Vacancies increasing in USG senate

By Miguel Alba
Staff Writer

Seven Undergraduate Student Government senate seats are vacant following a wave of resignations, with more rumored to follow.

These resignations leave behind them an imbalance of representation among the student population, though USG officials say that new people soon will be brought into those vacant positions.

Bill Hall, USG president, said he estimated six senators have resigned because of academic ineligibility, most of which were involved in last semester's impeachment controversy.

"The senators that dragged out the conflict are the same senators that are now resigning," Hall said. "I'm disappointed when I see members resign, but the changes that are occurring will better the student government."

However, rumors being passed around the USG office indicate that even more senators are thinking about resigning for reasons other than academic standing.

Last week two senators threatened to resign after an oversight that put some Registered Student Organizations' status on hold. They reconsidered after talking to Hall, but one senator did decide to resign.

In a resignation letter, former Sen. Mike Putzek wrote, "After the problems of last semester and the continued unrest now, it is my opinion that certain senators and others are not interested in student concerns, welfare or

A $2,024 scholarship was awarded Thursday afternoon to John M. O'Donnell, a sophomore in the College of Technical Careers, through Campbell Chunky Soup's "Take a Bite Out of Your Tuition" contest.

The contest took place on 75 college campuses nationwide, and O'Donnell was chosen the national grand prize winner out of over 24,000 entries. O'Donnell, a University Hall resident, received the scholarship check at the University Bookstore.

"I never expected to win," he said. "I came in here (bookstore) to buy a pen."

O'Donnell was given the check by Brigid O'Brien of Market Sources, the company that ran the contest.

Currently finishing a two-year associate degree in computer information, O'Donnell said he plans to complete a bachelor's degree in accountancy.

His parents, Robert P. and Kathleen B. O'Donnell, shoulder the bulk of his college expenses, but he also has a student loan and works a part-time cafeteria job.

In addition to the grand prize of one year's tuition and fees, other winners received Campbell Soup footballs and sweatshirts. The contest, which ran from September through November, is part of a marketing campaign designed to reintroduce Campbell's Chunky Soups to college-age students.

Search over, city manager position filled

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

The search for a new Carbondale city manager is over with the selection of Kalamazoo Acting City Manager Steven P. Hoffner.

Mayor Neil Dillard announced the selection Thursday afternoon at a special meeting of the Carbondale City Council in the council chambers.

Dillard compared Hoffner to his predecessor, former City Manager Bill Dixon.

"He (Hoffner) is low-key, sharp and quick," Dillard said. "He will be a strong asset to the city in years to come."

Council members John Mills, Keith Tuxhorn, Richard Morris and John Yow agreed that Hoffner was the right decision.

"We are fortunate to get someone with his caliber," Morris said.

Hoffner comes to Carbondale after serving as the acting city manager of Kalamazoo, Mich. with a population of 80,000.

He also served as chief of staff over 900 full-time employees and an annual budget in excess of $75 million.

Tuxhorn said Hoffner was his first choice since the paper interviews.

"We (the council members) are going to be pleased with him because he is the type of person with the kind of attitude we need," Tuxhorn added.

Mills said he thinks the combination of Hoffner and Interim City Manager Jeff Doherty is really good.

Unpaid loans may be downfall of GSL

By Daniel Wallenberg
Staff Writer

Proposed regulations to reduce the number of unpaid Guaranteed Student Loans issued by the Department of Education Sept. 16, 1988, hopefully will not go into effect, Pamela Britton, financial aid director, said.

"The regulations are designed to get at the schools who are not providing adequate educational opportunities," Britton said.

"The proposed regulations are needed to prevent an excessive number of loan defaults," according to the department's regulation proposals.

One of the proposals that Britton objects to is an amendment that calls for a required review of any institution whose fiscal year default rate is greater than 15 percent. The default rate is the percentage of students who fail to repay loans received under the GSL program. The cumulative default rate at the University since 1966 is 10.2 percent.

If the default rate exceeds 15 percent, one amendment was proposed "as a basis for the Secretary (of Education) to commence a proceeding to limit, suspend or terminate the institution's eligibility to participate in the student assistance programs."

But schools are not in the business of collecting loans, Britton said.

"The basic concept behind the proposals is that the schools have control over defaulted loans," she said.

Campus condom machines anticipated for fall

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

To have condom vending machines in the University by the fall semester of 1989 is the goal of the Student Health Program Advisory Board, Judy Jo Borgsmiller, spokeswoman for the director of student health, said.

A survey done in April 1988 indicated that 86 percent of University students were in favor of having condom vending machines on campus. The survey also indicated that the students would like the vending machines to be in the Student Center, the Recreation Center and the residence halls.

The Student Health Program Advisory Board went before the Student Center Advisory Board, the Recreation Center Advisory Board and Steve Kirk, the assistant director of housing, to persuade them to allow condom vending machines to be installed. They all agreed to accept the vending machines, Borgsmiller said.

"We're happy to see the condoms being made available in University housing," Ed Jones, director of housing, said. "We're not sure where we're going to put them yet. I will meet with the President's Council and discuss the possibilities later this semester."

Gus Bode

Gus says the installation of these 24-hour machines will make campus a safer place.

Diplomat says Soviets, Afghans killing civilians

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — Soviet and Afghan forces have killed hundreds of civilians in air and artillery attacks this week in a bid to force Moslem rebels to end their blockade of the main highway into the Afghan capital of Kabul, a Western diplomat said Thursday. The diplomat quoted witnesses as saying Soviet tanks rolled over the corpses of some of the civilians killed on the Salang Highway.

Soviet police, air crews foil hijacking attempts

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet police and air crews foiled two attempted hijackings of Aeroflot flights to destinations abroad in the past week, the Izvestia newspaper said Thursday. The newspaper said a Jan. 20 flight from Arkhangelsk to Odessa was preparing to land at the Black Sea port when a hijacker identified only as N. Kotsyuban threatened to blow up the plane, a TU-134 aircraft, if the pilot did not fly to Israel or Bucharest in Romania, where Soviet Jews often transit while emigrating to Israel.

PLO supporter to be freed after year in jail

JERUSALEM (UPI) — One of the Palestine Liberation Organization's leading supporters in the occupied territories will soon be freed from prison after spending most of the past year under administrative detention, an Israeli official said Thursday. Faisal Hussein, director of the closed Arab Studies Society, will be released Sunday or Monday after a six-month detention order expires, a Defense Ministry spokesman said.

