Kuo Suggests Golden Rule To Cut Tension

An American policy consistent with meeting "the revolutionary tides that have shaken the minds of mankind" was advocated Friday night by Ping-Chia Kuo.

Speaking to summer graduates of SIU at McAndrew Stadium, the SIU professor of history outlined a "golden rule for reduction of tension."

A resourceful American policy must acknowledge the rising powers of the world, with its guiding principle "to promote harmony between our welfare and the welfare of others," Kuo said.

"...it is an act of foresight to help the newcomer who is capable of self-help," he declared.

The key to the policy's achievement, he continued, "is to attain that forthright measure of understanding which will put us on a basis of durable greatness, unassailable in our position and fearless of the verdict of history."

He recommended "a healthy and refreshing kind of realism" for America's discovery of "new avenues of creative action."

His theme called for recognition of realities including other nations' senses of independence.

He described America as in the center of three interlocking fronts, against Russia, emerging but undeveloped nations of Asia and Africa, and "bulging power blocs whose unsettling influences are only beginning to unfold themselves." He referred here to Communist China and a resurgent France.

American policy toward one area has effects in another, Kuo said, and he advised sound diplomacy...that lets a sense of justice speak for itself in the eyes of the entire world."

"Complex as the world is, the future holds great hope. The opportunity for accomplishment is as great as the need itself."

Needed - 1 Courageous Man

Three Southern Illinois University students are seeking a man with courage, the inclination to travel, an interest in treasures from sunken ships and $245.

If you qualify, contact Sam Mitchell.

Sam, his brother Mike and Jim Bertram are preparing for a trip to South Africa where they will don Scuba diving gear and search the hulls of ancient and not-so-ancient wrecks for most anything they might yield.

They have a map on which

I find the 8 week summer quarter much too short

I've found that in one class the 8 weeks is too much time....

and in my other class 11 weeks is too little time

Newspaper Workshop Draws Primary, High School Teachers

SIU's "Newspaper in the Classroom" workshop opened Monday with 17 registered.

The workshop is designed specifically for elementary and junior and senior high school teachers.

The purpose is to provide teachers an opportunity to learn effective techniques in the use of the newspaper as an instructional tool in the classroom.

Five members of the staff of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat will participate. Allan Merritt, an assistant city editor, will discuss the operation of the city desk Wednesday, Thursday, the Globe-Democrat's two state bureau chiefs will appear on the program. They are Jack Flach of the Jefferson City bureau and Marion R. Lynes of the Springfield bureau.

With them Thursday will be Hamilton Thornton, editor of the editorial page. He will discuss editorial writing.

The many and varied functions of a news editor will be described Friday by Martin Duggan, news editor.

The Missouri Press Association, Globe-Democrat and the SIU Department of Journalism are cooperating in the presentation of the workshop.

The course of study will include lectures, discussions and participation in a group project. Participants will receive one or more daily newspapers, a bibliography for background reading and a list of audio-visual aids, according to Howard R. Long, chairman of the Department of Journalism.

President, Mrs. Morris Fly To African Meeting

First Stop - Wiesbaden, Germany

President Delyte W. Morris and Mrs. Morris left Carbondale during the weekend for a trip to South Africa and visits to a number of universities and attendance at international conferences.

They left O'Hare Field in Chicago, Saturday and presently are in Wiesbaden, Germany where they will remain until Thursday.

From Wiesbaden they will go to Frankfurt and join their son Michael, who will arrive at Johann Wolfgang Goethe University there Thursday.

Skadden Speaks

To Youth Meeting

William E. Skadden, an educator for the Department of Mental Health in Springfield, Illinois, opened the second annual Youth World Program at SIU Monday evening.

Skadden addressed a group of selected high school juniors who are on campus for the five day leadership program.

Skadden is a widely known lecturer who is interested in promoting the nursing scholarship-grant program.

The Youth World Program is co-sponsored by the SIU Division of Technical and Adult Education and the SIU government department. The program is aimed to develop leadership and responsibility of individual citizens toward government.

The participants for the program are selected by local organizations in their home communities. Character, academic achievement, leadership qualities and interest in world affairs were criteria for selecting the delegates.

