Panama opposition reports irregularities

PANAMA CITY. Panama (UPI) — Hundreds of thousands of Panamanians voted for new civilian leaders Sunday in a national election seen as a referendum on the de facto rule of military leader Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

As soon as the polls closed the opposition immediately denounced a series of alleged irregularities.

In San Jose, Costa Rica, the Argentine polling firm American Political Analyst released preliminary results of an exit poll it conducted in Panama City showing the opposition presidential and vice presidential candidates were leading by 55.1 percent to 39.5 percent.

The government banned the publication of partial or unofficial results in Panama. Authorities said first official results would not be available before midnight, and the government ordered all business activity suspended Monday "to ensure the calm needed" by vote counting officials.

Opposition leaders held a news conference shortly after the polls closed and alleged that voting ballots for opposition parties were used up quickly and blamed Electoral Tribunal officials for delays in obtaining new ballots.

Opposition vice presidential candidate Ricardo Arias Calderon charged that even in the largest urban areas of Panama, party ballots were not replaced promptly.

Arias also cited many cases where opposition supporters found their names had disappeared from voting lists and one case of a dead person who voted in the Atlantic province of Colon.

At a school in the middle-class neighborhood of Bepania, opposition poll watchers said about 80 people tried to vote more than once, using improper documents.

Brewster fund to aid Foundation

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

The SIU Foundation will receive $18,750 for the next 15 years through unrestricted use of the Clyde and Bessie Brewster Endowment fund.

Foundation President Rex Ball announced the gift at a press conference Friday with Bessie Brewster at his side.

The late Clyde Brewster, who served on the SIU

Foundation board for 10 years, provided for the endowment in his will. Brewster died March 16, 1988.

He was a Herrin businessman and a leader in Herrin's industrial development.

The endowment is structured through a charitable lead trust that benefits both the charity and the contributor's heirs.

The interest from the fund goes to the organization for a period of time not to exceed 20 years. At the end of the time period, the money goes back into the estate for the heirs.

The $281,250 fund is the largest unrestricted endowment received in University history.

"Unrestricted use is the hardest kind of dollars to raise," Ball said.

Hill House's fate in the hands of City Council

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

Hill House residents need a new home. Without City Council approval, they won't be able to move to Park Street.

The young adult substance abuse center will lose its license in 1991 because of new state standards that put the present building below mandated space requirements.

Under the new standards, the Hill House does not have enough beds or living space for the residents it houses.

Hill House would like to relocate along Park Street but a special-use permit is required because the land is zoned for agriculture use.

The City Council heard testimony from Hill House staff and residents and Park Street neighbors at its meeting May 2 but agreed to postpone a decision until it had more information.

The city has received about 100 signatures in petition against Hill House locating on Park Street. The main concern, neighbors said, is public safety.

But the council also has received letters of support from State Sen. Ralph Dunn, R-Du Quoin, Jackson County State's Attorney W. Charles Grace and University professors and administrators.

"Hill House is not a prison," executive director Malisa Janes told the council Tuesday night. "It's not a haven for criminals."

The center was established in 1972 and houses 40 residents with 20 candidates on a waiting list.

The residents range in age from 14 to 19. Adolescents with mental problems or a history of criminal activity are not accepted into the program.

In the present facility, the teenagers live in dorm-like rooms and attend school in the Carbondale Cablevision and its electronic monitor, Sniffer II, catch an average of 10 people per week who have illegally connected to cable television, Cablevision Chief Technician Francis Addison, said.

Sniffer II, a device used to track down violators, works like a metal detector, sounding off an alarm when it detects a leaking cable signal, usually the result of a tampered line.

The device can be used within a worker's truck, or through battery power, can be carried around apartment complexes or neighborhoods to pinpoint the exact violation.

A person convicted of tampering with a cable television system is guilty of a Class A misdemeanor and could be fined up to $500.

Addison said if getting into the connection box results in more than $300 worth of damage, then a felony charge can be filed.

However, Cablevision, with a little more than 4,900 subscribers, only prosecutes the people who have undoubtedly tampered with the system or who are repeat offenders.

Thus, the first offense

Iran president endorses Rafsanjari as successor

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) — President Ali Khamenei endorsed Ali-Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjari as his successor Sunday two days after the Parliament speaker urged Palestinians to attack Westerners in retaliation for slayings in the Israeli-occupied territories. The endorsement by Khamenei, considered a moderate in the Iranian leadership, was made in a sermon to hundreds of thousands at a prayer gathering in Tehran marking the end of the Moslem holy month of Ramadan.

Missing Israeli soldier found dead in grave

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — The body of an Israeli soldier missing for nearly three months was found Sunday in a shallow grave less than a mile from where he was believed abducted, the army said. About 10 miles away, hundreds of soldiers and paramilitary police searched for a second soldier last seen Wednesday getting into a car. Both soldiers were on leave and hitchhiking home from their bases when they apparently were kidnapped.

Four youths wounded in Irish demonstration

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — British soldiers fired plastic bullets into a crowd of demonstrators Sunday, wounding four youths who took to the streets on the eighth anniversary of the death of an Irish Republican Army hunger-striker, police said. Authorities also said back-to-back bomb attacks over the weekend — one of them the IRA — wounded nine British soldiers.

Fed, state aid to city governments declining

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal and state aid to city governments has declined to the lowest level since 1967, providing only about 20 cents of every municipal revenue dollar in fiscal 1986-87, the Census Bureau said Sunday. By contrast, in the mid-1970s, federal and state aid to city governments rose to a high of 32 cents of each dollar in city revenues, the bureau said.

Agents put in banks to flush out drug money

WASHINGTON (SHNS) — Federal investigators suspect that hundreds of bank employees are involved in laundering drug money and have put undercover agents into some of the nation's largest banks to flush them out. Law enforcement officials said the undercover agents pose as bank employees and also as criminals with drug money to launder. Billions of dollars in cash from illegal drug sales pass through the banks each year.

Official 'skeptical' on Bush's Iran-Contra role

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of a special committee that investigated the Iran-Contra affair, said Sunday he is still "skeptical" about President Bush's assertion that he never helped the Reagan administration illegally supply rebels fighting the Nicaraguan government. In an interview with NBC's "Meet the Press," Hamilton insisted that his committee never got the full story in its investigation into the secret White House plan to sell arms to Iran and divert profits from those sales to the Nicaragua Contras despite a congressional ban on aiding the rebels.

Baker to meet second time with Shevardnadze

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State James Baker, hoping to move U.S.-Soviet discussions beyond traditional areas of arms control and human rights, heads to Moscow early Monday for his second meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze. Baker also is scheduled to meet Thursday with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, possibly to discuss a U.S.-Soviet summit later this year.

Celebrity items to be auctioned for theater guild

By Kathleen DeBo
Staff Writer

What do Paul McCartney, Jon Bon Jovi, Mel Gibson, Bob Hope, Carol Burnett and Alan Alda have in common? They are all coming to Southern Illinois — by proxy.

Autographed photos, scripts and other celebrity items will be auctioned off at 7 tonight in the Laboratory Theater of the Communications Building.

The Celebrity Auction and Fundraiser, to benefit the the Student Theater Guild and the Theater Department, will feature a performance by the Gig Street Improvisational Group before the bidding begins.

Micki Bunting, committee chairperson for the auction, said the money raised will help fund theatrical productions and scholarships for students who work in the guild.

BUNTING SAID the guild wrote letters to celebrities.

"We asked for a costume, prop or whatever they could think of. A lot of these people will never come to the Midwest. We were hoping to bring a part of them here, to add a little spice, and to help keep arts alive and thriving in the Midwest," Bunting said.

Sir John Gielgud sent a check for a "generous" amount, Bunting said. The check cannot be auctioned, but it may be displayed, she said.

Paul McCartney sent a hardback book, a collection of his wife's photos and a paperback collection. Mary Tyler Moore sent an autographed script from one of her shows.

Many of the celebrities sent autographed photos, Bunting said.

"Mel Gibson sent an autographed photo. I really want to get that one," she said.

BOB HOPE, Raquel Welch, Chevy Chase and Linda "Wonder Woman" Carter all sent autographed pictures and NBC Sports sent a bag. Jack Lemmon sent a signed keychain.

Jon Bon Jovi autographed a T-shirt to be auctioned and Carol Burnett sent an autographed scarf and picture. Ed McMahon sent his signed autobiography.

Alan Alda sent an autographed "M.A.S.H." script and Tesla signed a drum pad for the event. Joan Biaz sent an autographed program from her North American tour.

Local businesses also donated items, including a dinner from Frankie's and Saluki coffee mugs from Saluki Sports Center.

IT MIGHT be easy for celebrities to autograph their photos, but it was not easy to get all the donations together, Bunting said.

Scott West, president of the guild, said he suggested the auction last year, but there was not enough interest then.

"It has been hard this year, too. The biggest problem was the large number of 'return to senders,'" he said.

Bunting said the guild wrote to almost 300 celebrities in the fall and had planned for a February auction.

"A lot of letters were sent back because stars had moved to another address," she said.

BUNTING SAID the auction had to be rescheduled because of the lack of response by Christmas break.

"We had to do it between shows, so it ended up in finals week," she said.

The auction, which will have limited seating for about 100, will have a minimum bid and will be student run, Bunting said.

"We didn't want an auctioneer. We wanted this to be totally student run," she said.

A break will be provided after the Gig Street performance.

New DE editors making plans for improvement

Two students who have been named editors for the summer and fall semesters at the Daily Egyptian have a wish list of things they want accomplished.

Kimberly Clarke and Beth Clavin were named student editor for the summer and fall semesters, respectively.

Clarke, junior in journalism from Quincy, said she plans to pursue a career in the news-editorial profession and also has an interest in the political aspects of the media. Clarke said her position as student editor will give her an idea of how to manage a paper, she said.

and make it the best it can be,"

Kimberly Clarke

Clarke said. "I'd like to see better coverage of campus activities and less errors."

Clarke also wants reporters to become more familiar with their beats and contact sources in person rather than on the telephone.

Clarke has worked at the newspaper for five semesters, two of which were spent in the classified advertising department. Her experience in advertising will help her communicate with dissatisfied people she may encounter in her new position, she said.

Challenges facing Clarke will include a relatively inexperienced staff, with eight of the 25-member news staff newly hired.

Clavin, senior in journalism from Rosemond, will assume her position in August.

Clavin intends to re-establish rapport with University officials by improving accuracy in the paper.

"We've lost some of that in the past because of our inaccuracy," she said. "I want reporters to cover all aspects of an issue, and from both sides, in an objective manner."

Clavin, associate student editor this semester, also wants to help inexperienced reporters become more organized so they are able to cover their beats more effectively.

