Bidding For Classroom Building Oct. 8

Bids for construction of a General Classroom Building for SIU will be opened Oct. 8, it was announced yesterday. Associate University Architect Willard C. Hart said the project will include two parts: one, a two-story section containing lecture halls, the other a three-story section containing classrooms, facilities.

The brick structure, to be built in the area of Grand and Lake Streets where a number of residences owned by the University have been auctioned and moved, will cost an estimated $3,250,000. The money will come from the State University Bond Issue funds.

Other bids will be opened Thursday for construction of Phase I of the Communications Building, to be constructed west of the Life Science Building. This phase of construction will include space for the departments of speech, speech correction and theater and for radio-television. The project will cost an estimated $3,250,000, with money also coming from the university bond issue.

Site work was scheduled to start this week (Aug. 19) for the $11,000,000 University Park Residence Halls to be built with revenue money on the campus east of U.S. Route 51 and south of Park Street. The J.L. Simmons Co. of Decatur has the contract for general construction.

Hart said work is progressing on the new $3,330,000 College of Education Building facing Grand, the University officials are pressing to get some of the classrooms and the office of the dean ready for the fall term. This building, with more than 100,000 square feet of space in its three stories, will be completed in the spring of 1964.

Summer Session:

Zaleski Praises Students For Good Conduct Record

Joseph P. Zaleski, assistant dean of Student Affairs, said Monday that summer school students are to be commended for their record of conduct during the session.

Only nine cases came to the attention of the Office of Student Affairs, seven resulting in reprimands, one in disciplinary probation and another pending court action.

Last summer cases numbered 21, all involving male students.

"When students get in trouble, we publicize their deeds," Zaleski said, "So when their conduct changes to the extent that it is recognized, I think we should give them public recognition."

EXAMS COMING - Yesterday's weather was as gloomy as the campus mood as exams loom closer. The exam schedule for 12-week courses is listed on Page 2 of today's paper.

Committee Proposes Changes In 1964 Summer Scheduling

A faculty study committee is at work on recommendations for class scheduling for the summer of 1964, according to Charles D. Tenney, vice-president for instruction.

The committee has been asked to complete its report to President Delyte W. Morris by the time he returns from Africa in late September.

Tenney said President Morris will probably confer with faculty councils before any firm decision is made on the method of scheduling classes next summer.

SIU's 12-month program will be completed at the undergraduate level next year, Tenney said. This means a 12-week summer program for juniors and seniors as well as for freshmen and sophomores, he explained.

This year, freshmen and sophomores participated in the longer summer session but next year, the 300-level courses open to both juniors and seniors will be included in the program, Tenney explained.

Although next summer's session will be 12 weeks, there may be some shorter courses, Tenney said. The committee is studying the most effective method of scheduling summer courses, and in addition, short courses and workshops will be continued, Tenney said.

Last Egyptian

Today's edition is the final one of the summer session. Publication was on a five days per week basis through Aug. 3, and on a two days per week basis for the remainder of summer.

Publication will be resumed Sept. 24 on the Tuesday through Saturday daily schedule.

Les Elgart's Band, Ford-Hines On Show

The Les Elgart Orchestra, the Smothers Brothers and the comedy team of Ford and Hines are among the entertainers who will perform during Southern Illinois University's Homecoming Week in October.

Provisional Ok Given Dental Hygiene Program

The dental hygiene program at VTI has been granted provisional approval status by the American Dental Association.

Dr. Karl K. Webber, supervisor of dental hygiene, said this is the first inspection and rating for the relatively new program at VTI.

The rating permits graduates of the program to take state and national board examinations; the national examination is in dental hygiene theory, he explained.

The SIU program is about the 40th of its type in the United States, he said, and about 25 per cent are still in the provisional approval status.

He said the goal is full accreditation; the next inspection towards this objective is in 1965.

A full class of 22 is in prospect for the fall term, with 20 additional students in their second year. The two-year program leads to an associate degree.

Full accreditation involves meeting every requirement for an ideal program, he added.

SIU Gets $135,641 Grant

For 'Slow Learners' Study

The Department of Welfare in Washington has approved a $135,641 grant to SIU for research on "An Educational Program for Slow Learners in Grades 7 through 12".

The project will be conducted at Quincy, Ill., and will aim at helping "students proceeding from grade 7 through 12 (who) are unsuccessful in meeting the requirements of our educational system".

The following organizations will co-operate in the program: SIU; the Public School System in Quincy; the Illinois State Department of Public Instruction; and the U.S. Office of Education.

The "slow learners" will comprise those who have: "low mental ability; cultural deprivation; social alienation; inappropriateness of educational experience to vocational competence; and a lack of school climate suitable to their personal development".

A spokesman for the Activities Development Center said Monday that in addition to the above George Walker, head of the Piano Department at Smith College, will be the concert pianist for the annual Homecoming Concert, scheduled at 8 p.m. Oct. 19 in Shryock Auditorium.

Homecoming Week will begin Oct. 13 with activities yet to be announced. The Summer Opera Workshop's "Music Man" will be presented at 4 p.m. that day in Shryock Auditorium.