Trustees To Meet

The Southern Illinois University Board of Trustees will meet at 8:30 a.m. today in the conference room of the President's Office.

The Morris' will leave Frankfurt Thursday night and arrive at Johannesburg, South Africa, Friday morning. There they will visit a number of schools, including the University of the Witwatersrand and the University College at Fort Hare (Bantu).

The remaining days in August will find them in various cities in South Africa, and on Sept. 1 they will travel to Cape Town and visit the University of Cape Town.

After visits to Bulawayo, Livingstone, Kariba, Salisbury, and other provinces, they will arrive in Nairobi and Kenya Sept. 9 for the eighth General Assembly and ninth Technical Meeting of the International Union for the Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources at the Regional University of East Africa.

Data Processing Links Campuses

Electronic data processing and computing systems on Carbondale and Edwardsville campuses will be linked together with completion of equipment installation now underway.

John W. Hamblen, data processing director, said the connection will provide for exchange of data via telephone lines. The link will greatly expand the potential of present systems on both campuses.

The two campuses, 115 miles apart, have compatible computer systems although that at Carbondale has greater capacity. Magnetic tape units similar to those in use at Carbondale were added to the Edwardsville system last January.

The SIU computing equipment is used to assemble and maintain records on admissions, registration, grades, personnel, payrolls, curricula, budget and account figures, alumni and placement lists, and many other administrative records, Hamblen said, as well as for research and instruction.

Gudde Lectures, Demonstrates Dance As Communicative Art

The dance as a communicative art will be the theme of a lecture and demonstration Wednesday night at 8 p.m. in Southern Playhouse.

Janice Gudde, visiting lecturer in the dance on the summer staff of the Department of Physical Education for Women, will give the lecture. Students from her classes will present the demonstration.

Guest dancer for the occasion will be Bobbie Roan, junior student majoring in dance at the University of Wisconsin. Mrs. Margaret Clemens will be the accompanist, and lighting will be handled by William Lindstrom, a student from Tulsa, Okla.

Miss Gudde, a graduate of Central Missouri State College at Warrensburg, holds the master's degree from SIU and is working on her doctor of philosophy degree in the dance at the University of Southern California, where she taught dance last year.

She has studied under Angelloa Sartorio, Bella Lewitsky, Eugene Loring, Nasimi Kuni and Dr. Louis Ellfeldt.

Accounting Majors Lead Gain In Grads' Placement Salaries

Starting salaries for college graduates of 1963 who majored in accounting climbed 6.7 per cent over those of last year--the greatest gain reported for graduates of 11 key undergraduate fields and eight master's degree programs.

Accounting graduates drew beginning salaries as averaging $527 a month, according to Roye R. Bryant, director of the Placement Service.

Master's degree graduates in business administration with non-technical undergraduate degrees showed the highest rate of increase among the graduate group--6.3 per cent to $608.

Students majoring in technical fields for the bachelor's degree found starting salaries $25 higher than the previous year and averaging $595, Bryant said. Non-technical degrees brought salaries up $24 to an average of $500.

By major fields electrical engineering graduates received the top average offer, $607; aeronautical engineering grads $606, mechanical engineers $592 and chemical engineers $588.

These figures, Bryant said, were compiled from the year-end report on job recruitment from 91 selected colleges and universities from coast to coast, surveyed by the College Placement Council. The report was based on a study of beginning salaries made during 1962-63 to 20,122 male bachelor's degree candidates and 3,848 master's degree candidates.

2 From SIU Speak On College Housing

Two SIU housing officials last week presented papers at the 15th annual conference of the Association of College and University Housing Officers.

Addressing the delegates at the University of California's Los Angeles campus were J. Albin Yokie, coordinator of housing, and Harold L. Hakes, resident counselor at Thompson Point.

Yokie discussed the increasing role of universities providing an academic environment for students living off-campus. He also outlined the development of Southern's new off-campus housing regulations which go into effect in September.

Hakes told the ACUHO delegates his views on the counseling needs of on-campus students. He said residence hall counselors should work toward stimulating the students' academic growth, their social development and their self-understanding.

