Supporters: North convictions weak

Daily Egyptian wire services

WASHINGTON — Oliver North's supporters on Capitol Hill said Thursday his conviction on three felony counts in the Iran-Contra scandal is a hollow victory for the prosecution and one predicted a pardon for the former aide to Ronald Reagan.

"If this is the best the prosecutors can do, Oliver North is largely vindicated," Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, told reporters.

Hatch said the retired Marine colonel and fired National Security Council aide had been convicted on three technical counts while being cleared on nine more substantial charges.

"What we have here is a jury that did not think he was as guilty as so many members of Congress who have been pressing these matters have thought," Hatch said.

Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., said he was "disappointed but not surprised" at what he called a compromise verdict that reinforced his view "that Oliver North was left to twist in the wind" by his superiors.

Just as the jury announced its verdict, President George Bush, at a news conference with Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney at the White House, denied that there was any "quid pro quo" to bolster aid to Honduras in exchange for that Central American nation's assisting the U.S.-backed rebels in Nicaragua.

Bush was asked about his involvement in the secret efforts to aid the Contra forces in Honduras in 1985 when Congress had banned any aid to the rebels.

Speaking forcefully and measuring every word, Bush said, "The word of the president United States, George Bush, is that there was no quid pro quo."

North appeared later with his wife Betsy to say the jury's verdict was "a partial vindication" since he was found not guilty of nine charges in the secret diversion to Nicaraguan Contra rebels of profits from U.S. arms sales to Iran in 1985 and 1986.

Area group supporting China fight

By Daniel Wallenberg
Staff Writer

A group of about 60 professors, supporters and students gathered Thursday in the Student Center to discuss the student uprising in mainland China advocating greater freedom and political reform.

The discussion coincided with the anniversary of the 1919 May Fourth Movement.

About 150,000 Chinese citizens watched as 50,000 students marched through Tiananmen Square in Beijing, China, on the anniversary of the Movement.

The event, a nationalistic student-intellectual crusade for democracy and modernization, grew into a protest against China's government and helped spawn the Chinese Communist Party two years ago.

Some student leaders announced a two-week boycott of classes would end as the protesters peacefully dispersed, but others said they would boycott classes for another week.

During the protests students demanded freer speech, a free press and an end to official corruption.

Students returning to class would end three weeks of protests, the biggest anti-government demonstrations since communist China's founding in 1949.

The restrained unrest brought the first friendly offer, an olive branch given to students, from a Chinese leader after weeks of concealed threats. The unrest began after the April 15 death of liberal Chinese Communist leader Hu Yaobang.

According to CBS news reports, Chinese journalists protested along with the students for the freedom to print the truth and carried signs proclaiming their guilt for telling lies.

It also was reported that on the evening news in China no mention was made of the student protests. Stories covered included the swearing in of new members to the Communist Party and another on a traditional song and dance group.

Chenfang Ramsey, president of the Republic of China Student Organization, said after watching the report she was "happy to see the students fight for their rights because the government suppresses the rights of students."

Senate, House approve plan for $1.16 trillion fiscal budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate joined the House Thursday in approving a $1.16 trillion fiscal 1990 budget plan after both chambers rejected several attempts to undo the bipartisan spending pact between the White House and congressional leaders.

Although sponsors acknowledged the package was a "short-term fix" that failed to achieve the deep deficit cuts hoped for, the spending blueprint for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 sailed through the House on a bipartisan vote of 263-157.

The package passed the House after lawmakers killed proposals for a $9 billion oil import tax, a $17 billion defense spending cut and a spending freeze.

Shortly thereafter, the Senate approved a slightly different version of the measure on a 68-31 vote, also after rejecting amendments that would have scuttled the Board: Votes short for summer senate

By Miguel Aliba

A judicial board has ruled there were insufficient votes to amend the Undergraduate Student Government constitution to allow for a summer senate, a decision that is being called invalid by summer senate supporters.

In the last meeting of the semester Wednesday night, the student government voted 13 to 7 in favor of establishing a summer senate.

Summer senate opponents appealed the decision to the Campus Judicial Board of Governance, the body that has jurisdiction over all student government appeals, on the basis that two-thirds of the senate did not vote in favor of the amendment.

The controversy stemmed from confusion over whether to round up or down when calculating the required two-thirds vote. Mathematically, two-thirds of 20 is 13.33.

Three voting judicial board members settled the matter by declaring that two-thirds of 20 was 14, adding that 14 favorable votes were needed to amend the constitution.

Michael Parker, judicial board member, said the ruling was in the form of a temporary order until a quorum could be assembled sometime next week.

"We basically told them to go back to the senate and pass it over again," Parker said.

However, Parker said he did not think the judicial board would be able to meet with the necessary members for a quorum in the near future

SIU-C's administration to change by July 1st

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

The structure of the University's central administration will go through several changes before July 1.

The changes were prompted by the retirement of Vice Chancellor James Brown. The retirement will be effective June 30.

Instead of replacing Brown, the University decided to create a new position, executive assistant to the chancellor for external relations, Tom Britton, vice chancellor for administration, said.

The executive assistant will supervise governmental relations on the local state and national level, Britton said. The executive assistant also will support Chancellor Lawrence Pettit in corporate and foundation endeavors that benefit the University.

"A national search is underway for an administrator to fill this position," Britton said.

Also resigning is Catherine

Foster Walsh, assistant to the chancellor, Jack Dyer will assume her duties dealing with media relations in addition to his present responsibilities as director of University relations. He also will report directly to the vice chancellor of administration, Britton said.

Dyer's new title will be director of media relations.

The administrative part of Walsh's duties will belong to the assistant to the vice chancellor for administration, Britton said. This position was vacated by Betty McDowell. A search for a replacement is underway.

McDowell has assumed the position of assistant to Howard Webb, vice chancellor for academic affairs.

Minority teachers decreasing in national count

By Jeanne Bickler
Staff Writer

The number of minority teachers is decreasing nationwide according to the National Education Association, but the number of minorities graduating from SIU-C with a teaching degree has remained stable.

Over the past four years at SIU-C, an average of 95 minorities have graduated each year with an undergraduate degree from the college of education, according to annual fall enrollment reports.

However, these numbers do not indicate how many of the minority students actually went into teaching after graduating, Irene Harris Johnson, minority program administrator, said.

The number of minority teachers in the United States is declining at a dangerous rate, said National Education Association President Mary Hatwood Futrell in a news release.

Futrell states that in 1980, one teacher in eight was a minority. By the turn of the century, that proportion is expected to drop as low as one in 20 unless more minorities are attracted to teaching as a profession.

Futrell said that in 1980, one teacher in eight was a minority. By the turn of the century, that proportion is predicted to drop to as low as one in 20 unless more minorities are attracted to the teaching profession.

Johnson coordinates two programs that target minority groups by trying to get them involved in higher education. The programs, started in 1985, were designed to increase the numbers of minority educators in higher education.

The programs are the Illinois Minority Graduate Incentive Program (IMGIP) and the Illinois Consortium for Educational Opportunity Program (ICEOP).

IMGIP is based at SIU-C,

Johnson said. The program provides fellowships and other supports to over 56 black, hispanic, and native American students pursuing doctoral degrees.

ICEOP was started by the Illinois General Assembly. It assists minority students in graduate studies.

Both programs require the participants to agree to accept a full-time teaching or non-teaching position with an Illinois university or an Illinois educational board or agency for a period equal to the number of years they received an award.

Johnson said minority teachers are important role models for students, and not enough of those role models exist.