The Homecoming Queen will be crowned at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 17 in Shryock Auditorium. A reception also is planned that day.

The big Homecoming Stage Show, during which the Smothers Brothers and Ford and Hines will perform, is scheduled from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Oct. 18.

Oct. 19 is the big day Homecoming Week. It will begin at 9 a.m. with a parade and wind up that night with the Les Elgart Orchestra playing for the Homecoming Dance.

But between the earliest and latest events are several others including the football game between SIU and Northern Michigan University in McAndrew Stadium at 1:30 p.m.

A Homecoming Buffet will be served from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Oct. 19 in the University Center.

The names of the chairman and members of the steering committee for Homecoming are announced on page two of today's Daily Egyptian.

There will be a threefold approach to the problem aimed at developing: preventive programs at the early school years of culturally underprivileged students; a comprehensive curriculum and consequent school climate in which the slow learner can achieve success; and providing schools with opportunity for achievement of vocational preparedness.

"Quincy was selected because for more than ten years it has been conducting related programs", said John O. Anderson, associate dean of the Graduate School and Coordinator of Research and Projects.

This project was initiated by Charles U. Matthews, associate professor and director of Delinquency Study Project, Edwardsville campus, and the Center for the Study of Crime, Delinquency and Corrections at SIU.

The program is expected to last two years.

October 19:

Homecoming Committee Chairmen Appointed

The steering committee for SIU's Oct. 19 Homecoming, an event which will include a parade, queen contest and stage show, has been announced.

Homecoming chairman is Penny Donahue of Elmwood Park, assisted by Alan L. Kramer of Riverside, vice chairman. Secretary is Jill Diwicki of Crete.

Other members of the committee follow:

James R. Merz, vice chairman, symphony concert; Joyce Pace, chairman, house decorations; Constance M. Reichert, vice chairman parade; Ann M. Strawn, chairman, campus decorations; Michael R. Moore, chairman stage show; Barbara Click, vice chairman, hospitality; Judy A. Lloyd, chairman, hospitality; Kathy Wolak, vice chairman, kick-off.

Pamela Newberry, chairman, symphony concert; Frederick R. Rauch, vice chairman, campus decorations; Jim L. Sipes, vice chairman, house decorations; Lloyd Leabhard, chairman, parade; Louis A. Suchich, chairman, queen coronation; Jo Ann Jaffee, chairman, queen's reception; Mary Ann Missavage, vice chairman, finance; Mary Kirley, vice chairman, alumni and past queens.

Annette Battle, vice chairman, publicity; Beverly R. Bradley, vice chairman, queen coronation; Terry Hamilton, chairman, alumni and past queens; Ellen V. Gibbons, chairman, queens committee; Gary H. Brand, vice chairman, queen's committee; Charles Edelhofer, vice chairman, dance.

WSIU To Offer Folk Music Show

The new fall series of the SIU Radio Tape Network will start the week of Sept. 23 with a new program of folk songs.

The five-minute show, "The Story and the Song," is among nine programs offered to 35 radio stations in Illinois and adjacent states. The SIU Folk Society is preparing the programs under direction of Walter Richter of the SIU Broadcasting Service.

Home Economist Studies New Uses Of Frozen Peaches

A pilot project on processing and use of frozen peaches has been started by a SIU home economist at the request of the National Peach and Illinois Fruit Councils.

Mrs. Jan Harper, associate professor of food and nutrition, is investigating the effect of various anti-browning agents on varieties of peaches, varieties suitable for freezing, and methods of preparing frozen peach desserts for home and institutional use.

Despite the virtual destruction of the Southern Illinois peach crop by the hard freezes of last winter, several area orchardists have been able to provide Mrs. Harper with sufficient quantities of home-grown fruit to permit starting the pilot study, she said.

The Dave McGuire Orchard, the Ray Grammer Orchard and Eckert Orchards are cooperating in the study.

Illinois normally produces 4 to 5 hundred thousand bushels of peaches, three-fourths of which are grown in the southern third of the state. Abandonment of orchards in the past 10 to 15 years has reduced the state's production from a peak of approximately 1 1/2 million bushels.

The National Peach Council plans to conduct other studies on the use of fresh peaches.

Designer's Range - Cups To Diplomas

A design for paper cups... honorary degree diplomas... official seals... bulletins... whole books--these are some of the designs that originate on the drawing board of A.B. Mifflin, assistant coordinator of Central Publications.

Once upon a time, Mifflin even designed a handsomely illuminated scroll for a lady plumber!

As an undergraduate at Southern, Mifflin, formerly of Belleville, studied industrial education and art to complete a bachelor's degree in education, then switched to administration and supervision for the master's degree in education.

But the taste of art design he got while assigned to the Army's field printing plant at Fort Benning, Ga., in 1945-46 stuck in his mind, and on his return to the campus he won election as editor of The Obelisk, student yearbook. His design for the annual led him into a job as book designer for the Indianapolis Engraving Co.

His industrial education training made it possible for him to get a night job as "small structures" designer for the Carbondale office of the Illinois Highway Department so that he could return to school for graduate study.

On completion of his master's degree in 1958 he was appointed assistant coordinator of Central Publications.

