 20 provincial party secretaries. "Rightist groups" were crushed in 14 of the 28 provinces and cities.

6. 1959—Mao's old soldiering comrade, Defense Minister Marshal Peng Te-huai, and others rose to attack Mao's leadership. Peng and his associates including generals Huang Ke-chen (chief of the General Staff), Hsiao Ke (vice minister of Defense) and Hun Shao-chi (logistics commander) were purged. Peng is supposedly working on a small state farm in Manchuria. The other rebels have disappeared.

7. 1962—A purge of revisionists and "rightist opportunists" swept among others, Politburo member Chen Yun and seven provincial party first secretaries from the scene.

8. 1966—Peng Chen, Politburo member and mayor of Peking, was purged in what may be the start of the biggest housecleaning to date in the CCP elite. Details are still coming in. It is believed someone other than aging Mao—quite likely Minister of Defense Lin Piao—is doing the string-pulling.

The box score after 15 years of CCP power is four members of the top level Politburo removed and hundreds of high party leaders in the provinces plus thousands of lesser figures eliminated in seven major purges and a current eighth one that may outdo all previous ones.

3. 1954-55—Two top ranking party leaders, Kao Kang and Jao Shu-shih, were accused by Mao of organizing the "Anti-Party League" intending "to overthrow the central leadership." Both were imprisoned and more than 200 of their associates—including the vice mayor of Shanghai—were killed or jailed. At last report Kao had committed suicide in prison and Jao was in a Mongolian labor camp.

4. 1955—Outstanding writer for the masses Hu Feng was purged, sent to prison for activities judged to be "anti-party, antipeople, antirevolution." From prison, where he was sent with some 2,000 as the main perpetrator of Mao's thought—this is a likely choice to succeed him. He controls the army.

The man standing in Lin's way is Chief of State Liu Shao-chi. He is the heir to Mao through official succession.

Liu's close associate, Peking Mayor Peng Chen, was recently removed in a purge believed actually aimed at Liu, and plottied by Lin Piao.

Who's on first? The leadership power struggle apparently has been reduced to a race between Lin Piao and Chinese Communist Party Secretary-General Teng Hsiao-ping. But Liu Shao-chi isn't expected to give up his succession rights without a fight.

In Las Vegas, bookmakers are reportedly quoting Lin Piao at 5-1. Chinese bookies, who don't like a three-horse race, aren't taking any bets.

Court Made Cops' Job Hard; But Results Are Worth Price

By Robert M. Hutchins

About 40 years ago the Supreme Court began to use the Bill of Rights to establish certain minimum standards regulating the treatment of citizens by all governmental units in this country.

Before 1926 the states were free to abuse their citizens in any way they saw fit. As a law teacher in those days I had to tell my students that if a state permitted the police to obtain a confession by torture there was nothing that could be done about it. Chief Justice John Marshall had held long ago that the Bill of Rights protected the people against the federal government, not against the states.

The Fourteenth Amendment provides that "no state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

Using this amendment, the court has set up national standards of free speech, freedom of religion, freedom of the press and freedom of assembly. It has subjected state and municipal officers to federal requirements regulating searches and seizures and the admissibility of evidence illegally obtained. It has elaborated national rules governing the privilege against self-incrimination.

In the last two or three years the court has been engaged in determining how far the Sixth Amendment applies to the states. This amendment reads: "In all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right of a speedy and public trial . . . and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation, to be confronted with the witnesses against him; . . . and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense."

The four cases decided recently the provisions of the Fifth Amendment about the privilege against self-incrimination and those of the Sixth about the right to counsel have been clarified.

The court holds that when an individual is arrested he must be warned before he is questioned that he has the right to remain silent, that anything he says may be used against him, that he has the right to counsel and that if he cannot afford an attorney one will be appointed for him before any questioning takes place.

The decision in these cases has produced an outcry on the part of some members of the bar. I can sympathize with them; in the last 40 years the courts has overruled everything I ever knew. Nobody likes to have his hard-won knowledge wiped out.