Also attending the conference was Guy J. Moore, assistant coordinator of housing at SIU. Moore served as assistant chairman of the display committee. The conference ended Aug. 8.

Jam Session, Beach Party Highlight Activities

A jam session and a beach party with exhibitions of wrestling and T'ai Chi Ch'uan highlight this week's activity at Southern

The jam session will begin in the Roman Room, University Center, at 8 p.m. Friday. A number of musicians have promised to sit in and such instruments as piano, organ, drums, bass, guitar, trombone and saxophone will be heard.

Any musician who would like to play has only to attend Friday with his instrument. A spokesman for the Activities Development Center said musicians may leave their instruments at the Center Friday and pick them up Saturday if they wish.

The beach party, with "International Folk Show" the theme, will feature folk music, records and marshmallows.

Participating in the wrestling exhibition will be Larry Kristoff, Ken Houston and two freshmen who have been state title contenders.

The T'ai Chi Ch'uan demonstration, exercises in muscle control, will feature Hilary Hsu.

The party will begin at 8:30 p.m. at Campus Beach.

The Activities Development Center also is planning a Muni Opera trip to St. Louis Aug. 24 for "Westside Story." A bus will leave the University Center at 4 p.m. that Saturday. Transportation and ticket to the show will be $2.

Wesley Foundation will sponsor a picnic and outdoor worship service at 6 p.m. today at the Foundation.

The regular Student Christian Foundation picnic will be held Thursday. Students will meet at the Foundation at 5 p.m.

Fall Enrollment Sets New Record

New student enrollment at SIU for the fall term is continuing well ahead of last year's figures. Nearly 800 more new students were admitted at the Carbondale campus by Aug. 1 than during the same period last year.

Figures issued this week by the admissions office show 3,833 new student applications were processed by Aug. 1 compared with 3,042 as of the same date last year. This does not include graduate students or re-entering students, according to Wilbur R. Venerable, acting director of admissions.

Pre-registration figures are also running ahead of last year. The 9,500 students completing sectioning by Aug. 1 is about 900 more than sectioned by this time last year, said Marion B. Treece, sectioning center director.

Enrollment applications are still arriving at his office, Venerable said. About 25 applications are being processed each day.

Two SIU Ag Men Write Articles

Two SIU agricultural economists have written articles in the Aug. issue of "Better Farming Methods", a magazine for farmers.

Walter J. Wills, chairman of the Agricultural Industries Department has written an article entitled "Keep Your Farm Credit Machinery in Repair" and David L. Armstrong, assistant professor of Agricultural Industries, discusses "How to Decide When to Expand".

Wills, a native of Beecher City, Ill., and former University of Illinois and Washington State University faculty member, joined the SIU School of Agriculture staff in 1956.

Armstrong came to the SIU School of Agriculture staff in 1962 from the University of California, Davis branch.

House Committee Gets Proposal For $11 Billion Tax Cut

WASHINGTON

Secretary of the Treasury Douglas Dillon presented a proposal for an $11 billion tax cut in two steps beginning Jan. 1.

He presented them at a closed meeting of the House Ways and Means Committee but declined to discuss them with newsmen. Other sources filled in some details.

Individual tax rates would range from 14 per cent on the first $500 of income to a 70 per cent top. The present range is 20 per cent on the first $2,000 to a top of 91.

Corporate taxes would be reduced from the present 52 per cent to 48.

It was understood the proposal is to put two-thirds of the individual cut into effect Jan. 1, the remainder a year later. This would mean a slightly smaller tax cut eventually than President Kennedy originally proposed, but probably a greater immediate reduction.

President Kennedy brought his two children and the family dog to the hospital Monday to visit Mrs. Kennedy.

They were brought to the hospital by helicopter. Mrs. Kennedy is recovering after the birth of a third child who lived less than two days.

ledge and participation of the players.

He was a witness in a $10 million suit against the Saturday Evening Post, which said the Georgia-Alabama game last fall was rigged.

Trippi said his squad was simply outplayed. He discounted charges that the game was rigged by Wally Butts, former athletic director at Georgia, and Coach Paul (Bear) Bryant of Alabama.

A Georgia player, Wally Williamson, testified that he saw no indication that Alabama knew what Georgia was going to do during the game.