Gromyko speaks out on Cuban missile crisis

LONDON (SHNS) — Andrei Gromyko, the veteran Soviet diplomat who served as foreign minister for 27 years, has spoken publicly for the first time about the Cuban missile crisis and his meeting with President Kennedy at one of the most dangerous moments of the Cold War. The interview is part of a 12-part documentary series, "The Nuclear Age," co-produced by Central Television, part of Britain's independent TV network, WGBH-TV in Boston and NHK of Japan.

Bailing out savings and loans will be costly

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. Comptroller General Charles Bowsher told a House panel Thursday it may cost $85 billion to bail out more than 500 insolvent savings and loans and that the current crisis could have been prevented in the early 1980s. Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta, D-Calif., whose panel conducted the all-day hearing into the S&L crisis, assured depositors in the nation's thrift institutions that their money "must and will be protected" by the government.

Campbell Soup charged with false advertising

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government charged Campbell Soup Co. with false advertising Thursday, concluding the firm did not back up claims that its soups might reduce the risk of heart disease. The Federal Trade Commission said Campbell's "soup is good food" ads linked the low-fat, low-cholesterol content of its products with lower risk of some types of heart disease but "failed to disclose that the soups are high in sodium and that diets high in sodium may increase the risk of heart disease."

Watchdog group charges ICC with secret talks

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — A consumer watchdog group Thursday charged Illinois Commerce Commission staff members with secretly negotiating a rate increase proposal with Illinois Power Co. Martin Cohen, administrative director of the Citizens Utility Board, charged meetings among the utility, ICC staff and interest groups were an attempt to "end run consumer safeguards" by disregarding testimony in the rate case and presenting a negotiated rate increase proposal to the ICC, which regulates utility rates.

Human Resources: Its time has passed

WHAT SHOULD be done with the College of Human Resources

The administration has been toying with the future of this college since summer 1988.

Vice President for Academic Affairs Benjamin A. Shepherd said in June 1988 that he would allow the faculty within the College of Human Resources to consider whether they want to relocate to other colleges.

Acting Dean for the College of Human Resources Anthony Cuvo said this year would be used to study options for the units and the faculty will decide what is best for its unit.

THAT WAS SEVEN months ago. Now, according to Cuvo, deans of various colleges are describing to the faculty "what life would be like" in their respective colleges.

Shepherd said that a decision will be made in about a month-and-a-half, ostensibly, at least, on the basis of faculty input.

The foundation has been set, the players are at their mark and President John C. Guyon's famous "shared governance" has been put in motion. The process of deciding what to do with the College of Human Resources and the academic units within is proceeding at an equitable but excruciatingly slow pace. Why not just put this nearly defunct college out of its misery.

THE COLLEGE consists of only three academic units, making it the smallest in the University. Dissolving this college and assigning its units to other colleges or the Graduate School not only would save the University the expense of a dean and office personnel, but would allow units to move into colleges more suited to their curricula and perhaps stream line the units in the process.

For example, the Black American Studies program, which is part of the School of Social Work, consists of a curriculum that has little to do with social work.

The program, and the school of social work for that matter, would be far better served if it were moved to the College of Liberal Arts, as a consultant's report recommends. Moving BAS to COLA would be the first step in giving the program the credibility it needs to draw faculty it requires for survival.

THE CENTER FOR Crime Studies also draws heavily from COLA for its degree requirements in administration of justice and might get along well in the college.

And the Rehabilitation Institute, which offers only graduate degrees, would naturally be placed in the Graduate School.

Wherever the faculty decides their units should go they should get on with it. COLA isn't going anywhere but eight months is long enough to spend in the information-gathering process.

The situation should be resolved so that these units can get on with the business of teaching and research.

DE, administrators miss point of BASA quest, member says

The editorial page editor has spoken incompletely and from one side. As a member of the Black American Studies Association, I am in outrage over the opinions and assumptions printed by the editor.

In too many articles and by too many administrators, the formation of BASA has been assumed to have been catalyzed by Dr. Luke Tripp. The only effect Dr. Tripp had on the creation of BASA was informing his students that the Black American Studies Department was in jeopardy of elimination. BASA was formed solely out of the concern of BAS students to the actions that the administration was taking to either eliminate or revitalize BAS. BASA was not primarily formed to save Dr. Tripp, nor was it formed by Dr. Tripp to use as a tool to protest his firing. We became an association because the SIU administration has taken actions toward the Black American Studies Department that we perceive as contradictory to SIU's claims of being "committed to minority recruitment and retention."

Furthermore, Dr. Tripp is not a racist. It's just that he's good at detecting racists and racism.

The GE review board did not research their decision before acting in a way that can and is interpreted as racist. If they did not intend this to be a racist action, why didn't they consult the students which filled those GE classes to capacity every semester or the BAS faculty?

The editor obviously did not bother to ponder why BASA feels that the reinstatement of BAS to the GE curriculum is important. BAS 109, Introduction to Black America, was designed to expose the student to the experience of Black America, not Black Africa. American history does a poor job of representing non-white ethnic groups. In order for students to better understand each other, courses such as these should be offered to the whole student community, otherwise the University experience will fail to produce well-rounded individuals. BAS 135, The Third World: The African Model, is a course of excellent information and enlightenment.

The recommendations made by the consultant Jan R. Carew were made by the BAS faculty at the time when there was a BAS faculty. Dr. Tripp might have found time to publish and qualify for tenure, if he had not been the only full-time faculty in the BAS department, attempting to do the work of four. If the editor had properly researched, he would have discovered that Dr. Tripp was a primary lobbyist the financial divestment of SIU from corporations dealing with the South African government.

I would like to challenge the editor to attend a BAS course in order for him to clearly understand the value of these courses. Many students had taken BAS courses before they were removed from General Education and as a result, completed the courses enlightened to what they had taken for granted. Then, the editors of the Daily Egyptian will have a base from which to judge the value of BAS in the GE curriculum. — John Powell, senior, biological sciences.

Abortion viewpoint seen as immoral

I am too often surprised at some people's lack of thought, moral judgement and blindness in the issue of abortion. If it is true that people's opinions and values reflect their upbringing and their parents' values, most of you pro-abortionists would not be alive today to whine about invalid women's rights.

From those of you who do advocate abortion, I would, for once, like to hear a valid reason for its legalization. For example, a viewpoint in the January 24 issue of the DE claimed that: women's rights are not considered in the controversy. I would like to challenge that particularly weak claim in that I feel it is invalid to the whole issue.

The person writing the viewpoint feels that women's rights are not considered and that the whole issue is about their bodies, (not another person's life). I am a woman and the immorality and lack of thought given to such a claim outrages me. If you cannot help but get pregnant, then you ought to "play with the hand you are dealt" instead of whining about the personal unfairness, and trying to slither out. Perhaps the baby is a part of a woman's body, but only for less than a year of her life, then adoption is an alternative.