Clavin says she wants to eventually work in the newspaper or magazine area of journalism after graduation.

Administrative job will make contacts

FOR ONCE, NEW positions in the University's central administration seem in the best interest of the University and the students.

With the retirement of Vice Chancellor James Brown, a new position will replace his — executive assistant to the chancellor for external relations.

Granted, the title sounds like so much jargon, but the job, if it follows the description, will be a great benefit.

The position was created to increase and strengthen governmental relations in Washington, D.C., and Springfield. The executive assistant also will support the chancellor in corporate and foundation relations.

This position will be important, especially now because of the dire need for a tax increase to bail out education in Illinois. The 1990 and 1992 elections will not be likely to produce candidates in favor of a tax increase.

THE CHANCELLOR SAID in a recent newsletter that the University needs to gather all the resources possible "to enable us to deal swiftly and efficiently with any unpredictable twists and turns the legislative process may take during this crucial session, to see that our interests are protected."

The new position also will be useful in keeping contacts in Chicago. And because SIU is a university that reaches statewide, it needs to expand its political base to stay competitive.

The University already is on its way to meeting these goals. A permanent Chicago office has been opened to intensify relations with the state's corporate, political and media leaders.

CHANCELLOR LAWRENCE K. Pettit recently was appointed to the Board of Directors of the Illinois Coalition by Gov. James R. Thompson.

The Coalition will identify specific projects and targets of opportunity, and attempt to bring them to Illinois.

Being on the board will give Pettit strong political and corporate contacts and should be a great asset to the University.

Other University administrators also have been appointed to various boards.

If they all use their connections wisely and don't let these appointments interfere with their positions at the University, the future of SIU should be brighter and richer.

Opinions from elsewhere

Scripts Howard News Service

Ralph Nader likes to think of himself as a champion of the little guy. That makes it difficult to understand his promotion of a boycott of Exxon products, which mainly will hurt the littlest guys in the corporation's business structure.

Nader's Public Interest Research Group and five other consumer and environmental organizations called for the boycott to punish Exxon for the huge spill of oil off Alaska from a company tanker that ran aground. They called the firm "a polluter without equal."

The chances of the boycott hurting Exxon financially is relatively small. One oil analyst pointed out that any loss of sales through Exxon retailers could be made up by the company in sales to dealers who sell gas under some other name but are supplied by Exxon.

The ones who would be hurt most if the call for a boycott keeps motorists from buying Exxon-labeled products are about 12,000 filling station owners who sell Exxon gas, and the many other thousands of attendants who work for them. There are about 12,400 Exxon stations throughout the country but only about 5 percent of them are actually owned and operated by the corporation; the rest are in the hands of small-business entrepreneurs.

The financial effect aside, the boycott is misguided on other grounds. To be sure, Exxon was ill-prepared to contain the Alaska spill, but the company is not alone in that regard. What other oil company currently is equipped to handle a spill of that size? The state of Alaska also was ill-prepared; so was the U.S. Coast Guard.

Exxon also can be criticized for putting in charge of the tanker a man with a history of drinking problems. But it might be pointed out that a pot-smoking Conrail engineer caused a railroad accident a couple of years ago in Maryland, which resulted in 16 deaths, but no one suggested boycotting Conrail for hiring the man.

The Alaska spill, bad as it was, was no Chernobyl. Exxon rightly should pay for the damage it has caused and for the cleanup and should be required to take steps aimed at preventing a similar occurrence in the future. But motorists ought to ignore corporation-basher Nader's call for a boycott.

Return football to its glory days

Some have argued that the Oppose and Abolish Football Sorts (OAFS) need to be countered on logical grounds, and I agree they can and will be. But there is also a legitimate emotional side to the issue.

Any major university worth its salt has its traditions. They can be unique or common; they can be "good" or "bad." Some, like Halloween, should probably not have been established in the first place; after attempts to control it have failed, it should be eliminated.

Others, like the Cardboard Boat Regatta should be maintained and improved, as this year's changes have demonstrated. As an alumnus and a long-time dedicated Saluki football fan, I believe football is more like the Regatta than Halloween.

We need more of these wholesome kinds of traditions, not less. I think all the parents considering sending their children to college would much rather have the image of them going to a traditional college football game on a fall Saturday than going to a marijuana smoke-in as was recently shown in local papers.

In order to build loyalty and a desire to subsequently support the university, there must be more than just academics to a college education. There must be emotional, social, entertainment, and various other developmental experiences too.

We must be more than a sterile academics-only institution, otherwise we could pave over all the trees, grass and lakes, cancel all concerts and non-academic events, erect one huge building, and close everything down each weekend.

We must give these young people an opportunity for a total experience that molds them as a whole person; we want them to leave here not only technically prepared, but happy and grateful for the time and money they spent here.

Ironically, the less the state does its duty in providing adequate funding for its own public universities, the more we become dependent on building Saluki pride and a corresponding willingness to give monetary support in our current and future alums.

The respected and former head of our alumni association correctly noted that we are an old institution but a young university which needs to establish and cherish good traditions.

I couldn't agree more. Who took away our precious cannon anyway? It was one of the very few "good" traditions we had here: it was repainted regularly, even tarred and feathered once, polka dotted once; it even had a children's book written about it. Put it back!

Now the OAFS want to take away our football program? We've been playing in the same place since 1913! In 1930 we had an undefeated team. In 1967 we pulled one of the greatest upsets in football history, beating 18th ranked Tulsa 16-13. It was covered in "Sports Illustrated."

In 1976 Southern's Andre Herrera ran for an astounding 214 yards in just the first quarter, an all-time NCAA rushing record that still stands.

I remember he was so tired from running so much he had to be helped off the field several times in the second half.

In 1983 we not only had a national champion, but a team with the second best record (13-1) in the entire country. That year you could even hear our own special songs written and recorded by local musician Gary Jones played frequently on area radio stations.

In 1985 we battled Illinois down to the wire before losing by just 3 points. We have had several players go on to successful pro careers; there are at least three currently active. How dare the OAFS say we have no football tradition!

Like it or not, our alumni, the parents of our potential alumni, and the general taxpayer public most often identify with us via sports. A positive image is what we need to keep their affection and get their support for our programs, athletic and academic.

Let's not only back football, let's work together to return it to its glory of the early 80s — it will make the whole university better. Go Southern Go! — William M. Vickers, Carbondale.

Football not central to SIU's mission

I have read with interest the reactions to Professor Jerome Handler's proposal to drop the football program at SIU.

Professor Handler has provoked some very emotional responses by the defenders of the football program, but perhaps the most outrageous has been the suggestion that instead, SIU should drop the anthropology department!

Apparently this suggestion is based on the belief that football is central to the SIU mission, a proposition that few of us concerned about the academic quality can stomach.

The simple fact is that this mediocre football program costs the University over one half million dollars a year.

Such extravagance with precious education dollars cannot be permitted to continue, and emotional attacks on Professor Handler and one of the best departments in the University are not going to obscure the issue. — Howard W. Allen, professor of history.

DE representation not worthy of task force

Alas, the end of another semester is nigh, and the DE has not shown a hint of intelligent life.

Is this a publication of free-thinking individuals? Is this a paper that represents the students?

Verily I say unto thee "Nay!" Is it a pawn or a foil maybe? The result of some administrative bowel movement, perhaps?

These questions and others pertaining are to be pondered, but don't waste time forming a "task force" or anything. The answers are clear. Only a squirrel could be so blind! —

Michael Pryor, senior, advanced technical studies.

Outlook good in Cambodia; talk of Vietnamese pullout

JAKARTA, Indonesia (SHNS) — The Cambodian conflict has been going on for more than a decade, ever since Vietnam invaded Cambodia, ousting Pol Pot's murderous Khmer Rouge.

But the deadlock seems at last to be easing with the recent promising talks in Jakarta between the exiled Cambodian resistance leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk and Hun Sen, prime minister of the Vietnamese-backed Cambodian government.

Prince Sihanouk came away from the talks referring to his previously bitter opponent as "an erring son" while holding out hope for an agreement in due course.

Sihanouk announced that, under certain conditions, he will accept Hun Sen's invitation to return to Cambodia as head of state after a Vietnamese withdrawal. The Vietnamese have promised to pull their troops out by the end of September and it was agreed at the Jakarta talks to call an international conference to appoint a supervisory body to oversee and verify the pullout.

Sihanouk said that if his conditions are met he might be prepared to drop his resistance coalition partners to return to Phnom Penh. The Prince is nominally president of a coalition government-in-exile of three resistance factions, but little love is lost between him and the largest of his partners, the Khmer Rouge.

The Khmer Rouge are held responsible for the deaths of an estimated 1 million Cambodians during four years in the mid-'70s. Some of Sihanouk's relatives are among the dead.

The Prince says he is pleased with recent changes to the Cambodian constitution made by Hun Sen. These include dropping the term "People's Republic" from the name of the country, opening the economy to private enterprise and foreign investment, and the official recognition of Buddhism as the state religion.

The changes are aimed at changing the government's image as a puppet regime.

beginning of fall semester, Hengehold said.

He also plans to increase the number of hours both labs are open on weekends and check on usage hours to determine how to provide the most service for students when they need it.

The Faner lab is open from 8 a.m. to 3:45 p.m. Saturday and 1 to 8:45 p.m. Sunday. The Communications lab is closed Saturday and Sunday.

At the time of the interview, Hengehold said he wasn't certain what computer equipment would be added to the Faner labs by fall semester.

University's computer facilities allow students to write and print out papers, write programs, access information and transfer data between locations.

"We cover just a little bit of everything on campus," Hengehold said.

The University's computer facilities are limited only by the availability of funds, which are provided entirely from the University budget, he said. This year those funds will be used to purchase some additional equipment and provide students with more service.

Bill Baron, lab director for Computing Affairs, said the bulk of computer expansion will be done at Faner Hall. He said experience has shown that the Faner labs are used more than any other computer facilities on campus.

Other computing facilities are located in the Communications Building, Lentz Hall and Trueblood Hall.

Baron said on the average, 10 people use the computer lab in the Communications Building lab each hour while the Faner lab averages 100 users each hour.

Although the Faner labs have a larger variety of equipment, location is probably the biggest factor in its heavy usage, he said.

Faner Hall is "right smack dab in the middle of campus," Baron said.

Students don't have many complaints with the labs other than needing more access and more computers, Baron said. Usage time at the Faner lab peaks at 11 p.m. because classes take up two of the three computer rooms during the day.

"A lot of students come back at night because they can't get online during the day," Baron said.

Computer information processing courses, offered through the College of Technical Careers are planned for the evenings, Hengehold said. The courses will teach the basics of word processing, spreadsheets and databases.

