Most motels full for Parents' Day

By Daniel Hofmann
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Folks coming down for Parents' Weekend, Oct. 3 and 4, had better have their accommodations reserved or plan on spending their nights outside the Carbondale area.

"I wouldn't advise anyone to come down without a reservation," said O'Mira Dameron, secretary for Marion's Holiday Inn. "I've seen our Holiday Inns full up to Salem when the parents come down."

Many of the motels in Carbondale are completely booked for Parent's Weekend. The motels have been taking reservations for the weekend for months.

"Some of the parents were making reservations in the spring when they came down for graduation. Those who still had a kid in school made reservations then," said Karen Griffith, billing clerk for the Carbondale Ramada Inn, 2400 W. Main St.

"I imagine anyone coming down without a reservation would have a difficult time finding a place anywhere in the area," Griffith said. She added that the weekend of Oct. 3 and 4 has been booked up at the Ramada Inn for the past two weeks.

The Carbondale Holiday Inn, 800 E. Main St., is also fully booked. A reservation clerk there said the motel has been taking reservations for the weekend since parents brought the students down to register this summer.

A representative of the Bel-Aire Motel, 905 E. Main St., said the motel was not taking reservations for the weekend because they were filled up every night anyway.

Nick Greenup, manager of the Kings Inn of Carbondale, said the motel was dropping their policy of not accepting reservations for the weekend as a goodwill gesture.

"We've had a couple of reservations. We don't have a lot of room, but we're not booked solid," said Greenup. He said the motel doesn't generally accept reservations because many people who make reservations never show.

Parents who haven't made reservations yet can still reserve rooms at several motels in Marion.

"We have more than the average number of reservations for Oct. 3 and 4. But we still have plenty of rooms," said a reservations clerk at the Marion Ramada Inn.

"We have a convention on Oct. 4 and 5, but we're allowing for Parents' Weekend also," said Dameron at the Marion Holiday Inn. She suggests that parents who haven't made reservations should do so now.

New city police location lacks jail facilities

By Scott G. Bandle
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Carbondale Police Department will start operating Friday out of its new headquarters in the Dorchester Building, 610 E. College, despite lacking jail facilities there.

Police Chief George Kennedy said that, although this is inconvenient for the department, it will make little change in its present booking procedures.

On any state charge or felony, the prisoner will be taken to Jackson County Jail. There is no change in the state charge procedures, Kennedy said.

The only difference will be in handling people charged with city crimes, he said.

"We've been moving lately to try and release people who have a good Carbondale address on their own recognizance or have them bond themselves out," he said.

"If they can't bond out or if we have to hold them for some reason, we'll have to take them to the Jackson County Jail and bring them back to city court," Kennedy continued.

There is going to be a county charge for meals and care while keeping a prisoner in the county jail, Kennedy said. The exact fee has not been worked out.

Kennedy said, however, a jail or holding room is still needed. He did not have any forecasts when the jail facility would be built.

In his press conference Friday, City Manager Carroll Fry, said the city is studying the matter to find out the exact costs of such a facility. He said he did not know when the jail would be built, but it would be done by the end of this fiscal year.

The city council is going to have to make a decision about whether it will be cheaper to drive back and forth to Murphysboro or to build and maintain a city jail, Kennedy said.

Murphysboro is closer than a lot of city jails are in some metropolitan areas. He cited Tulsa, Okla., as an example, with its jail being 20 miles away from the furthest city districts. Murphysboro is only seven miles from Carbondale.

He said a jail fulfilling the minimum standards set down by the Bureau of Detention Standards and Services (BDSS) of the Illinois Department of Corrections is estimated to cost between $50,000 to $100,000.

Among the standards are showers, and a minimum six-foot by eight-foot cell with a washbowl and hot water and toilet for each prisoner. Good lighting, ground level location unless elevator service is provided, metal beds and either a television monitor system or a 24-hour guard are also required.

Kennedy said what the department needs most is a holding room for prisoners so the police will not be off the street anymore than necessary. According to Kennedy, though, the BDSS does not make any distinction between jails and holding rooms.

A possible substitute for a holding room is a paddy wagon, Kennedy said. This would be a way to keep prisoners at the scene of a crime without taking manpower off the streets. That way, the police could take a load of prisoners to Murphysboro all at once, he said.

Affirmative Action tackles job bias

By Rolanda Williams
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

If a black female University employee feels her immediate supervisor is treating her unjustly because of race or sex, she can file a complaint with the Affirmative Action Office.

The Affirmative Action Office was established in 1970 to eliminate procedures and policies that could discriminate against an individual because of race, sex, color, religion or national origin and to keep the University in compliance with federal and state anti-discrimination legislation laws.

All University personnel may file written charges of discrimination with a complaint form provided by the office.

To start affirmative action procedures, the student, faculty or staff, member, or administrative or Civil Service employe will go through his or her respective chain of command.

The next step after filing a written complaint is usually to explore the problem with the employe and his supervisor.

"A lot of times, supervisors may be totally unaware of the perceptions by employes," said Richard Hayes, associate University affirmative action officer. "They should have the first right to be aware," he added.

If a supervisor is unaware of the allegation against him, he is then notified of the situation and the affirmative action team will try to resolve the problem.

However, if the problem is not resolved with the immediate supervisor the complaint is then taken informally to the next supervisory level. If matters are not settled there, formal procedures may be implemented using the internal grievance procedures for that particular department.

If a problem cannot be settled internally, the employe may take the case to an external organization such as the Fair Employment Practices Commission (FEPC) or the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC).

In addition to discrimination problems, employes may go to the office with employe-to-employe problems or to seek advice.

Mary Gasser, University affirmative action officer, said she realizes "sometimes it just helps to talk," and people should not feel that just because they come to the office for help they are automatically subjected to formal

Vandalism breaks no records at SIU, city

By Chuck Giametta
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Vandalism, the willful and often pointless destruction or defacement of property, costs a billion dollars per year in the United States. Although half that cost if incurred to schools, vandalism is not a major problem at SIU-C or in the city of Carbondale.

"There is some problem, but I'm not sure if it's major," Arnold Jochums, assistant Jackson County public defender, said. "A lot of it seems to be alcohol related and most of it involves window breaking. The problem with that is that glass is so expensive. Almost any window that is broken costs over $150 to repair and that makes it a felony.

Vandalism, legally termed Criminal Damage to Property, is divided into two categories. When damage is less than $150 it is classified as a Class A misdemeanor and carries a penalty of not more than one year in jail or a fine not to exceed $5,000. It becomes a Class

Four felony when the damage exceeds $150. This crime is punishable with a jail sentence from one to ten years and a fine not to exceed $10,000.

Of the 10 vandalism cases pending in Jackson County Circuit Court, four are in the Class Four category.

"Generally, through plea bargaining and negotiations, the charge is reduced to a misdemeanor involving a two to six year probation and a requirement for the offender to pay back the damages, along with a $100 fine," Jochums said.

Lt. Marvin Braswell, SIU Security, said, "The primary targets on campus seem to be vending machines and windows. But straight vandalism, done without a motive of personal gain, like breaking into a vending machine for the money, isn't really a great problem right now."

The cost of replacing a window covers a wide range, Braswell said. A 10 by 16-foot pane in Neckers cost $3,300 in glass and labor, but the average cost is $15.

According to Physical Plant Assistant Director, William Nelson, elevators and fire extinguishers are vandals' main targets in University residency halls.

"Male halls seem to have more problems than female halls," Nelson said. "We've had to replace a $2,000 side panel in one of the elevators but preventative measures like wooden boxes over fire alarm pull switches have greatly reduced the incidence of vandalism in the halls."

Vandalism is no real problem at Morris Library, according to Assistant to the Dean of Library Affairs, Grey Cole. "The incidence of book mutilation is very, very low. Primarily, we expect thefts," he said.

It's hard to say if there is a significant amount of vandalism in the city itself. Corporal Larry Hill of Carbondale Police Department said. According to Hill, there have been 196 cases of malicious damage to property in Carbondale since Jan. 1.

The conviction rate in vandalism is very low. "It's primarily reported by people only because their insurance requires it," Hill said.

Broken windows in homes and autos is the major problem. "We've found no distinctions between students and non-students among vandalism suspects, but primarily younger persons are indeed involved," Hill added.

Vandalism to public telephones is more of a problem in the business district, especially South Illinois Avenue, than on campus or in the dorms, according to a spokesman for the Carbondale branch of the General Telephone Co. Cords, dials and coin operated slots suffer on the hard-to-break-into pay phones, the spokesman said.

The cause of vandalism is difficult to pin down. "We really know of no main cause for such action," Eugene Ringuette, associate professor of psychology, said. "Some people who vandalize are simply antisocial. For many it may be an expression of frustration that has no other outlet. But most of the time it seems to be a hard to prevent, hard to figure out, spur of the moment thing," Ringuette said.

News Roundup

Hearst says abductors tortured her

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst swore Tuesday that she was driven to insanity by Symbionese Liberation Army kidnapers who tortured her mentally and physically.

Hearst, in a startling written affidavit, said she did not willingly join the SLA and had returned to the San Francisco area to discover whether her parents still loved her. She said the radical band locked her in a closet for several weeks, then forced her to help rob a bank on threat of instant execution if she disobeyed.

The written testimony did not seek to explain Patty's apparent show of radical ardor since her arrest—clenched fist salutes, greetings to radical comrades, a self-description as urban-guerrilla on a prison form. Instead, the document said she still may be insane.

