Work study award limits eliminated

By Jeanne Eickler
Staff Writer

Beginning next fall, students receiving college work study will be able to continue working on-campus after the maximum amount of their award is fulfilled, Janet Finnerty, public information specialist at the office of Student Work and Financial Assistance said.

Change have been made in the University's college work study program to benefit both students and employers, Finnerty said.

Presently, students are terminated and cannot work on campus until the next school year when they have earned the full amount of their college work study award (a set limit on their earnings), she said.

After the change, students will have the option to remain on at their jobs at the request of their employers when the award amounts run out. They will be paid through non-college work study funds.

Students also have the option to work at other on-campus jobs as a regular (non-college work study) employee.

"With the new college work study program, students who had previously rejected the program because of the earning limits may change their minds," Finnerty said.

The switch means departments will be able to keep student workers longer, Pam Britton, financial aid office director, said.

She said some employers were running out of college work study funds right before the end of the semester, forcing them to terminate their college work study student employee(s). Finding new employees late in the semester is a real problem, she said.

The amount of money available to students through the college work study program is determined by financial aid needed and how many forms of financial aid a student is receiving.

The college work study program pays students through federal, state and local funds. This year the federal government paid 80 percent of the wages and the University paid the other 20 percent through state and local funds.

U.S. reports voting fraud in Panama

PANAMA CITY, Panama (UPI) — Police and paramilitary squads firing shotguns and rifles broke up a rally by opposition supporters claiming victory in presidential elections that U.S. observers said were "stolen" by the government.

Witnesses said at least two people were wounded in the afternoon rally by thousands of opponents of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega's hand-picked presidential candidate.

Former President Jimmy Carter accused the government of fraud and declared the opposition had won Sunday's election seen as a referendum on Noriega's de facto rule. A separate delegation sent by President Bush cited widespread irregularities and many cases of fraud.

Both Guillermo Endara of the anti-Noriega Civil Democratic Opposition Alliance and pro-Noriega candidate Carlos Duque of the National Liberation Coalition have claimed victory. No official results had been released by Monday afternoon, leaving the outcome of the disputed election confused.

Carter, who led a 19-member international delegation of observers to Panama, denounced the vote as a fraud and called for "a worldwide outcry against this dictator who has stolen the election."

"The government has taken the elections by fraud, there's no doubt about it," said Carter, who was praised Monday in pro-Noriega newspapers as "a friend of Panama."

Carter said thousands of Director: School of Journalism needs to improve for accreditation

By Daniel Wallenberg
Staff Writer

The SIU-C School of Journalism received provisional accreditation from the national accrediting council because of a lack of funding, Walter Jaehnig, director of the School of Journalism, said.

The group, representing the Accreditation Council on Education in Journalism and Mass Communication, visited the University last November and gave its report over the weekend at a meeting in Atlanta, Ga. Jaehnig attended the meeting and said the report showed the school lacked in four areas studied by the group.

The school is lacking in faculty, equipment and money for travel; items necessary to run a good school of journalism, Jaehnig said.

Student records and advisement of undergraduates was lacking as well, Jaehnig said.

The accreditation report indicated not enough career and placement advice was available for undergraduates. This is partly because of the turnover of advisers - three in the last two and a half years, Jaehnig said.

A lack of internships and work experience of journalism undergraduates posed another problem, Jaehnig said.

The report said that in addition to the experience students receive on campus, such as work on the Daily Egyptian or in sports information, students need more practical experience in summer internships or work done under faculty supervision.

The final problem dealt with a lack of public service by the department to those other than University students.

The accreditation team felt the school was not extending further than the students in the journalism school and that faculty members should be dealing with a broad area of professional and educational organizations, such as the Illinois Press Association, Jaehnig said.

Anna Paddon, journalism lecturer, said the journalism department is working to correct the items the ac-

Shuttle glides to landing

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (UPI) — The five-member crew of the shuttle Atlantis safely glided to a hot desert touchdown Monday, closing out a near-perfect flight highlighted by the successful launch of a $530 million Venus probe.

With commander David Walker and co-pilot Ronald Grabe at the controls, the powerless 96-ton spaceplane gently floated to a picture-perfect landing at 2:44 p.m. under a partly cloudy sky, barreling along at more than 220 mph after a final descent through a crosswind gusting up to 18 mph.

Left behind in space was the Magellan radar mapping probe, named after the 16th century Portuguese explorer, which the Atlantis crew fired toward cloud-shrouded Venus shortly after blastoff last Thursday.

"Atlantis, Houston, understand wheels stopped; congratulations and nice landing!" radioed astronaut Frank Culbertson in mission control at Houston after the shuttle rolled to a stop. "You've extended the shuttle's reach far beyond Earth orbit now. Commodore Magellan would approve."

"Roger that," Walker replied. "Thank you, Frank."

For Walker, 44, Grabe, 43, and crewmates Mary Cleave, 42, Mark Lee, 36, and Norman Thagard, 45, touchdown marked the triumphant

Ethical violation caused ban of firm

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer

A Chicago-based sales promotion corporation was banned from recruiting students on campus for summer employment because of "an ethical violation" involving a $20 recruitment fee, Terence Buck, dean of student services, said.

"It was brought to our attention late Wednesday that they (Tandem Marketing Systems, Inc.) were telling students to bring $20 to the interview session," he said.