Trippi said he called 90 per cent of Georgia's offensive plays during the game.

Butts is suing the magazine.

SEOUL, South Korea

An official of South Korea's military government defended as a necessary step the arrest of retired Lt. Gen. Song Yochan, a former premier and outspoken foe of military rule. Opposition leaders charged the arrest was politically inspired.

Retired Brig. Gen. Kim Hyungwook, director of the military junta's central intelligence agency, claimed Monday it was political pressure in the first place, which saved Song from prosecution in 1960.

WASHINGTON

A union official Monday described negotiating sessions on the railroad work rules dispute as going "mighty well."

"We're in direct negotiation with these people and this is good," A. F. Zimmerman, assistant grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers said. J. L. Shattuck, vice president of the Firemen's Brotherhood, said no definite proposal has been decided upon for presentation to today's meeting of 136 general chairmen of the union. "But we're trying to get something to put before them" he said.

James A. Hood, a Negro student who entered the University of Alabama, said Monday he will enter a hospital soon for a complete rest.

He withdrew from the university in the face of potential expulsion charges. He said he had been under pressure at the university and was suffering from physical and mental troubles.

He said he looks forward to reentering the university "after my recovery."

EAST ST. LOUIS

A bomb caused extensive damage in a Kroger supermarket in East St. Louis early Monday.

Extensive damage was caused by the blast, the ninth in a St. Louis area food store in the last six months. All the bombings have occurred after the stores were closed for the night. There have been no serious injuries.

EDWARDSVILLE

Leaders of carpenters unions and the Southern Illinois Builders Association met with federal mediators Monday in an effort to settle a two-week walkout at construction projects in the Madison-St. Clair counties area.

One of the major projects shut down is work on $8 million worth of buildings at the Edwardsville campus of SIU.

The building trades dispute spread to Centralia, where Iron Workers picketed a new $12 million state school for the mentally retarded.

BERLIN

Seven young East Germans, including three border guards, escaped to the West in a two-day period.

MOUNT VERNON, Ill.

The unexplained lights over Jefferson County and neighboring Wayne County dwindled to an early Monday.

The area passed a relatively peaceful weekend, in sharp contrast to three nights last week when residents of four counties reported countless unexplained lights in the night sky.

Three officials from Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, were present over the weekend to investigate the strange sightings.

Officials said they are not discounting the possibility of a prankster in an aircraft.

Rusk Asks Early Ratification Of Limited Test Ban Treaty

WASHINGTON

Secretary of State Dean Rusk Monday urged the Senate to ratify the limited nuclear test ban treaty.

He said it would slow the arms race without damage to the security of the United States. The treaty will help deter the spread of atomic weapons and will reduce the radioactive pollution of the planet, Rusk told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

He was the administration's leadoff witness in its drive for Senate approval of the pact.

In his prepared statement, he made no predictions as to where the treaty may lead in terms of future East-West relations. But, he said, "If the promise of this treaty can be realized, if we can now take even this one step along a new course, the frail and fearful mankind may find another step and another until confidence replaces terror and hope takes over from despair."

Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., committee chairman, said the members will call more witnesses this week. They will include all members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, officials of the Atomic Energy Commission and the Central Intelligence Agency.

In Albany, New York's Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller said the Senate should ratify the treaty but the United States must not be lulled into a costly letdown of Western military might.

Rockefeller said the treaty must be approved because "it has become the symbol of the hopes of peace of millions" and because "the prestige of the United States already has been solemnly committed."

Twenty Selected Holiday Essays Have Something Important To Say

Party of Twenty, Edited and with an introduction by Clifton Fadiman. New York: Simon & Schuster, 1963. $4.50. 252 pp.

Clifton Fadiman selected twenty essays from Holiday Magazine for inclusion in this volume. If, like me, you do not subscribe to Holiday, these essays will give you an incentive to do so, for they all stimulate thought and all of them have as their primary purpose the entertainment of the reader.

Clifton Fadiman, who writes a column called "Party of One" for Holiday, pretends that the familiar essay still has a lively existence and proudly presents these twenty examples as proof. I shall not quarrel with him.