According to an April 1988 report by the Illinois Board of Higher Education titled "Our Future At Risk," the recruiting and hiring of minority administrators and faculty should be a university priority to improve minority achievement.

The IBHE stated in the report that too few minorities exist to serve as role models for the minority students, or to serve as examples for white students to understand and respect as successful members of the academic community.

"The numbers of minorities in teaching is alarmingly low," John Yopp, associate vice president for Academic Affairs and Research, said. "We're trying to do more."

Without minority teachers, minority students are being cheated of the positive role models they need to boost pride and self-esteem, Futrell said.

Equally important is what happens to non-minority students who aren't taught by minority teachers, she said.

"We're cheating non-minority students of the understanding that no group in our society has a monopoly on learning - or teaching. And we're cheating them out of the preparation they'll need to work cooperatively in our multi-ethnic work force and to understand the emerging global economy," Futrell said.

Yopp said the decline in minority teachers is happening when the American student population is becoming more ethnically mixed.

Johnson blamed "competing forces in society" for the lack of minorities involved in extensive education.

"Many minorities lose their confidence in education in the lower grades," she said. Absentee parents and lack of commitment by teachers can often result in disinterested students, she said.

Lentz food complaints not heard by health dept.

By Miguel Alba
and Tracy Sargeant
Staff Writers

The director of the Jackson County Health Department said he has not been notified of students' complaints that food at Lentz Hall made them sick, contrary to what a University official said.

So far, six health and accident reports of suspected food poisoning have been filed with housing officials. The complaints came after students said they became ill after eating cheeseburgers prepared at Lentz April 28.

Edward Jones, housing director, said the complaints were reported to the Jackson County Health Department.

However, Jim Bloom, director of the Jackson County Health Department, said he had not been personally informed of the matter.

Bloom said he is usually the first person notified in cases involving suspected food poisoning.

Margaret Nesbitt, food production unit manager at Lentz Hall, said nothing has developed in the investigation.

"We can't look at the meat because it's all gone," Nesbitt said. "It's all been eaten."

Nesbitt said the only thing left to do was to talk to the students involved, adding she wants the students with complaints to come forward.

Nesbitt said steps to prevent this from happening again would be taken but she did not specify any procedures.

She refused to discuss the matter further.

Bloom said four surprise inspections per year are conducted by the health department on campus food establishments.

While people usually call the health department with complaints, Bloom said no food poisoning cases had been officially identified in the past year in Jackson County.

Lori Komara, dietitian for University Food Service, explained that the University usually receives fresh meat shipments daily and most of the meat is used that day and not frozen.

"When it (the meat) arrives, it's inspected on the loading dock before it is accepted," she said.

Meetings in summer not needed for USG

THAT THE UNDERGRADUATE Student Government passed an amendment to allow for a summer senate is not the issue. The issue is whether a summer senate is necessary.

Fewer students attend classes during the summer and fewer activities are planned. The need for a summer senate is not great enough to warrant students staying for the summer or having other students petition for the vacant senate seats for such a short period of time.

The elected officers for next fall are required to take office in the summer and will be here to deal with any problem that arises and must be dealt with immediately.

THERE ARE NO fee allocations made during the summer to be voted on, and it is unlikely that any major issues will arise that require a senate vote.

Even if there is a summer senate, it would most likely be made up partially of senators who were not elected by the students to represent them. Instead summer students would be allowed to petition for seats not filled by the elected senators for the summer. The elected senators would have a chance to register for summer seats first, however.

Although the constitution and by-laws could not be amended during the summer semester, legislation dealing with transaction of funds, registration of RSOs, seating of senators and mandates could be voted on.

No proxies would be allowed in the summer senate, which might cut down on attendance, and even slow down senate business if quorum is not met.

THE SUMMER SENATE would not be in the best interest of the students because there is not much for the senate to do and many senators would not be those who were elected.

As for getting RSO funding started sooner in the fall, a summer senate would not do this anyway. RSOs would not have their funding requests ready and the finance committee probably would not be meeting yet.

The fall meetings could begin sooner if the senate and finance committee organized a few weeks before fall semester and asked for RSOs' funding requests sooner.

There has not been a pressing need for a summer senate in the past and it probably would be a waste of time and money.

Ever-increasing megabuck jackpots ought to cause state officials around the nation to wonder whether lotteries are getting out of hand.

Nowhere has the betting on these games been more frenzied than in the recent $115 million Pennsylvania lottery. People stood in line for hours to buy tickets. Some spent their entire paychecks, others cleaned out their savings accounts, some used welfare money, at least one man mortgaged his house to buy thousands of dollars worth of tickets. People from out of state arrived by car, train, bus and airplane to take a chance on becoming rich overnight.

Several authorities in gambling told The Christian Science Monitor the other day that the explosive growth of officially sponsored lotteries and big jackpots are making gamblers out of people who never bet on anything before.

"The government is dangling the carrot in front of people, telling them they have a chance to get rich and famous without working for it," said Michael Lodise, vice president of the National Council on Compulsive Gambling in New York.

The chance of states giving their revenue-producing lotteries is almost nil. But it seems to us that state officials would be acting responsibly if they limited the size of jackpots.

True, enormous jackpots attract more bettors and bring in more revenue. The chance to win $115 million, or the nearly $70 million of an Illinois lottery a month ago, is almost irresistible.

What ticket buyers seem to forget is that rarely does one person win the entire amount of the huge prizes. For Pennsylvania's big drawing, 14 winning tickets were sold, which made each worth some $8 million.

It also has been pointed out many times that the chance of being struck by lightning is greater than winning a state lottery jackpot. Depending on the range of numbers to pick from, the odds on selecting the winning combination can soar to one in 14 million.

If states feel they must have lotteries, why can't they put a ceiling on jackpots of, say, $5 million? Over a 20-year payout, that would give a winner $250,000 a year, which is wealth in almost anyone's language.

It's irresponsible to use enormous jackpots to lure people to make bets they cannot afford. State officials should act to stem this "lottery madness."

Letters

Bad profs should find new jobs: Placement office could help

Debbie skipped class again today. She skipped because: a) too lazy to attend; b) too tired to attend; c) has a professor who is very boring and obviously uninterested in teaching the class; d) has a professor who regurgitates information word for word from the class textbook.

If you guessed "c and d" then you are correct. It amazes me that within my four years attending SIU and reading about all of the steps this University is taking to become a "more reputable" school, that it doesn't take more action toward hiring professors who are good at their profession, which is teaching.

I have had many excellent professors within these four years, but I have also had some very lousy ones. This letter goes out to all of you professors who seem to view lecturing more as a chore than anything else, (believe it or shows!).

I am paying close to $100 per class. Multiply that by the amount of students in each class and you'll see that's no small sum. I don't need someone to read for me for $100 the books which I pay $30-45 apiece and can read for myself.

To those professors who notice their classes half full on a regular basis, notice more D's and F's than A's and B's on the test scores, and receive lousy evaluations, this may be a hint that you're in the wrong profession.

My advice to you is a career change. Help can be obtained through Career Planning and Placement in Woody Hall.

To prove that I don't have it out for the majority of the professors here at SIU, I'd like to take this opportunity while I have the chance to thank those professors who, within these last four years, gave me direction and taught me the skills and information which I can carry with me throughout my life.

Doing away with events such as Halloween is not what it takes to change this school's image, (U of I has had numerous alcoholic events for years), a strong teaching staff who the students can respect and admire will.

I want to be proud to say that I attended SIU after graduating and not have to constantly be on the defensive, explaining to people the great departments we have here.

