Flight 232 survivors file suit against United

By United Press International

Two New Jersey survivors of the crash of United Flight 232 have filed suit against the airline and the maker of the DC-10 aircraft, seeking more than $100,000 each in damages for negligence that allegedly led to the tragedy.

The two men, neither of whom was hospitalized after the crash, filed separate lawsuits Monday in U.S. District Court in Philadelphia, both seeking to have their complaints certified as class actions covering all 185 survivors and the families of the 111 who died in the July 19 crash in Sioux City, Iowa.

United Airlines and McDonnell Douglas Corp., which manufactured the jet that crashed while attempting an emergency landing after a complete loss of hydraulic systems, were named as defendants in the suits.

The plaintiffs were David Landsberger, 40, of Caldwell, N.J., president of a medical equipment company, and William Mackin, 51 of Mullica Hill, N.J., a quality assurance engineer at a Boeing helicopter plant in suburban Philadelphia.

United and McDonnell

Douglas were also among the defendants named in a suit filed last week in state court in Cook County, Ill., by another survivor, Joseph Trombello of Vernon Hills, Ill.

Landsberger said in court papers that he suffered head injuries in the crash. Mackin said he suffered fractured ribs and abdominal injuries. Both men, who have returned to their homes, said they suffered emotional trauma as a result of the accident.

They named their wives as co-plaintiffs in their suits.

Condom vending machines will be on campus by Aug. 1

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

Condom vending machines will be placed in the Student Center, the Recreation Center and residence halls by Aug. 1, Neil Spilman, director of purchasing said.

The University is in the process of signing contracts with the Metro Vending Company of Edwardsville, Spilman said. The contract includes installing 24 condom vending machines on campus, but the University reserves the right to order more if the need arises.

Don Ballestro, director of business for University housing, said 10 condom vending machines will be placed in Lentz, Trueblood and Grinnell Halls and in both the male and female restrooms of Neely Hall, Mae Smith Tower and Schneider Tower.

Michael Dunn, director of the Recreation Center, said two vending machines would be placed in the male and female restrooms in the old activity area and two in both restrooms near the fitness room.

The Student Center Advisory Board suggested that four machines be placed in both the male and female restrooms of the north wing of the fourth floor, two will be placed in the second floor restrooms, two in the third floor restrooms, and two in the restrooms of the basement in the Big Muddy Room, John Corcoran, Student Center director, said.

The decision to put condom vending machines in University buildings stemmed from a survey done by the Student Health Program Advisory Board during the spring semester of 1988.

The survey showed that 86 percent of the University students were in favor of having condom vending machines on campus. The survey also indicated that students wanted the machines in the Student Center, the Recreation Center and in residence halls.

The vending machine installations were approved by President John C. Guyon and specifications were put on the types of condoms that will be placed in the machines by the AIDS Task Force.

The task force demanded the University purchase only the highest quality condom vending machines and condoms to protect the best against AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases.

Spilman said Metro-vending would comply with the AIDS task force's specifications

Illiteracy bill to expand work study programs

By John Watblay
Staff Writer

The Illiteracy Elimination Act bill proposed by U.S. Sen. Paul Simon, D-Makanda, would expand the college work study program, creating literacy tutoring, outreach and training jobs for students participating in work study programs.

Simon's extensive list of initiatives for federal, state, local and private sectors is aimed at ending illiteracy in the United States by the year 2000.

There are an estimated 1 million illiterate adults in Illinois, and between 23 and 27 million illiterate adults nationwide.

The bill, if passed, would service about 80 percent of the illiterate currently without services combatting the problem.

The bill would increase incentives for colleges and universities through the college work study program to locate, develop and place students in literacy training and various literacy-related community service jobs.

"Illiteracy is a hidden education problem," Simon said. "It gets second-tier treatment, claiming only about 1 percent of the federal budget for education, in terms of direct illiteracy efforts."

Simon is a member of the subcommittee on education, arts and humanities where the bill is being studied.

David Carle, spokesman for Simon, said U.S. Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., who is the Human Resources Committee chairman, has vowed support for the bill.

"Kennedy has said it will receive high priority when it comes before the committee," Carle said.

Carle said U.S. Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., education subcommittee chair, also has said the bill will receive high priority when it arrives at the committee's agenda.

"He's (Simon) intent on moving it through the committees as quickly as he can," Carle said.

SIU-C researchers conduct studies on smoking

By Tim Crosby
Staff Writer

SIU-C researchers are trying to discover the reasons why people continue to smoke as well as the affects smoking has on the immune system in two studies currently being done at the University.

One study, sponsored by R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, is a three-year undertaking that will examine the way smoking affects brain waves, blood chemistry and emotion, and to apply this to the question of why people continue to smoke. The studies primary investigator, David Gilbert of the psychology department, was unavailable for comment.

"One question is whether smoking affects the right hemisphere of the brain more than the left," said Charles Meliska, one of the study's investigators. "The right hemisphere has been associated more with emotions in the past. We're trying to understand its relationship to smoking," he said.

Meliska a senior scientist in the psychology department, said the team also will be interested in whether smoking facilitates the release beta-endorphins, the substance associated with "runner's high" and pain relief.

"Earlier studies indicated beta-endorphins were only released after the individual smoked very strong cigarettes," Meliska explained. "They had to just about make themselves sick first."

"We'll be using a higher number of milder cigarettes in these studies," Meliska continued, explaining that more people smoke in this manner than the other.

Meliska said he thought R.J.

Reynolds Tobacco Co. was just as curious about its products effects as anyone.

"(R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.) do research on their product just like Procter and Gamble researches their's."

"We're not out to prove for the hundredth time that smoking is bad for you. We're interested in why people smoke," Meliska added.

"R.J. Reynolds doesn't understand its product," Robert Jensen, an associate professor of psychology and study investigator, said.

Plane shot down in Angola;
guerrillas blamed for attack

LISBON (UPI) — Fighters in Angola's 14-year-old civil war shot down a transport plane, killing 42 people and threatening a month-old cease-fire between the Marxist government and pro-Western UNITA guerrillas, rebels and the Angolan government reported Tuesday. Military sources quoted by Angop, the official Angolan news agency, blamed the attack on the U.S.-armed UNITA rebels but a rebel spokesman reached in London maintained the government's own forces shot the plane down by mistake.

