Hammond sues Board over tenure

By John Baldwin
Staff Writer

Music professor William Hammond sued the Board of Trustees in federal court Wednesday charging that he was unfairly denied tenure.

In the suit, Hammond charges:

—He was denied a hearing on his grievance;

—The School of Music kept its criteria for evaluating his application for tenure secret and did not follow its own outlined criteria;

—The director of the School of Music, Robert Roubos, misled faculty members so they would vote against his application for tenure;

—He was denied the right to challenge Roubos's allegations;

—Roubos and College of Communications and Fine Arts Dean Keith Sanders denied him his first amendment rights by denying his tenure in part on a lack of "collegiality," or ability to work well with other faculty members;

—He was "stigmatized" by the denial of tenure because of false allegations made about him and was not allowed to challenge the allegations.

The suit was filed for Hammond by the University Professionals of SIU-C, a union vying to represent University faculty in collective bargaining.

Richard Gruny, Board of Trustees legal counsel, said, "A complaint is only a complaint and they can say anything they want."

After the Board of Trustees has been presented with the suit, they will be able to challenge any part of it. Gruny said he has not seen the suit.

"At this point we only have one side of the argument. It's a solely self-serving declaration."

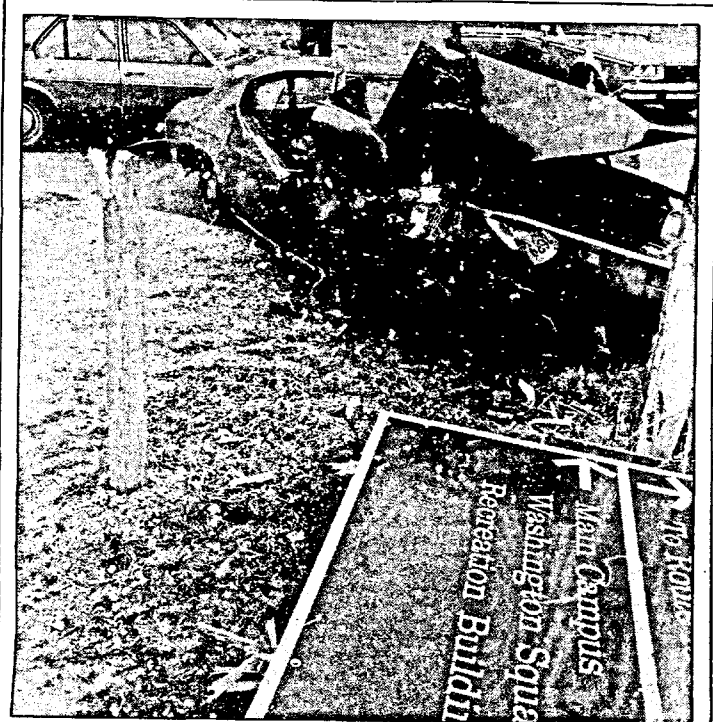

Before the suit was filed, Gruny said: "If we felt there was a basis for a lawsuit, we would have thought there was a basis for the board to hear the appeal. But we didn't."

Herbert Donow, president of UP-SIU, said, "We'll do what we need to do to protect our members."

"Absent a hearing, no one can be sure the decision was correct," Donow, an English professor, said.

Sanders could not be reached for comment.

GPSC: Prayer OK for graduation

By Holly J. Corrington
Staff Writer

After heated debate and a barrage of diverse opinions, the Graduate and Professional Student Council voted Wednesday to back President John C. Guyon's decision to preserve non-denominational prayer at graduate commencement ceremonies.

The council endorsed the decision by a vote of 18-10. While some felt that prayer should be present, others thought it should be left out of the commencement exercise.

"No prayer, no moment of silence, just graduation," said

Paul Antonacci, vice president of graduate school affairs.

Many agreed. Some council members said that to have any prayer — denominational or non-denominational — could be offensive to some. To an atheist, they said, even a moment of silence is considered a prayer.

"We have students from many different religions and many different lands. We don't have to force our God on everybody else's," said GPSC council member Dan DeFosse.

Others defended prayer,

New alcohol policy leads to more arrests in 1987

By John Mohler
Staff Writer

Reports of criminal activity on campus rose last year to the highest level since 1976 because of a stricter alcohol enforcement policy by SIU-C Security Police, according to a report released Monday.

In all, 1,956 criminal incidents occurred in 1987, an 11.3 percent increase over 1986. There were 2,111 incidents in 1976.

Alcohol violations, including illegal possession and consumption totaled 364 in 1987, 52.3 percent higher than in 1986 and 225 percent higher than in 1985, according to the report.

Administrative assistant Dan Lane, who helped prepare the report, described the policy as "not stricter, but less lenient."

They didn't let it slide this time," he said.

When alcohol-related offenses are not counted, the 1987 total represents an increase of just more than 1 percent on criminal offenses compared to the previous year.

The largest number of alcohol violations occurred during tailgate festivities. Theresa Nester, a statistical clerk, said there were 115 violations at the first four

State goes after child support cheats

By Antoinette Hayes
Staff Writer

A 10-most-wanted list will be released by the state today as part of a crackdown on parents who are delinquent on child-support payments.

The list is designed to bolster the state's effort to collect payments from the recalcitrant parents, Dale Milligan, regional manager for the Bureau of Child Support Enforcement in Marion, said. Milligan hopes the list will be published in newspapers statewide to help locate hard-to-find parents.

"It is not to embarrass anyone, but it is the moral obligation for the parent and not for the taxpayers," he said.

No one in Jackson County will appear on the list Milligan said. "Southern Illinois is more responsible than any other area."

Milligan said the state will begin circulating regional top-10 lists in February. The Southern Illinois region will stretch from Effingham to Alexander counties.

Top-10 lists are part of a larger crackdown by the state on delinquent parents. A 20-percent surcharge will be placed on the amount of money owed by delinquents beginning July 1.

Letters were recently sent out to about 100,000 parents, Milligan said.

The State Parent Locate Service and the Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement Support Act also are part of the crackdown. The service will track down delinquent parents through social security numbers, the Department of Labor and the Internal

Nicaraguan government, Contras to talk cease-fire

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (UPI) — The U.S.-backed Contra rebels and a Sandinista delegation from Nicaragua were urged Wednesday, on the eve of their first ever face-to-face negotiations, to put aside differences and work toward a cease-fire in their 7-year war. The two sides were scheduled to meet today — with the Reagan administration request for further aid to the Contras looming in the background — in a Catholic seminary on the outskirts of San Jose to discuss a cease-fire.

Hijack suspect refuses to testify for brother

DUESSELDORF, West Germany (UPI) — An Arab accused of hijacking a U.S. airplane and murdering an American passenger refused to testify Wednesday at his brother's trial on kidnapping charges amid reports another West German was kidnapped in Beirut. However, Mohammad Ali Hamadi testified that he is 19. Court records show his age as 23. If Hamadi is 19, he will be tried as a minor. His brother, Ali Abbas Hamadi, 29, is charged with complicity in the January 1987 kidnapping of two West German businessmen in Beirut.

Ortega says, U.S. mind your own business

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega, in Europe to stir up opposition to the renewal of U.S. funding of the Contra rebels, called on the American government Wednesday to solve domestic problems such as racism instead of meddling in Central America. Ortega said that the U.S. government was the biggest obstacle to peace in Central America. President Reagan has argued that financial backing of anti-Sandinista forces is needed to pressure the Marxist government to comply with provisions of the peace plan signed last year by the five Central American presidents.

Suspected Nazi calls witness 'liar' in trial

JERUSALEM (UPI) — John Demjanjuk, accused of Nazi war crimes, grabbed a microphone Wednesday and shouted "liar, liar, liar" in Hebrew at a death camp survivor who identified him as the sadistic guard "Ivan the Terrible." The outburst came as Eliyahu Rosenberg, 67, was called back to court midway through closing arguments to testify about memoirs in which he wrote he saw an inmate kill "Ivan" in 1943. Rosenberg was one of five Treblinka survivors who have identified Demjanjuk, a former Cleveland autoworker, as a guard who used a whip, sword and pistol to drive thousands of prisoners into the gas chambers, and then fired up the engines.

Group says FBI spied on 150 Reagan critics

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The FBI conducted a four-year "illegal campaign to stifle dissent" by spying on more than 150 liberal non-profit groups opposed to Reagan administration policies in Central America, a civil rights group charged Wednesday. Margaret Ratner, attorney for the non-profit Center for Constitutional Rights, citing 1,320 pages of documents the group had obtained under the Freedom of Information Act, said that the FBI under William Webster had used wiretaps.