I have an idea that only now and then has a man developed a special talent for this special genre. I have another idea that the concept of the familiar essay changes with the times as with the individual.

And I have yet a third idea (Three in one day! Whoops!) that no Addison or Goldsmith or Lamb or Stevenson or Chesterton nor anyone even much resembling these great masters of the familiar essay will grace the literacy scene in future generations.

For the author of the familiar essay must be an individual with an individual point of view, a set of values (call them biases if you like), and a style all his very own. He may be a sedulous ape in learning how to write; but when

We live in thoughtful times when serious problems beset our intellectuals and throw them out of gear for the graceful, chaffy, circuitous sort of writing.

Not many can achieve such indifference or temporary suspension of concern as did Thurber and E.B. White. In the meantime we find this "Party of Twenty" a close approximation.

Even so, the authors of these twenty do their level best to make us think. They argue, they protest, they deplore, they regret. The genuine familiar essay does none of these.

Just look at some of these titles: "Religious Revival and Delinquent Youth," "The Oppressed Emancipated Woman," "The Triumph of Rudeness," "Judges and Witnesses."

Sound a bit serious, do they not? as if they wanted to change our minds? or to bring home to us certain truths?

In spite of this reservation on my part, all these essays represent solid entertainment, all delight us with their excellence of expression, all have something important to say.

Come to think of it, this latter quality represents precisely the reason they fall short as familiar essays. Instead of trying to teach us something or other, they should leave our little minds alone.

We have been lucky to have James Thurber and E.B. White in our time. Both have spun sheer magic out of little or nothing; or so they have made it appear.

Twenty years or so ago E. B. White wrote a 5,000-word essay "Death of a Pig" which had this magical quality in superb abundance. No one, neither Lamb nor Bacon nor Stevenson, excelled it for its sublimity and enchantment.

Dull Reminiscences, Amusing Anecdotes Of Newspapermen

Hawkins Of The Paris Herald, Eric Hawkins and Robert N. Sturdevant, Hawkins Of The Paris Herald, New York: Simon and Schuster, 1963. pp. 284.

Proth and kegs of beer in the newsroom. Echoes of Toulouse-Lautrec in left-bank bistros. Fringes of yesterday's headlines--Lindbergh's landing after the first solo hop of the Atlantic.

These are the nostalgic and long-gone days over which Eric Hawkins presided for 36 years as managing editor of the Paris Herald, the expatriate gamin of James Gordon Bennett Jr. Essentially superficial and trivial, this book is a little sad and silly, just like so many of the dead and dull reminiscences of old newspapermen, weeping in their beer over old stories long-forgotten.

Oh, it's true that a few amusing anecdotes pop up in the pages, but mostly it's an outdated gossip column, from the scatological self-inflicted exile of Bennett to the saloon beat of Art Buchwald. Probably there's never been a book with a higher percentage of name-dropping. The index lists the Aga Khan, Josephine Baker and her bunch of bananas, Nadia Boulanger, Whit Burnett, Georges Carpentier, and so on and on.

All the bar and bordello heroes of the '20's take their brief bows, along with their poufes, famous and infamous.

Here is exhibited once again the adolescent affinity of press and prostitute, the first and second oldest professions. One wonders how Hawkins and his staff ever managed to get out a paper!

ing money. They moved in and out, to obscurity or fame.

I don't think it's the competitive jealousy of this reviewer which produces the conclusion that the Paris Herald was never much of a newspaper. From across the Atlantic, I served in New York City as cable editor for the Paris Tribune, filing my three thousand words a day just as, a block away, another newsman pounded out a similar summary for Hawkins. In all honesty, neither paper produced much first-class copy although both served as advertising sheets for all the spas and resorts which bought space simultaneously in editorial puffs and ad copy.

If you're old enough to remember (and want to), this potpourri of Pound (Ezra) and Pershing (Gen.) may produce a few twinges. But mostly it's an exhibition of journalistic folly and the absurd flings of adult delinquents abroad.

Madison Avenue Is Target Of Author's Barbed Pen

Henry Beetle Hough, The Port, New York: Atheneum Publishers, 1963. $4.50, 241 pp.