Local law causes Russian workers to strike

MOSCOW (UPI) — Russian workers at two shipyards and a factory in the Estonian capital of Tallinn have gone on strike over a local law that could exclude ethnic Russians from holding elected office and voting in the Baltic republic, the Tass news agency said Tuesday. The strikes by the Russians, who are a resented minority in the fiercely nationalist state, began Monday, a day before tens of thousands of coal miners ended a costly eight-day strike in the Donbass region of the Ukrainian republic.

Hundreds attend new student protest in China

BEIJING (UPI) — Students said Tuesday hundreds of people violated martial law to attend a rally at Beijing University earlier in the week, the first known political gathering since the suppression of the pro-democracy movement. The campus rally early Monday ended peacefully, but campus authorities interrogated students Tuesday in an attempt to identify the leaders of the gathering.

Agent Orange bill gets nod from Zumwalt

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House members introduced a bill Tuesday to compensate Vietnam War veterans suffering from certain Agent Orange-related diseases, but the House Veterans Affairs Committee chairman vows to let the measure die in committee. The bill, sponsored by 43 House members, many of whom served in Vietnam, received support at a news conference by the Vietnam Veterans of America, the American Legion and Adm. Elmo Zumwalt Sr., who ordered the defoliant sprayed on Vietnam fields and whose son died last year from cancer due to Agent Orange exposure.

House sets SDI spending at $3.1 billion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate opened the first Capitol Hill floor debate on the B-2 stealth bomber Tuesday and the House, also working on a $305 billion defense spending bill, slashed an extra $700 million out of "Star Wars." After a series of votes on other spending levels, the House agreed 248-175 to set Strategic Defense Initiative spending in fiscal 1990 at $3.1 billion. The House bill put the level at $3.8 billion, a figure already well below the $4.9 billion administration request even before the extra cut sponsored by Rep. Charles Bennett, D-Fla. The program this year has $4 billion.

House Democrats slow Bush's amendment

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Democratic leaders moved Tuesday to short-circuit President Bush's proposed constitutional amendment against flag desecration by unexpectedly scheduling a Wednesday committee vote on a competing bill Bush says is inadequate. With little notice, the Democratic-led Judiciary Committee set the vote on a bill introduced Monday by Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, the panel's chairman, and Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., the head of a subcommittee that has been holding hearings on the issue.

Race-relations class proposed for klansmen

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — A proposed court settlement filed Tuesday orders seven Ku Klux Klansmen to take race-relations classes from a black civil rights leader for their role in a bloody clash a decade ago.

Local fair offers fun for family

By Theresa Livingston
Entertainment Editor

There's something scheduled for every member of the family during this year's DuQuoin State Fair grandstand acts, Fair Manager Mike DuBois said.

"I feel this is the most diverse line up we've ever presented at the DuQuoin State Fair," he said. "I think everyone will find something pleasing offered in this program."

The acts range from pop stars Tiffany and New Kids on the Block to Jerry Clower's Gospel Show to revival acts the Kingsmen, Gold City and J. D. Sumner and the Stamps to just about anything else.

The U.S.A. Ballet will kick off the fair's entertainment schedule the opening afternoon. Paul Shaffer and the World's Most Dangerous Band, who were featured on Late Night with David Letterman, will appear with comedian Judy Tenuta later that evening.

Country music then will be the focus of the entertainment, with performers such as George Strait, Reba McEntire, Ricky Van Shelton, Sawyer Brown and Shenandoah scheduled to appear.

Non-musical special events include Grand Circuit Harness Racing, AMA motorcycle racing, USAC dirt car racing and the World Trotting Derby.

The grandstand programs will finish out the season with

SIU-C alumnus to fill external relations spot

Garrett L. Deakin, director of the Illinois Senate Majority Appropriations Staff, has been named Southern Illinois University's first executive assistant for external relations.

Deakin, of Springfield, will work to boost the University's visibility and influence by bringing a combined focus to lobbying and other external relations.

"I'm pleased that we were able to attract a person of Mr. Deakin's caliber to this position," Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit, said in making the appointment. "We look forward to a more vigorous and successful governmental relations effort in the years to come."

Deakin's appointment, effective Sept. 16, is subject to ratification by the SIU Board of Trustees.

"I look forward to coming back to SIU to represent my alma mater," the 41-year-old Deakin, a two-degree graduate of SIU-C, said. "I will do the very best I possibly can to fulfill its goal and keep moving forward."

Pettit said the job was created partly in anticipation of future population shifts likely to affect SIU. Trend watchers expect Southern Illinois' rural population to dwindle even as the greater Chicago area gains more political and economic power.

"The University is going to need strong relationships with legislators from Southern Illinois, the Chicago area and the rest of the state," Pettit said.

Deakin, who has been associated with the state legislature in Springfield since 1973, will supervise SIU's governmental relations in Washington, D.C. and Springfield. He will report directly to Pettit and will help him work with corporations and large philanthropic agencies such as the Ford and McArthur Foundations.

Deakin has directed the appropriations staff since 1978, working closely with Senate President Philip J. Rock, D-Chicago and other legislators from across the state.

Before becoming director, he worked on the senate staff for two years, 1976 to 1978 and kept watch over various state budgets, including those of state universities and colleges.

He began his career in Springfield in 1973 when he became a member of the Illinois House Minority Appropriations staff.

Deakin, a native of the small central Illinois town of Cuba, earned a bachelor's degree in business education from SIU-C in 1969 and a master's degree in business administration in 1971.

He served two years in the Army at Fort Lewis, Wash., after receiving his MBA.

Howard Webb, SIU's vice chancellor for academic affairs, chaired the search committee that recommended Deakin to Pettit.

"Our search went very well, indeed," Webb said. "The committee reviewed a number of applications and resumes. At the end there was a clear consensus"

New focus required for minority students

REPORTS FROM the Illinois Board of Higher Education say the number of women receiving bachelor's degrees is on the rise while the state minority enrollment is on the downswing.

