bor board orders union

By John Baldwin Staff Writer

University employees will be able to decide this semester whether they want to unionize, according to a preliminary decision Thursday by the Illinois Educational Labor Ealstings Board Relations Board.

"This is exactly whz: we had requested," Herbert Donow,

Professionals of SIU, said.

The Illinois Education Association and UP are two unions vying to represent University emoloyees if they decide to unionize.

The UP filed a motion with the board on Feb. 5 urging them to set up an election on unionization as soon as possible. Charles

Zucker, IEA organizer, said, "I'm vinced SIU-Carbondale organizer, said, "I'm con-vinced SIU-Carbondale will have collective bargaining." According to the decision, the Carbondale and Edwardsville campuses will vote separately and department chairperson votes will be impounded until the board decides whether its duties are more friculty or administrative in pature.

Zucker said a phone survey the IEA conducted last semester was "very favorable" toward collective bargaining. Collective bargaining is how decisions would be made between the administration and University employees under unionization.

The board would not say what its decision was until they had contacted the unions and the University administration. By the time the unions had been notified, however, the board could not be reached for

Reagan seeks $21.2 billion for education

WASHINGTON (UPI) - With education reform a domestic priority, President Reagan asked for a $21.2 billion education budget Thursday to improve school performance, train teachers and put accountability into student financial assistance accountaining into student mancial assistance and vocational education programs.

The proposed budget for the Education Department, an agency Reagan had wanted to eliminate during his first administration, is an increase of $851 million over the 1988 appropriation of $20.3 billion.

"Challenged by 'A Nation at Risk,' this nation has, under President Reagan, embarked on one of the most ambitious periods of education reform in its history," according to the budget summary. "Education once again is at the top of the domestic agenda."

The $21.2 billion budget includes $6.36 billion for elementary and secondary education, $214 million over the 1988 level of $6.15 billion. More than $200 million is targeted for bilingual education, $1 billion for vocational and adult education and $3.5 billion for special education and rehabilitative

Reagan's budget authorizes the department to spend $24.2 billion, $3 billion more than the agency's figure of $21.2 billion, because it includes programs that have not received congressional programs that have not received congressional approval. In actual appropriations for 1989, the department has set a sum of $20.3 billion, while Reagan p. 1990 set a sum of $20.3 billion, while Reagan p. 1990 set a sum of $20.3 billion, while Reagan p. 1990 set a sum of $20.3 billion, while Reagan p. 1990 set a sum of $20.5 billion in cuttays.

The total for authorized spending for 1989 is larger than for actual outlays because it includes some funds already approved in previous years for certain programs as well as money set aside for spending in future years.

The longstanding administration themes of parental choice and improving the quality of American education are underlined in the budget with a strong emphasis on accountability.

Pro-Iranians rounded up in Marine's kidnapping

TYRE, Lebanon (UPI) — Shiite Moslem militiamen rounded up 100 pro-Iranian fundamentalists Thursday in an intense search for a kidnapped U.S. Marine officer. A previously unknown group, "Islamic Revolutionary Brigades," claimed responsibility for the incident and said it seized him because he was a CIA agent. Lt. Coi. William Richard Higgins, 43, who headed a U.N. peacekeeping group became the ninth American bestore in Abstract hostage in Lebanon.

Soviets, U.S. trade accusations at arms talks

GENEVA (UPI) — The Soviet Union said the future of strategic nuclear arms talks is uncertain because the United States insists on moving ahead with Star Wars, President Reagan's anti-missile space defense program. A spokesman for the American delegation at the U.S.-Soviet arms control talks promptly countered it is the Soviets who refuse to ergage in detailed talks on a joint draft treaty.

Salvador rebel raids bring electricity rations

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) - Leftist rebels have SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Leftist rebels have expanded their attacks on the nation's power system, forcing the government to institute the rationing of electricity, officials said Thursday. The guerrillas have destroyed power pylons, electric towers and transformers, the officials said. The government is planning to ration electricity and increase its prices to offset effects of the sabotage, they said. The plan is expected to go into effect in April.

