Andrew Hatcher talking informally with students in University Center

Andrew Hatcher tells Convo about Negro's struggle

By Richard McCann
 Staff Writer

In 1955, a weary Negro seamstress refused to give up her seat at the front of a Montgomery, Ala., bus. Her determination led to a successful bus boycott headed by a young Negro minister, Martin Luther King, and the end of an era in the struggle of black people for civil rights and equal opportunity. Negroes were no longer afraid. The era of the "direct actionists" began.

Andrew Hatcher, who served as associate press secretary to the late President John F. Kennedy, pointed this out to a Convocations audience here Thursday.

Hatcher, who was instrumental in laying the groundwork for the civil rights movement as far back as 1942, traced the course of the Negro struggle in America from the forming of the NAACP to the rise of the black militants.

Former struggles, according to Hatcher, were based upon the philosophy of W. E. B. DuBois, founder of the NAACP, that the "talented tenth" should accept the role of serving the disadvantaged nine tenths.

"The talented tenth failed because they could not produce meaningful changes for the 90 per cent that they were supposed to serve," said Hatcher.

Despite the success of the NAACP in lowering some racial barriers, at the end of the 1950s Negroes were still employed mostly in unskilled jobs and the income gap between white and black not only remained, but was growing wider. Negroes still had not become a part of the power structure, said Hatcher.

Since 1955, the approach has been more positive—the approach of the direct activists and the black militants.

"The vast majority of Negroes still desire integration and absorption" into all phases of American life, said Hatcher. "However, forced segregation has created a climate in which he (the Negro) feels that he must dictate the terms."

Hatcher defined the "black power" movement as one of strength and unity. He felt that Negroes should use their economic and political strength to their, and possibly America's, benefit.

Although the black power terminology was introduced in 1966, Hatcher pointed out that the philosophy is nothing new, but he feels that it has been somewhat distorted by the press.

On the problems of crime, poverty and illegitimacy among disadvantaged blacks, Hatcher said that "the symptoms cannot be eliminated until the disease is cured." Hatcher is among those who feel that the disease can be cured.

Hatcher also advocated Negro entrepreneurship and said that "with ownership comes dignity," and with ownership comes a stake in society that Negroes have never had before.

As to whether Richard Nixon will have a positive or negative approach toward the problems of the Negro, Hatcher, a Democrat, failed to make a firm commitment. He pointed out, however, that a President, unlike a legislator, must find solutions, seek justice, and unify the nation in spite of his party affiliation.

The role of President, according to Hatcher, "is not to darken the past, but to brighten the future. Whoever is President is bound to follow these dictates. Let us look to the future," he said.

Hatcher's Convocation appearance was held in connection with SEU's Black History Week Festival.

Board to get mandatory fee 'package deal'

By Dan Van Atta
 Staff Writer

The proposed mandatory housing fee to be submitted to the SIU Board of Trustees next week will be a kind of "package deal," Chancellor Robert MacVicar said Thursday.

"The proposal is for a fee only in the technical, legal sense," MacVicar said. "As far as I'm concerned it is all a package: room, board and services."

The chancellor said the "services" come in the form of increased cultural, educational and social activities to be included in the on-campus living environment.

The proposal, called the Campus Housing Activity Fee Resolution, will be conducted in an across-the-board manner at all on-campus living

Senate wants vote

Controversy over fee continues

By Wayne Markham
 Staff Writer

Reaction to controversy over a proposed mandatory housing activity fee continued Thursday following resolutions passed by two on-campus living areas in opposition to Student Senate action.

The executive councils of Thompson Point and University Park have drawn up resolutions critical of a Senate supported fees referendum.

In letters addressed to University administrators, the on-campus executive councils supported a mandatory fee proposal which has been recommended to the Board of Trustees.

The Senate voted 17-6 to conduct a referendum on the fee issue, despite a statement from Wilbur Moulton, dean of students, that the mandatory fee had already been recommended by his office.

Further action in response to the issue came Thursday night at the University Park Executive Council meeting when a motion seeking review of Student Senate bills was submitted.

Chris Robertson, University Park senator and a member of the U-Park executive council, brought the bill on behalf of Steve Brown, executive council president.

Five city policemen suspended

Five Carbondale policemen were issued suspensions without pay Thursday for violation of "police department policies," Police Chief Jack Hazel said.

Two policemen were issued five-day suspensions, while three others were each given one-day suspensions, Hazel said. The five-day suspensions will begin at midnight Saturday and the one-day suspension will be worked into the policemen's regular work schedule.

The names of the suspended policemen were withheld by Hazel because he had not informed all of the policemen involved about their suspensions.

After meetings with the policemen, City Manager C. William Norman and City Attorney George Fleerlage this week, Hazel announced the suspensions. The police chief would not reveal the nature of the violations, but they reportedly occurred last week. He said the misconduct was not in violation of the criminal code.

A five-day suspension is the maximum penalty a police chief may give members of his force. Punishment of greater severity or longer duration would have to come from the Board of Police and Fire Commissioners.

