Ag Building Damage Costs Estimated at $11,500

Cost of repair and replacement resulting from bomb damage May 7, to the west wing of the Agriculture Building totalled $11,500, Anthony Blass, physical plant director, said Friday. It took 1,134 man-hours of work to put the wing back in service five days after the incident.

Blass said the actual cost was much less than early estimates because investigation found no basic structural damage. Replacement was made from locally available materials and the Physical Plant craftsmen displayed a dedication to rushing the job.

"Our people were disturbed that a building in which they had a maintenance interest would be damaged in such a senseless manner," Blass said. "They took it as a personal matter and pushed themselves to make repairs."

Blass said the University Architect's office approved use of available materials to make the repairs which, coupled with the absence of structural failure, kept the cost well below the $50,000 to $100,000 figures of earlier estimates.

Following the early morning blast, which affected a long corridor, class, office and laboratory rooms, investigators found parts of a timing device, battery, and wire. The crime has not been solved.

No Need to Fear

Sun, Cancer Ties Remote, Cancer Official Declares

By Don Mueller

Despite some persons' fears to the contrary, there's little chance of developing skin cancer from sunbathing, according to local official of the American Cancer Society.

"Unless you live outdoors for 99 years, the chances of your getting skin cancer from being out in the sunlight are slight," according to Dr. Wilson R. Scott, vice-chairman of the Jackson County Unit of the American Cancer Society.

Farmers, sailors and others

Gus Bode

Gus says he's been here so long he can remember when anybody could keep a motorcycle, and a foot-bridge across the highway was an absolute certainty.

who spend a great deal of time in the sunlight have greater possibility of getting the skin disease than the weekend sun bather, he said.

"Average exposure to sun in southern Illinois" will not adversely affect the local sun worshipper, according to Scott.

The American Cancer Society reports an estimated 105,000 new cases of skin cancer will be reported in 1968, though fatalities are not expected to rise above 5,000.

Dr. Scott said skin cancer is one of the easiest cancers to treat and cure if caught in time, which helps to keep the fatality toll down.

Surgery and X-rays are the two best methods for treating this type of cancer.

Scott said about 100-150 persons in the southern Illinois area are treated for the disease each year, although the number of "neglected cases," those which have not been attended to over a 5-10 year span, are far fewer now than in the past.

He estimated that no more than five persons in the southern Illinois area die from skin cancer each year while the fatalities numbered 25-30 about 10 years ago.

"Education by the American Cancer Society has been one of the main factors in lowering the fatality count," he said.

More people have become aware of the danger signals and have taken steps to correct the problems, Scott said.

Two important signals to look for in detecting the possibility of cancer are a change in the size or color of a wart or mole and a sore that does not heal.

Scott said suntan lotions and oils "have no bearing on skin cancer."

He suggested that anyone really concerned about possible adverse effects from sunlight may wear "an old sun-bonnet or a big-brimmed straw hat."

S. Viets Tighten Reins on Critics

SAIGON (AP)—South Vietnam's government clamped down on its domestic critics Friday, warning it will bring to trial anyone deviating from the regime's complete opposition to compromise with the Viet Cong.

An announcement said the warning is necessary now because "a number of organizations have recently issued communiques appealing for peace in a rather vague way, sowing confusion among the population."

In his toughest move since he took office last month, Premier Tran Van Huong said in a statement that an immediate court martial and a sentence at hard labor awaits those who directly or indirectly espouse pro-Communist or neutralist causes.

In Vietnam, pro-Communism and neutralism cover a wide ground and often are interpreted by the government to mean almost any opposition to its policies. Both are specifically outlawed by the country's year-old constitution.

The government stand on how to bring peace is complete military victory, no recognition of the Viet Cong's National Liberation Front—NLF—and no coalition.

Some newspapers have suggested there will have to be eventual talks with the NLF: a Roman Catholic group has called for the release of political prisoners, and Buddhist groups have called for an end to the fighting—all in the past few weeks. A student group in Saigon also criticized the government's new general mobilization law, calling it a plot to eliminate political opposition.

The government warning comes about a week after President Nguyen Van Thieu urged political parties of all shades, including those opposed to the government, to strengthen themselves for the fight against the Viet Cong.

