Camille: Financial survey 'flawed'

By Holly J. Corrington
Staff Writer

A survey that helped determine how much financial aid SIUC students may get was flawed, the director of Student Work and Financial Assistance said Wednesday night.

Director Joe Camille agreed with members of the Graduate and Professional Student Council who charged that the survey inadequately estimated expenses for many students.

But he also said the survey provided the best information available and will be used to determine the 1988-89 financial aid budget.

"You have to believe what you get back," Camille said at a meeting of the GPSC.

Students apply for financial aid through federal forms such as ACT-FFS, which list income and assets of students and their parents, Camille said. The income and assets are run through a formula that is decided by Congress, he said. This formula produces student-family contribution estimates that are subtracted from the budget. The remainder of the budget is used for financial need through college work-study programs and loans.

Members of the council said the survey underestimated expenses for many graduate students, non-traditional students and independent undergraduate students, which could result in their getting less financial aid.

Many of the students who answered the survey rely on their parents to cover many expenses and they did not report some expenses that other students have. The result was an estimate of average student expenses far below expenses for many off-campus and self-supported students.

"Many non-traditional

Police resolve burglaries

By John Mohler
Staff Writer

The arrest of two men netted Carbondale police at least $25,000 in stolen property, police said at a press conference Thursday.

Lt. Larry Hill said Calvert Johnson, 30, Route 2, Carbondale, and Kevin L. Koontz, 22, 808 North St., Murphysboro, confessed to committing about 20 residential burglaries since they were released on parole from a half-way house in No. amber.

Police Chief Ed Hogan said Johnson and Koontz may be implicated in many more of the 100 burglaries reported since Dec. 1.

"I think when we're done with these two... half of (the burglaries) will be considered solved," Hogan said.

Koontz's and Johnson's recollections of other burglaries were vague "due to the sheer number" they had committed, Hogan said.

Hogan said about 50 burglaries occurred in the same time last year.

Police recovered stolen handguns, jewelry, televisions, valuable coins, VCRs, and stereos, as well as clothes, a shovel, dogfood and cooking oil.

Hill said the possession of the handguns is a violation of parole for which additional charges may be filed.

Koontz was arrested Feb. 2 when he disobeyed a traffic signal while under surveillance by police. Police earlier received a tip implicating Koontz in the burglaries. Hill said Koontz's home was "literally full of mer-

Koontz was indicted on three counts of residential burglary Thursday at the Jackson County Courthouse, the Jackson County State's Attorney's office said. Further charges may be filed pending examination of police records, a spokeswoman said. A herring date has not been set.

Koontz is being held at the Jackson County Jail in Murphysboro.

Koontz implicated Johnson and Johnson was arrested Wednesday night at his home, Hogan said. He was taken to Williamson County Jail in Mariou and

Jury: Nofziger guilty of illegal lobbying charges

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lyn Nofziger, the political operator who helped Ronald Reagan capture the presidency, was convicted Thursday on three counts of illegal lobbying for the scandal-torn Wedtech Corp. and two other clients.

The eight-man, four-woman jury deliberated for 6 1/2 hours over Wednesday and Thursday before finding the ex-White House aide guilty of three of the four influence peddling charges against him.

The charges involved business contacts Nofziger made with Edwin Meese and other White House officials less than a year after he left government in January 1982 to open a consulting business. Such contacts violate a key provision of the Ethics in Government Act, and Nofziger's trial marks the first prosecution of violations under that law.

Independent prosecutor James McKay accused Nofziger of trying to cash in on his friendship with Meese and other White House aides to win business for three of his clients — Wedtech, Fairchild Republic Corp. and a maritime union.

Nofziger, who sported his trademark Mickey Mouse tie throughout his month-long trial, displayed little emotion as the court clerk read the verdict, but shook co-defendant Mark Bragg's hand when he was acquitted of one charge of aiding and abetting illegal lobbying.

Nofziger also was acquitted of that illegal lobbying charge.

The eyes of Nofziger's wife, Bonnie, glazed over with tears as she sat quietly in the first row of the courtroom with their two daughters.

Nofziger faces six years in prison and a $30,000 fine when he is sentenced March 25. His lawyers said they would appeal the decision.

Outside U.S. District Court, Nofziger professed his innocence, as he had since the investigation began a year before the trial.

"I feel I'm innocent. I don't think I did anything wrong," he said. "It's a lousy law. All men are not equal under the law."

Although McKay defended the strength of the law, he displayed little glee at the outcome of the trial, calling it a "long, hard battle."

"We think the jury's verdict confirms we had a case to make," he said, but added, "I hate to see someone get convicted of a felony. That's just tough."

The most politically sensitive charge in the case involved a memo Nofziger sent to Meese on April 8, 1982, urging the White House counselor or even the president to help Wedtech win a $32 million Army contract to build small engines.

Nofziger's attorney argued a pivotal May 19 White House

Board postpones reply on grievance

By John Baldwin
Staff Writer

The Board of Trustees Thursday postponed a decision on whether an electrical engineering professor's grievance should go to an outside arbitrator.

Charles A. Goblen submitted requests for a vote on binding arbitration for his grievance and for an appeal simultaneously. Under binding arbitration, a case is heard by a neutral party from outside the University.

Goblen was informed by the chancellor's office that the Board would consider his request for binding arbitration first and delay his request for an appeal.

Because of this, the Board was not presented with the papers Goblen submitted for his appeal.

"Since we do not have the appeal papers before us, we are not fully informed," Board member Ivan A. Elliott Jr., said.

But a union spokesman disputed Elliott's claim. "They've got everything unless they've lost something," Illinois Education Association organizer Charles Zucker said in a press conference after the Board meeting.

The IEA is one of two unions vying to represent faculty and staff if they choose to unionize.

But Thomas Britton, vice chancellor for administration, said, "The bottom line is that the Board members have not seen the material."

He said the Board probably would receive the information and be able to make a decision within two months.

Goblen said he was unfairly denied compensation after a Judicial Review Board panel decided in December 1986 that some of Goblen's achievements had not been properly considered for merit salary increases.

After the Judicial Review Board vote, College of Engineering and Technology Dean Kenneth Tempelmeyer told then-president Albert Somit that Goblen had received credit for the achievements, according to an IEA news release.

Contras, Sandinistas set for 2nd peace-talk round

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Nicaragua's Contra rebels denied Thursday they are trying to delay peace talks with the government and said they would attend the next round of negotiations in Guatemala Feb. 18 to 20. The talks — the second face-to-face meeting between the government and the rebels — were scheduled to take place in Guatemala this week, but postponed because the mediator, Nicaraguan Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, could not attend. The two sides will discuss a cease-fire to end the 7-year-old war the Contras have been waging to overthrow the Sandinista regime. The talks will be mediated by Obando y Bravo and a team of Nicaraguan Catholic clerics.

S. African troops mop up in Bophuthatswana

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — South African troops who put down a coup attempt in the nominally independent Bophuthatswana homeland mounted street patrols Thursday and flushed rebellious soldiers from their last strongholds. "Everything is back under control," said Bophuthatswana's defense chief, white South African Gen. Hennie Riekert. "We are back in the saddle. We arrested several troublemakers." Riekert said South African troops who rescued President Lucas Mangope and Cabinet ministers from captivity in a stadium in the capital of Mmabatho Wednesday regained control of the main military base in an hour-long operation at dawn Thursday.

Ruling party blamed for Bangladesh deaths

DHAKA, Bangladesh (UPI) — Opposition groups blamed activists from President Hussain Mohammad Ershad's party Thursday for the gun, knife and bomb battles that killed as many as 103 people and injured 6,000 in the country's worst election violence. The government, breaking its silence on the mayhem that erupted in the nation of 104 million, said 80 people were killed and 476 injured during Wednesday's contests for thousands of rural councils. The casualty figure disputed reports from hospitals and local officials who said at least 103 people were killed and some 6,000 injured.

CIA officer aided spy effort on U.S. reporters

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A CIA officer helped an effort to spy on two American reporters in Costa Rica who had sued key figures in the Iran-Contra scandal, sworn testimony from a former agency employee showed. Glenn Robinette, a former longtime CIA employee testified in a public deposition of a private lawsuit Wednesday and Thursday that he asked the officer to set up a surveillance team in 1986 to search for derogatory information about reporters Martha Honey and Tony Avirgan.

L.A. earthquake makes 5.0 on Richter scale

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A strong aftershock to an earthquake that caused widespread damage last fall rattled residents from their sleep early Thursday, causing two dozen minor injuries and scattered property damage. The tremor shattered residential and storefront windows, cracked chimneys, and sent books and household items plummeting from shelves. It touched off at least two fires and triggered temporary power outages. Seismologists at Caltech in suburban Pasadena, five miles northwest of the epicenter, said the quake measured 5.0 on the Richter scale.

Former first ladies lobby for ERA passage

ATLANTA (UPI) — Former first ladies Rosalynn Carter and Lady Bird Johnson convened a symposium on women and the Constitution Thursday and called for renewed efforts to pass the Equal Rights Amendment. "I think it's very important that we pass the Equal Rights Amendment," Carter said. "I think we will do it some day. I want to go ahead and get it done now to protect the gains that women have made and to ensure that there will not be discrimination in the laws that are passed in the future."

Random drug tests found unconstitutional

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Random drug and alcohol testing of railway workers in a mandatory nationwide program was declared an unreasonable search in violation of the Constitution Thursday by a divided federal appeals court. To test blood, breath or urine of a railroad worker there must be a reasonable suspicion that a particular person is under the influence of drugs or alcohol, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in a 2-1 decision.

Delta Dental official says no claims overdue

By Curtis Winston
Staff Writer

There are no outstanding state employee dental insurance claims with Dental Plan of Illinois, Michael Buerger, vice president of government programs for Delta Dental, said.

Don Schlosser, director of the Illinois Bureau of Public Information, said there were "probably very few" outstanding claims with Delta Dental.

Schlosser said he had no way of telling if there were any SIU-C employees with outstanding claims, since the information bureau is a state wide agency.