Hazel plans to present a report on the suspensions to the board. He does not plan to present a report to the City

Management Discussion

Can black man be executive?

"The Black Executive" will be the topic of discussion Monday and Tuesday only during class sessions of the senior policy course in the Department of Management.

Stuart Taylor, assistant professor of management, said all black students, regardless of classification or major, are invited to attend and participate in the sessions.

The one-hour sessions Monday will be in the Agriculture Building at 8 a.m. in Room 220, and 1 p.m. in Room 222 and Room 148. The Tuesday session will be at 3 p.m. in Room 104, Home Economics Building.

Supplementary material "vital" to the class sessions is available free at these locations: Management Department, Room 215, General Classrooms Building; Black American Studies Office, Woody Hall; and the Information Desk in the University Center.

Taylor said the Management Department in the School of Business is asking itself the question: Can the black American succeed as an executive in American industry?

"The shortage of established black executives is causing professional business schools to take a closer look at their programs and re-evaluate them with a new perspective," Taylor said.

"It is widely admitted that the most serious crisis in the nation is urban disorders and racial conflicts caused by long and pervasive separation of economic power. Throughout most of this nation's history, the black American has been discouraged from managerial opportunities. Some might wonder whether the black American, by definition, is capable of becoming an active participant at the policy-making level of American institutions."

Taylor said the discussion sessions in the senior policy course are the first deliberate attempts by the SIU School of Business to openly explore these questions.

Ocean treasures

For over a decade, the American people have been vitally interested in the exploration of outer space. A great deal of tax money, equipment and man-hours have been concentrated on the goal of reaching other celestial bodies, such as the moon. Yet, one hundred and forty million square miles of the earth's surface is unexplored—the floors of the great oceans. American citizens should be aware of this fact and be concerned that so much of our own world is still unknown and unexplored.

In contrast, lunar vehicles have sent back photographs of the moon in detail. NASA experts say they have already begun to analyze the moon's rocks and terrain. But the Navy's Sealab, an ocean exploring project, has been able to explore only ten per cent of the continental shelves and a few square yards of the deeper ocean floors. The exploration of outer space is a worthwhile endeavor. It seems feasible, however, to make at least an equal effort at exploring our own world.

But exploration and experimentation require money. Twenty-three billion dollars has been spent on the Apollo project, while only $23 million has been spent on the Man-in-the-Sea Program. If we are to learn more about the seas, the government must allocate additional money to this program.

Geological experts claim that the sea floor is rich in minerals, such as tin, diamonds and gold. The day may come when depletion of resources on the continents may force man to go to the sea for these minerals. But if sea exploration continues at its present rate, man will not be technologically prepared to mine the seas' minerals. And a long delay could be disastrous. Now is the time for the Man-in-the-Sea Program to be stepped up.

Space experts have concluded from the Apollo missions that the moon is lifeless. But oceanographers say the seas contain 20,000 species of plant and animal plankton, 100,000 species of marine invertebrates and 11,000 species of fish. Authorities also calculate half the world's population lives today in chronic protein starvation. It is unbelievable that these people must suffer because more effort and funds have not been poured into projects to harvest the oceans' vast resources of protein.

In addition, American scientists have recently developed a process whereby fish is converted into meal resulting in a fish protein concentrate. They say this concentrate could provide a full protein supplement for every undernourished person on earth at a cost of about $2 a year per person, if an adequate program were put into effect.

While outer space exploration may eventually be of material benefit to mankind, it has been proven that the sea can provide material benefits right now. Therefore, citizens should begin to apply pressure to the government, demanding that more money, man power and effort be applied to the Man-in-the-Sea Program.

Residents ignored

To the Daily Egyptian:
Tonight, Feb. 6, I attended the University Park Executive Council meeting at Trueblood Hall. From the start, the issue discussed was the changing of U. Park to Martin L. King Park, which was voted against by this same council last week. At this meeting I witnessed an outrageous disregard for the majority feeling of U. Park by black students and the executive council.

The large group of black students attending came to show their opposition to the council vote taken a week ago. They said that they wanted to form their own branch of the executive council because the present one rejected their feeling toward the King bill, so they didn't want any part of them. They gave no thought to the fact that the members of the council were elected by a majority and should cast their votes as the majority of the students they represent feel.

The black students claim in favor of the bill has been that Dr. King was a great man who wanted nonviolence. But did they show that they believe in this? In an unexcusable outburst, the black students threw glass salt and pepper shakers at the executive council representatives. The council should never be subjected to such treatment just because they acted properly.

Then, in an unbelievable move, the executive council, forgetting that they are supposed to represent the feelings of the residents of U. Park, took another vote and came out in favor of the pro-

Hats off

To the Daily Egyptian:
Recently two letters were situated in the Daily Egyptian side by side. One was entitled, "Sexual Union Sacred Right," the other, "Abortion." I would first like to take my hat off to Sharon Ann Martin, for the stand she is taking for what she knows is right. Most people don't. That's why the Daily Egyptian is so filled up with sub-standard, demoralizing letters from so many loud mouthed cowards who are afraid to face life squarely, and who haven't matured enough to be able to stand on their own two feet against what they know deep inside as being wrong, but have twisted around until it is looked upon as being right.