The corporation, which specializes in the sale of cutlery and kitchenware, was notified Thursday morning it would not be allowed to conduct interviews later that day and Friday on University property, Buck said.

Barbara Costello, a counselor with the placement office, said she called the corporation's headquarters Wednesday afternoon to inform its officials that fee collection from prospective employees during recruitment procedures was not allowed on University property.

A representative of the company had said Wednesday that University officials knew in advance about the corporation's fees and practices.

"I told Sylvia Barbay at the (Placement) Center that I was going to do this at 1 p.m. Tuesday before I saw one student and there seemed to be no problem," Todd Whitaker, district manager for the corporation, said at the time.

However, Buck said the ban was "a matter of principle" and "had nothing to do with the corporation's business practices."

Beirut fighting starts again shattering proposed plan

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Hundreds of shells fired by dueling Christian and Moslem gunners rained on Beirut Monday, triggering dozens of fires and killing at least 15 people in one of the fiercest battles of weeks of sectarian fighting, police said. Artillery shells and rockets crashed into apartment buildings, cars and shops on most streets in the third day of renewed fighting that has shattered an 11-day-old Arab-mediated peace plan.

Official: More workers needed to clean spill

VALDEZ, Alaska (UPI) — The top Coast Guard official in Valdez told a Congressional hearing Monday that Exxon Corp. needs twice as many workers to restore U.S. shoreline to its pre-spill condition before winter sets in. "I'm very uncomfortable with the force structure they have suggested," Vice Adm. Clyde Robbins said of Exxon's plan to put 3,400 people on shoreline cleanup duty.

Israel clamps curfew on Gaza amid violence

JERUSALEM (UPI) — The military clamped an indefinite curfew Monday on the entire occupied Gaza Strip and prohibited West Bank Palestinians from entering Israel as the country prepared to celebrate 41 years of statehood. In the wake of a surge of violence against Israelis, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir called the 17-month-old Palestinian uprising "unquestionably a war against the state of Israel."

Mexico to prosecute suspected cult members

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Five suspected members of a drug-smuggling cult accused of killing 15 people near the U.S. border, including an American student, will be prosecuted in Mexico, authorities said Monday. The decision, which followed a statement by U.S. officials that they do not intend to extradite the suspects, means that if convicted the five will not face the death penalty and may not be jailed for more than 30 years.

Greenpeace: Nuclear bomb on ocean floor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A nuclear bomb that fell off the aircraft carrier USS Ticonderoga in 1965 was lost only 70 miles from a Japanese island chain and is still believed to be on the Pacific Ocean floor, Greenpeace said Monday. The ship was returning from duty off Vietnam. Greenpeace said it is the first time it has been established that nuclear weapons were carried on U.S. aircraft carriers during the Vietnam War.

Expert: Administration altered conclusions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A top NASA expert on global warming told a Senate panel Monday that Bush administration bureaucrats watered down his scientific conclusions about possible environmental disaster from a slowly warming Earth. President Bush's spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, defended changes by the administration's Office of Management and Budget in the prepared testimony of Dr. James Hansen of the space agency's Goddard Institute for Space Studies.

5 politicians, 11 others killed in plane crash

OSKARSHAMN, Sweden (UPI) — Five leading Swedish politicians and 11 others were killed Monday when a commuter jet crashed on landing in southeastern Sweden, the nation's worst aviation disaster in 12 years, a government spokesman said. The politicians, four parliament members and Stockholm's Social Democratic party leader, were members of the Parliamentary Committee for Post and Telecommunications, which had traveled to the coastal town of Oskarshamn for a fact-finding visit, the spokeswoman said.

Parents of slain Sims girl will not take polygraph test

ALTON (UPI) — The parents of Heather Sims, who are under suspicion in the infant's suffocation death, will not take polygraph tests, the couple's lawyer said Monday. Police have advised Robert Sims, 37, and his wife, Paula, 30, they should expect to be charged with murder soon, perhaps later this week.

Former student books bands

By Wayne Wallace
Entertainment Editor

Victor Westbrook was an 18-year-old senior at Carbondale Community High School when he "fibbed" to the management of WIDB to get a job as an announcer on a soul music radio show.

"See, you had to be a University student to get on, but I just slipped by them somehow," Westbrook said in a telephone interview seven years later.

The Jackson County native, who graduated from CCHS in 1983 and briefly attended SIU-C in the summer of 1985, is now a booking and contractual adviser with Unique Entertainment of Chicago.

With this job, Westbrook is putting his love of music and his eye for talent to good use.

"I have the connections to let big wigs hear young artists," he said.

"At Unique, we look at the prospects of new artists and how to invest money in shows. We try to get new acts together with an agent and a contract," Westbrook said.

"I give everybody a chance. I wasn't really given a chance, so in my job I find those avenues to help others make it," he added.

But Westbrook admits his own musical talents are somewhat limited. "I just enjoy working with amateur groups and making them big."

Westbrook said he has not forgotten his hometown. He recently booked Rob Base and D.J. E-Z Rock, an up-and-coming rap group, to perform at II Hearis during Springfest weekend.

"Unique has just gotten into rap music. In fact, we just sign a new rap group with Priority Records," Westbrook said.