"Her recollection of everything that transpired from shortly after the bank incident up to the time that she was arrested, has been as though she lived in a fog...in a perpetual state of terror," the affidavit said.

Moore to undergo psychiatric exam

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sara Jane Moore, accused of trying to kill President Ford with a pistol shot, was ordered by a magistrate Tuesday to undergo a psychiatric examination.

U.S. Magistrate Owen Woodruff directed that Moore be taken to the San Diego Metropolitan Correctional Center for the mental tests. Woodruff said findings would be reported to him by Nov. 18.

Moore, seized moments after she allegedly fired a gun at Ford on Monday, smiled as she stepped into the crowded courtroom. She spoke to her attorney occasionally during the proceedings.

Moore, 45, is being held on $500,000 bail.

The divorcee and mother of a 9-year-old boy is accused of firing a .38-caliber bullet in the direction of President Ford as he walked from the St. Francis Hotel here to his presidential limousine. If convicted, she faces possible life imprisonment.

Police warned Secret Service of Moore

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Police here warned the Secret Service last Saturday that the woman who fired a shot at President Ford was a potential assassin who threatened to "test the system" at a presidential appearance the day before the shooting.

Chief of Inspectors Charles Barca quoted Secret Service officials as saying that Sara Jane Moore could be released from jail on a minor weapons charge Sunday because the federal authorities would handle her.

"This gal could be another Squeaky Fromme," Police Inspector Jack O'Shea said he told the Secret Service on Saturday, after a call from the 45-year-old Moore.

The Secret Service had no immediate comment on the report.

Fromme declared mentally stable for trial

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme was declared mentally competent today to stand trial on a charge of attempting to murder President Ford.

U.S. District Court Judge Thomas J. MacBride made the ruling on the basis of a week-end examination by a court-appointed psychiatrist, Dr. James R. Richmond.

MacBride also said Fromme could act as her own cocounsel. Fromme had no reaction to the decision.

OPEC may hike oil price 15 per cent

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Ministers of the 13-nation oil export bloc meet here Wednesday amid reports they will hike the price of their oil by about 15 per cent. Sources at the headquarters of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries—OPEC—said recent statements by key member countries make a 15 per cent hike, or about $1.50 per barrel, appear the likeliest guess at this stage.

Because the United States imports only one-third of its petroleum needs, this would translate into an increase of a little more than a cent a gallon for U.S. gasoline and other fuel products.

Hurricane hits Florida panhandle

FORT WALTON BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Hurricane Eloise, spawning tornadoes to accompany its torrential rains and roaring winds, spawed a wide path of destruction inland Tuesday after smacking the Florida panhandle's coast with its best punch.

The hurricane's 130-mile-an-hour winds carried slashing rains and frenzied surf as it struck a 40-mile stretch between Fort Walton Beach and Panama City before dawn. Eloise then weakened as its center moved into southeastern Alabama.

Council votes to change disputed parking ban law

By Pat Corcoran
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Some cars parked along South Illinois Avenue may not have to face the towing hook, but the 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. parking ban remains in effect for the avenue between Elm and Walnut streets.

The Carbondale City Council voted Monday night in its formal session to amend the controversial parking ordinance and allowed Illinois Avenue south of Elm Street to revert to the previous 3 a.m. to 6 a.m. ban.

City Manager Carroll Fry said this ban was for normal street cleaning operations.

Assistant City Attorney J. Phil Gilbert said the ban on the 300 Block, which contains Merlins' and Pizza King, was to protect the heavy pedestrian traffic traveling between the two bars.

"Persons who walk onto the street from between parked cars might not be seen by the drivers coming down the street," Gilbert said.

City Councilman Hans Fischer asked Police Chief George Kennedy why the police waited until 11 p.m. before they began towing cars which violated the parking ban.

"It seems that it would be better to start the towing earlier since by 11 p.m. the inhabitants on the street are in somewhat higher spirits," Fischer said.

Kennedy replied the towing usually began around 9 p.m. each night and continued through 3 a.m.

In other action, the council voted to oppose the incorporation of Crab Orchard Estates as an independent village.

Spokesman for the subdivision, located three miles east of Carbondale, across the Williamson County line, said the area wanted to incorporate to solve the sewage and street problems the area now faces. But, under Illinois law, any area which wishes to incorporate and lies with one mile-and-a-half of another may not incorporate without the consent of the other municipality.

Mayor Neal Eckert said he opposed the formation of an independent municipal body so close to the city.

"Allowing Crab Orchard Estates to incorporate goes against everything I have gone on record to support," Eckert said.

Councilman Fischer opposed the blockage of the incorporation.

"We are stopping people trying to help themselves without giving them any alternative," Fischer said.

The subdivision had announced plans to incorporate last year but the city stopped the move and offered to annex the area into the city.

Area residents rejected this proposal because of the high prices Carbondale would charge for sewers and streets.

Marvin Oetjen, president of the Crab Orchard Estates Home Owners Association, said the Williamson County Circuit Court would decide on the incorporation Friday.

Presently, the area is within the city's mile-and-a-half zoning control, but Oetjen said city attempts to enforce zoning have been futile.

Jackson County allocates federal funds for area jobs

By Pat Corcoran
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Nearly $400,000 in federal employment grants was parceled out Monday night by the Jackson County Board to create or maintain or maintain 65 public service jobs in the county.

Meeting in a special session Monday night, the county board approved allocation of the Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA) funds. The money will be used to maintain jobs under Title II CETA which would have expired Sept. 30 and will also be used for Title VI CETA jobs which would have expired Feb. 9. Both Title II and Title VI will be extended to June 30, 1976.

The Jackson County Board will become the sole administrator for the federal employment funds. Presently, the Greater Egypt Regional Planning and Development Commission administers the Title II funds for Carbondale and the county handles the Title VI funds.

Among the positions in the county court house which will continue to be funded by Title VI include two microfiliers in the county clerk's office, an executive secretary to the county board and a radio operator in the sheriff's office.

New positions include office workers in the public defender, treasurer, county clerk and circuit clerk offices.

Carbondale will hire additional workers in the city finance department with its share of the grant money. Title II jobs in the city public works department, street department and code enforcement will be continued under the new grant.

Murphysboro which currently has a mechanic and a clerk on the CETA payroll will be able to hire an additional radio operator.

Board Member Bill Kelley, D-Carbondale, made a motion, which the board adopted, to spend $19,668 in an agreement with the Illinois State Employment Service to provide assistance in filling the jobs. The money will come from the county's administrative allowance for the project, Kelley said.

In other action, the county board extended Title VI funding for an assistant adviser for the Jackson County Soil and Water Conservation Service. The board also approved using CETA funding to allow the SIU Museum to hire an assistant.

Enrollment booms in state universities

By the Associated Press

So many students signed up for classes at the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana this semester that undergraduate registration for the spring term has been closed.

A spot check showed student enrollment is booming at a number of other Illinois campuses, with several universities reporting record highs for the fall semester.

"About 35,200 students registered this fall, several hundred more than the number for which the campus was funded," a spokesman for the University of Illinois said. Registration for the spring semester was discontinued "to provide necessary services to students already enrolled."

At Illinois State University in Normal, more than 1,000 additional students are attending classes than a year ago.

"Our figures as of Sept. 10 indicated an all-time enrollment record of 19,048," said spokesman Richard Godfrey. "Last year we had 17,930."

Godfrey said the school has no plans to close enrollment for spring.

He said the university has stepped up its recruitment of part-time working people, offering them opportunities to improve job skills or learn new ones.

"But the economy also is a factor—our retention rate of students is up significantly," Godfrey said. "People are having a difficult time finding jobs, so they are staying in school longer, returning to school or coming to school to prepare for a new career."

At least one of the smaller schools also is experiencing a soaring enrollment. Attendance at Eastern Illinois University in Charleston is 8,994, up 12 per cent from 8,026 last fall.

"This is an all-time record, and it sharply reversed a trend," Eastern spokesman Harry Read said. "The enrollment had been going down for the last two or three years."

The number of students attending Southern Illinois University in Carbondale is the most since 1970, when 23,843 students were enrolled.

"That was our all-time high, and we'd been declining ever since then," said spokesman Pete Brown. "But our enrollment this year is 19,009—up 11.5 per cent from last fall. This is the highest fall semester figure since 1971."

Enrollment at Western Illinois University in Macomb increased for the 17th consecutive year, a spokesman said. It stands now at 14,285, which is 48 more students than were enrolled a year ago.

A spokesman for Northern Illinois University at De Kalb said final enrollment figures will be available early in October.

"But the last head count showed 21,400-plus," said John Gardner, assistant to the president.

"There is considerable historical precedent that the final on-campus head count will be 21,000, give or take 50. This compares with last year's total of 20,102 on-campus students."

That, however, still will be short of the 22,817 students who were enrolled for on-campus sessions in 1970.

One private college contacted showed a decline in student population. Enrollment at Bradley University in Peoria last year was 5,025. This year it's 4,883.

procedures. Any person presenting a grievance to the office will have the complaint monitored until the problem has been resolved or until he or she wishes the procedure stopped.

"I guess, basically, the opinion we have taken is that if the employee perceives it as a problem, it is a problem until it is resolved for that person," said Hayes.

He said the monitoring procedure may be stopped at any time, but then there is no guarantee the person will receive the results he anticipated.

