Hogan defends tight parking policy

By Curtis Winston
Staff Writer

The parking office issues nearly twice as many parking decals as there are available spaces. But the parking manager says not everyone who has a decal parks on campus at the same time.

Marilyn Hogan, manager of the University Security Parking Division, said parking statistics from the end of Summer 1987 showed 14,701 parking decals issued for 9,563 spaces. Sixty-five percent of the decals are red decals issued to students. There are 9,246 red decals for 4,858 red lots, she said.

Faculty and staff are issued blue decals. There are 3,399 blue decals issued for 1,533 spaces, Hogan said.

Even with the number of decals outstripping the number of spaces, Hogan said there is plenty of parking space. However, most of the frequently open red spaces aren't near classrooms, she said.

"Everybody wants convenient parking," Hogan said. "They all want to park right next to where they are going."

Prof says Dukakis, Bush lead

By Dana DeBeaumont
Staff Writer

Vice President George Bush and Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts are the front-runners for the Republican and Democratic presidential nominations, John Jackson, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, said Monday.

Jackson, a professor in political science, said Dukakis should win the South Dakota primary and the Minnesota caucuses today, and Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas likely will beat Bush in both Republican contests.

Sen. Paul Simon, Carbondale's favorite son, must have a decent showing in one of today's races to withstand the battle financially, especially in the upcoming southern primaries, Jackson said.

"It takes an enormous amount of money to fight the battle in Super Tuesday. It covers 20 states and a huge block of territory," Jackson said. "The only way to be

Marine's abductors send videotaped message

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — The kidnapers of U.S. Marine Lt. Col. William Higgins released a videotape Monday in which Higgins read four demands for his freedom, including the release of Moslem prisoners, Israel's withdrawal from all of Lebanon and an end to U.S. influence in the region.

The four demands came from the Organization of the Oppressed on Earth, a group authorities said may be backed by Iran. The group claimed responsibility for Higgins' abduction Wednesday from a coastal road in southern Lebanon.

"In order to get me released, the demands of the captors have to be met," said Higgins, 43, an official of the U.N. Truce Supervision Organization or UNTSO, in a 70-second videotape delivered to a Western news agency in Beirut.

The Reagan administration quickly reiterated its opposition to negotiating for hostages.

"We are not going to give in to the demands of terrorists and we will continue to explore all avenues," said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

Higgins, filmed from waist to head, appeared calm and confident as he read the demands in a clear, strong voice. He was unshaven and wore a dark green sweater.

In Louisville, Ky., Higgins' family were cheered by seeing Higgins.

"It was encouraging to see him, to know that he is definitely alive," said Michael Miller, husband of Linda Miller, Higgins' younger sister.

"We felt he looked well in the video and it bolstered the hope and the faith of the family that he will be returned. The general consensus of the family is we feel we must stay by the TV and close to a phone for any information."

A terrorism expert noted the similarity of some of the demands to those fulfilled to gain the release of 39 American hostages on a hijacked TWA airliner in June 1985.

The Hezbollah, or Party of God, a pro-Iranian group active in southern Lebanon, claimed responsibility for the hijacking and is believed to be the umbrella group for the Organization for the Oppressed on Earth.

Declassified letters implicate Meese

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General Edwin Meese was advised in a secret memo in 1985 that "a portion" of up to $700 million generated over a decade by an Iraqi pipeline project would be paid directly to the Israeli Labor Party, newly declassified documents showed Monday.

The disclosure, contained in a "For Your Eyes Only" memorandum to Meese from his longtime friend and attorney, E. Robert Wallach, was made available by Meese's attorney.

The Foreign Corrupt Practices Act prohibits U.S. citizens from making payments to foreign political parties and specifically requires the attorney general to take legal action to prevent a violation if it appears that one is about to occur. The memorandum and accompanying documents are now the focus of an independent prosecutor's investigation of Meese's role in the pipeline, which was never built.

Wallach, detailing aspects of the 1985 negotiations over the controversial, $1 billion pipeline project, said, "I hesitate to provide the following information to you in memorandum form" that he said included "specific items of information which (Swiss banker Bruce Rappaport) provided to me."

Wallach, under indictment in New York for attempting to influence Meese in another matter concerning a defense contractor, was representing Rappaport in discussions to build the pipeline.

Israeli legal advisor rules Palestinian beatings illegal

RAMALLAH, Israeli-Occupied West Bank (UPI) — Israel's top legal adviser has ruled that the policy of using beatings and other means of physical force to quell Palestinian rioting is illegal if administered for punishment, torment, humiliation or shame, officials said Monday. At the same time, soldiers firing rubber bullets wounded four more Palestinians in the occupied West Bank on the second day of a week of protests called by Palestinians opposed to Secretary of State George Shultz's peace-seeking mission, officials said.

South Africa attacks rebel bases in Angola

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — South Africa shelled and bombed bases and strongholds of anti-Pretoria forces in Angola in retaliation for an explosion that killed 20 people in South African-ruled Namibia, officials said. The military also reported it lost a fighter jet in an exchange of fire with Angolan and Cuban forces Saturday in southeastern Angola.

Shultz, Soviets announce progress on issues

MOSCOW (UPI) — Secretary of State George Shultz and Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said Monday their two days of talks achieved progress on a wide range of issues, including arms control and a Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan, and laid the groundwork for President Reagan's Moscow visit this spring.

American ship fires on fishing vessels in gulf

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) — An American warship, believing it was under attack by Iranian speedboats, fired flares and machine-gun warning shots at a pair of fishing vessels in the southern Persian Gulf Monday but caused no damage, U.S. military officials said. In Baghdad, a U.S. military delegation arrived for discussions concerning another serious case of misidentification — the firing of cruise missiles by an Iraqi fighter bomber toward an American convoy of U.S.-registered Kuwaiti tankers earlier this month.