SIU-C generally reflects this trend in the state's higher education enrollment. Black undergraduate enrollment has declined nearly 15 percent from 1984 to 1988 in Illinois colleges and universities. While the good news for the status of women within the higher education system is that degrees granted to women have increased by about 50 percent through the 1980s.

This is good news for the status of women within the higher education system, but the decrease in minority groups is an ominous sign; and one that SIU-C has no small part in.

THE SIU ADMINISTRATION cannot be blamed for a statewide downturn in the enrollment of minorities, but the decrease of 247 minorities from the 1987 fall semester to the 1988 fall semester is no small decrease. This figure represents a nearly 6 percent decrease in minorities over a single year.

Nor can the University administration be blamed for the pitiful state of many public schools and urban neighborhoods in which many black people who eventually attend SIU-C must learn and grow up.

Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit said he is "frustrated" by the minority enrollment and well he should be. He said minority enrollment at the University has been heading downward for years.

NOW THAT A new BAS director and faculty member have been appointed with the help of the James Scales committee, we can hope that black confidence can be renewed in the University. BAS director Christina Brinkley-Carter wants to bring new course offerings to the program and institute a four year degree in the curriculum.

Two state programs giving financial support to minority graduate students in the state might give minorities incentive to stay in school.

Though Pettit talks about recruitment of minorities for the University, it would seem more important and practical to concentrate on retaining minorities already attending the University. Leading moral and financial support to BAS and the programs which provide money for graduate students is one way to further this goal.

Hartigan, pro-choice promote anarchy

In announcing his candidacy for the 1990 governor's race, Neil Hartigan was reported as saying, "I think that I have the right to my conscience, to make the choices I believe in ... and frankly, I think everyone else does."

Mr Hartigan made this statement in regard to abortion, but if he uses that statement as a basis for a moral decision it should also be applicable to other situations.

For example, may a man choose to drive his car on the left side of a two-way street?

If a woman has a right to control her own body, may she choose prostitution? Does Mr. Hartigan support making prostitution legal?

If a woman may choose to have her child killed nine minutes, nine days or nine months (the time is irrelevant) before it is born, why not nine minutes, nine months or nine years after birth?

It is no coincidence that the recent increase in abuse to children after birth parallels the increase in child abuse after birth. Regardless of the method used, an abortion is the ultimate in child abuse.

Is Mr. Hartigan so naive as to believe that his principle of self-justification will be applied to abortion only?

If one's own feelings are the sole basis for what is right, any type of behavior can be justified. Pro-choice advocates such as Mr. Hartigan are promoting anarchy, perhaps unwittingly but, unfortunately, successfully. — Ray Nowacki, associate professor in civil engineering.

'World traveler's' approach to woman mixed up

I am writing in response to Mr. Beaubien's letter on July 7 and after reading the letter I realized that it was my job to protect the good name of the woman of SIU, a calling if you will.

Mr. Beaubien, I find it hard to believe that you would have female troubles, especially if you live up to your last name, correct me if I'm wrong, but Beaubien translates from French to "much beauty."

I myself am in my mid 20s and find that a man's chronological age has little to do with his psychological age. Maybe we should reexamine your tactics.

Since you are obviously a world traveler and have visited most or all the colleges and universities in the United States, maybe your regional approaches are mixed up. Could that be it?

Could you be using east coast lines on mid-west girls, or maybe the fact that you are using a line? I know when a man approaches me with logical and intellectual conversation, I am more than happy to talk and kid around with him.

It shows that he sees me as a woman, an equal (and many times his superior) and not just a pick-up. Actually, I am an extremely friendly person, which might be surprising to you because I am from the "city" of Chicago.

All in all Mr. Beaubien, I can't figure out your problem; maybe it could lie within. Perhaps you should take a good long look in the mirror and reexamine your own motives and attitudes. —Leslie A. Havnoonian, senior in advertising.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Board, whose members are the student editor-in-chief, the editorial page editor, the associate editorial page editor, a news staff member, the faculty managing editor and a School of Journalism faculty member.

Letters to the editor must be submitted directly to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 500 words. Letters fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department.

Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

HOW TO SUBMIT A LETTER TO THE EDITOR:

Senate committee approves $1 billion drought relief bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Agriculture Committee, on a 10-9 vote along party lines, approved Tuesday a drought aid bill covering crops that suffered damage last winter and spring.

The measure is a $1 billion compromise proposal introduced by committee Democrats that would use money saved from non-payment of farm subsidies to cover any crop that is proven damaged. A similar bill costing $1.3 billion already has passed the House.

President Bush opposes legislation costing more than $870 million, which is the maximum amount his administration contends is available for drought relief under current budget guidelines.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., and Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., introduced an ill-fated proposal that would have restricted drought aid to a limited number of crops, particularly winter wheat.

"I don't believe it's good policy to say whoever lost a blueberry or a pickle should get disaster aid," said Dole, who called the Democratic proposal a "socialistic approach to agriculture."

Under the bill, producers of wheat, feed grain, cotton and rice — also known as program crops — with at least a 40 percent loss would receive $738 million. Under the House version, producers of program crops with at least 35 percent loss would receive $942 million.

Producers of such non-program crops with at least 40 percent loss would receive $208 million. The House bill allows farmers producing non-program crops with at least 35 percent loss to receive $266 million.

Under the bill, the federal government would provide full compensation to students paid to work in literacy projects within the college work study program.

It also authorizes $656 million in funding for the entire college work study program in fiscal year 1991 and an additional $20 million each year through fiscal year 1995.

At SIU-C, the federal government funds 75 percent of the college work study program, with 25 percent coming from the University.

College work study is a need-based program where students apply for award amounts usually between $1,200 and $3,000 per year, according to Pam Britton, SIU-C's financial aid director.

Britton said institutions receive a set figure they can award to the University's students, and depending on the award amounts, the number of students could be higher or lower any given year.

Britton said based on what she knows of Simon's program the proposal would be a definite boost for the work study program.

"I would be very much in favor of it. It would be very valuable to the students and community," she said.

Presently, SIU-C receives nearly $1.8 million for college work study, Britton said.

According to the financial aid office, 1,531 students have received financial awards at SIU-C for fiscal year 1989.