Essay Contest Announced

Crisis Solution to Win Grant

A nation-wide contest has been launched at Bradley University Peoria, Ill., for the best "rational, feasible solution to the racial problem in America."

Bradley student Jack B. Olesker proposed and organized the essay contest on the topic "How and Why America Must Get Herself Together." Olesker urges: "But let no one person lose sight of the fact that words alone cannot solve our problem."

A four-year tuition scholarship at Bradley University will be offered the winner of the contest. Essays will be judged in September and one preliminary winner will be chosen from each of the four sections of the country.

The contest and scholarship offer have been approved by Bradley University President Talman Van Arsdale. Arsdale said Olesker has secured for the judging of the four finalists Sen. Everett Dirksen, former-Gov. Otto Kerner and Sen. Edwin Brooke, among others. Entries may be addressed to Bradley University in care of the "Bradley Scout" newspaper.

Repair for Shryock Delayed Few Weeks

Start of a major remodeling project at Shryock Auditorium may be delayed up to six weeks because no general construction bids were received at a call here Thursday.

SIU architects had hoped to get the project underway in July so that the refurbished auditorium would be ready for convocations, concerts and musical productions by fall, 1969. No events or classes have been scheduled there during the next school year.

Carl Bretscher of the SIU architect's office said the general construction contract will be readvertised for bids soon. Bids received Thursday for other work such as electrical and plumbing facilities will be held for action until after the second general construction call date.

Apparent low base bids on other work totaled $573,733 and alternate proposals on a number of additional items, ranging from special controls to a fire alarm system, totaled another $188,999.

Apparent low base bidders were:

Electrical—Cunningham Electric Co., Anna, $247,000
Plumbing—John J. Calnan Co., Chicago, $70,800

Heating, Piping, refrigeration, etc.—John J. Calnan Co., Chicago, $130,533

Ventilating—Fowler Plumbing and Heating, Centralia, $125,400

Student Assessed

On Check Charge

Pamela A. Floyd, 20, from Champaign, pleaded guilty Thursday to deceptive practices for bad checks before Judge C.E. Wright in Jackson County Circuit Court.

Miss Floyd, who listed her local address as 504 S. Rawlings, was fined $100 plus $15 court costs, was ordered to make full restitution for the checks, and was placed on probation for one year.

These four youths claim their big whittling project is the first Jewish totem pole in the world. They put it up at SIU's Outdoor Laboratory to celebrate Israel's 20th anniversary. Hebrew Totem

Totem 'Schtick' Created

To the guy who said nothing is new under the sun: Are you ready for this?...A Jewish totem pole. A big schtick! It's standing in the sunshine at SIU's Outdoor Laboratory and it has been created by four Jewish boys as a tribute to the 20th anniversary of Israel. They claim proudly that it is the first Jewish totem pole in the world.

The idea for it started with Ida Stack, activities director for Camp Ben Frankel, a summer program at the Outdoor Laboratory sponsored by the Jewish Federation of Southern Illinois.

When Mrs. Stack suggested an arts-crafts project for the tribute to Israel, four boys took one look at a traditional Indian totem pole at their camp, yelled "kadeemah!"

and took off for the wood pile. The result of their work on an eight-foot ash log might be called Hebrew out of Chinook. Instead of eagles, turtles and other tribal symbols, the Ben Frankel totems include the Star of David, the word "Israel" in carved Hebrew script, and a crowning sun with a drawing of the seven-branched candelabrum (menorah) that is lighted on the sabbath.

Physical Therapy Important

The Illinois Board of Higher Education should act quickly and favorably in reviewing SIU's proposed two-year training program for physical therapy assistants.

To react slowly or indecisively in reviewing the program, approved recently by SIU's Board of Trustees, would indicate a lack of awareness of the 3,000 vacancies for physical therapists in the state hospitals. But the Board of Higher Education must be aware of the need. In 1965, the Illinois state legislature approved a $235,000 grant to the Board of Higher Education for studying the needs for programs and personnel in the health fields—dentistry, pharmacy, medicine and nursing. And, in October, 1967, Dr. Lyman A. Glenn, executive director of the higher education board, called the investigation proceedings "one of the largest and most important studies which the board has undertaken."