The No. 1 job of Central Publications is the planning, editing, designing and distribution of the University's official bulletin series which in recent years has been expanded to some score of titles. Mifflin designed a new format for the series. The cover of each bulletin--one for each school or college, general information, summer session and other division--features an irregularly shaped "window", filled with a mosaic or a photograph. A different color is assigned for the mosaic of each division, with a small identifying square of the same color on the spine.

Central Publications headed by Gene Parkhill, also provides advisory and consultative service for any division or agency of the University on any kind of printed material.

"Any public institution is in the public eye," Mifflin said. "Its printed matter must convey a favorable reflection of the institution, but at the same time must interpret the true nature of the organization. It must display good taste and dignity. It must indicate high quality but not costliness. In fact, a printed publication of a public institution is a silent but eloquent ambassador to the public and must be a faithful representative."

St. Louis Trip Tops Activities This Week

A trip to St. Louis Saturday for the Muni Opera presentation of "Westside Story" highlights this week's activities for SIU students.

Those interested in attending the musical may sign up in the Activities Development Center, University Center. Transportation and ticket cost a total of $2. The bus will leave University Center at 4 p.m. Saturday.

The Student Christian Foundation picnic will follow a meeting at 5 p.m. Thursday at the Foundation.

Members of the Moslem Student Association will meet at 1 p.m. Friday in Room B., University Center.

A special vacation display is being featured in the Morris Library.

Master's Thesis Will Be Published

A master's degree thesis written by an international student at SIU is to be published as a book in his native country.

The thesis, "Basic Democracies in Pakistan," was written by Mohammed Afak Haydar, who received his Master of Arts degree in government from SIU in 1961.

Inland Waterway Safety Meet To Be Held Here Sept. 9-11

Ways of maintaining safety in the face of increasing commerce in hazardous cargoes on the nation's inland waterways will be explored in a three-day Western Rivers Safety Coordinating Conference on campus Sept. 9-11.

The keynote conference topic, "Coordinated Action or Panic Button Controls," describes the urgency and purpose of the meeting, says Alexander R. MacMillan, director of the Southern's Transportation Institute which is sponsoring the conference in cooperation with Southern's Division of Technical and Adult Education.

The first session will open at 2 p.m. Sept. 9 in Muckelroy Auditorium, Agriculture Building.

Expected for the meeting will be key representatives of barge lines, builders and buyers of barge equipment, terminal and port directors, producers of chemical and petroleum products, marine underwriters, and tug and fleet operators.

Keynoting the conference will be Robert L. Gray, manager of river operations for Ashland Oil and Refining Co., Ashland, Ky.

Dinner session speakers will be Oliver E. Beutel, director of distribution and traf-

Forester Transfers

James Micklewright, forest technologist in the Carbondale Forest Research Center at SIU since 1955, has transferred to the Washington, D. C., office of the U. S. Forest Service Division of Economics and Marketing Research.

While with the Research Center at Carbondale, Micklewright has been concerned with designing and developing production techniques for new products from native hardwood timber resources of the area.

The air - conditioned Roman Room, University Center, will be open to students for studying from 6:30 to 9 p.m. Wednesday through Friday.

Concert Included In Activities Of

New Student Week

A concert by the SIU Male Glee Club and Choir will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 22 as a special feature of New Student Week which opens the same day.

New students will spend their first week on the SIU campus getting acquainted with students, faculty and staff and participating in an orientation program.

Another highlight of the week will be a freshmantalent show at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 27 at Shryock Auditorium.

The Activities Development Center is mailing out new booklets to parents of all students planning to enroll at SIU in the fall.

Entitled "The University Student in Your Family," the booklet outlines the parents' role in the life of a student at Southern Illinois University.

fic for Dow Chemical Co., Midland, Mich., speaking Sept. 9; and Arthur R. Gatewood, president of the American Bureau of Shipping, New York, N.Y., on Sept. 10.

Other program speakers will be Rear Admiral O. C. Rohnke and Capt. John R. Silliman of the U.S. Coast Guard; Capt. Richard E. McNeely, New Orleans, La.; president of the Crescent River Port Pilots Association; Col. Warren S. Everett, Vicksburg, Miss.; U.S. Corps of Engineers; and Harry M. Mack, managing partner of Neare-Gibbs Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Dean's Wife Writes Book For Children

Combine a lively girl of 10, her horse, and a county fair, and you likely will have an interesting story.

These are the principal ingredients of a new children's book, "Little Red," written by the wife of a faculty member and scheduled for publication by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York, Sept. 12.

The author is Mrs. Roberta Piper, wife of Henry Dan Piper, dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. "Little Red" is her first book.

Mrs. Piper said the setting of her story is indefinite, and could be almost anywhere in rural America, including southern Illinois. She admits a flavor of her native Vermont, however.

Her own girlhood was spent on a farm near Chelsea, Vt. She was graduated from the University of Vermont in 1950.

Dean and Mrs. Piper and their two sons, aged nine and three came to Carbondale in 1962 from Pasadena, Calif., where he served 10 years on the English department faculty at the California Institute of Technology.