Simon's bill also includes five other areas besides the college work study expansion.

Others include:

- Literacy coordination, research and improvement. The plan would create a federal structure to coordinate national literacy research, programs, education and other activities.

- Workforce literacy. The purpose would be to assist states in improving educational opportunities for adults lacking the skills for productive employment. It also would implement adult education services and encourage expansion of adult education teacher training.

- Families for literacy. The program would try to break the cycle of illiteracy within the family by providing adult programs and family-oriented assistance for education.

- Books for families. The program would expand parent access to books and library services under the Library Services and Construction Act.

- Volunteers for literacy. The program's purpose is to develop, supplement and expand the capacity of private and public agencies through volunteers.

Carle said Simon is pushing to get the bill through during this year's legislative session.

"Nicotine itself isn't very harmful. It's the tars and carbon monoxide that cause disease. If they could find a way to eliminate those and satisfy the nicotine craving, there could be an alternative for people who cannot quit smoking," he said.

Jensen, who also is dean of the College of Liberal Arts, is the prime investigator of another smoking study being done at the University.

The study, sponsored by the Office of Naval Research, will begin Aug. 1 and will examine the relationship between smoking, stress and the immune system.

"The navy is interested in this because a high percentage of enlisted personnel smoke," Jensen said. "They also are subjected to periodic stress and the navy doesn't want them getting sick."

Jensen said it has been shown that stress in lab rats reduces their ability to fight off disease. It also is known that smoking raises the heart rate and constricts blood vessels, which are some of the symptoms of stress.

"Yet when you ask people why they smoke they say things like, 'It helps me get through the day,' or 'It relaxes me,'" Jensen said. "It seems to contradict itself."

The study, which will last two years and cost $230,000, will use both laboratory rats and human volunteers.

"You can be more accurate with animals," Jensen explained. "You can give them quantified doses of nicotine, for example. But you need human subjects to check those findings."

Jensen said the researchers intend to rely on final exam week to provide the needed stress for the study.

"We will test the volunteers once before the finals and once during finals week and compare the results in their immune systems," he said.

John M. Martinko, associate professor of microbiology, will be taking blood samples from the subjects and developing new ways to test the immune system with other researchers at SIU-C's School of Medicine in Springfield.

"Nobody knows how these three factors interrelate," Jensen said. "We hypothesize that they will affect each other, but we don't know in what way."

smitted diseases.

The Captain himself, also known as Pete Fox, is responsible for educating males in the Decatur area about the health benefits of using condoms for Planned Parenthood.

Fox, 34, dreamed up the concept of Captain Condom as a "clever way to get word out to the public and to distribute about 4,000 condoms," said Karla Weinman, Planned Parenthood's director of education and training.

Fox answered the agency's phone lines Tuesday and took condom orders from interested groups.

although the women were not on board the aircraft.

A recently retired New Jersey state trooper who also survived the Iowa crash remained in critical condition Tuesday.

John Berry Dobson 46, of Hills Grove in Salem County, remained in the burn unit at Crozer-Chester Medical Center in Chester, Pa. A hospital spokeswoman said, "The Dobson family has asked that no further information be released.

Dobson was transferred to the hospital Sunday night from a hospital in Sioux City, where he had been treated since the crash for burns over most of his body.

Dobson, his wife Joann, state police detective Sgt. William Prato, 48, of Vineland and his wife, Rose Marie Prato, 45, were returning from a trip to Hawaii and were switched onto the ill-fated flight after other travel plans fell through.

Club offers practice in speaking, leadership skills

By Micki Delhaute McGowan
Staff Writer

A business club at SIU-C gives members the opportunity to practice the speaking and leadership skills important for career success.

ProfitMasters, the SIU-C chapter of Toastmasters International, began at the University in January and officially received its charter in May.

Students belonging to Toastmasters give speeches to practice their communication skills. At each meeting, three members give speeches.

Members giving speeches to the club for the first time give an "Icebreaker" speech, in which they tell about themselves.

In other speeches, students learn techniques in organizing ideas, vocal variety, proper word usage, eye contact, body language and persuasion.

The Toastmasters group evaluates each speech.

Another aspect to Toastmasters meetings is called "Table Topics." Designed to improve interviewing skills, members are asked questions and must answer without preparation.

"Toastmasters should help members get a job when they graduate."

—Therese Kalat

Therese Kalat, president of SIU-C's Toastmasters, said the club is important because "no part of the MBA curriculum focuses specifically on communication skills."

"Toastmasters should help members get a job when they graduate," Kalat said.

When living in Chicago, Kalat had belonged to another chapter of Toastmasters.

When she applied to SIU-C, Kalat listed her membership to the organization on her application.

She said John Summey, an SIU-C professor in marketing and MBA program director, noticed her affiliation with Toastmasters because he had been interested in starting a Toastmasters at SIU-C. Kalat said Summey thought she would be helpful in getting a Carbondale chapter started.

Summey is the adviser to the University's chapter of Toastmasters.

The group meets every other Friday while school is in session.

Kalat said that establishing a new chapter requires a minimum of 20 members. The SIU-C chapter started with 24 members.

Cosentino to seek term as secretary of state

CHICAGO (UPI) — State Treasurer Jerome Cosentino Tuesday kicked off his campaign for the Democratic nomination for secretary of state, pledging to toughen both the mandatory insurance laws and restrictions on drunk drivers.

Cosentino, flanked by House Speaker Michael Madigan, former Chicago Mayor Eugene Sawyer, Mayor Richard M. Daley's brother, John, and a host of others, praised Republican Secretary of State Jim Edgar as "decent" but criticized the secretary of state's office as unable to provide "fair and equitable treatment" to the public.

Cosentino, 58, who was first elected treasurer in 1978 and again in 1986, failed to oust Edgar from the secretary of state's post in 1982. Edgar is expected to seek the GOP nomination for governor following Gov. James R. Thompson's decision to retire at the end of his term.

"I feel very good about this campaign," Cosentino told a crowd packed into a long, narrow room at the Bismarck Hotel. "I have more support than I have ever had in my political career."