The outcry on the part of law enforcement officers deserves even greater sympathy. They are going to have to work harder. Since many of them were working hard already, and since many of them have felt that the legal restrictions upon them were already excessive, they naturally complain that the burden now placed on them is more than they can bear. They go so far as to insinuate that the court is on the side of crime.

This is, of course, absurd. The court is on the side of the citizen, as the Constitution requires it to be. It is on the side of the poor, where justice demands that it be. The arrested citizen is likely to be a poor man.

But it must never be forgotten that he is not a criminal; he is a citizen. He is not a criminal until the charge against him is proved by due process of law. The burden is on the prosecution.

This is what the privilege against self-incrimination is intended to emphasize. The prosecution must work to obtain its evidence; it is not allowed to get it by beating up the prisoner or even, as in the celebrated Escobedo case, by questioning him, standing solitary and handcuffed for four hours.

The decision of the court demands more and better police work. There is no doubt about that. This is a small price to pay for the protection of Americans from governmental abuse.

History Plays Its Part

Draft-Age Men Face Future Predestined 160 Years Ago

By Clark Edwards

(First of Two Articles)

History's hand pushes today's youth toward an uncertain future. Today's 18 to 26-year-old male faces a future which was, to a degree, predestined 160 years ago, after the French Revolution.

Napoleon, inventor of many techniques of warfare, also invented "conscription," or the draft, as it is commonly called.

Meat-grinding strategy early in Napoleon's campaigns had thinned his massive armies. To replenish his regiments, Napoleon instituted the first national registration laws in 1798. All able-bodied males between 20 and 25 years of age were required to register and serve; within six years, the laws were extended to cover all French males.

Between 1800 and 1813 Napoleon drafted two and a half-million men. It was a large number then. Although today it would be less than half the United States "peace time" draft for a comparable period.

Under the Constitution of 1789, President Lincoln granted approval of the Enrollment Bill of 1863. The Enrollment Bill was a newer, adapted, general version, of Napoleon's law.

Reaction was as varied as it apparently is today.

In New York, riots broke out, and several hundred were injured. In the New England cities, feeling against the enactment ran particularly high.

New Haven and Boston had riots and protest demonstrations. These protests rose mainly from newly arrived immigrants from Ireland, Italy and Germany. Seven were killed in mob action in New Haven; 12 were killed in street fighting in Boston with hundreds injured. Unrest against the newest form of conscription lasted throughout the Civil War and flared in these same two cities in the several years immediately following the war.

The means of raising an army or navy to "provide for the common defense" fell issue with every secretary of state. Constitutionally, it is at the congressional door-step the means to be achieved is spelled out, but not the manner.

The draft became a hot issue as the United States entered World War I. So hot, in fact, it was one of the added reasons William Jennings Bryan resigned as secretary of state in the Wilson administration. Bryan opposed the war as a pacifist and opposed Wilson's version of Napoleon's tract.

The social mode and structure of the United States had changed; so had the consensus toward conscription. The West was won. The Eastern immigrant settled and acclimated. The '20s were roaring. It was a new war. New draft laws were passed.

Not to be "over there" was looked upon with disdain, unless you were--over there.

LEWIS B. HERSHEY
Draft director 26 years

The draft met resistance in New England and the South. To the young, the war was escape, excitement and glory. To the old, it was justified; a war that would surely end all wars.

The largest mobilization of men-under-arms came in the 1940s principally through the means of the draft, and constitutionally vested power in Congress to raise and provide for an army and navy generated a peak of nine million men in service by 1945.

Resistance to the draft in 1941 originated within interest groups such as the Nazi Bunds of the United States and pacifist groups. Resistance of acceptance flourished in major cities and industrial areas but it was short lived. It was soon apparent that this was a "make or break show." National solidarity rose; dissent declined to near silence.

After victory, munitions plants slowed production, naval yards were closed, Flying Fortresses were moth-balled. The war had ended, but not the draft. Nor would the draft end. A standing military force now occupied areas in Asia, the South Pacific and a large contingent remained in Europe.