That is only going to happen when more professors are proud to be teaching at this institution. I wish SIU much success in the years to come and thank it for starting me off on the right foot toward my future. — Debbie Malloy, senior, advertising.

Condom machines spell 'promiscuity'

A news article in the DE stated that SIU-C President John C. Guyon gave his "official seal of approval" to the installation of condom machines on the campus of SIU-C.

At its March meeting the Murphysboro Council of the Knights of Columbus unanimously adopted a resolution opposing that action.

In 1968 Pope Paul VI predicted in "Humane Vitae" that the widespread use of contraceptives by married couples would "lead to conjugal infidelity and the general lowering of morality." Unfortunately, his prediction has come true.

The placement of condom machines on campus will encourage promiscuity and permissiveness of sexual relations among the unmarried, which will have a serious impact on the stability of marriages and the well being of families.

That is not consistent with the idea that a university should strive for the improvement of society.

Football player: Reporter a 'disappointment'

In response to David Gallianetti's column of April 28, I have to express my disappointment in Mr. Gallianetti and his column.

Mr. Gallianetti, you covered the football team last season. You of all people at the DE know what the program is all about. You travelled on our bus, ate our food, and stayed at our hotel, (predominantly funded by the football program's budget).

You experienced our jubilation when we won and our heartbreak when we lost. In the worst times, when we lost, never did you write an antagonistic column about the team. Mr. Gallianetti, you were one of us.

Now, in one of your last columns, you write about the football program. You say it should be cut because of its financial strain on the University.

It's a financial strain to the University, but it's ok for you to get a free ride on us, just as long as your columns are written.

We believe that, even practically, his decision is irresponsible as in effect he is giving his "official seal of approval" to more premarital sex, more venereal disease, more pregnant unmarried women and more abortions.

Those have been the results in other communities that have promoted the use of contraceptives; there is no reason to believe that the results will be different here. — Richard L. Will, Grand Knight and Gary Belles, Chancellor.

Mr. Gallianetti, why? — Pete Jansons, senior, member of the 88-89 football Salukis.

Editor's note: David Gallianetti has never traveled, eaten or stayed at a hotel at the football team's expense. The Daily Egyptian stands behind its reporter.

Correction

Student attitudes on the issue of football are yet to be gauged. This sentence was incorrectly stated in Thursday's editorial.

The trickle of state funding at SIU-C

Deans say school needs budgeting factor

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

The state's river of funds to the University is not an endless flow, which makes receiving funds a long and elaborate process for individual University departments, several deans said.

After the administration divides the money into budgets for the colleges, the deans decide the amount to be given to each department within each school.

Several deans agree that since no college can get a satisfactory amount of funds, because department thinks it needs more money, the allocation process is difficult.

This year the University allocated $121.3 million of the state's 1988-89 budget to pay education and general needs.

The nine colleges get $49,950,139 of the budgeted amount to divide between them.

This money must provide every academic unit with salaries, student wages, travel, commodities, equipment, contractual services, telecommunication needs, operation of automotive equipment and other expenses.

MOST DEANS ALSO agree the number of faculty, the number of students, the equipment needs, the completed research and how much the department received last year are important factors in determining department budgets.

However, individual deans weigh those factors differently.

Two colleges make budgetary decisions in meetings, letting department chairpersons negotiate their own budgets.

Two colleges have a set formula for their budgets, having the same percentage of their budget go to each of their departments every year.

Two colleges let the faculty's needs determine priority in budgeting. One college focuses on the special needs of the departments in question.

In the College of Human Resources, Dean Anthony Cuvo said he lets the department heads split up the OTS (other than salary) money. He said that system allows the departments to work out their own compromises.

After the department heads have a rough idea of their budget, they submit it to Cuvo for approval. He said the process usually works well, with larger programs receiving larger portions of OTS money.

GEORGE MAVIGLIANO, ASSOCIATE dean for the College of Communications and Fine Arts, said his college uses shared governance to determine a budget.

He said department heads create their own budget and then submit it to an advisory committee for approval before the budget is sent to the dean.

Mavigliano said this approach allows those involved to communicate their ideas into the decision-making process. He said it is one of the more democratic approaches to deciding the budget.

In the College of Business and Administration, Assistant Dean of Budget and Planning Shirley Kinley said each department receives the same percentage of the budget each year.

Kinley said the college has tried other ways, but after every time, the department heads return to the percentage method. This process is the fairest method of working out the budget, she said.

Donald Beggs, dean of the College of Education, said his college has a set allocation of funds and gives percentage increases to each department based on the funding increases the college receives.

BEGGS SAID HE meets with department chairpersons every year, but that everyone spends every penny they receive, so the budget has to give equal increases to everyone.

John Jackson III, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, said he divides his budget according to teaching needs. He said since 80 percent of his budget is spent on personnel, he tries to meet their obligations first.

Jackson said he gets budgets and "wish lists" from his faculty and then does the best he can to meet them.

"We have far too little budget for the teaching obligations we are expected to meet," Jackson said.

Juh W. Chen, dean of the College of Engineering and Technology, said he decides what to do with his money based primarily on what faculty members need for instructional materials.

"If we can't serve the faculty, we can't expect them to instruct and research properly," Chen said.

OVERALL, CHEN DESCRIBED his annual budgets as fairly consistent, not fluctuating much from year to year.

In the School of Agriculture, Dean James Tweedy said he distributes his college's budget based on the needs of each department.

"We never have enough to do what we want, so we look at what was allocated to each department last year," Tweedy said.

Different departments in agriculture have different needs, like maintaining farms and updating labs, Tweedy said. He said he doesn't use a set formula for determining the budget so that he can better accommodate those needs.

Despite the different methods of determining the budget, each school has apparently found a method that works best for its individual needs. Whether a democratic, percentage or situational approach is used, the deans are confident they have an efficient way to create a budget for the school year.

Budgets must include funds for department allocations of expenditure items like travel allotments.

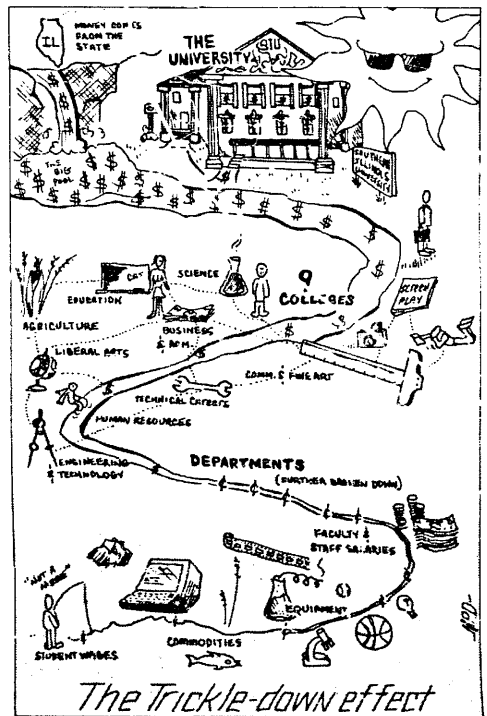

TRAVEL ALLOTMENTS ARE separated into three categories. Conventional travel allows staff to attend professional meetings. Departmental covers the carrying out of regular duties. Institutional travel includes all University business not previously covered.

Commodities are allocated to provide necessary materials for instructional units, research projects, and administrative and operational units.

Equipment funds provide items to the operating units. Library books are bought with appropriated equipment funds.

Contractual services meet the needs computer equipment rentals, computer software purchases and rentals, utilities and technical services.