8 Geographers To Attend Denver Convention Sept. 1

Eight SIU geographers will attend the annual meeting of the Association of American Geographers at Denver, Colo., Sept. 1-4, according to Robert A. Harper, chairman of the SIU Geography Department.

In addition to Harper, the contingent will include Floyd F. Cunningham, director of the SIU Climatology Laboratory; David Christensen, associate professor; Theodore Schmudde, Howard Stafford and Frank Thomas, assistant professors; and visiting or exchange professors David Fox and Allan Patmore from England who served on the SIU geography faculty during the last academic year.

Fox and Patmore are presenting reports at the meeting and will return to regular assignments at the University of Manchester and University of Liverpool, respectively, after the meetings. Thomas, who has exchanged lectureships with Patmore during the past year, returned from England Thursday (Aug. 15).

Nikita's Visit With Tito Said Slap In Face Of Red China

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia

Premier Khrushchev arrives Tuesday in what diplomats consider his most dramatic slap in the face yet to Communist China.

Khrushchev's acceptance of President Tito of Yugoslavia has been one of the chief faults Peking has found with him and this visit to this country now is considered sure to touch off new anti-Khrushchev blasts from the Chinese.

The Russians announced here and in Moscow the gift of a factory to build new houses for the earthquake-ravaged city of Skopje, Yugoslavia. The factory has a capacity of 35,000 square meters—about 350 houses—of prefabricated sections a year.

Observers saw it as an obvious Soviet attempt to counter the popularity the United States has built up by its fast aid to Skopje. This included swift dispatch of a U.S. Air Force field hospital and a later gift of $50 million for rebuilding.

The Soviets and the Red Chinese in the past few weeks have fought their propaganda war mainly over the issues of the limited nuclear test ban treaty and strategy in underdeveloped countries. Yugoslavia barely has been mentioned.

"But Shouldn't The Lines Be Parallel?"

Bruce Shanks In Buffalo Evening News

But observers here noted that Yugoslavia's independent brand of communism and Khrushchev's apparent willingness to live with it was one of the first issues over which Moscow and Peking began quarreling in 1959.

The Chinese denounced Tito as an imperialist agent.

DETROIT

Leaders of a Negro rally of 700 persons Sunday night submitted to a court order and called off plans to play tape recorded testimony of the white policeman who shot and killed a convicted Negro prostitute, Cynthia Scott. They said they acted because Miss Scott's mother, Mrs. Lillian Scott, did not want to risk having her civil suit against the patrolman dismissed.

PHILADELPHIA

The program of the National Catholic Liturgical Conference has called upon the 5,000 members of his organization to take an active part in the civil rights protest march Aug. 28 in Washington. The appeal was contained in a letter to conference members released Monday by the Rev. Gerald Sloyan, conference president.

Kerner Signs Survivor Bill

Gov. Otto Kerner has signed a bill to entitle survivors of a deceased state employe to receive the sum due for any accrued vacation pay.

The provision was incorporated in Senate Bill 353. The governor vetoed Senate Bill 134, which would have limited payment of this type to employes of the University Civil Service System. "I believe that this desirable benefit should be extended to all state employes, and I have therefore approved Senate Bill 353, which would accomplish that goal," the governor said.

He also vetoed Senate Bill 776. It also made provision for payment of accrued vacation to survivors of a deceased state employe.

In addition, it would have permitted payment of accrued vacation to state employes upon separation from service. This is already permitted under existing rules of the Department of Personnel, the governor said.

DETROIT

Two thousand Negroes marched two miles in a peaceful demonstration Sunday, only to be scolded by one of their heroes for being "so satisfied it's sickening."

Charles Evers, brother and successor of slain Mississippi integrationist leader Megar Evers, led the orderly march through two industrial Detroit suburbs and took the occasion to lambast the "Uncle Tom's" and the complacent Northern Negro.

"You don't know where you're going," the Mississippian told the nearly all-Negro stadium audience. "In Mississippi, we know."

He said Negroes of the Deep South must struggle and sacrifice in their efforts to vote, and noted that Negroes in his audience were not prohibited from registering to vote.

"Stop blaming the white man" for racial inequality, the Negro said, "it's your fault now."

WASHINGTON

Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., was named chairman of the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on antitrust and monopoly Monday.

Chairman James O. Eastland, D-Miss., of the full committee announced the appointment of Hart to succeed the late Sen. Estes Kefauver, D-Tenn. Eastland did not immediately name another member of the subcommittee. A Southerner is expected to get the job.

WASHINGTON

President Kennedy will receive leaders of the civil rights march in Washington some time during the day of Aug. 28, the White House announced Monday.

Presidential press secretary Pierre Salinger said leaders of the march formally requested an audience with Kennedy and that the chief executive agreed to see them at the White House.

Salinger said he had no list now of the leaders who will call on Kennedy and no information on the time they will come to the White House.

LeMay Tells Of Reservations About Test Ban Treaty

WASHINGTON

Gen. Curtis E. LeMay testified Monday that if the limited nuclear test ban treaty were still in the proposal stage, "I think I would recommend against it."