Senate panel approves Kennedy nomination

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Judiciary Committee unanimously recommended Wednesday the Senate approve Supreme Court nominee Anthony Kennedy, assuring President Reagan's third choice for the vacant seat will be confirmed within days. The committee, which heard just three days of testimony on the 51-year-old federal appeals court judge from California, endorsed Kennedy 14-0. The high court seat has been vacant since the retirement last June of Justice Lewis Powell.

Senate refuses limitations on civil rights bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate, in its second day of debate on a landmark civil rights bill, refused Wednesday to restrict anti-discrimination laws to segments of a schools or religious organizations that receive federal funding. In separate votes, the Senate turned back efforts by conservative Republicans to narrow the scope of the legislation, rejecting their arguments that the Civil Rights Restoration Act would violate the religious freedoms guaranteed to churches.

Mass transit proposal up for review

By Dana Schulte
Staff Writer

A proposal for a campus and city mass transit system has its wheels rolling again.

The USO mass transit committee will review a map of routes for the proposed transit system at a meeting tonight at 7 p.m. in the student senate chambers, Marvin Tanner, student welfare commission member, said.

"We want students to know that we are making progress," he said.

The map outlines campus and city routes that could be used if a transit system is implemented, Tanner said. Routes will be designed so students can get on almost anywhere and go wherever they want on campus or in the city.

Commission members also are working on a survey that would gauge student opinions on the system. "We want to see what the need analysis for mass transit would be," Tanners said.

About 10 percent of a randomly selected student population would be surveyed, Tanner said. City residents also may be surveyed.

Commission members have asked Northern Illinois

University officials for a copy of the transit proposal they submitted to the Board of Regents, "to help us get ours going," Tanner said.

Student fees for the system would be $15 for full-time students and $1.25 per credit hour for part-time students. "Even if you only ride once a day, it only would be about 25 cents a ride," Tanner said.

Family plans funeral for drowned student

By Steven Starke
Staff Writer

The parents of missing SIU-C student Ricky Johnson have begun making funeral arrangements for their son.

Johnson, 19, a freshman in forestry, has been missing since Saturday, when his canoe capsized in the Big Muddy River near Murphysboro. He is presumed drowned.

Officials searching the river for Johnson's body hope to recover the body soon. Rough water conditions and cold weather have hampered their efforts to date.

Tina Johnson, Ricky's sister, said the family has received a number of phone calls from friends since Ricky's disappearance. "Ricky was very active and had a lot of friends," she said.

Johnson is a 1987 graduate of Stewardson-Strasburg High School, where he participated in several organizations, including the Industrial Arts Club and the Junior Engineering Technical Society. He also was a member of the school baseball and basketball teams.

Tina Johnson said he enjoyed outdoor activities and had planned to be a forest ranger.

Another student involved in the accident, Richard Foreman, 20, a biology student, was treated for hypothermia and released from St. Joseph Memorial Hospital in Murphysboro. Foreman and Johnson were best friends and roommates at Mae Smith Hall.

Foreman has returned home, where he and the Johnson family are awaiting word on the search for Ricky Johnson's body.

USO senator appeals impeachment, wins

By Susan Curtis
Staff Writer

An Undergraduate Student Organization move to impeach a senator for violating attendance rules failed Wednesday after the senator appealed.

Kevin Marro, senator for the School of Technical Careers, told the senate he sent a proxy to one of the meetings in question. The proxy failed to attend the meeting and did not notify him, he said.

Marro also said he notified other senators of the arrangement. Senators are allowed to miss four meetings per semester, two with proxy and two without, according to the constitution.

Marro also told the senate he had not received any word on the impeachment until he returned from break.

The senate defeated Marro's impeachment by a voice vote. However, another senator who did not attend the meeting to appeal his impeachment, Jamal Rabie, was removed from the senate.

Rabie, senator for the East Side, also was in violation of attendance rules.

A bill approving a name change for the USO was tabled because it would require a constitutional change.

The bill, which would change the organization's name to the Undergraduate Student Government Association, will be sent to the Committee on Internal Affairs.

USO President John Attard said the name change is necessary because people confuse the USO with the United States Organization, which entertains U.S. armed forces.

In other action, the USO:

—Passed a resolution supporting the Illinois Public Interest Research Group. IPIRG would be a student-run organization that allows students to work on public policy issues. About 10,000 signatures were collected at SIU-C on petitions suggesting the establishment of IPIRG here.

Device tests soundproofing of products

By Steven Starke
Staff Writer

A $100,000 noise testing unit was unveiled at the acoustic research section of the Good Luck Globe Building Wednesday.

The acoustic unit is designed to test the efficiency of materials designed to reduce sound levels. It also can be used to test noise levels in products and factories.

The unit will be available to local manufacturers to test machine noise in their products, Kenneth Tempelmeyer, dean of the College of Engineering and Technology, said. It also will be available to industries trying to meet noise level requirements in their plants.

Local firms may find the equipment useful as a diagnostic device for "machine health." The unit can monitor the mechanical vibrations of machines, which can indicate a breakdown.

Sheller-Globe Corp. of Herrin — which makes padding, insulation and paneling used for noise control — financed the construction of the acoustics unit.

In return, the University agreed to conduct research for the company. Researchers will measure the noise absorption of materials Sheller-Globe uses in its production of automobile panels.

The products to be tested will be placed between a reverberation room and an echo-deadening chamber. Through the use of a noise generator, sounds are created to match the noise levels that the tested material is designed to reduce. Microphones measure the amount of sound that gets through the material from the reverberation room to the deadening chamber.

Scientists searching for key to taste

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Scientists working to unlock the biochemical key to taste have identified mechanisms that appear to trigger the widely varying sensations of sweet, sour, salty and bitter, research showed Wednesday.

Discoveries by two research groups working independently in West Germany and Japan indicate intracellular substances called cyclic nucleotides are central to the reception of sweet tastes, the scientists reported in the journal Nature.

"These two papers show much more convincing evidence that the complexities of tastes seem to be related to different mechanisms," said Geoffrey Gold, an assistant professor at Yale University School of Medicine and co-author of the Nature article.

Gold said unlocking the biochemical key to triggering specific tastes "has tremendous applications ... anything that will help enhance taste is going to have a big commercial payoff."

Researchers at the University of Saar in Hamburg, West Germany, and Asahi University in Japan found the injection of cyclic nucleotides, which are common biochemical messengers, into sweet-responsive taste cells suddenly increased electrical resistance in the cell membrane.

The nucleotides are created by enzymes within cells when sugar or other sweet substances are present.

When that electrical response reaches the brain, it apparently registers as the sensation of sweetness.

The author said that although the German study involved rats and the Japanese study focused on frogs, the sensory systems of those animals "seem to be good models for studying the human mechanism."

White's departure a promising omen

THE UNIVERSITY OF Illinois should be commended for its handling of the Mike White fiasco involving repeated violations of NCAA rules

White, hired to replace Gary Moeller as football coach eight seasons ago, took a slipshod group of Fighting Illini to a 10-2 record and a Rose Bowl berth within four years.

Not bad for a team that seemed entrenched in the doldrums of mediocrity. But the real story slowly emerged.

Because White's organization violated NCAA rules for recruiting, the Illini were placed on probation in 1984, the year after the Rose Bowl appearance. The team was barred from off-campus recruiting for one year, barred from post-season play and lost scholarships.

THAT SHOULD HAVE been enough to set any football program back on the straight and narrow. But White, while fielding a run of the mill team in 1985, crossed NCAA boundaries again. Now he is out of a job.

The University apparently allowed White to resign rather than fire him point blank, but the effect and the message remain the same: obey the rules defined by the NCAA or face the consequences.

For too long, universities have been slapped lightly on the hand for rules violations and told, "That's a no-no, don't do it again."

MAYBE COACHES AND athletic directors didn't think of the penalties as anything more than temporary constraints on their overall game plans, like the hockey player who is penalized for fighting, put in the box, and goes back to bashing heads the minute he returns to the ice.

Now that a Big Ten school has been penalized repeatedly, perhaps other major athletic programs will take notice that no schools, large or small, are above the rules.

Hopefully, the dismissal of White will help usher in a new standard for college athletic programs. It should be obvious by now to coaches, athletic directors, recruiters and even potential recruits that the NCAA doesn't make rules just so they may be broken. It makes rules to keep both the integrity and mechanics of intercollegiate athletics respectable.

Opinions from elsewhere

Ft. Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel

The new year is not a month old and already the U.S. Customs Service has wrapped up first prize in the Most Irresponsible Idea of 1988 contest.