If abortion should be legal, then it makes as much sense, or nonsense, for those brave souls who go through with the unwanted pregnancy to be allowed to murder their dependent infants legally, if they find their feelings toward motherhood have not changed.

If space permitted I could go on, because for every claim to legalize abortion, there are myriad reasons that it is wrong. — Anna Jurich, junior, psychology.

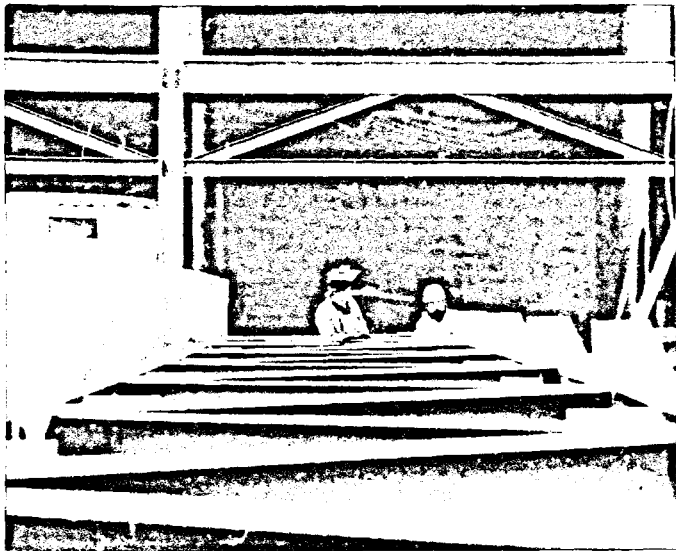

'Social tranquilizer' overlooked in viewpoint

When will the DE show the slightest awareness or common sense about today's issues? In a viewpoint on marijuana and acid ("Drugs may bring you 'closer to God' than you want to be," Jan. 25), you print a caricature of needle-shooting. You assume, and imply to your readers, that pot and acid are similar to drugs that are injectable.

When will people stop lumping all "recreational drugs" in the same pile? Pot and LSD have different effects than narcotics. A marijuana smoker doesn't necessarily use harder drugs. LSD is not addictive. The "just say no" folks are against these drugs, yet they overlook alcohol, our social tranquilizer, which has health problems and dysfunctional families than bad trips ever have.

I find it idiotic, and a little scary, when a university newspaper plays to myths that should have died in the 1970s, but have reappeared in the conservative politics of the 80s. — Karen Hampton, graduate, psychology.

Other proposals seek counseling for students in various stages of the loan process, from the initial application for the loan through the repayment stages.

Amendments for assisting institutions with their financial aid departments also have been proposed.

Renee Brooks, manager of agency relations for the Illinois State Scholarship Commission, said that 122,948 students in Illinois have GSLs totaling $310.1 million.

The average amount loaned to each student in Illinois is $2,520, Brooks said.

Nationally, 30 percent of all students use the GSL program, borrowing up to $2,625 as freshman and sophomores, $4,000 as upperclassmen and $7,500 as graduate students.

Students automatically have a six-month grace period after graduation before they have to start repaying their loans. The default rate immediately after the grace period at SIU-C is 1.94 percent. This figure represents the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1986.

The National Association of College and University Business Officers has requested all its members, as well as anyone interested in the proposals, to send their complaints to the department before Feb. 28, Britton said.

The University is a member of NACUBO, and "is not in any jeopardy," Britton said. "I don't think the regulations will become final in their present form."

Before the GSL program expires in 1991, financial experts are asking Congress to revise or replace it.

Tuxhorn said Hoffner was his first choice since the paper interviews.

"We (the council members) are going to be pleased with him because he is the type of person with the kind of attitude we need," Tuxhorn added.

Mills said he thinks the combination of Hoffner and Interim City Manager Jeff Doherty is really good.

Doherty took over as acting city manager when Dixon resigned in October.

The proposals seek distributed to lending institutions, educational facilities, universities and a variety of other institutions concerned with the GSL program, Britton said. Anyone interested or involved with the GSL program can send in their comments, she said.

The College Board, a leader in the push for revision, has issued a report containing four proposals for reforming the GSL program.

Repaying loans by withholding taxes when a student begins work is one suggestion made by Rev. William Byron, president of Catholic University. This is to be accomplished by scraping the bank loan system and creating a revolving fund.

Robert Reischauer, an economist at the Brookings Institute, has suggested using surplus money in the Social Security trust fund to finance college loans. Repayment would come from raises in the borrower's Social Security taxes.

Favoring higher loan limits for students is headed into high-pay occupations, Joseph Cronin, president of the Massachusetts Higher Education Assistance Corp., defends the GSL program as "popular" and "highly productive."

Education consultant Arthur Hauptman suggests creating a low-income insurance fund for borrowers who find their loans too large to repay, easing and extending repayment terms and letting colleges do the lending from a national student loan bank.

The city received more than 50 applications for the job and narrowed the candidates down to six, who were interviewed starting Jan. 13.

Hoffner, a 35-year-old Indiana native, is a graduate of the University of Illinois in Champaign-Urbana and Syracuse University, where he earned a master's degree in public administration.

He graduated valedictorian and president of his 1971 Salem Community High School class.

problems...Until these people resign or are removed, the USG will only be a molded tool for selfish people to control."

Doug Toole, a former senator, said he resigned from USG last semester because the Committee of Internal Affairs, the USG's internal policing body, was falling apart.

"I saw the Darth Vader committee going down in flames," he joked, adding that the impeachment wars really began because USG senators had very little to do.

"All of USG's business could easily be done in a short time, but they spend so much time bickering at each other," he said.

Jean Paratore, USG adviser, said last semester's impeachment issues are resolved, but the feelings and emotions are still very much alive.

"Some people weren't being productive last semester," she said. "When things didn't clear up like they wanted, they resigned."

Paratore said it is time for the USG to resolve their problems and start working for the benefit of the students.

Computer program created to aid in relocating unemployed farmers

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

The College of Agriculture at SIU-C has developed a computer program to help unemployed farmers find new jobs.

The Farm Family Occupational Planning Guide was developed by James W. Legacy, professor of agricultural education and mechanization at SIU-C, to help dislocated farmers pinpoint their job skills and cross-match them with alternative careers.

"Most of the participants have been surprised by the number of the jobs that they've tested out as 90 percent qualified to perform," Legacy said.

University specialists are working with the Illinois Department of Commerce and Community Affairs on a plan to distribute and administer this program statewide.

"We could probably distribute the program statewide later this spring at a relatively low cost," Legacy said. "Right now the closest thing to this program sells for around $2,000 and we could sell it for a few dollars per person."