"Right now we're in the process of helping an SIU group get onto a label. We're trying to give them good exposure by booking them with bigger acts," he said, noting that success may be just around the corner for Couture, a Southern Illinois-based soul band.

"They do funk and jazz and write their own material," Westbrook said. "And they started off recording in their living room."

Westbrook said his main goal is to put potential groups out in circulation in the hopes of discovering a superstar.

"It's not gonna happen overnight for a group, you know. It's a long, discouraging process. And artists need somebody to push them. It's not over once they're signed."

Westbrook said another of his goals is to bring more professional artists to SIU-C. "Carbondale needs more big-name entertainment," he said.

"Halloween is one of the best things that ever happened to Carbondale," Westbrook said. "I've been around a lot, and Halloween in Carbondale is second only to Mardi Gras in New Orleans."

Wrap up semester before pressure hits

THE END IS NEAR

And that means finals week. This makes most get wide-eyed and breathe rapidly. They probably would rather not think about it, but basically it means the end of the semester, moving — time to wrap things up.

Well here are some sensible and helpful suggestions to ease the stress of final exams and moving.

■ As far as exams are concerned, studying is the best bet. Not waiting until the night before helps too. For those with severe test anxiety, reviewing with a friend might help confidence.

■ Everyone who is moving and won't have the same address next semester should make sure your address has been changed, and not just with the University so you can receive schedules and anxiously awaited bursar bills.

IF YOU LIVE off campus your final power and phone bills probably will be sent to your home address. While you might not want to receive these, consider they often come with a refund.

■ Those who live off campus also must check on getting utilities disconnected and deadlines for moving out of apartments and trailers. It is best to notify the service companies as soon as possible and give them a date to stop your billing and a forwarding address.

■ If you live in the dorms you should consider that it will be a busy week with people moving out all the time and lots of extra people around. You should be extra careful to keep your room locked, and when moving, don't leave your things unattended.

■ You also should pack early. Don't wait until Saturday morning if you have to be out of your room by noon. Consider you must allow time to move your things out, have your room checked, and turn in your key.

■ EVERYONE SHOULD BE more careful because of the extra traffic in town this week. Especially on Saturday when parents are in town for graduation and moving day. Plan some extra time to get where you're going.

■ Make a list of everything you have to take care of before leaving town and try to do them before the last minute.

These things may sound like common sense, but the pressure of finals week can make everyone lose some of their sense.

Good luck on finals and have a good break!

Opinions from elsewhere

Scripps Howard News Service

Plan to spend more money on gasoline. The handwriting is on the wall. Apparently what President Bush meant when he asked us to read his lips, no new taxes, was no new "federal" taxes.

Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner says there are no plans to increase the federal fuel taxes, but ... Ah yes, there is a "but."

One part of the "but" is Skinner feels some sort of revenue increase will be needed on the state levels.

With highway bridges falling down and road surfaces needing billions of dollars in repair, there's little question that something has to be done to raise funds. The tragic loss of life that occurred with recent bridge collapses in Tennessee is something Americans can't accept.

Skinner says he and the president see the need for what they call "user fees." Skeptics call this a thinly disguised tax.

Critics of user fees argue that the highways belong to everyone and serve everyone, not just the so-called "users." And they point out that collecting a user fee would be complicated and expensive. Toll booths would be one answer, but they're labor-intensive and only work on limited access roadways.

Currently, nearly 90 percent of interstate highway costs are borne by the federal government. Proposals to reduce that balance and make the states pay more would put the burden on the states to raise their fuel tax.

But there's a glimmer of hope, at least for the time being. A world oil glut should keep prices down for a while, and we in the United States pay about the lowest fuel taxes in the free world.

Football needs endorsement

Being a former high school coach and a strong supporter of SIU football, I have watched and listened to the arguments of Jerome Handler with a certain amount of amusement. However, I now feel that it is time to make a statement concerning our program here at SIU.

First, commitment to football excellence has already been made: A. by putting nearly a million dollars into the improvements of McAndrew Stadium, a firm endorsement was made; B. By hiring Jim Hart, the most famous Saluki football player in history, the firm commitment was strengthened; C. By hiring Bob Smith and his staff with a long term commitment, the endorsements have been underlined.

I submit that anyone who suggests the demise of football after these strong commitments have already passed, is an individual with biased personal perceptions only, and a huge ego.

This person has said no notoriety had been brought to this university by football. This is ridiculous. SIU is one of the very few to boast a national championship in the past decade.

This negative persons has attacked the integrity of the football staff, implying that they institute improprieties when working with young men.

I challenge that he has never met any member of our fine professional staff, who are incidentally the best ambassadors this University could possibly have.

In recruiting, clinic talks, public speaking engagements and general travel, they promote the fine academic program of SIU hundreds of times during the year.

Mr. Handler has made accusations that there are racial unbalances of some sort involved. He really is on thin ice in this area because this team has a 35 percent minority representation of happy, hard-working student athletes.

He has implied that football players do not enhance the academic reputation of this University, using 23 percent graduation rate from all incoming freshmen football players.

I submit that the young people who left were mostly fine students and they left because they couldn't make it athletically, financially or socially. The facts are this: we had, in 1988, over 20 young men win academic honors.

The financial accusations are also unbalanced because many pluses have been overlooked. We will have 135 members reporting in August. These young men, whether scholarship athletes or not, each will pay to the University through scholarship or out-of-pocket, some $5,000 in tuition, room board and fees.