LeMay, Air Force chief of staff, had joined the heads of the Army, Navy and Marines in recommending Senate ratification of the pact but he differed with them on whether he would support the agreement if it had not already been signed by the United States, Russia and Britain.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, D-S.C., asked LeMay at Senate hearings whether if he had considered the provisions of Dismas Clark, widely known as "the Hoodlum Priest" for his work in rehabilitating ex-convicts.

Honorary pallbearers for the Roman Catholic priest included: International Teamsters Union President James R. Hoffa; Missouri Attorney General Thomas Eagleton; E. V. Nash, warden of the Missouri State Penitentiary; Ross Randolph, warden of Menard Penitentiary in Illinois; Irv Kupcinet, Chicago Sun Times columnist; Richard Amberg, publisher of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat and St. Louis Mayor Raymond R. Tucker.

Services were at St. Joseph's Church near Father Clark's Dismas House, where he cared for recently released convicts until they could find a permanent residence and job.

Burial was at St. Stanislaus Jesuit Seminary in suburban Florissant.

Father Clark died Thursday of a heart ailment.

The 62-year-old priest was credited with rehabilitating thousands of men in his years of working with criminals.

WASHINGTON

The Senate confirmed Robert A. Wallace of Lake Forest, Ill., Monday as an assistant secretary of the treasury.

Action was by voice vote with no opposition from the few senators present.

Wallace is a former aide to Sen. Paul H. Douglas, D-Ill.

WASHINGTON

Labor Department and rail and union officials worked Monday on the form of an arbitration agreement to solve the two key issues in the railroad work rules dispute.

The carriers announced the draft of their agreement proposal has been completed.

Meanwhile, Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz arranged an afternoon meeting with union leaders to discuss their proposals for the agreement, to be signed by both parties.

Last weekend, Asst. Secretary of Labor James J. Reynolds discussed the matter with union attorneys.

Symposium Presents Economic Role Played By Government

Reviewed By Bernie Abelle, Dept. Of Management

Jesse W. Markham (ed.), The American Economy, George Braziller, New York, 1963, 274 pp.

This book is one of four in The American Image series produced under the general editorship of Ernest R. May. The other three are The American Society, edited by Kenneth S. Lynn; The American Foreign Policy, edited by Ernest R. May, and The American Political Process, edited by Leonard W. Levy and John P. Roche.

This series was designed for presentation to seventy-five Brazilian student leaders sent to the United States by the Cultural Union of Sao Paulo and the Department of State.

It was assumed that these students knew nothing about the historical, cultural, political or economic background and contemporary setting of American society. Consequently, each of these books purports to be a collection of readings designed for an audience with no specialized background in any of the areas discussed.

The American Economy is presented in four major sections: (1) "Structure and Institutions of Control," (2) "The Government and Principal Sectors of the Market Economy," (3) "Stability and Growth," and (4) "The Government and the Economy."

The first section discusses the effect of market structure on competitive behavior in terms of the traditional codification of pure competition, monopolistic competition, oligopoly and monopoly; it is also discussed in terms of the private in contrast with the public sector of the economy.

A theoretical justification of the purely competitive model as a guide to ideal output is advanced; it is then called into question after which the necessity for judicious administration of the anti-trust laws is emphasized.

The first major section of this book concludes leaving the reader with the impression that the government must establish the rules of the competitive game, enforce them judiciously, and at the same time maintain consistency with the attainment of non-economic goals such as public health, national defense, and humanitarian activities, the expression of which is not possible through the operation of free market forces.

The second section of this book touches on the idea of workable competition. It then discusses the role of government vis-a-vis our national transportation system and our system of public utilities.

The distinct lack of a unified, integrated, expeditious policy approach to these areas of federal government regulation is discussed and illustrated.

The economic causes of the farm problem conclude this section. However, none of the federal government "solutions" to the farm problem that have been attempted are discussed or evaluated.

The third section entitled "Stability and Growth" emphasizes the growing importance of the amount and direction of government expenditures for maintaining and enhancing maximum employment, output, and income within a framework of general economic stabilization.

In addition to government fiscal policies various monetary and credit policies are illustrated. This is followed by a discussion of the problem of establishing guidelines for price behavior in a free and growing economy.

However, a shortcoming of this discussion is its failure to consider the effect of steadily increasing prices on fixed income groups. The section is concluded with an excellent article on the necessity for federal expenditures to promote economic growth.

The title of the fourth section "Government and the Economy" seems singularly confusing inasmuch as each of the three previous sections were on the same topic. Among other points made in this section is the difficulty of measuring efficiency in government because of the lack of profit as a guideline for efficiency.

The final article in this book of readings is "The Contribution of Federal Expenditures to Economic Growth and Stability," by Evsey D. Domar, in which are outlined federal opportunities to contribute to growth by making expenditures in the areas of education, training, research and public health.

Florence Peterson Offers Brief Introduction To American Labor

By Jerome M. Mileur, Labor Institute

Florence Peterson, American Labor Unions, (2d ed.) New York: Harper and Row, Publishers, 1963, 233 pp.

To discuss the development, organization, and activities of American labor in 233 pages is a challenge to anyone's scholarly skills and Dr. Peterson succeeds about as well as could be expected. An economist by training, Florence Peterson has written on labor subjects for a number of years, this book representing an updating of an earlier edition published in 1945.