The computer driven program can inventory a person's skills and match him or her with hundreds of jobs in one of seven different areas ranging from industrial and office work to technical and agricultural performance.

"The jobs listed in the program are available in the Midwest and are updated periodically," Legacy said.

"We would ultimately like to use the Farm Family Occupational Planning Guide as a counseling tool for thousands of dislocated agricultural and non-agricultural individuals nationwide," Legacy said.

The program already has the ability to use a national database to find new job listings.

Lonely deer seeks love in yard ornament

ARENZVILLE (UPI) — A lonely and confused buck mistook two concrete lawn ornaments for the real thing recently, making love to them for several hours before giving up his amorous pursuit.

The episode took place on the front lawn of Jim Kloker's farm in Arenzville in west-central Illinois. Kloker said the deer emerged from the woods and charged the concrete buck.

"Of course he didn't hit it because the concrete didn't charge back, but then he turned and mounted the concrete doe and made love to it," Kloker said. "Then he made love to both of them for about three hours."

Kloker tried to scare the young buck away by shouting at it but nothing seemed to break the deer's concentration.

"I grabbed my rifle and went out to shoot it but I just couldn't do it," he said, "Hell, he thought they were real deer."

Kloker said the experience took its toll on the yard doe as its tail broke off during one of the young buck's romantic interludes. The concrete buck, however, survived the episode intact.

FRED'S A True Confession

The Bull's Back! FRED'S Salays FREE on your birthday week!

I don't know how it happened...at first, I was going to SIU, living at Thompson Point, and doing what SIU students normally do on the weekends: going up town to the strip and standing around with the rest of the people pretending to have fun. Then, one time I went to FRED'S. I couldn't believe it! Everybody was dancing, well maybe 75%, but when was the last time you've seen more than 10% of the crowd dancing up town? Even my friends who said they didn't like country music were dancing up a storm. You know, all those other places say they are "THE place to party", well they don't even know the meaning of the word. Well anyway, now I'm hooked on FRED'S. I confess...FRED'S has really spoiled me! Diana Davidson

NEW SEMESTER—FRESH STARTS

There is always something great about the beginning of a new semester. Granted, unpaid tuition and anticipation of long hours of study and class preparation have a negative effect on the spirit; but, nevertheless the new semester is overwhelmingly a positive time.

The disappointments in personal relationships with colleagues and instructors and academic progress of last semester are behind us. In the new semester we have the opportunity to resolve our problems with study habits and human interactions in ways that will make for a much more positive "finals week" than we experienced this past December.

Low scores and poor grades are wiped clean. No more struggling to raise that "C" to a "B" or that "B" to an "A". In the new semester we have the opportunity of having a better semester, automatically. The new semester is a fresh start. That is why it is so great—it is a fresh start. Fresh starts are always great.

However, academia is probably the only place that life is perceived in 16-week intervals. Aside from our scholastic endeavors, fresh starts are not automatic every four months with a break mid-term.

Mounting pressures have a relentless longevity and past mistakes follow us to the next stage of our lives, only to be dealt with again.

A need for a fresh start in our lives becomes increasingly evident. Our intellect tells us that such is impossible but our emotions repeatedly ponder "if I only had a fresh start."

Life can have a fresh start—in Jesus Christ. He is the God of fresh starts. Fresh starts are what Christ is all about. In fact, an introductory reading of the Bible will reveal that it is a collection of stories about people who experienced new beginnings by faith in Jesus Christ.

In Jesus a new beginning is possible. The past can be truly behind you and a promise of a better life renewed daily. "When anyone is joined to Christ, he (she) is a new being; the old is gone, the new has come." (II Cor. 5:17 TEV) You can be joined to Christ by merely asking, "Everyone who calls out to the Lord (for help will be saved)." (Rom. 10:13 TEV)

If you would like to know more of Jesus, the God of fresh starts, or share with others the new beginning they value, stop by the American Baptist Campus Ministry.

Rantoul mayor, senators join to battle Chanute shutdown

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Derailing plans to close Chanute Air Force Base near Rantoul will be very difficult and may require a lawsuit, Illinois Senators Paul Simon and Alan Dixon said Thursday.

The Illinois Democrats met with Rantoul Mayor Kathy Podagrosi to discuss the fight to keep the base open.

Dixon agreed it will be difficult to convince Congress to act because of the way the legislation authorizing the closures was written. Under its terms, Congress must accept or reject the entire list. It is not allowed to selectively agree to close certain bases and leave others open.

"The main thing will be to take a look at the law that set up the commission in the first place and a number of other things," Podagrosi said.

"We would hope," Dixon said, "that the mayor and her friends back home ultimately file a lawsuit questioning the constitutionality of the commission and its report."

Simon said the list does include bases which should be closed and said he and Dixon both assume Congress will not reject the whole list.

"But in the case of Chanute, clearly, they didn't follow their own guidelines. There just is no question that they are going to do harm to the Air Force as well as great harm to the Rantoul community."

"We are facing an uphill fight. There just is no question about it," Simon said. "But we have won uphill fights from time to time in the past and we are not about to give up."

Dixon said city officials should work closely with his and Simon's staffs in preparing for Armed Services Committee hearings on the proposed closings.

Jetliner lands after fire reported

CHICAGO (UPI) — An American Airlines MD-80 jetliner carrying 91 passengers and a crew of six made an emergency landing Thursday at O'Hare International Airport after the pilot reported a fire in the right engine, officials said.

There were no injuries.

Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Mort

Edelstein said Flight 514 was on its way from Indianapolis to Chicago when the emergency developed.

Edelstein originally said the pilot was able to extinguish the blaze and land the plane with only one engine functioning. But he later said a closer look showed there was no fire.

A malfunctioning duct pump caused hot air to blow into the engine area, activating the safety light in the cockpit, Edelstein said. He said the pilot followed normal procedure and declared an emergency.

The pilot activated the fire extinguishers located inside the plane's right engine, American Airlines spokeswoman Mary O'Neill said.

Torch ignites dust, causes explosion at Wrigley factory

CHICAGO (UPI) — An explosion rocked the William Wrigley Chewing Gum Factory Thursday, leaving four people injured, one seriously, fire officials said.

The four were contractors hired by Wrigley to dismantle some unused equipment, said William Piet, Wrigley vice president for corporate affairs.

The equipment was a machine used to vacuum sugar dust and Fire Department spokesman Scott LaGreca said the acetylene torch being used apparently ignited the sugar dust, which was stirred up when a counterweight fell to the bottom of the machine.

Future looks good for prison research program

VIENNA (UPI) — The director of a four-year, $8 million prison agricultural research program says it probably will take a year to make the program fully operational.

But Stan Jones, 33, alcohol fuels coordinator at Southeastern Illinois College at Harrisburg and project director, sees a future that will extend its life expectancy.