Female Marines allege homosexual inquiry

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — Female drill sergeants at Parris Island charge the Marine Corps intends to court-martial or discharge as many as 10 of their ranks as part of an investigation into homosexuality at the training base, a newspaper reported Friday. The Corps refused to confirm or deny that an investigation is in progress. The women told The State newspaper they and others have been accused of homosexuality, sodomy and fraternization but have not been charged.

TV evangelists lose faith, not ratings

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Americans are losing faith in television evangelists, but despite that trend, national ratings of religious programs have increased dramatically over the past seven years, Gallup Organization pollsters said. Pollsters analyzed changes in public opinion toward TV ministries between 1980 and 1987 in an issue of the Gallup Report titled "Religion in America" and they concluded that last year, 53 percent of all Americans believed television preachers were dishonest.

Navy secretary resigns over cuts in budget

Commerce group wants no tax increases in 1989

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Illinois State Chamber of Commerce Monday urged Gov. James R. Thompson and state lawmakers to commit a major share of new revenues in fiscal year 1989 to education and to avoid any tax increases. The chamber estimated that for the coming fiscal year, starting July 1, there will be at least $500 million in normal revenue growth over the current year.

Grant, loan awards used in determining public aid eligibility

By Steven Starke
Staff Writer

Students seeking public aid may have portions of their federal scholarship grant and loan awards counted as personal income in determining their eligibility for food stamps.

"Students who think they might qualify for food stamps should keep receipts for all of their educational expenses," Harvey Welch, vice president for student affairs, said.

Welch was replying to questions from several students about the accuracy of their monthly food stamp awards. The students, who wished to remain unidentified, said they were not sure the public aid office was correctly taking into account their allowed exemptions.

According to a state law that took effect in October 1987, federal grants, loans and scholarships — excluding amounts spent for tuition, books, and transportation — are considered income in formulating eligibility for food stamps. Mary Jane Reese, administrator of the Jackson County Public Aid office, said.

Under Article IV of the Higher Education Act, this includes Pell Grants, Supplemental Educational Grants, Byrd Honor Scholarships, College Work Study, and Guaranteed Student Loans.

Federal financial assistance that goes for room and board or other personal expenses is used to determine if a student qualifies for food stamps, Reese said. Students are required to provide proof of money spent on tuition and related fees when applying, she said.

The student budgets for 1987-88 released by the Office of Student Work and Financial Assistance is different from the formula used by the public aid office, Reese said. Each case is reviewed by the public aid office separately because of each student's different educational expenditures; whereas, the student work report is a uniform average for all students.

Students who have questions about how their applications were evaluated should gather their educational receipts and arrange a meeting with their caseworker and openly review their file, she said.

Welch also advised students to check with the financial aid office to make sure their records are up to date.

Law school student conduct code revised, awaits faculty approval

By Katharin M. Lober
Student Writer and John Baldwin
Staff Writer

A more lenient version of the School of Law student conduct code has been submitted to the school's faculty for approval.

Howard Eisenberg, a member of the three-member committee that drafted the revised code, said a date has not been set for a faculty vote, but he expects a vote within the month.

The revisions include:

—Lower penalties for discussing the contents of an exam with a student who will take the same exam in the same semester and for continuing to work on an exam after the exam time is over;

—Elimination of penalties for not reporting a student thought to be violating the code, or accusing a student of violating the code when the accusation is known to be false.

The revisions are the result of student grievances brought to the faculty in August.

The committee heard student comments on Nov. 18 and Dec. 4 last semester.

This is the first time the code has been revised, but Eisenberg said there has been much dissatisfaction with the original code.

"This has been an ongoing issue in the School of Law for about four years," he said.

Katharin M. Black, a second-year law student on the committee, said the revision didn't include all the student grievances because "the committee thought that it would be appropriate."

Eisenberg said some students have complained unofficially about a portion of the code that allows the dean to suspend students if they violate the code because of substance abuse.

"Some students feel that it (substance abuse) does not relate directly to their school work and activities within the law school and therefore should not be subject to law school disciplinary action," Eisenberg said.

The revised code also allows students to vote for a faculty member to be on the ethics appeal board.

But Black said "The students still want to see a student member on the ethics appeal board."

Violations hamper bar-owner

By Dana DeBeaumont
Staff Writer

The owner of Gatsby's Bar and Billiards may be unable to get a liquor license for a restaurant-bar he wants to open because of numerous law violations by Gatsby's patrons, city liquor commission member John Yow said Monday.

Jim Winfree, owner of Gatsby's, wants to open the Yellow Submarine, 603 S. Illinois Avenue, to replace Papa's Pub and Deli. Papa's closed in November.

Winfree asked the liquor commission to authorize the license at its Feb. 16 meeting, but no one provided a supporting motion for the license.

City Manager Bill Dixon said Winfree's lawyer asked the Liquor Control Commission, which is composed of City Council members, to delay its decision on the license until its March 1 meeting so the lawyer would have more time to prepare a case supporting the issuing of a license.

Yow said information about 15 violations for underage possession and consumption of alcohol at Gatsby's in the past 22 months will be presented at the meeting.

The Yellow Submarine

would be different from Gatsby's, Winfree argued.

"Gatsby's doesn't have a kitchen and the food isn't prepared there. The Yellow Submarine would have a kitchen and an extensive menu," he said. "There will be no dance floor and no live entertainment. It just won't be that kind of place."

Winfree said the Yellow Submarine would likely be half bar and half restaurant and will not have a pool table as previously planned.

"I'm not going to turn away booze business though," he said.

Army wants a few good, straight men

AMERICA HAS MADE significant gains in the fight against discrimination based on race and gender, but little has been done to stop discrimination against homosexuals. In fact, discriminatory practices against homosexuals often are part of the official policies of companies and government agencies.

The U.S. armed forces are a prime example of a blatantly discriminatory group.

In 1981, the Defense Department declared that homosexuals were prohibited from joining the armed forces, claiming their presence would hurt morale and discipline. Fortunately, this rule recently was declared unconstitutional by a federal court of appeals in California.