Telecommunications funds provide telephone and telegraph services, as well as "off-site" computer terminals that must communicate with the University's central processing units through telephone lines.

Automotive equipment operation provides funds for the maintenance of departmental vehicles and the meeting of charges for vehicles used in carrying out departmental jobs.

OTHER EXPENDITURES MAY include Employers' Retirement Contributions, permanent improvements, and awards and grants for scholarships.

All these factors must be considered when the budgets are comprised.

Although the deans can appropriate the money they do receive, they often find themselves in need of more funds than the state provides.

Most of the deans complain that they can't get enough from state funds to provide all the services to students and faculty that they want to.

Performing research and applying for outside grants and donations can provide additional funding.

All the colleges rely at least in part on outside sources for additional income.

Tweedy said a high percentage of University agriculture research is supported with grants and donations.

"Nearly all our research comes from outside supports and contracts. We don't have enough in our budget to allow a lot of research," Tweedy said.

Chen said the engineering school depends heavily on outside money, and that he is always trying to get more donations and grants.

CUVO SAID MOST of human relations' external money comes from rehabilitation services offered by the University. He said that money gives the college more flexibility in what it chooses to do.

Jackson said except for the psychology department, the College of Liberal Arts doesn't get many opportunities for research or grants. The state isn't taking a general education seriously enough, he said.

University involved in research project for Mars

By Alicia Hill
Staff Writer

As NASA launched its Magellan Venus probe from the space shuttle Atlantis Thursday, University research was already aiming toward Mars.

John Phillips, associate professor of chemistry at the University, has begun a two year research project with the $30,000 grant from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The research, aimed at building an instrument for the measurement of water vapor, could eventually aid NASA in its search for water on the surface of Mars.

In the early 1970s, the Mariner mission produced photographs of river valleys and other land forms which proved that water did, at one time, exist on the surface of Mars.

The examination of the presence, location, and changes in water on Venus is one of the aims of the 1989 Atlantis mission.

By studying water on other planets, scientists are better able to understand, evaluate and make predictions about the Earth's oceans.

If water once existed on Venus and Mars, where is it now, and could something similar happen to the water on Earth?

According to Phillips, evidence from previous missions suggest that the water could be frozen under the surface of Mars.

Phillips and one graduate student are in the preliminary stages of building the water vapor measuring instrument.

The instrument would ride aboard a robot-like vehicle, a rover, which would drive around the planet's surface for several years making observations and measurements, Phillips said.

"By following changes in water vapor throughout the seasons, the instrument may help to locate water sources," he said.

The mission to transport the rover, although not yet officially approved, is projected for flight in about 15 or 20 years.

The Magellan Venus probe, the centerpiece in a $530 million mission to map Venus, is the first U.S. planetary spacecraft to be launched since August 1978.

The space shuttle carrying the probe was grounded last Friday at Kennedy Space Center 31 seconds before liftoff because of a fuel pump problem.

Bad weather delayed Atlantis 59 minutes Thursday before it was successfully launched into its planned orbit 184 miles up.

The five member crew includes commander David Walker, 44, co-pilot Ronald Grabe, 43, Mark Lee, 36, Norman Thagrad, 45, and Mary Chagrad, 42.

All members but Lee have previously participated in shuttle flights.

The astronauts are scheduled to complete their mission with a touchdown Monday at Edwards Air Force Base in California.

Surgeon General Koop resigns

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Surgeon General C. Everett Koop, an outspoken, non-nonsense doctor who has vigorously fought to halt the spread of the deadly AIDS virus, announced his resignation Thursday.

Koop told President Bush in a letter he plans to leave office July 13, months before his term expires Nov. 19.

Bush, in a letter to Koop, accepted the resignation "with regret" and told him, "In your 7 and a half years as surgeon general of the United States, you have redefined and invigorated that crucial job."

As the 13th surgeon general, Koop brought the once obscure office national prominence as he became the bandleader for a number of key health issues, especially the effort to prevent and treat acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

But he also found himself constantly embroiled in the abortion issue, most recently when he refused to write a report — requested by President Reagan — on the long-term psychological effects of abortion on women. Abortion opponents had expected Koop to report that the procedure had negative effects on women — a finding Koop said was not supported by the scientific literature.

In the brief May 4 letter, Koop, 72, appointed by Reagan in 1982, said he will enter "terminal leave status" July 13 through Sept. 30, and will enter "retirement status" on Oct. 1.

Spokesman Jim Brown said Koop has a number of projects under way.

Local businesses could gain from Canadian trade increase

By Megan Hauck
Staff Writer

A government official said Wednesday a dramatic increase in trade with Canada could benefit Southern Illinois business owners.

Stanley Bakota, an international trade specialist in the U.S. Department of Commerce, said the free trade agreement with Canada has increased American exports by 70 percent, and part of that increase could affect local business owners.

The free trade agreement, effective Jan. 1, 1989, eventually will abolish all tariff as well as non-tariff barriers, or taxes, between the United States and Canada, opening a free market for both countries, he said.

"It opens a market of about 26 million people to us," Bakota said. "That's 26 million people who were somewhat protected before to our market."

The elimination of trade barriers between Canada and America has permitted free trade between both countries. It also has caused some Canadians to be wary about a loss of nationalism, Bakota said.

"They're worried that an influx of American goods will cause them to lose part of their culture. Of course, that won't happen to the extent they think it will."

Since the new trade agreement, Japan and Korea have reduced their trade barriers out of fear of retaliation, Bakota said.

"In the course of the next 10 years, there will be a free trade movement globally," he said.

Bakota attributed the upsurge in exports, American and otherwise, to increasing interdependence between major industrial powers.

He predicted Europe will be a unified 320-million-people market by 1992. A rise in living standards as a result of higher pay has increased the demand by foreign countries for quality goods, Bakota said.

"The national economy no longer can be controlled by the national government," he said. "Our interests are so mixed that our survival depends on how soon we can enter a foreign market."

Bakota said isolationism, an existence Canada has assumed in the past, no longer will be an option for countries that wish to exist and operate economically.

Isolationist countries do not partake in international alliances, especially in trade concerns.

Kent prof named chair at University

University News Service

Arlyn J. Melcher, 57, a longtime professor of administrative sciences at Kent State University has been named chairman of the Department of Management at SIU-C. He will assume his new duties Aug. 21.

Thomas G. Gutteridge, dean of the College of Business and Administration, announced Melcher's appointment May 3, concluding a four-month search which attracted about 20 applicants.

Melcher replaces Uma Sekaran, who was named coordinator of University Women's Professional Advancement at SIU-C.

He has a bachelor's degree from the University of California at Los Angeles and master's degrees in business and administration from UCLA and the University of Chicago. He earned a Ph.D. in business from the University of Chicago in 1964.

He is a member of the Academy of Management and the American Association of University Professors.

Weight of medical examiner report questioned

CHICAGO (UPI) — Defense and prosecution lawyers Thursday disagreed over the importance of a medical examiner's report leaving as "undetermined" the manner of death for a 15-month-old boy whose life-support system was disconnected by his gun-wielding father.

The death certificate for Samuel Linares said he died at 2:05 a.m. April 26, the day his father, Rudy Linares, 23, disconnected his life-support system at Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center. The father, armed with a gun, kept police and hospital employees away until the boy died.

Samuel, buried Monday, was left comatose and suffered brain damage in a freak Aug. 2, 1988, accident in which he inhaled part of a balloon. Doctors said he had no hope of recovery.

Cook County Medical

Examiner Dr. Robert Stein said Thursday the death certificate stated the cause, not manner, of death.