Chinese party leader misses New Year

BELJING (UPI) — Chinese Communist Party chief Zhao Ziyang has been conspicuously absent this week from official ceremonies marking the Chinese New Year, prompting rumors that he may have serious political problems. There have been no reports that Zhao, 68, has been ill or in serious political trouble. Although Chinese leaders at times inexplicably disappear from public view and then reappear, such absences sometimes indicate political problems.

Agency requests increased funding for AIDS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Calling AIDS an unprecedented challenge to Americans' health, the Public Health Service said Thursday it sought an unprecedented growth in federal spending for research, education and testing to combat the deadly disease. The agency, part of the Department of Health and Human Services, will oversee and coordinate an expenditure of $1.3 billion in 1989, up 37 percent from the money approved for 1988. Included will be money to test 10 million people for the AIDS virus.

House committee advocates Rep's expulsion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House ethics committee recommended Thursday that Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., be expelled from Congress because of his conviction on charges of accepting an illegal gratuity. If the full House votes to go along with the recommended punishment, Biaggi, 70, would be the first member of Congress to be expelled since Rep. Ozzie Myers, D-Pa., was ousted for his bribery conviction in the FBI's Abscam operation in 1980. Biaggi said he will fight to retain his seat.

An extensive array of pots and vessels made by the Anasazi will be on display Friday in the University Museum in Faner Hall.

The Black Mesa collection is a result of a 20-year archaelogical dig by SIU-C's Center for Archaeological Investigations. The University received $8 million in grants for the project from the for the project from the reabody Coal Co. in Arizona. Media overkill stifles democracy

ISN'T IT WONDERFUL to be so informed about presidential candidates? Yes — and it's also nice to drink a glass of water on a hot summer afternoon. But when you're drowning, water doesn't seem such a refreshing substance.

We are drowning in a flord of political irrelevancies these days — most of it predictable speculation and wrestlemania-like hype by journalists who seem to think America's next heartbeat hinges on their prognoses for the next primary or caucus.

How many ways are there, after all, to say that George Bush won the Republican New Hampshire primary or that Paul Simon is in dire need of political mouth-to-mouth resuscitation?

BORING STRETCHES OF Dan Rather's strained comparisions of the Bush-Dole race to a boxing match brought to mind images of Howard Cosell's inept babbling during prizefights, with one notable exception: Cosell, at least was comparating on some semblence of action.

during prizefights, with one notable exception: Coseil, at least, was commenting on some semblance of action. Political commentators have acquired a knack for focusing on slick packaging rather than the contents. The New Hampshire polis indicated a race too close to call between Bush and Bob Dole. The results proved otherwise. In hindsight we see how the ridiculous talk of "a knock-out punch by Dole," based largely on these inaccurate polis, was just more hype to keep the American public interested in a ho-hum race. It also was self-serving nossense to keen the media busy finding angles on counnonsense to keep the media busy finding angles on countless non-stories with which to inundate the airwaves.

AS IF THE yawn-inducing prattle by television commentators wasn't enough, the networks have developed an annoying habit of repeatedly flashing the same tired results on the screen until the numbers are carved in the minds of viewers.

All of this media overkill may seem amusing until one stops to consider the enormous time and energy wasted by both the candidates and the media. It's almost like pain-ting the same wall over and over before the previous coat dries. In other words, the whitewash is getting pretty thick.

This isn't to say that the voting results aren't important enought to warrant special news programs after they ve been tabulated. It is to suggest that after so many shots at covering the nominating process, television should have thought of a much more creative and informative approach by now.

THE SO-CALLED information coming the voters' way now is largely manufactured public relations stunts by the candidates. The media have fallen into the trap of covering candidates. The media have ratien into the trap of covering these gimmicks to get quick stories, thereby depriving voters of the very function they should provide: substantive facts about candidates' positions on issues. Some campaign junkies can't get enough of this tripe, but then again, some people can't get enough prowrestling. Through their insipid, irresponsible coverage that emphasizes style and headlines over substance and fine print, the media contributes to the circus we've come to associate with electing a president. Somebody throw out a life preserver; it's a long way to November.

will digress from problem this transformation problem this transformation has caused to give some vital background information about the BAS program at SIU-C. The program operates with only one instructor who is recognized as a professor of BAS (Dr. Luke Tripp). In addition, an important part of the program's history is interference by University administrators. The program was removed from the University's general education University's general education course schedule and placed outside of the central focus of the learning experience.