If the members of the board are as sincere about the study as Dr. Glenn seems to be, they should approve SIU's program for training physical therapy assistants. And they should do it now. Southern Illinois University has the will to undertake the project of training qualified physical therapy personnel. The Illinois Board of Higher Education must grant the way.

Khe Sanh Abandoned

"Hold Ke Sanh at all costs," the Marines were told, and they did. Three hundred died, and another 2,000 were wounded, but they held Khe Sanh for 77 days—in the face of overwhelming enemy forces; under hour-by-hour threat of annihilation; under incessant, punishing artillery fire—until they were finally relieved.

Now Khe Sanh is abandoned as a "new concept of mobile warfare" goes into effect—a concept that does not require an outpost at that precise point in the northwest corner of South Vietnam. And the parents of 300 dead Marines and 2,000 other Marines who stopped bullets or were torn by shell fragments in those 77 interminable days may well ask: Why?

There is no adequate answer, there never is. The "logic" of war requires its premises to be taken on faith, and the premises dissolve as the action surges to and fro.

Khe Sanh will now move into history books, to take its place among other spots of land and hills with numbers for names, and island specks known only for their cost in blood.

Iwo Jima was one of these. It was a nothing of a far Pacific island, home for a few hundred Japanese fishermen and sulphur miners and sugar workers. Suddenly in 1945 it became important enough that 5,000 young Americans lives were deemed a fair price for its possession, and the transaction was made. On Wednesday of this week, in an amiable ceremony between two friendly nations, the island was handed back to its former owner.

The sacrifices of Khe Sanh and Iwo Jima cannot be called futile without calling civilization itself a lost cause. Each life was spent in the hope that it would form a part of a bridge that mankind would cross into an era of peace and brotherhood. As long as the hope remains, the sacrifices retain validity.

Inspection Law Needed

The state of Illinois should adopt a motor vehicle inspection law which would authorize police to stop any vehicle which appears unsafe.

Fourteen states now require periodic inspection of motor vehicles, but Illinois does not. "Rules of the Road" merely states that, "Illinois law prohibits the driving...of any vehicle which is in such unsafe condition as to endanger any person or property." It then states that it is the owner's responsibility to maintain his automobile in safe mechanical condition. Many people do, of course, for their own safety; those who do not regard their own safety should not be allowed to disregard the safety of others.

Traffic accidents in the United States killed over 52,000 people in 1967, and two million more were injured. One out of every ten Illinois' drivers was in a reported accident. Traffic safety experts feel that most of these accidents could be avoided if drivers learned and followed safety rules, showed proper respect for others, and maintained their cars in safe condition.

Illinois has a program of driver education and a system by which automobiles could be checked for proper mechanical condition could be implemented. The police could be authorized to hold any car which had not been inspected and send it immediately to an inspection center.

If the car did not pass inspection, the owner could be given a period of time in which to effect repairs, or the license plates could be revoked.

In this manner the state would be taking a big step toward making highways and streets safer for the ever increasing numbers of citizens who use them.

Our Man Hoppe

What Elders Do to Tweeners

By Arthur Hoppe

Once upon a time in the country called Wondertuland, The Elders faced a grave problem: What to do with the Tweeners.

Now everybody in Wondertuland had something to do — everybody but the Tweeners. The children went to school and learned mostly useful things and the grown-ups went to work and did mostly useful things. And being mostly-usefully busy, they were mostly-usefully happy.

But the Tweeners were too old to be children and too young to be grown-ups. And far too smart-alecky to have around the house. "There's only one solution," said the eldest Elder gravely. "As soon as they're too old to be children, we must put them away in an institution until they're old enough to be grown-ups."

The other Elders recoiled in horror. "Let's think of something else," said one with a shudder. So they thought. And thought. And thought.

"Perhaps, if it were a nice institution," said a kindly Elder tentatively, "with lots of grass and trees..."

"...and games for them to play," said another brightly.

"...and cars and beer and dances," said a third enthusiastically.

"...and if it had an impressive name," said a fourth. "I know! Let's call it College."

So the Elders built an institution, called it College and put the Tweeners away there until they could grow up.