Until June 30, 1987, Delta Dental handled dental insurance for all state employees, including SIU-C employees. The insurance was switched to EQUICOR, a division of Equitable Insurance Co., after dentists complained of slow Delta claim processing.

Buerger said Delta Dental only was liable for claims filed before June 30.

Schlosser said employees who filed claims before June 30 had six months to finish up their business.

"Very clear information was sent to employees that they should complete their business with Delta Dental before Dec. 31," Schlosser said.

William Capie, director of SIU-C personnel services, said that before Dec. 31 his office had inquiries from employees about Delta Dental's claim processing. He said he referred them to Central Management Services, the state's employee insurance management office, or to Delta.

As of Jan. 3, there were 607 outstanding claims, with 157 being processed by Delta Dental, Schlosser said. The remaining 450 claims had been sent back to the dentists because of incomplete information, he said.

"That was roughly six weeks ago. By now probably a vast number of them are resolved."

Enrollment ceiling an intelligent move

THE UNIVERSITY'S DECISION to limit the number of incoming freshmen to 3,500 for the fall 1988 semester is a responsible move.

The housing shortage — which placed many students in overcrowded, temporary quarters last fall — probably is the most obvious reason to have an enrollment cap. Limiting incoming freshman also would enable the University to plan housing strategies with more long-term accuracy.

The necessity of the 3,500 limit is easily understood when one considers the problems 3,400 freshman caused last fall. More personal space is bound to improve academic performances by otherwise cramped students.

TOO MANY FRESHMAN also contribute to overcrowding of general education classes. Sometimes the classes are so packed it is more like self-instruction than being taught. The professors don't even learn most of their students' names in these big classes. Classes like these simply are not worthwhile with that many people.

Academic performances could be helped by holding down the number of huge lectures. Practically anyone who has taken required general education courses knows how impersonal it is being packed into a stuffy lecture hall.

ARMY VETERANS IN this undesirable situation sometimes are overheard reminiscing about long trips to the rifle range in poorly ventilated "cattle cars." Claustrophobics go into catatonia. Students who studied too long the night before can nod off safely — because the professor can't see the back rows where such malfesant sleepheads tend to gather.

In addition, the University says it will target women, minorities — specifically blacks and Hispanics — and students who scored highly on placement tests. By concentrating on these groups, the University community will be broadened by an influx of bright students from diverse backgrounds.

With this action, the University can be more more selective on the quality as well as the quantity of incoming students.

Opinions from elsewhere

Tulsa (Okla.) Star

Religious broadcasters, stung by public criticism and declining money contributions, have agreed to create an ethics commission to oversee their behavior. The National Religious Broadcasters voted overwhelmingly to make compliance with a new financial and fund-raising code of ethics a requirement for membership in the group and use of its accreditation. That will be in effect an evangelical Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval.

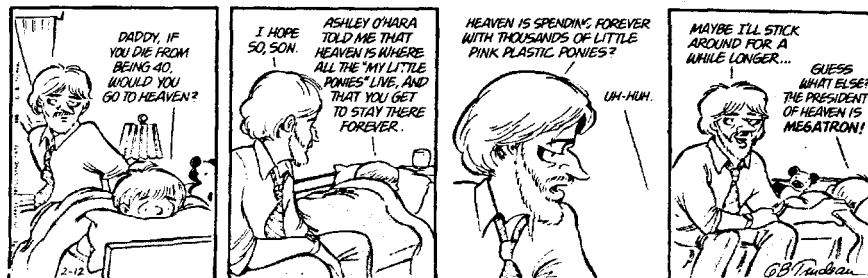

The broadcasters' action is an effort to combat crumbling credibility in the wake of the Jim Bakker-PIL scandals and other shenanigans by some of their TV brothers-of-the-cloth.

Does it strike anyone as odd that a group of preachers needs a new code of ethics and an enforcement commission to make its members operate ethically? Wasn't ethical behavior already covered somewhere else?

MAKING HEADLINE

Media have taken over primaries, and done a poor job with them

My, how embarrassing for George Bush. It was bad enough to get creamed in Iowa by his arch-rival, Bob Dole, but to finish behind Pat Robertson! The vice president of the United States — envoy to China, director of the CIA, ambassador to the United Nations, Conquering Lion of Rafter — losing to a Bible salesman who talks 'o hurricanes and changes the course of God. Wait, I think I've got that backward, but you get the idea. What will the fellows at the polo club say?

Can you imagine him walking into a debutante party this week and having an acquaintance greet him with: "I say, old man, why so glum? Don't tell me you didn't win those Iowa coconuts or whatever it is they call them?" "Caucuses. No, Bob Dole won them."

"Well what did you expect? They're a rough bunch out there; farms and all that. Dole is one of them. Second place isn't bad."

"Didn't finish second either. Pat Robertson did."

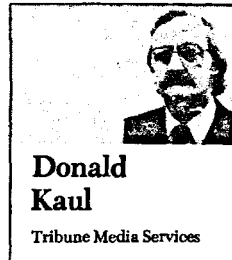

"What! Robertson? The fellow who talks to hurricanes?"

"Moves hurricanes. Talks to God."

"Oh dear, that is too bad. Have you thought of going back into the oil business?"

I suppose things aren't that bad yet. But unless George starts kicking a little pussycat in New Hampshire they will be soon.

All the bad things they said about the Iowa caucuses seem to have come true. Dick Gephardt's live-in campaign triumphed on the Democratic side and Pat Robertson humbled the vice president, even though Robertson didn't have as many people on his side. What he had, as it turned out, were people who showed that unexpected given the susceptibility of the caucus system to a candidate like the Reverend. In short, the sitting vice president of the United States should be able to absorb a loss in Iowa — and one in New Hampshire, for that matter — without getting knocked out of the race. These are small states. Let's hear what California, New York, Texas and Florida have to say before we go writing off vice presidents.

But that's not the way the game is played. The word has come down that Bush must win New Hampshire to remain a viable candidate — so he must.

I think it's just a matter of time before we get rid of the voters altogether. We'll just tell the people whom they would have chosen, had they had the chance.

The fact is that political reporting in this country has fallen victim to Super Bowl journalism. Rather than report on an event with a sense of proportion, we descend on it in droves and let hysteria take its course. The Iowa caucuses are perhaps the purest example of this. In the week before the caucuses, Paul Simon spoke to a luncheon meeting of 31 business people. There were 103 news people there.

There's something basically screwy about that. It would be different if things were turning out well in spite of it, but they're not. Our presidents over the past 20 years have been a sorry lot. Not since the era immediately preceding the Civil War have we seen such a collection of mediocrities and eight-balls lurch through the White House.

And if it keeps up, you'll be listening to a State of the Union address delivered in tongues. By a faith healer.

up for the war. It's hard to beat fanatic dedication with genteel commitment.

The press did its usual number on Iowa. Gephardt was considered a winner because he won, Sen. Paul Simon was considered a loser because he finished second, and Gov. Michael Dukakis was considered a winner because he finished third. On the Republican side, both Dole and Robertson were big winners with their first- and second-place finishes, but Bush was a big loser in third. Go figure it. The press is very hard on candidates who let it down.

As a card-carrying member of the news profession, it pains me to admit it, but the press has all but taken over our presidential nominating process. We have almost arrived at that Alice-in-Wonderland state where things mean exactly what we say they mean and nothing else. You can finish first, second or third in a race, but you won't know whether you've won or lost until we tell you.

There really is no rational reason for Bush to feel mortally wounded at his miserable showing in Iowa, where the Reagan years have been hard. The Robertson thing was embarrassing, true, but not Catherine Jensen, coordinator of the Dental Hygiene Program, checks work performed on Terry Joritz as Lana Jensen takes notes on her evaluation.

Wide open Hygienists push prevention

Students dressed in striped uniforms bustle around the reception and examining areas of the Dental Hygiene Clinic, cleaning teeth, taking X-rays and applying sealants to teeth.

They are not working in a dentist's office, but are fulfilling a class assignment for the Dental Hygiene Program, which specializes in preventive dentistry. The program requires students to work either eight or 12 hours a week at the clinic in the School of Technical Careers wing of the Technology Building, depending on whether they are a first- or second-year student.

"The students practice their skills, the same as a hygienist at a private practice would, except they are graded on everything they do," Catherine Jensen, coordinator of the Dental Hygiene Program, said.

The clinic has three hygienists and a dentist to supervise the students.

First-time patients at the clinic are screened and a complete health history is obtained. Vital signs, a complete head and neck exam and an examination of the hard and soft structures of the mouth are performed by students. The clinic staff determines the type of dental care needed.

Patients are taught the correct way to care for and prevent diseases of the mouth. Hard deposits are removed from the teeth, which are polished, and a fluoride treatment is given.

meeting that cut through nearly two years of Army resistance to the Wedtech proposal and eventually led the contract to be awarded to the New York firm.

During the trial, Meese testified he had no memory of the memo or any other discussions with Nozfiger on Wedtech — now the focus of state and federal probes into allegations of bribery and fraud. McKay is also investigating Meese's alleged involvement with Wedtech, but the emphasis on that probe has shifted to a billion-dollar Iraqi pipeline project.

One of the jurors interviewed outside federal court said the panel disregarded most of Meese's testimony since he had little recollection of the letter and instead relied on the contents of the memo.

Nozfiger's trial came on the heels of the December perjury conviction of another White House aide, Michael Deaver, who was found guilty of lying to Congress and a grand jury about his lobbying activities.

Nozfiger bristled at the notion the back-to-back convictions reflected poorly on the Reagan administration, saying "I don't think this affects the ethical standards of this administration. Frankly, I find of recent any implication that it does."

The White House refused to comment on the conviction of Reagan's former political director.

Nozfiger, who has played a pivotal role in Reagan's presidential campaigns, left the White House to open a consulting business with Bragg, a fellow Californian, who was found innocent by the same jury on one count of aiding and abetting Nozfiger with his Wedtech lobbying.

"Obviously, I'm very happy that this is over for me, but I'm pretty devastated by what has happened to my partner. He doesn't deserve this. He's a great man," Bragg said.