Three important results of from the removal of BAS from general education and the reduction of the program to minority ethnic studies are as follows:

 The altering of BAS to minority ethnic studies was the beginnings of an obvious plan by some racists to eventually weed out the BAS program completely.

2. The school system since the change to ethnic studies has no need for black professors or any professor who is qualified to teach about the black experience in history. A professor who masters no minority ethnic study but knows a little about each minority group is now in each minority group is now in the position to teach "Black American Studies."

3. The last point is that the change is directly responsible for three well-qualified black professors having been fired

The main reason that this issue should be important to everyone is demonstrated everyday. The U.S. media cover acts of violence based on cover acts of violence based on prejudice acress the nation everyday. This fact can be illustrated in cases such as the Howard Beach, N.Y., case and the numerous race riots during

I would recommend to any school that if it doesn't want history to repeat itself in the form of violence like that of the 1960s, education should be used as a solution to prevent or curb such events. Welfare program criticism a narrow view

Mr. Anderson's letter of Feb. 15 is truly an embarrassment for the conservatives of the University's political science department. Mr. Anderson should learn to study his opponents' positions before he launches a tirade on this nation's poor.

First of all, the ILS welfare First of all, the U.S. welfare program is not targeted at the "destitute, uneducated pigs" as you would have us believe. Over half of the social welfare program is spent on a solvent social security system that is meant for (and used by) the elderly, who have paid for this "hand out."

The other half of the social welfare program is spent primarily on the temporarily unemployed (70 percent of the people receiving welfare are on it for less than 18 months). As for the "welfare cheats" who "live off" welfare, mrybe you should put your money where your mouth is and raise your family in any economically depressed inner city, where the low tax base and lack of government programs have torn apart entire areas of cities. Thirty years ago small businesses like the Hub Cafe lined the streets of downtown Carbondale. People bought their grocer's, cloths, the nuts and bolts of everyday life, in the same place they turned for entertainment — downtown. Restaurants at one every block — a hamburger cost 25 cents and a Coke was a nickel.

More has changed in downtown Carbondale than the price of a burger. From Main to Mill Street. South Illinois Avenue and many of its arteries now appear desolate. Buildings are empty and rundown. Piltdown is the name of a hoax fossil that anthropologist Charles Dawson found and tried to pass off as evidence of the missing link.

Piltdown also is the name of the College Bowl quiz team representing the University at a regional competition in Terre Haute, Ind.

"We chose that name because we didn't know if we were a hoax or not." James Carucci, team captain, said.

The Student Programming Council organized the 10-team on-campus competition, Jeff Hayes, center programming chairman, said. The winner of the campus competition goes to the regionals.

Carucci thinks the team will do well at the regional com-petition if "we get questions in our expertise." The team is

Adaptation of novel surprising, satisfying

By Richard Nunez

The Lab Theater's production of John Steinbeck's "Of Mice and Men" is a surprising and satisfying adaptation of the classic novel.

If there classic novel.

If there were any doubts as to the treatment of the story, those doubts were dispelled by the brilliant and effective performances by the Lab Theater actors.

William Kincaid and Jim Westerland delivered two of the most memorable performances of the season for the theater department as the traveling companions Lennie and George.

Lennie and George are migrant workers hoping to buy their own farm some day and "live off the fat of the land." But when they accept jobs as farm hands, problems arise.

Kincaid is powerful as George, a fatherly figure and only friend to Lennie, a slow-witted, docile man who depends on George for his many companying. mere survival.

Because George took constant advantage of Lennie's trust as they were growing up, he feels obligated to take care of Lennie, but deep down he knows that Lennie is only a burden to him and that his life would be much simpler without him

Kincaid intelligently shies away from sentimentality and portrays George as a man who is compassionate, but fully aware — and sometimes even very angry — at the precarious position he has placed himself in by taking the responsibility of caring for Lennie.

Westerland's performance as Lennie is brilliantly un-

David Low's clock and watch repair business once stood where the Varsity Theater is located, but "they wanted to put in a dirty movie theater so I had to move," Low said.