All people who file grievance complaints are safeguarded by law against harassment, termination or retribution.

Once a person gets into a formal grievance procedure he has implied to the Affirmative Action Office that he is willing to accept the consequence as far as grievance procedures go, said Hayes.

Hayes said the office is sometimes "mistakenly viewed as a savior for all the minorities on campus." He cautions, however, that even though no one can be denied available processes, he cannot assure the outcome of the situation.

All cases are handled confidentially and may become public only if they are handled by outside agencies such as FEPC or EEOC, and if an individual wishes to make the case public.

Gasser and Hayes also assist the University in coordinating and monitoring information and resources.

The team keeps the administration informed of state and federal legislation and identifies areas where the University may tend to use discriminatory practices.

Utilities included in rent considered bargain

By Nancy Landis
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

In apartment buildings where landlords pay all utilities, tenants get more than they pay for, several local managers agree.

Most apartment buildings built fairly recently include separate meters for each apartment, which allow tenants to be billed according to their individual use of utilities, explains Fred Davis, Carbondale Central Illinois Public Service (CIPS) manager.

However, landlords whose buildings have joint meters find profit-making increasingly difficult.

Many apartment buildings were built with a single meter years ago because it costs less to install than individual meters and because utilities were less expensive under a commercial rate, the apartment managers say.

Many variables influence an individual's utility use, Davis says, including building construction, insulation, type of heating system, position of apartment in respect to other apartments, number of windows in an apartment and individual use of equipment.

Raul Ayalla, manager of the Wall Street Quadrangles, 1207 S. Wall St., says the Quads have both two-bedroom apartments where tenants pay utilities, and efficiencies where utilities are included in the rent.

That portion of a tenant's rent which is allocated to utilities doesn't quite cover the amount of electricity he uses, Ayalla notes.

Fifteen dollars per month is included in rent payments to cover utility costs. If 15 persons live in an efficiency, the $15 is divided between them.

The average utility bill last year was $30 per month for a two-bedroom apartment. The amount charged for utilities in efficiencies is the previous year's average bill divided by two Ayalla says. Tenants are able to adjust the heat in each apartment, and don't have to watch how much heat they use like tenants who pay utility bills, he says.

"It's better to have the tenant pay utilities because then they're more conscientious about reporting a dripping faucet, for instance," says a spokesman for Circle Park Manor, 1181 E. Walnut St. and Calhoun Valley Apartments, 1195 E. Walnut St. Water is furnished in Calhoun Valley, she said, but Circle Park tenants must pay their own water bills.

Calhoun Valley's metering system was established with a single meter rather than individual meters for each apartment, she explains. Circle Park apartments have individual meters.

The spokesman said that changing the metering system to individual units would not be worth the "trouble" or expense involved.

Such a change would involve installing a central metering unit with meters going to all the apartments in a building. Installation in a completed building would involve ripping into walls and placing the wiring in conduit on the outside of the building.

Forest Hall—Manager John Arnold agrees tenants "very definitely" get a bargain when the landlord pays utility bills.

Arnold says he rents rooms with a central kitchen containing stoves and refrigerators and efficiencies which contain refrigerators and micro-wave ovens.

He lived in an apartment where he paid $10 less rent per month than did Forest Hall tenants, Arnold relates, but he paid about $23 each month for utilities.

Mrs. Victor Vaughn, one of the managers of the Pyramids, 516 S. Rawlings, terms tenants' use of utilities as "lavish." Rent was increased this semester because the cost of utilities increased, she notes.

The other apartment owners say they have not increased their rents recently.

County to request ambulance grant

By Ray Urchel
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Jackson County Board is expected to submit a $60,000 request to the Department of Transportation (DOT) for the purchase of three new ambulances later this week.

"We expect it (the request) to be finished this week and off to Springfield this week," said Ella P. Lacey, of the SIU School of Medicine.

Lacey, who is assisting the Jackson County Board in the preparation of the application, said two of the vehicles will be owned by the county and the other by the City of Murphysboro.

All three vehicles will be leased to the SIU Health Service, she added.

The grant provides that DOT will provide 70 per cent of the funding and Jackson County will supply the remainder.

The Illinois Trauma System has leased two ambulances to the county and City of Murphysboro until they can obtain funding.

Sam McVay, administrative director of the SIU Health Service, said the "earliest time" that the application could be approved is 60 to 90 days.

He said he has received "unofficial assurances that the grant will be approved" when it gets to Springfield.

McVay said he was "very pleased" about the cooperation shown between SIU, city and county officials in reaching the agreement.

Helen Lefebvre, chairperson of the Jackson County Health and Safety Commission, could not be reached for comment.

Frosty Cummings, assistant supervisor of the Health Service, said Tuesday that SIU has provided ambulance service for Jackson County since Aug. 15. He estimated that SIU made 40 calls to Murphysboro between Aug. 15 and the end of the month.

Roberts Funeral Home of Murphysboro ceased providing ambulance service June 1, Cummings said. "I don't know how long the county board has been talking about those things," Cummings said, adding that the Health Service anticipated that Jackson County might ask them to provide ambulance service.

Cummings said that Lefebvre has been concerned with providing "adequate and continuous" ambulance service for Murphysboro.

Housing and hiring

By Lenore Sobota
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

University Housing hiring procedures came under fire this summer with charges of racial discrimination in the naming of an associate director of Housing and the selection and assignment of resident hall coordinators.

The process used in selecting Sharon Justice, former coordinator of student activities, for the associate director's position, over Helen Ellison, a black unit manager with six years of housing experience, was the subject of many meetings in Anthony Hall.

Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs, says his division's overall policy regarding hiring and search committees is being reviewed with an eye toward being more "sensitive." But is sensitivity really enough?

Although Justice assumed her duties as associate director of Housing Aug. 1, appointment papers were held up pending the outcome of the Affirmative Action study. In the meantime, Ellison, who filed a formal complaint with Swinburne, resigned from her housing position to join the student activities staff.

As expected, the announcement that the search committee procedures conformed with affirmative action guidelines was made quietly, with no fanfare.

Swinburne said last week, "We came up with the conclusion that, yes, the search was done in a reasonable fashion, and, yes, we need to be more sensitive in the way we conduct searches and in committee make-up."

Three of the four members on the committee involved in choosing Justice were employees of University Housing. No blacks or students served on the committee.

Asked last July if the absence of blacks and students was an oversight, Sam Rinella, director of University Housing, replied, "No, it just wasn't set up that way."

Does this mean blacks and students were excluded on purpose?

University Housing now has no blacks in position higher than resident housing counselor (RHC) and until late in the summer—again after several Anthony Hall meetings—the number of black RHCs being hired for this fall was far below last year.

Throughout the summer Rinella claimed there was no "problem" with Housing's hiring practices. The subject of University Housing's hiring procedures needs to be aired, yet Rinella still feels it is an internal matter which has no business being reported in the press.

What has he got to hide?

Three Jackson County men were arrested last week for transporting 300 pounds of marijuana into the area. If they had only explained to the arresting officers that they were scientists on their way to SIU to conduct "meaningful research," perhaps they would have got away.

Opinion & Commentary

EDITORIAL POLICY—The general policy of the Daily Egyptian is to provide an open forum for discussion of issues and ideas. Opinions expressed on the editorial pages do not necessarily reflect those of the administration or any department of the University. Signed editorials represent the opinions of the authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Committee, which is composed of the student editor-in-chief, the editorial page editor, a member elected by the student news staff, the managing editor and an editorial writing instructor.

LETTERS POLICY—Letters to the editor are invited and writers may submit them by mail or in person to Editorial Page Editor, Daily Egyptian, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and should not exceed 250 words. Letters which the editors consider libelous or in poor taste will not be published. All letters must be signed by the authors. Students must identify themselves by classification and major. Faculty members by department and rank, non-academic staff members by department and position. Writers submitting letters by mail should include addresses and telephone numbers for verification of authorship. Letters for which verification cannot be made will not be published.

Students unaware of towing law cause downtown brawl

By Mary E. Gardner

Between the police and the crowd congregating outside Merlins and Pizza King, the sense of responsibility for one's actions displayed early Saturday morning left much to be desired. Approximately 100 persons were involved in a street disturbance.

When all the bars closed at 2 a.m., the crowds were forced outside, indignant because the police had towed away the cars parked along the "strip."

The towing of the cars was the police's manner of dealing with a three-week-old city ordinance prohibiting parking from 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. on South Illinois Avenue south of Walnut. Police say that merely ticketing the cars was "ineffective" in enforcing the ordinance.

When I asked several persons in the crowd what had started the rigamarole, they said the towing of all the cars had set off tempers.

This response to the towing, especially when the persons at the blunt end of the stick were pretty drunk, was predictable.

One of the bars was said to have had an unusually great amount of broken glass on the floor when it closed for the night, indicating that tempers were rising before the influx onto the streets.

Once outside the bars, about 20 persons stopped a car in the middle of the street, refusing to let it pass, screaming various over-worked phrases and not-too-gently tapping the car with their fists.

About that time, a couple of squad cars pulled up in front of the Varsity Theater and 7 or 8 officers of the law jumped out, ready for battle. None were in uniform.

The policemen dispersed the crowd enough so that the car could continue down the street. They then sought to keep all the drunks off the street, pushing and shoving when they didn't receive a quick enough response.

But how quickly can a drunk, with 20 or 30 drunks ahead, be expected to negotiate a curb?