Addressing her subject with understanding and sympathy, Dr. Peterson does a creditable job of generalizing and cataloging a vast store of information concerning American unions.

The work is descriptive rather than analytical, popular rather than scholarly. Stylistically, the volume is lucid, though hardly literary.

Material for the book has been drawn wholly from secondary sources, which leads to a quite conventional treatment of the subject. Her concern is with the traditional learning in the field, i.e., with formal structural relationships, activities, and the law.

She evinces scant interest in the writings of psychologists and sociologists on questions of individual and institutional motivation, attitude, role, status, etc.

Within the traditional focus, Dr. Peterson demonstrates a very real competence. In portraying the nation's unions as the "autonomous, self-governing units of the labor movement," (p. 60) she captures the fundamental structural quality of American unionism.

Further, her analogy between the AFL-CIO and the UN properly casts the organizational character of the united labor federation and suggests its difficulties in directing and controlling the activities of its constituent members.

Also, Dr. Peterson accurately scales the interest priorities of American unions. She observes that the "major function of labor unions is to improve the job conditions of its members" (p. 181) and that they try to do this principally through economic means.

Political action and public relations are properly treated as outgrowths of and secondary in importance to this "bread and butter" concern and "business unionism" orientation.

Perhaps the most questionable portion of the book is that dealing with the law. Though correct in detail, it errs somewhat in spirit.

For example, I would question whether the Taft-Hartley Act "completely altered the philosophy of the 1935 Wagner Act" (p. 36) and whether it "invoked an entirely different concept of 'equality of bargaining power' from that upon which the 1935 law was based." (p. 116) The validity of Dr. Peterson's judgment resides upon a rather narrow interpretation of the philosophy underlying the Wagner Act.

Likewise, her assertion that "right-to-work" laws negate a "basic principle accepted in all phases of American life, both public and private--namely majority rule"--is a bit extravagant. (p. 118)

The anti-democratic quality of "right-to-work" legislation is dependent wholly upon the particular public from whose perspective the question is considered. Also, a glance at the feudal lords chairing certain congressional committees must raise doubts as to the universal acceptance of the idea of majority rule.

These objections, however, are quibblings rather than substantial criticisms and need not detract appreciably from the overall work.

If one is seeking a penetrating analysis or interpretation of unionism in America, he may dismiss Dr. Peterson's book, for this is neither her intent nor her achievement. If, on the other hand, one is seeking a highly factual, easily read, and brief introduction to American labor unions, he is likely to find this a very useful and interesting work.

Southern Spokesman:

Ralph McGill Is No Crusader

By Charles C. Clayton,

Department Of Journalism

Ralph McGill, The South and the Southerner, Boston, Mass.: Little, Brown, and Co., 1963, $5, 307 pp.

Ralph McGill is a recognized, and self-appointed, spokesman of the Southern liberals. This book, which won the Atlantic non-fiction award for 1962, is both autobiographical and dialectal.

It is an honest attempt to explain how his own convictions were arrived at, and to relate them to the moral dilemma the South has wrestled with for more than a century. It makes interesting reading, and if it does not quite succeed in explaining the South, it comes as close to that goal as any one has done thus far.

The fact is, as Mr. McGill explains, there is not one but several Souths. There is the South of the mountain country, where he was born, there is the South of "Tobacco Road," which he came to know after he moved to Atlanta and to the Cox newspapers in that city.

Practically all the articles in this book could be described as advocating or explaining methods by which the federal government can contribute to economic stability and growth. Perhaps a more descriptive title than the one used by the editor might have been "Federal Government Measures for Enhancing Economic Stability and Growth."

Sanders in The Kansas City Star

"HELP!! TH' SKY IS FALLING"

There is the South of the rabblers, the Ku Klux Klan and Senator Bilbo. There is the South of the new intellectuals, and finally there is the South of the Negro.

As a newspaperman Mr. McGill has looked with the eye of a trained observer on the events in his generation which have brought the South to the crisis that confronts it in 1963. As the editor and publisher of the Atlanta Constitution and as a nationally syndicated columnist, he has had a wide audience.

It was one of his editorials on racial violence which won him the Pulitzer Prize for editorial writing in 1958.

Much of his book is autobiographical. He looks back on a happy childhood in the hills of Tennessee and on his formative years in Chattanooga and at Vanderbilt University.

There was no racial problem in his youthful years and it was not until he became a reporter that he began to be aware of the problem and to write about it.

It was the author's editorials and columns on the race problem that first brought him to national attention, and it is to his credit that he has consistently dared to speak out against the Klan, against the rabid segregationists and against violence. As he seeks to explain by reviewing the history of the century since the Fourteenth Amendment was adopted, there is a better way to solve the problem and that solution cannot be deferred.

It is clear in these pages that he is not a crusader but a voice of reason and common sense. His book is not so much a call to action as an appeal for sane decisions in resolving an emotional crisis.

In the light of what has happened since it was published his concluding chapters, "The Sacrifice of the Children," "The Agony of the Church," and "The Conscience of the South" deserve careful reading.