Cosentino said he decided against challenging Attorney General Neil Hartigan for the Democratic nomination for governor because the campaign he had laid out for the governor's race was based on running against an incumbent. He also said campaign contributions failed to come in as rapidly as he had hoped.

Cosentino said he is running based on his record as treasurer. He also attacked the incentive package the state approved to keep Sears, Roebuck and Co. from moving its Merchandise Group out of state, calling the deal a "disgrace."

"Sears was allowed to come into the treasury and was given a free hand," Cosentino charged, noting the secretary of state's office would have no authority over such a deal.

"Sears has had an option to buy that property (the Hoffman Estates site to which the group is moving) for two years," Cosentino said. "If they intended to move to South Carolina, they wouldn't have put up the money."

Turning to issues within the secretary's scope, Cosentino vowed a "relentless fight to rid Illinois roads of drunk drivers."

Cosentino suggested requiring people convicted of drunk driving to display a special license plate for a "juvenile period."

"Can you see your doctor or lawyer driving around with one of those?" Cosentino asked.

"We will continue to fight for safety. I have logged as many hours backing up as most people have driving forward," said Cosentino, who built one of the top 10 container truck carriers in the country.

The announcement in Chicago was the first stop in a six-city flyaround, including stops in Rockford, the Quad Cities, Springfield, Cahokia and Mount Vernon.

Flight crew of crippled plane made up procedures

SIoux CITY, Iowa (UPI) — The pilot of United Airlines Flight 232 said Tuesday the desperate crew aboard the crippled DC-10 made up procedures to deal with the plane's total loss of hydraulic control.

Capt. Alfred Haynes of Seattle, a veteran DC-10 pilot who has flown for United for 33 years, was hailed a hero for guiding the plane to an airport after an engine explosion July 19 left it without steering control. The fiery crash of the DC-10 just short of a runway killed 111 people, but 185 survived.

"There is no hero. Just a group of four people who did their job and put the best resources to work," Haynes told a news conference.

"We were flying along at cruise when we heard a very loud report from engine No. 2," said Haynes, who exhibited a large cut under his left eye and a bandage on his nose as he talked with reporters from a wheelchair.

Haynes said Flight Engineer Dudley Dvorak immediately began using the United emergency procedures book but the pilots discovered they had a unique problem.

"It was apparent to us that we had lost all of our hydraulic fluid and when I asked Dudley for the procedure for that he said 'there isn't one, so we made it up as we went along,'" said Haynes.

"Sometime during the process, I don't really know how long ... Dennis (Fitch) came up to the cockpit and lended us a hand," he said. Fitch is a United instructor who happened to be on the flight.

Fitch wound up on his knees working the throttles for the two remaining engines. Varying the thrust of the engines was the only way the plane could be steered.

"I put him to work at what I thought would be the best place for him to work and from then on it was just working together as a team effort along with controllers and heading for Sioux City and trying to get the airplane on the ground," Haynes said.

Haynes said flight controllers offered highway U.S. 20 as an alternative landing strip but he and the other crew members rejected that option. The Des Moines airport was the plane's first option for landing but Haynes said that city was too far away and chose Sioux City.

Haynes shied away from revealing more details of the flight, citing the National Transportation Safety Board investigation of the crash. He also said he thought the plane would come down safely.

Most mail on United Flight 232 found, salvagable

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — One of three U.S. Postal Service inspectors dispatched from Omaha to help recover 900 pounds of mail that went down with United Airlines Flight 232 said Tuesday they also had the task of determining the fate of six colleagues aboard the DC-10.

Michael Jones said four of the six were among the 111 killed in the July 19 crash in Sioux City, Iowa, while the other two escaped with minor injuries.

The plane had been flying from Denver to Chicago when it crashed. Jones said the six postal employees in the Denver office's procurement section had been on their way to the agency's Chicago regional office for a training program.

Jones said Velma Wright, 47, and Ernest Ornelas, 45, both of Denver, suffered minor injuries. Wright walked away from the wreckage of the plane.

"Wright was in pretty good shape," he said. "Ornelas was hospitalized for a short time."

Killed were Linda Biggs, 44; Marilyn Garcia, 35; Fred Lindgren, 40; and Ubaldo Trujillo, 45, Jones said. Biggs was from Lakewood, Colo., and the other three were from Denver.

The three postal inspectors, with the help of Iowa National Guardsmen and three postal workers from Sioux City, recovered "99.9 percent" of the mail on board the DC-10 en route from Denver to Chicago, Jones said.

"Most of the mail was bound from Honolulu to the East Coast," he said. "And the vast majority of it was in very good shape."

He said the inspectors from Omaha arrived at the crash site early Thursday and that most of the mail was ready for shipment that evening.

Mail for airline shipment is stuffed in cardboard trays and nylon sacks and placed in large metal containers. Several of the containers broke open on impact.

"The wind had blown some of the mail that came loose into the runways and into the nearby fields," Jones said. "The mail was littered over three-quarters of a mile."

Farmers irate over search for fragments

ALTA, Iowa (UPI) — The aerial search over northern Iowa fields for engine parts from United Airlines Flight 232 is upsetting farmers who say low-flying helicopters are hurting their crops and frightening livestock.

Searchers have been looking in a 4-square-mile area near Alta, about 70 miles east of Sioux City, for pieces of the fan section of the tail engine from the DC-10 that crashed last week.

The plane was flying over the Alta area when the engine exploded.

The Iowa National Guard has assisted in the search, providing four helicopters that have swept low over farm fields in an effort to spot debris in tall corn and soybean plants.

Neil Quirien, who owns the Mellow Dent Seed Corn company, said the helicopters are damaging farm fields and scaring cattle. He said Tuesday that the aircraft are sweeping over at altitudes of 15 to 20 feet.

Folk and trained artists' work to be featured in two exhibits

By Carrie Pomeroy
Staff Writer

Art created in the heart of Southern Illinois will be featured in two exhibits that will run until Aug. 6 at the University Museum.

Paintings and sculptures in the naive style by Maude Craig, Fred Myers and Clarence "Jaybird" Tanner will be displayed in one exhibit. The other display will feature contemporary clayworks by University faculty and students.