Stein said the boy "died due to aspiration of a foreign body, a balloon" in association with "termination of the life-support system." The manner of death, however, remained "undetermined," said Stein.

Rudy Linares has been charged with first-degree murder, but public defender

Kevin Smith said there could be no murder case without a homicide ruling.

Assistant Cook County State's Attorney Scott Nelson disagreed, saying Stein's determination had little or nothing to do with the prosecution.

Smith said he has defended murder cases exclusively for the last four-and-a-half years and never has defended someone in a case where the manner of death was left as undecided. He said all cases first were ruled a homicide.

"If the medical examiner does not determine that the cause of death was homicide, you can't then have a murder. You have to have one before the other. No homicide, no murder," said Smith.

Smith said he would await the written report, known as the protocol.

Attorney asks to dismiss 4 counts in prof's case

By Richard Nunez
Staff Writer

Attorney Richard White asked for a motion to dismiss four counts of aggravated criminal sexual assault against University art professor Dan Wood at the Jackson County Courthouse Thursday.

White asked that two counts be dropped because the charges were too numerous and varied for each count.

White also asked that all four counts be dropped because the state alleged similar offenses on each separate count and he fears Wood could fall victim to double jeopardy, meaning he could be prosecuted a second time for the same offense under different counts.

Wood, 45, was arrested July 1 and charged with 12 counts of aggravated criminal sexual assault and aggravated criminal sexual abuse after a complaint was made by a 12-year-old boy.

Two weeks after his arrest, other youths came forward alleging Wood had sexually abused them.

On Nov. 28, eight of the 12 counts were dropped by Judge David Watt Jr., who didn't agree with the wording of the indictments. The four remaining counts will be reviewed at a date yet to be determined.

In his reading of the counts, White continually emphasized the plural word, "acts," and contended that the charges misjoined different sexual actions to one count.

State's Attorney Charles Grace requested that the "s" be stricken from "acts" on the four counts, thus eliminating the ambiguity of the word "acts" and instead refer to the specific charges.

Watt, concerned about formal defects in the indictments, granted White a continuance.

Radon gas leaks in houses, claims lives of the unaware

Deadly radioactive gas cannot be seen, smelled or tasted

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

An estimated 23,000 people died last year from lung cancer after being exposed to a radioactive gas they could not see, smell or taste, according to the American Cancer Society.

The radon gas became trapped in the soil under their homes and leaked into the foundations as a natural breakdown of uranium caused the rock to decay.

In the outdoor air, radon is scattered into such low concentrations that it usually does not pose a health risk. In the home, high concentrations of the gas with exposure over a long period of time could increase the risk of developing lung cancer.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has found elevated levels of the gas in every state since the discovery of radon in a home five years ago.

In 1984, a Pennsylvania nuclear power worker was setting off a radiation detector as he left the plant to go home. Since the plant was still under construction and not operating, officials were puzzled over the man's apparent radiation exposure.

After about two weeks, the worker discovered that he was being exposed to the radiation at home because he could set off the detector before going into the plant. Further investigation revealed that the radon level in his home was 2,300 picocuries per liter.

A picocurie is the unit of measure for radiation, which is the amount of radon in one liter of air.

The EPA now recommends that homes with as little as four to 20 picocuries of radon per liter be tested for long-term measurements of the gas.

Homes or schools with more than 200 picocuries of radon per liter should be ventilated immediately. EPA health physicist Debra Arenberg said.

Arenberg said the two easiest ways to test a home for radon are through commercially-available devices. Homeowners can place a

Radon Gas:

Last of two articles about how radon gas is being dealt with.

charcoal canister in the lowest point of their homes for three to seven days to determine the level of radon.

The canister works by holding the radon until it decays in the activated carbon, allowing scientists to determine the amount of gamma radiation in the carbon.

The charcoal canister is available for approximately $10 to $25.

A second device, the Alpha Track Detector, is slightly more expensive at $20 to $50.

Arenberg said it is best to measure a home during the winter because most homes are closed and as heat rises, it actually draws the radon inside.

One method for reducing radon levels in the home is sub-slab suction. It works by drawing the radioactive gas from under the foundation through a lead pipe. A fan blows the gas into the outdoor air, where it is considered harmless.

A professional could install the sub-slab suction for about $900 to $2,500. The materials for the method would cost about $300 for homeowners wanting to do the installation.

While the sub-slab suction method removes up to 99 percent of the radon, natural methods are more cost-efficient and can remove 90 percent of the radon gases.

Simply opening basement windows can help ventilate the gases from the room. Placing a fan in a basement window and forcing the radon out through cross-ventilation also removes up to 90 percent of the radioactive gases.

No matter what method a consumer chooses, long-term testing should always follow short-term testing for more accurate results, Arenberg said.

delicately balanced bipartisan record.

The relatively minor differences between the two plans in some domestic spending categories such as science, energy and education now will be worked out by a House-Senate conference committee, which House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta, D-Calif., said should begin meeting next week.

Panetta predicted quick agreement on the budget resolution, which is merely a congressional spending guideline that does not have to be signed by President Bush because it is not an act of law.

Senators rejected an amendment by Sen. Herb Kohl, D-Wis., to send the budget plan back to negotiators, giving them three days to produce a better package using more realistic assumptions about economic growth and interest rates.

Congressional opponents of the plan believe the deal is a fiscal charade that uses too many accounting gimmicks to obtain phony savings and obscure the nation's real deficit dilemma.

The budget plans approved by the House and Senate implement the bipartisan spending agreement negotiated between Bush and congressional leaders of both parties and announced at the White House April 14.

The House and Senate versions both give the Pentagon $305.5 billion in fiscal 1990 budget authority — a net loss in buying power after inflation. They both call for $14.2 billion in new revenues — including $5.3 billion in taxes, $5.7 billion in asset sales and $2.7 billion in user fees. And they provide $181 billion for domestic programs — enough to allow some to grow beyond inflation.

The House voted 373-49 against an amendment by Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., to raise $9 billion through a new oil import tax — a proposal that violated the bipartisan budget accord and ignored President Bush's "no new taxes" pledge.

Gephardt's amendment would have allocated $5.8 billion to domestic programs and the other $3.2 billion to trim the federal deficit.

On a 343-81 vote, the House rejected an alternative budget from the Congressional Black Caucus that would have slashed defense spending by $17 billion, raised $20 billion in taxes and greatly increased funds for most domestic programs.

"At this very moment, there is great human carnage taking place in this country," Rep. Ron Dellums, D-Calif., the black caucus chairman, said in advocating the alternate plan. "We are now reaping the wild wind of extraordinary neglect."

Dellums said the nation is "losing an entire generation of our children," and warned, "A society that destroys its children is a society that is on the way to dying." Black caucus alternative budgets introduced in nine previous years all have been rejected.

Amendments in both chambers to freeze spending at current year levels in an effort to achieve what proponents said would be honest deficit reduction were handily defeated.

The House voted 393-30 to kill a freeze amendment by Rep. John Kasich, R-Ohio, while the Senate voted of 82-18 against the freeze sponsored by Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., who said the bipartisan accord was "another cop-out" in efforts to cut federal red ink.

Early Thursday, the House passed by voice vote an amendment to transfer an additional $175 million into veterans health care programs, taking the funds from other domestic accounts.

The House action came after the budget panel last week poured another $150 million into veterans health care on top of what Bush requested.

The Senate accepted by voice vote an amendment by Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., increasing anti-drug funding by $100 million, taking the money from congressional mailing costs. It also accepted an amendment to ensure there is $1 billion for correctional facilities for drug offenders and other programs.