Although these were mere fractions of the fighting forces they replaced, they were still far larger in number than the volunteer number available. This required the draft to fulfill the quota.

With Pork Chop Hill, Bloody Creek, Hill 903, 919 and Break-Yer-Back Ridge, Seoul, and "limited war," resistance to involuntary servitude in the military rose sharply. The 25th major military action since 1900 skyrocketed the drafting timetable and quotas.

An Average Reader Reads 240 Words A Minute. We Can Teach You To Read Over 1,500 Words A Minute.

STUART SYMINGTON

Here is what Senator Symington, Mo., says about Reading Dynamics:

"I can now read most material at speeds above 3,000 words per minute and technical material in the 2,000 word per minute range."

Our Average Graduating Reading Dynamics Student Increases His Reading Speed By 6.4 Times . . . With Increase Comprehension.

Reading Dynamics has spread all over the United States during the last six years. We have institutes in most key cities and have over 250,000 successful graduates from all walks of life, students, professional men and women, housewives, educators, and others take the course. It has been tested at major Universities and by key personnel of such firms as IBM, DuPont, NASA and IT&T. Now you can benefit from this great discovery.

When you see our documentary movie you will see and hear Senators Proxmire and Talmadge, who will say:

SENATOR TALMADGE, GA. "It is my opinion that if these techniques were instituted in the public and private schools of our country it would be the greatest single step we could take in educational progress."	SENATOR PROXMIRE, WIS. "I must say that this was one of the most successful educational experiences I've ever had. It certainly compares favorably with the experience I've had at Yale and Harvard."

HOW IS READING DYNAMICS DIFFERENT FROM OTHER READING COURSES?

1. No machines are used. You learn, instead, to use your hands as a pacer—a total you always have with you.
2. Conventional rapid reading courses aspire 450-600 words per minute. Most Reading Dynamic graduates can read between 1,500 and 3,000 words per minute and many go even higher.

If you take home a full briefcase . . . If you are a student . . . if you have a stack of unread books . . . if you're striving for greater business success . . . you want to enjoy reading more . . . THEN THIS COURSE IS DESIGNED FOR YOU!

GUARANTEE

We guarantee to increase your reading speed three times or more with equal or better than starting comprehension or your money will be refunded.

 Engineer Gets Foundation Post

The retiring commander of the Granite City Army Depot has been appointed assistant director of the SIU Foundation for the Edwardsville campus.

Charles B. Schweizer has been named to supervise activities and programs of the Foundation in the Edwardsville campus and St. Louis area, Kenneth Miller, executive director of the Foundation, said.

Schweizer, who has commanded the Granite City Army Depot since August, 1964, will assume his new duties Aug. 1.

A registered professional engineer with military service dating to 1938, Schweizer has a bachelor of science degree in engineering from the University of California, Berkley.

He has worked toward a master's degree in international relations in Washington, D.C., and has attended military colleges, institutes, short courses, and seminars.

Before taking over command of the Granite City facility, Schweizer was chief engineer and later deputy chief of staff of the U.S. Army Communications Zone in Europe from 1961 to 1964.

From 1957 to 1961 he was district engineer of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers at St. Louis.

2 on Forest Staff
 Are Reassigned

Two U. S. Forest Service wood utilization researchers at the Carbondale Forest Research Center on the SIU campus will transfer to other locations and research project assignments July 11.

They are James Schroeder, who has been at the Carbondale office six years, and Ron Jokerst, who has been at Carbondale four years.

Schroeder will go to the Forestry Sciences Laboratory on the University of Georgia campus at Athens and Jokerst to the Forest Products Laboratory at Madison, Wis. Schroeder will be concerned with U. S. Forest Service research projects on developing southern pine log and tree grades for veneering purposes. Jokerst will be working with research on wood glues and glueing processes.

During their assignment at Carbondale they have been working on the Forest Service's national hardwood tree grade project to establish guidelines for grading hardwood timber.

Appointments Taken For English Exam

Students scheduled to take the Undergraduate English Qualifying Examination which was cancelled should make an appointment at Room 304 in Old Main to write the theme.