Henry Beetle Hough's satire inevitably invites comparison with the work of John P. Marquand. Both are New Englanders with sympathetic insight of Yankee character. Both are proud of their New England heritage.

Marquand's protagonists are the bluebloods of Back Bay Boston. Hough's are the salty, down-to-earth descendants of the seafaring men who sailed the clipper ships.

The target of the co-editor of the "Vineyard Gazette" in his latest story is what he calls "the new barbarism." More specifically, the target is Madison Avenue.

"You can't beat the all-around dollar smartness of a Yankee," the author insists in the opening line of his story and to prove his point he offers Solon Ridgeley, whose dealings make David Harum look like a bumbling amateur.

Narrator of the ensuing battle of wits between Ridgeley and two Madison Avenue practitioners is Whit Fifield, a native of the former whaling port which is Ridgeley's theater of operations. Whit, who decided he preferred clamming to advertising after a brief sojourn in Madison Avenue, obviously is qualified to evaluate both viewpoints.

The plot which provides the launching pad for Mr. Hough's thrusts at pragmatism involves the scheme of two summer residents of the sleepy port to transform its unspoiled quality into a yacht club-marina-motel enterprise. Ridgeley, as the readereasily guesses, owns most of the ocean front, and the hay rights, clay rights, riparian rights and a majority of the stock in Star of Hope Society, an abandoned Methodist missionary outpost for sailors.

What the city slickers never discover until it is too late is that Ridgeley's devious dealings are inspired not so much by greed as by the innate Yankee trait of wanting to outwit a rival in a horse trade. By the time the Madison Avenue promoters retire in confusion, the author's gentle satire has made his case convincingly for old fashioned morality.

This is not as serious a book as his earlier novel, "Lament For a City," but it makes intriguing reading. The only false note is his narrator's illicit romance with the wife of one of the Madison Avenue promoters. "The Port" is the second novel and the fifteenth book to come from the pen of the man who has been co-editor with his wife of the Vineyard Gazette in Edgartown, Martha's Vineyard, Mass., since 1920.

Theologian Seeks Meaning Of Existence In Study Of Bible And History

Reviewed by the Rev. Roy Griebel, Church of the Good Shepherd

Christ and History by George Buttrick (Abingdon Press, 1963, 176 pages)

In this book, a great preacher of New York's Madison Avenue and of Harvard University Church turns theologian to ferret out the meaning of this existence, which men call life.

Dr. Buttrick definitely aligns himself with the increasing number of twentieth-century theologians known as the Heilsgeschichte or Salvation History school. This means that only the biblical view of history can give any kind of meaning to life.

It appears evident that to some degree the book is written as a refutation of two other commonly accepted views of history: (1) the cyclical concept espoused particularly by the English historian, Arnold Toynbee, and (2) the progress concept that education will surely lead us to a utopian life, as sponsored by many modern educators and sociologists.

Buttrick's view of these two ideas can be best expressed in his own words:

"History is not cyclic. If it were, men would not be men; they would be only more complex squirrels in a squirrel cage....

"History is not necessarily progress. If it were, once again men would not be men, for by that doctrine we would be only dummes riding an escalator." (p. 135)

This example is typical of the language of the author. It is forthright and alive.

The style of the book is certainly refreshing. One may not agree with the author's thesis, but there can be no doubt but that he probes deeply into the meaning of history and of man.

In summary of Dr. Buttrick's biblical view of history, the first word is DIALOGUE--between the Creator and the human creature (p. 127). The next and central facet in the meaning of history is PIERCING EVENT--the Christ event (p. 129).

But still beyond this stands the third key idea--RESURRECTION (p. 132). Thus we are led to the final conclusion that man can understand himself and that history finds meaning ONLY in an act of faith (p. 155).

"History is the time being, we have heard the glad tidings, and travel in expectation, and await the destined Word." (p. 158)

Inside Europe:

Socialist Sweden Leaves Visitor Cold, Denmark, Norway Display More Zest

EDITOR'S NOTE

Marian E. Ridgeway, SIU associate professor of government who is currently traveling in Europe, has taken a dim view of what socialism has brought to Sweden.