"I hope the government will be more open-minded because the students are the power and future of the country," Ramsey said.

Ramsey said some of the estimated 110 Chinese students attending the University were afraid to attend the discussion for fear of the Chinese government finding out of their attendance. Many students have family still living in China, she said.

Wang Qin, a political science student, said many of the Chinese students admire what their counterparts are doing in China.

"It is very dangerous for them," she said.

Qin said most of the students supported the Chinese students but some also felt the movement was useless.

Jian Chen, a Ph.D. student in history, said he was pleased with the actions of the Chinese students.

"They are concerned with the future of our country," Chen said.

"The students are struggling and are pouring into the streets in protest," Chen said. "Communism is in crisis."

Chicago officials lose parking clout in front of city hall

CHICAGO (UPI) — Things really have changed in the city where clout meant privilege and influence at City Hall.

Mayor Richard M. Daley, who assumed office just over one week ago, has decided he's tired of seeing cars parked illegally in front of City Hall. So Wednesday, he ordered them towed — not just the illegally parked cars of the common citizen, but those of city officials as well.

Does this mean the end of clout?

"It must," said Avis LaVelle, press secretary of the son of the late Mayor Richard J. Daley, who ruled the city with an iron grip for more than 20 years. LaVelle's car was among 13 taken to the city pound Wednesday.

Public Works Commissioner David Williams, Deputy Revenue Director Harold L. Brandon, Cable Administrator-designate Michael Scott and Deputy Director Ronald Robers of the Mayor's Office of Employment and Training also found their wheels missing.

The search is on in Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit's office for an administrator to fill a newly created position, executive assistant for external relations.

"The position was created to increase and broaden political support for SIU and to take over the duties of Vice Chancellor James Brown when he retires in June," Tom Britton, vice chancellor for administration, said.

The executive assistant, a senior position in the central administration for SIU, is responsible for the direction and coordination of all governmental relations and creating support for the chancellor in activities that involve external foundations and corporations, Britton said.

Specific duties of the executive assistant will include:

- examining federal and state activities that could benefit SIU, reporting back to the chancellor on such activities and presenting recommendations on how to get the University involved in these activities;

- directly representing and coordinating the University with members of the Illinois General Assembly and the U.S. Congress and other branches of state and federal government;

- preparing legislative background and correspondence for legislative issues;

- interacting with alumni associations, external foundations, corporations and associations that will benefit the University;

- and supervising the staff that deals with governmental relations.

"We hope the search committee will find a suitable administrator to take this position by July 1," Britton said.

In addition to Britton and Brown, members on the search committee include: William Hardenbergh, professor of political science at SIU-C; Dennis Hostetler, chairman for the public administration and policy analysis for SIU-E; Victoria Moïfese, acting director of research development and administration at SIU-C; Richard Moy, dean and provost of the School of Medicine; Benjamin Quillian, vice president for administration at SIU-E; and Donald Wilson, vice chancellor for financial affairs.

Howard Webb, vice chancellor for academic affairs, will serve as the chairman of the search committee.

"We hope to have the interviews completed and the position filled by July 1, but that data is not etched in stone," Britton said.

Britton said this position was not designed to save the University money but primarily designed to "open doors and build bridges for political support within the University."

Another position opening is the director of employee relations, Britton said. The director will take on the task of collective bargaining for University faculty, Britton said.

In other areas of the central administration, some "doubling up" will occur, Britton said.

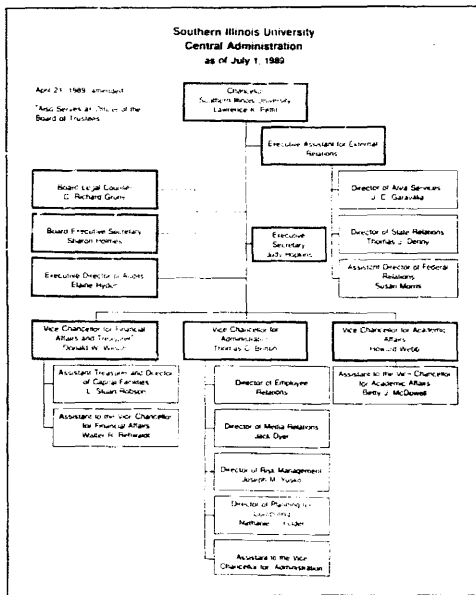

J.C. Garavalia, director of area services, will work in the office of the chancellor and keep his duties within area services.

Susan Morris, legislative liaison for the graduate school, also will take on the job of assistant director of federal relations.

The duties of both Garavalia and Morris will basically remain the same, but they will report to the executive assistant, Britton said.

Because of new responsibilities, title changes have been made, Britton said.

Thomas Denney will be named director of state relations. He also will report to the executive assistant.

Stuart Robson will become assistant treasurer and director of capital facilities. He will report to the Vice Chancellor for Financial Affairs Donald Wilson.

Flashing a familiar smile, North said he's planning to appeal the conviction on the three counts and plans to win.

"As a Marine, I was taught to fight — and fight hard — as long as it takes to prevail," he said in a brief statement given in his lawyer's office. "We will be fully vindicated.

"Certainly I hoped that this battle would be behind us by now, but today's was not a complete victory. After more than two and a half years and over $40 million of our taxpayers' money spent on investigations, congressional inquiries and now a special prosecutor who has likened me to Adolf Hitler, we now face many months and perhaps years of fighting the remaining charges," he said.

The jury of nine women and three men spent more than 64 hours over a 12-day period considering the testimony of 48 witnesses and deliberating the charges against him before finding North guilty of:

- Falsifying and shredding government documents in November 1986 as the Iran-Contra affair became public. Maximum punishment: three years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

- Illegally accepting a gratuity, a $13,800 fence and home security system financed by arms dealer Richard Secord. Maximum punishment: two years in prison and a $250,000 fine.
- Aiding and abetting in "(North's) opportunity for a pardon disappeared when Ronald Reagan went to California."

—Rep. Henry Hyde

obstructing Congress by concocting a fake chronology of the Iran-Contra affair in November 1986. Maximum punishment: five years in prison and a $250,000 fine. Conviction on this offense bars a person from holding public office, federal prosecutors say.

The jury acquitted him of other felony counts that included lying to Congress, conspiracy to violate tax laws, and diverting some proceeds of the Iran-Contra arms sales to his own use.

The Marine Corps said North's conviction on the charge of falsifying and shredding documents means he will lose his status as a retired lieutenant colonel and his $1,900-a-month pension. If the conviction is overturned on appeal, the pension would be retroactively restored.

North's supporters quickly stepped up their campaign to get President Bush to pardon the former Marine.

"I think George Bush ought to pardon him" and others implicated in the scandal, Hatch said. "These are people who thought they were doing right at the time."

But Hyde, who was in the courtroom when the verdict was delivered, expressed doubt North will be pardoned. "His opportunity for a pardon disappeared when Ronald Reagan went to California," Hyde said.

Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, chairman of the Senate Iran-Contra committee, said the verdict "reaffirms the conclusion" of the two congressional panels, which found that "fundamental processes of governance were disregarded and the rule of law was subverted."

because many of the members are graduating.

Chuck Hagerman, chairman of the committee for internal affairs, wrote the amendment to establish a summer senate.

Hagerman said the decision made by the review board is invalid because it did not have a quorum when deciding the matter.

The student government constitution specifies a quorum is established by having seven members present.

Hagerman said an emergency senate meeting would be called to reconsider the matter, adding that it would be difficult to get a quorum in the senate because of the timing involved.