Well, the crowd was pretty ugly and the cops were uglier still, shouting obscenities back and forth. Not to be outdone, the crowd smashed bottles and beer cans on the pavement.

Now I can't say I saw anyone throw the bottles or cans, but it was mighty peculiar the way they seemed to head for the policemen as if pulled by some inexplicable magnetic force.

One person wasn't quick enough in getting off the street and a particularly vicious cop hit him over the head with a billy club, knocking the drunk out cold. Then to make sure the crowd didn't retaliate the cop maced the front line of spectators and made his getaway, dragging the fallen martyr behind him.

The cops managed to get the victim standing and began down the street to the squad cars. By that time, the crowd had blood in their eyes — or were they bloodshot from the mace? Hard to tell.

The crowd cried for someone's head, and one of the unruly bunch took a flying leap onto the back of the club-wielding, mace-happy cop.

When it was all over, four persons had been arrested, 12 cars had been towed, an indeterminate number of persons were maced and one man was clubbed.

It is clear, legally, that the policemen were merely doing their duty and earning their pay. But to tow the cars off of South Illinois Avenue at midnight on a Friday night when the bars were full of people, and with no warning, was to invite public disturbance.

Sure, the required legal notice was posted in a community paper, which is not usually read by the student crowd, and "due notice" was given. But when the students make up the majority of the bar crowd and when that crowd has been used to parking cars on the street, it was reasonable to assume that without publicizing the new city ordinance very few of the persons affected would know about it.

After all, the police department saw fit to publicize the crackdown on traffic violations of bicycle riders. Why not the parking ordinance?

If not jumping out of the street fast enough to suit the police warrants getting bopped over the head and carted away, then where is the line drawn between offenses which warrant such treatment and those which do not?

And as one spectator said that night, "They're drunk, how are they supposed to know what they're doing. They can't be held responsible for their actions."

Does it then follow that someone who's had a few beers can do anything without being held responsible? Where can the line be drawn?

Certainly some of the blame must go to both the police and the members of the roudy bunch on the streets and sidewalks.

But not all the blame is their's. Certainly the media should have picked up word on how the new city ordinance would affect the public. The media owes it to the general public to let them know what is going on, including informing them of new laws that will affect their lives. Had the media covered the parking ordinance adequately, the cars would probably have not been parked in the street. (After all, who would stop to read street signs when they knew parking was permitted?)

Certainly the media personnel can't reasonably be expected to be at all places at all times. They are human; and however much they may try not to, mistakes are made.

This is an example of one of them.

Campus housing coverage slanted?

By Ray Urchel
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Samuel L. Rinella, University housing director, has accused the Daily Egyptian of "slanted" coverage of University Housing news.

Rinella said any further information about University Housing would be obtained through the University News Service, the public relations agency of SIU.

"University Housing's PR (public relations) is at an all-time low," Rinella lamented two weeks ago. He said stories published by the Daily Egyptian have had a damaging effect on the public's image of his office.

"Any information you need you can dig out yourself. I think you know why," Rinella said. "I think you (the Daily Egyptian) have taken enough shots at us for awhile."

Previously, the housing director had quizzed a reporter: "How come 19 out of every 20 articles the Daily Egyptian does about University Housing are negative?"

Rinella has since rescinded his threatened use of the University News Service at least for now, and is talking regularly with the reporter assigned to cover University Housing.

But, nevertheless, the question remains: Has the Daily Egyptian's reporting of University Housing news been "slanted?"

A fast check of Daily Egyptians published from

Aug. 1 through Thursday of last week, shows that 12 new stories were published about University Housing. Topics of these stories included overcrowding in the dorms, the appointment of an assistant housing director for programming, two instances of broken water pipes which caused flooding in residence halls and a student's complaint of 100 degree temperatures in his dorm room.

In each case, University Housing officials were given an opportunity to present their side of the story. Rinella was quoted in six of these stories.

Commentary

Other University Housing staff were quoted in the remainder.

The fact is that the newspaper has frequently withheld news stories an additional day to give reporters time to contact Rinella or other dorm officials for comment. His remarks have been reported prominently in stories, as well as his refusal to comment on certain matters.

The housing director should also be aware that he has access to the editorial page forum if he believes his views are being inadequately expressed in the news columns.

Admittedly, Rinella's job is not an easy one. It is virtually impossible to keep all of the estimated 6,260 customers residing in the dorms satisfied. The University has accepted responsibility for providing accommodations for its students, taking into account their diverse needs and interests.

If University Housing fails to meet the needs of the undergraduate, graduate and handicapped students that they serve, to name a few, Rinella will get criticized. Sometimes you're damned if you do and damned if you don't.

The enrollment surge this fall has given University Housing its highest occupancy rate in the last five years.

Moreover, a recent story in the Chronicle of Higher Education predicted a 98 per cent occupancy rate for college dorms nationwide this fall. SIU is not alone with dorm problems.

Students are very interested in University Housing news and how it affects them. The Daily Egyptian has attempted to provide students with such news—both good and bad.

Rinella's threat to not talk to reporters would allow him to decide what information he wants the public to have about University Housing. It would help him keep the "public image" of the office positive.

If he believes the Daily Egyptian should be a public relations arm of University Housing, however, he is badly mistaken. The responsibility of the newspaper is to report the news, not to promote the office of University Housing.

Disrespect of law threatens very foundation of government

To the Daily Egyptian:

Your staff writer, Pat Corcoran's September 18 viewpoint—"New Version of Monkey Trial" was far from funny. It is sad—sad indeed—when a university newspaper exercises its freedom-to-write privileges by belittling one of our great religions in exercising its freedom of expression, guaranteed and protected by the same constitution and laws that insure every freedom and all the liberties we each enjoy in America today.

It is sadder still when, in the name of academic freedom and freedom of the press, such powerful instrumentalities abuse their power and privileges by inculcating a disrespect for these same laws under the protection of which they exist. By encouraging, condoning and fostering violation of any law of this land, fuel is added to the fires of an ever-increasing and explosive condition of criminality that haunts every hamlet in our country.

Disrespect of law, the decline of morality and the waning influence of the church and religion abate and threaten the very foundations of this constitutional government of laws and its institutions. We must constantly remind ourselves that this is not a government of men but of laws, and that those who advocate equality of justice under law and are willing to stick their necks out to support it should not be deprecated but lauded by the press and everyone desiring the survival and strengthening of this Republic.

As a citizen, a Christian and a judge I am pleased and encouraged that revivals are still being held in arenas; that good citizens everywhere, including most Christians, still believe in this government of laws whose bicentennial we are about to celebrate; that they are doing what they can to strengthen it—even by filing complaints for law violations in prosecutors' offices, appearing as witnesses and serving on juries; and lastly, that they are still praying the Lord's prayer, which I strongly recommend for your entire staff.

Statements on arms to Turkey misleading

To the Daily Egyptian:

Constanti Karahalios' editorial on the arms embargo to Turkey (Daily Egyptian, Sept. 18) states that the government of Greek-Cypriots is willing to undertake financial responsibility of building houses for Turkish-Cypriots in areas with Turkish majority. Doesn't this mean that even in areas with Turkish majority, Turks do not have proper houses, and therefore, the Greek-Cypriot government is now promising help? Where was this "compassionate" government when Turkish-Cypriots were living in barns, garages, and all sorts of shacks? Under the discriminating rule of Makarios and continuous terrorist pressure from the Greek EOKA organizations, Turkish-Cypriots did not live, they merely survived.

The mentioned editorial is misleading, for it shows just one side of the coin and describes Turkey as an aggressive state which has no respect for human rights. Turkish troops are on the island to protect those dear human rights. For over 15 years, Turkey has negotiated in vain to put an end to mistreatment of Turkish-Cypriots who, under the constitution, were supposed to be equal citizens of the island republic. In the course of these negotiations, Turkey signed agreements with Greece, Britain, and Makarios which recognized her right to military intervention should the constitutional status be upset and the survival of the Turkish community be seriously threatened. Turkish intervention following Sampson's coup was an implementation of these treaties and has the sole purpose of bringing about a realistic political solution which will make Turkish-Cypriots equal and secure citizens of the Republic of Cyprus.

Tribute to Martinsek

Editor's Note—Prof. Thomas A. Martinsek was killed in an automobile accident on Aug. 15. He had been a member of the SIU Economics Department To the Daily Egyptian:

The Department of Economics and this University have suffered a grievous loss in the death of Professor Thomas A. Martinsek. As his immediate colleagues, we wish to memorialize that loss, but we wish even more to celebrate the years we had together with him. These were good years, and there were many of them. In his more than a decade and a half here, he became widely known and respected as a lucid, empathetic, and caring teacher; as a resourceful, dependable, and giving colleague; and as a learned and preceptive man. This quiet, unassuming, private person reached more people—students, colleagues, neighbors and friends—than he would admit or than even his colleagues fully realized.

The professional, the teacher, the scholar will be sorely missed. The man will be missed even more, if that be possible. He was a living embodiment of high standards, intolerance of shoddiness or sham, and insistence on that best of visions, the student-centered, colleague-centered, truth-centered academic community, in which people interact in honesty but never in pettiness nor in malice. He was also a deeply compassionate man, who helped when he was needed, and who usually knew when that moment had come. He brought to this role a fine mind, a warm heart, and a humor born of his knowledge that we are all a little ridiculous.