In recent letters Miss Ridgeway discussed some of her experiences and impressions while visiting in Sweden and other European countries. Excerpts from those letters follow:

"After four hours of wandering through modern shops today, I returned to my hotel full of dismay and shock. The much-touted Swedish products of stainless steel, glass, wood and furniture have a machine-turned, mass-produced look about them--a far cry from the fresh designs of a decade ago. In fact, there is no new design emerging from Sweden today....."

"Almost everything is 'ersatz'--synthetic materials, poorly dyed, with stamped designs of a standardized sort. The only sweaters available were of Norwegian, Italian or French creation and, of course, were strictly luxury goods. All of this was in marked contrast to Copenhagen, where beautiful and luxurious goods abound, hand-crafted and made with obvious pride in workmanship.

"There is something dead about Sweden; one senses it at every turn. No one smiles, no one seems to enjoy life. We were told by one of our Swedish guides that the average Swede is taxed 85 per cent of his income, for which he gets free schools, medical care, day nurseries and the like, plus old age maintenance. But a young couple must wait about four years for an old two-room apartment. If there are two or more children, the wait is about three years. For a new apartment, one must wait 10 years. The government allocates them.

"We were also told that there has been a great increase in drunkenness and that few Swedes feel any incentive to do anything creative or to advance themselves. It seems apparent.

"Stockholm, however, is a beautiful city due to its being situated on lakes and islands. The old buildings give it its chief attraction, but these are pre-socialism and are falling into disrepair. The palace, for example, is empty except for King Gustaf's Museum. The great new, modern apartments rise on every side, steel and glass and shining, but made of concrete and with little ornamentation except exterior porches for each apartment, and some use of color.

"However one shouldn't damn a country or a people on brief, first impressions alone. And the spirit of a place in a most intangible thing, highly subjective and colored sometimes by the viewer's moods of the moment."

"As I've covered a bit more territory, I've been able to make some comparisons of what I've seen and heard, and on the whole I've been very impressed with Holland and Denmark, and considerably impressed with Norway. The reasons vary somewhat with each country, but it mostly adds up to the external evidences one sees on all sides of energy, friendliness, hard work and industry, pride of a personal sort, and a consciousness of what is beautiful--whether it is the neatness and cleanliness of Dutch farms, the obvious excellence of Danish farming, the fine craftsmanship of Danish and German goods, or British rose gardens.

"Now, behind the neatness of Dutch farms and towns lies a need, just as some kind of pressing, urgent need seems to lie behind anything that is well done. For instance, the Dutch have to keep back the waters of the sea, they have to make every square inch count, and they have to obtain the maximum return for the few commodities their little land can produce. The same kind of thing applied to the Danes and the Norwegians. Limited resources, but maximum use, which means maximum care as well.

"The Swedes, on the other hand, are hard to explain. They not only have more land surface, but their land is productive; it reminded me of Wisconsin and Minnesota. Furthermore, towns like Eskilstuna and Linkoping and Karlstad were all clean, neat, demonstrating what appeared to be a higher standard of living than British towns--or even Dutch and Danish towns, and they were beautiful, too.

"Again it seemed to me to be a difference of spirit one encountered. Generally, it revealed itself in the goods of the stores, in the alcoholism which one sees very much evidence of in Stockholm, and the things we heard about socialistic controls.

"But it's a tough thing to draw any absolute conclusions. For if you see a machine-produced society in Sweden, you can also see some of it everywhere else, including very much including Good Old U.S.A. And Holland has just as much cheap goods and clothing on display as they have of good things. The difference is: They seemed to display everything with more zest and warmth and interest than the Swedes did.

Lean Reports On Revisions In Scandinavian Schools

"During the past few years all Scandinavian countries have passed acts to reorganize their school systems," said Arthur Lean, Dean of the SIU College of Education.

"The new pattern of Scandinavian education is on the order of American education." Lean recently returned from a tour of Scandinavia where he took part in a Comparative Study of Scandinavian and American Educational systems.

"They are aiming at more education for more people with emphasis on the comprehensive secondary school," commented Lean, "Before the government passed these acts, the children would be divided after a few years of schooling into vocational training or continued academic education.