THE MULTI-AGENCY effort that involves the state and federal governments and educational institutions will help develop a process to turn by-products of the ethanol fuel plant at the Vienna Correctional Center into feed for livestock, poultry and fish and a study of hay products infected with a toxic fungus.

In announcing the project last month, Gov. James R. Thompson said it also would give prison inmates agricultural job training.

"Grants and expertise from five state and federal agencies, two Illinois colleges and the private sector will be combined in the project. The research group will develop a feed useful to farmers throughout the Midwest and applicable to the nation's ethanol manufacturing industry," Thompson said.

THE U.S. DEPARTMENT of Agriculture Commodity Credit Corp. will provide 200,000 bushels of surplus corn a year during the 4-year program for conversion into ethanol.

As part of the program, the USDA Great Northern research laboratory at Peoria will do research on combatting the fungal disease, Kentucky 31 Endophyte, which researchers say causes $200 million in annual losses to cattlemen whose feed is infected with the fungus.

Jones said installation of a molecular sieve for the prison ethanol plant, which started operating in 1982, is expected within 90 days. It will enable the plant to produce 200-proof alcohol instead of the 190-proof currently made at Vienna, which requires further refining before it is blended with gasoline for use in state-owned vehicles.

The multi-agency effort will help develop a process to turn by-products of the ethanol fuel plant into feed for livestock, poultry and fish.

THE ILLINOIS Department of Energy and Natural Resources is providing a $152,000 grant to provide the molecular sieve and other equipment. Jones said the ethanol plant's production will be boosted from 200,000 gallons to some 500,000 gallons annually.

The corn residue from the ethanol production will serve as a base feed material for research leading to a "feed factory" for beef and dairy cattle, swine, poultry, game birds, fish and shrimp.

Jones said floating docks and special cages will permit the raising of catfish in the prison's 84-acre reservoir. The project is expected to produce some 50,000 pounds of catfish next year. Vienna currently raises about 3,000 quail a year for the Department of Conservation and that figure is expected to double, Jones said.

VIENNA'S BEEF herd is expected to jump from 150 to 1,200. Jones said plans also are to increase the dairy herd at the Vandalia Correctional Center and the cattle and swine herds at Menard with an eye toward self-sufficiency in supplying the needs of the Department of Corrections.

The research will provide job training for some 150 of the 900-plus minimum-security inmates at Vienna and mean some "seven or eight" additional civilian jobs, Jones said. An industrial maintenance job training program implemented as part of the project will include the training of inmates in asbestos removal.

"WE HOPE to open up some new areas of research as we go along," said Jones, who holds a master's degree in agricultural mechanization from SIUC, which is involved in some of the research.

"It is probably the most innovative correctional program in the nation," said Jones.

Beach boy singer performs with group, rejoining band

Former Beach boys leader Ian Wilson says he was a little nervous "but real confident" when he went on stage in a surprise mini-concert with the band at the Spectrum in Philadelphia Tuesday night.

It was his first public gig in years. Wilson did it again Wednesday, joining the Beach Boys for a three-song mini-set in the middle of a one-hour, 20-song set at the Centrum in Worcester, Mass. where they split the billing with Chicago.

Wilson sang "Surfer Girl" with the Beach Boys, then did "Love and Mercy," "Walkin' the Line" and "Melt Away" from his solo album, then finished out the set with the band.

Wilson had a public falling out with the Beach Boys but said the relationship is improving. He plans to join the band again for an upcoming date at the Nassau Coliseum in New York.

The first joint Army-Air Force ROTC military ball will be held at 7 tonight in the Student Center Ballrooms. This event, planned and organized by Air Force ROTC cadets, will include entertainment by Scott Air Force Base's Air Force Band, and possibly a short speech by Major General Harold Holsinger.

The ball is intended to expose Army and Air Force cadets to military social functions. Two hundred cadets and invited guests are expected to attend, along with 100 parents.

According to Capt. Kenneth King, assistant professor of military science, the decision to have a joint military ball was made to pool the resources of the groups and to reinstate an older tradition of having all ROTC cadets together for a formal ceremony.

Attending the ball will be Maj. Gen. Harold Holsinger, the adjutant general in charge of administering state forces, and his wife.

Capt. Robert Douglas, assistant professor of aerospace studies, said the ball should be a success.

"I expect we could go ahead and do it next year," he said. The Air Force ROTC, established in 1951, is the oldest military program at the University.

Carbondale's NAACP to host Image Awards

Carbondale's branch of the NAACP will host its first Image Awards program at 7 p.m. Saturday in Ballroom D of the Student Center. Admission is $4.

The awards will recognize Southern Illinoisans for contributions to the Black community.

Awards will be presented in 10 categories: art, athletics, business, education, image, law, medicine, public services, religion and social services.

The most prestigious award, the Image Award, will recognize the person or entity that has done the most to improve the condition of minorities in Southern Illinois during the past year.

Nominees for the award: John Guyon, SIU-C President; Carl Officer, East St. Louis mayor; Glenn Poshard, U.S. Congressman (D-Cartermville); and The Carbondale Star newspaper.

Seymour Bryson, head of the University's affirmative action and equal opportunity programs, was nominated in the education category.

Nathaniel Feider, president of Carbondale's NAACP branch, is organizer for the awards program.

"I felt that there were a number of people in the community doing good things, things that improved the conditions for minorities in Southern Illinois," Feider said.

The first annual awards presentation is also sponsored by the University's Black Affairs Council as part of Black History Month 1989, "Black History Through Artful Eyes."

Immediately following the awards ceremony, the Black Affairs Council will hold a Red, Black and Green Ball at 9:30 in Ballroom D. Admission is $2.

Michael Whitehead, 41, a convicted bank robber, sits idle in his single cell in the highest security unit, the Control Unit, of Marion Penitentiary. Each prisoner is issued a black and white television set and a radio.

This sign greets visitors as they enter the lobby of the prison.

Mathew Granger, 31, a convicted murderer, serving two life sentences, looks out of his cell in the Control Unit.

Noah Vance, 44, a convicted bank robber, is one of the privileged inmates who participate in the prison's work program. Vance is making cable for UNICOR, a military supplier.

Living at the end of the line

Marion keeps hard cases

By Richard Nunez
Staff Writer

It's been nicknamed the new Alcatraz. The end of the line. The prison with no back door.

Marion Penitentiary, the U.S. government's highest security prison, houses 436 of the toughest inmates in the country. When other institutions can't handle or control an inmate, they send him to Marion Penitentiary.

"If you cause trouble in the streets, you go to prison. If you cause trouble in prison, you go to Marion," Randy Davis, public relations officer for the penitentiary, said.