The count both Nozfiger and Bragg were found innocent of involved a May 28, 1982, note he allegedly sent to Meese's deputy, James Jenkins, seeking additional White House help with the Wedtech contract.

During the trial, the prosecution and the defense clashed over who actually signed the letter.

Some of the most important figures in Reagan's two-term presidency testified at the trial, including Meese, now attorney general, ex-presidential aide Ed Rollins and former budget director David Stockman.

Marine, Soviet meetings kept secret, says official

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department did not tell military investigators about more than 500 cases of possible involvement of Marine guards at U.S. embassies with Soviet espionage agents, Rep. Dan Mica, D-Fla., said Thursday.

The possible incidents occurred around the world during a 6 to 10 year period and were initially investigated by the embassy involved, Mica said.

The embassy reports were sent to security officers at the State Department for review, and, if they judged the matter deserved further investigation, it was passed on to the Defense Department's Naval Investigative Service.

Mica said a preliminary General Accounting Office study of the Naval Investigative Service handling of the reputed "sex-for-secrets" affair at the U.S. embassy in Moscow determined the State Department did not tell Pentagon investigators about more than 500 previous incidents in which Marine guards possibly were approached by agents of the Soviet secret police, the KGB.

will be brought to Jackson County for an arraignment. Hill said Johnson has a criminal record dating back to a 1975 arrest. Koozts and Johnson have served time at Menard Correctional Center in Chester for burglary, Hogan said. Both were released on parole from the House of Glass, 805 W. Freeman. Police are using report descriptions and examinations by victims at the police station to identify the recovered goods. Police later will release the goods to their owners. Hill said Koozts' and Johnson's first break-ins were concentrated on Carbondale's northwest side, where a majority of their victims were wealthy and elderly people. They later burgled in the Giant City area. They moved their activities to student residences on the southwest side during the semester break, Hill said. Hill said the two worked together and individually. They would ransack houses in search of valuables, often breaking and knocking down furniture, Hill said. "They would tear the joint apart," Hogan said. Hill said the men would pick houses with porch lights on. They would then check to see if lights or stereos were on within the house and knock on the front door. If no one answered the door, they would enter through a rear door, Hill said. He said victims returned to their homes in two cases while Koozts and Johnson were still present, but they escaped undetected both times.

students have had to quit school because they can't pay their bills," Vivian Millikan, an undergraduate student in University Studies said.

"It's not fair to make a 48-year-old independent student live under the same rules as an 18-year-old dependent student," she said.

The estimated student budget was drafted after the survey was sent last December to 1,258 students, approximately 10 percent of the University. Of the 446 students who returned the survey, 68 were graduate students and 125 lived in University residence halls. No international students were included in the survey since they do not receive the same financial aid, Camille said.

The survey asked students to estimate such costs as rent, utilities, food, telephone, laundry, entertainment, medical expenses, vehicle insurance, transportation, books and supplies.

The telephone expense drew questions from GPSC members. The budget listed it at $24.45 per month for both undergraduate and graduate students.

"That barely covers the base (monthly) rate," said Darrell Johnson, president of the GPSC.

Camille said many good suggestions came out of the meeting, and will be taken into consideration when the survey is revised for future use.

Brooks to recite her work

Gwendolyn Brooks, Pulitzer Prize-winning poet and Poet Laureate of Illinois, will read from her works at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday at the Humanities Center Theater at John A. Logan College.

Brooks first attracted national attention in 1950 when she received the Pulitzer Prize for her second volume of poems, "Annie Allen."

She was named Poet Laureate of Illinois in 1968 following the death of the previous Illinois laureate, Carl Sandburg.

Marion inmates lose civil suit

BENTON (UPI) — A U.S. District Court jury has denied a civil suit claim for damages by two Marion Federal Penitentiary inmates who alleged they were beaten by guards at the prison eight years ago.

The jury of three women and three men who heard the civil suit deliberated 17 minutes.

Defense attorney Jan Susler said the decision may be appealed.

Mexican officials aren't worried, good will is expected from U.S.

MAZATLAN, Mexico (UPI) — Mexican officials said they are going into a summit with President Reagan Saturday with little expectation of dramatic agreements, but free of worry their northern neighbor will press them with angry demands.

"The press and the public always want accords to be reached at such summits, but at this type of high-level meeting, especially between two countries that have so many ties, accords are not so important," said a top Mexican official, who requested anonymity.

A White House official said Reagan will confront Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid about the level of Soviet presence in his nation and Mexico's growing drug problems.

Reagan is to fly from Los Angeles to the Pacific resort of Mazatlan, 550 miles northwest of Mexico City, for his sixth meeting with his Mexican counterpart, a reunion scheduled to last less than five hours.

De la Madrid leaves office Dec. 1, and Reagan the following Jan. 20.

"We're concerned at the level of Soviet presence because we have reason to believe the target is us," a White House official said Wednesday, adding that Soviet espionage on the U.S.-Mexican border "has long been of concern to us."

Foreign policy and Mexico's expanding drug problem will be the focus of the meeting, the official said.

He said the United States is withholding certification, due at the end of the month, for whether Mexico is making a sufficient effort to combat drugs. A lack of certification could mean that the United States would have to vote against International Monetary Fund loans for Mexico.

Mexican officials this week downplayed such issues, saying past tensions and strong U.S. criticism over violence against Drug Enforcement Administration agents in Mexico are water under the bridge.

"There will probably be an interchange of ideas on drugs ... but only how to have better cooperation," the Mexican official said, indicating he expected U.S. officials would make no demands.

"The climate is very good, very positive. The tensions of 1985 and 1986 have been overcome," a top Mexican official said this week.

The reference was to the angry tone of relations following the 1985 killing of DEA agent Enrique Camarena — allegedly by drug traffickers and paid police allies — and the alleged beating the next year of another DEA agent by Mexican police. The Mexican government said an investigation turned up no evidence that a beating occurred.

The Mexican official said the two main concerns of the Mexican side at the Saturday summit will be commercial trade ties, especially growing signs of protectionism in Congress and Mexico's $108 billion foreign debt.

He said that Central America probably will be "off the agenda."

CIA defy secrecy pledge ban

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The CIA is still requiring some employees in 21 federal agencies to sign a controversial secrecy pledge despite a law enacted last December barring use of the form, a court document obtained Thursday shows.

Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, chairman of the House Government Operations Committee and an architect of the law signed by President Reagan on Dec. 22, said the CIA "is flouting the law."

"We cannot tolerate such arrogant abuse of our legal system and Constitution," Brooks told United Press International.

Reagan approved a nine-month congressional freeze on use of fiscal 1988 funds "to implement" two secrecy pledges, Standard Forms 189 and 4133, while Congress reviews these programs. The forms, which affect millions of employees, are aimed at halting leaks of information. UPI revealed last month that the Air Force and Navy also defied the new law by requiring thousands of military and civilian employees to sign one of the forms.

The secrecy pledges forbid release of classified and "classifiable" information. Critics have charged the vagueness of the term "classifiable" has a chilling effect on the flow to Congress of legally releasable information about administration problems.

Workshop on agrarian reform set

By Edward Rahe
Staff Writer

Agrarian reform and peasant transformation in El Salvador will be the topic of a workshop March 4 and 5 sponsored by Ecumenical Program for Interamerican Communication & Action to be held at the Church of the Good Shepherd in Carbondale.

A historical overview of the U.S. role in Central America from 1850 to 1950, and Societal Analysis of El Salvador Peasant Reality, will be two of the topics discussed.

Philip Wheaton, a member of the program, will be one of the featured speakers.

The program is a Washington D.C.-based, non-profit organization that focuses on socio-economic problems, and political struggles in Central America and the Caribbean.

"Central America is one of those places with a major distribution of land," says Georgeann Hartzog of the Southern Illinois Latin American Solidarity Committee. SILASC is sponsoring the workshop.

Peasants are in debt or malnourished because the prevalent sharecropping system does not allow for the production of food crops for domestic use. Rather, peasants are forced to produce export products such as cotton, coffee, sugar cane and bananas, Hartzog said.

"Eighty-five percent of the land in El Salvador is used to grow exports," said Hartzog. Agrarian programs are needed to buy idle land, redistribute it to peasants, and gear other land to the production of food crops for domestic consumption, she said.

"We hope that some people will get an in-depth understanding of what's happening in Central America so they can become more effectively involved in changing U.S. policy towards Central America," Hartzog said.

Understanding the issues of Salvadoran land reform will help Americans understand the present condition of the agrarian economy in the United States, she added.

Illinois gas prices hit lowest level in a year

CHICAGO (UPI) — Self-serve gasoline prices in Illinois and northern Indiana are at the lowest level in nearly a year, but industry analysts predict the downward trend will end soon, the AAA-Chicago Motor Club said Thursday.

The average price of leaded, unleaded regular and unleaded premium gasoline at both full- and self-serve pumps declined 2 cents per gallon in the past month, down 8 cents compared with August 1987, the motor club said.

Wholesale prices have been rising since late December.

Local band says community support is lacking

By Richard Nunez
Entertainment Editor

Lucky Mary Blonde may have an album and a recording contract, but members of the Carbondale rock 'n' roll band say they receive no support from the local community.

"Supportwise, this town is a joke," Todd Baxter, guitarist for the group, said. "The music scene is great and the talent is good. In fact, it's really flourishing."

"But the support we get comes from other bands," bassist Jerry Tilk said. He added that the supportive bands from Carbondale include October's Child and The Modern Day Saints.

"When you play at a bar, you'll see other local bands there," Baxter said. "It's a real supportive effort. We all realize we're in the same boat."

Baxter and Tilk claim that the local radio stations do not support local music enough and that some do not even attempt to help the local music scene.

"WTAO has their 'freedom' rock and WCIL is Top 40," Baxter said. "Our only alternative is WIDB, but the programmers there want to maintain a professional format."

"Some of the DJs (at WIDB) want to cover local music, but it's still pretty weak," Tilk said.