ONE WOULD THINK the Army would get the message that such disgusting displays of prejudice are not constitutionally acceptable. But, in keeping with its thick-headed tradition of civil rights violations, the Army plans to appeal the decision to the Supreme Court.

It is an embarrassment to the United States that the Army, which is supposed to be the great protector of freedom and democracy, tends to act more like a gaggle of white-supremacist skinheads when it comes to civil rights.

The armed forces have a very important job to do. Anything that inhibits their ability to protect America and its allies from hostile nations is a direct danger to freedom and democracy. But this does not mean that the armed forces have the right to ignore the law.

AS WITH ALL cases of discrimination, the logic behind the Army's actions is flawed. There is no reason to believe that a person's ability to fulfill the duties of a soldier, or of any other profession, is affected by sexual preference.

The only way in which homosexuals might disrupt the workings of the armed forces is by inflaming the prejudiced attitudes of some of their colleagues. It seems clear the Defense Department recognized an overwhelming presence of prejudice against homosexuals in the military and created the rule to avoid conflicts that would hurt morale.

There may be some twisted sense to the rule in that, if such a large degree of prejudice does exist in the military, problems almost certainly would result from homosexuals' presence. But, by institutionalizing the prejudice of its soldiers, the Defense Department has done nothing but reinforce soldiers' immature attitudes toward homosexuals.

IN THE LONG run, this type of irresponsible leadership by the Defense Department will lead to even greater problems because soldiers will feel it is their right — or perhaps even their responsibility — to discriminate against homosexuals.

Eventually, most soldiers return to the civilian world. It is to be hoped that their time in the military will have prepared them to be more responsible and productive members of society, instead of having instilled the twisted attitude that prejudice and discrimination are acceptable.

Reagan's illogical decisions rival his knack for staying uninformed

I don't know why people keep picking on President Reagan. He is one of the wonders of the world, a masterpiece of intellectual efficiency.

In an age when knowledge is power, Ronald Reagan has gone further, knowing less, than any world leader of his time. If facts were gunpowder, Reagan couldn't blow his nose, yet there he is, seven years the leader of the Free World and riding high yet. That is no accident; that is talent.

We were given yet another example of Reagan's invincible ignorance two weeks ago. The White House revealed that the State Department made a deal with the Soviet Union in 1985 to end military aid to the Afghan rebels as soon as the Soviets began to pull out of Afghanistan. The thing is, the State Department didn't tell Reagan about the deal. He has been going around saying that we'll keep supplying the rebels until the Soviet pullout is nearly complete. This has added more than a little confusion to our negotiations with the Russians.

In most administrations — oh, why be coy? In any other administration known to man or woman — that would be more than passing strange, the State Department going into business for itself. Not in the Reagan administration. This is a president, after all, who didn't know we were trading arms to Iran for hostages, who didn't know we were siphoning funds from the deals to supply the Contras and who didn't much care, either. Given the opportunity to ask the principals what they were doing during the Iran-Contra mess, Reagan was barely able to suppress a yawn.

And yet he retains his popularity with the American public and seems sure to continue to do so until the end of his days. His genius has been to lower our expectations of presidential competence to the vanishing point. After seven years of Reagan, we expect so little from presidents that even a gold-plated phony like Pat Robertson can be taken seriously as a candidate. And why not? Robertson is smarter than Reagan and pays more attention to what's going on. The legacy of the Reagan years is that now, truly, anybody can be president.

Donald Kaul

Tribune Media Services

It is a time that cries out for H.L. Mencken, the acid-penned social commentator of the '20s and '30s. In a not dissimilar time, with a not dissimilar president — Warren G. Harding — Mencken, in an essay called "On Being an American," had this to say:

"All of which may be boiled down to this: the United States is essentially a commonwealth of third-rate men — that distinction is easy here because the general level of culture, of information, of taste and judgement, of ordinary competence is so low. No sane man, employing an American plumber to repair a leaky drain, would expect him to do it at the first trial, and in precisely the same way no sane man, observing an American Secretary of State in negotiation with Englishmen and Japs, would expect him to come off better than second-best. Third-rate men, of course, exist in all countries, but it is only here that they are in full control of the state, and with it all of the national standards."

Even allowing for the fact that Mencken was no great fan of democracy and a bigot to boot, that passage rings ominously true today. For all of Reagan's hype about it being "Morning in America," there has been a kind of leakage of national pride in recent years.

The Reagan years have seen the virtual collapse of our space program. We haven't sent a human being into space in nearly two years and our unmanned program is almost non-existent. Meanwhile, the Russians charge ahead and no one seems to care. Reagan talks about the "privatization of space" and no one snickers.

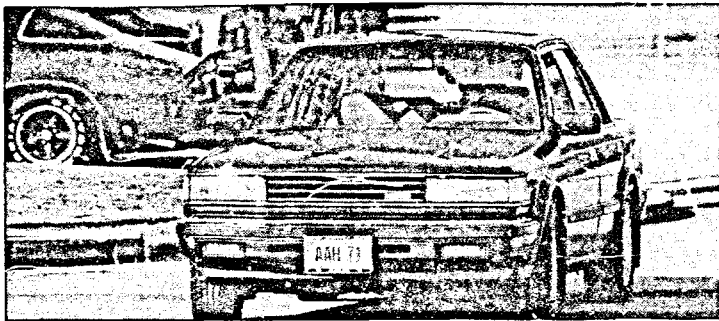

We grovel in gratitude at the feet of Mr. and Mrs. Reagan for their efforts in fighting drugs in this country, yet when we hear that the CIA has supported international drug-runners like Panama's Manuel Noriega and army officers in Honduras in return for their aid in support of the Nicaraguan contras, no one expresses outrage. I suppose we feel that Reagan didn't even know what was going on. And I suppose we're right.

I think eventually Reagan should have a day of his own, like Washington and Lincoln and Martin Luther King Jr. It would be on a Monday, of course, and we could celebrate the occasion by forgetting things that we don't want to think about.