Appointments can be made between 9:30 a.m. and noon daily. Students are permitted to write the theme between 11:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. on Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays or Fridays.

Early Advisement

Urged for LA & S

Continuing students in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences who have not yet been advised for the fall term should do so as soon as possible, an LA&S spokesman said Wednesday.

Students in General Studies who are eligible for transfer to the college should make an hour appointment with an adviser in LA&S to discuss their total program and a half-hour appointment to register for the fall.

His Closet Is Loaded, But Nary a Skeleton

(As he reaches the end of the academic line, every student faces the problem of packing. Ed Rapetti, who will graduate in August, has started packing already. A report on what he found when he started cleaning out his closet in preparation for the move follows.)

By Ed Rapetti

Every American home has at least one "junk closet." Mine is no exception. After weeks of harping, Mrs. R finally persuaded Mr. R to clean out the capacious cubbyhole.

Here is a partial list of what I discovered among the more valuable items in our storage room:

Two ticket stubs for row Z in Madison Square Garden for the 1963 "Ice Capades."
A piece of Reynolds Wrap autographed by Pinky Lee.

A sequined garter once owned by Gypsy Rose Lee which was tossed out at a Kiwanis banquet in Jersey City by Gypsy herself.

Three Tiparillo cigar butts.
Half an athletic supporter.

Three jars of Lucretia Borgia ant paste and roach powder.

An authentic buffalo-skin wickipi inscribed with "Tonto slept here."

A framed, autographed photo of Wendell Willkie throwing out the first ball at opening day ceremonies for the What Cheer (Iowa) Little League.

A half pint of Tiger-Balm Wine.

A book entitled, "How to Throw Your Voice," by Cassius Clay, oops, Muhammad Ali.

A blackjack once used by Al Capone to work over Jack "Greasy-Thumb" Guzik.

A towel stolen from Mama Fattoli's Hotel and Bocci Club in East Windham, N.Y.

A smashed recording of Kate Smith singing her smash hit, "When the Moon Comes Over the Mountain."

A "Dean Martin suitcase" which consists of one flask of whisky and one leather case for the flask.

A pair of binoculars and a ladder confiscated from a peeping tom in Brooklyn Heights.

A ticket for the "Drop-out Drag Ball" at the Fire Island Settlement House.

And last but not least, 137 back issues of The National Geographic.

While mustering my strength and force of will to cart this pile of dubious treasure out to the trash barrel, I encountered my neighbor who was just about to dump his collection of trash from the storeroom. Naturally I couldn't resist trading him my Pinky Lee Autograph for his three Spiderman comics and my stolen towel for his hang-nail cutter and . . .

Pilots Escape Red Missiles During Massive Air Strike

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—U. S. jet pilots have zipped safely through a Communist missile barrage, which one pilot said looked like a Fourth of July fireworks display, and blasted four missile sites and two oil depots between Hanoi and Red China's frontier.

Coinciding with the disclosure Wednesday of this action during a record high number of 106 raiding missions on North Viet Nam Tuesday was an announcement by Undersecretary of State George W. Ball that reports from Hanoi indicate a development of war-weariness among the North Vietnamese people.

Ball told a Washington news conference, however, there was no word of a political decision to seek a peaceful settlement and he did not want to create an overly optimistic picture.

U. S. Air Force officers expressed pleasure at the way their planes—aided by secret electronic devices jamming the enemy's radar guidance signals—evaded the Soviet-built surface-to-air missiles that roared aloft in apparently record numbers over the Red River Valley. Pilots said some exploded more than a mile off target.

While dodging the onslaught of the "flying telephone poles," Air Force planes teamed with Navy fighter-bombers to mount one of the heaviest raids of the 17-month-old war north of the border. They flew a combined total of 106 missions, a new high involving at least 212 planes.

There was speculation that North Viet Nam had wasted 16 or 17 missiles, against the previous high of 12 fired one day last March.

"It looked as if all the SAMs in North Viet Nam were concentrated along the Red River Valley," said one of the raiders, Capt. Frank D. Moruzzi, 30, of Agawam, Mass.