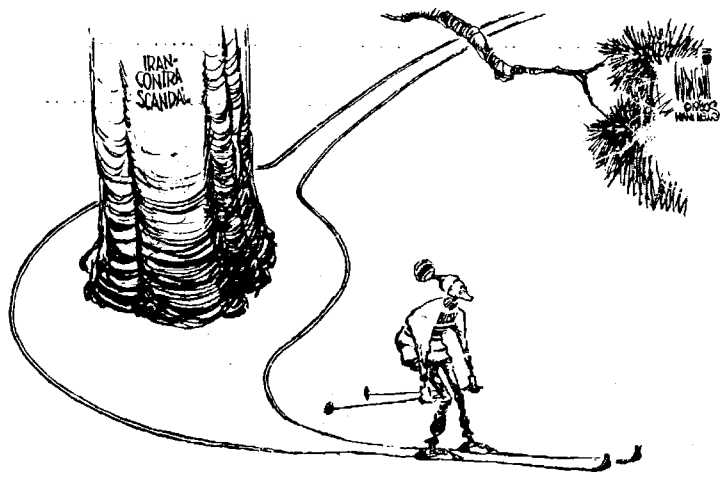

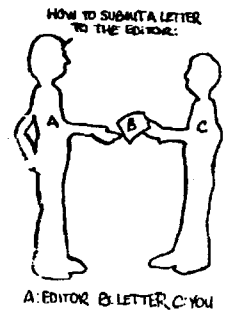

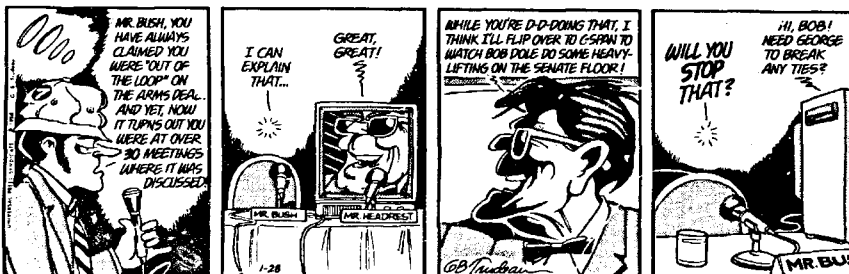

The agency's request for permission to shoot down suspected drug planes would be funny, in a fascist sort of way, if it were made in jest. Unfortunately, the people who presented the request to the National Drug Policy Board last fall are deadly serious.

That no decision has been made as yet puts the policy panel in line for an award of its own — for dithering with a matter that should have been dismissed out of hand.

What customs officials are asking for is the right to serve as judge, jury and, considering the survival rate when planes are shot out of the air, executioner of suspected drug smugglers. The Ramboesque ignorance of that concept defies description.

Jackson County's response to AIDS crisis to be commended

I am writing to compliment Jackson County on its response to the AIDS crisis.

As a member of the Southern Illinois AIDS Task Force, I have been able to observe firsthand the benefits of its educational campaign.

Last year the task force's Speakers Bureau made 89 presentations to a total of 4,068 people in Southern Illinois. These presentations provided facts about all aspects of AIDS and many more presentations to schools, church groups and other organizations are scheduled for this year.

Jackson County also is lucky to have the AIDS Support Services and Education Training (ASSET) group. This group was started by Dr. John R. Moore of the SIU-C health education department. ASSET has trained people to provide AIDS victims and their families and friends with emotional support and patient advocacy information.

In addition, the health education department is involved in studies of students' knowledge about AIDS and the attitudes in local health care settings toward AIDS. The Wellness Center also is developing a workshop aimed at educating the university population about AIDS.

Hospitals and mental health facilities in the county also conduct workshops to keep their staffs informed about the latest AIDS information.

Jackson County is fortunate to have so many people who voluntarily help educate the public and prepare us for the future, when there most likely will be more AIDS victims in the county than the three cases already reported.

A lot has been done, but there still is much to do. It is up to each individual to keep himself informed about AIDS and the new developments that seem to occur daily.

This is just the beginning of the fight against a virus that is not going to go away in the near future, but Jackson County is doing its part to educate the public and to help those infected with AIDS. I wish I could say the same for the rest of the country. Bryan L. McClerren, graduate student, Health Education

Aid to Contras should be rejected

In his State of the Union speech, President Reagan reaffirmed his aggressive opposition to Nicaragua, citing evidence from a defector that Nicaragua intends to build a 600,000-person army.

This shows how Reagan has abused such information in skillfully timed scare campaigns to badger Congress into approving more Contra aid. Once this information is repeated often enough, it seems it must be true.

A closer look at the supposed military build-up accentuates the hysterical emphasis of our administration. The Nicaraguans long have been in the process of putting arms in the hands of the people. The bulk of the 600,000 refers to a minimally trained and widely scattered militia that defends its communities from Contras and prepares for a possible U.S. invasion.

It is no wonder the Nicaraguans question our intentions in the face of the Reagan administration's continuing violations of the provision prohibiting outside aid to irregular forces and encouragement to our "allies," Honduras and El Salvador, to claim non-compliance on the part of Nicaragua.

It would be extremely easy to nourish the Central Americans' initiative and follow the advice of Costa Rican President Oscar Arias to "let Central Americans decide the future of Central America."

It seems clear who the aggressor is in this instance. It is time for Congress to avoid further Tonkin Gulf-type manipulations and comply with the peace accords.

Non-lethal, humanitarian or whatever they call it, it keeps a terrorist force in the field. The Contras have all the lethality they can use. It is time for us to stop payment. Please ask your Congressmen to defeat Contra aid on Feb. 3. Georgeann Hartzog, Carbondale

Break marred by crimes; students are main victims

By John Mohler
Staff Writer

At least 54 residential burglaries occurred during the semester break, with 19 resulting in losses of more than $300, according to Carbondale police reports. Seven of the 19 resulted in losses of over $1,000, the records said.

Eight thefts of University property and 10 incidents of damage to University property were reported, according to University Security Police records.

The incidents occurred between Dec. 18, 1987 and Jan. 18.

Lt. Larry Hill of the Carbondale police said there may be more burglaries reported in the coming weeks.

"There was an extremely high number of burglaries this year. It might be more in the neighborhood of 70 or 80," Hill said.

Fifty-five burglaries were reported between Dec. 11, 1986 and Jan. 26, 1987, Carbondale officer Art Wright said.

Hill said students are the victims of between 75 and 85 percent of burglaries during break. "Many students leave property here. Burglars aren't stupid," Hill said.

Four detectives are currently investigating the burglaries, he said.

About 15 to 20 percent of burglaries in the area result in arrest or recovery of property within two years, Hill said.

He added that burglaries are among the most difficult crimes to investigate because they are rarely witnessed.

"Burglary is a crime of stealth. The burglar doesn't call attention to himself like a bank robber with a gun telling everyone to get on the ground," Hill said. "If they ran around yelling or beating their chests or wore distinctive clothing, we might not have a problem."

Hill said students are good targets because their residences are scattered over a wide area of Carbondale, making patrolling more difficult for the police.

"It's hard for five officers to patrol hundreds of houses," Hill said.

Hill also noted that most students don't participate in community crime prevention groups, such as the Neighborhood Watch program.

Wright, who heads Neighborhood Watch, said that none of the burglaries occurred at member households. He said students are welcome to participate in the program.

Nealer said that instead of referring offenders to the Office of Student Life or making them pour out the alcohol, officers this year arrested violators and confiscated the drinks.

Nealer said another 186 alcohol-related arrests were made at last year's Halloween celebration.

Nealer said she believes the tougher stance on alcohol is a successful measure that will be continued.

"DUIs (driving under the influence of alcohol) went down. I feel that that's why we're going to enforce this... maybe it will have the same effect on underage drinking," she said.

Driving-under-the-influence violations went down 22 percent, from 85 in 1986 to 66 in 1987, according to the report.

The report indicated University police were in-olved in 7,844 incidents of all types in 1987. That includes criminal, traffic, motor vehicle and University regulations violations, plus other services. This was an increase of 1.1 percent over 1986 totals.

Clearance rates rose 0.2 percent last year. A clearance is an arrest, a recovery of property, or a referral of the offender to another jurisdiction, such as the Office of Student Life or the state's attorney, Nealer said.

The report said the following increased over 1987:

—Criminal damage to state property increased 39 percent from 69 in 1986 to 96 in 1987;

—Criminal damage to vehicles increased 34 percent from 123 in 1986 to 165 in 1987;

—Motor vehicle accidents increased 24.8 percent from 262 in 1986 to 327 in 1987, and those resulting in personal injury were up 65.6 percent from 32 to 53;

—Tow calls rose 16.2 percent from 1,088 in 1986 to 1,264 in 1987;

—Burglaries increased 10.8 percent from 65 during 1986 to 72 in 1987.