"Students have to study for tests next week," he said. "It's really a difficult time to get people together."

USG President-elect Tim Hildbrand said chaos would result if the matter was not settled before the spring semester ends.

"We could have a summer senate trying to meet, while next year's elected senate is meeting somewhere else," he said. "It will be complete chaos."

Nancy Pei, campus judicial board of governance adviser, said she thought the judicial board members voted correctly.

"I used to teach parliamentary procedure," Pei said. "I know you always round up."

golf. When I get to Normal, there is going to be nothing else I am there for."

Daugherty said she believes last year's title winner will come through.

"Julie is on her way back," Daugherty said. "She is swinging a lot better. Just by pure guts it will pull her through."

The Salukis are no stranger to the ISU Golf Course. Last fall the Salukis played at the Illinois State Invitational where they picked up a seventh-place finish.

Team play will be a crucial factor for the Salukis if they hope to bring home a second consecutive Gateway title, Daugherty said.

"It is going to have to be everybody," Daugherty said. "We can't get up there and count a 90 and win. We play Illinois State's course well."

Daugherty said the stress of the tournament and dealing with final exams next week puts a lot on the golfer's minds.

"We miss a lot of class (two days) and there is a lot of stress there," Daugherty said. "It is a stressful time all the way around."

The Salukis have traveled with six golfers to each tournament this spring, but will take five to Normal, a change Daugherty said will make a difference.

"It puts a little pressure on you since we are the defending champs," Daugherty said. "All of a sudden we are counting four of five scores and realize there is only one score thrown out."

"We just have to go in and try to do or best. I know if we play to our potential, we can win the conference."

DeNoon taking three to Indiana tournament

By Paul Pabst
Staff Writer

With just a week until the Gateway Conference championship meet, the women's track squad will take just three athletes to Saturday's National Invitational in Indianapolis, Ind.

Coach Don DeNoon said the three athletes — Rosanne Vincent, Traci Davis and Beverly Klett — are going for specific reasons.

"Rosanne (800-meters) and Traci (100-meters) are going to see if we can qualify them for the NCAA's," DeNoon said. "Beverly (high jump) is going because she has been jumping well lately. I don't want her to slow down. Another weekend of competing should help her for conference."

The girls who miss this weekend's meet won't be relaxing according to DeNoon.

"They have the weekend off to study for finals and to get their papers done," DeNoon said.

Next week's conference championships will begin Thursday in Macomb.

picked anywhere from third to seventh, as most other schools could have been.

"I'd rather be seeded seventh and finish second than be seeded second and finish third."

"Just projecting outcomes, if we swept Indiana State, that's not going to do it. We have to do something against Illinois State, because more than likely Indiana State is going to take two from Eastern."

Indiana State travels to Eastern Saturday for a doubleheader.

The Sycamores come to Carbondale Friday with pitcher Debbie Styx, who struts a team-low 1.04 ERA with 88 strikeouts.

"We have seen Indiana State before and they've matured," said Brechtelsbauer. "They've come a long way since the beginning of the season. They've got strong pitching. Styx is getting the strikeouts."

Connie Fiems is the strongest hitter for the Sycamores. With a team high 41 hits and a .315 average, she is the only Sycamore hitting over .300.

Sycamore coach Tracy Johnson said in a press release, "It will be difficult going to a young Southern team at their home."

The Illinois State Redbirds will be in Carbondale Saturday. Lori (Day) Shoemaker, who pitched for the Salukis in 1986 before she married, leads the Redbirds on the mound with a team low ERA of 1.69.

"Lori Day is back (from a shoulder injury) and that strengthens their pitching tremendously," said Brechtelsbauer. "They still have an opportunity to overtake Western."

Freshman Cheryl Venorsky (.364), junior Shelly Gibbs (.345) and sophomore Mary Jo Firnbach (.301) enter this weekend's play with team high hitting averages. The trio has been consistent in the hitting column this season.

The Saluki's four-member pitching staff is led by sophomore Traci Furlow who has a team low 1.48 ERA, an 8-6 record and 31 strikeouts.

Woestendick, 6-2, 6-3. Finally, No. 6 George Hime nipped Tulsa's Robert Knapp, 6-7, 7-6, 6-4.

"Everybody was seeded away from the real tough players," coach Dick LeFevre said. "But don't take anything away from our guys. Getting all your players to the semifinals is a great accomplishment."

combinations of Aldana-Demetereo; Maule-Ramos and Martinez-Hime all saw victory in straight sets.

Wichita State claims slim lead in Missouri Valley

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

Wichita State, which saw its national ranking rise to No. 3 after winning three of four from SIU-C last weekend, has taken over the Missouri Valley driver's seat as teams enter the final week of conference play.

The Shockers (47-9, 9-5) have a tenuous hold on first. Their .643 winning percentage is only 18 points higher than the .625 of Indiana State (35-17, 10-6).

Missouri Valley notes

Third-place Creighton (34-20, 9-7) still has an outside shot at the regular season title. The Bluejays, who are one game out of first, must win at least three of four games at Wichita to have a chance.

The Wichita State-Creighton series is crucial to the outcome of the Valley race. In fact, Saturday's games will not be held as a strict double-header. The first game will be at 1 p.m., while the second game won't get underway until 7 p.m.

Indiana State's series against SIU-C (23-27, 5-11) in Terre Haute is equally important. For all practical purposes, the Sycamores are in a must-win situation.

Traditional rivals Illinois State (19-27, 7-9) and Bradley (30-17, 6-8) will play their four-game series in Peoria, even though the result has no bearing on the title.

The Wichita State-Creighton matchup will pit conference Pitcher of the Week Dan Smith of Creighton, against Player of the Week Mike McDonald of Wichita.

McDonald, who is hitting at a career-best .378 clip, had four home runs, three doubles, a triple and 17 RBIs last week. Smith, whose league-leading 93 strikeouts leads the conference, has an 8-4 record and a 1.64 earned run average.

Wichita, which is 24-5 at home, has won nine of the last 10.

Milestones

Dewey Kalmer, who is in his 10th season as Bradley's coach, captured his 306th victory with the Braves in the 5-4 win over Indiana State Coach Lew Hartzog said he was very pleased with the team's first day performance, and said a good round after today's 36 holes could give SIU-C a lock on fourth place.

Leckrone entered the final three holes at 1-under-par, but the rains came, causing the freshman to bogey twice. Leckrone shot rounds of 36 and 37 for his 73.

Other Saluki finishers: Dirk Klapprott 41, 37 for 78, Mike Cowen 40, 40 for 80, Mark Bellas 41, 39 for 80 and Britt Pavelonis 43, 39 for 82.

Exam finds blood clot in pitcher's shoulder

BOSTON (UPI) — Boston Red Sox pitcher Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, whose season was shortened last year by blood clots in his pitching shoulder, is suffering from a recurrence of the same problem, an examination revealed Thursday.

The new clot was confirmed by an angiogram test and an enzyme treatment was begun to dissolve the clot. The two previous clots were dissolved by similar treatments.

Boyd, 29, was put on the 21-day disabled list, retroactive to Tuesday.

The slender hurler returned early from a Red Sox road trip because of pain in his shoulder and numbness, which had also preceded the discovery of the other clots. Boyd was examined by team physician Dr. Arthur Pappas at the Massachusetts Medical Center in Worcester. The possibility of the clots recurring was known to Pappas and Boyd.

Two awards given to Saluki student-trainer

Deb Plummer, a three-year member of the women's basketball team, was named the winner of the Outstanding Undergraduate Physical Education Major Award and the Robert "Doc" Spackman athletic training award.