As a Christian, and, as a young man, mind you, I support Miss Martin's views on the sacred act of sexual union and on her high views concerning abortion. And I stand against the revision of the laws concerning liberalizing abortion and against the Health Service distributing birth control devices to any single girl. It's not a revision in any state law or university policy that's needed here. It's the revision of the thinking of a bunch of immature and irresponsible little children!

It's time that we as Christians and we as concerned people stand up for what's right and get this sickening hell out of our society! We can do it, if we'll only care enough to try.

Individual decisions

To the Daily Egyptian:

We would like to reply to Miss Mrs. Sharon Ann Martin's letter concerning Christian morality, love making, and abortion.

We don't believe that all single girls should take the pill—but we do believe that any single girl desiring to do so has the right to do so.

Sex (love making) is only as beautiful as the mind perceives it. If a young woman believes that love making is only beautiful in marriage, she has the right to make that choice, but, on the other hand, if a young woman perceives love making without marriage to be beautiful as well, she too has the right to make that choice.

We fervently hope that women don't go to their marriage beds believing that the only thing they can offer is their virginity and that their husbands don't choose their wives only on that basis. We hope they can offer their love, compassion, understanding, trust, and their minds as well as their bodies to their husbands.

Leg-watchers look to court

To the Daily Egyptian

In our day of changing ideals and morals, of racial traumaism and radical traffic, students must dodge the apathetic routine and take notice. This weekend is soon arriving and both men, boys and women can know the truth—the truth about women's basketball. Yes, they do play with an official basketball on a life size court. The girls are even allowed an unlimited dribble, plus (get this) the attraction of an extra player on the floor.

If all this sounds incredible, come experience for yourself this Saturday at the Women's Gymnasium. And fellas if this doesn't make you want to skip the Saturday dog walk, remember, the women play in skirts.

Chinese 'cultural revolution' successful

By Antero Pietila
(First of two articles)

Few events in the current history have puzzled people more than the Chinese Cultural Revolution with its wallposters and Red Guards waving the little Red Book, their Bible. Lack of information on these developments has often compelled the news media to rely upon travelers' tales. In many cases these businessmen returning from China did see nothing themselves, neither did they have any knowledge of the language or background in Chinese history to relate past events to what they had heard about.

Ping-chia Kuo, chairman of the SIU Department of History, is one of the most knowledgeable men in Chinese affairs living in the West. In the following interview he puts the Cultural Revolution into perspective and reminds that Mao Tse-tung himself has said that similar revolutionary actions are possible also in the future.

In the second part of the interview, to be published on Tuesday, Kuo discusses Sino-American relations giving new insights to problems pertaining to this question. Following are excerpts from the transcript of the interview:

QUESTION: Robert Guillan has written: "To know China, one must first recognize her." M. Guillan seems to mean something that goes beyond the question of diplomatic recognition, something that has to do with our basic attitudes.

ANSWER: The world needs to recognize that China is undergoing a powerful process of national renaissance and that she has found a key to that renaissance through socialism by using Communism as the means. To achieve that end the government in Peking is transforming the ancient and fertile civilization into a modern state. The things which the people have yearned for over at least half a century, a strong government, national independence, sovereignty and self-respect, the conquest of hunger and disease and agricultural and industrial development, they now have become a reality, a reality which means much more to the people than the method the government has chosen to use to achieve this reality. So, true recognition of China must be a recognition of this large historical picture. Without this recognition, diplomatic recognition will be very difficult to achieve. Even if it materializes, it will be rather empty.

QUESTION: A draft was made recently for a new constitution of the Chinese Communist party. Is this to be considered as a sign that the Cultural Revolution phase has ended?

ANSWER: The general consensus of the students of Chinese affairs is that the 9th Party Congress of the CCP will soon be convened. We don't know exactly when, but it will be in the very near future and it is expected that the congress will adapt this draft for new party constitution.

No doubt this will mark the conclusion, or "the victorious conclusion", of the current phase of the Cultural Revolution. I say the current phase because Mao Tse-tung himself has said many times that more cultural revolutions probably will occur again in the future, because the weeding out of the "revisionists" or the enemies of Mao Tse-tung certainly is not absolutely completed now. At a future date it is very possible that there will be another cultural revolution. But for the time being the revival of capitalism and the attempt to build up the privileges of the bureaucrats has been checked and the country is restored now to the route of socialist construction.

QUESTION: What then was achieved by the Cultural Revolution? Why did Mao Tse-tung make it?

ANSWER: The Cultural Revolution has been interpreted and reported in a great variety of ways, but I would like to look at it in this way. The Cultural Revolution began in the spring of 1966 and as I said it can be considered concluded at the end of 1968.