The missiles showed up from 50 to 115 miles northwest of Hanoi along that river, which flows from China across North Viet Nam to the Gulf of Tonkin. Pilots reported they knocked out four of the missile sites.

They also bombed two fuel depots 28 miles north and 33 miles northwest of Hanoi.

The raiding fighter-bombers hammered at bridges, barracks, storage areas, anti-aircraft sites and other installations in the southern part of the country.

Radio Hanoi, saying nothing about Tuesday's raids, declared four U. S. planes were shot down over North Viet Nam Wednesday. There was no confirmation in Saigon.

Enemy ground gunners shot down two small U. S. observation planes, a mile apart, about 300 miles northeast of Saigon in the hills of Quang Ngai Province. Helicopters rescued the two fliers in each plane.

A Vietnamese government regiment figured in the heaviest combat Tuesday reported by briefing officers. The regiment battled Communist forces in the Mekong Delta, 62 miles southeast of Saigon.

A spokesman said the troops killed 83 guerrillas. Government casualties were reported light.

Healthy Castro Doesn't Seek Friendly Relations With U. S.

CHICAGO (AP)—Fidel Castro is in good health and in charge of his country, the Chicago Daily News said Wednesday in a dispatch from Havana.

In an exclusive interview with Castro, Chicago Daily News writer Georgie Ann Geyer "questioned him about rumors circulating in the United States that he hasn't been seen as much as usual in Havana lately.

"For one thing, I've been in the countryside a lot," she quoted Castro as saying. "And what they are seeing is the institutionalization of the revolution."

"I don't know what the United States is doing," Castro was quoted. "First the shooting of the Cuban at Guantanamo, then Nicaragua offering itself as a base for invaders of Cuba and the Cuban exiles forming a government in exile.

"It looks to me as if Washington is planning something," Castro was quoted as saying he no longer sees any immediate possibility of rapprochement with the United States, nor does he seek one.

"Not with Johnson," he said. "That is impossible. The United States today is following the worst possible policy in the entire world—the worst possible. Every day the weapons get worse, and the American people accept them, just as the Germans did."

Luci Selects Gown; Style Not Revealed

WASHINGTON (AP)—Luci Johnson selected her long, white wedding dress about three weeks ago, but the White House said today details of the bridal gown will continue to be a secret.

The President's daughter made the selection in her spacious second floor bedroom with her mother and plenty of staff to advise her, one of those present reported.

Trying on dress after dress, Luci, 19, kept going back to one gown and finally turned to her mother and exclaimed, "It's this. It's this."

Governors' Parley Faces GOP Balk

LOS ANGELES (AP)—An attempt by Democrats to commit the 58th annual Governors Conference to support of the Johnson administration "global commitments and the policy presently being followed to honor them" appeared to be running into Republican resistance Wednesday.

Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey called on the governors to back Johnson's policy of halting Communist aggression in South Viet Nam.

Gov. George Romney of Michigan, a potential bidder for the 1968 GOP presidential nomination, told a news conference he is not sure the timing and place are right for a showdown with communism, even if that is the administration's objective.

A resolution prepared by a committee of Democrats headed by Gov. Grant Sawyer of Nevada and circulated among the Republicans contended that containment of communist aggression in Southeast Asia has been and remains a bipartisan policy.

The resolution said "it is incumbent upon the American governors, Congress and public to reaffirm with no evasion or equivocation the firm support of our servicemen in Viet Nam and elsewhere to whom the conflict is real and personal."

It added a pledge "that this conference affirms to the President, the American public, the servicemen and women of the military forces of the United States and our allies its absolute support of our global commitments and the policy presently being followed to honor them."

The wording of this resolution seemed unlikely to win the support of Romney or GOP Gov. Mark O. Hatfield of Oregon, a severe Johnson critic.

There were indications the Republicans generally would demand a revision in the language before going along on it.

Humphrey said in an address prepared for a later conference session that the United States has seized the initiative in Viet Nam and must stay and fight until it has stopped the aggression from the north.