"The course should help students in classes where basic computer skills are required," Hengehold said.

usually results in a disconnection, with no police involvement. A note is left for other workers, informing them of the violation. The offender is then monitored more often.

"If you knew where you had a leak in your water line, wouldn't you go there first?" Addison asked. "It's like water running down the side of the building," he said of the leaking cable signals.

Carbondale police report that two people have been arrested so far this year. In 1988, six arrests were made, and in 1987, 28 arrests occurred for illegal cable connections. The Jackson County Sheriff's Department reports that fewer than five arrests are made per year.

While the Sniffer II can track down violators, Addison said easier ways to catch people exist.

"People usually tell on themselves by jimmying the wires and messing up other people's reception," he said. He said many times a disturbance in one's cable reception is the result of a neighbor tampering with a line. Many times customer complaints lead directly to nearby offenders.

Addison said safety pins, telephone wire and bobby pins are but a few of the items "creatively" used to tamper with the system.

The problem can grow when knowledgeable students with little money think it is easy to make the illegal connection.

"It's not that high tech," said one University student who explained the cutting and splicing procedures. "I know a lot of people who've been getting cable free for years."

Addison said every cable system has its problems. However, college towns are worse, he said, because there are many engineering students who work with coaxial wires.

To fight back, Cablevision has been using "locking terminators" for the past three years. These small wire connectors will prevent the average person from entering the connection box, Addison said. Also, in high problem areas, new lock boxes have been placed that would take "nearly 30 minutes to enter with a sledgehammer," he said. However, at $50 per box, they can be quite expensive to replace, he added.

"We want them to have a place to breathe," Robb Frank, Hill House facilities manager, said.

The $1.75 million Park Street center would include a residential hall, a recreation center, a place for gardening and a pond.

The Hill House plans to mortgage the facility itself with no funds coming from tax dollars.

Residents are bound by 44 rules that bring punishment if broken.

As part of the therapeutic program, the teenagers are classified on seven different levels of responsibility.

Hill House is accredited by the Commission on the Accreditation of Rehabilitation and is licensed by the Illinois Department of Alcohol and Substance Abuse.

Guyon indicated that the money could be shifted for scholarships, equipment or whatever project the University most needs.

Prof hopes to solve 115-year-old cannibalism case

Scripps Howard News Service

If it was only murder, James Starrs' anthropological expedition to Lake City, Colo., this summer would not be controversial. In fact, if it was only murder, there would probably be no expedition at all.

The real attraction is cannibalism, which is what has fascinated the public with Alferd E. Packer for more than a century.

Starrs, a professor of law and forensic sciences at George Washington University's National Law Center in Washington, D.C., and one of the nation's foremost forensic experts, plans to dig up the skeletal remains of the five victims of Packer, the West's most notorious cannibal.

STARRS HAS assembled a team of nationally respected anthropologists, archaeologists and pathologists. He hopes a careful examination of the ill-fated gold-seekers will reveal once and for all whether Packer actually killed them and whether he truly ate them.

If Starrs can solve the mystery of the Colorado cannibal-murders, he believes the case and its attendant publicity will enormously enhance the reputation of anthropology as a tool in criminal cases.

"This could literally put anthropology on the map," Starrs said.

Packer's story has enthralled Americans ever since the former Union soldier tried to lead a party of fortune hunters across the rugged San Juan Mountains in the winter of 1874. Only Packer emerged, with a tale of death and starvation.

If Starrs can solve the mystery of the Colorado cannibal-murders, he believes the case and its publicity will enhance the reputation of anthropology as a tool in criminal cases.

Some months later, a wandering artist on assignment for Harper's Weekly happened on the remains of the five bodies — though only four heads — on a high bluff overlooking the Lake Fork of the Gunnison River near Lake City. The bluff became known as "Dead Man's Gulch" and the surrounding area as "Cannibal Plateau."

AN INQUEST was held on the spot and a warrant issued for Packer's arrest "dead or alive."

Packer was eventually tried and convicted of murder. The Hinsdale County Sheriff sent out elaborately printed invitations to the hanging, but the conviction was overturned on a technicality. Packer was retried and sentenced to 40 years in prison, but was released in 1901 after a spirited newspaper campaign on his behalf.

Since then, Packer has become a somewhat beloved, if bizarre, hero to Coloradans. His bust has stood in the state capitol next to those of governors and senators. His strange story has been the subject of books, plays and a low-budget movie.

Despite all attention the Packer case has received, there remains considerable doubt as to what actually happened that fateful winter in Dead Man's Gulch.

PACKER CLAIMED another gold-seeker, Shannon Wilson Bell, killed the others in a starved frenzy and that he killed Bell to save himself. He claimed it was only Bell that ate.

Starrs calls Packer "a pathological liar," noting that court and newspaper records are replete with examples of the admitted cannibal changing his story. Packer couldn't even get his name straight, sometimes calling himself "Alferd," sometimes "Alfred."

"He even lied about his own age at the time of sentencing, making himself younger in the hope of getting a better deal. He was a shrewd, old cut," Starrs said.

Starrs' quest is fraught with uncertainties, chief of which is whether there will be any bones. In a trip to Colorado last year, Starrs found what appear to be five unmarked graves in Dead Man's Gulch not far from a memorial to the dead.

THERE ARE no assurances, however, those are graves or that if they are, the remains are in a condition worth examining.

Arizona State Museum anthropology curator Walter Birkby, the expedition's chief anthropologist, said his biggest fear is that the dig will turn up nothing.

"We don't know for sure there is anyone under that marker," Birkby said.

The expedition, which expects to begin the dig July 16, already has attracted considerable media attention, especially from supermarket tabloids and the television genre known as "trash TV."

Patrick Zickler, an associate of Starrs, said NBC's "Unsolved Mysteries" and the Fox television network have expressed interest in filming the unearthing of the skeletons.

ZICKLER, a freelance writer who edits Scientific Sleuthing, a forensics newsletter founded by Starrs, will come along to manage the crowds and the media.

He is also in charge of fundraising for the expedition, which he estimates will cost between $12,000 and $15,000. He has not been having much luck finding corporate sponsors.

When Zickler approached Continental Airlines, the agast response was: "Please, this is an airline. Identifying human remains is nothing we want to be associated with."

The cost estimate covers only expenses, none of the experts is being paid.

To forensic anthropologists, this case is a labor of love, a rare opportunity to test knowledge and wit against historical record.

"The detective work involved is very stimulating and challenging," said Douglas Ubelaker, anthropology curator for the Smithsonian Institution and a consultant to the expedition.

IN LAKE City, residents are eager for the tourist dollars they hope the expedition will attract. Motels are booking up and souvenir shops are stocking up on Packer paraphernalia.

"Our only economy is tourism and we need all the help we can get. If they want to come look at Packer's bones, that's fine, just as long as they come," said county clerk Oleta Bebout.

The expedition has its critics. Retired New Jersey Judge Ervan F. Kushner, an authority on the Packer case, calls the dig "macabre" and "rotunesque."

Forensic anthropology "might be applicable to the Egyptians and Phoenicians but certainly not the mass of human fragments found by the early mountaineers after the alleged murders. It is obviously the lure of publicity that has entranced these people," Kushner said.

KUSHNER, 74, who had a distinguished career as a criminal court judge, prosecutor and military intelligence analyst, believes Packer is innocent of all but the possible killing of Bell in self-defense and the "cutting of a few selected strips of meat from the corpse" to survive. He is the author of a book defending Packer and tried to convince former Colorado Gov. Richard D. Lamm to give the cannibal a posthumous pardon in 1982, which Lamm refused to do.

Members of the expedition reject Kushner's criticism.

Group trying to lower battered women statistics

By Sharon Rook
Student Writer

Every five years the death toll from domestic violence equals the American death toll in the Vietnam War, according to research by the Illinois Coalition Against Domestic Violence.

The research, reported in a ICADV pamphlet, states that more than 40 percent of the women murdered in the United States are killed by their husbands or lovers. The murder usually occurs after the victims have been beaten for years, it says.

The Carbondale Women's Center, 408 W. Freeman St., is one of 48 ICADV organizations that has been trying to combat these statistics by providing services and shelter to battered women.

Cass Van Der Meer, shelter coordinator, said the Women's Center has helped many women in Southern Illinois. "We don't say we can offer things if we can't," she said.

ESTABLISHED IN 1972, the Women's Center is one of the oldest shelters in the United States, Van Der Meer said. It moved to its present location, just one block north of the SIUC campus, in 1975.

Over the years, the center has built itself a reputation as a solid shelter for women, Van Der Meer said. The reputation has helped it create a cooperative relationship with local law enforcement agencies and social services, she said.

Over an eight-month period, from July 1988 to March 1989, the shelter took in 705 women and children who were seeking refuge from domestic violence. Nationwide, the ICADV serves more than 23,000 women and children.

"Shelters like this will remain in high demand unless we do something about the violent society in which we live," Van Der Meer said.

"BEATING YOUR wife is better than beating a stranger," Van Der Meer said. "It is socially accepted."

The problems with domestic violence are with political attitudes, Van Der Meer said. Until society accepts that women are in danger from their husbands, the Women's Center—and other shelters—would remain open.

According to the ICADV, most people, including police, prosecuting attorneys and judges, do not believe violence between men and women involved in relationships is a crime. There is the belief that an argument is a private matter between the couple.

Statistics compiled by the ICADV indicate that one in four women have been physically abused while pregnant. One in five women have seen their children threatened or abused. One in 12 women has had a gun or knife used against her. One in 12 women have been beaten unconscious—all by a spouse or lover.

INITIALLY, THE Women's Center serviced women in crisis situations. Today, it offers 24-hour crisis intervention, short-term counseling, pregnancy testing and legal information.

A legal advocate is located on the premises. Once a month a lawyer meets with those women who have legal problems. The lawyer offers a preliminary assessment of the legal or other channels women must take to solve their problems.

Many women who need legal assistance are referred to Land of Lincoln Legal Assistance Foundation Inc., Route 13, west of Carbondale.

Shelia Simon, attorney at Land of Lincoln, said the firm only represents victims. "All service we offer is free, provided the client fits the guidelines," she said.

One guideline is the federal poverty level, which depends on the number of people in a family. A family of four earning $975 a month would be considered on the poverty level, Simon said.

LITIGATION In domestic violence cases falls under the Illinois Domestic Violence Act of 1986. Under the law, a judge issues an order of protection that prohibits the abuser from further threatening the victim.

Three types of protection orders are issued, depending on the victims needs.

■ An emergency order can be issued without the victim's abuser being notified. After the order is issued, the sheriff would notify the abuser. According to the order, the abuser must leave the victim alone for 14 days, making no contact at all.

■ An interim order gives the victim protection for 30 days. The abuser must be notified before the order is issued.