Three walls separate the prison yard from the grounds outside. The first is an electronically wired, chain link fence, which is able to detect when as little as five pounds of pressure is placed on it. Next is thirteen strands of razor wire, piled much like a frontline would look in World War I or II, surrounding the penitentiary. The last hurdle to the outside is another chain link fence similar to the first.

Getting in

The tour of the penitentiary began at 9:20 a.m. The Daily Egyptian was given clearance four days beforehand for a photographer and a reporter.

To get in the prison, we had to pass through a metal detector able to detect even the metal eyelets on a pair of shoes. In a series of attempts to clear the detector, the photographer was forced to remove his shoes, belt, wristwatch and pocket change.

We were asked to show two forms of identification and to sign a ledger before word went up to open the first set of bars leading inside. Each corridor was blocked off numerous times by iron bars, which opened automatically when we were identified by a ceiling camera. When the bars opened, we had about 10 seconds to pass through before they closed again.

The situation was strangely reminiscent of the opening segment to "Get Smart."

New Alcatraz

Built in 1963, Marion Penitentiary was not intended to replace Alcatraz, but that would become its ultimate fate.

In its time, Alcatraz was home to such infamous criminals as Al Capone, George "Baby Face" Nelson and "Machine Gun" Kelly. Marion's most famous inmate would be Gary Trappnell, whose girlfriend was shot to death after she hijacked a helicopter and forced the pilot to hover over the prison in an attempt to transport Trappnell to freedom.

In the late 1970s, the Federal Prison System reported it was receiving increasingly more violent and disruptive inmates and adopted a new system that rated facilities from Level 1, the lowest security level, to Level 6, the highest security level. Marion was designated the only Level 6 penitentiary.

The new designation meant that Marion would become the nation's main depository for inmates with serious disciplinary problems.

Prison lockdown

Within a year, the atmosphere in Marion had become explosive. Prison officials were forced to place the penitentiary under lockdown, which meant movement of inmates was restricted and several privileges, such as the work program, were taken away.

The lockdown provoked anger among inmates and outside groups, who protested of human rights violations and alleged inmate beatings. Following investigations by the Bureau of Prisons and the FBI, those charges were dropped.

In 1983, the first step was taken toward restoring greater inmate movement and work programming. But in July 1983, an officer was assaulted by two inmates wielding homemade knives. The officer suffered multiple stab wounds to his upper body and managed to survive only because the inmates failed to penetrate a vital organ. On Oct. 22, 1983, two officers were fatally assaulted and two others seriously injured. Five days later, an inmate was murdered and four staff members were assaulted by inmates on their way to the dining room.

Marion is the nation's main depository for inmates with serious disciplinary problems

The next day, an indefinite state of emergency was declared at Marion.

Control room

After descending into the heart of the penitentiary, we were allowed to see the control room, the nerve center of the prison. To get inside, we had to pass through two iron doors, one always remaining locked until the other is closed.

Inside, prison official Leroy Fisher was in charge of locking and unlocking all the hallway gates. While we were roaming the hallways, Fisher was watching the whole time through ceiling cameras.

Davis showed us the standard equipment carried by the officials, which included a one-way radio, a heavy baton with rib spreaders, a hand-held metal detector, handcuffs and latch keys.

The latch keys to the cells have key shields covering the teeth because some inmates were able to copy the keys by sight. Davis, referring to forced use of the key shields, said the IQ of many inmates is higher than might be expected.

But as ingenious as the inmates are, theirs is a criminal mind concentrated primarily toward violent ends, Davis said.

Contraband

Davis displayed an array of contraband weapons confiscated from some of the inmates throughout the years. The display included sophisticated zip guns and knives made of rulers, toothbrush handles, typewriter bars, soup ladles and bed posts.

The first contact we had with inmates was in the work facility. Most inmates given work privilege make cable for UNICOR, the largest manufacturer of cable in the U.S. Inmates work eight hours a day and make as much as $120 to $400 a month, tax free.

In order to photograph or interview inmates, they had to sign a release form giving us permission to quote them or print their picture. We asked two workers before Noah Vance, 44, serving a 63-year sentence for armed bank robbery, agreed to sign.

While Vance was signing, he said, "Sure, why not? I'm innocent, anyway."

Living quarters

All Marion inmates are housed in single-man cells of about 50 sq. ft., with the exception of three units, which contain larger cells. Each cell is equipped with a concrete bed, mattress, bedding, combination sink-commode, a black and white television and an AM-FM radio.

Each inmate is allowed to keep personal property in his cell including legal materials,

Man dies after being stuck in trash can 3 days

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — An elderly man fell into a garbage can on his front porch and was stuck there for three days and died before anyone realized something was wrong, police said Thursday.

Robert Hamm, 73, of Rochester, apparently tried to signal a postman and a newspaper carrier for help earlier in the week, but could not communicate that something was wrong, investigators said.

Hamm's body was discovered by a newspaper carrier Wednesday morning.

who had seen Hamm lying in the can up to his armpits with his feet sticking out on both Monday and Tuesday and wanted her mother to investigate, police said.

Police said the girl had told them she had waved and said hello to Hamm about 4 p.m.

Monday when she delivered the paper, and Hamm had waved and mumbled something unintelligible.

Tuesday, a mail carrier saw Hamm in the barrel and saw his hand move, but let the incident pass, police said.

Police spokesman Sgt.

Roland Marchetti said Hamm was of medium height and build.

"We think he came out onto the porch, had probably been drinking and somehow stumbled or fell backwards into the can."

notebooks, pens, clothing, books and magazines.

Visiting privileges are allowed to all inmates, but a plexiglass shield separates them from visitors. Communication is done through telephones. Special visits for attorneys, paralegals and the media are conducted in open booths.

Inmates are allowed to correspond with anyone, but all incoming and outgoing letters are subject to inspection. Letters from attorneys, paralegals and courts are not inspected, but are opened in the presence of the inmate and searched for contraband.

Inmates' crimes

Various educational and religious programs are available to most inmates. The programming content includes adult basic education, GED, hobbycraft, college correspondence courses and foreign language courses. Motion pictures also are available on video tape.

According to statistics, 54 percent of the inmates have been involved in murder, 73 percent have been involved in assault, 37 percent have been in an escape attempt or escape plot and 90 percent have a documented history of some type of violent behavior.

Bottom line

The Control Unit, which houses inmates considered "management problems," is the worst form of confinement in the U.S., excluding death row. The bottom of the line, Davis called it.

The Control Unit was the culmination of the visit. Upon entering, the atmosphere changed immediately. The air was dank and the large chamber dimly lit. Two guards wielding batons escorted us in case of emergency.