There are University services that benefit from athletics. When outside firms were allowed to print football programs a few years back, printing service had to lay off people. If it were not for athletics, primarily football, laundry service would have to shut down. Also, if football were to be dropped, what would happen to the Marching Salukis?

Lack of attendance is another area. We averaged over 11,000 fans at home for the first two games. This was the best in the gateway Conference.

Southern Illinois football is a valuable and viable part of the athletic department, the University and the community. If we are going forward with the commitment to excellence in football that has already been made, we have to eliminate the distractions and particularly the false accusations that have been made.

It has been an unfair, negative campaign because none of the fine people actually involved have done one thing wrong. We need a 100 percent positive endorsement to go forward with this great effort and to realize prejudicial personal opinions as such and dismiss them. — Don Little, doctoral student, health education.

Not all interested in student movement

I feel very uncomfortable about one paragraph in the article about the Chinese student movement in the May 5 DE.

Ramsey, "president of the Republic of China Student Organization," not a representative of the students from the Peoples Republic of China, said that "some of the estimated 110 Chinese students attending the University were afraid to attend the discussion on campus last Thursday" for fear of the Chinese government finding out of their attendance. Many students have family still living in China."

To my best knowledge, this is pure nonsense. The statement is completely stereotyped and biased.

As a graduate student from mainland China, I meet many students from China on a daily basis after class and discuss what is going on back home.

When talking about the discussion on Thursday, those who said they would not go have two reasons: First, it is the busiest time of the semester. They really cannot afford a whole evening when there is tons of school work waiting to be done.

Second, some of them are simply not interested in activities like this. They are not interested in politics. They care about China, but they don't care about participating in activities like this themselves.

I really think it is an inappropriate statement to have printed. — Lingling Han, graduate students, sociology.

School of Journalism adds rules for entering students

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

Students entering the School of Journalism in the fall semester will have to meet additional requirements in language skills and grade point average to be accepted, Walter Jaehnig, director of the School of Journalism, said.

Jaehnig said he is increasing the requirements to improve the school's faculty to student ratio.

Students entering the school in the fall will have to meet a minimum 2.25 GPA and receive a minimum score of 70 percent on the Language Skills Exam. A foreign language requirement could be added by the fall semester of 1991.

These requirements will act both as a screening device and as an indicator of students' language skill level, he said.

"If students don't have good language skills, then newswriting and advertising probably aren't good fields for them to go into," Jaehnig said.

Linda Seibert, academic adviser for the School of Journalism, said the additional entrance requirements will eliminate the overload of students entering journalism.

Students who have poor language skills or aren't willing to work to maintain good grades won't have a place in the school, Seibert said. This will get the number of students down to a more manageable number, especially in advertising.

Seibert said the Language Skills Exam tests students' skill level in analogy, sentence structure, usage and vocabulary.

Although a 70 percent on the test is required before a student can take the basic writing courses in journalism, only about half the students taking the test pass it each time it is given, she said. This requirement has not always been strictly enforced in the past, she said.

The 2.25 GPA requirement to enter the school will prove that the student is willing to work to maintain good grades, she said. These two requirements should attract a better quality of student, Seibert said.

Jaehnig said the School of Journalism has had a 75 percent change in faculty in the past two years, and has reduced in size from 16 faculty members to 11 in ten years.

At the same time, the school's strong reputation and tradition have attracted an increasing number of students.

Together, these factors have resulted in a poor faculty to student ratio throughout the school, but especially in the advertising program, he said. This causes overcrowded classrooms and overworked faculty.

"Right now we're not as strong as we were, or as strong as we hope to be in the future," Jaehnig said.

creditation committee said needed to be strengthened.

"I would say we have a great program and I think the accreditation people know that," Paddon said.

"I don't think journalism students should worry that their degree is of less value," Paddon said. "I believe it (provisional accreditation) is short term," she said.

"I would like to see us get more financial support," she said.

Jyotika Ramaprasad, assistant professor of advertising, said the advertising sequence is working toward full accreditation.

Ramaprasad said the advertising department is working on new curriculum to broaden the advertising sequence.

Other strengths and weaknesses were noticed by the accreditation team, Jaehnig said.

The team was impressed with the enthusiasm and dedication of the faculty and its high morale, Jaehnig said.

Also, the presence of the DE was advantageous in providing students with practical work experiences.

Some of the weaknesses cited by the report included the school's high faculty turnover in recent years, low faculty salaries and a high student to faculty ratio.

Jaehnig did not know the exact ratio but said about 300 advertising students and 100 news-editorial students were enrolled and because of budget cuts over the last few years, some faculty and graduate positions had to be cut.

Jaehnig said about 75 percent of the faculty has changed in the last two years.

Other problems include insufficient computer facilities, a small undergraduate support staff (such as a lack of secretaries) and an advertising program with a narrow focus of education.

Jaehnig said the news-editorial sequence of the journalism school was first accredited in 1960 and has received provisional accreditation in the past in 1976.

Each school that applies for accreditation is visited every six years.

bad or faulty business practices by them (the corporation)," he said.

"All we are saying is that, as a University, we cannot endorse the practice of collecting money from students as a precondition to employment," he said.