After a moment of silence he added, "A lot of people think that I went out of business, but I couldn't afford to pay rent in a shopping center. This business is something to do to occupy my time — there's no use going in the hole just to have someplace though. I'm old and I don't have much time

Quartz watches and clocks have hurt Low's business, which will soon close, he said.

Dan Wood, associate professor of art at the University, said "There used to be more buildings. A lot have been torn down. Today the whole area is a parking lot."

Wood is reminded of graffiti he saw in San Francisco that read: "Pave the World." He said downtown is not a congenial place for the com-munity, adding, the erosion of downtown has been gradual. He also said the old town

He also said the old town square is an area people have used and not replenished.
Vogler said after World War II his father bought the Franklin Hotel, which was "not large and old. It was in real bad shape. He tried to renovate it, but he got rid of it because it wasn't one of his interests." The building was eventually torn c'own. eventually torn cown.

In 1950 a fire destroyed the Hundley House Hotel, on the corner of Main and Maple Streets, Vogler said.

"It really burned," he added. "The whole town turned out to watch the fire."

Other old-timers also talked of fires destroying buildings that were never rebuilt.

In 1969, students rioted in protest of curfew policies and the Vietnamese Study Center. Rioters broke into the center to confirm rumors that the CIA had infiltrated the had infiltrated the organization. Old Main was burned. Students tried to kidnap Dwight Morris, then president of the University, but he escaped, Vogler said. The windows of downtown businesses were shattered. Most business owners agree

Most business owners agree that after rampaging students took over downtown, many stores closed because customers were frightened to go downtown to shop.

Mary Lou Trammel, owner of Mary Lou's, said people refused to come downtown.

"Heck, the students broke vindows and streaked, but ! think they were influenced by someone else," she said. "I never got my windows broken out though. I try to be nice to everybody"

NASA receives 'substantial' boost in budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan's fiscal 1989 budget request of $11.5 billion for NASA, $2.5 billion over 1988 for NASA, $2.5 billion over 1960 levels, includes nearly $1 billion for the space station in a healthy $4.4 billion research and development program, officials said Thursday. NASA Administrator James

Fletcher said the "sub-stantial" budget increase was stantial budget increase was required to support the space shuttle program as the agency returns to flight status and to support continued develop-ment of the manned space

"It is now up to Congress to support this major step for-ward in restoring United States leadership in space," he The research and development total marks a $1.15 billion increase over 1988 and includes $100 million to fund the so-called "Path-finder" program to explore fund the so-canes. The budget calls for $2.4 billion for space shuttle operations in fiscal 1989 out of total of $4.8 billion for space flight, control and data communication.

NASA's space science program is a big winner in the proposed budget. "It reflects a recognition of the realities of the crucial roles of science and technology to the nation's future," Fletcher said. "This is clearly not the time to freeze or cut back in this vital area."

The White House requested $27 million for NASA to begin building the "advanced X-ray astrophysics facility," or AXAF, a sophisticated science satellite set for launch around 1995. The spacecraft is the only such "new start" funded in the 1989 budget.

For ongoing programs, the White House requested $102.2 million for the Mars Observer spacecraft, set for launch in 1992, which represents a $48.3 million increase over last

In addition, the administration requested $101.4 million for the "global geospace science" program.

Father of astronaut settles with company

ENCINITAS, Calif: (UPI) — The father of Challenger astroraut Judith Resnik has accepted a settlement from Morton Thiokol Inc., the company that built the booster rocket of the doomed space shuttle, it was reported Thursday.

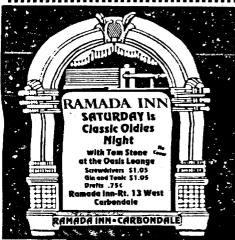

Thursday. Dr. Marvin Resnik, 68, of Encinitas, refused to specify the amount of money involved, but he told the Los Angeles Times that it was in the same range as settlements paid to six other Challenger familes — between $2 million and $3.5

"I'm very angry at the way they treated us and the other families," Resnik said. "But I'm not angry enough to put the family through the agony of a long trial."