Resolved by the Department of Economics on Sept. 3, 1975

U.S. should embargo arms to Greece

To the Daily Egyptian:

Mr. Karahalios (Daily Egyptian, Sept. 18) misleads the public opinion by taking out of context statements made by Turkish officials. When did Turkey even indicate a possible use of U.S. weapons against Greece without also adding that such use of arms will be in response to a Greek first-strike? If Greece keeps infringing upon legitimate Turkish rights, the danger of war will of course exist. But this danger is increasing with the continuing arms embargo because Greece is being further encouraged to disregard Turkish rights.

It was Greece who actually used American weapons against Turkey while trying to stop the Turkish intervention in Cyprus. This operation was a fulfillment of treaty (1967, Paris) obligations bestowed upon Turkey and was not directed against Greece.

It was Greece who illegally reinforced Greek-Cypriots for years with American weapons, which were given to Greece to carry out its NATO commitments. Murdering Turkish women and children in defenseless homes was not within NATO commitments.

It was Greece who threatened to sink Turkish oil exploration vessels in the Aegean-sea after unilaterally deciding that Turkey has no rights on that sea.

It is Greece who is openly reinforcing the islands in the Aegean, although the 1967 Paris agreement dictated demilitarization of these islands.

As long as Greece respects international agreements and human rights, it does not need any protection against Turkey. In fact, a well informed judgment should call for an embargo against Greece, for it is Greece who is confusing targets for U.S. arms.

Saluki father and daughter to 'hound' SIU foes at games

By Nancy Landis
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Saluki teams may have a doggone hard time getting fans to attend games this season, but at least one father and daughter plan to root home game action.

Billa and his daughter, Debbie, may not howl at other teams, growl about lost games and anxiously gnaw their programs like other fans, but they will quietly support SIU's teams.

Donning new coats, freshly groomed and ready for crowds, SIU's Saluki mascots, Billa and Debbie, will be brought to each home game by Alpha Phi Omega fraternity members.

Debbie, 4, made her first appearance of the season at Saturday's game. Billa, 6, who has contracted a case of heart worm disease, will not appear for about a month, Bill Winter, president of Alpha Phi Omega, said Monday.

Winter said the purchasing cost of a Saluki is $2,000. He said the University pays for food and veterinarian costs, and houses the dogs at University Farms where SIU employees care for them.

Alpha Phi Omega members exercise the dogs and prepare them for games, Winter said.

Alpha Phi Omega is a national service fraternity with a membership of 30, Winter said. Members provide services to the campus and community, such as ushering at Shryock and participating in community-based projects, like sponsoring a summer and fall Boy Scout camporees and working with the Women's Club, he said.

Employers to use Brown Shoe plant

The Brown Shoe Co. has pledged cooperation in making its plant available to other employers to ease the unemployment caused by recent discontinuance of its Murphysboro operation.

Company officials said the plant closing was caused by falling sales volumes resulting from increased competition from foreign imports. The company also plans to provide re-training programs for employees who will lose their jobs.

Winter said the fraternity has a sister organization called the Phyetes with a membership of about 10.

SIU changed its nickname from Maroons to Salukis in 1949 to be in step with Southern Illinois' nickname, Little Egypt.

Salukis were hunting dogs in ancient Egypt and can be traced as far back as 3500 B.C., Winter said. Excavations of the Sumerian empire indicate the Saluki may have existed in 7000 B.C.

Winter said Saluki meant "the noble one" in ancient Arabic. "They were used for hunting," he said. Gazelles were their primary prey.

Moslems said Salukis were sacred and given by Allah for Moslem amusement and benefit. In this way, they were allowed to eat meat retrieved by Salukis in hunts.

Winter said speedy Salukis have been clocked at more than 50 miles per hour.

SIU received its first Saluki, King Tut, in 1951.

A memorial for King Tut, after he was killed by an automobile in 1954, was placed in McAndrew Stadium, Winter said.

Career fair provides employment information

Students interested in investigating career opportunities will have a chance to meet with employers Thursday in the Student Center at the second annual Career Conference sponsored by SIU's Career Planning and Placement Center (CPPC).

Approximately 50 local, state, and national organizations will have materials on display in Ballrooms C and D from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The conference is designed so that students may visit the various displays on an informal basis. Representatives from the organizations will be available to answer any questions.

S. Lee Wohlwend, conference coordinator and staff member at the CPPC, said he believes the conference will benefit both the students and the employers.

Students will get a chance to become familiar with company names and locations. They can find out firsthand what majors the employers are looking for and what the potential job market will be for graduates, said Wohlwend.

Wohlwend added that the conference was planned to occur the week before the fall interviewing schedule starts at the Placement Center so students can get acquainted with companies before they make interview decisions.

Employers will benefit from the conference by putting themselves in direct contact with potential employees, said Wohlwend. Many students do not really get interested in a company as a possible employer simply by hearing that the company is interviewing at the Placement Center. This gives the company a chance to show who they really are, he explained.

Wohlwend also said the CPPC will sponsor four booths for students who need information about the interviewing process at the Placement Center, career counseling, testing, and a new cooperative program being sponsored by the Center.

Wild West Show to perform

The Diamond S Rodeo and Wild West Show will perform two shows at 2 and 5 p.m. Sunday at the Carbondale Industrial Park on North Route 51.

Sponsored by the Bagdad Shrine Temple No. 104 of Cairo, the show will contain exhibitive rather than competitive acts, says Ed Jackson, promotion director.

The Diamond S Rodeo performs in its own arena and will provide enough covered grandstand space to seat 3,000 people with separate facilities provided for people in wheelchairs.

Tickets will be $2.50 for adults, $1.50 for children and $8 for a family of six.

Tickets may be purchased at Sav-Mart, the Student Center ticket office, Bleyer's Sports Mart, Arnette Barber Shop and Bianco's Drugstore in DuQuoin.

Parking will be provided in the Centralia Cartage lot.

Proceeds from the rodeo will go to the Carbondale United Fund.

Ornah Farouk, a Saluki given to SIU in 1956, was descended from a royal pet. The king of Saudi Arabia gave Ornah Farouk's grandfather to a British field marshal, Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, during World War II. Wilson was sent to the United States as a British Joint Staff member and brought the dog with him.

The dog was taken to a kennel in Valley City, Ohio and bred with other Salukis. Ornah Farouk was on descendant.

SIU's stock of pedigree Salukis grew to 12 when a Saluki nicknamed "Cricket" gave birth to eight puppies in 1971.

However, Billa and Debbie are the only SIU Salukis left. After finding that upkeep and grooming of the Salukis was not dog-cheap, the University gave away all but the father-daughter mascot team.

Streisand, 'Funny Lady' prove uninspiring in musical sequel

By James Crocher

Student Writer
"Funny Girl" marked the dynamic debut of Barbra Streisand as an exciting screen personality, an instant star with remarkable potential. Several films and years later, "Funny Lady," the inevitable sequel, brings us full circle on Ms. Streisand's accomplishments and what we witness is a lavishlyproduced embalming process. Just from the opening and closing shots of Ms. Streisand's eyes superimposed over a background of stage lights, the film is saying "Here she is! Lovable, adorable Barbra, no longer just your ordinary Hollywood superstar, but an American Institution!"

A Review

The plot's structure mundanely parallels the original. Streisand, as Fanny Brice, is again the wisecracking torch singer, successful as an entertainer but a loser at love. We trace her career from the Arnstein divorce through her subsequent marriage to master showman Billy Rose, a marriage destined to break up from the start, once again leading Fanny up the Trail of Broken Hearts. This time the writers tack on a ten-years-after scene in which Brice and Rose, properly graying, meet again to reminisce over old times. Rose offers Brice another starring role in one of his extravaganza productions, which leaves the door open for, God-forbid, a sequel to the sequel ("Funny Grandma"?).

The ingredients are all here—the songs, the repartees, the flashy production numbers and gorgeous costumes—but the film never comes alive. Part of the blame falls on Director Herbert Ross, who may have some clever ideas on how to stage musical numbers but certainly lacks insight on how they should be filmed. Then there are the writers, Jay Presson Allen and Arnold Schulman, who succeed in deflating Fanny Brice's character, stripping away its original vibrancy and turning her into a world-weary figure of unremarkable appeal.

But "Funny Lady" is nothing if not a star vehicle and that is where it ultimately fails, for the stars simply do little better than walk through their parts. They refuse to bring any depth to their characters, relying solely on surface impressions. Thus the acting seems to presume, wrongly, that the audience is happy just to see the stars' faces up there on the screen.

As Billy Rose, James Caan is a real guffaw, a ham act comprised of meaningless hand gestures and plastic, quizzical smiles. Omar Sharif is worse. Back in his original role as Nicky Arnstein, he is the definitive interpretation of walking, talking cardboard.

It is Ms. Streisand, though, who finally sinks the film. She still sings well (and she still has trouble hitting the high notes without shrieking), but her Fanny Brice schtick (as evidenced in all her films) is beginning to submerge her, like the Statue of Liberty, slowly sinking into the harbor. Her airless performance strives only to retain our memory of the original. She seems to think she no longer needs to work for our sympathy, but that is an obligation that no star, not even an institution, can afford to ignore. The plain fact is that as an institution, she's become a bore. The boredom kills any slim chance the film might have had.

Hopefully, "Funny Lady" is the last in a line of mediocre musicals Ms. Streisand will associate herself with. She needs a fresh, sharp new property to rekindle her spirit and her acting. If she does not find it in the near future, she risks passing out of the hearts of those fans who really do adore her.