■ A plenary order gives the victim protection for up to two years. Like the interim order, the abuser must be notified before the hearing in which the order would be issued.

SIMON SAID once an abuser receives an order, the victim is usually left alone. "This makes (the abuser) take a serious look at how they have been acting," she said.

Under all types of orders, the abuser would be required to receive counseling at the Jackson County Mental Health Services

Strain created by missile reduction growing, threatens serious crisis

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The political strain created by a U.S. refusal to negotiate reductions in short-range nuclear missiles based in Europe deepened Sunday, with President Bush under fire at home and abroad for a crisis threatening a serious split within NATO.

In Rome, Italian Prime Minister Ciriaco De Mita asserted in an interview with the newspaper La Repubblica that the United States and Britain were to blame for a controversy endangering Western unity just three weeks before a summit of NATO leaders in Brussels.

"The British and American governments raised the problem," De Mita said in an interview with a West German call—adamantly rejected by Washington and London—for talks on reductions in short-range nuclear forces in Europe.

Closer to home, veteran negotiator Paul Nitze, who served as a top arms control adviser to the Reagan administration, faulted the Bush administration for forcing unpopular decisions on missile modernization and short-range force negotiations on the West German government.

"I don't believe that those two propositions can be agreed by any German government in the current political situation in Germany," Nitze said. "This issue is apt to pull Germany apart and NATO apart and I think it's important that we address that issue right now."

Despite the sharp division within NATO, the administration signaled no change in its hard-line position of insisting on a firm commitment to upgrade NATO missiles based in West Germany, which become obsolete in 1995, and resisting talk on cuts in nuclear forces regarded as a crucial counterweight to the Warsaw Pact superiority in conventional forces.

The main concern expressed last week by Bush and other administration officials was that negotiations on short-range forces could lead to the "third zero" elimination of all nuclear weapons from Europe, leaving the West vulnerable to conventional force attack.

Congress sets stage for budget clash

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House and Senate, in passing similar fiscal 1990 budget plans last week that call for raising $5 billion in taxes, have set the stage for a clash over President Bush's pledge of "no new taxes."

At issue is the presidentially approved fiscal 1990 spending plans adopted Thursday by both houses that requires raising $14.2 billion in revenues, of which about $5 billion—and possibly double that—must be in taxes.

The problem is President Bush's campaign pledge: "Read my lips. No new taxes."

How will lawmakers resolve this dilemma?

"Got me," said an aide on one of the congressional tax-writing committees charged with solving this budgetary puzzle. "There are ways to get the money, but if you take $10 billion out of people's pockets, they complain. There's no easy way."

"You're in a position where you have to get the money with your hands tied behind your back because George Bush's lips are tied shut," the aide said. "On a (difficulty) scale of one to 10, I'd say it's an eight."

The aide, who requested

"Nobody's going to be want to be blamed for coming up with a particular proposal" to raise taxes.

anonymity, predicted, "Nobody's going to be want to be blamed for coming up with a particular proposal" to raise taxes.

But, Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, insisted in an interview Sunday with NBC's "Meet the Press," that Congress and the executive branch must reach a solid consensus on solving the deficit problem.

"We've got to stop playing these games," Hamilton said. "We've got to develop the political will. It's been a real failure of the system."

"I think it is possible to put a package together of spending cuts and some tax increases—modest tax increases—and let us go for a package deal," he said.

Here is the dollar dilemma the House Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee faces:

The $1.16 trillion fiscal 1990 budget pact reached by Bush and congressional leaders last month and adopted by both the House and Senate last week calls for raising $14.2 billion in the fiscal year starting Oct. 1. Of that, $5.3 billion must be in taxes.

Bush agreed to the $5.3 billion tax portion of the plan because he wants the money to be raised by slashing the capital gains tax rate from 28 percent to 15 percent. He said it would spur investment, stimulate the economy and add nearly $5 billion next year and $16 billion over five years to the treasury.

But key congressional Democrats and some Republicans disagree. They admit it would raise money the first year but claim it will cost billions later on, losing $10 billion in the fifth year alone. Chances for passage look bleak.

Many of those proposals—Reagan administration holdovers—have been repeatedly rejected by Congress and are likely to die again.

Results of 10-year archaeological dig on exhibit

Anasazi pottery found in project at Black Mesa

By Wayne Wallace
Entertainment Editor
and UPI Reports

It's true. The anthropology department doesn't make money hand over fist. But then it wasn't the football team that got $8 million to dig up ancient ceramics in Arizona.

Between 1975 and 1985, Peabody Coal Company invested the money in SIU-C's Black Mesa Archaeological Project, which yielded nearly 850 pieces of 1,000-year-old pottery belonging to the ancient Anasazi peoples of the American Southwest.

The results of this 10-year archaeological dig are now on exhibit at Southeast Missouri State University Museum in Cape Girardeau.

James Parker, director of the museum, said the exhibit will be on display until August 11 and contains artifacts from the culture of the Anasazi, which is the Navajo word for "ancient ones."

Francis Smiley, curator of the SIU-C Center for Archaeological Investigations and co-developer of the exhibit, said Peabody Coal has an obligation to preserve the historical integrity of its properties before beginning commercial exploration of coal sites.

This was the case in 1967 when archaeological excavation began at Black Mesa, a huge landform rising above the desert in northeastern Arizona. This 10-square-mile area was home to the Anasazi from A.D. 800 to A.D. 1150.

SIU-C wasn't brought in to coordinate the excavations until 1975, the curator added.

Smiley said the actual digging on the project was carried out over the span of 10 summer field projects, employing more than 100 student and faculty workers from SIU-C.

For 10 weeks each summer, University field project workers would employ local Navajo and Hopi residents on the Black Mesa to assist in the excavation.

"We estimate that 2 million person hours have been spent on the project," Smiley said, noting that lab analysis of the pottery continued year round.

Although the project ceased operations in 1985, Smiley said much paperwork on the project remains to be done.

"There are many books in line waiting to be published," he said. "Already I would guess 300 articles and books about the Black Mesa project have been published."

Smiley credits Jo Ellen Miles, a former graduate student in the anthropology department, as the person responsible for reconnecting nearly 10,000 broken ceramic pieces into their original form — 850 different works of pottery.

"Reconstructing prehistoric pottery is extremely difficult," Smiley said of the painstaking, but rewarding process.

"Unlike jigsaw puzzles, the nearest thing to which people usually compare it, the edges of the pieces don't always fit nicely together and the reconstruction of an ancient pot is a three-dimensional process — not something you can do flat on a table. But our result has been some very beautiful pottery."

Smiley was present at the SEMO museum for the exhibit's debut.

Pottery to be exhibited at museum

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. (UPI) — Pottery of the prehistoric Anasazi peoples of the American Southwest will be on display starting Monday at the Southeast Missouri State University Museum.

James Parker, director of the museum, said the exhibit contains pottery excavated by Southern Illinois University's Black Mesa Archaeological Project. The $8 million project spanned 20 years and was sponsored by Peabody Coal Company's Arizona Division.

Black Mesa, a huge landform rising above the desert in northeastern Arizona, was the home of the Anasazi peoples, consummate ceramic artists, from about A.D. 800 to A.D. 1150. Parker said. The Anasazi, which is the Navajo word for "Ancient Ones," were centered generally on the area where the boundaries of Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado and Utah intersect.

The pottery has been excavated from the remains of Anasazi villages and painstakingly reconstructed from thousands of pieces to reveal the artistry of the Anasazi potters.

"Reconstructing prehistoric pottery is extremely difficult," said Francis Smiley, curator of the SIU-C Center for Archaeological Investigations and co-developer of the exhibit, "because unlike jigsaw puzzles, the nearest thing to which people usually compare it, the edges of the pieces don't always fit three-dimensional process."

Technology improves camera, photography

The newest camera on the market can record a still picture, show the image on a television screen and deliver a print in minutes.

What a difference 163 years can make. The world's first photograph required eight hours of exposure time just to get a fuzzy image.

New films that show no grain on a print, film made specially to photograph flesh, and cameras that do all the thinking have made photography so easy that anybody can aim and get bright, clear photographs.

Photography has become very "in."

"Technology is bringing a lot of people back into it," said Carl Ward, manager of a camera store. "The swing is definitely toward these automatic cameras."

Ben Carpenter, an amateur photographer and a former president of a camera club in Memphis, Tenn., agreed that the automatic cameras and their electronic circuitry are revolutionizing photography, even for knowledgeable amateurs.

"There are a lot of people who own pretty decent cameras these days," Carpenter said. "They're much easier to use. They're not strictly mechanical like they used to be."

Once a 35 millimeter camera required a certain amount of expertise to operate successfully. No more. In the last nine years the world's major camera suppliers have developed point-and-shoot 35mm cameras.

The cameras automatically adjust the shutter speed, lens opening, and built-in flashes for various light conditions; focus themselves and even load and rewind automatically. The prices range from $80 to $500, depending on the sophistication and the number of automated features.

Carpenter said the automatic cameras are popular even among accomplished photographers. He said he often slips a compact point-and-shoot camera in his pocket.

End of school term means bad checks

University steps up efforts to recover surge of money lost

By Irene Oplow
Student Writer

The Bursar's Office will step up efforts to recover bad checks in preparation for the increase in the number of returned checks, which occurs at the end of the semester, according to Meg Cawthon, student check cashing and ticket office manager.

"Before the holidays and at the end of the semester, the increase in the number of students writing bad checks is of mammoth proportions," she said.

The Bursar's Office will put an extra effort forth to keep the bad check list up to date during this time, she said.

The University's Billing Receivables System is very efficient, according to Cawthon, and enables employees to monitor students with habits of writing bad checks.

The University has strict penalties and therefore is able to collect most of the money from returned checks, she said.

Five thousand dollars each year is budgeted to cover returned checks at the Student Center.

Bad checks at the University account for less than 1 percent of the total amount checks written. The University is able to collect most of that amount, according to Cawthon. Two percent is a typical figure for businesses.

The Student Center's very low percentage is possible because, "We have the might of the Bursar's Office," Cawthon said.

If a check is returned to the University, the bursar bills the student's account and puts the offender on the bad check list.

To get off the bad check list, students must pay $7.50 in returned check fees.

The bad check list is circulated not only at the check cashing facility, but at the bookstore, and all places on campus, that habitually accept checks.

If the University is unable to collect, the matter can be pursued by the security office that will send a registered letter to the student.

If the student does not respond within two weeks, the matter is turned over to the state's attorney, according to Detective Larry Eaton of the University Police.

An Illinois statue states that the endorser of the check can be held liable for the amount of check plus three times the amount, no less than $100 and no more than $500.