Romney said, however, he is in doubt about the fundamental policy behind the American presence in Asia. He said on a visit to Viet Nam last year he was assured the objective was to help the people of South Viet Nam retain their freedom.

But he said conditions have changed and the South Vietnamese have not been contributing sufficiently themselves to this end.

"If our help is not wanted or their role is insufficient," he said, "we should find a way to get out honorably."

He said he will not support a "blank check" endorsement of the Johnson policies or any "inadequate resolution."

UP, UP AND AWAY (?)—Pete Bowers, dressed in woman's clothes, takes off in his replica of a 1912 biplane to start the 20th annual Powder Puff Derby Transcontinental Air Race Monday. Bowers, an engineer at Boeing Co., builds old planes as a hobby. The man in the lower left corner doesn't seem to have much confidence in the plane's flying ability. Eighty-two planes carrying 144 women fliers started the race from Seattle to Clearwater, Fla.

Japanese Leftists Fight Police In Melee Near Rusk's Hotel

KYOTO, Japan (AP)—Leftist students attacked police Wednesday night with large rocks and pieces of concrete near Secretary of State Dean Rusk's hotel, climaxing an anti-American demonstration.

Rusk had just met with Foreign Minister Etsusaburo Shiina of Japan, telling him that North Viet Nam is beginning to feel the military pressure and is no longer sure of victory.

It is doubtful if Rusk saw or knew of the melee in which six policemen and at least 10 students were injured. Seven students were arrested.

The students were from the Zengakuren organization, a far-left outfit whose stormy street demonstrations against the U. S.-Japan mutual security treaty forced President Eisenhower to cancel a visit to Japan in 1960.

The students, numbering about 300, have been so combative that most Socialists and labor union groups have disowned them.

About 12,000 Socialists and labor union groups, with some Communists, demonstrated peacefully through the streets of Kyoto during the evening. They carried anti-U. S. placards denouncing American action in Viet Nam.

Breaking away from the main column, the Zengakuren contingent headed for the Miyako Hotel which Rusk—leader of the American ministerial delegation to the U. S.-Japan cabinet-level conference—had just re-entered after dining elsewhere with Shiina.

Forming human barricades, the students swapped punches with police and threw large stones and pieces of cement at them. Police kicked and punched the students. National Broadcasting Co. cameraman Julius Boros, who was hit in the head, said it was the roughest melee he had seen in two years in Japan.

The ministerial conference, the fifth since 1961, winds up Thursday with a communique and a joint Shiina-Rusk news conference. Rusk will go to Tokyo for talks with Prime Minister Eisaku Sato.

Hoffa Gets a 'Blank Check'

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Teamsters Union delegates approved Wednesday nearly $1 million spent on President James R. Hoffa's criminal trials, gave him a blank check for future legal fees and authority to name his successor if he goes to prison.

One delegate, Larry Thomas of Philadelphia, opposed approval of the resolution to use the union money for the legal fees. There was scattered opposition to naming a general vice president to replace Hoffa if necessary.

But the overwhelming majority of some 2,000 delegates smothered the opposition, shouting through both resolutions in a standing vote.

Hoffa, facing sentences of 13 years in prison, picked his old friend from Detroit, Vice President Frank Fitzsimmons, for the new post of general vice president in elections today.

Hoffa is unopposed for a new five-year term as president, although he could soon go to jail if his appeals fail on jury tampering and mail fraud convictions.

In 1964, Hoffa quit using money from the union treasury for his huge legal expenses, reported to be over $500,000.

Hoffa indicated Tuesday that he would not actually draw on the treasury for more legal fees until all legal questions are settled.

Kerner to Be Here

Lutz Plans for '67 Spring Baseball Tourney

By Mike Schwebel

Although there's a lot of summer baseball action ahead for the Salukis, Coach Joe Lutz is already planning for next year's festivities.

The first Governor's Tournament in Illinois has been set for April 14, 15 and 16 at Carbondale.

Governor Otto Kerner will be on hand to present a large winner's trophy at the end of the tournament.