He sums up his own position with his insistence that the Negro is an "essential ingredient in the regional character of the South and the Southerner."

As the region moves into the last half of this century he believes "the best human qualities of both races can move into the mainstream of American life and the promise of equal opportunity--the American hope and dream in which both Southerners at last may fully share."

University Exchange Busy All Year Round

Twenty four hours a day, seven days a week, three hundred and sixty five days a year, is the working schedule for the University Telephone Exchange.

A new automatic dial system was installed two years ago, causing most long distance and local calls to bypass the switchboard. However, this doesn't make the personnel less busy nor their work less interesting and diversified.

"Since the conversion to a newer and more automatic dial system, we don't handle incoming calls, whether long distance or local," said Miss Virginia Smith, supervisor of the University Telephone Exchange. "But the lag from this business has been offset by an increase in information service and special services as the university grows." The major service of the Exchange is to give out information about names, telephone numbers, and addresses of persons as well as office addresses.

"After the office hours, the University Operator receives requests for the most diverse information. Some of the questions are ludicrous and comical but the Operator always does everything possible to provide the caller with the information," Miss Smith elaborated and she continued, "During a storm alert, fire or other emergencies, we perform our work by University Radio Transmitter as well as through the switchboard." Special services include helping those who have difficulty dialing numbers, instructing people how to place direct distance dial calls, and testing numbers which may be out of order, etc.

"This office is also the central point for clearing telephone trouble reports. A record is kept of the varying reports of trouble on each telephone. We'll immediately call in all cases of trouble to General Telephone Company."

In cooperation with the System and Procedures Office, the Exchange gathers and compiles current directory information once a year.

"I also aid other offices in improving their telephone operation, as well as take part in various workshops where I discuss proper telephone procedures and telephone courtesy and show films. All of this makes my work quite diversified and I find it quite interesting," said the supervisor.

Trailer Living Work For Wife

Trailer - living doesn't simplify the housekeeping chores for the homemaker, a SIU graduate home economics student reports.

Mrs. June Roush of Salt Point, N.Y.,--one of SIU's 250 married students who lived in trailers last year--made a time-management study of household duties of a sample group of student wives, comparing it with a similar study reported for homemakers living in houses in New York State.

She tabulated time spent in washing dishes, meal preparation, physical care of family members, washing clothes, ironing clothes and regular care of the house.

She found little difference in time required for the most of the various tasks by house-living homemakers and mobile-home wives.

"It does not take as long to clean a mobile home, but it must be done much more often," Mrs. Roush said. "Also, due to the relatively close quarters, constant picking up is necessary."

SIU Assists:

Public Aid Commission Sets Up Cardiac Research Unit Here

A Cardiac Work Evaluation Unit, designed to analyze physical capabilities of persons with heart disease and assist in placing them in suitable jobs, has been established at Carbondale by the Illinois Heart Association.

Wayne M. Quick, Region 14 field representative for the association, said the unit is a pilot study which will provide an educational program demonstrating the employability of workers with cardiovascular disease.

Its first year operation is a cooperative venture with SIU, the Carbondale Clinic and the Illinois Department of Public Aid, Quick said. Medical investigation will be done at the clinic, outpatient facility of Doctor's Hospital, with records and clerical staff to be housed on the SIU campus at 1005 West Mill Street.

Although planned especially for Region 14 (the 33 lower counties of Illinois), the unit will accept patients from other parts of the state. Patients must be referred by their physicians or state or volunteer agencies. Similar units which handle limited patient loads are located in Peoria and Chicago.

Quick said patients who are physically unable to continue their jobs because of heart disease will be re-trained at the SIU Employment Training Center if they desire. Of 52 units of its type in the nation, he said, that at Southern is the only one with such re-training facilities available.

Quick estimated there are 1,400 persons in Region 14 who are physically handicapped because of cardiac conditions. He emphasized that no treatment will be given through the unit, and that patients' personal physicians will be invited to attend all conferences.

He said no actual job placement work will be done by the unit, but services of existing employment and vocational agencies will be utilized.

"We will study demands of specific jobs and match the physical capabilities of patients to job demands," he explained. "This should make possible selective job placement in competitive employment."

ment in competitive employment.

"Patients will be counseled with regard to social adjustments they should make, and their own responsibility for proper care. Families of patients will be informed about those aspects of heart disease which they should understand in order to be of help."

In addition to direct service to patients, the unit will provide research and training opportunities for students and professionals in medical fields. Regular visits by interns, resident physicians, student nurses and others are planned.

Counselors Meet At Kansas Convo

Thirteen residence hall counselors from SIU will attend the annual Midwest Association of College and University Residence Halls conference Aug. 25-28 at the University of Kansas.

Also attending the meeting at Lawrence, Kan., will be J. Albin Yokie, coordinator of housing at Southern, who is adviser to the national ACURH group.

Attending the conference as SIU representative's will be: Allen Lawyer, Albany, N.Y.; Mary L. Seibert, Belleville; Nancy J. Lewis, Blue Island; David D. Trebilcock, Campaign; Merry Stewart, Crete; Dona R. Beard, Danville; Eva M. Murdock, Geneva.