"A lot of students don't realize that when they endorse a check they take on total responsibility for that check," T.J. Rutherford, Student Center business manager, said.

Transcripts and diplomas will be withheld if a student has an outstanding check or account, Cawthon said.

Radio-TV Fulbright scholar to teach techniques in Peru

University News Service

It was 1964 when M. William Johnson, instructor in the Department of Radio-Television, spent three quick days in Lima, Peru while on holiday from his Peace Corps assignment in Colombia. Little did he know that 25 years later he would return as a Fulbright Scholar.

Johnson, a fluent speaker of Spanish, leaves May 21 to teach for three months as part of his Fulbright Award. His class will be a group of professional Peruvian television journalists.

"I'll meet with reporters, shooters and editors and show them how different shooting and film editing techniques can improve a newscast," Johnson said.

Lima has seven television stations.

Johnson will be based at the University of Lima and will spend a few weeks working with peers at the University of Piura, roughly 500 miles north of Lima.

During this summer, his wife will travel to Peru with him. She will teach in Arequipa, but Johnson said they will manage some time together.

During his stay, Johnson said he plans to produce a documentary on some facet of Peruvian life.

Shuttle crew heading home; mission rated a '10'

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — The Atlantis astronauts tested the shuttle's re-entry systems Sunday and packed up for a California landing Monday, leaving a $530 million space probe racing toward Venus in a mission the commander rated a perfect "10."

In an interview from orbit with United Press International, shuttle skipper David Walker said the crew's deployment Thursday of the Magellan Venus radar mapper marked the first step in a new era of American space exploration.

"The primary significance, of course, is that the human race is continuing its exploration of the solar system," Walker said as Atlantis and its five crew members sailed over the Indian Ocean.

"THE UNMANNED probe

"The primary significance, of course, is that the human race is continuing its exploration of the solar system."

—David Walker

Magellan will give us more information about our closest neighbor, Venus, and it'll be followed, we hope, with much more extensive exploration of the other planets."

With the primary goal of the mission accomplished, Walker, 44, co-pilot Ronald Grabe, 43, Mary Cleave, 42, Mark Lee, 36, and Norman Thagard, 45, are scheduled to glide to a 2:43 p.m. landing Monday at Edwards Air Force Base in California's Mojave Desert.

The weather outlook called for scattered clouds and generally favorable conditions, with a chance for gusty winds that could allow Walker and Grabe to conduct in a crosswind landing test.

MAGELLAN WAS launched Thursday at 8:01 p.m., six hours and 14 minutes after Atlantis's liftoff from the Kennedy Space Center in Florida. By midday Sunday, the robot craft was some 445,000 miles from Earth, on course for an Aug. 10, 1990, encounter with Venus.

"We've had a very good machine and we believe we've accomplished the major objective (of the flight), Walker told UPI. "And assuming that everything continues to go this well, I'd sure give (the mission) a 10 on my personal scale."

With the 29th shuttle flight winding down, Walker and Grabe activated one of Atlantis's three hydraulic power systems and fired a series of maneuvering jets in a standard test to make sure the shuttle's re-entry systems work properly.

CLEAVE AND Lee, meanwhile, continued work with an experiment to grow ultra-pure crystals in weightlessness, and beamed down more spectacular television footage from orbit using a commercially available 8-mm "camcorder" video camera being tested for future use in orbit.

Because of the weight of Magellan and its two-stage booster — 40,208 pounds — Atlantis was unable to carry much in the way of on-board experiments. Still, Walker insisted his crew was able to stay busy in orbit.

"It really isn't a relaxed timeline," he said. "Having watched my crew work, I think it would be doing them a disservice to call the timeline relaxed. They've worked very hard."

THE CLEAR highlight of the four-day, 56-minute mission was the deployment of Magellan, the first American interplanetary probe launched since August 1978 and the first from a space shuttle.

An hour after its release from Atlantis's payload bay, Magellan's two-stage "inertial upper stage" booster fired to propel the craft on an 806-million-mile, 15-month voyage to Venus, Earth's closest planetary neighbor.

Drug-smuggling cult leader killed by girlfriend

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — The leader of a drug-smuggling cult that practiced human sacrifice at a ranch south of the U.S.-Mexican border was killed and his girlfriend was captured in a Mexico City shootout involving scores of police, authorities said Sunday.

Sara Aldrete Villarreal, 24, the so-called "witch" of the cult, was arrested in the Saturday afternoon raid at their apartment, and a Mexican newspaper reported Sunday that she shot to death her boyfriend, cult leader, Adolfo de Jesus Constanzo, 26, just before police stormed the building.

Also killed in the shooting was fellow cult member, Martin Quintana Rodriguez, authorities said.

Mexico City's Spanish-language Uno Mas Uno newspaper reported Constanzo and Quintana were "sacrificed ... by their colleagues" in a shooting at the five-story apartment building in the city's luxurious central Cuauhtemoc section, several blocks from the U.S. and British embassies.

Mexican officials and police refused to confirm or deny Uno Mas Uno's report, but said Mexico City's Deputy Attorney General for Investigations, Abraham Polo Uscanga, will provide details at an afternoon news conference.

Police arrested four people at the apartment building, including Aldrete, and three others identified as Alvaro de Leon, Omar Ochoa and Maria Gomez Rosillo.

Uno Mas Uno said that one of the detained, identified by the newspaper as de Leon — also known as El Duby — was interviewed by a reporter after being thrown into a police car.

De Leon told the Uno Mas Uno reporter that Constanzo and Aldrete had an argument. "Sara killed Adolfo and the other," Uno Mas Uno quoted De Leon as saying before the police patrol cars sped away.

U.S. and Mexican authorities searched since April 9 for Constanzo and Aldrete, identified as the alleged ringleaders of the cult blamed for 15 killings.

Mexican authorities informed U.S. investigators about the deaths of Constanzo and Quintana, said Lt. George Gavito, chief investigator for the Cameron County, Texas, sheriff's office.

Four suspects in the cult had been arrested April 9 at Rancho Santa Elena, 20 miles west of Matamoros, during a drug raid that led to the discovery of 13 human sacrifices killed in rituals that included mutilating the victims' bodies.

Those victims included University of college student Mark Kilroy, 21, of Santa Fe, Texas, who was abducted from a Matamoros street during a spring break visit.

The bodies of two more victims, who were not killed ritually, were found at a nearby ranch. Authorities believed those men had double-crossed the drug smugglers.

Police did not immediately say what brought them to the apartment house.

Gunshots peppered the windows of the fourth-floor apartment where Constanzo was killed.

Sonia Alvarado, 18, who lives on the apartment building's ground floor, told United Press International: "There was lots of shooting. I heard machine guns. The police were shooting. Now there are holes on the walls outside. There are drops of blood on the stairs."

High school students win the write way

Six Carbondale Community High School students are winners in a University writing contest sponsored by the Department of English.

Each winner received $25 and a plaque.

The first-year contest is aimed to promote writing among high school level students, Roy K. Weshinsky, assistant professor of English and program coordinator, said.

About 75 writers from the Carbondale Community High School participated in the contest. The contest included entries in fiction, non-fiction and poetry.

Winners in grades 9 and 10 included Emily Arthur, fiction; Namita Dhakal, non-fiction; and Lavina Kraujalis, poetry.

Eleventh and 12th grade winners were Winslow Chou, fiction; Colleen Kirk, non-fiction; and Anthony Rishard, poetry.

"The contest was quite successful," Weshinsky said. "We were very pleased with the quantity and quality."

Fighting resumes in Beirut, 18 dead and 100 wounded

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Christian and Moslem-led forces battled with artillery and rockets Sunday in a fresh violation of an Arab-mediated cease-fire as the casualty toll from 24 hours of fighting climbed to 18 dead and 100 wounded, police said.

Christian army regulars and the Syrian-backed Moslem militias pounded residential sections of Beirut and a string of villages in the hills overlooking the city in defiance of the 10-day Arab League-brokered peace plan.

The renewed shelling, which shattered a morning lull, followed six hours of savage bombardments late Saturday that killed 16 people, wounded 80 others and prompted hundreds of families to flee the city, police and witnesses said.

Authorities said the latest violence began when militiamen in Syrian-controlled west Beirut began firing rockets at two Christian-held harbors north of the city.

The fighting soon spread, with several shells crashing into residential neighborhoods in Christian sectors of the city. Army regulars then began firing salvos into Beirut's Syrian-controlled southern suburbs.

At least two people, a woman and man, were killed and 20 wounded in the exchanges Sunday, initial police reports said.

Christian military sources said the headquarters of the Christian army commander was "the target of concentrated shelling from Syrian positions with 240mm mortars." There were no immediate reports of damage or casualties.

Last month, highly destructive 240mm mortar shells slammed into the house of the Spanish ambassador to Lebanon, killing him and two members of his family.

The savage pounding of residential areas caused heavy damage in dozens of apartment buildings and destroyed tens of cars.

Residents, who were pinned down in underground shelters most of the night, were seen touring neighborhoods ravaged streets and checking on loved ones. Several cleared rubble from streets, witnesses said.

Thousands of Beirut's inhabitants who had earlier fled to safer areas in the country had started returning to their homes after a lull in the recent round of violence came about after the warring factions endorsed the Arab League-crafted cease-fire eight days earlier.

But heavy traffic was again reported Sunday on the main road that links Beirut to southern Lebanon. Hundreds of cars, packed with people and belongings, were heading to the safer villages of the south, witnesses said.

Shipping sources said a ferry boat, carrying hundreds of Christian passengers, arrived in Larnaca, Cyprus, Sunday.

The passengers, from the Christian enclave, reached the boat that docked several miles off the beach north of Beirut in small boats, after its crew refused to approach the land because of recurring bombardments, the sources said.

The shelling was coupled by fierce fighting along the 3-mile-long demarcation line that divides Beirut, and around the army garrison of Souk El Gharb, 7 miles southeast of the capital.

The headquarters of the heads of the two rival Christian and Moslem governments that are vying for power in Lebanon were hit during the shelling, police said.

The Defense Ministry in Yarze and the headquarters of the Syrian command in Moslem west Beirut were struck. Several villages in the Syrian-controlled Bekaa valley in eastern Lebanon came under artillery and rocket fire.

The Brazilian embassy in east Beirut was hit by two 122mm rockets and suffered heavy damage, an embassy spokesman said.

The escalation in the violence occurred as the Moslem forces continued their 6-week-old siege of the Christian enclave in defiance of the Arab League plan to lift all blockades around Christian and Moslem areas.

The land-and-sea siege of the Christian areas by the Moslem militias and Moslem army units was imposed in retaliation to a blockade of three Moslem ports south of Beirut two months ago.

But the commander of the Lebanese army, Gen. Michel Aoun, lifted his blockade of the three Moslem ports after an Arab League initiative.