The Cultural Revolution did not start all that sudden. It was preceded by two movements, the Socialist Education Movement in the countryside, in the rural areas, and another movement related to it, the Full Clean-Up movement. Now, those developments were in 1962, 1963, and 1964. They reaffirmed collectivism in the rural areas and were successfully completed by the winter of 1964 and 1965. However, the situation in the cities was not satisfactory to Mao Tse-tung. There were many people who were interested in capitalistic practices and in bureaucratic privileges. So the movement was extended to the cities in the spring of 1966 and this became the Cultural Revolution.

The Cultural Revolution like the Socialist Education Movement was dedicated to the proletarian ideology, to the struggle against counter-revolutionaries, especially in the municipal administration and the provincial administration—by that I mean the party and the government and the state enterprises. The purpose was to weed out the revival of capitalism and the bureaucratic behavior. So Mao launched the Cultural Revolution in the spring of 1966 against those party officials who had taken the "capitalist route." The exponent of this group was Liu Shao-chi, but there were many others.

When they used the words "taken the capitalist route" that really means people in influential positions in party and government who have succumbed to the pursuit of personal interests and who have taken on the behavior of the traditional Mandarin bureaucrat and have moved away from the interests of the revolutionary masses. Mao believed that unless this tendency was checked, the results of the revolution and socialism could be subverted. Therefore he used the Red Guards.

The Red Guards were started following the 11th plenary session of the party Central Committee in the end of July and early August of 1966. And in addition to the Red Guards there were also other revolutionary bodies, mass organizations, the deputies of the workers and the peasants involving easily 20 million people trying to use these wall posters. This is very significant to me there was no civil war but there was a great propaganda turmoil. This was designed to tear into the party—the party had become decadent—and Mao wanted to break up the party as a bureaucratic establishment and renew the revolutionary ardor of the masses to compel a reformation of the party. This was the purpose of the Cultural Revolution.

I think the government deliberately let the schools be closed down. Red Guards were nothing other than students excused from schools, they shut the schools for more than a year. This would leave an unforgettable impression on the young generation that if any of the government officials become selfish or turn capitalist you can go ahead and organize the mass movement to bring them back into the socialist line. This was the purpose of it and, of course, the little Red Book was their Bible.

After a period of confrontation—this would be the latter part of 1966 and the first half of 1967—when there were isolated fights in the party headquarters, in the municipal governments all over the country, now after this confrontation the Mao group began to get the upper hand. I must emphasize that there was no civil war in the sense that no armed forces were involved in the fighting, just poster war. The first period of getting the upper hand was what they call the formation of the triple alliance. This was to tie together the revolutionary youth, the Red Guards, the deputies of peasants and workers and bring in the majority of the existing party cadres, because they were not necessarily going capitalist. In brief this was to keep the majority of the party people as they were, the revolutionary left and the army. These three groups were tied together to build a new power base.

Then, beginning about March 1968 till January of this year they were using the triple alliance to set up a new party in provinces and new government to reform the governmental personnel and party leadership in provinces and municipalities. There are altogether 29 provinces and municipalities and one by one these were reformed by the New Year. So the forthcoming 9th Party Congress is expected to formalize the reform of the party and to reaffirm these new governments in the 29 provinces and municipalities. I would therefore say that the Cultural Revolution has successfully blocked the attempt of the Liu group—or the revisionists, if we may call them—to make the party their establishment, to serve their interests and the Cultural Revolution has once again put China back to the road of continuing revolution and socialist reconstruction.

Books on China authored by Kuo

The chairman of the SIU Department of History is a former Chinese government official. During his career he was a special assistant to Chiang Kai-shek at the Cairo conference and delegate to the San Francisco conference. Kuo was appointed by Trygve Lie as top ranking director of the Department of Security Council Affairs at the United Nations, a post which he held through 1948.

After the Communist take-over on the mainland, Kuo left government and took up residence in California, where he returned to academic work.

Kuo is the author of four books: "A Critical Study of the First Anglo-Chinese War," "Far Eastern Diplomatic History," "China: New Age and New Outlook." In 1962 he was commissioned by Oxford University Press to contribute a volume on China in "The Modern World" series. This book, "China," which was first published in 1963, has gone through five editions and has been translated into Dutch, Norwegian, Malay, and Swedish.

Kuo came to SIU in 1959.

Saturday is license plate deadline

Midnight Saturday is the deadline for Illinois residents to mount their 1969 license plates, according to Secretary of State Paul Powell.

License plates can be purchased over the counter at the First National Bank and at the Saluki Currency Exchange with a two-day waiting period.

Glenn Storme, president of the bank, said sales there have been steady at about 200-300 a day. He added that about

SIU alumnus serving as captain in Vietnam

William R. Casey, SIU alumnus from Tunnel Hill, Ill., is now serving as a captain with the United States Air Force in Nha Trang, Vietnam.