Of course, they didn't tell the Tweeners that. They told them, "You must widen your horizons, assimilate ideas and prepare for life."

To widen horizons, instill ideas and prepare them for life, the Elders staffed the College with old men called "Scholars," who weren't good for much else.

Naturally, the Scholars, being Scholars, were more interested in Scholarship than in talking to Tweeners. But twice or thrice a week they dutifully tore themselves away from their Scholarship to talk for 50 minutes about what they were interested in the Tweeners. Like, The Sex Life of the Angiosperm. Or, The Use of the Dipthong in Etruscan Funeral Orations.

As an incentive to assimilating ideas, the Tweeners were given letters. They got big letters to wear on their sweaters for playing games well. And little tiny letters, ranging from A to F, for studying what the Scholars were interested in.

"After four years, they were certified 'prepared for life' and released from the institution.

Everybody was happy. The Tweeners were happy playing games, drinking beer, dancing and accumulating letters. And The Elders were happy to have them out of the house.

Then one day a Tweener looked thoughtfully around and said, "But what's all this got to do with anything?" And the other Tweeners said, somewhat surprised, that they were hanged if they knew. And pretty soon the Tweeners were demonstrating from dawn to dusk, raising a terrible fuss.

"But we've given you grass and trees and games and dances and beer and letters," said the Elders, rather plaintively. "What is it you want?"

"Frankly, we're darned if we know," admitted a Tweener Leader, scratching his head. "But whatever it is, this isn't it."

Moral: College is a wonderful institution—for those who want to grow up in an institution.

His Specialty: 'Poor Boys'

35 Years in Same Area

By Wanda Barras

"What'll you have, Colonel?" asked the short, stocky old man behind the counter.

"Give me a poor boy," came the reply from the student. W.W. Trobaugh, 88, of Carbondale, placed a cellophane-wrapped sandwich in an electric warmer in the corner of his store and set the dial for three minutes.

"Anybody else want to order?" he asked.

A barrage of responses came from the long line of students extending out the door and down the sagging foot-wear steps.

"Five poor boys, a ham and a cheeseburger," the gray-haired man counted.

"I want a poor boy," somebody shouted.

"Six poor boys, then, and a ham and a cheeseburger."

Like any respectable shopkeeper of 30 years ago, Trobaugh has his shirt sleeves held taut below his elbows with sleeve bands.

The bespectacled shopkeeper scooped up the sandwiches, showed them into the warmers and set the dial.

Trobaugh has been selling sandwiches for nine years and doing business of one kind or another in the area north of University Center for over 35 years.

Moving to Carbondale in 1924 from a farm north of town, Trobaugh formerly lived in a house on a vacant lot across from his tiny store. The University bought it and removed it.

His first business venture was pumping gasoline and selling automobile accessories.

In 1947 he added a grocery business and moved into a larger building close by the pumps. He gave up the pumps in 1950, and in 1951 the University tore down his store and replaced it with a barracks.

Trobaugh said he hadn't changed his store very much since he first went into business, but the University sure has changed.

"I can remember when there were just two buildings, Old Main and Altgeld."

The buzzer on the sandwich warmer sang out. Trobaugh pulled out a poor boy, cut off the wrapper and dabbed it with mustard and salt upon the customer's request.

"Anything to drink?" he asked.

"That'll be 35, plus 10, plus three cents for bottle deposit, plus two cents for tax—50 cents please."

Trobaugh said he doesn't use a cash register.

"I don't have any place to put it, and anyway I can count it up quicker myself. By the time I wrap the sandwich, walk over to get a cold drink, I already have it counted. I just recount it for the benefit of the customer."

A slender blond girl entered the store and the amiable storekeeper asked, "What will you have?"

"A poor boy please."

"You won't until tomorrow," he chuckled. He had sold the last one a few minutes before.

Trobaugh sells about 150 sandwiches a day. Over 100 of these are usually poor boy sandwiches. He sells candy, cigarettes, potato chips, soups, jelly and other common grocery store items as well.

The sprightly old gentleman said he doesn't know what he'll do when the barracks are torn down. But he doesn't plan to retire.

"I'd dry up and blow away," he laughed.

"I'll just have to cross that bridge when I get to it."