As we passed by the cells, some men were asleep or watching television, indifferent to our intrusion. Only two men showed interest in our visit.

Stopping, Davis greeted inmate Michael Whitehead, 41, serving 39 years for armed bank robbery, and asked him how he was doing.

"Great. Just great," Whitehead replied. "I can't get over how nappy I am."

The cells were separated by thick concrete walls. In the cell next to Whitehead, was inmate Matthew Granger, serving two life sentences for two murders, including a prison official in Oxford Penitentiary, Wisconsin.

Honest talk

We happened to visit the penitentiary the same day serial killer Ted Bundy was executed and both Whitehead and Granger talked openly about the incident.

"I watched it all morning," Granger said. "I was glad to see him go."

Claiming to have met

Bundy, Granger said the nature of Bundy's crimes is detested by most inmates. Sexual offenders and those who kill women and children often are met with hostility.

"You put the button right there," Granger said, tapping a bar to his cell, "and I'll push it."

When asked about his own crimes, Granger, a burly man covered with tattoos and a long beard, answered candidly.

"The way the system works. I was able to plea bargain out of it," Granger said. "I should have gotten the death penalty."

While laughing with one of the guards, Whitehead noticed the photographer had focused his camera on him.

"A convict ain't supposed to be laughing," he's supposed to be singing," Whitehead said, deadpan. He then sang, "Nobody knows the trouble I've seen...."

Gunmen wound four outside school

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two gunmen opened fire at students crowded outside a high school in an affluent neighborhood of the nation's capital Thursday, wounding four pupils, officials said. The suspects fled and had not been caught.

The shooting occurred at 2:25 p.m. at Woodrow Wilson High School as hundreds of students were leaving the sprawling campus in a quiet, tree-lined section of Northwest Washington, police spokeswoman Shannon Cockett said.

Witnesses said the shooting may have stemmed from a lunchroom argument earlier in the day. Other witnesses said the gunmen sped off in a blue Jeep after the shooting at the college preparatory high school.

Both suspects were reportedly carrying automatic weapons, but police could not elaborate.

CBS affiliate WUSA-TV reported that between seven and nine shots were fired in rapid succession into the crowd of students, whom witnesses said scattered from the site in terror.

"I saw a guy with a gun and he just started shooting a lot, I just turned around and ran ...," Miriam Kenyon, a student at Wilson told the television station.

Three of the students suffered leg wounds and a fourth was shot in the hip, police said.

The most seriously wounded teenager, identified only as a 16-year-old student at Wilson, was taken to Children's Hospital in serious condition with a leg wound, police said.

North Carolina using injuries as league motivator

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (UPI) — The injuries that everyone says are part of the game have proven a good motivation for North Carolina this season.

The 6th-ranked Tar Heels have overcome several injuries in building a 17-3 record and taking their familiar spot atop the Atlantic Coast Conference.

In fact, the Tar Heels have done better when one of their key players is missing than when all are healthy. They are 14-1 when one player is ailing, but only 1-2 when all are healthy.

"When someone is out, we know we have to come together and pick up the slack," said Kevin Madden, the team's leading scorer and one of six Tar Heels averaging in double figures.

"We've got a lot of talent on this team, and anybody can hurt you at any time," said J.R. Reid. "No matter who is out there, we want to play hard, and if we do that then good things will happen for us. But I don't think we play any harder when someone is out."

Reid, the most recognized of the Tar Heels, was the first not to be missed. He sat out the season's first nine games while recovering from a broken bone in his foot. The Tar Heels went 8-1.

Later, center Scott Williams missed two games with a sprained ankle, and the Tar Heels won both.

There also were three games when Reid, Madden and Williams played only a few minutes apiece, but North Carolina won those as well.

Finally, the Tar Heels have won the last three — and perhaps most difficult — games without guard Jeff Lebo. They have beaten then-No. 1 Duke, No. 15 N.C. State and Wake Forest in the last week to jump to 4-1 in the league.

"After coaching against Dean (Smith) a few years, one thing that impresses me is how they handle adversity," Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "A winning program responds, and that's what they have done."

North Carolina routed Duke 91-71 in the first game without Lebo and the first after a 106-83 loss at Virginia.

The absence of Lebo figured to hurt the Tar Heels more than the injuries that kept out Reid and Williams. The latter two are big men, and North Carolina has exceptional depth in the frontcourt. However, Lebo is one of only two sure ball-handlers on the Tar Heels, and he's the lone consistent outside shooter.

In his absence, North Carolina has pounded the ball inside and gotten solid play from King Rice, a 6-foot sophomore who had been inconsistent in the past.

The Tar Heels shot 73.5 percent in their 88-74 victory over Wake Forest, and most of the scoring was done within 6-8 feet of the basket.

Rice has totaled 33 points and 21 assists in the last three games. A 40 percent shooter before Lebo was hurt, Rice has made 8 of 13 field goals and 15 of 17 free throws.

"I knew I could do the job, and I think the coaches knew too," Rice said. "Maybe other people didn't think so, but I didn't make that a big deal. I don't read newspapers or watch TV much, so I don't pay attention to what everyone is saying."

Illinois dealt first loss by Minnesota, 69-62

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Willie Burton scored 20 points, including a pair of free throws with 33 seconds left, to spark Minnesota to a 69-62 upset victory Thursday night over top-ranked Illinois.

Illinois, which had been the last major undefeated team in the nation, fell to 17-1 and 4-1 in the Big Ten. The Illini were playing their first game since being voted the No. 1 team in the nation by the UPI Board of Coaches. Illinois was also playing without high-scoring junior guard Kendall Gill, who suffered a broken foot Sunday and will likely miss the rest of the season.

Melvin Newbern added 16 points and Kevin Lynch had 10 for Minnesota, which led for most of the game and raised its record to 10-5 and 3-3. Ken Battle and Nick Anderson each scored 12 points to lead Illinois.

Illinois fought back late in the game behind Battle's inside scoring. He scored seven of his team's 10 points in a two-minute period.

No. 11 Florida State defeats league foe South Carolina

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — George McCloud sank a 3-point shot with 7 seconds left Thursday night, giving No. 11 Florida State a 69-67 victory over South Carolina in the Metro Conference.

McCloud's shot capped a see-saw second half that had 19 lead changes, including 11 in a row during one stretch. South Carolina's Barry

Manning fumbled the ball out of bounds at the buzzer, and the Gamecocks failed to get off a shot after McCloud's score.

Cornell's team will compete without long jump champion

By Paul Pabst
Staff Writer

The men's track team will enter Saturday's Missouri Invitational without the help of three-time Missouri Valley Conference long jump champion Brian Bradley, who underwent reconstructive surgery Monday.