Casey, who received his B.A. from Southern in 1958, was commissioned after graduation through the Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corps program. Before going to Vietnam, he served at Louisiana Polytechnic Institute.

Captain Casey, a pilot, is assigned to a unit of the Pacific Air Forces.

7,300-7,500 plates will be sold by the end of the month.

Storme said the bank is prepared to receive all applicants, but he does not expect a last minute rush. The sales will continue at the bank until the end of the month, although Saturday is the deadline.

The law does not apply to out-of-state students at SIU, but it does apply to any person who has taken up permanent residence in Illinois.

Ray Heinrich

What was the most dramatic basketball game ever played? A group of sportswriters voted and have selected the game that decided the 1957 NCAA championship, when North Carolina beat Kansas 54-53 in triple overtime. Kansas, led by Wilt Chamberlain, was heavily favored. But, North Carolina came from behind, sent the game into the third overtime, and scored two points in the last seconds to win. That's been voted by these experts the greatest basketball game in history.

Can you imagine one man leading a major league in batting NINE straight years? Did you know one player did just that? Ty Cobb led the American League in batting EVERY year from 1907 through 1915. To realize how unusual that is, consider the fact that today it's rare when a player leads the league over two straight years.

Did you know there was once a boy who was a big star in the big leagues while he was still in high school? It happened to the all-time great pitcher, Bob Feller. He joined Cleveland in the summer of 1938 between his junior and senior years, in high school and became one of the top stars in the American League that summer by striking out 17 men in one game.

I bet you didn't know that college graduates have a longer life expectancy—lower death rate and are living five years longer on the average than non-college men. The lower death rate of college men makes possible broader benefits and greater cash values in College Life policies. This certainly makes good sense, doesn't it?

Senate rejects report denying Center exploitation of students

By Nathan Jones
Staff Writer

A report clearing the University Center food service from accusations of "exploiting students" has been rejected by the Student Senate.

The report was ordered by the Senate last week and referred to the student health and welfare committee.

Bud Winiecki, chairman of the committee, submitted the report which defended the operation of the University Center facilities including the food service operation, book store and game rooms.

According to Winiecki, the Center's operation is not one of profit. The Center exists entirely on revenue which it receives from students and uses any excess money for repairs and improvements.

Forestry seminar scheduled today

The School of Agriculture is sponsoring a forestry seminar here today.

Guest speaker will be Kent T. Adair, assistant professor of forest and economics management at the University of Missouri. Theme of the seminar is "Supervision in Missouri Forest Products Industry."

The seminar, open to all interested persons, will start at 3 p.m. in the conference room at the Forestry Sciences Laboratory Building.

TV station is powerful

The Olney, Ill., outlet of SIU, WSIU-TV, operates on channel 16 with a signal strength of one million watts.

The expansion which is under construction now south of the Center is part of those improvements, he said.

The whole question of students being exploited originated at the Center's food service. The service was supposedly using low paid students workers for profit.

Winiecki after speaking to Clarence Dougherty, University Center director, and Ron Rogerr, a representative from the Center's food service, reported that the catering service made only a flat rate each year and that all revenue above that rate was kept by the Center. The food service has actually lost money during the past two years, he added.

Opposition was raised to the committee's report by Jerry Finney, Senate parliamentarian. Finney questioned the report since it did not state specifically that the Center was making a profit off of students. According to Finney if repairs and improvements could be paid by the revenue which the Center receives from the students then profit had to exist.

The Senate after a series of three hand votes defeated the bill 13 to 8.

Thai ambassador in mock UN

Bunchana Attakor, the ambassador of Thailand to the United States, is scheduled to arrive at SIU from Washington, D.C., this morning for a series of meetings and to participate in the Model United Nations program.

Attakor's address, "A View on the Future of Asia," will open the third plenary session of the Model United Nations tonight at 7:30 in the University Center Ballrooms.

The Model United Nations, which got underway yesterday with registration at 6 p.m., will continue through Saturday afternoon. At the first plenary session last evening, participants heard Soubhi J.

Khanachet, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the Kuwait mission to the United Nations, discuss the crises in the Middle East.

Attakor's schedule at SIU includes a visit to Clarence Hendershot's "History of Asia" class at 10 a.m. in Room 303, Old Main; a luncheon hosted by SIU's Committee on Asian Studies at noon; a meeting with Thai students at 4:30 in the International Student Center; and a dinner in the University Center at 6 p.m.

The Thai ambassador will be guest of University President and Mrs. Delyte W. Morris Friday night. He departs for Washington, D.C., Saturday morning.

Ambassador Attakor has a master's degree in political science and an honorary doctor of law's degree. He has served as ambassador since 1967. His previous experiences include deputy minister of National Development, rector of the National Institute of Development Administration, member of the National Parliament, and deputy secretary general of the National Economic Development Board.

MacVicar says housing fee is actually a package deal

areas except the Evergreen Terrace complex.