Concert-goers suffer from unsuitable seats

A "staff error" in the seating arrangement of last Friday's Fleetwood Mac concert resulted in 36 people getting seats "that were not as good as they thought they would be," according to Dean Justice, arena manager.

Justice said he received complaints from six students after the concert. Students purchased tickets they thought were going to be on the inside isles in front of the stage. The seats turned out to be in the front of the soundstack on the side.

"What I'm concerned about is the people that put up with it and didn't come forward," Justice said. Persons involved in the mixup were seated in section Y, row 1, seats 1 through 8; section Y, row 2, seats 1 through 8; section X, row 1, seats 7 through 14; and section X, row 2, seats 7 through 14.

"I'll be glad to talk with them and see what we can work out," Justice added. "I hope my faith in students is well founded and the people that do show up will have had those seats."

Justice asked that people call and make an appointment before coming to see him.

NOTICE

Construction will soon begin to complete the access road and turnaround in front of the main entrance of the Student Center. Construction will also begin on new sidewalks leading north from the main entrance of the Student Center.

During construction, the access road and sidewalk north to Faner Hall will be closed to all traffic. Approximately 60 dry working days will be required to complete this construction.

It is realized that this construction will be an inconvenience to many people as they may have to reroute their way to and from work or classes. Please bear with us. We will do our best to pursue this project as expeditiously as possible.

Convenience versus nutrition with student grocery shoppers

By Dennis Rice
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A survey taken of four major grocery stores in Carbondale indicates differences of opinion as to whether SIU students are becoming consumer-minded or are still willing to pay for convenience foods.

Managers of Kroger in the Murdale Shopping Center and J.C. Penney's Food Market in the University Mall agree that students are becoming better shoppers. Ray Howerton of Kroger says that students don't seem to be much different in their buying than housewives.

"I think students are very conservative buyers," said Howerton. "They're buying more juices and the foods they really need."

Walter Roberson of Penney's agrees. "Our store is a bit different than most of the other stores in town because we have gourmet lines and nutritional foods, but I think the students are becoming aware of consumerism," said Roberson. "They really shop for what's good for them and I think this is good."

Two other store managers, however, voiced quite different viewpoints on student food buying.

Robert Brantley of National Super Market, 915 W. Main St., says that students in his store tend to buy a large amount of convenience foods and frozen foods.

"This is probably because students don't have much time to prepare their meals, or they don't have convenient cooking facilities," said Brantley.

David Pulacher, manager of Boren's IGA Foodliner, 1620 W.

Copy-Duplicating to move services

The Copy-Duplicating Service located in Woody Hall will be moving its operations to building 0056 in the Physical Plant area, according to Harold Braswell of the Printing-Duplicating Service.

During the course of the move, Braswell suggests that the Copy Center in the General Classrooms building and the Printing Service in Service Shop Number One be utilized.

The staffs at these locations will be increased to provide needed services until normal operations resume at the permanent location.

Beg your pardon

The Daily Egyptian incorrectly reported Josh McDowell would be on campus Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. McDowell will appear Wednesday and Thursday at 8 p.m. in Shryock auditorium.

Main St., also said that students buy mostly convenience and frozen foods, as well as a certain amount of "junk foods."

Whatever students' buying habits are they may be swayed to consumer-oriented ones by Ralph Nader's speech Oct. 15 at 7 p.m. in the Student Center Ballrooms. Tickets for the speech are on sale for $3 at the Central Ticket Office in the Student Center.

'Salute to Broadway' to star homegrown Illinois actors

At least for its one night engagement at SIU, "Gene Kelly's Salute to Broadway" might be more aptly titled "Home Grown and Illinois Good." The Celebrity Series production will star Howard Keel and Ken Berry—both of whom left the cornfields of Illinois for the bright lights of Broadway.

"Gene Kelly's Salute to Broadway" is directed and choreographed by (surprise) Gene Kelly. Kelly is best remembered for his dance performances, but he is new to directing. He has to credit as a director the Broadway musical, "Flower Drum Song," and the film version of "Hello Dolly."

Alan Jay Lerner wrote the original book for "Gene Kelly's Salute to Broadway." The last time Lerner and Kelly teamed up was for the film "An American in Paris." That film won the Academy Award for Best Picture of 1951 and a special Oscar for Kelly.

"Salute to Broadway" will offer a mixture of comedy and drama, music and dance. Songs in the show will include "Yankee Doodle Dandy," "Hair" and "Jesus Christ Superstar." Selections from "West Side Story," and "South Pacific" as well as from Lerner's stage hits, including "Brigadoon" and "Paint Your Wagon" will round out the show.

Mimi Hines and Laine Nelson will combine their talents with Berry and Keel to spin a tale of Broadway. A company of six dancers will complete the cast.

Hines, a singer and comedian, appeared at SIU in 1970 in the musical "I Do! I Do!" Hines replaced Barbara Streisand in "Funny Girl" on Broadway, playing to capacity audiences for 18 months.

Keel, who hails from Gillespie, Ill., rose to fame during the heyday of musical productions. He starred in MGM's "Annie Get Your Gun,"

"Kiss Me Kate" and "Showboat." Berry has performed on and off Broadway, in movies and television. Some of his credits include "Mayberry R.F.D.," "F Troop" and "The Love Bug Rides Again."

"Gene Kelly's Salute to Broadway" will be presented Oct. 1 at 8 p.m. in Shryock Auditorium. Tickets are currently on sale at the Central Ticket Office in the Student Center. General public admission is $5, $6, and $8. SIU students may purchase tickets for $4, $5 and $7.

Blood donation contest planned

Plans are being made for many of the sororities, fraternities, clubs and organizations on campus to "give a little life" this fall when the Red Cross blood drive comes to campus the week before Thanksgiving vacation.

The Red Cross is trying to get students involved in group blood donation this year to reach SIU's goal of 2,000 pints.

An organizational meeting was held Monday night in the Student Center with representatives of several groups. The Greeks are planning a kick-off meeting Oct. 14 for all the houses and organizations on campus.

If 25 per cent of the members in a group donate blood the Red Cross will give blood to all the members of the group and their parents who might need it. All blood is replaced by the Red Cross on a one-unit to one unit basis.

The Red Cross also wants SIU to compete in blood donations with the University of Illinois and Eastern. Both of these universities donate more blood than SIU. U of I gave over 10,000 pints this year and Eastern donated over 2,200 pints.

"If we are going to compare with U of I or Eastern, two colleges in this area, we are going to have to get our hands on everyone. We need to at least reach our goal of 2,000 pints." Merle D. Fischer, blood recruitment consultant from the Missouri-Illinois Red Cross Program, said.

Harp harmony

Tom Murray, senior in Cinema and Photography, makes music during harmonica lessons given through Free School. Classes, instructed by Kit Ducey, are given on Wednesdays, in the Ohio Room at the Student Center.

Information night set for prelaw

The annual prelaw information night will be Wednesday, Oct. 1, at 7:30 p.m. in Lawson 171, according to Browning Carrott of the Prelaw Advisory Committee.
 The meeting is open to all interested students and will cover admission procedures and problems, grade point requirements and the Law School Admission Test.
 Associate Dean Thomas G. Roady Jr., director of admissions for the SIU Law School, will attend the meeting along with a panel of law students who will discuss undergraduate preparation, taking the admission test, and what to expect in law school.
 Students who took the recent mock Law School Admissions Test may pick up their scores at prelaw night or in the college advisement office, 1209 Fanner Hall, at the end of the week.

Anyone walking down the halls of the Arlington Building, 604 E. College St., might assume he was in a typical college dormitory.
 The white paint on the doors is faded and the once-gold carpet is scuffed to a shade of brown. Someone is playing pool and there a radio blares in the background.
 The scene, however, is not a dorm and its rooms are not filled with students. The Arlington Building is the location of the Alcoholism Resource Center (ARC) and its inhabitants are on an in-patient program. They receive medical care, food and counseling, if needed.
 ARC is under the supervision of the Jackson County Community Mental Health Center and has a trained staff of nine, including a doctor and a nurse on retainer fees.

Local man arrested, charged with burglary

A man was arrested Monday evening by Carbondale police for allegedly burglarizing Carbondale Community High School Center, 200 N. Springer St.
 Thomas Young, 503 E. Sycamore St., was apprehended by security guards while he was leaving the building through a back window. A second unidentified youth fled the scene and is being sought by the police.
 Police said the faculty lounge door had been smashed open and the vending machines inside were vandalized. Young was taken to Jackson County jail.
 Richard Brown, 400 S. Logan St., reported to the police Monday evening that his residence had been broken into and an electric guitar and stereo components were taken. The items were valued at $270.
 The sales clerk at Rocky Mountain Surplus Store, 511 S. Illinois Ave., discovered Monday evening a counterfeit $1 bill in their cash register. They said someone passed the bill early that afternoon. The evidence was given to the police.
 The management of Jim Pearl, Inc., 1015 E. Walnut St., filed a stolen automobile report Monday with the police after a car they rented in August was not returned. They said all means of tracing the car had been exhausted. The vehicle is a 1975 two-door Oldsmobile and has an Illinois license, FY4216.