Despite its claims about the lack of support, Lucky Mary Blonde has been able to record and release a 7-song album "Let the Moonlight Burn," which they co-produced with Steve Lamberson, who has worked with groups such as R.E.M., Jason and the Scorchers and Heart.

Lucky Mary Blonde will perform at its album release party 9:30 p.m. Sunday at Gatsbys.

Both Baxter and Tilk said they are satisfied with the album and that it fulfilled all their expectations.

Baxter said they went to the recording studio with a prepared songbook and suggestions for fancy vocal lines and extended guitar riffs, but that Lamberson took control over the recording and convinced the band members to abandon a lot of their original ideas.

"Steve took over. He really knew what he was doing," Tilk said. "A lot of our stuff was simplified."

"We wanted to sound interesting, but not too intricate that we couldn't perform it on stage," Baxter said. "We didn't want people to have to think too hard about our music and say 'What are they doing there?'"

"The album is like a story," Tilk said. "Every song has a sub-theme."

Baxter said the sub-theme is about a young man who goes

West to follow his dreams, does his best to fulfill them, but doubts whether it was worth the effort in the end. "The first line of the first song begins 'To the West he rode with all his dreams' and the last songs ends with 'Why bother?'" Baxter said.

Guitarist overwhelms crowd with style, skill

By Curtis Winston
Staff Writer

A single amplifier, one guitar and one man with ten fingers gave a performance that outshone groups with elaborate settings and tons of equipment.

Jazz guitarist Stanley Jordan didn't need to run and jump around the stage amid a blazing laser show to please the near-capacity crowd.

He had all the fire and live action in his fingers and his music, which was enough for the Shryock Auditorium audience to call him back for two encores.

With his "touch technique" — a pianistic approach to guitar playing — Jordan didn't need a rhythm guitarist, bassist or drummer. Using both hands on the guitar neck, he tapped the strings with his fingers, making him sound like an entire jazz-rock combo.

A single spotlight's beam reflected off Jordan's glossy varnished woodgrain guitar onto the auditorium walls and, sometimes, into the eyes of the audience. This unintentional effect was the closest he came to having a light show.

Jordan took such well known songs as Lennon and McCartney's "Eleanor Rigby" and Richard Rodgers' "My Favorite Things" and musically dissected them, leaving just a faint hint of the familiar melodies and chord progressions.

Working from the bare roots of the songs, Jordan put on a dazzling display of his technique, which combined the best of music theory, jazz improvisation and sheer virtuosity.

In his 90-minute set, Jordan played about 12 songs, and many seemed strangely familiar. However, his treatment of them made one forget what songs they were and what artists originally performed them.

A man of few words, he announced only two of his songs: the jazz classic, "Willow Weep For Me" and Thad Jones' "A Child Is Born." He didn't announce his one original tune, the delicate ballad "All The Children," which appeared on "Magic Touch," his first major label album.

The one song that stayed the most recognizable was Led Zeppelin's epic, "Stairway to Heaven," which was performed as an encore. Since "Stairway to Heaven" is fairly complex in its original form, Jordan didn't need to give it much dressing up.

With a six-string guitar and minimal effects, Jordan put on a quality show Wednesday evening, without the benefit of high-tech gimmicks.

Spray-painted Brits center of living art exhibit

NEW YORK (UPI) — The newest wrinkle in art: spray-painted people hanging on a wall for six hours, letting every Tom, Dick and Harriet touch them, talk to them and lecture on they don't hear or feel.

Such an exhibit featured three rust, light blue, and charcoal gray Britons suspended by special harnesses last week at the New Museum of Contemporary Art in SoHo.

Never talking or changing their poker faces, they chewed gum, ate sandwiches washed down with Young's Ramrod Special Ale from Britain.

They ate apples and dropped the cores. They threw lunch wrappings and leavings to the floor. No one cleared the trash.

"That's part of the living art," an observer was told.

New Yorkers, famous for thinking they have seen everything, learned they hadn't.

The New Museum, a place that gets some money from the National Endowment for the Arts, was raised to instant celebrity status as a result of the "living painting" hanging around for 10 days. It ends Sunday night.

Questions for the cast, suspended 4 feet off the floor in simulated frames, ran to the practical, including "How do you go to the bathroom?"

Answers came during interviews when they got off the wall. They are not allowed to talk during the show.

Steven Taylor Woodrow created "The Living Paintings" (charcoal gray), James Mello (light blue) and Dale Deveaux Barker (rust).

Fundraising chairwoman offers challenge to faculty

"Students Help Mother's March" started its second phase Thursday with a challenge to faculty and staff members to contribute $50 in honor of the March of Dimes' 50th anniversary.

Libby Pettit, chairwoman of this year's drive, offered the challenge.

Carol Kimmel, a member of the SIU Board of Trustees, met the challenge when she presented a check to Pettit at the Board of Trustees meeting. Kimmel is a member of the March of Dimes' national board.

This year's drive began with the students march on Jan. 30. About 230 University students collected more than $2,000 from the Carbondale community.

Hours, Sunday mail collections cut by Carbondale post offices

By Dana DeBeaumont
Staff Writer

Carbondale's post offices will open later beginning Saturday, and Sunday mail collections will be eliminated, Gene Childers, director of customer service for Southern Illinois post offices, said.

The window service at the main post office, 1301 E. Main, will open a half hour later than usual. Its new hours are 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to noon on Saturday. The Western Mail station hours are 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday thru Friday. It is closed on Saturday.

Childers said he visited the 33 offices where hours are being cut and he tried to let each postmaster decide which hours to cut.

"I tried to cut the hours that would have the least effect on people and their town," he said. "Each office has different cuts."

In Carbondale, the post offices are busiest from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 4 to 5:30 p.m., Childers said.

"I realize that many people who work in Carbondale live outside of town," he said. "There's a pretty big crowd because people stop by here on their way out of town."

The service cutbacks are part of a nationwide effort by the Postal Service to absorb the loss of $430 million caused by the Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987, which is supposed to help reduce the federal budget deficit.

The legislation makes the Postal Service responsible for paying employees' health care and retirement benefits. The law also prohibits the postal service from absorbing the costs by using existing funds, borrowing money or raising rates.

Mail deposited in collection boxes on Sunday won't be picked up until Monday, Childers said.

"This means if you have a letter that must reach a community with a 620, 622, 628, 629, 630, 631, 633, 637, 638, 420, 476 or 477 zip code prefix on Monday, you must deposit it in a collection box no later than the last pickup scheduled on Saturday," he said. "Mail deposited on Sunday will not reach any of these destinations until Thursday."

"So don't pay your bills at the last minute because it won't have that Sunday postmark," Childers said.

Mail delivery will continue, as usual, from Monday through Saturday and both lobbies will be open 24 hours a day so customers can purchase stamps from machines and have access to post office boxes, Childers said.

No employees will be laid-off, but part-time workers' hours eventually will be cut, Childers said. Only the first-class office's services will be reduced because the smaller offices have had their hours reduced for some time.

Mr. Jack Daniels Original Silver Cornet Band will perform at Shryock Saturday.

Jack Daniels brass band to play

By Dena Schulte
Staff Writer

Put on your dancing shoes and reminisce about the good old days — Jack Daniels is coming to town.

Featuring music from the turn of the century, Mr. Jack Daniels Original Silver Cornet Band will perform at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Shryock Auditorium as part of their 19th U.S. tour.

About 800 tickets remain for the concert. Students can purchase tickets at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at Shryock for $5.

This Tennessee brass band specializes in recreating music of the small town band of 1892.

Those bands disbanded after about 20 years to develop new forms of music entertainment.

In 1973, musician-historian Dave Fulmer reestablished the Original Silver Cornet Band with the help of the Jack Daniel's Distillery in Lynchburg, Tenn.

Getting the band back together meant importing hand-made silver cornets from France and searching antique collections for a bass horn and old sheet music.

Saturday's Hometown Homecoming Concert will include popular and patriotic music.

Real-life happenings depicted in movie 'She's Having A Baby'

By Phyllis Coon
Staff Writer

"She's Having A Baby" is about one man's realization that he can be happy with the restraints of a yuppie suburban family life.

The movie spans six years of a couple's married life. They endure the neighborhood block parties and Christmas parties, but Jake Briggs, played by Kevin Bacon, is not sure he wants to conform to the conversations about lawn mowers and water hoses.

In one of the movie's best scenes, Briggs' daydreams about his neighbors cheerfully dancing with lawn mower partners, while their wives dance out of their houses carrying lemonade. The scene shows Briggs' reluctance to accept the suburban responsibility of the chore.

Bacon successfully portrays the frustrations of indecision with commitments to his wife, and the humiliation and stress of being unable to get his wife pregnant.

He later achieves getting his wife pregnant and during her pregnancy decides the suburban life is what he wants. But a perfect life turns to distress when Briggs has to face the fear of losing both his wife and child during delivery.

The movie is full of humorous events like a neighbor scorching his dog with hot water pumped through a cheap plastic water hose and a scene in which Briggs pretends not to be interested in sex to seduce his wife, played by Elizabeth McGovern.

No arrests in death of Ina family

MOUNT VERNON (UPI) — A rural Ina woman and her two children found dead in their mobile home Nov. 18 apparently were bludgeoned with an aluminum baseball bat found in a bedroom where the bodies were discovered, Jefferson County Coroner Richard Garretson said.

Garretson made the observation after a Wednesday night inquest at which a coroner's jury deliberated about 30 minutes before ruling that Ruby Elaine Dardeen, 30, her son, Peter, 3, and prematurely born daughter, 7-month-old Casey Elaine, were murdered by a person or persons unknown.

The body of Russell Keith Dardeen, 29, the husband and father, was found a day later, near the northern border of Franklin County in a field south of Rend Lake College by hunters. He suffered multiple gunshot wounds, including one to the head.

White House announces steps to prevent private aid to Contras

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House announced steps Thursday to avoid another scandal over aid to the Nicaraguan Contras as President Reagan readied another vow of solidarity with rebels he once called "the moral equivalent of the founding fathers."

Following last week's House rejection of more aid to the Contras, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said administration officials have been told to not "provide assistance or encouragement of any kind" to any private aid efforts.