It would be a fitting memorial to a great man.

munications building, Monday morning voiced their frustrations in finding convenient parking. Barry Brueggemann, junior in advertising, said "you either gotta sit around and wait for people to get out of class or park far away."

"I've seen people fight for spots. I saw a fight a couple of weeks ago. The guys were throwing punches and yelling," Brueggemann said.

Some students have no problem in finding a spot. Matt Giegling, sophomore in accounting, found a space as soon as he drove into the lot. "I happened to luck out today, but other days I've almost blown off class because I got so sick of driving around looking for a spot," he said.

Hogan said the Physical Plant has studied the costs of building a new parking garage near class buildings. The two-level, 348-space garage near Fanner Hall was erected in 1976 at a cost of $2,565 per space, she said.

In eight years the cost to build a parking structure has nearly doubled, Hogan said. The current rate is $5,444 per space. The existing garage is not designed to have levels added to it, she said.

The revenue generated by decal sales and parking fines would not be sufficient to pay for a new garage, unless parking fees were increased significantly, Hogan said. The parking division receives no tax money for parking improvements.

Hogan said people waste time in searching for choice parking spots by using a method called "vulturing." Like vultures, people search for a convenient spot by methodically circling the parking lot.

"In the time people spend in driving around looking for a close spot they could have parked in a further away spot and walked," Hogan said. Parking "vulturing" only wastes gas and builds up stress. When you walk you relieve stress and get exercise," she said.

Distant, yet frequently open parking lots include: Lot 59, near the Lesar Law Building; lot 100 on South Washington St.; and lot 56, the gravel lot, South of the Arena.

competitive is to spend.

"Then Simon needs to pull back and wait for the Illinois primary (Mar. 15)," he added.

David Derge, professor of political science, said Simon needs to convince himself and his followers that he should stay in the race for his campaign to stay alive.

"It's like deciding whether you're in love or not," Derge said.

Keith Snaveley, professor of political science, said party nominations still are up for grabs for all the candidates, even though Simon's chance of winning the Democratic nomination looks grim.

"There are no certainties yet, but I wish Simon's chances were better," Snaveley said. "A lot of people have put a lot of effort in Simon's campaign. His lack of money restricts coverage and he can't do as much as he'd like to do."

Snaveley added that today's races are important for Simon because "he realistically needs to win. If he consistently comes in third, his candidacy will be discounted."

A poll released in the Sunday edition of the Twin Cities Star Tribune in Minneapolis showed Dukakis leading Minnesota's Democratic race with 29 percent. Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri had 18 percent, followed by the Rev. Jesse Jackson with 14 percent, former Colorado Sen. Gary Hart with 11 percent and Simon with 9 percent.

On the Republican side, Doie led the pack with 42 percent, Bush followed with 32 percent, TV evangelist Pat Robertson with 11 percent and U.S. Rep. Jack Kemp of New York had 5 percent.

Snaveley said he doubts any of the presidential contenders will pull out because of today's outcome, but the winners will play the victories to their advantages.

"The impact of Iowa and New Hampshire have grown out of proportion, but it's the way the game is played," he said. "The actual numbers are small."

Jackson said the Minnesota caucuses should be the important race to date. Minnesota is bigger and more representative of the country than either New Hampshire or Iowa, he said.

First hearing set for men in burglaries

Two men charged with a string of burglaries will appear at a preliminary hearing Thursday at 1 p.m. at the Jackson County Courthouse.

Calvert Johnson, 30, of Carbondale, and Kevin L. Koontz, 22, of Murphysboro, are being held at Jackson County Jail, Assistant State's Attorney Michael Nieskes said.

Nieskes said a public defender was appointed on their behalf.

Carbondale police arrested Koontz Feb. 2 and Johnson Feb. 10 after investigating a wave of more than 100 burglaries that occurred since early December.

Police recovered about $25,000 in stolen property in the arrests.

Lt. Larry Hill said the two confessed to about 20 burglaries. Police believe they may have committed many more.

Johnson and Koontz were released on parole from the House of Glass, a halfway house at 805 W. Freeman St., in late November.

Police Blotter

Carbondale police said five automobile burglaries were committed between Friday night and Monday with damage done to the automobile in four of the burglaries. Police could not comment on whether the burglaries were related.

Two of the burglaries occurred within two hours Friday night at the University Mall parking lot. A radar detector valued at $400 was taken from the car of Bonnie G. Rieckenberg, 29, of Murphysboro, between 7:15 and 9 p.m. Another radar detector, valued at $250, was stolen from the car of Robbie Joe Stanley, 23, of Carterville, between 7:45 and 8:45 p.m. Windows on both cars were broken.

A burglar took a wallet with credit cards and identification from the unlocked car of John C. Ham, 43, of Route 5 in Carbondale, while it was parked at the Murdaile Shopping Center Sunday morning.

Two automobile burglaries occurred Monday. A portable stereo cassette player was taken from the car of James C. Duncan, 19, of Carterville, while it was parked at 1702 W. Main St. between 6 and 11 a.m. The stereo was valued at $180.

High court won't hear fundamentalists' case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court Monday refused to disturb an appeals court ruling that rejected claims by fundamentalist Christians that public school textbooks violate their religious beliefs.

The court's decision not to hear the case involving parents from Tennessee lets stand a ruling by the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and is another in a string of defeats for fundamentalists who have found little sympathy for their claims in federal courts.

The case is one of two celebrated disputes involving fundamentalist claims that public school textbooks promote so-called secular humanism, a belief that people can live ethically without the benefit of a god.

While scoring early victories in federal courts, appeals courts overwhelming ruled against the parents.

The other case, from Alabama, ended last year with the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals overturning a ruling by a federal judge that banned 44 textbooks from public schools in the state because they promoted the "religion" of secular humanism. The parents in that case chose not to bring their appeal to the Supreme Court.

In another major defeat for fundamentalists, the Supreme Court in June 1987 struck down 7-2 a Louisiana law calling for equal time for the teaching of evolution and the biblical story of man.