Whitaker had said an unidentified woman from the University had called the corporation late Wednesday to ask if the corporation would change its policy about the fee.

"So this person calls us after I'd made 418 contacts, 258 of which I had planned to interview, and told me I couldn't do it. I don't understand," he said.

Costello said she met Whitaker Thursday in an effort to clarify the matter.

She said that, while the corporation offered not to collect the money on campus, the alternative offer still was not in agreement with University placement policies.

"I met with him and he tried to negotiate for the use of our facility, on the condition that he didn't physically collect the fee on campus. I told him that violated the spirit, if not the actual wording, of our ethical principles," she said.

The corporation, which was banned from the University of Illinois' campus at Champaign-Urbana for similar reasons, was granted permission by the University Placement Center to set up a recruitment table in the Student Center and conduct follow-up interviews in two rooms in Woody Hall during three days last week.

Costello said the corporation had contacted University placement on March 21, but had not sent any literature or references prior to its visit, as is customary with corporate recruiters.

"We had never heard of them. We had to accept their claims in good faith. We like to keep tabs on them, but we simply don't have the money to check out all the companies that come here," she said.

Although the University has not investigated the veracity of the corporation's claims, Bill Hall, president of Undergraduate Student Government, said Wednesday that concerned students had approached the USG office with questions concerning the legitimacy of the corporation.

"This fee question is really upsetting a lot of people. They want to know what's behind it and why do you need money from new employees," he said.

During the course of the week, the corporation circulated fliers offering part- and full-time summer missionary positions with a stipulated salary of $4,000 for a full-time employee throughout campus, which Hall had said caused further speculation.

Summer education program offers option to TV for kids

By Alicia Hill
Staff Writer

A University sponsored summer education program, "Summer Southern Style," will provide elementary and high school students with an alternative to spending hours in front of the television.

The program, which is separated into career, academic, and sports divisions, will offer a combined total of 20 courses allowing students to get a head start on a career, challenge their intellect, or compete in a sport.

The program is co-sponsored by SIU-C's Division of Continuing Education and the Technical Careers, Engineering and Technology, and Education colleges; Intercollegiate Athletics; and the Recreation Center.

All courses, which will be held on campus, will be directed by a faculty member and assisted by University students and staff as well as regional high school teachers and coaches.

Course costs vary by program from $45 to $225.

Students are offered the option of residence during their course for an additional fee. The students will be housed in University Park's Neely Hall.

The courses are designed to instruct students in areas of engineering, design, photography, drawing, computers, and various sports.

The camps include swimming, volleyball, baseball, softball, cheerleading, football, boys and girls basketball.

The first course is scheduled to begin on June 2.

Those interested should contact SIU-C's Division of Continuing Education for more detailed course information.

Amtrak trains will provide luggage car

Anticipating heavy student traffic this week, Amtrak has added a luggage car to its daily 4 p.m. train to Chicago.

Students who will be leaving Carbondale on the scheduled 4 p.m. Amtrak train must have their baggage checked by 3 p.m. by train officials to have their luggage placed in the luggage car.

Passengers who have not checked their luggage in by 3 will have it shipped in the morning on the regularly scheduled 4:25 a.m. train.

Don Jones, Amtrak ticket agent, said passengers are allowed to take a maximum of two pieces of luggage on-board and to check three pieces, not weighing more than 150 pounds, in the luggage car.

Illinois received $368 million in drought relief aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government said Monday that Illinois farmers and ranchers suffering through last summer's drought received $368 million in federal relief aid — the second highest of any state in the nation.

In a monthly update on the government's 1988 drought relief law, the Agriculture Department said North Dakota led the nation in payments with $402.5 million. Wisconsin was third with $357 million, Iowa followed with $315 million and Minnesota rounded out the top five with $308 million.

In all, more than 736,000 American farmers and ranchers received a total of $3.5 billion in aid under the law, including $333 million paid in April.

The drought law was the largest federal disaster program ever approved by Congress. Weeks of searing heat slashed U.S. grain production by 26 percent last year.

Farmers and ranchers in six other states — Indiana,

Michigan, Montana, Ohio, South Dakota and Texas — each received more than $100 million.

The government said a total of 736,220 farmers were aided by the end of April. The centerpiece of the drought law was a formula for disaster payments to farmers who lost more than 35 percent of a crop with an extra dose of help for losses over 75 percent.

Most of the money — $3.14 billion — was paid to cover crop losses. The department said 103,845 farmers and ranchers received $376 million in aid for livestock programs. Under the two major programs, the government shares up to half of the cost of buying feed or sells surplus grain at low prices.

The department said $1.9 million had been spent on a cost-share program to reseed scorched pastures and $163,670 was spent on the Tree Assistance Program, under which the government helped pay the cost of replacing seedlings killed by the drought.

When the law was passed, drought aid was estimated to cost $3.9 billion. Two economists have estimated the price tag may be slightly lower because crop damage was less severe than feared. The deadline for applying for most types of aid under the program has passed.

During April, 79,843 farmers and ranchers received aid totaling $333 million.

Carbondale High to present drama on Thoreau event

Carbondale Community High School will present "The Night Thoreau Spent in Jail," a drama by Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee, at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday in the CCHS Auditorium, 200 North Springer St.

Advance tickets are $2.50. Tickets at the door are $3.