The warning came as Reagan prepared to reassure conservative hard-liners of his support for the Contras and other anti-communist "freedom-fighters" around the world in a speech to the Conservative Political Action Conference.

Over the last few years, the conference has given Reagan a forum to celebrate his achievements and defend such causes as the Contras and his "Star Wars" anti-missile program before cheering members of his core constituency.

During a similar appearance before the CPAC dinner two years ago, Reagan appealed for a pending $14 million aid request for the Contras by praising the rebels as "our brothers."

"They are the moral equivalent of the founding fathers and the brave men and women of the French Revolution," he asserted. "We cannot turn away from them."

In an interview with network anchors, Reagan said some conservatives opposed the treaty because they believed simply that nuclear war is inevitable. In the ensuing outcry from the far right, Howard Phillips, head of the Conservative Caucus, branded Reagan a "useful idiot" for Soviet propaganda.

ADL: LaRouche active in Latin America

PALM BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — The Lyndon LaRouche network has spread to Latin America where it is representing itself as a mainstream political organization, the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith said Thursday.

The organization, in a report entitled "The LaRouche Network in Latin America," said the group has been active in several countries, including Argentina, Brazil, Colombia, Mexico, Peru and Venezuela.

The report was released following the ADL's National Executive Committee meeting Feb. 11-13.

Burton S. Levinson, national chairman of the ADL, said recent allegations linking the LaRouche organization to Panamanian leader Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega point up the extent of LaRouche's way of "making himself useful to those in power."

The report said LaRouche's most important incursion into the region is with the Partido Laboral, the Latin American arm of the International Caucus of Labor Committees, of which LaRouche is chairman. The report said LaRouche himself has been received by President Raul Alfonsin of Argentina and by Jose Lopez Portillo when he was president of Mexico.

The ADL said the LaRouche organization believes that Jews, the International Monetary Fund, major banks, crime syndicates and Soviet, British and Israeli intelligence agencies are part of an international drug trade directed by the queen of England.

Campaign funding to make, break candidates

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, favored to win the New Hampshire primary, will roar into the South with a fat wallet but Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., and Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., are already strapped for cash, aides and federal reports show.

A fourth challenger for the Democratic presidential nomination, Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee, saved a bundle by skipping Iowa and plans to outspend any other candidate for the 20 mostly Southern Super Tuesday primaries March.

Jesse Jackson, who expects to do best in the South, appears to have a small surplus but he has never relied as heavily as other candidates on big money and costly media campaigns.

Iowa and New Hampshire have relatively low spending caps for the candidates, but the Super Tuesday states will put severe strains on campaign war chests, with huge

"You won't see Paul Simon on paid media as much as my opponents. But paid media isn't necessarily going to do the trick."

—Paul Simon

amounts needed for television, travel and organizations.

On the Republican side, Vice President George Bush and Senate Republican leader Robert Dole have money, but Pat Robertson, who has sizable debts, is hurting — unless his surprise second-place finish in Iowa leads to a new and large infusion of cash.

Most of the candidates got a quick fix Wednesday when the Federal Elections Commission released more federal matching funds, but Simon, who acknowledged he is short of money, received nothing.

"There is a money problem in my campaign," he conceded before heading for a New York fund-raiser Wednesday night.

"You won't see Paul Simon on paid media as much as my opponents," he said. "But paid media isn't necessarily going to do the trick."

Simon has raised $6.2 million, including federal matching funds, through Feb. 8, but even as early as the end of last year he was more than $1 million in the hole.

Press aide David Carle said the money response to Simon's second-place finish in Iowa has been "encouraging" and added, "Our funding situation is spartan but adequate. We're showing in New Hampshire you don't have to be fat to be sassy."

In New Hampshire, Simon spokesman Terry Michael said the campaign was now about $500,000 in debt but $140,000 was raised at a New York event Wednesday. Michael said the campaign staffs' Feb. 5 paychecks also had been deferred for at least two weeks.

Gephardt, who put everything he had into Iowa, has seen new money flowing in since his victory in Monday's caucuses, and press spokesman Pat Brookover described the scene at headquarters as "frantic."

"We were called in by the finance committee to help with the processing," Brookover said. "There's a good influx of checks."

"We're not Dukakis, by any means," he said.

Still, Gephardt was about $500,000 in debt at year's end and probably went deeper in the hole with his closing television blitz in Iowa. The shortfall has prevented him from putting much seed money into the South.

Dukakis, by contrast, has $2.1 million in the bank and picked up another $410,977 from the FEC Wednesday, almost four times more than any other Democrat.

Dukakis spokesman Mark Guaran declined to go into specifics for the South because the budget is still being put together. But he did say, "We'll have enough money to compete."

Gore, like Dukakis, is debt-free and on Dec. 31 had more than $2 million in the bank.

Unlike the others, Gore spent little in Iowa and has put only about $225,000 into New Hampshire. Deputy press secretary Paul Risely said, "Ignoring the Iowa caucuses has been a tremendous advantage for Gore. There have been tremendous buys by other candidates there."

Risely said Gore will spend about $2.5 million for radio and television in the South.

My 'message' won, Jackson says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Presidential candidate Jesse Jackson contended Thursday that his rival Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., who won in the Iowa caucuses, had adopted his views on the economy, and he asserted, "My message won in Iowa."

Jackson, who placed fourth in the Iowa Democratic presidential caucuses Monday, also said during an interview on the CBS "This Morning" program that he expects to win the New Hampshire primary next Tuesday.

"My message won in Iowa," said Jackson, adding that Gephardt "adopted my message, and I'm flattered by it." His message was, said Jackson, that: "Multinational corporations must stop taking jobs out of our country ... Taiwan, South Korea are not taking jobs from us. GE (General Electric) and GM (General Motors) are taking jobs from them."

"The real message is multinationals must pay, stop taking jobs out of our country, pay their share of taxes and reinvest in America," he said.

Abetting the corporations, said Jackson, are "government incentives" for them to merge "without very much accountability," which results in layoffs.

Jackson called his fourth-place finish in Iowa a "significant victory" in light of the size of his war chest compared with the money spent by Gephardt, Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois and Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis.

Jackson credited his showing in the race to the help of "4,000 new voters, (including) truck drivers, Teamsters, family farmers, merchantile workers, seniors and high school youths," whom he said he brought into his Rainbow Coalition.

"Indeed we do call it a Rainbow Coalition," said Jackson.

Kemp seeks limelight from Robertson surge

GOFFSTOWN, N.H. (UPI) — Republican presidential hopeful Jack Kemp reached over the aisle of Sully's Supperette to meet clerk Annette Weir. Their hands clasped directly over a newspaper headline that told part of the story for the GOP.

"Robertson in Spotlight," screamed The Union Leader, the conservative statewide daily that sets the tone for the Republican right.

Only days before, the Republican House member from upstate New York was on the move in New Hampshire and seemed the only candidate able to challenge Vice President George Bush and Senate Republican leader Robert Dole in the Granite State's Feb. 16 primary.

Polls showed Kemp and Dole nearly even and gaining on the front-running Bush. Kemp's strategists flatly said they needed to finish second in New Hampshire.

But then came Iowa, with a convincing Dole win and the shocking second-place finish of former television evangelist Pat Robertson. Suddenly, the New Hampshire race became a do-or-die effort for Bush and Robertson gained immediate credibility.

Kemp, who ended up fourth in Iowa, seemed lost in the shuffle and Robertson's performance followed him around the snowy countryside.

from the Corner Curly-Q Unisex Hair Salon in Goffstown to a mock GOP convention at a Monticook high school.

"I can't help but be confused," said barber Henry Hunter, 69, who talked to Kemp about Social Security while trimming a customer. "I don't know too much about Robertson, except what I'm beginning now to hear, but I know he's a family man, though."

At a news conference in the high school's guidance office, Kemp denied that Robertson will sap his conservative strength in New Hampshire.

"I don't think he can," he said. "I take a back seat to no one, including Pat, in profamily, strength-through-peace ideas."

"We've got as much conservative support, or more, than any candidate in this race," he said.

Kemp acknowledged Robertson had brought "new people into the Republican Party" through grass-roots organization.

"But so have I, and always have," Kemp argued. "I don't know to what extent he (Robertson) is doing it in New Hampshire."

"Is he hurting me in New Hampshire? The answer is no," Kemp said.

Bush fighting for lead in N. Hampshire race

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — Vice President George Bush, fighting signs that his New Hampshire lead is slipping, pushed his campaign around the state Thursday and denied next week's first-in-the-nation primary was a "last stand" for his White House hopes.

His aides, meanwhile, stopped talking about Bush as the solid favorite and tried to play down expectations for how he will do in the Feb. 16 primary.

On the Democratic side of the fray, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, the overwhelming favorite in the New Hampshire race, largely avoided attacks on his competitors, but Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri and Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois continued their increasingly bitter war of words.

Simon, who polls show is now likely running third in New Hampshire, began a new series of television and radio ads that attacked Gephardt and charged he had flip-fopped his positions to in his presidential campaign.

"There has been a lack of consistency and I think that has been very clear," Simon said of Gephardt after a speech at Dartmouth College in Hanover.

"I'm disappointed in Paul Simon," countered Gephardt. "This is not the Paul Simon I know. He's my friend. I like him. I think he's taking bad advice from consultants."

Several new polls showed that among Republicans, the lead Bush had held in the Granite State was being narrowed by Senate GOP leader Robert Dole, who won Monday's Iowa caucuses. Bush's third-place finish in Iowa, behind former television evangelist Pat Robertson, wounded his campaign and made his New Hampshire effort crucial.

"The bump is a bump," Bush spokesman Peter Teeley said of Dole's momentum coming from Iowa. "We're going to have to fight Dole. Essentially, it's a dead heat."

Laundered drug money funneled to Contras

Informant: Drug cartel paid Noriega

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A convicted money launderer with ties to Panamanian leader Manuel Noriega told Congress Thursday he funneled drug money to the Nicaraguan Contras through the same corporation that got official U.S. aid for the rebels.