The settlement is the sixth paid to survivors of the seven Challenger crew members.

Reality of federal budget deficit affects Reagan's proposals, aim

WASHINGTON (UPI) - In sending his $1.1 trillion budget to Congress Thursday, President Reagan took ris last shot at reshaping federal spending, but his aim was affected by the reality of the budget deficit.

Reagan's budget proposal for fiscal 1989, which begins Oct. 1, calls for increased spen-ding for scientific and medical research, reduction or elimination of numerous domestic programs, $14 billion in new taxes, and nearly $300 billion in defense spending — less than he originally wanted.

originally wanted.

Although he technically will be required to submit one more budget next January, shortly before the new precident is inaugurated, it will be superceded by the priorities of the next administration. Therefore, this spending blueprint is Reagan's last hope of shaping public policy to conform with his goal of minimizing federal control and shifting responsibility to the states and private sector.

"The federal government should not be involved in providing goods and services where private enterprise can do the job cheaper or better," Reagan said.

In his final attempt to alter the way the federal government does business, the president found his hands virtually tied by a deficit reduction pact reached with congressional leaders following last fall's stock market crash. market crash

"In submitting this budget, I am adherring to

"In submitting this budget, I am adherring to the bipartisan budget agreement and keeping my part of the bargain," Reagan said.

While the budget agreement limits the increase in domestic spending to 2 percent in fiscal 1989, the president had significant latitude in allocating that amount. Consequently, he proposed large increases in spending for "urgent national priorities" like drug eriorcement, technology development and AIDS research.

$363 million alloted for collider

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Reagan, who made the superconducting super collider one of his high-tech hallmarks, proposed $363 million in his budget Thursday to begin building

The super collider, an underground ring of 10,000 super magnets 53 miles in circumference, would be the world's largest atom smasher. It would smash protons into each other at nearly the speed of light. Scientists hope the collisions will reveal the tiniest building blocks of the universe.

Arizona, Colorado, Illinois, Michigan, North Carolina, Tennessee and Texas are finalists for the $4.4 billion project. The "preferred site" — by nearly all odds the winner — is scheduled to be chosen in July. One of Reagan's final acts in office could be formal designation of the winner

next January.

The $363 million figure listed as part of federal spending on space, science and technology research is slightly higher than the estimate given a year ago, shortly after Reagan gave the go-ahead to the collider. An Energy Department spokesman indicated the increase reflects inflation.

Congress has not decided yet whether to build the collider. Last year, it reused to allot any money toward construction of the collider, and action has slowed on a House bill to authorize the project. Critics say it is too costly with too uncertain a payoff and is likely to squeeze out other worthy research projects.

Reagan wants additional controllers

WASHINGTON (UPI) WASHINGTON (UPI) — Fresident Reagan proposed Thursday biring about 900 additional air traff.: con-trollers and 300 safety in-spectors during fiscal year 1989 to cope with growing air traffic and make flying safer. "The traffic and make flying safer.

"The successful deregulation of the nation's airlines has dramatically increased air travel," Reagan said in the 1989 fiscal year budget submitted to Congress. "This in turn has necessitated improvements in the air ransportation system."

Reagan noted that expenditures for airports and airways increased from $3.7 billion to $4.1 billion between 1980 and 1987.

"A further increase to $4.5 billion is proposed for 1989, the president said.

Simon backs off on vow to leave race without a win in primaries

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., Thursday backed off his announcement that he would abandon the race for the Democratic for the Democratic presidential nomination unless he wins in Minnesota or South ota next week.

Dakota next week.

"We are re-evaluating," Simon said after he spoke at a fund-raiser in downlown St.
Louis. "Frankly, as I indicated here, I'm not on this thing for an ego trip. If the signal is that other candidates are to be preferred, I understand that."

Simon startled supporters during an appearance Wed-nesday at the state cap of in Concord, N.H., when he said he would drop out of the race if he did not pick up some much needed campaign funds and if he did not come out a winner in either next Tuesday's South primary or Minnesota's caucuses

Simon left Thursday's news conference for a visit to St.