The Tennessee case began when seven East Tennessee fundamentalist Christian families argued that the 1983 Holt, Rinehart and Winston reading series used in their school district was "anti-Christian," and said the books could lead their children to reach conclusions contrary to the teachings of their religious beliefs or those of their parents.

In the fall of 1983, they asked the Hawkins County Board of Education to allow their children to use alternate readers.

The board refused, saying the added expense and trouble was too great and would set a precedent that would make "the teaching-learning process ... completely unmanageable chaos."

High court to decide phone tax

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to decide if Illinois's 5 percent tax on interstate telephone calls violates the Constitution's commerce clause.

The justices will hear arguments this term in two appeals, one brought by two residents of Illinois and the other by GTE Sprint, of an Illinois Supreme Court ruling upholding the state's Telecommunications Excise Tax Act.

The law at issue imposes a 5 percent tax on "the act or privilege of originating ... or receiving" interstate telecommunications in Illinois.

The tax, which results in about $10 million a month in revenues for the state, applies to all calls charged to an Illinois service address, regardless of where the calls are billed or paid.

After the tax was enacted, Jerome Goldberg and Robert McTigue, Illinois residents subject to the tax, filed a class action suit.

Is It True...

That Students In The 1980's Only Care About Themselves?

We don't think so!

In fact, we're setting up a new drug & alcohol program to help students help each other... by sharing information and experiences and providing resources where students can get accurate, unbiased information.

This new program is called S.O.S. - Self Over Substance. There will be three parts to the S.O.S. program. Some will be available next week others are in their developmental stage. They are:

- 1) A weekly column in the Daily Egyptian called "Advice to the Drug-Worm."
- 2) S.O.S. Peer facilitator program-a group of students trained in the most up-to-date information and referral resources.
- 3) Resource Center-containing videotapes, books pamphlets and audio tapes for checkout.

Become part of the Self Over Substance Prevention Program

We'll provide the training, information and materials and introduce you to a network of other concerned students. You'll provide a little of your time, energy and caring.

Court to review Watergate law

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court, in a case that could get former Reagan administration aides off the hook, agreed Monday to review a Watergate-era law intended to ensure independent investigations of government officials.

The court will hear arguments in the case brought by independent prosecutor Alexia Morrison. The case seeks a review of a ruling by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia that declared the law that created Morrison's position unconstitutional.

If the Supreme Court should find the law unconstitutional, Morrison's probe would come to an end and the recent conviction of former Reagan confidant Michael Deaver would be overturned.

The court agreed to hear the case on an expedited basis, an action reserved for the most sensitive and pressing constitutional issues and only rarely granted. The court will hear oral arguments in the case April 26.

The court also granted a stay requested by Morrison that she said was necessary to preserve her case involving former Justice Department official Theodore Olson. She argued that the five-year statute of limitations on perjury charges is set to run out March 10 and without a stay, she may never be able to pursue the charge.

Morrison has been investigating whether Olson lied to Congress in the 1983 Environmental Agency Protection scandal.

Lawyers for Olson defended the appeals court decision and said the "act runs roughshod over bedrock (constitutional) principles" and urged the court to affirm the decision.

Court says 'no' to North

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For the second time in two months, the Supreme Court refused Monday to block an independent prosecutor's investigation of Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North and his role in the Iran arms-Contra aid scandal.

The justices let stand a federal appeals court ruling dismissing North's lawsuit in which he challenged the legality of the criminal investigation being conducted by independent counsel Lawrence Walsh.

It is the second time the high court has rejected North's legal claims. In January, the justices let stand a lower court ruling holding North in contempt for refusing to comply with a subpoena to produce handwriting samples.

Aerosmith draws line too short

Band fails to meet high expectations of their audience

A Review

By Richard Nunez
Entertainment Editor

Expectations may have been high for the Aerosmith concert Sunday night at the SIU Arena, but there was something lacking in the band's performance.

Somewhat, the band failed to display the exuberance and recklessness that is the signature of its music.

Aerosmith jumped, kicked, screamed, played extensive solos and put on a good light show, but by the end of the concert, it seemed as if the band members merely had gone through all of the motions.

Playing to a crowd of about 6,500, lead singer Steve Tyler told the audience early in the concert that the louder they screamed the better the band would play. The audience eventually screamed louder, but Aerosmith's performance did not match the audience's enthusiasm.

That is not to say there were no high points to the concert, because there were. Aerosmith was cheered on most enthusiastically when they played some of their classic songs, such as "Sweet Emotion," "Walk This Way" and the perennially elegant "Dream On."

One highlight of the concert was an interesting drum solo performed by drummer Joey Kramer. Kramer strapped electronic drum sticks to his back and performed a solo by playing the drum sticks off walls, floors and the shoulders of a security guard.

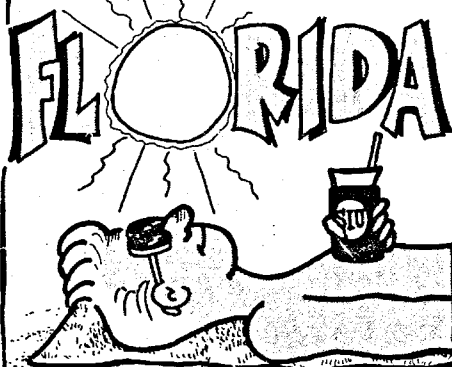

Tyler was the most energetic of the band members. He jumped, kicked, clowning and performed gymnastics that would test the endurance of a singer 10 years his junior.

Tyler occasionally would lean over and talk into the ears of the other band members, maybe to encourage them to be a little livelier, but if he was encouraging them, it didn't seem to work.

Aerosmith seems to have lost the spirit and energy that allowed it to play to large audiences, such as the one it played at Chicago's Comiskey Park in the late '70s. Or maybe the band just had an off-night Sunday.