Library Offers Bright Prints To Cheer Otherwise Drab Rooms

By Dennis Kuczajda

If you're tired of looking at those same dorm walls plastered with old Paul Newman posters, bubble gum and grease stains, Morris Library may be able to help.

The Library is once again lending framed original art prints and reproductions.

Over 300 reproductions are being loaned free to students. One dollar per quarter is charged for use of the prints. Over 150 prints are being offered.

The reproductions are available in the lounge of the Humanities section while the prints are shown in the main corridor on the first floor. Both collections are charged out as if they were books.

"We generally set the showing for a few days after the quarter begins," said Humanities Librarian Alan Cohn. "It's quite a sight to see the students milling around and rummaging through the things."

Cohn said that the Library tries to limit the art to one piece per household.

The point of the program, Cohn said, is to "brighten up what are usually pretty drab student living quarters."

Both collections are the handi-work of Mrs. Katherine Kuh, art critic of the Saturday Review, who was retained by the University nine years ago to secure paintings for loan and display around the campus.

Mrs. Kuh proved herself a shrewd buyer, often inducing gallery owners to add gift works to her selections, Cohn said.

If your roommate refuses to stop playing his Roy Acuff records all day, a visit to the Morris Library record section may prove a healthy respite.

Over 5,000 records, classical, popular and spoken, are available for one week loan, with a limit of six per person. Or, a student may play the records on one of the many consoles with private ear phones located in the Humanities section.

Other little-known services at Morris Library include a map rental and a file of thousands of small art reproductions for reference and study located on the second floor.

R. Lehne, assistant superintendent of vocational education, Chicago. The third section, "Practical Implications of Contemporary Industrial Education Research," July 15-26, will be taught by Daniel L. Householder, chairman of the industrial arts section of the Department of Industrial Education of Purdue University, Lafayette, Indiana.

The final installment, July 29-Aug. 9, will cover "Occupational Education in the Community-Junior College" and will be taught by L. Everett Belote, associate secretary of the Illinois Junior College Board.

Each section carries two hours of graduate credit.

Tech Education Grads Have Visitors' Class

An eight-week graduate course, "New Developments in Technological Education," is underway at SIU this summer. The course, offered by the Department of Technical and Industrial Education is divided into four two-week sections, each to be taught by a visiting professor.

The first section, "New Concepts in Industrial Arts Education," concluded Friday. It was taught by Rutherford E. Lockette, chairman of the Department of Industrial Education and Technology at Trenton State College, Trenton, New Jersey.

"Emerging Votech Programs for the Decade of Change," Monday through July 12, will be taught by Arthur

Contrast to Comedy

'Sweet Bird of Youth' Wins Praise

By Dean Rebuffoni

"Sweet Bird of Youth," the first production of the summer playbill by the Southern Players, was hailed with a barrage of 300 promotional balloons Wednesday and by a barrage of applause Thursday and Friday nights.

The applause was well-deserved. "Sweet Bird of Youth," the Tennessee Williams drama about Chance Wayne, The Princess Kosmonopolis and their visit to Chance's Deep South hometown, was a fine and interesting play.

The play, directed by Darwin Payne of the Department of Theatre, is like several of Tennessee Williams' dramas on the Deep South: it takes place not in Southern sunshine and amid Southern hospitality, but rather in Gothic gloom. The audience often seemed to be looking at the Southern Playhouse stage and the actors as through a glass darkly.

And so it was with "Sweet Bird of Youth." No comedy, this. Rather, it was a cold, hard look into the South and the personalities of Chance Wayne, the gigolo seeking his past days of hometown glory, and The Princess Kosmonopolis, the aging movie actress fleeing from what she believes to have been a public debacle. The two roles were performed quite well by Hugh Smith of Arkansas State University and Annette Campbell of Nicholls State College in Louisiana.

The other roles in the play, all somewhat minor when compared to those of Chance and The Princess, were well-fitted into the drama. Marilyn Hengst of Principia College, in the role of Chance's old sweetheart, Heavenly Finley, became a dramatic presence on the stage. The roles of Miss Lucy and Boss Finley, performed by Lois Stewart of Jacksonville University, Florida, and Richard Bergman of Wright Junior College, were particularly well executed.