The Christian siege was the primary cause of the latest round of fighting in Lebanon's 14-year-old civil war. More than 300 people have been killed and 1,275 wounded in the latest round of warfare.

Train, subway drivers in Britain could strike

LONDON (UPI) — Commuters braced for a miserable Monday as train and subway drivers threatened unofficial strikes that could either cause the worst disruptions in the capital in seven years or fail to materialize.

"We're telling people we don't know what's going to happen," a British Rail spokesman said Sunday.

About 3,300 drivers in British Rail's southern region pledged to walk out after completing their eight-hour shifts for the next two weeks in protest of a 7 percent pay offer and management plan to abolish national pay bargaining.

The unofficial overtime ban would cut a third of services into the capital from south of the Thames, leading to 1,500 cancellations a day, British Rail officials estimated.

The two unions representing 100,000 British Rail drivers delayed a strike ballot and asked their members to work normally to allow further negotiations.

"What is frustrating is that negotiations are still going on," said Chris Green, a director for British Rail's southeastern service. "It is extremely stupid to have these unofficial actions."

London Underground officials said they hoped to run a normal service Monday following a high court ruling last week preventing 12,000 workers from going on strike. The National Union of Railwaymen will return to court Tuesday in a bid to overturn the ruling.

Pending the court appearance, the NUR asked its members to show up for work.

But leaders of two 24-hour strikes last month threatened to strike for a third time Monday to press their demands for pay raises of $109 a week to compensate for the extra duties they say they assumed with the elimination of assistants on each train to keep track of passengers.

NUR general secretary Jimmy Knapp said he had instructed his members who work for British Rail and the London Underground to work normally. Asked about the possibility of a wildcat strike, he said: "I don't know. We will have to wait and see."

Much of the disruption originally threatened in London may be put off until next week when bus drivers demanding a 14-percent pay hike plan to start their own series of 24-hour stoppages.

If bus and subway strikes coincide, the capital's 2.5 million commuters would be forced to walk, jog, bicycle or drive to work.

Companies were drawing up contingency plans if transportation strikes paralyze London's traffic, which already slows to just 7 mph during rush hours.

Shell, British Petroleum and other companies said they may hire bus fleets to pick up and drop staff at points on main roads into London.

Hong Kong growing fast

HONG KONG (SHNS) — The tallest building in Southeast Asia will be completed here later this year. It's a 72-story skyscraper owned and operated by the Peoples Republic of China.

The tower serves as a fixed reminder of what's to come for the British colony. In 1997, China, population 1 billion and per-capita income of $300, incorporates Hong Kong, population 5.89 million, per capita income $14,000.

For years, political economists have debated over the fate of tiny Hong Kong, most of its life compressed onto a small mountainous island. Many doubt that Hong Kong can retain its present economic freedom under a much poorer China run by a bureaucracy that doesn't understand or care about free enterprise.

Yet some predict that the Chinese government will not destroy its chief source of foreign wealth, its main inlet and outlet for trade, a spot on the globe that has broken most speed records for economic achievement.

Jordan's 15-foot jumper wins NBA series for Bulls

RICHFIELD, Ohio (UPI) — Michael Jordan hit a 15-foot jumper as time ran out Sunday to give the Chicago Bulls a 101-100 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers in the fifth and final game of their NBA first-round playoff series.

The Bulls advance to the best-of-seven second round against the New York Knicks starting Tuesday at Madison Square Garden.

Jordan was held to 14 points in the first half, but scored 30 points after intermission to lead all scorers with 44 points.

The lead changed nine times in the last 4 1/2 minutes and was tied two other times. Cleveland sixth man Craig Ehlo, who led the Cavaliers with 24 points, hit a layup with three seconds left to put the Cavaliers on top 100-99.

Jordan had nailed a jumper with six seconds left to give the Bulls a 99-98 lead. Ehlo's 3-point basket with 51 seconds left had put Cleveland up 98-97.

Cleveland led by 8 early in the fourth quarter but Chicago outscored the Cavaliers, 11-0, in just under three minutes to lead, 87-82, with six minutes left.

Ron Harper scored two Cleveland baskets to put the Cavaliers on top 88-87 with 4:28 remaining. From that point the lead changed hands or the score was tied on every basket or free throw.

It was a one-man show for Chicago against the Cavaliers' balanced scoring.

Mark Price scored 23 for Cleveland, while Harper had 22 and Larry Nance added 16. Center Bill Cartwright scored 16 for Chicago, followed by Scottie Pippen with 13 and Horace Grant with 12.

The Cavaliers, with a sellout crowd of 20,273 cheering them on, started quickly but could not shake the persistent Bulls, who were heavy underdogs when this series began.

Cleveland had beaten Chicago six straight times in the regular season but the entire scenario changed when the Bulls won the opening game on the Cavaliers' home court.

The Cavaliers led 28-24 after one quarter and held a 48-46 halftime lead. Cleveland increased its lead after three quarters to 75-69.

Ehlo opened the fourth quarter with an 18-footer, to put the Cavaliers up by 8. But Jordan scored 17 points in the final 10 1/2 minutes to almost single-handedly carry the Bulls into the second round.

Jordan made 17 of 32 from the field and 9 of 13 from the free throw line. After scoring 50 points Friday night when the Bulls lost in overtime, Jordan has 94 points in his last two playoff games.

White Sox, Cubs claim wins while Cardinals falter

CHICAGO (UPI) — Eric King talked, Harold Baines didn't, but both had plenty to say in the Chicago White Sox 6-2 victory Sunday against the New York Yankees.

Baines went 3-for-5 and had two RBI, while King, 3-3, worked seven innings to register his third win in his last four starts.

"I got nothing to say," said Baines afterwards.

Chicago manager Jeff Torborg, however, said: "Boy, can Harold hit. He's a clutch hitter. Outstanding."

Unlike Baines, King was not at a loss for words. He indicated that he is "having a lot of luck" lately.

But he is not satisfied with his mechanics. "My release, I'm rushing the pitch," King explained. "I don't know where the ball is going (at times) and (if) the hitters don't know where the ball is going that helps the pitcher out."

King scattered five hits allowed one run, walked four and fanned three.

The triumph was the first for Chicago over New York in six games this season. Bobby Thigpen entered with two outs in the eighth and got his fifth save.

Tommy John, 2-5, suffered the loss while going 7 1/3 innings. He allowed six runs, five earned, gave up 11 hits, walked five and struck out two.

Trailing 2-0 in the sixth, Steve Sax singled to center, stole second and came home on Don Mattingly's base hit to center to trim the White Sox lead to a run.

But in the Chicago seventh with one out, Ron Karkovice got a bunt single down the third base line and moved to second as Ozzie Guillen tapped out to the catcher in front of the plate. Dave Gallagher then walked and Baines followed with a single to right that scored Karkovice and when

"Boy, can Harold hit. He's a clutch hitter. Outstanding."

—Jeff Torborg

Jesse Barfield booted the ball for an error, Gallagher also raced home giving the White Sox a 4-1 lead.

Tom McCarthy relieved King to start the eighth and gave up a two-out, run-scoring single to Mattingly making it 4-2.

The Sox added a pair of insurance runs in the eighth on a run-scoring single by Steve Lyons and a sacrifice fly by Karkovice.

Guillen drew a two-out walk from John in the third, stole second and scored on Gallagher's single to left giving Chicago a 1-0 lead.

With two outs in the fifth inning, consecutive singles by Guillen, Gallagher and Baines, the latter scoring Guillen gave the White Sox a 2-0 lead.

"We just didn't do it today," said New York manager Dallas Green. "That's a game that some of us didn't play well, including me."

Green referred to the Yankees' seventh inning when they were down 2-1. Steve Balboni opened with a single and Mike Pagliarulo walked. Jamie Quirk forced Pagliarulo at second with Balboni moving to third.

Then pinch batter Hal Morris struck out swinging and Quirk was doubled up trying to steal second.

"I thought Morris would get the bat on the ball," said Green. "That was my fault. Not a good play. That took us right out of the game."

Cubs 4, Dodgers 2

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Damon Berryhill delivered a two-out bases loaded single to drive in two runs in the sixth inning Sunday, carrying the Chicago Cubs to a 4-2 victory over Orel Hershiser and the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Cubs loaded the bases on three singles in the sixth against Hershiser, 4-3. After Gary Varsho struck out, Berryhill followed with his two-run single through the hole into right field to erase a 2-1 Los Angeles lead.

Hershiser allowed nine hits and four runs in eight innings.

Berryhill, who has five RBI in his last six games, was recalled May 1 from Iowa of the American Association where he was recovering from tendinitis in his right shoulder.

Chicago starter Greg Maddux, who entered the game with a 1-4 record, failed to go four innings. The right-hander gave up two runs and four hits and four walks in 3 1/3 innings. Steve Wilson, who entered the game in the fourth and got out of a two-out, bases-loaded situation — the winner and improved to 2-0. Mitch Williams pitched the final two innings for his 10th save.

Chicago took a 1-0 lead in the third inning when Maddux singled in Shawn Munton, who had walked.

Los Angeles scored twice in the third to take the lead. With one out, Willie Rarolph singled and went to third when Franklin Stubbs doubled. With the infield drawn in, Mike Davis hit a grounder to Durston, who bounced a throw to the plate allowing Randolph to score the tying run. Eddie Murray then doubled home Stubbs but Davis felt rounding third and was thrown out at the plate.

The Cubs scored their final run in the eighth when Ryne Sandberg walked and scored from first on a double by Varsho.

Giants 5, Cardinals 1

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Don Robinson pitched a nine-inning and hit a home run in his first complete game of the season Sunday afternoon to lift the San Francisco Giants to a 5-1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

Robinson, 2-3, struck out five and contributed his ninth career homer, as the Cardinals extended their scoreless drought to 17 innings before scoring in the eighth.

The Giants took a 1-0 lead in the first. St. Louis starter Scott

Terry, 3-3, opened the inning by walking Brett Butler, who advanced on a single by Donell Nixon and a grounder by Will Clark. Kevin Mitchell collected his major league-leading 35th RBI with a sacrifice fly to left, scoring Butler.

Ground broken for new Comiskey by Thompson and Chicago mayor

CHICAGO (UPI) — Mayor Richard M. Daley and Gov. James R. Thompson broke ground Sunday for the new Comiskey Park, a $120 million stadium for the Chicago White Sox.

Daley told about 1,000 people on hand at the groundbreaking for a new home for the American League baseball franchise, which dates to 1901, that the project is a step forward for Chicago.

"Mixing the old with the new is what gives the city its vitality," Daley said, after turning a spadeful of soil.