Car thefts fell 20 percent from 20 in 1986 to 16 last year. Sexual assaults fell from four in 1986 to two last year, resulting in one arrest.

Crimes occurred at on-campus student residences as follows:

—95 offenses committed at the University Park triads;

—70 offenses committed at Neely Hall;

—69 offenses committed at Mae Smith Hall;

—66 offenses committed at Evergreen Terrace;

—63 offenses committed at Thompson Point;

—53 offenses committed at Schneider Hall;

—53 offenses committed on Greek Row.

Roubos said, "As long as there are cases in court, I think it's best if I don't comment."

The criteria listed in the School of Music guidelines for tenure review include teaching ability, research quality and service to the University.

Hammond frequently was rated highly in these areas. Hammond and other School of Music faculty members have claimed that Hammond was the victim of a smear campaign because of his outspoken opposition to splitting the school's cinema and photography department, a move supported by Sanders.

The biggest controversy regarding Hammond's application for tenure has been the consideration of "collegiality" in the denial. The term is not in the School of Music guidelines for reviewing tenure applications.

However, the three members of the five-member School of Music Promotion and Tenure Committee who voted against Hammond's tenure used the term in their reasoning.

Following the committee's rejection of Hammond's request for tenure, the University's Judicial Review Board and in November the Board of Trustees refused to review the case.

Revenue Service, Milligan said. He said that if necessary, money will be taken from delinquent parents' paychecks, tax returns and unemployment checks.

The act will search for parents in other states and in other countries, Milligan said.

Efforts to step-up collection of payments came about because federal welfare officials consider Illinois to have one of the worst child-support collection rates in the nation. The state hopes the crackdown will result in the removal of thousands of single-parent families from welfare roles.

with one council member noting that the Supreme Court opens every session with a prayer.

The controversy began in the fall when the director of Jewish B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation wrote letters to administrators and faculty members urging them to use non-denominational prayer at commencement ceremonies.

Since then, the College of Liberal Arts Council has voted to abolish prayer at its graduation ceremonies. However, the college will not stop religious groups from holding their own baccalaureates with prayer.

The schools of law and medicine have never allowed prayer at commencement, Darrell Johnson, GPSC president, said.

The council also voted 22-9 to support Guyon's decision that each college and school be allowed to decide for itself whether prayer should be a part of their graduation ceremonies.

Johnson said he would relay the results of the vote directly to Guyon, along with the diverse opinions and concerns of council members.

Illini professor to applaud dynamic Japanese director

By Richard Nunez
Entertainment Editor

David Desser, associate professor at the University of Illinois, will pay tribute to Japanese film maker Akira Kurosawa 7 p.m. Tuesday during the Big Muddy Film Festival.

Desser said his lecture, which will include slides and video presentations, will cover such topics as Kurosawa's filming techniques, Kurosawa's appeal to Americans and America's influence on Japanese film making.

"Kurosawa is a magnificent director," Desser said. "His films are dynamic in their editing and in their use of montage. He also knows precisely where to place the camera."

"Kurosawa is a director who combines poetry with documentary," Desser said. "Many of his films are adapted from actual events but he treats them poetically, freely expressing them in his own way."

In the 1940s, Kurosawa broke away from the established tradition of Japanese film making and pioneered an era in which characters experienced breakdowns in society or had to deal with humanistic problems, Desser said.

"Before his time, Japanese films dealt with respectable subjects. For example, a film might be set in a family situation," Desser said. "Kurosawa pioneered an era of film making that dealt with subjects in which there was a wrench in society, such as the civil war in 'Seven Samurai.' "He (Kurosawa) is interested in how the rules of society have broken down," Desser said. "His films deal with the subject of ethical humanism, in which people had to deal with problems on their own."

10th BIG MUDDY

FILM FESTIVAL

"Seven Samurai" is one of Kurosawa's best known films. His other films include "Ran," "Kagemusha" and "Ikiru." These films will be shown after Desser's lecture.

Desser said that Kurosawa was an influence on many American film makers and especially on the westerners of the late 1960s and early 1970s.

"Seven Samurai" was a direct influence on the 'The Magnificent Seven,'" Desser said.

"The Magnificent Seven" is considered a classic Hollywood film, but is not the only American western to be influenced by Kurosawa. Directors such as Sergio Leone and Sam Peckinpah were influenced by Kurosawa. Peckinpah's film, "The Wild Bunch" was influenced by "Seven Samurai," and both he and Leone readily admit to being influenced by Kurosawa's style, Desser said. Desser wrote a book on Kurosawa entitled "The Samurai Films of Akira Kurosawa."

Nutrasweet finds Simplese a substitute for natural fat

NEW YORK (UPI) — The NutraSweet Co. unveiled Wednesday the first natural fat substitute, a protein product designed to reduce calories in such foods as butter and ice cream by as much as 80 percent and cut down on cholesterol.

One gram of the product, known as Simplese, has only 1.3 calories and replaces a 9-calorie gram of fat.

NutraSweet, a subsidiary of the Monsanto Co. and the maker of the artificial sweetener aspartame, said Simplese would reach the market in 16 to 18 months and heralded it as a major breakthrough in the food industry.

"SIMPLESE CREATES the impression of fat with all of its taste and texture benefits but none of the health concerns," NutraSweet Chairman Robert Shapiro said at a news conference. "Simplese means consumers will now be able to enjoy rich and creamy foods without all of the fat and substantially lower calories and cholesterol."

Shapiro said Simplese can slash the total caloric value of food by up to 80 percent and vastly reduce the intake of cholesterol. Health experts recommend lowering cholesterol, total fat and saturated fat in the diet to reduce the risk of cardiovascular disease.

NUTRASWEET CLAIMED Simplese would lower the calories in a four-ounce serving of super premium ice cream to 130 calories from 283 calories.

The company said the product also could be used in such foods as butter, spread cheeses and salad dressing, but not in cooking or frying because heating causes Simplese to revert to its original protein form. The current substitute for butter is margarine, which is made from vegetable fat products.

The new fat substitute is made from fresh egg whites or milk through a heating and blending process called "microparticulation." The process reshapes protein into tiny spheroids that are perceived as fluid by the tongue.

THE RESULTING texture is a "creamy richness" that gives the sensory impressions normally given by fat, said Norman S. Singer, creator of the product. Although the texture of the product fools the tongue, he said, flavors associated with the presence of fat must be added.

NutraSweet said Simplese does not require regulatory approval because it is created by changing the size, shape and texture of "natural, common ingredients."

But Chris Lecos, a spokesman for the Food and Drug Administration in Washington, said NutraSweet had not contacted the agency about the new product.

"THEY DIDN'T bother to ask us about it," Lecos said. "If and when they decide to market it, we're going to have to make an independent determination as to whether it is something we need to investigate. We're not going to just take their word for it."

NutraSweet, which has not conducted extensive animal or human studies on Simplese, said an "independent panel of prestigious scientists" had been consulted to certify that the product consisted only of natural ingredients.

Dr. Elizabeth Whelan, executive director of the American Council on Sciences and Health in Summit, N.J., said she was "highly sceptical" when she first heard NutraSweet's claims that the product was completely safe.

BUT WHELAN said she now has confidence in the product and noted that Simplese is the result of a physical rather than a chemical change.

Michael Jacobson, executive director of Center for Science in the Public Interest, a consumer group that frequently is at odds with the food industry, said he had limited information about Simplese, "But if what they say about it is true, it looks like a very interesting product and could help people reduce their fat intake."

But Jacobson warned the product was no "magic bullet" guaranteeing healthier diets. He pointed out that since 1977, consumption of artificial sweeteners has increased dramatically — but so has sugar consumption, by about 2 pounds per person per year.

It's always FREE (week)

I don't know how it happened...at first, I was going to SU, living at Thompson Point, and doing what SU students normally do on the weekends: going up to the strip and standing around with the rest of the people pretending to have fun. Then, one time I went to FRED'S. I couldn't believe it! Everybody was dancing, well maybe 75%, but when was the last time you've seen more than 10% of the crowd dancing up there? Even my friends who said they didn't like country music were dancing up a storm. You know, all those other places say they are "THE place to party", well they don't even know the meaning of the word. Well anyway, now I'm hooked on FRED'S. I confess FRED'S has really spoiled me! Diana Davidson

Goose cause of $1 million injury suit

MINEOLA, N.Y. (UPI) — A Canadian goose is the alleged culprit in a $1 million personal injury suit that went to trial Wednesday at state supreme court in Mineola, N.Y.