Bradley tore a knee ligament Jan. 13 at a meet in Jonesboro, Ark. Trainer Ryan Kling said that Bradley would be out for 10 to 12 weeks.

"I talked to Brian after his surgery," Kling said. "The surgery was a success and Brian's attitude is very good. He will be released (Jan. 26).

We will do our best to rehab him.

The Missouri Invitational will include strong teams such as Kansas, Illinois State, and Southeast Missouri State.

"Kansas, SEMO, and Illinois State are traditionally strong," Coach Bill Cornell said. "It will be a tough competition."

Cornell expects to surpass last week's sub-par performance at the Illinois Invitational.

"We were sore and not really in great shape at the Illinois meet," Cornell said. "This week we are over the stiffness and we're all ready to go. We should do better than last week."

The injury and sickness situation that plagued the Saluki men last week is not completely over.

Pole vaulter Mike Michels has an injury to his shoulder, which will be X-rayed on Thursday. Two-time MVC 400-meter champion Erick Pegues, who missed the Illinois meet with the flu, should be ready.

"Mike is questionable for Saturday," Cornell said. "Pegues has lost several pounds and has missed a few practices. I feel he will be ready to go but he won't be 100 percent."

The flu bug is striking people across the country and the women's track team is no exception.

The Salukis will be competing without top runners Dora Kyriacou, Roseanne Vincent, Carmen Robbins, Lisa Schmelling and Angie Nunn, at the Missouri Invitational Saturday.

"The flu bug has really hurt us," Coach Don DeNoon said. "We would be winning these meets without it (the flu).

"Angie Nunn seems to be getting better, she should run this weekend," DeNoon added. "But the rest of them probably won't make the trip."

DeNoon believes that his team, when healthy, could take first in this field.

"All the competition is solid, but I think if we were healthy we would come out on top," DeNoon said. "We should still be in the top three, we still have a lot of talented people healthy."

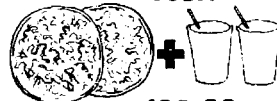

DeNoon looks for seniors Kathy Raske and Lisa Judiseak and junior Traci Davis to keep the Saluki's in the competition.

"Raske, Judiseak, and Davis have done great for us so far," DeNoon said. "I'm sure they will continue doing well on Saturday."

Football position may be filled today

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

Four people were interviewed for the Saluki football coaching position Friday in St. Louis, and an announcement of a hiring may come as early as 10 a.m. today the Daily Egyptian has learned.

Two anonymous sources close to the football program said the hiring would be announced this morning. One of the sources said the players would be meeting this afternoon to learn of the hiring.

SIU-C Athletics Director Jim Hart, appearing on WCIL-FM's "Sportstalk" radio show, said the person offered the position had accepted the job but he could not elaborate on the subject.

"I can't be very committal," Hart said.

Carl Mauck, the offensive line coach for the Kansas City Chiefs, said he was one of the four people interviewed, but was not hired for the position.

"I was interviewed for it,"

Mauck said. "They will not name me, though, they turned me down. I wanted it though."

Mauck played football for the Salukis from 1966 to 1968.

"I don't know when they will name it, but it will probably be Monday or Tuesday," Mauck said.

Hart declined comment on the personnel portion of the matter, but did indicate that Mauck's comment concerning the date of the naming was right.

"That is correct," said Hart when asked if the coach would be named Monday or Tuesday.

Associate athletics director Charlotte West said she did not know anything about the interviews, and added that Hart and SIU-C president John C. Guyon were taking care of the matter.

Interim head coach Jim Tompkins said he knew nothing about the interviewing or when the position would be filled.

"I don't know anything about it," Tompkins said.

"I've been in the office all week working."

But one of the anonymous sources said Tompkins was one of the four interviewed, and Hart said Tompkins was still in the running.

"Obviously Jim Tompkins and some candidates from outside the University," said Hart when asked who was being considered for the job.

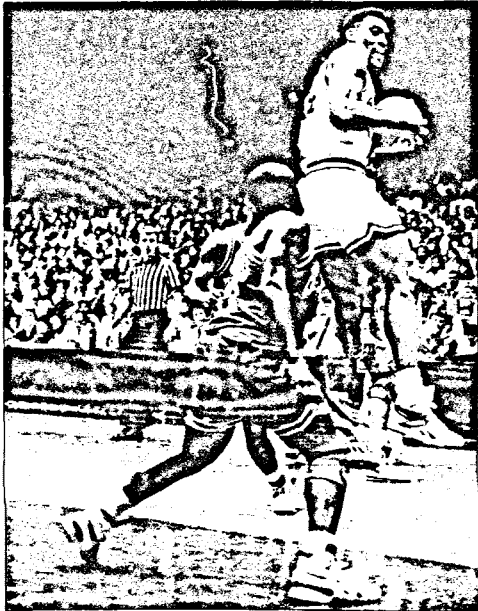

St. Louis was selected for the site of the interviews because of the convenience it provided, Hart said.

House forced to take a seat over schedule

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

A technicality over Saluki forward Randy House's class schedule benched the senior Saturday night and may result in House sitting out two more games.

The controversy stems over the number of hours House is officially registered for in the spring semester.

House said he registered for 15 hours, but at the time, three of the five classes he requested were closed.

"I picked up two junk classes, giving me 12 hours, so I would be eligible," House said.

The NCAA requires student-athletes to carry a minimum of 12 hours to be eligible for competition.

After one of the classes opened up, House said he dropped the two "junk" classes, and went to the business office and filled out closed card applications to get into a finance class and did a botany class.

Randy House

House said he then attended all 15 hours he had signed up for, but was told he had been officially registered for nine from Jan. 15, the first day of classes, to Jan. 24, the day closed class filings are made.

Names of student-athletes and their hours were filed Jan. 23, which is where the discrepancy arose.

After a call to the NCAA and the Missouri Valley, House said both groups advised the senior to sit out Saturday until the situation had been resolved.

Eastern's upset of women tightens Gateway standings

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

The unheralded, yet persistent full-court defensive press deployed by the Eastern Illinois women's basketball team pushed the Salukis off the floor to grab a stunning 70-57 Gateway Conference upset Saturday at the Arena.

The gap in the standings between second-place SIU-C (9-8, 7-2) and third-place Eastern Illinois (11-7, 6-3) narrowed to ½ game with the decision. Illinois State stands alone in first, untouched at 9-0 and 13-5.

Eastern Illinois' pressure took the form of an unofficial seven second-half steals and caused 18 Saluki turnovers for the game.

Remarkably, Eastern orchestrated a 45-point second half after trailing 28-25 at intermission.

"I think for whatever reason we got a 9-point lead and let their press take ourselves out of everything we wanted to