"These changes are not being done without opposition, especially from the conservatives who believe this will lower their educational standards," said Lean.

"But there are those who realize that in the old system a lot of potential ability was lost by dividing the children into two groups."

"All the Scandinavian countries are striving for mass education, although they are not all moving at the same speed," he added.

Norway, Sweden, Finland, Denmark, and Ireland are the countries Lean toured. In these countries he visited schools at all levels and special schools. He met with the administrators and teachers of these schools.

About 20 American educators took part in the comparative study.

Lean remarked that the trip was so successful that it was proposed that Scandinavian educators come to America next year to visit American schools and educators.

Lit Doing Vision Research Under NSF Study Grant

If you've had trouble lately telling just how far you were from the head of that long line in the cafeteria, you better see an eye doctor.

But if you are also interested in finding out why, you might talk to Alfred Lit, professor of psychology.

Lit, an established specialist in the field of depth discrimination, has been studying the question at SIU. He is working under grants totaling $67,000 from the National Science Foundation, the Public Health Service (National Institute of Mental Health), and the State of Illinois Department of Mental Health.

The main concern of Lit's research is the effect of conditions of illumination on "binocular space preception." Involved is the intensity and wave length of the light; both stationary and oscillating targets are used under all conditions of illumination.

"We have very good results for the first year, which will result in a possible five publications," said Lit. "New data confirms the Duplicity theory of vision, which postulated the existence of rods and cones in the retina."

Lit also stressed the importance of the training program conducted in conjunction with his research. So far, "at least a dozen" graduate students in psychology and other fields relating to vision have been trained in the many phases of the science of vision (study of vision as the physical organ and its response to a stimulus).

"It is my hope to train a hard-core of students in this field, which is so vital to adaptation and survival," he said. "The Psychology Department is now able to offer a Ph.D. in this field."

Lit is also a member of the Armed Forces National Research Council-Committee on Vision, a group of men from all phases of the study of vision. This Committee encourages research in vision, and also serves as a reference board for the military.

"The armed forces are obviously interested in vision, because so many of their armaments depend on human vision," he said.

The committee, formed in 1944, is sponsored jointly by the Army, Navy, Air Force, Federal Aviation Agency, and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Air Force Gets New Lieutenants

Seven SIU students became second-lieutenants in the U.S. Air Force during a commissioning ceremony in the University Center Ballroom Friday.

They were sworn in by Col. George H. Blase, professor of air science and commander of the SIU A. F. R. O. T. C. department.

Speaking before approximately 50 relatives and friends, Col. Blase said:

"We're happy to have another commissioning ceremony. We don't have a very large group but what this group lacks in quantity, they make up for in quality."

"For some of them, this has been a real long pull to arrive at graduation and commissioning time. Its the end of the training period and the beginning of a career."

"We hope that these officers will find the Air Force what they hoped it to be and that this will be the beginning of a long and rewarding Air Force career."

Following the ceremony the new officers began their four years of duty by receiving their first assignments.

The new officers and their assignments are Donald H. Blessing, pilot training; Franklin A. Demonsi, navigator training at James Connally AFB, Texas; William J.

Balle, Strategic Air Command information officer; Jon L. Geerlings, pilot training;

William R. Lemen, accounting and finance officer for the Military Air Transport Service; James N. Wegner, information officer at Arnold Engineering Development Center, Tullahoma, Tenn, and Lawrence E. Wagy, pilot training.

Chicago Bears Drop Harmon

ITHACA, N. Y.

Dennis Harmon, SIU football player, has been cut by the Chicago Bears in his bid for a pro berth.

Harmon was last season's Most Valuable Player and was playing in the defensive backfield for the Bears in their training camp. He was playing with the second defensive backfield and had replaced an injured halfback on the squad.

The Associated Press reported six rookies were dropped by the Bears and said Harmon plans to return to SIU. Owner-Coach George Halas said Dennis Andrews, an end from Virginia, and Bobby Marshall, a linebacker from Virginia Union, have joined the Wheeling, W. Va., team of the United League.

Larry Coleman, a guard, and Woody Moore, a defensive back, have returned to Indiana to complete work towards their degrees. Ken Thomas of Grambling, a tackle, also left the team.
