Complaints on Housing Get Speedy Action

By Mike Killenberg
Last in a Series

The bulk of student renter's complaints against off-campus housing concern either the physical condition of the dwelling or non-fulfillment of contract agreements by landlords.

When one of these complaints comes to the attention of the off-campus housing office, it receives prompt and thorough consideration, according to SIU housing official Dennis Balgemann.

"We never unilaterally withdraw housing approval when a complaint is filed," said Balgemann. "We first discuss the situation with both the students and the owners involved."

Balgemann explained that complaints involving non-fulfillment of contract terms, such as refusal by a landlord to return a damage deposit, are usually ironed out in the discussion stage.

In complaints concerning building conditions, the housing office normally assigns an inspector to re-examine the housing unit.

If the complaint is found to be valid, the inspector will outline the problem areas and request that the owner correct them immediately. If the owner refuses to comply with the inspector's request, the housing approval is revoked.

With the housing office serving as arbitrator, disputes between owners and student renters are normally resolved without much difficulty, said Balgemann. The threat

Textbook Return Open to Sept. 2

Students may return textbooks to the rental service from 7:50 a.m. to 4:50 p.m., Monday through Friday. The service will be open during noon hour.

The service will close at noon Saturday, September 2, the deadline for returning summer textbooks.

Textbooks may be checked out starting September 15, if they are used on campus. New students may pick up their books September 18 and 19.

The rental service will be open to all students on September 20.

PREFERRED BY SOME—Old houses, such as this one, are sometimes preferred by SIU students seeking off-campus dwellings. Many decorate them to suit themselves.

Men or Women Worse?

Lovers, Deadbeats, Pranksters, Bosses

Make Up Regiment of SIU Office Pests

Office pests are as much a part of the day-to-day office job as the coffee break.

To get descriptions of some of the office pests at SIU, reporters questioned working girls of several departments and got these replies.

"An office pest? Buddy, you'd better make that plural, P-E-S-T-S, we've got a real bagful of bananaheads in here," exclaimed a comely, blonde coed receptionist in one of the University offices.

"We've got would-be lovers, deadbeats (money-wise), malingers (work-wise), and a little Hitler supervisor," she added.

"Please don't use my name or the office's because it will cause more dissension around here and that we don't need right now."

"What constitutes an office pest?" asked one intellectual-looking secretary in a campus office.

Upon definition she conceded a few occupied the same office with her.

"We have a male student-worker who can't keep his hands to himself and labors under the misconception we girls in the office are just waiting for a chance to desert our husbands for him," she stated.

"And we have the regular run-of-the-mill pest too. The kind who cheat on their coffee contributions, do less than their share of the work and leave the office 10 to 15 minutes early each day," she added.

One office worker said that a person's sex determines what type pest he will be.

Girls are cattier than males, she said. The less seniority they have, the more they take over the supervision of the office.

"Every night when I was leaving," the worker said, "one girl would tell me to turn off my electric typewriter and coffee pot. After a while it got to be a standing joke."

"Every office needs a scapegoat and I guess she was it," she added.

But when it comes to downright pestilence, continued the worker, the boys lead the list. Boys talk more and seem to be constantly humming or singing. They always want the air conditioning higher and are addicted to pulling pranks, said the worker.

The favorite prank in that office is committed by males who move typing material in the girls' typewriters. "This gets to be annoying since you don't notice it and it leads to using reams of paper. In general they drive you nuts," the observer said.

Another girl interviewed about pests, said, "I suppose every office has a person who overextends his coffee break by a few minutes, but we have one that takes a new approach to the situation. She takes a work break to cope with the monotony of a number of coffee breaks."

"Another thing that really bothers me is the unconcerned attitude of the people who hire office personnel," she added. "They hire some who simply are not qualified."

"These unqualified people in some cases," she said, "don't have much work assigned to them. So they sit around the office and do school assignments on office time."

Two girls reported that one of their office pests is a type of person rather than an individual. The pest is usually a new student worker or some-

Research Focuses On Undergrads

Operating a motor vehicle at SIU makes no appreciable difference on the student's academic performance according to a research study conducted over the last two years at SIU, by graduate student Frank J. Satterwhite. Findings of Satterwhite's study show a very slight variation in grade point. This slight variation was the only indication that vehicle owners performed poorer than the non-user.

"These findings suggest that automobile usage, on the whole, does not affect the absolute grade point average, but rather reduces the probability for maximum improvement in absolute grade point as the user progresses through college," the study report said.

The project involved analysis of three groups of students: an experimental group composed of 87 automobile users, a group composed of a like number of students not using cars, and the third group consisting of the entire undergraduate population.

Subjects of the study were single, undergraduate students, American born, under 25-years-old. "The study focuses upon the single undergraduate student and his level of academic achievement before and after the acquisition of an automobile," Satterwhite pointed out.

The study was comprised of a pre-test and a post-test control group experimental design. Two major areas of comparison were considered. Statistical comparisons of grade point averages for the experimental group of automobile users prior to and after the acquisition of a car and statistical comparisons between the experimental Gus says he's not disturbed over the discrepancies in faculty salaries. If a Ph.D. is paid $9,000 and a B.A. over $17,000, then he ought to be worth $50,000 because he'll never graduate.

Student Housing Complaints Get Prompt University Action

of removal of university approval means more since the Board of Trustees' 1966 ruling that all undergraduate students must live in accepted housing.

"Before then," Balgemann explained, "many landlords never worried about losing their university approval because they had no trouble finding available student renters."

Although Balgemann claims that all complaints concerning off-campus housing receive priority attention, his office was sharply criticized last week at a student government hearing for the poor condition of certain off-campus housing units.