Ramon Milian Rodriguez, testifying in the fourth day of Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee hearings on Noriega's activities, gave detailed descriptions of his business practices and lifestyle as the top money man for the powerful Medellin drug cartel in Colombia.

Rodriguez said he headed an organization for the cartel that transported $200 million in drug money a month between 1979 and 1982 across the southern U.S. border and made payments of $10 million a month to Noriega to provide protection and intelligence, among other services, to further his business.

Part of that intelligence was the comings and goings of U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agents.

He said the cartel knew the identities of every DEA agent in Colombia and often "toyed" with them, letting them know their identities had been revealed.

Referring to the so-called U.S. war on drugs, Sen. Alfonse D'Amato, D-N.Y.,

said, "If it weren't so serious, it would be laughable."

He said the United States has "betrayed our own agents ... and put them at risk by dealing with scum like Noriega."

Rodriguez described in 3-and-a-half hours of testimony how he ran a money-transporting network using private planes, commercial airliners and armored cars, paying off local U.S. authorities and heads of foreign governments to grease the way for an operation so profitable he kept $2 to 3 million in spending money on hand.

Rodriguez also testified that once the money he took across the border had been laundered in Panama and other countries — by passing it through several accounts to cloud its origin — it was deposited in major U.S. banks, including Citicorp, Bank of America and First National Bank of Boston.

He claimed the banks were fully aware the money came from global drug running. "It would be fair to say American banks courted my business."

AMA editor asked about story

CHICAGO (UPI) — The editor who published a doctor's unsigned and unverified admission of mercy killing in the Journal of the American Medical Association met with the AMA's Board of Trustees Thursday to explain his actions.

The essay, "It's over, Debbie," published in the Jan. 8 journal, has created a firestorm of controversy in and out of the medical community, sparking debate both about the doctor's actions and the journal's decision to publish it without independently verifying its accuracy.

State and federal authorities reportedly are investigating the incident to determine whether laws were broken, while some doctors and the AMA's own legal counsel have suggested the article may be a hoax.

Journal Editor Dr. George Lundberg met with the AMA's Board of Trustees to discuss basic procedural issues related to the journal, an AMA spokesman said. Other sources at the AMA said the mercy killing essay had created conflicts within the organization, with other editors at the journal second-guessing Lundberg's decision to publish.

"There was a great deal of debate about whether it would be a good idea to publish this," Lundberg acknowledged earlier. "In the end, the staff was evenly divided, and so I made the personal decision to publish it."

In the essay, a gynecology resident described being called in the middle of the night to tend to a 20-year-old woman dying of ovarian cancer. The woman was in intense pain, had not eaten or slept in two days, weighed 80 pounds, and had been vomiting relentlessly. "Let's get this over with," the doctor quoted her as saying.

The doctor then described injecting the woman with 20 mg of morphine and watching as she fell asleep, her breathing slowed, and she died.

"It's over, Debbie," the article ends.

Gag order maintained

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Florida's highest court Thursday upheld a lower court order limiting media coverage of the inmate-torture trials of two former jailers, ruling that the right to a fair trial is more important than the public's right to know.

The state Supreme Court upheld Circuit Judge Robert McCrary Jr.'s decision to prohibit the pretrial release of certain documents in the case of Dale Sims and Gordon Hartley and to prohibit the prosecutor, the sheriff's department and court employees from discussing the case with the media.

"There is no First Amendment right of access to pretrial discovery material," the court said. It said a state law granting that right "must be balanced against the constitutional rights of a fair trial and due process."

Journalist blasts story of rape suspect arrest

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (UPI) — A Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist has testified that The Battle Creek Enquirer acted irresponsibly when it published an article reporting the arrest of a rape suspect who later was cleared.

Clark Mollenhoff, former reporter for the Des Moines Register who now teaches journalism at Washington and Lee University in Virginia, told a Calhoun County Circuit Court jury Wednesday the newspaper's editors displayed a "lack of competence" in handling the story about David J. Rouch.

Rouch's libel suit against the newspaper is the first in Michigan under a December 1986 state Supreme Court ruling which held that Rouch, as a private citizen, must prove only that the article was untrue and the newspaper acted negligently by printing it.

In the state Supreme Court case, the Enquirer had argued unsuccessfully that because violent crime is a subject of public concern it cannot be held liable unless it knowingly, recklessly or maliciously printed false information.

In 1979, Rouch was taken into custody by police on suspicion of raping his stepchildren's babysitter at his ex-wife's house. He never was charged by the prosecutor or arraigned, but the newspaper did not report that he had been cleared and another man charged until almost a year later.

Rouch is seeking $1 million as compensation for emotional distress and damage to his reputation.

In his testimony, Mollenhoff contended that the newspaper should have waited 24 to 48 hours to print a story so Rouch could be interviewed or arraigned in court.

"There was no pressing need" for the public to know immediately of the knife-point rape or arrest, he said.

Under cross-examination by a lawyer for the newspaper, Mollenhoff conceded that, as a police reporter in Des Moines, he had written about arrests before suspects were arraigned and had relied on information from police officers.

'Racially motivated' threat keeps Cincinnati coach from St. Louis

CINCINNATI (UPI) — University of Cincinnati basketball coach Tony Yates said the death threat he received that kept him from coaching a game in St. Louis was racially motivated.

Yates missed Wednesday night's 90-73 loss to St. Louis but said he intends to resume coaching Saturday at Virginia Tech. Yates remained in his hotel room after a telephone caller threatened to kill Yates in St. Louis.

"There were racial overtones," Yates, who is black, said of the phone call his secretary received Tuesday afternoon in Cincinnati.

"He (the caller) used real derogatory language and indicated he was going to kill me. And he said, 'in St. Louis.' I took it seriously. After considering everything, I decided not to do it (coach)," he said.

Yates said the call was different from a death threat he received in December 1983 following a controversial game in which Cincinnati stalled in a 24-11 loss to Kentucky.

Yates said the 1983 caller was "raving," while Tuesday's caller "appeared a little more calm and calculated about how he said things."

Yates said the call could have been prompted by bad publicity from Cincinnati's poor season. The Bearcats are 8-11 and Yates, in his fifth season, has coached more losses (82) than any other coach in the school's history.

"I think some of it (reason for the call) is attributable to some of the things that have been written and said," Yates said. "That creates some of the negative things within our society. It's too bad those things take place, but they do."

Third baseman Pendleton joins Cardinals for a year

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The St. Louis Cardinals signed third baseman Terry Pendleton to a one-year contract Thursday.

Pendleton, who had 96 RBI and won a Gold Glove to help the Cardinals win the National League pennant last year, had filed for arbitration. His contract is worth about $660,000 plus incentives. He was asking for $795,000 in arbitration and the Cardinals offered $550,000. Pendleton's 1987 salary was $210,000.

Pendleton played in 159 games in each of the last two seasons to lead the club both years. He had his best season in 1987, batting .286 with 12 homers and 20 stolen bases. His career average is .264 over four seasons.

White Sox pitcher sent to Padres

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago White Sox have sent left-handed relief pitcher Joel McKeon to the San Diego Padres as the player-to-be-traded-later in the Oct. 5, 1987, trade that brought right-handed reliever Ed Wojna to Chicago, the team announced Thursday.

McKeon, an 1982 White Sox draft choice, divided his 1987 season between the White Sox and their Triple-A affiliate.

Chicago Cubs' deal to get the 'Goose' still in works

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — A trade that would swap San Diego Padres pitcher Rich "Goose" Gossage and Chicago Cubs slugger Keith Moreland is still in the works and apparently hinges on salary discussions between Gossage and the Cubs.

"We really don't have any comment," Padres spokesman Bill Beck said Thursday. "We have been talking to them, but we have been talking since December.

"We don't have a deal yet," he said.

The proposed deal would send Gossage and minor league pitcher Ray Hayward to Chicago in exchange for Moreland and minor league infielder Mike Brumley. The trade would add needed punch to the anemic San Diego batting order and give the Cubs a right-handed bullpen stopper to replace the traded Lee Smith.

The bottleneck appeared Thursday to be a difference of opinion over Gossage's salary in 1988, the option year of his contract with the Padres. Gossage has a no-trade clause in his contract.

"Right now it doesn't look like the deal is going to get done unless Gossage comes way down on his demands," a source told the Chicago Sun-Times. "The Cubs feel he has pushed them way too far."

After opening ceremonies, focus will be U.S. hockey

By Martin Lader
UPI Sports Writer

CALGARY, Alberta — The U.S. hockey team, still burdened by the legacy of 1980, will serve as the centerpiece of attention for an entire nation Saturday when it helps inaugurate the Winter Olympics.

The Americans, coming off a rigorous six-month, 60-game exhibition schedule, face off against Austria at the Olympic Saddledome three hours after the completion of the opening ceremonies, and will be the only U.S. athletes in action that day. Despite a 37-18-5 tour record, the team is rated only an outside chance at a medal.

OPTIMISM, THOUGH, runs high and the potential is present for a strong showing if luck flows in the right direction.

"We're shooting for the gold," said 19-year-old defenseman Brian Leetch, who had 13 goals and 61 assists in 50 games during the tour and is considered to be the team's outstanding player. "We have a realistic chance of getting to the medal round, and after that it's up for grabs," he said.

Added left wing Kevin Stevens of Halifax, Mass., a 22-goal scorer in 44 games, "This is what we've worked for since Aug. 7. Everyone is glad to get started, and we can't wait for Saturday night. Our team is ready," he said.

The United States has beaten Austria in both previous Olympic meetings and has a 5-8-1 record in Olympic openers.

COMPARISONS ARE inevitable with the 1980 American team that produced one of the great Olympic upsets by capturing the gold medal at Lake Placid. According to Mike Eruzione, who scored the history-making winning goal in a 4-3 victory over the Soviet Union, the current squad has just as good a chance to succeed.

"No one knew how good we were until we won, now let's see what these guys can do," Eruzione said. He will be covering hockey as a commentator for ABC-TV.