The play is directed by Marj Boyle of the CCHS theater department. Assistant director is senior Lisa Hanes.

Lawrence and Lee, famous as the playwrights of "Inherit the Wind," focused "Thoreau in Jail" on an actual event in the life of "Walden Pond" author Henry David Thoreau.

Chicago, Knicks to begin playoff series Tuesday

NEW YORK (UPI) — Michael Jordan granted the New York Knicks their wish, and now he will try to turn that longing into loathing.

Jordan sank the winning shot with no time left in Game 5 of Chicago's opening series with the Cleveland Cavaliers to send the Bulls into the Eastern Conference semifinals against New York. Game 1 of the best-of-seven series is Tuesday night at Madison Square Garden.

The Knicks coveted Chicago because they would have the home-court advantage. They were not looking forward to meeting Mr. Jordan, who scored 50 and 44 points in the final two games against Cleveland.

"It takes a great deal of heart to win on the road in the playoffs," New York Coach Rick Pitino said. "We didn't want to face Michael Jordan, but we did want the home-court advantage."

Jordan predicted the Bulls would defeat the Cavaliers, who had the second-best record in the NBA this year at 57-25. The Bulls, 0-6 against Cleveland in the regular season, defeated the Knicks three of five times.

"We have beaten New York," Jordan said. "I have confidence that we can win. They wrote us off against Cleveland and we won. I'd rather be written off and be the underdog."

The Knicks and Bulls are similar. They rely on exuberance and emotion as well as the talents of a star. For New York that is Patrick Ewing, who had two subpar performances due to foul trouble in Games 2 and 3 of the Philadelphia series.

"This series is going to be like a chess game," said Knicks Assistant Coach Stu Jackson, who scouted the Bulls. "Both teams have great, talented players. The key is to keep them from getting the ball to Michael Jordan. They have many ways to do this. Most teams have one talented player you have to stop, but Jordan is special."

There is an added dimension. New York and Chicago made one of the biggest trades of the off-season, swapping center Bill Cartwright to Chicago and power forward Charles Oakley to New York.

Oakley had been unhappy serving as just a rebounder for Michael Jordan. Based on the regular season, the Knicks gained more in the deal. Oakley scored 12.9 points and 10.5 rebounds and was the key player in stopping Charles Barkley in the opening round.

Cartwright averaged 12.5 points and 6.5 rebounds but failed to take the offensive load off Jordan.

"I wanted Chicago because I wanted the home-court advantage," Ewing said. "Playing against Bill Cartwright will be interesting because we played against each so often in practice."

New York players credited Pitino for preparing well against Philadelphia. New York eliminated the 76ers last Tuesday and waited to hold practice Sunday until after the Cleveland-Chicago game."

Cavaliers in shock over loss

RICHFIELD, Ohio (UPI) — Still somewhat stunned by the unexpected ending to their season, the Cleveland Cavaliers groped Monday for answers to the obvious question: How do they advance to the next level?

"Let it hurt real good and next year come back even more determined," was forward Larry Nance's answer.

The pain was written all over their faces Monday as the Cavaliers cleared out their lockers at the Richfield Coliseum.

"It's the suddenness," Cavaliers' coach Lenny Wilkins said. "You don't come down from games like that very easily. You're on a crest and then everything stops abruptly. It's a dead feeling."

The Cavaliers were dead, all right, shot off the crest by Michael Jordan of the Chicago Bulls.

Jordan's 15-foot jump shot as time expired gave the Bulls a 101-100 victory over the Cavaliers in the fifth and final game of their first-round playoff series Sunday. It was the second year in a row the Bulls had eliminated the Cavaliers in the first round.

The lead changed hands three times in the last six seconds. Jordan hit a jumper with six seconds left to put the Bulls ahead by one. Craig Ehlo countered with a driving layup with three seconds remaining. Jordan's final shot barely beat the game-ending buzzer.

The Cavaliers had been heavily favored to win the series, with some members of the Chicago media even predicting a Cleveland sweep. The Bulls had lost eight of their last 10 regular season games, while the Cavaliers had set a franchise record with 57 victories.

But when Chicago won the first game on the Cavaliers' home floor in Richfield, the attitude changed. The Cavaliers began an emotional roller coaster ride that began with panic, peaked at terror and raced downhill.

Oakland slugger wants fans to try to understand

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. — Fame has been brutal on the owner of baseball's biggest biceps. In less than seven months, he has unwittingly gone from Basb Brother to Bad Brother to Blues Brother.

"Hard — that's exactly what it's been on me," said Jose Canseco, standing shirtless in the locker room of Joe W. Davis Stadium here, where the reigning American League Most Valuable Player is supposed to be working his way back into shape with the Class AA Huntsville Stars. "I never thought the other side of success would be this bad, this painful. It's been unfair. It's been ridiculous."

Jose Canseco is just 24 years old, and already the case could be made that he is the best all-around player in baseball. He became the first man to hit 40 homers (he hit 42) and steal 40 bases in the same season in 1988, and he also hit .307 with 124 RBI in leading the Oakland A's to the AL pennant.

Last season Canseco found out how wonderful success can be.

But since October, he has found out how cruel it can be as well.

Canseco had to absorb the latest setback here Sunday

Blue Jays struggling

TORONTO (UPI) — The Toronto Blue Jays, who finished two games out of first place in the American League East the last two seasons, have the second worst record in the major leagues after 30 games.