Form can save money for vacating students

Students planning to leave SIU after the fall semester may wish to save $25 to $75 by filing an intent to vacate form with the University Housing office, Washington Square D, five weeks before the end of the semester.
 "This form must be filed five weeks before to give us a chance to notify people who wish to check in at the beginning of next semester," Joseph Gasser, assistant director of University Housing, said. This form may be voided "up to the Monday immediately preceding finals week," he said.
 The maximum charge a student planning to leave at semester's end pays is room and board to the end of the semester and $100. This charge may be reduced to $75 if the student files an intent to vacate form, he said.
 This charge may be reduced to $25 dollars if the student can show proof of enrollment in another university or junior college, or can show proof of marriage within four weeks following the semester, and if he has filed an intent to vacate and checked out properly, Gasser said.
 In all cases, he said, the student must check out properly which includes filling out a check-out form from the Student Resident Advisor (SRA), turning in linen, meal ticket and room key and having the SRA check the room.

Four others are paid and the remaining three are SIU graduate students doing field work.
 Gary Keeting, a graduate student counselor, said in addition to having an in-patient program, the center runs both an operation for "detoxification" (drying out) and a program for out-patients.
 The "detoxification" program in cooperation with the courts and the local police, provides medical care, food and a place to sleep for anyone arrested on a charge of public intoxication. Keeting said those under this program usually stay three or four days and then move on.
 "When they're (the "detoxification" cases) brought in, the doctor and the nurse take their vital signs, give them something to eat and put them to bed," Keeting said. "We help bring them back to a normal state of health."

Out-patient counseling involves patients living and functioning in the community and coming to the center when they need help.
 Keeting said the center has rooms for 30 in-patients, half of which are now filled. He said if there were an overflow of patients, the center would refer them to other agencies.
 In-patients pay what they can afford; the rest of the cost is covered by public funds. In-patients usually stay in the center three to four months.
 "People contact us in a variety of ways, through friends, their wives or they call us," he said.
 Keeting said the center expects to process about 100 cases this year with about 15 per cent being SIU students. Most people using the facilities are white males between the ages of 30 and 60, he said.
 When asked about the success rate of the center, Keeting replied, "It's not a disease like the measles. You don't have it and then it's gone. It affects your whole life."
 "A man may have an alcohol problem and also not get along with his wife. If he gets along better with his wife (after the program), that may be success," he said.
 The center has no legal power to retain anyone connected with the program, Keeting said. However, many patients are asked to stay for further counseling.
 "People come to the center because they are not satisfied with their lives and alcohol. If they're here, we think they should be," Keeting said.

Students rarely come to the center for in-patient treatment, but if convicted of driving while intoxicated or an alcohol-related offense, the courts often ask the offender to seek help at the center.
 The program is not part of Alcoholics Anonymous, Keeting said, but it adheres to many of the same ideals.
 When asked what patients say as they leave, Keeting said, "It depends on what grounds they leave."
 "If they go right out and drink, they don't say much, but if they are happier with their lives, they really appreciate it and give us a lot of thanks."

Scuba Club offers activities for underwater enthusiasts

By Mike Springston
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The SIU Scuba Club has many activities planned for those interested in the wonders of the world below the briny depths.

With holiday trips planned to West Palm Beach, the Florida Keys and the Bahamas, diving-related discounts for members and free use of Pulliam Pool once a week, club members have plenty of opportunities to explore the underwater world.

Most members of the club come through the GSE skin diving and scuba classes, but the club will accept experienced divers if they are certified by the club.

To qualify for the skin diving class, prospective divers must prove their stamina by swimming 12 pool lengths, treading water for 15 minutes and swimming 15 yards under water.

The club supplies most equipment, but members are expected to supply their own mask, snorkel and fins.

"We want the person to get interested in diving without much expense," said Vevon Sierman, the club's president. Sierman said most class members generally join the club because they can get a 20 percent discount on equipment. The club presently has about 300 members.

Sierman said that the club is the only place to rent wet suits in the area. Suits, regulators and tanks can be rented for $7 a piece through the club, with tank rental only 50 cents during meetings.

Sierman described scuba diving as "extremely relaxing. It's a weightless environment so you don't have to exert much power to move."

Sierman added, "You can check out so much plant and marine life that you just can't get tired of it."

The skin diving class teaches the student how to use the mask, snorkel and fins. Students also learn what conditions they are susceptible to in the water and the best way to handle them.

The intermediate scuba class continues educating the diver to the medical conditions as well as teaching the student how to control the equipment. The advanced scuba class takes those aspects into greater detail.

The Scuba Club meets 6 p.m. Wednesdays in Pulliam Pool with a main meeting held the first Wednesday of every month.

A member of the Scuba Club turns a few acrobatic stunts during a club session at Pulliam Pool. Club members are entitled to free use of the pool once a week. (Staff photo by Carl Wagner)

Dean to serve as intern mentor

Lon R. Shelby, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, will be acting as mentor for Patricia P. Fernandez, who was selected by the Administrative Internship Program for Minorities and Women as a Rockefeller Fellow.

Fernandez, chairman of the mathematics department of Weber State College, will work under Shelby in an administrative internship program. She will also have a major responsibility in planning the December mini-workshop which will study a significant problem in higher education.

The internship program is funded by the Academic Affairs Conference of Midwestern Universities, of which SIU is a member, and a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation. Purpose of the program is to provide in-depth experience for minorities and women who have potential and expect to move into key leadership positions in higher education.

City council okays purchase of van, five new patrol cars

By Pat Corcoran
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Carbondale City Council approved the purchase of five intermediate size patrol cars for the police department plus a three-quarter ton van for the animal control division.

Meeting in formal session Monday night, the council also awarded a $120,000 contract to Pace, Inc., Henderson, Ky. for construction of a shell building at the Carbondale industrial park. The Carbondale Industrial Corporation will pay for the floorless, fixtureless building. City Manager Carroll Fry told the council.

The five police cars will be similar to the intermediate size squad cars the department now uses. Police Chief George Kennedy said. The council voted to postpone purchasing a van for chief Kennedy until after the patrol cars were bought and the remaining funds assessed.

The shell building will have "just four walls and a roof" Phillip Baewer, economic development director said. But, it will allow any new industry wishing to locate in the Carbondale area to move into an existing structure, he added.

Any occupant will be able to put in the heating, air-conditioning or floor they need, Baewer said.

In other action, the council appointed Robert C. Radtke, 504 Emerald Lane, to replace Deborah Asaturians on the Board of Police and Fire Commissioners. The police and fire commission hears appeals from police and firemen involved in disputes with their superiors.

Asaturians resigned from the three-person board after moving out of the Carbondale city limits.

Two former SIU students, David Smith and Al Turner, were removed from the Community Development Steering Committee for their lack of attendance at the steering committee meetings.

Mayor Neal Eckert recommended, and the council confirmed, the appointment of Gloria Thomas, 301 E. Willow St., to the steering committee.

The Rev. Charles Watkins was appointed as steering committee chairman.

Financial aid available to grad students

Graduate students interested in monetary support to pursue their field of studies are eligible to apply for the following awards.

The Ford Foundation is offering graduate fellowships for Black and Native Americans who intend to pursue a career in higher education. For application forms, blacks should write to National Fellowships Fund, 795 NE Peachtree St., Suite 484, Atlanta, Ga., 30308. Native Americans should address requests to The Ford Foundation, 320 E. 43rd St., New York, N.Y., 10017. Application deadline is Jan. 1.

The National Science Foundation is offering three-year graduate fellowships to college seniors and first-year graduate students in the mathematical, physical, medical, biological, engineering and social sciences and in the history and philosophy of science. Those interested should request applications from the Fellowship Office, National Research Council, 2101

Constitution Ave., Washington, D.C., 20418. The deadline is Dec. 1.

The Smithsonian Institute is offering dissertation support of $5,000 for research at the institute in American history, history of science, history of art, anthropology, earth sciences and biological science. There is also a summer fellowship of $100 a week for graduate students to conduct two to three month directed research and study projects. The application deadline is March 15.

Hood murder trial set for Oct. 29

A jury trial has been set for Oct. 29 for the three-count indictment charging James Seitzinger with the murder of Mark Thomas Hood.

Seitzinger, 27, Murphysboro, appeared in Jackson County Circuit Court Tuesday on a bond return hearing. This was his first court appearance since he received a copy of the grand jury indictment on Sept. 11, charging him with two counts of murder and one count of voluntary manslaughter.

Seitzinger has entered no plea in the case.

Mr. Hood, formerly of Murphysboro, was a cousin of Jackson County State's Attorney Howard Hood. State's Attorney Hood has said neither he nor any one from his office will handle the case because of his relationship to the victim. Instead, Hood called in William Meehan of the State's Attorney's Task Force in Cairo to prosecute Seitzinger.

Meehan filed a motion for discovery, requiring the defendant to list his witnesses and the evidence he will use. David Watt, Murphysboro attorney representing Seitzinger, had filed a motion for discovery earlier.

In the hearing Tuesday, Associate Judge Everett Prosser set Oct. 8 as the date for both discovery motions to be answered. A trial readiness hearing will be held on Oct. 23 before the trial begins on Oct. 29, Prosser said.

Mr. Hood was killed in the Seitzinger home, 308 N. 9th St., on Aug. 14 by a single rifle shot from a .30-lever action Winchester. A coroner's jury ruled the death a homicide.

Juan Mario Amos, 18, Murphysboro, testified at the coroner's hearing that he was sitting at the Seitzinger kitchen table facing Mr. Hood when he heard a gun shot. Amos said he saw Seitzinger holding the rifle.