Also, Beverly Jean Cade, Hoopston; William C. Wade, LaGrange; John E. Burnette, Maywood; Carole Hasquin, Mount Olive; Helen M. Ross, Pekin; and John Adams, Streator.

Revival Season Opens For Hair Colorists

By Anita Provich

I entered the classroom, joining 23 women, students and housewives alike, awaiting a revival -- a rejuvenation of sorts.

These women were grey-headed, some were blondes with conspicuous brown roots, and others were brunettes.

We all had something in common -- we were experimental subjects in hair coloring for the last day of the advanced hairdressers on campus. In their terminology, we were "models."

The first thing we did was to sign a release, not holding the school responsible for any damage, allergy, etc., which might occur.

Although we were told to be there at 7:45 in the morning, it wasn't until 8:15 that we were ushered outside to another room. An extremely tall, attractive blonde, who I later found to be the color specialist, came out of the room and started grouping and arranging us, something similar to lining up experimental animals in the lab.

"Now," the boss said to me, "how would you like your hair?"

Before I could answer, she again firmly guided me into the room (a lab in the Ag building) and before me stood 23 ladies dressed in white, eagerly awaiting their "models."

"Who wants a tint," she yelled.

Three people immediately raised their hand: a young brunette, female; a grey head, male; and a bleached blonde, female. I stuck to the young brunette -- she looked the safest.

"She wants her hair brown again," the boss said, and immediately went out, asking for some redheads.

"I don't really want my hair brown," I confided to my hairdresser. "How about a blonde shade? Do you have any color charts?"

My girl, whose name was Helen, was 24 years old, and lived and worked in Rock Falls. She was extremely pleasant, patient, and slightly nervous.

The boss, whom everyone called Gay, had the difficult task of assisting these 23 women in their individual hair coloring assignments.

Bell Appointed

Research Chairman

Frank J. Bell, SIU assistant professor of geology, has been notified of his appointment as chairman of the field trip and research coordinating committee of the Midcontinent Area, American Association of Petroleum Geologists. The area includes eight midwestern states.

Bell, former Carmi consulting geologist who joined the SIU faculty as a specialist in petroleum geology in 1957, was reappointed earlier to the Association's group insurance committee and re-elected reeorder of the Illinois Geological Society.

Helen applied bleach to my hair which was to set for ten minutes. In that time she wandered around, looking for her rubber glove, which had suddenly disappeared. Pretty soon Helen disappeared. Ten minutes were up and my hair was getting blonder and blonder.

Pretty soon "Gay" walked by, shrieked when she saw my hair, and said to immediately wash that bleach off, as it wasn't applied properly. Helen showed with someone else's glove, and yanked me over to the sink. Now I didn't mind getting my hair rinsed of the bleach but I did expect to sit in a chair while I leaned back. Well, Helen got excited, the folding chair wasn't high enough for the sink, so she asked me to stand and bend backward so she could rinse the bleach off right away.

"Hurry, Kid!" she exclaimed.

I tried to explain that I wasn't an acrobat but there was nothing else to do but perform the inevitable. I felt as though I were in some form of a torture chamber. Hanging onto a chair, I did an unprofessional backbend.

"You better hurry, Helen," I groaned.

"Kid," she remarked, "We have to get all the bleach off."

"Okay, Helen," I said, "but my knees are starting to knock together."

So Helen assisted and pulled me up. Gratefully, I hung on to her as she guided me back to the folding chair. Then Gay came by.

"Her hair is only half done. You'll have to bleach the ends only this time."

Well I could have cried. Here came Helen with the foaming bleach and shaking hand.

Finally the bleach was put on again, it was 10:30, and three other women came by to give advice.

"Put some more on, leave it on longer, work it in, Helen, don't worry."

Gay had the final word -- "You made a mistake but it's perfect now."

Helen felt better. I felt worse. The bleach stung and made my eyes water.

"Just like peeling onions," I reflected.

Finally, the desired shade was reached. This time when the bleach was rinsed off, I leaned forward, stuck my head in the sink, and she rinsed away -- right over my dress and arms.

The best part of the day arrived -- putting on the shade of color I wanted. I selected a shade of blonde with varying highlights. She applied the color and waited.

"Ah, perfect," Gay said. I perked up.

"Lovely color," one male said.

She finally rinsed and shampooed my hair and I eagerly looked in the mirror. Shock!

"Brown," I said, "ugh, drab brown."

All that trouble for brown hair. Helen assured me it would be lighter when it dried. She ushered me into the Ag arena where redheads and blondes were getting their hair set in the latest fashion, the Dandy.

After being set and under the dryer, Helen went off to lunch. It was 12 noon. Hungry, tired, and disillusioned, I awaited the Dandy. Helen came back, looking fresh and cheerful. She combed my hair and shaped the Dandy.

The ordeal was finally over. I thanked Helen, then Gay, and they told me to be sure and come back next year. I smiled as I stepped out into the Southern Illinois humidity. A few minutes later and a walk across campus, I caught a glimpse of myself in a mirror.

"Oh, no!" Good-bye, Dandy, hello straggly!