"Sweet Bird of Youth" will also be performed tonight, with curtain call at 8 p.m. Tickets for the play are now available at the University Center Information Desk and the Theater Box Office in the Communications Building.

Tickets are also available for the Saturday and Sunday night performances of the Summer Music Theatre's "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum." Tickets may be purchased at the Information Desk or at the door to Muckelroy Auditorium in the Agriculture Building.

Students receiving benefits from the Veterans Administration under Public Law 634 and 358 are to bring their official class schedules to the Registrar's Office for verification of attendance at SIU during the summer quarter, according to Assistant Registrar H. W. Wohlwend.

Wohlwend said timely notification of attendance to the regional VA office may eliminate delay in payment of benefits.

All changes of status are to be reported to the Veterans' Benefits Section in the Registrar's Office.

Rich Jones 'Itchy' to Join Southern's Coaching Staff

By Barb Leebens

Richard Jones, SIU's new assistant baseball coach, is no stranger to the southern Illinois area, having played athletics at Herrin High and at SIU.

"Itchy," as he is called by his close friends, earned his nickname as the result of an incident in the third grade when he used a fly swatter to scratch an itching leg.

For four years, Jones played basketball with Herrin High School. When he was a senior, his school, then rated the number two team in the state lost in the finals of the sectional in double overtime to Pinckneyville.

After graduation he entered Southern and became one of the first freshmen in SIU's baseball history to start on the varsity squad. Itchy never had a chance to play baseball at Herrin since there was no team. He started at short-stop his first year at SIU and played second base for his last three years.

During his four years as an SIU athlete, Jones batted over the .300 mark. In his

Richard Jones
... Handy With Swatter

Junior year, Itchy was named to the All Conference IAC team and named outstanding second baseman of the NAIA in his senior year.

"When I first came to Southern I lived out at Bailey Hall at TP," Itchy said. "However, the first couple of weeks there were no roads or lights so the school switched most of us to tents at Little Grassy Lake and Giant City. We were only there until October, but those poor boys at Giant City were there until December."

In 1961, he signed a professional baseball contract with the Baltimore Orioles and played with farm teams in Bluefield, West Va., and Stockton, Cal.

From 1963-66, Jones coached in Jacksonville, Ill. Schools. As the head basketball coach at Jacksonville High School, he compiled a 62-23 win-loss record. He also served as the assistant baseball coach. Later, he took a job as head baseball coach and assistant basketball coach at MacMurray College, Jacksonville, and compiled a 23-20 slate during the 1966-1968 span.

"My greatest thrill was when my Jacksonville High School team came to the Carbondale Holiday Invitational," Jones said, "and I'll be darned if they didn't win the thing."

Jones, who is married and has two children (Susan, 4, and Michael, 3) took the post of assistant baseball coach because of Southern's fine reputation of having a good athletic program which would give him the chance to study other coaches' methods.

"I felt that this would be a great opportunity to work with a fine organization and one of the best baseball coaches in the country, Joe Lutz," Jones said. "I like to coach at the college level and SIU is just a little bigger than MacMurry."

Like most assistant coaches, Jones has dreams of becoming the head coach of some large college and starting his own baseball dynasty.

"Right now my objectives include trying to assist Joe Lutz in recruiting outstanding baseball prospects of the caliber that will help SIU go back to Omaha and the College World Series and win it," he said.

SIU Offers Net Lessons To Area Kids

Approximately 100 Carbondale youngsters, 8-15 years old, are taking tennis lessons every Tuesday and Thursday, 2-4 p.m., on the SIU courts in a program conducted by the Carbondale Recreation Department.

Diane Harvey, a member of the Woman Recreation Association tennis team; Fritz Gilde-meister, an SIU tennis team member; and Scott Steagall, manager of this year's tennis team, all coach the youngsters on the tennis principles and techniques.

"Each year a couple of my boys stay around and help the youth of Carbondale who come out to learn how to play tennis," Dick LePevre, coach of SIU's tennis team, said. "In the past the program has been quite successful."

The program began June 17 and will be completed August 9.

The prime objective of the program is to stimulate an interest in a sport that is not as popular as baseball or football, and to teach and polish tennis skills.