The suit said that three days before their wedding, Richard Braue, 30, and his fiancée went to the Villa Victor Restaurant in Syosset on June 25, 1985, to inspect the outdoor patio where the reception was to be held.

The goose swooped down on Braue, and in backing away to avoid it, Braue tripped over a tree root and broke a vertebra in his back, their lawyer, Jeffrey Lisabeth said.

Lisabeth said Braue wore a body brace at the wedding and spent his honeymoon on a cruise ship "in a rather sedentary mode."

The suit alleged the restaurant failed to take steps to rid the pond of several Canadian geese which inhabited it.

Former Cabinet members say INF treaty is a must

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two former secretaries of state told the Senate Wednesday failure to approve the INF treaty would be disastrous for the NATO alliance and would seal the reputation of U.S. leaders as "war mongers."

William Rogers, who served under President Nixon and helped forge the SALT 1 treaty, and Cyrus Vance, President Carter's secretary of state during SALT 2 talks, told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee the Intermediate Nuclear Forces Treaty is a stunning arms control victory for the United States and should be approved without a single change.

The two former Cabinet members, who helped forge key U.S. arms control policies in the days of Leonid Brezhnev, said Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev has agreed to provisions in the INF pact, including on-site verification, that would have been considered "a miracle" in the past.

"From my standpoint, this is a damn good treaty, and verifiable," Rogers said.

If the treaty is not approved by a two-thirds majority of the Senate as required by the Constitution, Vance said, "The political effects within the alliance ... would be absolutely disastrous" and there would be "grave consequences" for future arms control efforts.

"A lot of people in the world think we're war mongers," Rogers said. A lack of commitment on the treaty, which would eliminate missiles aimed at Europe, would be "devastating all over the world. I think it would be a calamity to have that happen."

In testimony before the Senate Armed Services Committee, David Abshire, until recently the U.S. representative to NATO, called the signing of the treaty Dec. 8 by President Reagan and Gorbachev "a great victory for NATO" and "a vindication of the alliance strategy ... of strength and negotiation."

Abshire, now president of the Center for Strategic and International Studies, a Washington "think tank," said it was the deployment of U.S. Pershing-2 and cruise missiles in Western Europe in 1983-84 that "created the leverage for successful INF negotiations."

Supported by several Foreign Relations Committee members, Rogers and Vance sought to discount criticisms repeated Wednesday by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., the ranking committee Republican and leading Senate opponent of the pact.

Helms has set the tone of the three days of debate since the hearings opened Monday but otherwise the treaty has drawn widespread support, even producing at times unusual alliances.

Liberal Democrat Alan Cranston of California, in decrying Helms's criticism, for example, cited Reagan's record as an argument in favor of the arms agreement.

"The American people aren't dumb. They are not about to believe that Ronald Reagan, our most virulently anti-communist leader, has been snookered by the Soviets," Cranston said.

Helms, in a letter addressed to Reagan and delivered to the White House Tuesday, asked that the INF hearings be postponed until questions are answered about discrepancies in U.S. figures on how many SS-20 missiles the Soviets have deployed.

He also alluded to a possible conspiracy within the administration to hide the figures, saying, "Frankly, I'm concerned that there may be some attempt to modify or blunt the stark nature of the data being presented."

However, Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., said the hearings would go forward.

High AIDS exposure reported among inner-city heterosexuals

BOSTON (UPI) — Doctors said Wednesday that all patients at VD clinics should be tested for AIDS because a study showed a high incidence of infection in heterosexuals who did not believe they were at risk of getting AIDS.

A study, reported in the New England Journal of Medicine, found patients at Baltimore's inner-city clinics for sexually transmitted diseases showed one-third of the men and nearly half of the women testing positive for the AIDS virus did not believe they were engaging in any high-risk behavior, researchers said.

The study recommended that all clinics for patients with sexually transmitted diseases — including syphilis, genital warts and genital herpes — should test all patients for AIDS exposure.

The report said the rate of exposure to the human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, the cause of AIDS, was 5.2 percent, or 209 of 4,028 clinic patients screened in Baltimore in early 1987.

Researchers said this was 18 times higher than the rate found among military recruits from the mid-Atlantic region in 1986, and four times higher than that for recruits from inner-city Baltimore.

Researchers said the pattern of age and sex of infected patients was similar to patterns in central Africa, where AIDS is heterosexually transmitted. Demographic rates also were similar to patterns of syphilis and gonorrhea transmission among heterosexuals in the United States.

Dr. Thomas C. Quinn, an immunologist at Johns Hopkins University Medical Center in Baltimore who headed the study for the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, called the finding "disturbing."

Special style of rock music secret of Christian group

By Laura Milbrath
Staff Writer

Eddie DeGarmo and Dana Key, who will bring their Christian rock 'n' roll music and message to the Marion Civic Center at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, advise those attending to expect the unexpected.

Many people might think a Christian rock group would "stand around the microphone and sing some hymns," Key said in a telephone interview. "But the lights are going to come on and there is going to be smoke in the auditorium. It's not going to sound like any gospel they have ever heard before."

DeGarmo and Key, a born-again Christian rock group, has been creating its special kind of music for the past ten years.

"The music itself is pure rock 'n' roll, but the lyrics are about Christ," Key said. "Not every song mentions God or Jesus but every song has to do with living a Christian life."

The two singers grew up in Memphis and became friends in the first grade. Together they have recorded ten albums. Their newest, titled "D & K," was released in October and has already sold 130,000 copies.

Each copy of "D & K" comes with a free copy, in the hopes that the listener will "give it to their non-Christian friends or a Christian who has slipped away," Key said.

The group has made videos, some of which were featured on MTV. Questions were raised, however, about its "666" video because of a scene that involved pouring fire on the Antichrist.

"They told us they would play the video if we would edit it," Key said. "We don't really understand why they did that. We laughed and thought 'This is obviously a case of religious discrimination.'" Key added that churches had already been using the video for youth groups.

The Rev. Jimmy Swaggart's criticism of Christian music is upsetting to the group. Key said that Swaggart "probably doesn't know very much about our hearts and our ministry and what we're trying to communicate in our music."

"He probably doesn't like the sound of rock 'n' roll and probably assumes that God doesn't like the sound either," Key added.

The sounds of rhythm and blues artists from Memphis as well as the music of ZZ Top and Elvis Presley have influenced the group, Key said.

As young boys, DeGarmo and Key rode the schoolbus past Presley's home each day and saw the wealth and fame that rock 'n' roll could bring. They later learned of the tragedy it could bring when Presley died.

"Rock 'n' roll can make a lot of money, but it doesn't necessarily give happiness or success," Key said.

The group has decided that its two goals are to "win non-Christians to Christ and to encourage Christians to live closer to God," Key said.

DeGarmo and Key have just returned from a tour in Australia. They travel around the world each year, performing in about 100 concerts. During performances, they often stop to discuss their songs with the audience.

DeGarmo and Key

"We don't depend on lyrics of songs to communicate. We take the time to explain the songs and the message," Key said.

The group hopes that non-Christians who attend their concerts will leave as Christians, Key said.

He added, "And if they are Christian when they come, I hope we would have said something between one of the songs that encourages them to live a more dedicated life to Christ."

Debate team wins; holds at No. 1 spot

By Steven Starks
Staff Writer

The SIU-C debate team maintained its No. 1 ranking in the Cross-Examination Debate Association with a victory at the Weber State University Round Robin Tournament last weekend in Ogden, Utah.

The squad, seeking its third-straight national championship under coach Jeffrey T. Bile, came out 14-0 in a seven-team field for the win.

"The Weber State Invitational is a very prestigious event in that it is the only tournament where the top teams in the nation face each other head to head," Bile said.

The University leads the debate association's field with 178 points, 22 points higher than its 156 finish in the 1986-87 season. Central State University of Oklahoma follows with 115.

Cornell ranks third in the field with 106 points, while Kansas State University and Wheaton College are tied for fourth place with 91.

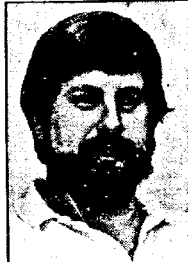

Teams are ranked according to points earned in their best six tournaments of the year.

"Everybody says we have it clinched," Bile said. There are seven tournaments remaining on the schedule, he said. "It is still quite possible that we can be caught. We expect some stiff competition from Central State."

Following first place victories in five of their first six tournaments, the debate team defeated Central State and came in second to the University of California at Berkeley in a tournament at the University of Southern California.