Everyone seems interested in what a St. Louis Rambler rugby player has found, especially SIU rugger Jon Streitmatter (beard and dark jersey). Streitmatter is trying to stop the Rambler from lateraling the ball in Saturday's rugby game. SIU lost the A game 15-10, but won the B game 22-3. ## IM tennis tourney has large turnout

By Rick Korch
Student Writer

The intramural tennis tournament started Tuesday with "almost double" the number of participants as last year, according to Larry Schaake, director of the Office of Recreation and Intramurals.

There are 171 players in the singles tournament compared to only 96 last year. Doubles and mixed doubles are also included in the tournament, with 71 doubles teams, compared to last year's 48. For mixed doubles, there are 31 teams, 14 more than a year ago.

All of the 12 tennis courts east of the Arena are being used on Tuesday and Wednesday. On Thursday, nine courts will be used, and on Friday, the number will be down to six. There will be no tournament play over the weekend. On Monday, the games will start again, and the championship games will be played "probably on Thursday or Friday," said Schaake. In case of rain, all the games will be moved back one day.

All games will be played between 6 p.m. and midnight and must be played at that time or else be played earlier, but only after notifying the intramural office.

A 10-game pro set will be played up to the quarterfinals, when the best two-of-three sets begins. The 10-game pro set was adopted this year so that all games can be played on the hour. The times and pairings have already been made, and are posted in the intramural office.

Schaake said that he "had no idea of the amount of participants in the tournament. The large number of entries is a pleasant surprise and once again points up the need for additional recreational and intramural facilities at this University."

To further explain, Schaake said, "We are finding ourselves running into the same problems (the large number of participants) in many of our other tournaments as well."

Injured back's shoes filled by Henry's yards

By Mark Kazlowski
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Nobody likes to see injuries happen, but when it happens, coaches depend on the replacement to fill the shoes of the injured player.

SIU freshman Wash Henry stepped in for injured sophomore fullback Hugh Fletcher and did just that in Saturday's 23-21 loss to Indiana State. Fletcher sustained a broken ankle on the fifth play of the game and will be lost for the season.

The first time Henry touched the ball as a college running back, he gained 31 yards. Seven plays later he found a hole in the middle from 11 yards out for his first and SIU's first touchdown.

Henry was the leading ground gainer for the Salukis with 89 yards in 11 carries. His play was overshadowed though by Indiana State freshman Dave Vandercook's game-winning field goal with no time on the clock.

"Henry is starting as a result of his performance," head coach Doug Weaver said Tuesday before practice.

"It's always tough when a player gets his chance as a result of an injury to another outstanding player," he added.

"I didn't like to see Fletcher get hurt, but it gave me a chance," Henry said.

The 5-foot-11, 190 pound Henry said he hadn't expected to get as much playing time as he did Saturday. "They (coaches) weren't too sure of my abilities."

Henry, who described himself as an average blocker, said he needs to work on his blocking and a few other things.

The New Orleans native was a fullback and halfback in high school. He was moved from halfback to fullback during fall drills. Henry said he is still adjusting to some of the differences in the fullback spot such as starting from a four-point stance rather than a three-point stance.

After watching Henry in the pre-season practice sessions the coaches decided his best position would be fullback. Weaver said "He seemed like a natural fullback." He has real good running instinct.

Comparing Henry with Fletcher, Weaver said Henry is "not as complete a fullback yet, particularly in blocking and faking."

"He's such a hard worker I'm sure he'll improve."

Weaver pointed to the fullback spot as being important in the wishbone offense.

"The fullback has to do good if we're going to have an offense," he said, and expressed confidence that Henry can do the job.

Henry missed the season opener against Southwestern Louisiana because of a pulled groin muscle. "I really wanted to play in that game," Henry said. Besides being played near his home, the game would have featured a rivalry between Henry and his cousin, Southwestern Louisiana quarterback Roy Henry.

SIU's Henry said he works out with his Rajun Cajun cousin during the summer and would have liked the chance to play against him.

SIU freshman fullback Wash Henry slipped through the middle of the Indiana State line in the second quarter for his first touchdown as a Saluki. He carried the ball 11 times for 89 yards. (Staff photo by Jim Cook)

Oldtimers recall McAndrew, friends, foes

By Scott Burnside
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Thomas Wolfe wrote, "You Can Never Go Home Again." However, he did not say anything about going back to the old alma mater.

Members of the 1938 football team, the first squad to use McAndrew Stadium did just that last weekend, and the experience was well worth the time in memories alone.

Honored at Saturday's football game, the memories for the old-timers did not start flowing until the get-together at the Carbondale Holiday Inn after the ballgame.

As the hour crept onward, the tackles grew into gigantic collisions, and memories of the toughest fullback in the state, had the player at least 50 pounds and five inches taller than he actually was.

What was consistent was the fond memories of the head coach, William McAndrew or "Squirrel," as he was known to his teams.

J.T. "Chief" English, a vice president of the Du Quoin Packing Co., had a loan co-signed at a local bank by Coach McAndrew. The loan was $17.50, and it paid for English's tuition for his first semester.

English was an end in those days, and since his mother was part Indian, his teammates called him "Chief."

SIU assistant athletic director Bill Brown was a 180-pound linebacker on the '38 squad, in addition to being the second string quarterback.

"We had more participation from the student body then, because we didn't have much to do," Brown said, as he compared student support today with the fans of 1938.

Since there were no scholarships in those days, team members had to work part-time in order to earn meal money.

A freshman in 1938, Ray Ellis, whose home is Springfield, Ill., was a substitute tight end. He was also an usher at a theater that year, earning $5 a week.

Another end from Hoopston, was Harland Cade. One of his teammates said about Cade, "He is one of the roughest ends God ever put breath in."

Cade said his job as a defensive end was to turn the offensive play into the center of the line, since much of the offense then was a guard-pulling attack.

The former 165-pound end said the team had to wear striped uniforms at the time because McAndrew was color-blind and could not tell the two teams apart.

One of the biggest linemen on that team was Elbert Smith, a 199-pound tackle. "I tried to get over 200 pounds, but I would run it off in practice," Smith said.

Smith also has fond memories of McAndrew. "You see Coach McAndrew was a father-counselor type coach. He would guide us in our personal things. He always contended that the players never had enough energy. He said if you could just feed them well they would win a few more games."

One game Smith recalls is when he picked up a blocked kick and ran from the opponent's 40-yard line. Smith says he knew that he could not make it and, sure enough, he was tackled on the 10 yard line.

"We still didn't make it in," Smith said with a hearty laugh.

There should not have been much to laugh about that year. The team only won two games, and the season was in the middle of a depression.

One nice thing, however, was the new football field, which Smith remembers had the nicest "crown to it." He recalled that playing on the new field was "beautiful," since the team was used to playing on a field known as "the pea patch." The "pea patch" was an open field between McAndrew Stadium and Highway 51.

There's still a touch of the '38 team with us today. Cade helped plant one of the trees at the south end of the field, and it was the first thing Cade said he looked for before Saturday's game.

Some things just do not change in 37 years.

Wit 'n Whiz-dom

By Dave Wiczorek
Daily Egyptian Sports Editor

Throw in the towel, hang up the old football shoes, put the football into cold storage until next year—or maybe for two or three years.

The football season is over here at SIU. The Salukis are 0-2 and no hope is in sight. With a little luck and the kind heart of an opponent, the team might win one or two games.

Of course, an opponent will have to run in the wrong direction or give the Salukis six points every time they make it passed the opponent's 10 yard line.

How many fans are actually thinking like this? I'm not (not yet anyway), but there are plenty of "experts" out there who are. They spew the absurdities mentioned above before the Salukis are given a chance to drag their beaten tails off the field.

Defeat --is SIU finished for year?

Many people who vocalize their unwanted negative opinions of the Salukis are many times those who don't show up at the games, but they can be aggravating.

When people tell me they didn't see Saturday's game, I stop listening to them. Any opinion they could offer has to be as inaccurate as a one-arm quarterback.

The Salukis showed a significant improvement on offense Saturday and put on a good offensive show for a terrific crowd. However, those fans who were at the game have good reason to complain, and they have the right to complain.

SIU's performance should be given a hard look... an even harder one next week should the team lose to East Carolina in McAndrew Stadium.

Penalties have continued to plague the Salukis. They were flagged for nine infractions Saturday. Three in particular were unnecessary.

Late in the first quarter SIU was called for clipping just as the play was about to be ruled dead. In the fourth quarter, coach Doug Weaver was hit with an unsportsman-like-conduct penalty for venturing too far onto the field. The 15-yard infraction helped set up the winning play.

The final penalty of the game was also unnecessary. SIU was called for off-sides. Why? The odds were great that ISU's Dave Vandercook would miss the 55-yard attempt. Apparently SIU went for the block. It was done over-anxiously and without much thought. The penalty should never have happened.

Some problems have been ironed out an I think the fans were treated to a good show Saturday. SIU's losses, though, come down to two things—defense and discipline.

Holding the opponent's scoring down will be a problem all year for the Salukis. They're quick, but lack the size to muscle with bigger offensive lines. For that, no immediate cure is available.

However, there is a cure for the lack of discipline that has been exhibited where penalties are concerned.

No excuse is ever acceptable for getting the flag thrown at you. It is simply a lack of thought and concentration.

That thought and concentration can be drilled into a team and its coaches, and if SIU improves this aspect of its game, things will look brighter.

If it doesn't improve the rest of the year, SIU could rise to the top like a dead fish.