All of the state supported schools in Illinois have been invited to participate, along with one out-of-state guest school.

The University of Illinois at Chicago, Eastern Illinois and Western Illinois have thus far announced plans to play in the tournament.

Arkansas State has accepted an invitation from Lutz to take part as the only out-of-state participant.

GOV. KERNER ... to be here for tourney

Lutz has been going with mostly freshmen in summer action, and the team now stands at 4-5 overall. Parsons College dealt that record the big blow, taking four games in a five game series last weekend.

The Iowa college gave Southern over two runs only once during the series when the Salukis took a 4-3 decision in 12 innings.

In the other four contests, Southern collected only six runs, while Parsons racked up 28 tallies.

Barry O'Sullivan, a freshman from East St. Louis, has taken the early lead in runs batted in. He has five.

The big first baseman is also tied for the club's top hitting average with John Mason, a junior from Deerfield.

Both have eight safties in 18 times at bat for a .444 average.

Veterans Tex Sandstead and Don Kirkland are both hitting for a fine average, while Butch Evans, a regular in the spring campaign, is having a hard time of it.

Kirkland, who also has three pitching decisions, has had nine hits in 24 appearances, while Sandstead has hit eight for 24.

Evans, who finished near the top this spring with a 300 plus batting mark, has mustered just two hits in 17 tries at the plate.

Dick Bauch, Dominic DiStasio and Rich Hacker have also shown fine displays of hitting thus far. All are freshmen. Kirkland, who was the ace of the spring season, has been pounded pretty well so far this summer, showing a 4.09 earned run average.

Kirkland has a 1-2 mark in the young season.

Besides Kirkland, five first-year hurlers are performing for Lutz, with two of them having no decisions.

Skip Pitlock and Tom Kettelkamp are both 0-0, while displaying fine ERA's of 2.25 and 1.80 respectively.

Bob Ash has a 1-1 mark, Rick Iverson is 0-1, and Mike Weber is even at 1-1.

Nicklaus, Hitchcock Lead in British Open; Both Fire One-Under-Par to Share Round

MUIRFIELD, Scotland (AP) —Big Jack Nicklaus and Jimmy Hitchcock of England fired one-under-par 70s Wednesday and shared the first round lead in the 72-hole British Open Golf Championship with most of the field finished. The husky blond from Columbus, Ohio, is favored to win this tournament for the first time.

The 26-year-old Masters champion scored 37-33. He was one over par for the first nine and two under for the back nine.

Hitchcock had 36-34. He came close to taking the lead by himself but his putt for a birdie three on the 18th hit the hole and popped out.

The 6-foot, 210-pound American and Hitchcock had a stroke lead on Doug Sanders, the colorful California pro, Tony Lema, 1964 winner from California, and Ronnie Shade, the Scottish amateur champion. They each matched par with 71s.

Nicklaus had four birdies, three bogeys and 11 pars. He birdied the 11th, 13th and 17th holes and pulled out of trouble on the 18th by sinking a 20-footer for a par four.

Arnold Palmer, two-time winner of the title from Latrobe, Pa., defending champion and five-time winner Peter Thomson of Australia, Australia's Bruce Devlin and Julius Boros of Mid Pines, N. C., were among the group with two-over-par 73s for the 6,887-yard, par 35-36-71 Muirfield course.

Two Girls Represent Southern At National Golf Tournament

Paula Smith and Lynn Hastie represented SIU at the National Collegiate Golf Tournament held at Ohio State University in Columbus.

Both girls, who are members of the SIU women's golf team, qualified first flight by shooting 85s. There were five flights in addition to the championship flight.

In the first round, Miss Hastie lost on the 17th hole to Sue Kaufman from Bowling Green. On the third day of play she won her second match over Carrie Hoiles of Mt. Union College.

Miss Smith bowed to Carolyn Fopp of Arizona State in the first round of play and to Martha Kosar, Kent State, in the second round.

However, she won the Southern Illinois Golf Association tournament at Anna the day before leaving for the national tournament.

Another SIU golf team member, Janet Mercer, placed fourth in the SIGA tournament.