The team also swept the three top spots at the University of California at Los Angeles in the beginning of the year, followed by a tournament victory at William Jewell College in Missouri Jan. 15-16.

This weekend the debaters will play host to 60 teams at the Saluki National Invitational Tournament on the University's campus. The season finale will come in April, when the University competes with 200 other teams at the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Co.

Coach gets debating top honors

By Steven Starks
Staff Writer

Not only is the SIU-C debate team ranked No. 1, but so is its coach Jeffrey T. Bile.

Now in his fourth year as coach, Bile has become the first Cross Examination Debate Association forensics director to be named Barkley Forum Coach of the year by Emory University at Atlanta, Ga. He has led SIU-C to two consecutive national championships.

"I was very surprised and honored by the award," he said.

CEDA, which split from the National Debate Tournament in 1970 because some schools disagreed with its system of determining the national championship, has seen West Coast teams dominate the competition. The University of California at Los Angeles won the championship five years in a row.

Bile turned that around with championship seasons for SIU-C in 1985-86 and 1986-87.

CEDA has acquired a larger membership than the NDT. Emory University, which competes in both organizations, has always named its coach of the year from the NDT.

"I'd like to beat the UCLA record of winning five national CEDA championships in a row," he said. "But first, we have to win our third. That's what I'm concentrating on now," Bile said.

New York disco jams to Soviet rock 'n' roll

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Russian rock band on its first U.S. tour over a skeptical New York disco crowd with a musical glansnost that roused the fans to a standing ovation in the early hours of Tuesday morning.

"We call ourselves a rock 'n' roll band," said Awtograf bassist Leonid Guitkin in carefully worded English. "To us it's more than a musical description. It's a way of life."

That statement could have been made by any number of Western rock bands, but the difference is that Awtograf had to struggle against years of official disapproval in the Soviet Union before winning the right to play rock 'n' roll.

"From 1981 to 1985 rock 'n' roll was condemned," said guitarist Alexander Sitkovetsky. "The officials said it was a decadent product of western society."

The turning point came in 1985 when Awtograf won second prize at an official music contest. "We proved to them that rock 'n' roll is good music, just as good as classical or folk music," said

Sitkovetsky. Sitkovetsky, Guitkin and keyboardist Leonid Makarevich are the remaining members from the original 1979 Awtograf lineup. Drummer Victor Mikhlin was recruited from a large dance band, and the current group was completed by vocalist Artour Mikheev.

Since 1985 Awtograf has become the most popular band in the Soviet Union, playing to arena audiences of as many as 30,000 people and selling over 6 million copies of an album made for the state-owned Melodiya record company. Until now, the only glimpse American audiences have had of Awtograf was the vial satellite appearance as part of the 1985 "Live Aid" concert.

An audience of approximately 300 people, about evenly split between excited Russians and skeptical New Yorkers, watched Awtograf walk through a meticulously rehearsed and well-framed set of commercial-sounding rock.

Awtograf could have stepped out of an MTV video.

Tobacco tycoon's grandson campaigns against smoking

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — Patrick Reynolds, grandson of tobacco tycoon R.J. Reynolds, said Wednesday he supports a bill in the South Carolina Legislature that would restrict smoking in hospitals, restaurants and other public places.

Reynolds, whose goal is a "smoke-free society by the year 2000," said the surgeon general has determined that second-hand smoke is responsible for thousands of deaths each year.

He said 85 percent of the nation's population is protected by some type of smoking regulations, and the South Carolina bill "is very reasonable."

Reynolds also has campaigned and testified in Congress in support of a ban on cigarette advertising, which he said amounts to $8 per year for every American citizen.

Cigarette industry leaders claim such a restriction would violate their First Amendment rights, but Reynolds said "cigarette advertising is the greatest abuse of freedom of speech in our nation's history."

Reynolds, an actor, publisher and movie producer, is traveling throughout the country as a spokesman for the American Lung Association.

A smoker for 10 years before quitting in 1974, Reynolds divested himself of all R.J.

Reynolds Tobacco Co. stock in 1979.

He became actively involved in anti-smoking crusades in 1986, which led some to question whether he was "biting the hand that fed him."

"If the hand that once fed me is the tobacco industry, then that same hand has killed millions of people and will continue to do so," Reynolds said. "When my grandfather began manufacturing cigarettes at the turn of the century, he did not know that smoking causes lung disease, heart disease and cancer."

"Now that this is absolutely proven, I want to help people wake up to how poisonous cigarettes are."

Poltergeist-like spirits haunt Wisconsin family's house

HORICON, Wis. (UPI) — In a case recalling the movie "Poltergeist," a couple and their three children fled their home because they believe it is haunted by glowing spirits who speak in threatening voices and move objects in the house.

"They've been through an ordeal that's mind-boggling," Police Chief Douglas Glamann said.

He said he believed the family was telling the truth when they said "something" had possessed their home. "They are not out to make money or write a book," he said.

Glamann would not identify the family, but Horicon City Clerk David Pasewald said the property was owned by Allen and Deborah Tallmann.

Glamann said the family moved into the three-bedroom ranch house in a new subdivision about two years ago and left it 10 days ago to stay with relatives after a series of unusual events occurred during the last few months.

The couple said they saw strange glowing shapes and heard voices, that an apparition of an old woman appeared to their son, a chair and a suitcase moved by themselves and their 2-year-old daughter was so frightened she awoke screaming several times.

The case recalls the 1982 Steven Spielberg movie "Poltergeist," in which a couple and their three children ended up fleeing their home in a new subdivision because it was haunted by spirits who destroyed the house.

Glamann said he toured the home Monday night with other officers, a pastor and one of the owners of the home, but found nothing unusual.

Curious crowds flocked to the small Dodge County community of 3,600 last weekend looking for the "ghost house." Glamann said police barricaded the one-block street because of the crowds.

The Tallmanns, in an interview Wednesday with the Milwaukee Sentinel, said the experiences began about six months ago when a clock radio in their son's bedroom kept changing stations by itself.

"We thought it was interference," Deborah Tallmann said. "I looked at the radio and I saw that the knobs were moving and the red thing (station indicator) was going back and forth across."

She said she removed the radio from the boy's room.

Strange events continued, and increased in magnitude, the couple said.

The event that drove the family from the house came about three weeks ago, Allen Tallmann said, while he was in his 1-year-old daughter's bedroom waiting for her to fall asleep.

"I heard this vacuum-like sound ... and this thing came right out of the floor. It was gassy and foggy ... it rose up there and that voice came out of there and it said 'You're dead.'"

"These green eyes appeared right out of this thing and then I saw flames, and it was gone."

The couple left the house and a few days later, consulted with their pastor, who went to the house with them.

"He blessed our house, gave us communion in our house, gave us some tapes to play church music," Deborah Tallmann said.

A day later, the events began again and the Tallmanns fled for good, moving in with relatives who live out of town.

Barricaded Polygamist starts talking

MARION, Utah (UPI) — A heavily armed polygamist holed up in a farmhouse for 12 days reconnected his telephone Wednesday and began talking — a step lawmen hope will lead to his surrender, officials said.

Addam Swapp, married to two daughters of slain polygamist John Singer, "hooked up the phone this morning," said John T. Nielsen, state Public Safety Commissioner, and talked to lawmen for "a very, very brief" period to set up a response to a surrender plea from Utah Gov. Norm Bangerter.

Swapp had said Tuesday he would reopen the line to talk only to a longtime family friend, Ogden Kraut, who met twice in the past two days with the 15 people barricaded inside the Singer farm. Authorities were working to patch through the line to Kraut, who was to pass Swapp's response on to Bangerter.

"It's a positive sign," said Nielsen, who went to the remote farm with U.S. Attorney Brent Ward, apparently hoping to negotiate a settlement.

"If, in fact, negotiations occur, we'll be able to put some things on the table," Nielsen said. "But we'll expect some movement from them, too."

Swapp and Singer's widow, Vickie, both are charged in federal and state complaints with bombing a Mormon chapel Jan. 16. They had said they would respond to a letter Tuesday from the governor asking that they surrender.

Officials said that in the letter, delivered by Kraut, the governor was "speaking as a grandfather and a father," and promised no harm would come to Swapp and Vickie Singer if they gave up. Bangerter also vowed the six young Swapp children involved in the potentially lethal standoff would be taken care of.

Although Swapp said he would talk only to Kraut, Nielsen said he was encouraged that "finally, after two weeks, Mr. Swapp made the affirmative act of picking the phone up."