According to Robert Maurath, assistant coordinator of housing and business services, the fee will consist of a $3 per quarter charge to be collected as a $9 advance payment on a regular three quarter housing contract.

The operation of the fee will not materially differ from the present voluntary Residence Hall Association (RHA) fee, except in the form of purchase requirements, Maurath said. The new system will require that bids be let for the purchase of all equipment, he said.

The history of campus activity fees at Southern is extensive. Prior to the fall of 1966 a mandatory activity fee of $4.50 per quarter was collected in a manner quite similar to that of the currently proposed fee.

In November of that year, however, it was learned that this was an "improper" or "illegal" manner of collection because the Board of Trustees had not expressly commissioned the Student Affairs Division to assess the fee.

Consequently, the fees were frozen at that time, and monies for educational programming in on-campus living areas was secured from various accounts in the Dean of Student's Office. In the spring of 1967 the funds that had been collected that fall were refunded to the students.

Also that spring on-campus student governments decided that future activities fees should be collected on a voluntary basis, and the RHA program was initiated the following fall.

The voluntary system suffered from problems of mismanagement, according to MacVicar, as well lack of student participation. However, he said the new system will not have to be a permanent thing.

"If the experience of the next year or two indicates that the fee is not being used for a significant and useful purpose we would, of course, consider its elimination," he said.

The Student Rights and Responsibilities Committee has returned a report which cleared the Stenographic Service of alleged racial discrimination for lack of evidence.

Jim Faughn, committee chairman, told the Senate Wednesday that there was evidence of student discrimination and "possibly" racial discrimination.

His report added, however, that no concrete evidence to substantiate the racial discrimination charges could be found.

He did say that the Stenographic Service has changed its pricing policies from last quarter and interpreted this as evidence that "there was the possibility of discrimination."

In addition, Faughn reported on the results of an ad placed by his committee in the Daily Egyptian sought to gauge the depth of discrimination at SIU.

According to the committee chairman, only two calls were received and both involved student, not racial discrimination.

The report was accepted by the Senate following a brief questioning period.

Liberty demands 'eternal vigilance'

By Terry Peters
Staff Writer
"Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty!"

These words of Wendell Phillips, a 19th century American orator and reformer, are the motto of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU).

The ACLU is an organization which seeks to uphold the principles contained in the Bill of Rights. It utilizes legal procedures to oppose legislation and court rulings it considers to be in violation of the civil liberties guaranteed by the Constitution.

The ACLU was organized under its present name in 1920 through the leadership of a social worker named Roger Nash Baldwin, who came to be the symbol of the ACLU.

It evolved from the National Civil Liberties Bureau, which began as the Civil Liberties Bureau of the American Union Against Militarism, an organization spawned by the portent of American participation in World War I.

"It (the ACLU) has grown a great deal in these years. There are chapters in most states of the Union," according to George S. Counts, visiting professor in the Department of Educational Administration and Foundations.

Counts, who took his Ph.D. in the social foundations of education at the University of Chicago in 1916, was a member of the National Committee of the ACLU for about 30 years.

He is currently the honorary chairman of the recently organized southern Illinois chapter of the ACLU.

"The ACLU has always been very active in the struggles for equality for Negroes," said Counts, who taught at Columbia University in New York for about 30 years before he came to SIU.

"It has also been interested in the activities of students and has issued a number of reports on student rebellions," he said.

Another area which has had the attention of the ACLU throughout its history is academic freedom, which it has consistently defended.

The most memorable instance of its involvement was the 1925 "monkey trial" of John Thomas Scopes, a high school teacher charged with violating Tennessee's ban on the teaching of Darwin's evolutionary theories in the classroom.

The ACLU financed Scopes' entire defense, sending Clarence Darrow, the renowned criminal lawyer, and three other lawyers, all of whom served without fee, to Scopes' aid.

The law which precipitated the Scopes trial was repealed by the state legislature in 1967. In November, 1968, the Supreme Court ruled a similar Arkansas statute prohibiting public school teaching of "the theory that mankind ascended or descended from a lower order of animals" unconstitutional.

The ACLU has opposed censorship of alleged pornography, the activities of the House Committee on Un-American Activities and laws attempting to regulate private sexual morality, including all anti-abortion laws.

What is the situation today with regard to civil liberties? "The Johnson administration made tremendous contributions in the field of civil rights and civil liberties. It stands out in that respect," said Counts, adding that he disagreed with Johnson's foreign policy.

And as for the prospects under President Nixon.

"I hope he has changed," Counts said, alluding to the campaigns for Congress early in Nixon's career during which he was accused of resorting to smear tactics against his opponents.

"I heard his inaugural address," said Counts, who is the author of numerous books. "I thought it was a very good one."

"Liberty is always unfinished business," the title of the ACLU annual report for 1955-56, and sums up the working philosophy of ACLU.

Management analysts to visit SIU

Two noted British analysts of industrial management will visit the campus of SIU in March and April.