These concurrent exhibits will give viewers an opportunity to regard folk artists and formally trained artists of Southern Illinois in relation to each other.

According to Kevin Viara, a graduate assistant at the University Museum, naive artists receive little or no formal art training. Viara said that naive artists "really aren't concerned with perspective or proportion. Their use of color seems a little eccentric, with very bright colors."

All three of the artists in the exhibit got a late start in art, working for most of their lives at other jobs.

Maude Craig, who lived in Creal Springs, had hooked rugs and made quilts for years before taking up painting. Viara said that she tried to make her paintings appear realistic, but she lacked the technical skills necessary for figurative art.

Craig portrayed subjects in her community, such as storefronts and people going to church, Viara said.

Tanner, a native of Royalton, worked as a handyman and travelled by hopping boxcars before beginning his painting career. Viara commented on Tanner's use of unusual materials, such as scraps of wood, pieces of masonite and house paint, to create his art.

"You can tell he used whatever he could find," Viara said.

Tanner concentrated on painting people and houses in the area, Viara said.

The paintings of Craig and Tanner were acquired by the University in the last 10 years and are part of the University's permanent collection, according to Viara.

Sculptor Fred Myers is also featured in the exhibit. Born in Woodlawn, the former miner based his carved wooden sculptures on the traditional technique of whittling.

Myers was commissioned by the University to create sculptures of prehistoric animals during the 1930s and 1940s, Viara said. Some of his works in the University's collection include "The Woodsman" and a carving of Abraham Lincoln.

"He reminds me of Thomas Hart Benton," Viara said.

Works in the clay exhibit include ceramics, stoneware, porcelain and earthenware. Both functional items, such as platters and vases, and abstract sculpture will be featured, Lissa Machler, assistant curator of art at the Museum, said.

Most of the 23 artists in the exhibit are School of Art and Design faculty, students and alumni.

Works by Milton Sullivan, a retired faculty member and noted artist, and an untitled piece by Franz Wildenhain are among the exhibit's standouts, according to Machler.

Of the Wildenhain sculpture, Machler said, "It's a really beautiful, unusual piece."

Recent Rieckert-Ziebold Prize recipient Frank Brown's winning sculpture is also featured in the exhibit.

The University Museum is located at the north end of Faner Hall. Hours are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. weekdays and 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Sunday. Admission is free.

Robin Leach promotes fragrance

By John M. McGuire of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch

On the platform in the upscale store's perfume department, Robin Leach and his voice were getting the best of the loud amplified music playing the theme from his TV show "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous."

Undaunted by noise and confusion, the Englishman they call "the Gulliver of glitz" and "Jacuzzi journalist" was signing his name on perfume boxes and publicity stills. The photos show a cocked-eyebrow expression, campy, of course, meant to suggest urbane.

Despite the image he projects, Leach says he is not getting rich. For his TV show, he pays himself scale wages, $2,250 a week, the minimum for a national television program. However, he owns all syndication rights, which he expects as reruns will be quite valuable someday.

But with a straight face, he says that's not what's important. "I think that the basic values of life are a lot more appealing than what money represents."

The reason for his department-store appearance was something called Giorgio Red, Beverly Hills, a fragrance named for a place that's definitely rich-and-famous territory.

Standing before a gathering, almost entirely women, he made a remark about the table centerpieces and then said, "One semi-serious remark: If we were able to harness the power of PMS, it would be a better world. You are the brighter, smarter sex."

Boxer working his way back following tragedies

Missed medal, brother's murder builds character

NEW YORK (UPI) — Anthony Hembrick, 23, has experienced two great losses in his life: one in a fast-food joint in his hometown, the other a continent away with the world's television cameras on him.

The first came April 12, 1986 when his brother, 18, was stabbed during a McDonald's robbery in Detroit. Hembrick at the time was in the Army in North Carolina.

The second came Sept. 19, 1988 when he was robbed of a chance to fight at the Seoul Olympics when his coach misread a schedule.

Now, Hembrick wants to be known for more than the missed bus that helped make the U.S. boxing team the joke of the Olympics. He brings a 4-0 pro record and three knockouts to New York ("a city of high hopes and big dreams") and vowed at a news conference Thursday to make up for life's tragedies.

"I got strength where I thought I wouldn't, from yourself, you realize things happen for a reason," said Hembrick, a light heavyweight who Thursday fights on the undercard at Madison Square Garden's Felt Forum. "I'm not putting the Olympics behind me, that's gonna be with me for a long time but I have to trust people. I can't do it all on my own."

This time, he can say that. After Damon Hembrick's murder, Anthony said he couldn't trust anyone. "My personality changed," he said. "I would have a hard time adjusting to the police — the police never caught the guys who did it. And I swear never to think about messing with no McDonald's."

"My brother was working there and they were able to just come in stab him a bunch of times with a 7-inch Rambo kind of knife, dump his body and McDonald's never did anything to help us out. ... It was close to the house and I still can't look at McDonald's."

Gerald Wilson has known the Hembricks since Anthony was 10 and is now his co-trainer. Wilson, 35, discovered Hembrick in a recreational center and has helped him stay focused on boxing.

"He was just disappointed by life really," Wilson said. "He was hurt inside. The neighborhood where we came up, we learned to take the bitter with the sweet."

The neighborhood also produced four-time world champion Thomas Hearns, but Hembrick's idol is the late Sugar Ray Robinson.

"There is only one master and he died recently," Hembrick said.

Before the Olympic fiasco, Hembrick had a rocky route to Seoul — a bizarre sequence of events in which one opponent failed a drug test, another failed to make weight and yet another tried to legally force a last-minute qualifying bout."

And then, the same Army coach who told him of his brother's death, was with him at Seoul when he learned of his disqualification.

"The Olympics messed me up because I had so much adversity," Hembrick said. "But I don't hold any grudges."

"I got through mental training. I read a lot of books on positive thinking and other athletes' adversities and I take bits and pieces that I need.

"I'm looking to bring to boxing a total package. My ultimate goal is to become one of the top 10 legends in boxing all-time, and keep my Motor City heritage. Like Sugar Ray, he was a very loved guy who cared about the kids and his neighborhood. I want to bring back something good to Detroit."