Thompson, noting two years of wrangling among team owners, legislators and city and state officials that preceded the stadium deal, said the goal was to keep the White Sox in Chicago and give them a state-of-the-art facility.

"Much of the heart of this world-class city would have been lost if we had given up the team," Thompson said, adding Sox owners faced a difficult choice last summer of whether to remain in the city or accept an offer to move to Florida.

"It was a long, hard-fought battle, but in the end the White Sox, the city of Chicago and the people of Illinois prevailed."

The new Comiskey Park, to be completed on a site across the street from the present ball park by Opening Day of 1991, has a projected price tag of $119.47 million. The open-air facility will seat 45,000 in five levels and will offer 118 luxury skyboxes and four rental party suites.

A Diamondvision scoreboard and parking for 7,000 vehicles also is included in the project.

"The Illinois Sports Facilities Authority will build the new stadium, which will be paid for through a 2 percent hotel-motel tax levy in Chicago.

White Sox owners Eddie Einhorn and Jerry Reinsdorf had sought a new stadium, contending Comiskey Park, built in 1910, was inadequate for the team.

Baseball finishes MVC play with 1-3 weekend

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

The baseball team defeated Indiana State only once in four tries this weekend in Terre Haute, Ind., but that's all the Salukis needed to spoil the Sycamores' conference title bid.

After the Salukis lost two games Saturday 6-5 and 9-1, they captured the first game Sunday 11-6. They lost the nightcap 10-3.

Indiana State, 13-7 and 39-17 overall, placed second in the regular season Missouri Valley standings.

The Salukis, who finished last in the conference at 6-14 and 24-33 overall, also ensured a meeting with regular season champion Wichita State in the first round of the Valley tournament.

First round games start May 17 at the site of the higher-seeded team, therefore the Salukis will open tournament action at 3,700-seat Eck Stadium-Tyler Field in Wichita, Kan. SIU-C was 1-3 against the Shockers this season.

Wichita State is defending

Valley champ, as well a third-place finisher in last season's NCAA College World Series.

Two more dates remain on the Saluki schedule before the conference tournament. The Salukis will be off this week for finals, but will take on Western Kentucky for a three-game series this Saturday and Sunday in Bowling Green.

Saluki freshman Kurt Endebrock, who has struggled defensively at shortstop, did not disappoint with his bat, though. The Effingham High School product tied a school record for most hits by a freshman with 42 in 57 games.

Junior Dave Wrona, who moved over to third base from shortstop to make room for Endebrock, originally set the record with 42 hits in 57 games in 1987.

Wrona did not play defensively this weekend. His throwing arm was injured while making a relief pitching appearance against Austin Peay last Wednesday. As the designated hitter, Wrona did punch out a 3-for-5 performance that included a double.

Chris Bead was the winning pitcher in the first game Sunday. He threw a complete game, striking out six, to improve his record to 5-4.

SIU-C opened the game with six runs on six hits in the first inning. Tim Davis had two hits in the frame. He added a triple later in the day.

Jeff Nelson had an RBI single, Ed Janke a double, Mike Kirkpatrick a 3 RBI double, and Brian Gibson an RBI triple in the first. The offensive explosion knocked out Indiana State pitcher Kurt Olson (8-3), who was replaced by Skip Wiley.

Softball splits final 4 games

Coach approaching 300th win

By Douglas Powell

The Saluki softball team came up one win short from presenting Coach Kay Brechtelbauer with her 300th career win over the weekend.

The Salukis split a doubleheader on Friday with Indiana State and on Saturday SIU-C ended regular season play by splitting with last year's Gateway Conference champions Illinois State.

The Salukis finished their season with a 23-20 overall record and a 10-8 league record, which will more than likely seed the Salukis in fourth for the Gateway Conference tournament on May 11-13 in Northern Iowa.

The Salukis opened the weekend at IAW Fields by defeating Indiana State by a score of 7-6. Sophomore catcher Michele Davidovich saved the Salukis from defeat in the bottom of the seventh.

Both teams entered the seventh inning tied 5-5. After Saluki pitcher Traci Furlow walked three batters to lead the bases, the Sycamores scored one run on a wild pitch by Furlow.

The Salukis entered the bottom of the seventh down by one run and the bottom of the lineup coming up. With two out, Billie Ramsey hit a double and Angie LeMonnier followed with an RBI double to tie the game. Davidovich stepped up and popped a bloop over the first baseman's head to score LeMonnier for the gamewinning run.

Sophomore pitcher Lisa Robinson began the opener but Furlow entered in the top of Strong comeback gives golf 4th-place finish in conference

The men's golf team did something coach Lew Hartzog has been trying to get them to do all season — provide some stiff competition.

Entering Saturday's final round of the Missouri Valley Championships in Normal, the Salukis came from nine strokes behind Bradley to pass the Braves and claim fourth place.

"The thing that encouraged me more than anything else was for the first time I have been coaching these kids, they responded well to pressure," Hartzog said. "In the round yesterday, they did what I have been saying to them all year, and they really competed."

SIU-C put together a round of 309 Saturday, which tied tournament champion Illinois State for low for the day and made up for a 331 Friday.

Illinois State won the

The women's golf team may play well on Illinois State's golf course, but the Redbirds play better.

Entering Saturday's play three strokes behind the hosts, SIU-C was plagued by poor playing conditions and a strong performance by Illinois State to finish 11 strokes behind the Redbirds in second place, 1,043-1,054.

Wichita State took third with a 1,063.

"After the first day, we were just ticked to be only three back," coach Diane Daugherty said. "On Saturday, the first nine holes really killed us. We lost 16 strokes on that nine alone, which put us 19 back."

In addition to the hot play of the Redbirds, the Salukis were forced to deal with the cold attitude of Mother Nature. Saturday's weather saw frequent snow flurries and wind gusts of 30 mph which took the wind chill factor down to 12 degrees.

"We had on everything we owned," Daugherty said. "Those are probably the coldest conditions I have ever seen golf played in."

The weather played havoc with all the player's scores. SIU-C's Lisa Johnson, who Daugherty said struggled the first day of the tournament, led the Salukis Saturday with a team low 88.

Junior Lisa Meritt tied for fourth overall with a two-day total of 260. Meritt put together rounds of 86, 83 and 91 for a two-day total.

Julie Shumaker, the defending champion, and senior Peggy Ellsworth tied for seventh at 266. Shumaker shot rounds of 87, 89 and 90

In a repeat final of last year's Missouri Valley Conference tennis championship, the Saluki men were edged again by the Wichita State Shockers, 66-63.

The Salukis won two of their singles and two doubles finals to keep pace with the Shockers. The Salukis couldn't win their singles matches which proved to be their demise. Going into the singles finals, the two teams were tied.

"We went into the final confident that we could win it all," coach Dick LeFevre said. "We believed that we were as good as Wichita."

No. 1 singles Joe Demeterco, the tournament's Outstanding Player, lost to defending champion Dave Hopper of Tulsa, 6-3, 6-4. Wichita's Paul Grubi beat SIU-C's Mickey Maule, 6-3, 5-7, 6-3, at No. 3 singles. The third Saluki finals loss came at No. 5 where George Hime lost to Wichita's Peter Swannell, 6-4, 7-5.

No. 2 singles Jairo Aldana was the Salukis' lone final winner. Aldana nipped Illinois State's Mark Guenther, 3-6, 6-3, 7-5.

"Jairo did particularly well," LeFevre said. "He got past two guys that beat him earlier in the season."

The bulk of the Saluki scoring came from the successful doubles teams. The Salukis improved upon last year by winning two finals this year. In last year's competition the Salukis didn't win one doubles match. No. 1 doubles team of Demeterco and Aldana bested Wichita's Grubi and Jason Spehr, 3-6, 6-3, 7-6. At No. 3 doubles the SIU-C combination of Hime and Juan Martinez were victorious over another Wichita duo of Swanell and Frien, 6-3, 6-2.

"Compared to earlier this season, the doubles really did well," LeFevre said. "They turned it on when we needed them."

The Salukis road to the finals began on Friday as the squad won all of its singles and doubles matches to advance to

Placement Center gives help to grads

By Alicia Hill
Staff Writer

College graduation brings more to mind than a ceremony with caps and gowns. Questions about job opportunities seem to be foremost in most student's minds.

The University Placement Center offers services designed to help students help themselves when the time comes to find a job.

According to Patricia Bassett, director of the University Placement Center, many of the people the center counsels are graduates who thought they could get a job on their own.

While the center won't turn these people away, they encourage undergraduates to plan ahead.

"They need to sign up at least one semester before they graduate," Bassett said.

The center exists to provide resources and educational training to enable individuals to find professional employment.

The services include job vacancy listings, resume referrals, campus interviews, salary information, career fairs, resume and letter writing critiques, co-op and internships, international jobs, a resource library and free resource materials.

The center itself is in the process of installing a computerized resume and credential database which will automate placement services to employers and candidates.

The center should be completely converted to the system, The Resume Expert, by July 1. The system will replace the paper files that are presently used to store student resumes.

"We expect a large increase in placement from the computer system. It will allow us to get student credentials out to a larger number of employers," Bassett said.

Any student interested in having their credentials referred to employers for full-time employment or paid internships and co-op positions is encouraged to sign up.

There is a $15 charge for UPC registration, which covers all of the services the center offers.

There is an additional $25 fee for The Resume Expert software, if a student chooses to use the system.

University Placement also sponsors a series of workshops each semester to provide information on employment opportunities and job seeking skills, such as interviewing, resume writing and employer networking.

"So many students don't know what they can do with their majors, and there are so many opportunities," Bassett said.

"We teach students how to research and discover what's out there," she said.

"Any student who applies for a job through a newspaper is going to be frustrated," she said.

Nationally, statistics show that students who utilize placement services not only shorten the length of their unemployment, but also avoid underemployment, Bassett said.

Underemployment is working below one's skill level.

The center is sponsoring a last minute job placement registration at the student center on graduation weekend.

Counselors will be available from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on May 13 in the Ohio Room and May 14 in the Mississippi Room.

The counselors will register students for job referrals, help with resumes and answer last minute questions on job hunting.

Newsletter lists job openings

By Jeanne Bickler
Staff Writer

The University's Career Placement Center offers a bi-monthly listing of available jobs in their newsletter, the Career Grapevine.

The 10- to 13-page publication includes corporate, governmental, education and not-for-profit job listings from all over the United States.

The Career Grapevine is an updated version of the Saluki Job Finder service the Placement Center used to have. The Saluki Job Finder contained all the same types of job listings as the Career Grapevine, but there were separate newsletters for corporate, governmental, education and not-for-profit careers.

"The Grapevine includes all of these together, plus stories that counselors write and information about job fairs. There is also a section that congratulates graduates of SIU," Sharon Burns, a worker on the Grapevine, said.