Lord Wilfred Brown, England's minister of state, and sociologist Elliott Jaques will participate in a series of seminars related to the now famous Glacier Project, a research study of business organization which is marking its 20th anniversary.

The seminars are under the auspices of the Council for Analysis of Organizational Structure and the SIU Center for Management Development. On March 5 and 6 Jaques will lecture on "Organization and Management Efficiency." Brown's appearances will take place on April 12 when he will lecture on "Management Thought and Practice" and April 14 when his subject will be "Making the Research Contribution More Effective."

The Glacier Project, based on operations of Glacier Metals Co., Ltd., is an attempt to define and develop an optimum efficiency framework of executive and management functions and responsibilities which could serve as a model of organization for industry.

Jaques has been the project's chief investigator. During much of the study Brown was chairman of Glacier Metals. Together the two have written ten books based on the research.

The Council for Analysis of Organizational Structure, composed of American business managers, educators and government officials, is the chief proponent in the United States for testing and continued research of the Glacier system.

Information on attendance at the seminars is available by writing: R. Ralph Bedwell, Director, Center for Management Development, SIU, Carbondale, Ill., 62901.

Ad Week to focus on TV 'Festival of Commercials'

By Ruth Carney

A full-hour of television commercials?

Those sometimes annoying commercials provide one of the highlights of Advertising Recognition Week, which will be observed next week at SIU. In past years, the TV Film Festival of Commercials has played to full houses in Davis Auditorium.

The film will be shown each hour from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Wednesday. Host for the showing will be Mark Russell from KMOX-TV, St. Louis.

"Advertising in Contemporary Society" will be the topic of an All-University Symposium in the Morris Library Auditorium Friday. "Advertising-Politics-and the Government" will begin the symposium at 9 a.m. Friday, presented by Don Nathanson, president of North Advertising, Inc.

Advertising and the Black Community will be presented at 11 a.m. Friday by Bill Sharp, creative group head of J. Walter Thompson, Chicago. Sharp has been a key developer of a special advertising program for blacks in the Chicago area.

In a recent study of nearly 50 universities with a professional advertising program, Donald G. Hileman, head of the advertising sequence in the Department of Journalism, discovered only 30 black persons enrolled as advertising majors. Four of these students are in the program in the Journalism Department at SIU. One reason offered by educators for this low number of black students is that many of them are not aware of the opportunities in this field.

Hileman added, "I hope that all students, especially those black students who feel that they have creative talent and ability in the problem solving area, will come to meet and discuss with Bill Sharp on opportunities in advertising." Interested students can attend the "Honest Look at Advertising" session from 1 to 4 p.m. Thursday. This will be an informal "come and go" affair. The role of advertising in our society and economy will be discussed by students and faculty.

Five presentations beginning at 8 a.m. and ending at noon will be given Monday by representatives of Foote, Cone & Belding, Inc., Chicago. These presentations will explore the creative aspects of ad agencies.

Alpha Delta Sigma and Gamma Alpha Chi, national professional advertising fraternities are sponsoring the SIU Advertising Recognition Week in cooperation with the American Advertising Federation.

Student Senate rapped for failing to 'recruit'

Sam Panayotovich, student body president, criticized the Student Senate Wednesday night for not recruiting students to fill committees which were being formed at the executive level.

According to Panayotovich only five students out of a list of 100 were recruited by senators. "Nobody seems to be interested" he said, indicating that this is one reason the committees thus far have been predominately Greek.

"There are senators who work in these commissions," he added, "but let's try and get more people involved."

Appointed to the SIU Entertainment Advisory Board after Panayotovich stated his criticism were five students whom he had recruited. They were Bill Resnik, freshman; Jack Griggs, sophomore; Bruce Hering, junior; Marlene Messersmith, senior; and Rich Moore, senator.

The board will work throughout the year to set up programs in the Arena.

Engineers plan celebration

Awards, displays and a banquet will highlight the annual National Engineers Week which begins Sunday.

The week, sponsored locally by the SIU Engineering Club and the Egyptian Chapter of the Illinois Society of Professional Engineers, is chosen to coincide with the birthday of George Washington. Washington was a surveyor and engineer. The theme is "Engineering...Partner in Rebuilding Urban America."

Displays from various industrial corporations will be exhibited Tuesday through Thursday in the School of Technology Lounge. The public is invited to view the displays and attend a Thursday night banquet in the University Center.

Magoon isn't flashy, he works

By Barb Leebens
Staff Writer

"Terry Magoon... 5-6... 22... senior... missed last season after posting a fine 16-6 mark in 1967... not considered flashy but he's tough, works well and is in superb condition... majoring in marketing... hometown: Erie, Pa.—that's what the SIU wrestling guide said.

What the guide failed to mention is that Magoon holds claim to a 13-1-0 over-all record this year and a 7-1 dual competition slate, the Salukis winningest grappler. "Terry is one of the hardest working youngsters that we have. He knows when he has to work, and he works without saying a word about it," Linn Long, SIU wrestling coach said. "He was upset in a ranking match the week we were going to go to Oklahoma State, but that made him work all the harder."