His mother, Barbara, says he already does.

"Every time he comes home, he's stronger," she said by phone from Detroit. "Dealing with death and dealing with disappointment is very different, but this time he handled it very nicely I thought."

Ballboy eats 108 crickets

MENTOR, Ohio (UPI) — The Cleveland Browns' training camp ballboy won himself a trip to London with a stunt the British would hardly understand, though it seemed "cricket" to him.

Kevin Gerrasch ate a breakfast of "nearly" 108 live crickets to win a contest sponsored by a local radio station, and will travel to England to see the Browns play the Philadelphia Eagles in an exhibition game Aug. 6 at Wembley Stadium.

The contest, sponsored by WPHR, FM-107.9, was to discover who would perform the most outlandish antic.

"I knew I had to do something different, something really wild," said Gerrasch, 22, a Chicago native and a student at Clarion (Pa.) University. "Swallowing goldfish is old stuff."

Mack pleads innocent to drug trafficking charges

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Cleveland Browns running back Kevin Mack pleaded innocent Tuesday to cocaine trafficking charges, and his lawyer predicted he would not come to trial until after the football season ends.

Mack, a two-time Pro Bowl selection, was arrested June 28 while sitting in a car in one of the city's most notorious narcotics areas. He was indicted July 10 on four counts — possession of cocaine, sale or resale of cocaine, aggravated drug trafficking and possession of criminal tools — and could face up to 20 years in prison if convicted.

Mack said nothing at the arraignment in Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Court. His innocent plea was entered by his attorney, Gerald Gold, one of the city's top criminal lawyers.

Bond for Mack, who entered a drug rehabilitation program at the Cleveland Clinic Foundation after his arrest, was continued at $2,500 and the case was assigned to Judge Richard McManagle.

Gold said it was a "pretty good" possibility Mack would not go to trial until after the NFL season ends in January. "It wouldn't be unusual for any case being arraigned today not to go to trial until after Jan. 1." He also said he understood the NFL would not take any action against Mack until after the trial ends.

Asked about Mack's progress in the rehabilitation program, Gold said: "It's going very well. He's due to get out of it the 28th (of July). We fully expect him to go to London."

The Browns play the Philadelphia Eagles in an exhibition game at Wembley Stadium on Aug. 6, leaving Cleveland July 30.

"I wouldn't imagine it (London) is going to be much for him other than some ball handling and some conditioning work, because most of what we do over there is going to be live work against Philadelphia," coach Bud Carson said. "We're not going to throw him into that."

"He's a veteran football player," Carson said. "We've got five preseason games, I think that's plenty of time for him to be ready to play when we go to Pittsburgh."

Gold said Mack had been working out every day, noting the rehabilitation center is just one floor above the clinic's sports medicine center. "He wasn't addicted to cocaine," Gold said. "He did use cocaine." Mack rushed for 1,104 yards in 1985 to break Jim Brown's team rookie rushing record. He was named to the Pro Bowl squad following the 1985 and 1987 seasons and has rushed for 2,989 yards in four seasons, despite a series of injuries in 1988.

"If he says he's innocent of drug trafficking, I believe him," tight end Ozzie Newsome said. "I just hope he can finish his rehabilitation and come back to the team. Hopefully he can put that out of his mind and come back and play the way he did his rookie year."

Arena coach fired following brawl

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The Arena Football League has fired Pittsburgh Gladiators Coach Joe Haering for punching league commissioner Jim Foster during a benches-clearing brawl in a game, officials said Tuesday.

The firing Monday was in the form of an indefinite suspension, but since only two games remain in this year's abbreviated season, Haering effectively was fired, league spokesman Jeremiah Enright said in Chicago, where the league is based.

Gladiator Assistant Coach Darrel Jackson was named as Haering's replacement.

Haering and Foster got into an on-field scuffle Saturday night following a first-quarter benches-clearing brawl between the Gladiators and Chicago in a game in Sacramento, Calif. The brawl began when Chicago quarterback Ben Bennett hit a Pittsburgh player from behind.

The game officials were going to throw Bennett out of the game, but Foster ran onto the field and intervened, Haering said.

"I felt threatened and did what any guy from East Pittsburgh would do — I decked him with one punch," said Haering.

The Gladiators went on to win the game, 47-38.

Gladiator player representative Jo Jo Heath said he called the league Monday night in an effort to get Haering reinstated.

"I have a call into the league to talk to either Jim Foster or Ray Jauch, Arena Football's director of football operations," Heath said Tuesday from his hotel room in Richfield, Ohio, where the Gladiators are to play Detroit Friday night.

Athletic department's budget up $170,195

By Kevin Simpson
Staff Writer

The SIU-C Athletic Department released the complete operating budget for the 1989-90 fiscal year Tuesday.

The new budget was reworked and expanded by Athletic Director Jim Hart, who said the bottom line is that all the coaches received operating and salary increases.

Earlier in July, Hart released the operating budgets for the individual athletic programs. The operating budgets of all 18 Saluki sports programs were increased by a minimum of 18 percent while football, volleyball, and men's and women's basketball received increases of 20 percent.

Hart said the additional fund raising, increased ticket revenue and the field hockey and gymnastics programs being dropped allowed the additional money to be diverted to the sports budget.

Hart also said the men's and women's administrations have been asked to spend about $5,000 less than they did the previous year. "It will be tough. Everyone will have to think twice before placing orders. It was necessary in order to help the other coaches economize a little bit," Hart said.

The overall budget was boosted from $3,413,937 in 1988-89 to $3,584,132 for the upcoming year, an increase of $170,195.

"The big thing is all the coaches have operating and salary increases." That will make a lot of people happy," Hart said.

Creighton graduate illiterate

Kevin Ross sues university over lack of education

CHICAGO (UPI) — Kevin Ross, the former Creighton basketball player who competed for four years without being able to read, is suing the university, claiming he suffered severe depression after being placed in a school for youngsters.

"They should never have recruited him to play at Creighton because they should have known he was academically unqualified," the player's lawyer, Marty Schwartz, said Tuesday.

Schwartz said the experience at Creighton forced Ross to be treated by physicians and psychiatrists in Chicago. The amount of damages in suit was not specified.