"She is a great example of a student-athlete," women's basketball coach Cindy Scott said. "She is extremely bright and mature."

Plummer is married to Paul Plummer and has a daughter Stephanie, 6-months.

Plummer has a 3.84 grade point average and has donated time to Special Olympics and participated in the Prairie State Games.

talking to himself in the locker room, but I imagine that we made him that way. He didn't have much to work with in those days. Yet, he loved a good fight and gave a lot to SIU."

Former Athletics Director Glenn "Abe" Martin played alongside Mr. Holder, and later was responsible for hiring him as a coach.

"He was very quick, extremely quick," Martin said. "He was an outstanding competitor who was always easy to get along with."

Mr. Holder got his bachelor's degree in 1935 and his master's from Indiana University in 1940.

He married Mary Wayman in 1934. She survives, along with four sons, a sister, a brother, and 11 grandchildren.

Mr. Holder was born April 18, 1911 to Ulysses and Cara (Hagler) Holder in Pomona Township, Jackson County.

A private burial will be held at Carbondale's Oakland Cemetery.

Salukis facing Indiana State

SIU-C finishes conference play

By Troy Taylor

Indiana State's baseball team is close, very close, to a Missouri Valley conference regular season title.

The Sycamores trail league-leading Wichita State by only 18 percentage points. Besides a Wichita sweep of Creighton, the only thing standing in Indiana State's way is the struggling SIU-C Salukis.

The Salukis, who have lost five straight games, take on the Sycamores in two doubleheaders Saturday and Sunday in Terre Haute.

Despite SIU-C's two disheartening losses to Austin Peay, Saluki coach Itchy Jones is taking heart in his team's inconsistency.

"With this ball club you don't know what will happen from day to day," Jones said. "How we played (against Austin Peay) is no indication of this weekend."

The Salukis are 23-30, while Indiana State is 35-17.

The Salukis are 23-30, while Indiana State is 35-17.

Indiana State was given a boost by a 5-4 victory over Bradley on Sunday.

"That was the game we needed to win in order to have a realistic chance at winning the regular season championship," Indiana State coach Bob Warn said.

Indiana State is led by senior second baseman Mitch Hannahs, an All-American candidate averaging .434. In the last 35 games, his average is .494.

Hannahs, in the midst of an 11-game hitting streak, leads the Missouri Valley in batting average.

The Sycamores have also gotten a boost of late from sophomore center fielder Jim Tanner. He bats ninth in the order, but this week he was 14 of 25 and had nine RBIs.

"Jimmy's always been a very positive young man as well as being a very hard worker," Warn said. "He just waited until he got his opportunity to play, and he's made the most of it."

The Sycamores have been victimized by injuries. They lost starter catcher David Larson to ligament damage in the right knee. Pitchers Andy Lumsdon, Steve Renard and Kevin Klingerman are out.

The Salukis will rely on center fielder Doug Shields, who has a .371 average, and red-hot catcher Matt Giegling, who is hitting .314.

Gateway play ends for softball

By Douglas Powell
Staff Writer

The Saluki softball team ends its Gateway Conference regular season this weekend with a doubleheader today at 3 p.m. against Indiana State and a doubleheader against Illinois State Saturday at noon.

Saluki Coach Kay Brechtelsbauer enters this weekend's play three wins away from becoming the first SIU-C women's coach to reach the 300-victory plateau.

Brechtelsbauer said it's nice personally to reach the 300-victory mark but she is more concerned about getting her team ready for the Gateway Conference Tournament.

Recent Gateway Conference standings put Illinois State, 10-2 in the league, in second place and Indiana State, 8-3 in the league, in third place. The Salukis rest in fourth with an 8-6 league record.

"We need three wins for us to finish high" in the final standings, Brechtelsbauer said. She describes the conference as tight.

"It's a guessing game," said Brechtelsbauer.

Regarding pre-season picks she said, "We could have been

The women's golf team is hoping something odd happens at the Gateway Conference championships this weekend.

Lisa Meritt, Anne Childress, Peggy Ellsworth, Lisa Johnson and Julie Shumaker will comprise the Salukis' conference squad.

Meritt is tied for second in the Gateway in scoring with an 81.3 average while Childress is sixth at 84.2.

"Lisa has a great shot at the individual championship," Daugherty said. "She hit a 76 at Illinois State in the fall and that has been her low all year. We've looked at her all year for leadership and to carry us."

Of the Salukis eight tournaments this year, well this spring," Daugherty said. "It will be close between Wichita State and us. They were probably the team to beat before one of their kids quit and got married."

Meritt has been team low in seven, with Childress claiming the other top spot.

"I want to get my average below 80," Meritt said. "Once I am in the No. 1 spot, I don't want to lose it."

Shumaker, who enters the tournament as the defending conference champion, has struggled this season. The junior will hit fifth for SIU-C and sports an 87.2 average. Shumaker said she is gearing up for the season finale.

"You can't go the whole season like I have and expect to score like I used to," Shumaker said. "I am out of the swing frame of mind, and I am not going to expect too much of myself."

"It is time to play some

Men's tennis team wins nine in first day of MVC year finale

Day one of the Saluki men's tennis squad's quest for a Missouri Valley Conference championship could be called a success.

It would be hard to call it anything else.

The Salukis won all six of their singles matches and their three doubles matches to stay even with Wichita State, who duplicated SIU-C's accomplishment.

No. 1 singles Joe Demeterco beat Drake's Sammy Baig, 6-0, 6-1. No. 2 Jairo Aldana shut out Drake's Tim Nash, 6-0, 6-0. No. 3 Mickey Maule topped Indiana State's Carl Smith, 6-2, 6-2. No. 4 Fabiano Ramos got past Bradley's Mark Syverud, 6-0, 6-3. No. 5 Jose Martinez beat Illinois State's Dan

SIU-C sits in fourth place at 311 following 18 holes, paced by a 73 by freshman Sean Leckrone, who is tied with two others for the top spot.

Basketball coach that broke racial barrier dies

By Troy Taylor

Lynn C. Holder, 78, who died Tuesday at his Carbondale home, is credited with being the first Southern Illinois Normal University basketball coach to give black players an opportunity to play for the Maroons.

Mr. Holder, a 1978 inductee of the SIU Sports Hall of Fame, was a highly-touted basketball and football player during the 1930s at SIU, where he would later coach men's basketball (1946-58) and golf (1958-76).

Harvey Welch Jr., vice president of student affairs and in 1952 the first black basketball player to earn a letter at SIU, was recruited by Mr. Holder.

"My mother made Lynn promise that if I came to SIU, that I would be a total member of the team. That I would be able to play where ever SIU played, that I wouldn't sit in the back of the bus.

"That man kept every promise to my mother. He is responsible for me completing school and learning the values and integrity that got me here. Not only did he start the influx of black basketball players, he treated you with dignity and respect."

Seymour Bryson, assistant to the president in charge of Affirmative Action and a 1956-59 letterwinner, said that Mr. Holder was always sensitive to the needs of the black athletes.

"Anytime when we went north to play, Lynn planned ahead so that we when stopped to eat or sleep, it would be at a place that would serve the whole team -- not just the white players," Bryson said.

In 12 years as the Maroons' basketball coach, Mr. Holder had a 176-123 record.

Rick Talley, author and a 1957-59 letterwinner, said that Mr. Holder effectively used humor as a teaching device.

"We had a lot of fun together, and Lynn was the reason," Talley said. "I can't remember a team that laughed so much together.

"We often caught Lynn