"When it's over, then we'll know," Eruzione said. "Offensively, their defense is better than ours was, but I don't know if their defense is as good defensively. We didn't have a Leech, but they don't have a Morrow (defenseman Ken Morrow, who played on four Stanley Cup champion teams with the New York Islanders)."

ERUZIONE SAID he hopes this year's squad can avoid the trauma suffered by the 1984 Olympic squad, which fell to seventh place.

"I'm sure some of that had to do with what happened in 1980, and if that's the case we take full responsibility," he said jokingly. "We've got another good bunch of kids this time, and their dreams are the same as ours was. They know they're under a microscope, that people are watching them and expecting good things.

"This is the most open Olympics I've seen. I think anyone can win this one, except France," Eruzione said. "I believe this team can do well and win a medal. After what we did in 1980, anything can happen."

ABC: Show doesn't depend on Americans

By United Press International

ABC, criticized by some in 1984 for a jingoistic approach to its coverage of the Summer Olympics, isn't counting on a gold medal harvest to guarantee high ratings for its coverage of the 1988 Calgary Winter Olympics.

Jeff Mason, coordinating producer for the network that begins coverage of the games Saturday afternoon, admits ABC would love to have some unexpected American success in the Olympics.

"But we're realistic," he said. "There are just some things that Americans aren't going to be as good at but we're still going to cover it with the same intensity and dedication. We're going to let the events dictate how we cover things. We want to do well but we're not looking at it as being essential for our telecast to be successful. Look at what we did with the Super Bowl. It was a blowout but we had excellent coverage."

ABC paid $309 million — a record — for the rights to the Winter Olympics.

"I'll give you two scenarios. One would be a rather unexciting opening ceremonies, Americans finishing below 40th in Alpine skiing and the U.S. getting blown out in its first hockey match. The other would be a great opening ceremonies, a surprise in the Alpine skiing, possibly an American medal and a great hockey success," Mason said. "Of course, we want the second. But there's no way to predict that."

Seoul official making plans to protect socialist athletes

CALGARY, Alberta (UPI) — Several athletes from the Soviet Union and China may be asked to arrive at the Summer Olympics early to reduce the risk of terrorist acts by North Korea, according to Park Seh-Jik, president of the Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee.

Park, speaking Thursday at an informal breakfast, said the presence of North Korea's super-power allies might serve as a deterrent to any planned acts of terrorism.

"The socialist countries could have an influence. Some could come for advance training," Park said. "It is definitely worth considering."

Park's remarks followed Wednesday's statement by South Korea's ambassador to Canada, Roh Jae-Won, accusing the North of trying to disrupt the Olympics.

The Ambassador was referring to the Nov. 29 explosion of a South Korean airliner near the Burma border that killed all 115 people aboard and the bomb incident at Seoul's Gimpo International Airport less than a week before the 1986 Asian Games.

A North Korean woman was implicated in the Nov. 29 incident and Park said the bombing could have been avoided.

"The socialist countries could have an influence. Some could come for advance training. It is definitely worth considering."

—Park Seh-Jik

"The investigating agency findings was like a movie drama," he said. "In fact they are considering making a film of it. The incident could have been prevented if the airport officials had been more aggressive and alert. Innocent people were sacrificed."

North Korea is one of six nations which has said it will not participate in Seoul. It said it would only do so if it acted as co-host and has a greater share of the 23 sports.

Negotiations have been deadlocked since the last tripartite meeting in June, 1987, when the International Olympic Committee offered North Korea archery, table tennis, a men's road cycle race, women's volleyball and one of the four soccer preliminary groups.

Tennis team back to Indiana

By Jeff Grieser
Staff Writer

Men's tennis coach Dick LeFevre says he's not too concerned about his team's current losing streak. He says when the weather warms up, so will his players.

"We're playing some really good teams," LeFevre said. "Our kids have given it all they have and I'm pleased with the way they've played."

The Salukis have lost four straight dual matches after beating Northern Illinois in the season opener. The team will take on the Purdue Boilermakers today in West Lafayette, Ind.

This is the third weekend in a row the team has gone to Indiana. On Saturday SIU-C will play Ohio State in Columbus, Ohio.

Mickey Maule, who is undefeated in singles play at 5-0, has taken over the No. 2 slot in the Saluki lineup, LeFevre said.

Junior Jairo Aldana, No. 1 singles, is 1-4. "I never play as well indoors," he said. "I have played some good people."

However, Aldana will have to make the best of it. The Salukis will not have an outdoor match until March 13, when the team heads south for its spring trip.

Saluki Invitational starts tonight at Rec Center pool

By Steven Welsh
Staff Writer

The swim teams will face Big Eight and Southeastern Conference teams this weekend as the men host the Saluki Invitational while the women take on Vanderbilt and Iowa State at the Rec Center pool.

The 17th-ranked men's team will face Auburn, Drury, Iowa State, Missouri, Western Illinois and Western Kentucky in the 20th Saluki Invitational. Finals will be at 6 tonight. Preliminaries will be at 10 a.m. and finals at 6 p.m. Saturday, with Sunday's preliminaries at 9 a.m. and finals at 4 p.m.

The women are out to improve their 5-7 record at Saturday's 2 p.m. meet.

Coach Doug Ingram expects

Auburn, Iowa State and Vanderbilt to be the Salukis' toughest competition.

"These Big Eight and SEC teams come from very strong conferences," Ingram said. "We're expecting some tough competition for both the men's and women's teams."

The teams also will honor their seniors. Kevin Nagy and Scott Rowe will be honored before Sunday's finals, and Lori Rea, Karen McIntyre, Celia Gales, Suelia Miller, Jackie Taijaaro, Iris von Jouanne and Amy Witherite will be honored before the women's meet Saturday.

"These athletes are the heart and soul of our program," Ingram said. "They deserve recognition for all they've done for Saluki athletics. We're hoping to get a good crowd."

Wild Dogs going to St. Louis Arena

By Jeff Grieser
Staff Writer

The Wild Dogs hockey club will take a break from league play Feb. 18 to take on Washington University at the St. Louis Arena.

The game will begin at 4:45 p.m. The St. Louis Blues will play the Los Angeles Kings in an NHL contest after the SIU-C game. One ticket is good for both games, Scott Boehm, Wild Dogs team captain, said.

The Dogs defeated the Evansville Horizons 6-5 on Tuesday. Player-coach Kevin Quinn had two goals and John Lavieri added three.

The team has won six straight, but team members say the last two victories have not been impressive.

"The defense broke down," goalie Darren Kohlenberger said. "They had three break aways on me and they scored on every one of them."

Men gymnasts open home season against Iowa State

Tom Glielmi

By Stephanie Wood
Staff Writer

The men's gymnastics team will open its home season at 7:30 tonight against Iowa State at the Arena.

The meet is the season opener for Iowa State in dual competition while SIU-C stands at 1-3.

The team, coming off an outstanding performance against Northern Illinois, is favored to win the meet, Coach Bill Meade said. "I think we have better people," he said.

Competing at home can't "do anything but help the kids because they are relaxed and can compete on equipment they're used to," Meade said.

Senior Tom Glielmi, specialist in the floor exercise and vault, will have a challenge in the floor exercise, Meade said. Iowa State's Ted Haynes has a season-best score of 9.75. Glielmi scored 9.80 Saturday at Western Michigan.

Glielmi, still recovering from a muscle strain incurred during Saturday's meet, may not be performing at full capacity.

"As mature as he (Glielmi) is, he knows pretty much what he can do," Meade said. "We won't know until he gets out there."

All-arounders Marcus Mulholland, Brent Reed and

Greg Zeiders all have a chance of placing first in the pommel horse and parallel bars. Meade looks for either Reed or Scott Belanger to win the horizontal bar.

The team looks to improve its overall score from 271.40 to 273. "There were a number of places we could have improved (at Northern Illinois)," Meade said.

Iowa State's highest team score was 260.3 at the Oklahoma Invitational.

Women to forgo 3,200 relay, ready for individual events

By Stephanie Wood
Staff Writer

The women's track team will not run its record-breaking 3,200-meter relay team Saturday at the Golden Shoe Invitational in Madison, Wis.

"We are not running the 4 X 800 so we can keep everybody fresher for their individual events," Coach Don DeNoon said. "If we run the relay early, we won't see their real capabilities because they're already tired."

The meet, hosted by Wisconsin also will feature Purdue, Minnesota, Memphis State and conference foes

Illinois State and Western Illinois.

"We're going to see Purdue for the third time in four meets," DeNoon said. "I have no doubt they're going to be the dominant team."

The Salukis will add a new dimension to their team with the return of middle distance runner Rosanne Vincent. Vincent has been out the entire indoor season because of an injury.

DeNoon said he expects good performances from Dora Kyriacou, Christina Philippou, Vivian Sinou, Lisa Judiscak and Carmen Robbins.

"Dora has a shot at winning the 200-meter dash and also the 400-meter dash," he said.

Sinou and Judiscak will be tested in the 3,000-meter and 5,000-meter by the "two premier distance schools in country in Minnesota and Wisconsin," DeNoon said.

Hurdler Felicia Veal "definitely has a shot at winning that (55-meter hurdles)," he said.

Michelle Sciano is still recovering from a muscle strain.

Men's track faces Indiana State

By Stephanie Wood
Staff Writer

The men's track team will face conference leader Indiana State Saturday in Charleston.

"Indiana State is ranked above us in the conference," Coach Bill Cornell said. "It (the meet) will give us a good look at them."

Southwest Missouri and host Eastern Illinois also will compete.

"All three have well-balanced teams," Cornell said.

Cornell will run his athletes in events that will help them prepare for the Missouri Valley Conference meet.

"We're not putting people where they can score points because the main purpose is preparing for the conference."

Andy Pettigrew, indoor all-American in the mile, will run the 3,000-meter on Saturday. In the conference meet he may run the mile, 3,000-meter and the 3,200-meter relay, Cornell said.

Seniors Ron Harrer and Bret Garrett are looking to qualify for the national championships March 11-12. Harrer, an outdoor all-American in the discus, is trying to qualify in the 35-pound weight.