"Now, I want to stress we're talking only about communications here. We're not talking in the nature of negotiations," he said. "But communications is the first step — it's what we desire, it's what the last week is all about."

"At least we're off square one. Now we're not very far, and I don't want to give the impression we're in the mode of negotiations."

America's space heroes to be honored by monument

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Plans for a poignant monument to America's fallen astronauts were unveiled Wednesday on the eve of the second anniversary of that cold January day when the Challenger shuttle exploded in an instant seared in the minds of millions of Americans.

At NASA field centers across the nation, engineers, office workers, managers and technicians planned to mark the anniversary with 73 seconds of silence Thursday in memory of Challenger's tragically brief voyage and the seven astronauts who perished in history's worst space disaster.

June Scobee, wife of Challenger skipper Francis "Dick" Scobee, planned to visit Arlington National Cemetery near Washington to place a wreath on her husband's grave. His co-pilot, Michael Smith, is buried nearby in the quiet rolling hills outside the nation's capitol.

"EVERY DAY we are reminded we've lost loved ones, that all we have are our memories," Smith's widow, Jane, said earlier this week. "I think I would like my children to remember how Mike lived, where he would want them to be going, never looking back, learning from the past but looking forward to the future."

Killed on that cold Jan. 28 were Scobee, Smith, Judith Resnik, Ellison Onizuka, Ronald McNair, civilian engineer Gregory Jarvis and

'We were leading in space exploration, and we're falling behind. The country needs to make a commitment again.'

—Lorna Onizuka

New Hampshire school teacher Christa McAuliffe, the first private citizen to win a seat on a space shuttle.

The shuttle program has been grounded ever since.

"I'D LIKE to see (the space program) get back on its feet as soon as possible," said Lorna Onizuka, wife of the fallen shuttle flier. "We were leading in space exploration, and we're falling behind. The country needs to make a commitment again."

As if heeding her wishes, NASA Wednesday announced an Aug. 4 target for the shuttle Discovery's launch on the first post-Challenger mission.

In a haunting reminder of Challenger's launch, a cold wave rolled into Florida early Wednesday, prompting implementation of a "freeze protection plan" at the Kennedy Space Center.

THE CHALLENGER astronauts and seven others killed pursuing exploration of the final frontier will be honored by a monument to be built at the Kennedy Space Center by the Astronauts Memorial Foundation.

In a satellite news conference from Washington and the Kennedy Space Center, Alan Helman, chairman of the non-profit foundation, unveiled the winning design for the memorial on the 21st anniversary of a launch pad fire in 1967 that killed three Apollo astronauts.

The memorial, expected to cost up to $4 million, will be built at the shuttleport's visitors center, just a few miles from launch pad 39B where Challenger began its final voyage. The monument will be dedicated in 1990.

"THROUGH THIS program we hope to influence the young people of this country and to further develop their curiosity and understanding of space and space exploration," Helman said. "It is our hope many will choose to carry on what those before have started."

Called the "Space Mirror," the monument features a giant framework of granite slabs at near vertical angles that will track the sun. The names of the 14 men and women who lost their lives in the space program will be cut through the granite like stencils.

Hidden mirrors will direct sunlight through the names, which visitors will see "floating in the sky," said architect Paul Holt of the San Francisco firm Holt, Hinshaw, Pfau and Jones.

Failed rocket delays comet test

WALLOPS ISLAND, Va. (UPI) — A computer failure Wednesday forced scientists at NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center to cancel for the second time the launch of a rocket experiment aimed at simulating the effect of small comets on the atmosphere.

"The launch was canceled," said Dr. Michael Mendillo, principal investigator for the project at the center's Wallops Island facility. "It often happens. That's why we have five opportunities to do it, we lost the first two and we have three more opportunities — Friday, Sunday and Tuesday."

Bad weather delayed the first launch, and Mendillo said the scientists would try again on Friday. "It's unfortunate, but not unheard of in these tricky experiments, so we will try again."

Mendillo said the computer that governs the data display system failed just before the launch. "We couldn't see the data, and we couldn't go without it. The computer failed between 2 to 3 minutes before launch. Computers are wonderful, but sometimes they don't do wonderful things for you."

The rocket-born experiment called Environmental Reactions Induced by Comets, or ERIC, is part of ongoing research into ionospheric and atmospheric behavior.

A two-stage, 45-foot Terrier-Black Brant VC rocket will lift the 430-pound payload 186 miles above the Earth, where water, carbon dioxide and ice crystals will be released.

Super Bowl: Real sports or just a capitalist spectacle

By Mike Rabun
UPI Sports Writer

SAN DIEGO — The cynic would suggest that once upon a time the moguls of the NFL got together in a small room and agreed they had to choose between two options:

1. Create an atmosphere that would produce an exciting sports event, one which would provide a fitting end to the football season and be the talk of America for years to come.

2. Build a spectacle that would bring enormous amounts of cash without regard to the product on the field.

Even if there were no conscious decision made within the NFL's inner sanctum, we have wound up with the second choice.

The activity surrounding the Super Bowl suggests greatness. The numbers do not.

THOSE NUMBERS include 33-14, 24-3, 32-14, 38-9, 38-16, 46-10 and the most recent addition to the list, 39-20. It's like anticipating Christmas for weeks and then getting a lump of coal in your stocking.

Why is the Super Bowl so bad so often, and is there a chance that the one the Denver Broncos and Washington Redskins are going to play Sunday will be different?

"You would think it would be different," Denver Coach Dan Reeves said. "I'm not saying it will be. But I think if you look at the records you will find that both these teams are in the game most every time they play."

BUT ALL Super Bowl teams have been in most every game they played in the year they reached the Big One and that hasn't stopped a lot of those teams from having very, very bad days.

The theories are many as to why the Super Bowl becomes a Super Bust so often. And the one that carries the most weight has to do with the atmosphere surrounding the week leading to the game.

"Nothing you do this week resembles what you do any other week of the year," Reeves said, getting to the heart of the matter. "Everything about this week is different."

If the week is different, therefore, it stands to reason the game will be different.

DURING THE season, football players become creatures of habit. If it is 10:30 a.m. on Wednesday, they will be in a certain place and they migrate to that place with the reliability of the swallows returning to Capistrano or a sailor to his ship.

"We play and prepare each week the same way year after year," Reeves said. "We play four exhibition games and then 16 regular-season games and now two playoff games. One after another. If you are lucky, you play 22 games and you get to the Super Bowl. Then everything you have done all year changes. And the thing that changes the most is that you have two weeks to prepare for one game. I really feel the games would be better if we stayed in our routine and took only one week to get ready."

AFTER THE lucky players have won the biggest game they have played all year, the conference championship, they are usually given a few days off by their coaches. Instead of having a game to think of, they suddenly find themselves removed from football.

Bodies rest, minds wander.

THE NFL realizes full well what it has wrought. Its publicity machine has done a masterful job. It wants two weeks for the drama to build. It wants hundreds of reporters concentrating on its showcase rather than strikes, lawsuits and drugs. The nation has been captivated.

Not that all of this is bad. It just doesn't make for good football. But, as has been demonstrated over the past decade and is being demonstrated more and more each year, when it comes to the Super Bowl — the "event" is the thing.

trying to rebuild past glory under second-year coach Susan Yow.

"You can't classify Drake as a bottom team because they were always a national contender," Sheehan said. "They just had that period of transition with Susan Yow coming in. They had so many injuries last year, they only had five or six players when they came to Southern last year."

"Now they've got Julie Fitzpatrick back and they've got a tough schedule and they're sneaking into the playoff, tournament picture. There's a lot of basketball to be played. Strange things happen. Stranger things have happened," especially in the Gateway.

A favorite topic of Sheehan's is this year's Gateway Conference Tournament, the winner of which gets an automatic bid to the NCAA's.

"It will be four teams again, like last year. The sites will be the top two seeds in the tournament," he said. "It will be a little different this year because we'll have a week and a half between the end of the regular season and the selection of the NCAA teams."

The conference is not dictating to the schools when the first round games will be played. They can be held March 4, 5, or 6, Sheehan said.

The championship game set for March 9 will be televised on SportsVision out of Chicago. "So we're pretty happy, pretty excited about that," he said.

But while SportsVision has a wide Midwest audience through cable, it doesn't reach everywhere. Are any local stations taking a SportsVision feed for the broadcast?

"As far as we know, no. I imagine that if a station wants to do that, SportsVision would be more than happy to take some kinds of rights fee," Sheehan said. "That may be something for some city, some school, some commercial station to look into."

As a young conference, the Gateway has a tendency to be overlooked. The best way to gain respect is to play other schools that already have national recognition. Sheehan said the Gateway is making headway.