A very stubborn, stern individual, Magoon stated that he was not out for the aesthetic pleasures of being an athlete, "I'm out to win and to only win."

During wrestling season, Magoon says he tries to concentrate on wrestling. "I like school when I'm not wrestling, but I can't go to school and wrestle both. It's not so much that there isn't enough time to do the work required, it is that I don't have enough energy and desire to do my school work."

Magoon switched his physical education major to marketing when he was a junior because "I didn't want to go around as a jock in gym shorts all day."

When asked about his wrestling success, Magoon replied, "I'm not very good, not fast enough, not flashy at all, I don't know enough, but there are a lot of guys that aren't very good either. Then you spot that and you beat them."

"He may seem like he's not a very flashy wrestler, but he always seems to get the job done, if he can't, he sure tries hard," Long said.

"Too much hurtin' in this sport. Takes a lot of desire unless you win all the time," Magoon said. "You have to put out the fullest or else sometimes you get the hell beat out of you."

"I'm a cynic—when I wrestle I don't like to think about anything else because it takes all my energy," Magoon said. "I don't get any ideas about anything else until after the season."

Looking to the future after June graduation Magoon cites that the draft will probably take two years of his life. Then he hopes to go to graduate school. "Time will tell what I take up in graduate school."

Women gymnasts face tough test today

With five consecutive national titles to their credit, the SIU women's gymnastics team will have their reputation tested at 8 p.m. today when the California SCATS and the Chamblana Club bring their Olympic stars into the Arena.

"Based upon the experience and caliber of the individuals on all three teams, a total score of 108 will be required to win," SIU Coach Herb Vogel said.

In order to score 108 points, Southern needs to lift its team average another three tenths of a point in each event but when entering the 9.0 and above scoring range, this can be compared to making a field goal at a crucial moment in a basketball game.

The top team performance so far this season has been 106.4 against Flint, Mich., two weeks ago.

The Salukis had hoped to be able to lean upon the steady nine plus efforts of Joanne Hashimoto, but she reinjured her knee and will be out for another six weeks.

Vogel plans to reactivate Donna Schaezner for the vaulting and floor exercise events. An All-American last season, she is an assistant coach this year.

Besides Miss Schaezner, Vogel will use freshmen Terry Spencer, Joan Lauter, Margie Schilling and Jullie Mayhew and sophomore Karen Smith.

A 1968 Collegiate All-American, Miss Smith is the only experienced gymnast SIU has since Miss Hashimoto, a junior, has been injured. She has won the uneven bar in all three meets this season, with a high score of 9.2 against Flint.

Miss Lauter, from Miami, Fla., has gained two firsts and one second in the floor exercise this season, and has had nine runner-up scores in the balance beam.

Vogel stated that she has shown steady improvement in the bar and vaulting events, and is rapidly becoming a sound four-event performer. Having earned herself a starting position in vaulting, Miss Schilling is also listed as a tentative starter in the uneven bar against her hometown club, the SCATS.

Miss Mayhew, a Canadian, is considered by Vogel as his dark horse entry. Vogel said that she is capable of placing in all four events, but "she simply tries harder than she needs to and has not been able to tie down the loose ends necessary to relieve self-imposed pressure. She is ready to put the puzzle together."

Vogel said that Miss Mayhew is the key to success for this year's team because the Salukis don't have a steady third and fourth back up performer. This was SIU's great strength in the past.

If Miss Mayhew can overcome "freshmanitis", Southern may be on its way to another national title.

Meade sees weekend wins

Gymnastics Coach Bill Meade sees little cause for alarm as his team takes on the University of Arizona today and Arizona State Saturday in Arizona.

"We'll be 7-1 after this trip. I don't feel that we'll have a hard time with either team," he said.

"After being sidelined several weeks Homer Sardina is ready for competition in the floor exercise and vaulting and this will help us."

Sardina was lost to the team when he injured his knee on Jan. 18 immediately before the start of the Iowa State meet. According to Meade, Sardina has been given the go-ahead by Robert Spackman, Saluki athletic trainer.

Meade also singled out Jeffrey Long on the parallel bars and Stewart Smith on the high bar as other likely strong performers this weekend.

"I would like to experiment a little to get ready for Iowa on Feb. 19. I won't do so much with personnel, but will try to experiment with routines," Meade said.

Some indication of his concern over a possible loss to either opponent came when he announced his itinerary and a luggage item.

"I'm taking my golf clubs and I'll get over to my parent's house during the trip. I think it will be a good trip all around."

SIU swimmers win

SIU's swim team finished out its dual meet season with a 64-37 win over Iowa State at Ames last night.

Despite Coach Ray Eastick's hopes, none of his swimmers was able to qualify for an NCAA berth as a result of last night's meet.

Southern captured top honors in nine events against Iowa. Vern Daesch was a double event winner in the 200 yard freestyle and the 500 yard freestyle.