Educational partnership considered

A new Pan-American educational partnership may result from a visit to Costa Rica, a dean of the College of Technical Careers said.

Dean Harry G. Miller is visiting Costa Rica's Institute of Technology in San Jose until Feb. 29. Miller will work to establish an ongoing relationship between the institute and SIU-C.

The first step toward the partnership came in October, 1988, when Israel Calvo, agreements officer of the vice rector of research and extension at the institute, visited SIU-C.

Calvo hoped to set up an agreement with SIU-C to tap into its expertise in such areas as micro-enterprise development, education for employment, graduate programming in technical education, faculty development, cooperation between industry and education, establishing associate degree programs and joint research projects.

The institute, the major post-secondary school in the country, handles all of Costa Rica's technological programs and degrees, Miller said. It has three campuses and about 3,000 students.

Council hears Swaggart

ALEXANDRIA, La. (UPI) — Disgraced television evangelist Jimmy Swaggart, who left his pulpit after confessing to an unspecified sin, Monday faced a clerical grand jury of Assemblies of God officials investigating allegations he consorted with a prostitute.

The 19-member council was scheduled to meet at 1 p.m. in central Louisiana, about 120 miles from the campus of Jimmy Swaggart World Ministries in Baton Rouge, to get details of the allegations and to make a decision on the future of the world renowned minister.

"IT'S MORE like a grand jury," said the Rev. Robert King, one of the members of the Presbytery of the Louisiana District Council of the Assemblies of God that will investigate the case. "I do not believe we will make a decision (Monday)."

Without explaining the nature of his sin, Swaggart begged forgiveness Sunday from his wife, family, church, followers and other television evangelists in a tearful, emotion-charged address before more than 7,000 people at his Family Worship Center.

KING DOUBTED the Presbytery of the Louisiana District Council would take Swaggart's ministry permanently away from him, although normal procedure is to order a minister in such cases to refrain from preaching for a time.

After the presbytery makes its decision, the information will be forwarded to the international Assemblies of God headquarters in Springfield, Mo. Officials there will decide what sanctions, if any, will be handed down against Swaggart.

The scandal erupted into public late last week amid reports Swaggart had been seen leaving a New Orleans hotel with a known prostitute, and that pictures of the two together were obtained by Marvin Gorman, a New Orleans evangelist whom Swaggart charged last year with committing adultery.

GORMAN HAS filed a $90 million lawsuit against Swaggart, the Assemblies of God and several other defendants charging them with character assassination.

In his tearful confession, Swaggart did not attack news media accounts of the charges against him, instead he called them "fair, objective, and even compassionate." He gave further validity to the allegations by comparing his time of trial to that of David, a biblical figure who fell from grace by committing adultery with Bathsheba.

SWAGGART'S FALL from grace brought little sympathy from PTL founder Jim Bakker, whom Swaggart brought down last year by exposing his sexual encounter with Jessica Hahn.

"I think the only comment Tammy and I would have is the words of Jesus: 'Ye who are without sin cast the first stone,'" Bakker told reporters after a moment's thought.

GORMAN MADE no reference to his alleged role in the Swaggart scandal.

Don't let changes get you down: Learn to take charge of your life

By Cheryl Presley
Wellness Center

Change has always been central to American life. More than a century ago French author Alexis de Tocqueville remarked "the American has no time to tie himself to anything, he grows accustomed only to change and ends by regarding it as a natural state of man."

Now more than ever it seems individuals are encountering an increasing number of changes during their life-spans. Additionally, most everyone wants to change themselves in one way or another — become better looking, thinner, better educated, more assertive and less lonely — the list goes on.

By coming to college, most students have made a long-term commitment to change: to attain a career, to gain economic security, to become competitive in the job market.

The college environment also calls on students to continually engage in new patterns of behaviors where they must revise their perceptions of themselves and their environment.

No matter how exciting the prospects of these changes are to individuals, we often get in the middle of the adventure and discover that we are stressed, depressed and anxious.

The exciting beginning of a hopeful future sometimes just doesn't feel as good as we thought it would.

Unfortunately, there are no

To Your Health

guide books on how to master every aspect of the complex process of change. Our lives are unique; therefore, how we respond to and cope with the challenges of putting it all together, how we grow and change also will be unique.

There are, however, a number of suggestions that can be made to help you maximize and take responsibility for what you do on the road to self-reliance and personal growth.

Remember, the process of change, whether it be a change in jobs, majors, roommates or girlfriend-boyfriends, can be painful — this doesn't mean you have done something wrong; it merely means you are human.

Secondly, change in one area of your life always affects many other areas of your existence. Changes don't occur in isolation. Perhaps this is why we feel overwhelmed when we make a change, and nothing seems the same again.

Below are some ideas to help you deal with the many changes you may encounter while in college and beyond. These ideas are not intended as easy answers, but suggestions to help you internalize the process of change and regain a sense of balance in your life.

—Take your time: Even though the outer forms of your life can change in an instant, inner reorientation takes time.

Don't panic!

—Arrange for a good temporary support system. Get someone to talk to.

—Don't act for the sake of action. Step back and discover what you need to learn for the next step of your life. Make lists of what you really want to have happen during and after the change.

—Recognize that discomfort is a part of change: Discomfort is not necessarily a sign something is wrong, but that something is changing. Change sometimes brings feelings of anxiety, inadequacy, fear — this is normal. Find ways to relieve the stress of the change.

—Take care of yourself: Give yourself positive strokes for the things you are doing well. Focus on your strengths.

—Use the change as a new kind of learning: Change is an opportunity to learn something new about yourself. Ask yourself: What did I learn about myself during this change? What strengths do I have to help me go through future changes?

If you need some assistance adjusting to and learning from the changes in your life there are several places on campus that you can get help. The Counseling Center, Clinical Center and the Wellness Center offer counseling, groups and workshops that can help you transform change into a positive growth-filled event in your life. To your health is produced in conjunction with the Wellness Center.