Toronto, 10-20 before Monday night's game against Seattle, has trouble on a number of fronts: injuries, attitude and a general manager's reluctance to change the roster.

Injuries have hit shortstops Tony Fernandez and Manny Lee and third baseman Kelly Gruber. Pitcher Jeff Musselman is sidelined because of an alcohol condition.

But the Blue Jays' problems go beyond missing players. Fernandez and Gruber have returned, but Toronto still lost 11 of 13 and 14 of 18 before Monday. They stood 6 1/2 games out of first, percentage points ahead of last-place Detroit.

"Toronto isn't the only club that has had guys go down," said Oakland Manager Tony La Russa, whose club remains first in the AL West despite missing 1988 MVP Jose Canseco all season and slugger Mark McGwire for a stretch. "You have to learn to adjust."

After he was traded to the New York Yankees for pitcher Al Leiter last week, Jesse Barfield assessed the Blue Jays.

"I would like to have seen a better work ethic," Barfield said. "I noticed that in our second go-around in the batting cage, the guys weren't practicing their bunting. I mentioned that to (Manager Jimmy Williams), but he did nothing."

Barfield's .200 average at the time of his trade didn't help either. Neither has leadoff hitter Lloyd Moseby's .189 average or the .170 mark of designated hitter Bob Brenly.

As a club, the Blue Jays are hitting just .246, the fourth worst in the AL, with a league-leading 202 strikeouts when he reinjured his left hand, possibly severely. He had broken a bone in the hand during the first week of March when swinging through a Jim Abbott pitch in a spring training game.

Sunday, he hurt it again while stroking an RBI single. Canseco was initially supposed to spend five to 10 days here, where he became a legend in 1985 with one of the most productive seasons in minor league history. Now, Canseco said he could be out for a month.

Canseco was scheduled to have X-rays taken Tuesday, he said.

Canseco has other scars that also will take time to heal.

Whereas he once was playful, accessible and refreshingly naive, Canseco now is reserved, skeptical and almost callous.

"You would be too if you've gone through what I have," he said. "I used to be real helpful and real friendly, but look what's happened to me. I'm sick of getting burned."

First, there was Tom Boswell of The Washington Post, intimating during a television interoe he first time since high school. "There is so much pressure on him, he had so much success and gained so much attention in so short a time. Now, people are painting him as a bad boy. That's not what he is. He's become more shy, more reluctant to talk.

He's not comfortable anymore, but can you blame him? I know he's still a nice guy deep down.

"I think everything that happened to him was a shock. He didn't think it would be this bad."

"I didn't know it was going to be like this," Jose Canseco said later. "People want to know what makes the superstars in this game tick.

Rushed Lendl wins Tournament of Champions

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ivan Lendl, already a day late for an appointment in Europe, required only 70 minutes to crush Jaime Yzaga 6-2, 6-1 Monday in the final of the rain-delayed Eagle Tournament of Champions.

Fortified by the top prize of $82,450, Lendl was to leave later in the day for Hamburg, West Germany, where he is playing this week.

Lendl, wearing warmup trousers the entire match on another cold, windy day at Forest Hills, broke service in the first and fifth games of each set, never allowing Yzaga a chance to fight back.

"I don't enjoy playing in sweats, it's not comfortable, but it was necessary," Lendl said. "There's not much you can do about it."

Although he said last week that winning this tournament wasn't as important to him as getting his clay-court game together for the French Open starting May 29, Lendl was near invincible at Forest Hills. In five matches he yielded merely 18 games, never more than three games in any set.

"The main thing for me is I was moving well and I felt strong, which means I wasn't tiring and no matter what happened on court I felt comfortable," said Lendl, who has a match record this year of 28-2 with four tournament titles.

Although he contends it isn't his favorite surface, Lendl has lost only three matches on clay courts in the last three years.

Yzaga, ranked No. 56 in the world, had taken a set from Lendl in two previous losses, but was ineffective Monday. The 21-year-old Peruvian gained three break points against Lendl's serve in the second game of the second set, but was unable to convert.

After Yzaga held in the third game, Lendl captured the next four games with the loss of six points, ending it on his second match point when Yzaga sent a backhand into the net. Lendl totaled four aces.

"He's the No. 1 player in the world and he's there every point," Yzaga said. "He won't give you any points, and I was a little impatient."

Asked how he thought Lendl would fare in the French, Yzaga said: "It's going to be very, very tough to beat him over five sets. You have to be very consistent and very strong, both in your mind and physically."

This was Lendl's third success in the Tournament of Champions, the most of anyone, and his 77th Grand Prix crown overall, the second most behind Jimmy Connors with 107.

Yzaga, the third unseeded player ever to reach the final of this championship, surprised even himself

MVC meet new season for runners

By Paul Pabst
Staff Writer

Despite the fact that this weekend's Missouri Valley outdoor championships mark the end of the season, the Salukis are thinking the opposite.

"Shoot, it's only beginning," runner Erick Pegues said. "This is the big weekend."

The MVC outdoor meet will begin Thursday at Illinois State with the decathlon. Saturday will consist of mostly preliminaries, and the bulk of the finals will be on Sunday.

"This is what the whole season builds up to," coach Bill Cornell said. "Whoever wants it most, whoever gets the breaks will win it. That's the exciting part of track."