Garrett, who just missed qualifying in the 800-meter run at Missouri last Saturday, is only 00.26 seconds away from the qualifying standard 1:50.50. Cornell expects him to qualify soon.

Top triple jumper Leonard Vance, injured at Missouri, probably will not compete, Cornell said.

"He (Vance) has a commitment with the Air Force this weekend," Cornell said.

Wichita State up next for Saluki women

In 1984, Wichita State women's basketball team played the spoiler's role admirably. The Shockers upset SIU-C 76-63 and denied the Salukis a share of the Gateway Conference season championship.

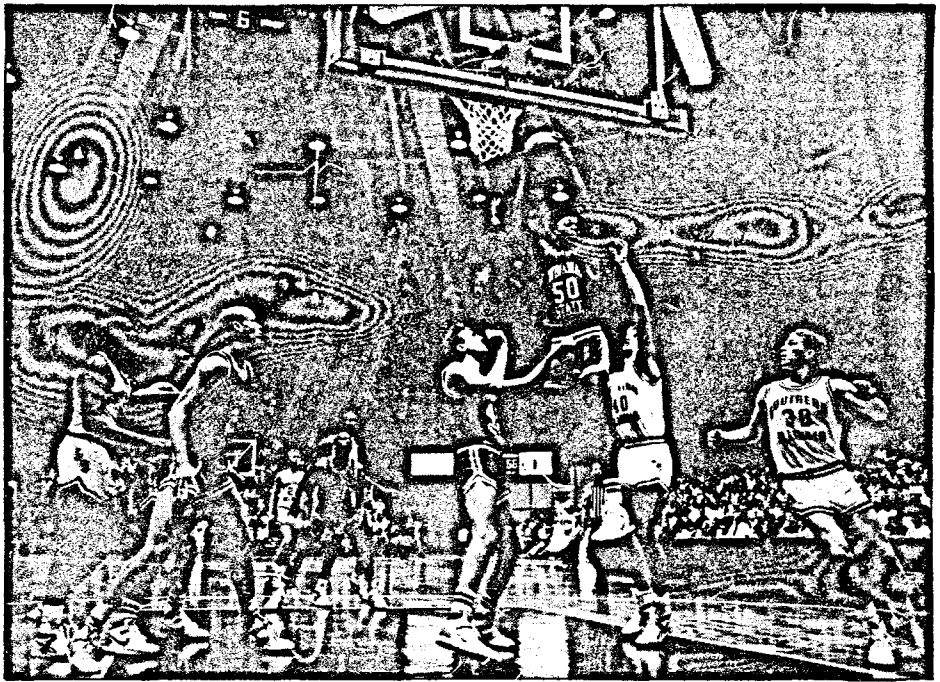

With the two-time defending Gateway champion Salukis again in the thick of the conference race, Wichita State is prepared to renew the performance of four years ago.

The Salukis play host to Wichita State at 5:30 p.m. Saturday at the Arena. Eastern Illinois beat Wichita State 65-64 Thursday night.

"Each game looms very important," Coach Cindy Scott said. "The key thing to remember is anyone is capable of beating anyone on a given night."

"Right now, Wichita State is playing with a lot of pride. They seem to be playing loose, while we are playing tight. They are capable of beating us," she said.

Senior Dawn Weber leads Wichita State at 17.8 points per game and 7.3 rebounds per game. Senior Crystal Westfield, who had 13 points and 13 rebounds in the 57-48 loss to SIU-C on Jan. 15, averages 15.9 ppg. Sophomore Lori Findahl is at 9.0 ppg.

conference leaders, the players will have to contain forwards Hill (13.4 points per game, 4.2 rebounds per game), Steve Grayer (13.3 ppg, 5.7 rpg) and center Sasha Radunovich (14.4 ppg, 7.1 rpg). In the first game against the Salukis, the threesome combined to score 51 points and grab 20 rebounds.

The Salukis were able to control Wichita State's guard tandem of Joe Griffin (6.6 ppg, 3.0 rpg) and Dwight Praylow (9.6 ppg, 2.8 rpg). Griffin was scoreless and Praylow had six points. Griffin averages 6.7 assists per game and holds Wichita State's all-time single game assist record with 16.

Praylow's brother, Dwayne (7.6 ppg, 4.0 rpg), plays at forward.

Against Wichita State, Steve Middleton score 32 points and Kai Nurnberger had 18. Randy House had 15 points, with 13 coming in the first half.

"House is a player who plays in streaks," Herrin said. "He's been that way all his life. He just gets on a roll. When he's going right, he's a nice player. Other times, he struggles. That's the key to every basketball player. You have to try to have consistency."

The Salukis will need another good effort from Tim Richardson. In the first game against Wichita State, Richardson held his own against Radunovich, who Herrin has called the "best big man" in the conference. Richardson grabbed 10 rebounds and had eight points.

"Tim Richardson needs to rebound anytime we go," Herrin said. "He's played pretty good in the last couple of games."

U of I football on probation

CHAMPAIGN (UPI) — The University of Illinois football program Thursday was placed on probation until July 1, 1989, for violating NCAA recruiting regulations, school officials said.

The NCAA announced Illinois would be prevented from participating in a 1988 bowl game, then said it will withdraw that sanction because the school took "decisive action concerning its head football coach for violations that occurred during his tenure."

Former Coach Mike White resigned on Jan. 18 when the allegations came to light. He was replaced Feb. 3 by former Kansas City Chiefs Coach John Mackovic.

The violations also set the clock on the NCAA's so-called "death penalty." Any further NCAA rules violations within the next five years could lead to the suspension of football at the university.

"My reaction to their findings is quite positive," Interim Chancellor Morton Weir said. "They were very fair and I think now we can look ahead instead of looking behind us."

The football program was accused of a handful of relatively minor recruiting infractions. But the coaching staff also was accused of the more serious violations of paying for a recruit's hotel room and visiting a potential player when it was not legal to do so. The new wave of violations occurred while the Illinois already were serving an NCAA probation for similar misdeeds. The earlier violations came before the NCAA's death penalty was in effect.

The NCAA's ruling also calls for Illinois to submit to the association two audits of the football program during the new probationary period.

Morale-shattering dispute hits Olympic hockey team

CALGARY, Alberta (UPI) — A new controversy rocked the U.S. Olympic team Thursday just as another morale-shattering dispute was resolved.

David Cruikshank, the 1,000-meter speedskating champion at the U.S. Olympic Trials, was awakened Thursday by coach Mike Crowe and told he had lost his starting spot to Tom Cushman, the sixth-place finisher.

Women's team rolls over Southwest Missouri, 68-48

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

The women's basketball team, which has had trouble getting on track this season, caught the B.B. Express and steamrolled Southwest Missouri 68-48 Thursday at the Arena.

Bridgett Bonds, a 5-foot-11 senior forward, took charge of the Salukis' offense by hitting seven of nine field goals on the way to a game-high 17-point performance. She also had seven rebounds, six steals and four assists.

"I was pleased with Bridgett," Coach Cindy Scott said. "It was her most intense effort of the season. She's been under the gun and she responded like a trooper."

Bonds was open on cuts across the lane, scoring the first six points of the game. When she took a breather five minutes into the game, she already had eight points, making four of five shots.

"I tried to have fun tonight," Bonds said. "I was told to have fun, to let loose. Now I can handle the pressure."

The Salukis' offense kicked into gear midway through the second half. Deanna Kibelkis, a reserve forward, completed a 10-2 run with a fast break layup at 8:46 that put the Salukis ahead 54-36.

"When SIU became confident in the second half, it was hard to deny them anything," Southwest Missouri coach Cheryl Burnett said.

Kibelkis, who finished with 17 points and six rebounds, converted a Bonds assist to put the Salukis in front for good, 60-40, with six minutes remaining.

"I wanted to find time for Kibelkis and (Amy) Rakers and they responded well," Scott said. "When Kibelkis is in the lineup we are much quicker, it's a different look. We know what she can do. If she continues to play with control, she may find herself in the starting lineup."

Southwest Missouri, 7-14 overall, 4-9 in the Gateway, was led by Kimberly Scoggin with 15 points.

The Salukis (15-7, 11-3) led 29-22 at half-time.

Salukis hope to rebound against Wichita State

By Dave Miller
Staff Writer

The Salukis should stop meeting Wichita State like this.

The two teams will play each other for the second time in six days at 7:35 Saturday night at the Arena.

"We played good at Wichita," Coach Rich Herrin said. "We're not going to change a great deal. There's not much you can change at this time of the year. I won't say that we won't add a little bit but we won't add very much."

On Monday, the Salukis lost 89-87 when Wichita State's Lew Hill hit two free throws with three seconds left.

Wichita State won the game at the free-throw line. The Shockers outshot the Salukis 31-15.

"We probably fouled too much and they got by with some fouls that weren't called," Herrin said.

The Salukis will try to take advantage of Wichita State being out of their home environment. At Levitt Arena, the Shockers are 12-1 but are only 2-6 on the road.

Going into Thursday night's game at Indiana State, Wichita State, 14-7 overall and 7-2 in the Valley, is holding off Bradley for first place. Bradley has a 5-2 conference mark and plays Creighton on Saturday.

Meanwhile, the Salukis, 8-13 overall and 3-5 in the Valley, are trying to rise above seventh place. Drake is fifth at 4-4 and Tulsa is sixth at 3-5. Herrin says he hopes Saturday's game will be the last time the Salukis play the Shockers this season.

"We don't want to finish seventh or eighth because that would mean we would play Wichita or Bradley in the opening round," he said. "We would rather play somebody else."

If the Salukis want to upset the

Hubbard's excellent court

vision and basketball knowledge allows her to create plays on offense. "She has the potential to be a leader because she understands the game so well," Southwest Missouri coach Cheryl Burnett said.

"Rhonda has the capability of creating our ball club. When she pushes the ball down the floor, we get emotionally motivated," Burnett added.

Hubbard's height was never really a factor until she reached the collegiate level, she said. She sees her height as a way of reaching the younger kids.

"I like people to look up to me," she said. "I like to be a role model and present the image of what it means to be a Lady Bear."