Cloud, Minn., and said he would stay in those two states until Tuesday. The Illinois Democrat said his announcement Wednesday after losing in the New Hampshire primary to Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt had Richard Gephardt had prompted quick reaction from his supporters around the

"What has happened since I made that statement in New Hampshire yesterday is we have just been flooded with calls, with telegrams, with people who care very deeply," be said. "And they have been sending money."

sending money."
Simon said he did not have exact figures, but had been told his campaign had received about $56,000 in contributions since the announcement.

"There's just no question we're encouraged," he said.

Limit 2

"We're re evaluating, and I'll have some kind of a statement tomorrow

Terry Michael, the senator's press secretary, said Wednesday Simon's campaign had a war chest of $150,000. He said Simon was $500,000 in debt after borrowing $110,000 for advertising in New Hampshire and raising $100,000 in cash.

The fundariser Thursday.

The fund-raiser Thursday earned Simon's campaign about $10,000 to $15,000, Michael said Michael said.

Simon said he apparently stood to benefit more than any other candidate from the departure of former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, who announced Thursday he was withdrawing from the race.

"The polling we have seen indicates that among Bruce Babbitt supporters, I was the second choice of more than any other cardidate," he said.

Babbitt, Du Pont pull out

By United Press International

Democrat Bruce Babbitt and Republican Pete du Pont, dark-horse candidates who boped to take into the White House the skills they learned when they were governors, withdrew from the 1988 race

Thursday.
The two men finished well in the early Thursday.

The two men finished well back in the pack in the early test states of Iowa and New Hampshire. With money drying up, they found they could no longer pursue their campaigns, especially in the 20 critical—and expensive—"Super Tuesday" contests March 8. March 8.

Marcin 8.

Babbitt, 49, former governor of Arizona, made his announcement at the National Press Club in Washington. He acknowledged that his message — the need for higher taxes to reduce the budget deficit — did not sit well with voters, particularly since it came from a Western stranger.

since it came from a Western "stranger."

The first Democratic casualty of 1988 said in an upbeat statement, "I'm reminded today of one of my favorite biblical quotations; "The truth will set you free.' And in this case, a lot sooner than I expected."

In the Christina House Hotel in Wilmington, Del., du Pont, 53, former governor of Delaware, said the beating he took in the New Hampshire primary Tuesday forced him to reassess his efforts.

DuPont, former governor of Delaware, is the second GOP candidate to withdraw this year. Former Secretary of State Alexander Haig withdrew last Friday.

Court seeks identity of mercy killing MD

CHICAGO (UPI) — The American Medical Association will go to court next week to attempt to quash a grand jury subpoena seeking the name of the doctor whose unsigned admission of mercy killing was published in the AMA's prestigious journal, officials said Thursday.

The Cook County grand jury subpoena, issued late last week and delivered Tuesday, seeks all AMA records concerning the essay "It's Over, Debbie," including the author's cover letter, the original me nuscript and any memos discussing the article published Jan 8.

But AMA general counsel

But AMA general counsel Kirk Johnson will file papers with the county Circuit Court Monday arguing the AMA does not have to comply with the subpoena because the state's attorney violated provisions of the Illinois Reporters Privilege Act, said Mark Stuart, an AMA spokesman.

The Illinois act provides that The llimois act provides that someone seeking privileged information must apply in writing to the Circuit Court to set aside the protection and must prove in a hearing there is no other available source for is no other available source for the information and that the disclosure of the information is clearly in the public interest. "Because the state's at-torney's office has not com-

Census of aliens leads to lawsuits

PITTSBURGH (UPI) Forty-one members of Congress filed suit in federal court Thursday to challenge the Census Bureau's inclusion of illegal aliens in the reap-portionment count, which determines congressional congressional seats for each state.

seats for each state.

The suit is aimed at a reapportionment that would be determined by the 1990 census count, seats would be decided in 1991 and the first effects would be felt in the congressional election of 1992.

Counting the illegal aliens, who are not allowed to vote, in who are not allowed to vote, in the census would give states such as Texas, California and New York more seats in Congress, since they are based on population counts, said Rep. Thomas Ridge, R-Pa., who is spearheading the suit.

The plaintiffs do not want to change federal funding for-rulas for states with illegal aliens, or cut off benefits to illegal aliens, Ridge said.