Recruiting: Real work starts as basketball season ends

This is the time of the year that all college basketball coaches begin to put their noses to the grindstone. The end of the conference season brings a lot of pressure, because we are all playing for a good seed in the postseason tournament. With a little bit of momentum going into the tournament, who knows what could happen with some luck.

In addition to the games, the real work is in recruiting. The life-blood of any good program is the recruiting, because the success is largely dependent on the talent of the players. There are 270 Division I programs, all of which are trying to get the best talent available.

THE BIGGEST chore in recruiting for a school such as SIU-C is to identify the players who we have a good chance to get. There is a great difference between idealism and reality, and we have to be realistic.

We aren't going to beat Big Ten or SEC schools for the majority of players, however we need players who are just as talented. This is tough. We can't afford to spin our wheels, wasting a lot of time.

What Bobby McCullum and I are trying to do now is recruit players who have outstanding athletic ability. That's our biggest need. Probably the biggest goal in any program is to fill in the holes and go from there.

We are trying to recruit players who will fit in well with players such as Kai Nurnberger, Randy House, Sterling Mahan and Rick Shipley. In addition we signed two players in the fall, Tony Harvey and Barry Dunning, so we are conscious of not duplicating anything that we feel we already have.

WE FEEL like we have a lot to offer to an athlete who is considering SIU-C. We have a balanced academic curriculum. We feel that a degree from SIU-C will be very useful to the athlete after he leaves.

Guest Column

Carbondale and the University also offer a good social environment for the athletes. There is no question that it has to be an enjoyable school. After all, we have more than 24,000 students.

Finally, we feel we can attract a recruit with a basketball program that has a solid foundation. Rich Herrin had proved himself as a coach — he has won 616 games in high school — so there is no question that our players will get a quality basketball training.

available for the recruits, because we lose Steve Middleton and Tim Richardson this year, Kai, Randy, and Todd Krueger graduate next year.

We are working with several players who we feel can come into our program and make an immediate contribution. We are excited that these players are considering SIU-C, but there is a lot of work to be done between now and April 13, which is national letter signing day.

State and national tournaments for both high school and junior colleges start this week, so we will be watching a lot of games. Also, March 1 is the first day we can meet with

People are asked to bring bikes and questions.

Robinson said he plans to follow what the students request. "We just kind of wing it, see what people want to know," he said.

Robinson will discuss brake and gear adjustment and basic tuneup tips.

For details, call Rick Waldrup at 536-5531.

Rolling team ready to play

THE ROLLING Salukis wheelchair basketball team is making a comeback. Last year, few players signed up. However, this semester is looking up, trainer Kathie Kurtz said.

The coach is Glenn McLernon and eight people are on the roster. "Everybody is travel ready, ready for competition," Kurtz said.

A ski trip planned for Hidden Valley last Friday was rescheduled for March 4 because of rain.

Clark's ankle 'progressing'

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — Jack Clark underwent a battery of tests at the New York Yankees' spring training camp Monday and later had his injured right ankle pronounced as "progressing nicely" by team physician Dr. Dan Kanell.

After the tests, Clark took batting practice for the first time as a Yankee, hitting against the machines in the batting cages.

According to Kanell, the Yankees will play it cautiously with their new cleanup hitter, who tore ligaments in his right ankle last September with the St. Louis Cardinals.

Recruiting is interesting and exciting, yet it is important to remember the players we are recruiting are faced with a tough decision.

It's a gold for Champaign's Blair

CALGARY, Alberta (UPI) — Bonnie Blair thrust aside a week of American speedskating disappointments Monday night, downing her East German rivals to win the women's 500-meter Olympic title and bring the United States its second gold medal of the Games.

With East Germany's Christa Rothenburger having already set a world record of 39.12 in the one-lap sprint, Blair took the ice after a week of falls and setbacks that had left the American men's team with only one medal in five races.

U.S. hopeful Dan Jansen fell in both his races last week, his composure shaken by the death of his sister one day into the Games.

Blair, however, rocketed around the Olympic Oval in 39.10, claiming the world record and adding an American gold to the one picked up by Brian Boitano in figure skating two nights ago.

"I think I did it on guts," Blair said. "I did a (practice) lap this week that I knew was good enough to win and that's what I kept thinking about."

It was the fourth medal overall for the United States, far below the 18 won by the Soviet Union and the 14 captured by East Germany. The Soviets have seven golds and the East Germans six.

Blair's triumph came in the fourth and final gold-medal event of a day in which blustery winds again swept the Calgary area and further delayed the weather-plagued 90-meter ski jumping event.

The jumping competition, originally set for last Saturday and postponed until Monday, was pushed back to today. The exasperated chairman of the ski jumping jury criticized those who placed the site of the event on a barren hill at the outskirts of Calgary, unshielded from the prairie winds.

"I feared this from the day I saw this site two years ago," Torbjorn Yggeseeth of Norway said. "I proposed windscreens and floodlights (for night jumping when the winds are calmer). I never got an answer. I don't know who rejected it."

"All the skiers wake up in the morning thinking there's an Olympic competition today and then they go home at night. It's mental cruelty."

Joining Blair as gold medalists Monday were Sigrid Wolf of Austria, who won the women's super-giant slalom.

NCAA feud with 'The Shark' goes to Supreme Court

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to decide whether NCAA rules violate the Constitution in a case involving the head basketball coach of the University of Nevada, Las Vegas.

The court will hear arguments this term in the case brought by the NCAA seeking review of state court rulings that sided with Coach Jerry "The Shark" Tarkanian.

The case involves charges of recruiting violations brought against Tarkanian in 1976 by the NCAA and attempts to suspend him from coaching. Tarkanian won several important rounds in state courts and never lost a day of coaching. He continues to lead UNLV.

The NCAA charged Tarkanian had arranged a grade of a "B" for a student who did not attend classes; that he tried to impede the NCAA investigation by discouraging people from providing information and encouraging people to provide false information; provided free airline transportation to a student-athlete; reimbursed a person's expenses for recruiting a student-athlete; falsely certified UNLV's program as in compliance with NCAA rules and his conduct did not comport with "high ethical standards."