"We did well in non-conference games, but not as great as we wanted to do," he said.

"We are one of the few conferences, maybe the only conference this year that has one hundred percent Division I scheduling. That was a decision of all the coaches and athletics directors last year because we want people to take note that we're serious about our basketball," he said.

"We're not going to put pantsies on our schedule. There's obviously different degrees of Division I, but we think we have a pretty solid schedule top to bottom."

Sheehan, in accord with Commissioner Patty Viverito, seem to have the Gateway running smoothly. However, if the league has aspirations of competing on the level of the Big Ten and the Big Eight conferences, as it professes, there is still much work to do.

"They are a good basketball team, that's what we've seen by watching them on (video) tape," Scott said. "Western has a pair of good shooting guards who really hurt us up there."

When the Salukis beat Western Illinois 89-63 on Jan. 4 in Macomb, off-guard Lori Schrock led the Westerwinds with 19 points while point-guard Tanya Giovanetti, who averages 5.3 assists and 2.8 steals, did a good job of running their offense.

"Giovanetti is a great young player," Scott said.

Western Illinois' other starters include freshman forward Robin Hessemann, who leads the team with 18.3 points per game, center Debbie Kirsch and forward Laura Jensen.

The Salukis' lineup is led by 6-foot-4 center

Cathy Kampwerth, who had a career-high 22 points against Indiana State. Senior forward Bridgett Bouds, senior forward Mary Berghuis and junior guard Deanna Sanders also will start.

The Salukis are 11-6 overall, 7-2 in the Gateway and tied for first with Eastern Illinois, Illinois State and Indiana State.

"Right now, I feel it can be anyone's championship," Scott said. "A lot just depends on who's hot when the teams meet."

On tonight's Gateway slate it is Bradley at Eastern Illinois, Drake at Illinois State, and Northern Iowa at Indiana State. Wichita State at Missouri-Kansas City is a non-conference game.

Herrin: 'We need two wins'

By Dave Miller
Staff Writer

The men's basketball team begins a crucial two-game homestretch against the Creighton Blue Jays at 7:35 p.m. tonight at the Arena.

"I really think this is an important weekend," Coach Rich Herrin said. "We need two victories to get on the winning track and to keep our players up. It's been hard because we've played so tough but we haven't been successful the last two times out."

After close losses at Bradley and Illinois State last week, the next two games will help determine the Salukis chances for a first-division Missouri Valley finish.

The Salukis, 7-10 overall and 2-3 in the MVC, will move into fifth if they beat the Blue Jays for the second time this season. In the first meeting, Kai Nurnberger made four free throws in the final 30 seconds to seal the Salukis' 102-98 win in Omaha, Neb.

Creighton is 9-8 overall and 2-2 in the MVC. Coach Tony Barone's club has won three straight. Barone is in his third season and is in his first year of a three-year contract.

The Blue Jays have a top guard combination to match up with the Salukis' "Dynamic Duo," Kai Nurnberger and Steve Middleton. Creighton's Rod Mason and James Farr lead their team's scoring attack.

Mason, a senior, is fourth in the Valley with a 20.4 scoring average, and his 54.4 field-goal percentage is tops among Valley guards. He has made 47.5 percent of his three-point attempts. Against the Salukis, Mason scored 31.

Farr, a junior college transfer, leads the conference in steals with 44 and averages 13.8 points.

"They're a good scoring team," Herrin said. "We have to stop Mason and Farr. The player that really plays hard and aggressive is Bob Harstad. He's the one guy that we have to keep of the boards."

Harstad, a freshman forward, averages 7.9 points and 7.7 rebounds per game. Sophomore forward Matt Roggenbuck (7.2 ppg) missed the last three games because of an injured knee but is expected to play. Freshman Chad Gallager (10.1 ppg, 5.0 rpg) starts at center.

Gateway on the grow

The Gateway Conference has come a long way.

Originally it was formed by 10 schools in 1982, when the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women declined and the NCAA increased its involvement with women's sports.

Now the Gateway sponsors championships in 10 sports, including Division I-AA football. It has grown dramatically in a little more than five years.

Jim Sheehan, the assistant commissioner and information director of the Gateway Conference, was in Carbondale on Saturday to catch the 77-73 victory by the women's basketball team over Indiana State.

Sheehan, 28, is a lively speaker with a slight East Coast accent. At halftime, he took time out to discuss the bread and butter of the conference — women's basketball.

"Crowds are up, interest is up," Sheehan said. "I don't know where to attribute that to. The communities have gotten behind the schools, the athletics departments have really pushed the communities, done some promotional items.

"We've got a super bunch of coaches who really get out into the community and push, we're pretty proud of that. We're not pulling 24,000 like Tennessee did, but we're getting a steady pace, and that's something to grow on.

The overall improvement of play must be one reason for the fans' increased enthusiasm.

"Absolutely it's improved," Sheehan said. "The consistency and a lot of fundamentals are there. You're not seeing as many mistakes that make people cringe. The caliber of ball has improved over the last three years, I think. We keep on getting better."

While four teams, SIU-C, Illinois State, Eastern Illinois and Indiana State, are tied for first in the conference, Sheehan said to keep an eye on Drake. He said Drake is

Brrrrrr!!!! Softball team warms up to Davies Gymnasium

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

Gone are the days when the softball team couldn't start serious practice in January because it didn't have a facility to work out in.

"We're just glad to have a place to play," Coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said of the team's current home at Davies Gymnasium. "I've coached here a long time and when I first came here, we didn't even have a place. We should be appreciative that its here," she said.

Certainly there are restrictions to practicing softball indoors, but the advantages far outweigh the alternative — going out into the cold or starting later.

"Obviously we'd prefer to be outdoors," Brechtelsbauer said, "but there are advantages to being inside. We need someplace to do ballhandling skills. Particularly with the younger players, they can practice on good technique."

Sophomore Jan Agnich said she loves playing indoors. "You can concentrate better, there's not as much to distract you. It's easier to talk to people because you don't have to yell totally across two fields," she said.

The most severe disadvantage of practicing inside is a visual distortion that affects pitchers. "In the gym, it looks like you're throwing fast," senior pitcher Lisa Robinson said. "When you get outdoors it makes you look a lot slower, like you're throwing only 30 miles per hour."

Freshman Mary Jo Firnbach said, "When you practice fielding grounders you don't get the true bounce. And so even if you get grounders in here, it doesn't show that you're going to get them outdoors."

After a few weeks' practice indoors, the team has to adjust — again — to playing outdoors. "They look awfully good on the shorter throws from corner to corner in that small gym," Brechtelsbauer said. "But get them outside, get a little wind, and all of a sudden the ball seems to die."

Women to take on Westerwinds

Fitzpatrick out for two games

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

The women's basketball team enters its 5:30 p.m. encounter at the Arena with Western Illinois minus one starter, but Coach Cindy Scott said the team can adjust.

For the next two games the Salukis will be without guard Dana Fitzpatrick, who is out of town to attend her aunt's funeral services.

"It (Fitzpatrick's absence) weakens us on the defensive end, and maybe in rebounding," Scott said. "But we faced the situation before when she was out three games with a knee injury."

Early this month the Salukis beat Western Illinois, Drake and Northern Iowa without Fitzpatrick in the lineup. Junior Tonda Seals moves into the vacant spot. "Seals is a good shooter and ballhandler under pressure," Scott said.

Right now the Salukis are a team with two faces. They shot 59.6 percent on field goals to defeat Indiana State 77-73 Saturday, yet suffered their worst-ever loss to a Gateway Conference opponent last Thursday. Illinois State defeated SIU-C by 20 points, 79-59.

"It is the mark of this team to have a good effort then turn around and have a poor effort," Scott said. "We're not playing with consistency."

One thing is for certain. A letdown against Western Illinois, which has won two of its last three games, means the Salukis are asking for trouble.

"If we go out with a lackluster effort, we are going to end up on the losing end," Scott said.

It doesn't matter to Scott that Western Illinois has a 4-13 overall record and a 2-7 Gateway Conference mark. It doesn't matter that the Westerwinds' last victory margin was by only one point over 6-11 Southwest Missouri.

What does matter is that Western Illinois is improving under second-year coach Kelly Hill.

Arizona State suspends track coach

TEMPE, Ariz. (UPI) — Arizona State has suspended the coach of the school's powerful track team amid reports of major NCAA rules violations that could merit the "death penalty" for the program.

Clyde Duncan was suspended Tuesday by Arizona State Athletic Director Charles Harris. Harris said former U.S. Olympic track and field coach Dr. LeRoy Walker will join the team as a consultant.