The Salukis placed second behind Indiana State (171 points), with 163 points. Illinois State finished third with 145. Cornell said he thinks this year's meet will again be a three-team race.

"Illinois State is the favorite," Cornell said. "They do have the home field advantage, but any of us could win it. Illinois State is especially strong in the middle-distance event and Indiana State is good all around, like us."

One of the differences this year is the Salukis are without the services of three-time MVC long jump champion, Brian Brackley. Cornell said the loss will hurt but there are some able replacements.

"Whenever you lose a guy like Brian it hurts," Cornell said. "But our long jumpers, Guy Sikora, Jocelyn Langevin, and Garrett Hines should be able to put some points up for us."

Another jumper who is a returning champion, Leonard Vance, will also add his abilities to the long jump crew. Vance won the outdoor MVC triple jump title last year, leaping 50 feet 8¾ inches. He says it won't be as easy this year.

"The competition is going to be tougher this year," Vance said. "There are a few guys who can jump over fifty feet."

The Salukis are expecting a number of points from their three decathletes, Langevin, John Bookout, and defending MVC champion Larry Holloway. All three athletes had personal best scores at last weekend's Saluki Invitational.

"It is going to be a struggle to repeat," Holloway said. "If we all do well this weekend we have a chance to place all three of us. That would really help the team point total."

Another group that could post some points for SIU-C is the throwers: discus, shot put, hammer, and javelin. Eric Bomball scored in four events at last year's meet and is the favorite in the hammer and shot put this year. Cornell also expects production from Dirk Matthias and Dale Walker

"We could score well in the throwing if Bomball does well," Cornell said. "Both Dirk and Dale have been throwing well lately, they have the potential to score for us."

Another pair of returning conference champions, Erick Pegues and Andy Pettigrew, should be the favorites in their events.

Saluki co-captain Kevin Steele stays in the pack during the 200-meter dash at the Saluki Invitational April 29. Steele will try to help SIU-C keep pace with Illinois State this weekend, who is favored to win the Missouri Valley outdoor track championships in Normal.

Pegues, who won last year's outdoor in 47.16 seconds, ran under 47 seconds at last weekend's invitational. Pegues will also anchor the 4 x 400 relay squad of John Stinson, Kevin Steele, and Donnell Williams. The foursome will be the favorite as they have the conference's best time this season.

Pettigrew, who missed last year's outdoor because of his heart condition, won the 1,500 meters in 1987 and according to Cornell should be one of the favorites.

"He has been getting stronger all season," Cornell said. "He has to be considered a favorite. The competition will be keeping an eye on him."

Good news for the Salukis is the probable return of indoor conference champion pole vaulter, Mike Michels. Michels has missed the past three meets with a leg injury.

The Salukis are healthy, and to keep it that way they will train lightly this week to avoid injury, Cornell said.

Former major league official appointed as Eastern's AD

CHARLESTON, III. (UPI) — Eastern Illinois University Monday appointed former major league baseball administrator Mike Ryan as the new athletic director.

Ryan, 43, currently associate athletic director at New Mexico State University, will replace P.C. Johnson, who went to Miami (Ohio) University in December.

"I am pleased to announce this appointment," said Stan Rives, EIU president. "Michael Ryan brings a wealth of experience in both college and professional sports to his new position and we are fortunate to have a man of his caliber join our staff."

Ryan said he is impressed with everyone at EIU. He has served as public relations director for the Houston Astros, sports information director at New Mexico State, public relations director for the San Diego Padres.

While with the major leagues, he served as public relations coordinator for the World Series and National League Championship Series.

NHL worried about Soviet defection

NEW YORK (UPI) — The defection by one of the Soviet Union's young stars to play for the Buffalo Sabres has raised concerns the move will set back relations between the NHL and the Soviet Union.

In addition to player movement between the Soviet Union and North America, also at issue could be the pioneer plan to have two NHL teams train in the Soviet Union. The squad chosen by the league are the Calgary Flames and Washington Capitals.

Should relations stiffen, the team most affected presumably would be the New Jersey Devils, who own the rights to five Soviets, including Vyacheslav Fetisov. Fetisov, in line for permission to join the NHL, is widely regarded as the world's best defenseman and was the Most Valuable Player at the recent World Championships in Sweden.

The Soviets recently allowed Sergey Pryakin to sign with the Flames. However, he was not an impact player for the Soviets.

Last week, Alexander Mogilny, a 20-year-old winger for the Soviet national team, defected to the United States while at the World Championships. He has been signed to a contract by the Sabres, who acquired his rights in the past NHL entry draft.

Devis Generali, Manager Lou Lamoriello wonders whether the Sabres may have hurt whatever headway he has made over the past 18 months in negotiating with the Soviets.

"Everyone has to do what they have to do," he said Monday. "As for how it affects us, I don't really think it does and if it does, I can't do anything about it...."

"The NHL is certainly bigger than one player and the world is certainly bigger than the NHL, and with (Mikhail) Gorbachev trying to do a little more with democracy and liberalism...."

Soviet players who defect cost their country not only players, but money. NHL clubs signing Soviet players through diplomatic channels must pay a release fee to Soviet authorities.

"No one player could do more than Fetisov has done to play in the NHL," the general manager said.