The NCAA investigation lasted 2½ years and it ordered UNLV to suspend Tarkanian for two years. Tarkanian denied the charges and presented documents and evidence contradicting the testimony of the investigators. The case reached the Nevada Supreme Court, which on Aug. 27, 1987, ruled in favor of Tarkanian.

It said the NCAA investigators relied upon notes of interviews as opposed to sworn affidavits submitted by Tarkanian from some of the same persons interviewed. The court said the NCAA relied upon evidence of wrongdoing from an investigator's report.

The court said: "The lengthy and far-reaching scope of the NCAA's investigation in this case creates the danger that the enforcement staff may not remember the precise nature of interviews. This increases the likelihood that investigators, no matter how pure their intentions, will gloss over their testimony with an 'unconscious subjective coloring.'"

MVC honors Hawkins again

Hersey Hawkins of Bradley was named the Missouri Valley Player of the Week.

Hawkins, a senior guard, scored 107 points and grabbed 19 rebounds in three conference wins.

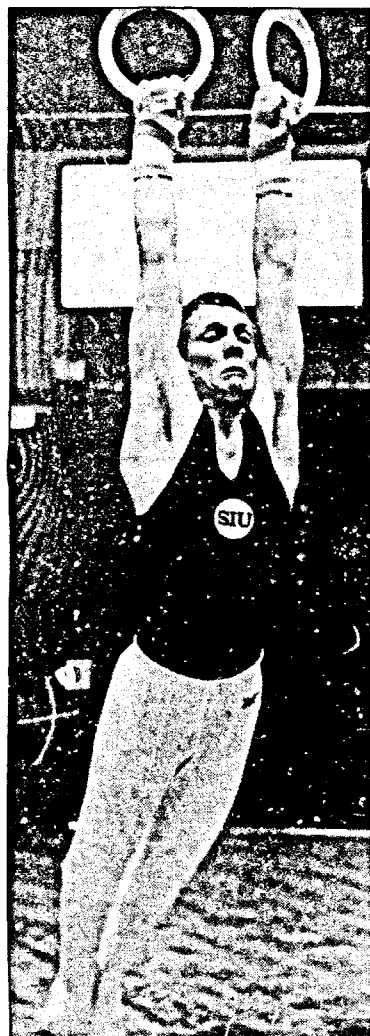

Against Drake, Hawkins tipped in a missed free throw with two seconds left to lift the Braves to a 85-83 victory in Peoria. He finished with 38 points.

He scored 35 points in Bradley's 83-67 win against Creighton in Omaha, Neb.

After he scored just six points in the first half against Illinois State, he finished with 34 points in the Braves' 78-71 overtime win in Normal.

It is the fifth time Hawkins has received the honor this season.

Marcus Mulholland

Gymnasts pummeled at Chicago meet

By Stephanie Wood
Staff Writer

Inconsistent performances and a disaster on the pommel horse dropped the gymnastics team to 3-4 in dual competition.

SIU-C defeated Eastern Michigan 267.25 to 201.30 and lost to the University of Illinois-Chicago 273.30 to 267.25 at a triangular meet in Chicago last weekend.

"We had a poor performance overall," Coach Bill Meade said. "We were 0-6 in the pommel horse. Every athlete either fell off the horse or sat down at least once. You rise and fall with your own efforts."

Greg Zeiders, who scored a 9.15, was the only Saluki to finish above 9.00 in the event.

"We're just not very good," Meade said. "It is one of those years where coaches earn their money."

Brent Reed, who had a personal best all-around performance of 55.90 against Iowa State last weekend, was again the team's top all-arounder at 54.70.

Reed won the high bar with a score of 9.65 while Scott Belanger finished second with a 9.40.

Belanger only scored 51.25 in the all-around after a 54.45 against Iowa State. "The guys who were the heroes last week, Reed, Belanger, and Magliocca, were the goats this week," Meade said. Magliocca finished the all-around with a 52.50.

Floor exercise and vault specialist Tom Glielmi won both events with scores of 9.65 and 9.50.

SIU-C's No. 2 all-arounder Marcus Mulholland, who has a shoulder injury, competed in only four of six events.

"We did not know whether Marcus would be able to work at all," Meade said. "He told me after he warmed up on each event whether he could go or not."

Despite his injury, Mulholland scored personal bests on the parallel bars, 9.30, and the still rings, 9.20.

Horner, Pendleton show up early to Cardinals' camp

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — A svelte looking Bob Horner showed up to the St. Louis Cardinals' training camp ahead of schedule Monday to get an early jump on the job of replacing Jack Clark in the defending National League champions' lineup.

"Aw, I've been to spring training on the one coast (of Florida) for 10 years and I didn't know much about the other," a panting Horner said after running laps with pitchers and catchers.

"I just wanted to get a feel for where

I was at, where I need to be. And get to know everybody," Horner said.

Horner, who spent last season in Japan after playing the first nine years of his career with Atlanta, showed up on the first day pitchers and catchers were to begin working out for St. Louis.

He not only showed up, he showed up in shape. Horner looks to be about 210-220 pounds.

"Shoot," he said. "I just turned 30. I have to watch it. Really, I'm excited to be here."

Another Cardinals regular who reported with pitchers and catchers was third baseman Terry Pendleton, who missed most of the World Series with a pulled muscle in his left rib cage.

"I always come out early," Pendleton said after finishing his running and doing a double handful of situps. "This is not new for me."

"I haven't worked out for three weeks," Pendleton said, showing a finger which required stitches to repair a recent cut. "I swung a lot before I hurt my finger. Ribs feel good."

"But I'm going to take it easy for a couple of weeks just to make sure. I'll concentrate more on (hitting from) the left side than the right side."

Pendleton and Horner will have to help pick up the slack left by the departure of Clark, who signed with the New York Yankees.