The suit — processed Monday by the Cook County Circuit Court clerk's office — charged Creighton with breach of contract for recruiting Ross when it knew or should have known he was "ill-equipped and unable to successfully participate" at Creighton, and then failing to adequately teach Ross once he became a student.

Ross's situation at Creighton attracted national attention at the time and pointed to what many said were misplaced values in big-time college sports.

According to the suit, Ross played for four years at the Omaha, Neb., school on a "D" average and remained eligible by taking such courses as Theories of Basketball.

Kathryn Clark, a Creighton spokeswoman, said the school was "surprised and disappointed" by reports of the suit. "Over the years, Creighton has been very supportive of Kevin Ross and his efforts to get his life back in order," she said.

Clark said the school has "very little" to say until it has been served with a complaint by the court.

The suit alleges Creighton placed Ross in Chicago's Westside Preparatory School in 1982 after his playing days under a written contract and then failed to monitor his progress.

Westside Prep, a private elementary and high school, gained widespread prominence under its founder Marva Collins. The former Chicago teacher established the school when she became disenchanted with the Chicago school system.

Under Collins, Ross improved his reading from second to 12th-grade level in eight months.

Valley referee dreams of Olympic Games

NORMAN, Okla. (UPI) — Ed Hightower is very much at home in front of huge, menacing crowds and he usually doesn't have to wait long between appearances.

Hightower, 38, referees basketball games in the Big Ten, Big Eight and Missouri Valley conferences during the regular season and annually gets a call to officiate in the NCAA Tournament. He has worked two Final Fours, including last April's championship in Seattle.

But Hightower isn't satisfied just being at the top of the college officiating profession. He has his sights set on being one of the two American officials that the ABAUSA suggests for a trip to the Olympics.

He has the same dream many team-agers have. He wants to make it to Barcelona for the 1992 Games.

"That's my next goal," said Hightower, who is officiating basketball contests at the U.S. Olympic Festival. "I feel I'm in my infancy in the international game and I'm just like these guys out there (playing in the Festival). I'm trying out, too I'm trying to get picked for the Olympics. I'm trying to show that I'm worthy of consideration."

Hightower is certainly worthy. He is among the best officials in amateur basketball and is in such demand that he was able to hone his skills with an incredible schedule that saw him call 55 NCAA Division I games last season. Even that isn't enough for Hightower, who has entered the ranks of international basketball to get in more games as he works toward the hoped-for Olympic berth.

"It was a situation where I wanted to expand my horizon and branch out a little bit," Hightower said. "To be out here with all these (future) all-Americans, this is basketball at its best."

Hightower's officiating career had meager beginnings. He was playing basketball for Southern Illinois-Edwardsville when he began working intramural games for $1.25 each as his lone source of income.

The pay is a little better now. The going rate for an official is about a $300 stipend to go along with meal money and air fare. It is that part of officiating that also sets Hightower apart. Close friend Jerry Norton pilots the Cessna 340 that carries Hightower from Alton, Ill., to each assignment.

"I was ready to make a commitment to refereeing," Hightower said, "and I wanted to continue being a principal. I'm an educator first of all. That's my vocation. Refereeing is my avocation."

"But a lot of officials are doing this now where they make arrangements for private transportation. (Norton) flies me to work a game and we fly back right afterward."

With every Big Eight, Big 10 and Missouri Valley site within a two-hour flight, Hightower is able to work the heavy load of games and miss only a limited time at Eunice Smith Elementary School in Alton. Last season, despite the 56-game schedule, Hightower missed just two days of work and that was during the Final Four.

That pace would grind most people into dust but Hightower is careful to stay in good enough shape where that doesn't happen.

"A person has to think that it is a lot of wear and tear on the body," he said. "You have to work out all year long to avoid those physical problems. For the coaches and players it's a year-round game. It behooves the officials to make it a year round thing."

Participation growing for summer recreation

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

Scott Arey, intramural sports supervisor, said that participation in intramural-recreational sports on campus is up compared to past summers.

"We have more softball teams this summer and we had more people to participate in the 18-hole golf tourney last week," Arey said. "We have the softball championships coming up this week and the volleyball playoffs are starting. Things have gone pretty well this summer and participation is up."

Softball and volleyball seem to be the most popular events, Arey said. "Softball is popular because it's in season right now," Arey said. "Participation in volleyball has been pretty high also."

The Recreation Center will be sponsoring two special events that students can take advantage of in the next week. The putt-putt golf tournament will be held from 4-9 p.m., July 27 at the Bogie Hole Miniature Golf course on Grande Avenue in Carbondale. Participants can sign up between 4-9 p.m. on Thursday.

"We haven't really had a lot of people show up for the putt-putt golf tourney in the past," Arey said, "but it is a good time for those that do decide to participate in it."

Two person canoe races will begin at 4 p.m., July 31 at the Campus Boat Dock. Participants can sign up at the Recreation Center or arrive early at the boat dock between 3:30-4 p.m. to sign up July 31. Participants can be both men, both women or a mixed team.

"The participants will canoe out to a marker we put in the water and then canoe back to the dock," Arey said. "They will be racing against the clock and the team with the best time is the winner."

The Fitness Center, which is being built onto the northeast corner of the existing Recreation Center, will add 63,000 square feet of space to the existing facility. Its features include an NCAA standard running track, with room for jumping events, three maplewood gym floors, a multi-purpose playing court, a 3,500 square-foot weight room with machines and free weights, two squash courts and six racquetball courts. A carpeted three-lane jogging track will be suspended above the running oval.

Arey thinks the intramural-recreational sports program will prosper even more from the addition, which is expected to be completed early during the fall semester.

"The addition to the Rec Center is going to be neat for everyone involved," Arey said. "It is close to completion and will give us an opportunity to be versatile in what we offer. In the past while some of our intramural events were going on, we would take up the entire space in the gym and no one else could make use of it. With the addition, people can drop in and do what they want to do and take part."

The completion of the addition should be around the time students are returning for fall semester. That is perfect timing, Arey said.

"That is good because we can promote it with everyone coming back," Arey said. "When the freshmen come in for orientation, we can tell them all about it."