"More than half of the listings are for teaching jobs, both elementary and collegiate. The Grapevine helps everybody, but it really helps teachers a lot," Burns said.

The Grapevine is trying to get more listings from companies.

Employers mail or phone in job listings. If the listing requests student resumes, the Placement Center sends out resumes of students who are listed with them.

Another difference about the Grapevine is the cost. The Saluki Job Finder was free, but the Grapevine costs $2 for a single copy. Students can get a year's subscription for $25 or receive it by registering with the Placement Center.

"People like it (the Grapevine) much better. They can see job opportunities they never thought of before now that all the listings are together," Burns said.

'Major' decisions

Report shows students change course study

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

If you can't seem to decide on an academic major, you're not alone. A 1988 University-wide study showed slightly over half of the traditional students changed their major at least once.

The study, which consisted of first-time, on-campus freshmen entering SIU-C in the fall semesters of 1981, 1982 and 1983, showed how factors such as sex, race and major affected the pattern of changing majors.

The study, done by Cheryl Farabaugh Dorkins, project coordinator for Institutional Research and Studies, found that males change majors more frequently than females, foreign students are more likely to change majors at least once and students entering engineering, science, business and liberal arts changed majors more often than did students of other majors.

In addition, the study showed that the longer a student stayed in school, the greater the likelihood they would change their majors.

The study tracked freshmen who entered the University from fall 1981 through fall 1983 and followed them through spring 1987. The study was performed to see why it took students more than four years to graduate from the University.

The findings showed that 46 percent of males studied changed majors at least once, while 43 percent of the females changed.

Caucasians were likely to change majors 45 percent of the time, while minority students changed majors 49 percent of the time. Of the foreign students studied, 49 percent were likely to change majors.

Students entering engineering were the most likely to change majors, with 57 percent of freshmen who declared engineering changing to another major. Those with a communications major were least likely to change, with only 30 percent of students changing.

The number of semesters attended is also a large deciding factor, according to the study. After four semesters at the University, under one-third of students have changed majors at least once. After five semesters, over 40 percent of students have changed. After seven semesters, 70 percent have changed.

Students who complete two or fewer semesters change their majors only 8 percent of the time. The study suggests that these dropouts could have been retained in some other academic program.

Dorkins said this study could show why SIU-C has a low graduation rate compared to other universities. She said a small percentage of SIU-C students graduate after four or five semesters, but that's because they're changing their majors and graduating a few semesters later.

Dorkins also said the study showed students not only changing academic majors, but colleges as well.

Planning necessary to graduate on time

By Miguel Alba
Staff Writer

Jeff is anxiously awaiting the end of the semester. He is expecting to graduate, but at the last minute he finds out he does not have the required credits.

Jeff will have to stay another semester to fulfill the requirements. He is not alone.

In May of last year, 5,740 combined graduate and undergraduate students applied for graduation. Of those degree candidates, 1,306 did not meet the graduation requirements for some reason.

The majority of students who do not complete graduation requirements usually find themselves in that situation because of failed course work or obtaining an incomplete. Lavida Cruse, assistant director for records maintenance, said.

Cruse said in order to have the graduation process go smoothly, all students should keep open communications with their academic advisers.

"Students should check with their advisers before the term they plan to graduate," Cruse said. "They (students) can get a grad check, or a senior check, that indicates what a student lacks for a degree. Most colleges give the student a copy of it."

Cruse said the University allows undergraduate students five weeks after commencement to straighten out any record problems such as grade changes, credit transfers and received incomplete grades.

If graduating students are in good standing financially and academically, their diplomas will be mailed six to eight weeks after commencement.

Cruse said graduate students follow different deadlines because they receive their diplomas on stage during graduation ceremonies.

Linda Seibert, journalism school academic adviser, said students should keep accurate records on their academic progress and stay in touch with their advisers.

Seibert said this practice will allow the student to double check and catch any mistakes that might jeopardize graduating on time.

"Advisers make mistakes," Seibert said. "We're all people. We all make mistakes."

Seibert said students sometimes make program changes in the middle of the semester, or self-advice, without pointing the change out to their advisers. This deviation from the set program can cause problems if the coursework selected does not fit in with what is required.

However, the student is ultimately responsible for making sure everything is in order with records, academic standing and financial responsibilities to the University, Seibert said.

"If there is any question in their minds they (students) should set up an appointment with their adviser, even if it is too late to do anything about it," Seibert said, adding that it is better to know if there are any problems than to continue being confused.

Suzie Berkes, civil engineering and mechanics academic adviser, said students should plan out a traditional four-year schedule on paper with their advisers by their sophomore year.

Berkes said this method gives the student a good idea of where they stand as they go through college.

"There's a potential for a big problem if students are not aware of the requirements," Berkes said. "Students should be aware what the requirements are."

Graduation ceremonies set

By University News Service

A class of nearly 5,800 graduates will receive diplomas during spring commencement exercises Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Nine ceremonies will be conducted for the University's major academic units over the three-day weekend.

Activities begin Friday evening with exercises for the College of Human Resources, College of Liberal Arts and College of Technical Careers.

Harington Wood, Jr., presiding judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals, 7th circuit, in Springfield, will speak at the School of Law commencement rites at 4 p.m. Saturday in Shryock Auditorium.

Wood, appointed by President Gerald R. Ford in 1976, has been U.S. Attorney for Illinois and served as Assistant Attorney General of the Civil Division at the U.S. Department of Justice in the early 1970s.

Graduates in the Colleges of Business and Administration, Communications and Fine Arts, Education, Engineering and Technology, Science, and Agriculture also will receive degrees Saturday, as will students in the independent University Studies program.

Master's and Ph.D. degrees will be awarded at 1 p.m. Sunday at the SIU Arena.

The complete commencement schedule is as follows:

Agriculture: Saturday, 11 a.m., Shryock Auditorium.

Speaker will be Eugene H. Friebe of Bloomington, i.e. marketing manager for Growmark, Inc. The Alumni to receive achievement awards

Eight to be honored at graduation ceremonies

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer
and University News Service

The Alumni Achievement Awards, which recognizes the outstanding professional, career and public service contributions, will be given to eight graduates of the University Friday and Saturday at commencement exercises.

"Each of the colleges are given the opportunity to select the outstanding individual that has come from their department," Patricia A. McNeil, the assistant director of Alumni Services, said.

McNeil said the award is presented annually by the individual colleges on behalf of the Alumni Association.

She said each of the colleges form search committees early in the year to determine the outstanding alumnus in their field.

This year's recipients will receive medallions designed in the shape of Old Main.

This year's recipients will receive medallions designed in the shape of Old Main, the building on the University's crest, and engraved with their name, college and date of achievement, McNeil said. The medallion was designed by Brent Kington, director of the School of Art and Design.

This year's recipients are:

■ Eugene H. Priebe of Bloomington, a 1959 graduate from the College of Agriculture who is feed marketing manager for Growmark, Inc.

■ Kenneth N. Pontikes of

Graduation brings business to area

By Richard Nunez
Staff Writer

Graduation ceremonies at SIU-C bring family and friends from around the country and the influx of people is welcomed by many Carbondale businesses.

John Ryan, president of the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce, said events such as graduation, Springfest and the Great Cardboard Boat Regatta "have a positive economic impact on the community."

Ryan said the influx of people is good business for restaurants, hotels, clothing stores and other businesses in the Carbondale area.

Most area businesses expect more customers at graduation time and look forward to the business, he said.

But even without events such as graduation and Springfest, Ryan said the University plays a large part in the success of a lot of area businesses.

"The 20,000 plus students have to be clothed, fed and provided in various other ways," Ryan said. "If SIU didn't exist, this town would be the size of Herrin. They're the big dog on the block."

Ryan said when students are away on breaks, such as Thanksgiving, Christmas and summer, business in Carbondale tends to slow down.

The Board of Directors of the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce recently passed a resolution urging the University not to close for the proposed fall break that would eliminate Halloween Fair Days, Ryan said.

Ryan said businesses in Carbondale are afraid the proposed fall break will hurt business.

He said the University is the single largest employer in the Southern Illinois area, attracting prospective employees from all over the nation, as well as the state.

Graduates will remember Strip, state parks

By Megan Hauck
Staff Writer

Most prospective University graduates tend to classify their memories as either very good or very, very bad.

General consensus has revealed that the Strip, state parks and friends have made for good times, while Woody Hall and parking tickets will not be missed.

Derek Holcomb, graduating in May with a master's degree in health education, said his most difficult time at the University was learning to be a student after being a member of the work force.

A more recent memory that he said he won't soon forget was sealing 500 envelopes for a research project.

ON A more optimistic note, Susan Auman, a retail major graduating in May, said the beauty of Southern Illinois has made a lasting impression on her years at the University.

"I chose SIU because of Giant City and the spillways," Auman said. "None of the other state schools in Illinois have what SIU has — the nature and all there is to do down here as far as parks go."

"It wasn't the town, that's for sure," she said.

Auman said the diverse crowds of people are more prevalent here than at other universities.

SHE SAID one of her more painful memories was having to live with a large group of people to save money.

Matt Ulbert, a senior in radio and television who will graduate in December, said the Southern Illinois

"I've done my share of standing in line (at Woody Hall), and it's not something I'd like to remember about this place."

environment has contributed to some of his more fond memories.

"I like to be outdoors a lot," Ulbert said. "I like getting out of class and going fishing whenever I want to."

But, Ulbert, of Chicago, said the six-hour drive north he must make once each month for National Guard duty will be something he'll gladly forego to graduate.

NOAH DURHAM, a senior in cinema and photography, said Woody Hall made his life hectic until he received in-state status.

Durham, of St. Louis, said he applied for in-state tuition a few days before an out-of-state roommate applied for the same thing.

"She received it and I didn't — on the basis that I turned my form in late," he said. "But I actually handed in mine before she did!"

Sivnanthan Chelliah, a masters student in computer science who will graduate in May, said the peaceful atmosphere of the University and the friends he has made here have made his stay enjoyable.

CHELLIAH, A native of Sri Lanka, said the food commonly served in the United States took some getting used to.

"When I came here, I had some hard times getting used to the food, like Big Macs," he said. "We eat beef, but not in this form."

Chelliah said curry is the more popular way to prepare beef in Sri Lanka.

David Kahn, scheduled to graduate in May with a degree in aviation management, said the University has been a cultural mecca for him. "and a place where some people I know get more of an education in the bars than anywhere else."

KAHN SAID his experiences with Woody Hall and parking are not high on his list of things to remember about the University.

"It takes an average of about two weeks up there just to get a student loan," he said. "I've done my share of standing in line, and it's not something I'd like to remember about this place."