Rick Daniels, student government housing commissioner, was quoted at that time: "I don't think the University is doing its job in establishing and maintaining proper standards for student housing. If it won't, student government certainly will."

Balgemann expressed concern over the criticism, but said that none of the complaints voiced at the hearing had been forwarded to his office.

He pointed out that his office depends on reports from student renters and student government to find out if housing conditions are bad. With only two men available to conduct inspections, he said, "it is impossible to keep constant tabs on all accepted living quarters."

One major complaint aired at the student government hearing was that the off-campus housing officer had been approving "slum level" dwellings. However, housing inspector James Duane denied that claim, "At the time of approval, no housing unit is in a "slum level" condition," he said.

Another protest was that some housing units were infested by rats "big as cats." Duane said he was not aware of such conditions, but if they do exist he "certainly wants to know about it."

Not all complaints filed at the off-campus office come from students. Landlords sometimes file complaints against their student tenants.

In most cases, Duane said, the owners are concerned with non-payment of rent of damage by the students to their property.

group and the control group of non-users.

By using this method the project study assessed not only the comparative level of grade point averages but also the quarter-by-quarter grade point average variations.

The pre-test period ran from the fall quarter of 1964 through the spring quarter of 1965. During the first period no members of the experimental group registered cars.

Fall quarter of 1965 through Convo Schedule Lists Celebrities

The fall quarter convocation series featuring such personalities as Pearl Buck, Jean Shepperd and the Greg Smith Singers has been announced. Freshmen are required to attend six programs, although the convocations sessions are open to everyone.

Scheduled for spring and winter terms are appearances by such persons and attractions as: "Come Dance With Us"; Robert Ettinger, author of "Prospects for Immortality" (by cold storage of human bodies); TV personality Henry Morgan; Indiana Senator Birch Bayh; former Metropolitan Opera-star, Eleanor Steber; UFO expert James Moseley; humorist-author Richard Armour; the Paul Winter Jazz Ensemble; classical guitarist Miguel Rubio; actress Agnes Moorhead; the Eva Jessye Choir.

spring quarter 1966 was the post-test period. Each member of the experimental group registered a car during the first nine weeks of the fall term and retained auto privileges during the entire period of study.

The control group was comprised of students who did not register cars either year.

Students were matched according to age, sex and academic standing to make the study as precise as possible.

Unpredictable Chinese Keep West Guessing

The crucial questions about the Hong Kong crisis must be these: Are Peking's Communist leaders any longer capable of rational behavior? Is China still a functioning country?

There is no rational reason why Peking should force a showdown with Britain over the closing of three obscure Hong Kong Communist newspapers and the arrest on sedition charges of five of their executives. Hong Kong in British hands is an enormous economic asset for a hard-pressed China. It bought nearly half a billion dollars worth of Chinese goods last year, and it provides from 25 to 50 per cent of China's foreign exchange earnings.

Yet, Communist riots have erupted regularly in Hong Kong since May 11 and have increased in ferocity recently with constant verbal and occasional physical support from China. The sacking of the British mission Peking and the attempted humiliation of its personnel recently, after London's rejection of an ultimatum on Hong Kong brings the situation to the acute stage.

What is Mao's game? Or is Mao really in charge, calling the shots that not only have provoked crisis with Britain but strained relations with Moscow almost to the breaking point? When the demonstrations began, Western experts believed Peking's goal was to wrest from the British as many as possible of the concessions it had earlier extorted from the Portuguese Government of Macao. Now the question must be asked whether the Chinese objective is not the destruction of the Crown Colony.

An aging Mao might see in this drastic act a means of reuniting Chinese and alleviating the internal convulsion caused by the cultural revolution. It might even be that the anarchic situation inside China--the fact that it is not "a functioning country"--could bring

On a move by extremists against Hong Kong that Mao could not prevent

The trouble is that the West simply cannot fathom the action of China's Communist leaders at this critical juncture, much less know that rational calculations play any part in their behavior. Predicting Peking's course is as hazardous in Hong Kong as it is in Vietnam.

Oil Slick Remains Mystery

The occasional appearance of large oil slicks off the Atlantic coast has been a source of conjecture. At times the oil has endangered the region's beaches--one huge slick several months ago near Cape Cod was particularly worrisome. It later disappeared.

The latter possibility is being explored by the Coast Guard, with no indication so far that there is anything to it. How many of the 103 tankers sunk off this coast in World War II will be inspected is still undecided, but on a few already dived to and looked over no source of oil pollution has been found.

Needless Courses Cause Teacher Shortages

Public schools in Illinois will be short 20,000 teachers this fall, according to Ray Page, state superintendent of public instruction. The situation is so desperate that Page has asked college graduates who have not taken courses in "education" to get in touch with county superintendents and consider applying for provisional teaching certificates. Page has acknowledged that "stringent requirements for teachers," as well as the competition of non-academic employers, have contributed to the shortage.

These "stringent requirements" deserve far more attention from the public than they get. They are set forth in precise detail in the statutes of Illinois. The only way by which a person can meet these requirements is by taking formal courses in "professional education," administered by some department of education in a university or college. For example, to be a fully certified teacher, one must have at least 16 semester hours in pedagogy. To be a superintendent, one must submit to so long a string of courses in "education" as to tire the imagination. Testimony is overwhelming that courses in pedagogy constitute the most trivial and repetitive element in all American higher education.

Extensive sacrifices of time and energy to pedagogy courses are required of certified teachers in the most modest of Illinois public high schools--but not of teachers in institutions of higher education. The only teaching certificates that university presidents and college professors with decades of educational accomplishment could get are "provisional" certificates. And those provisional certificates can be renewed only if the holders submit to courses in "education."

Educationists are well aware of the contrast between the 16 hours of pedagogy required to teach in the public schools and the zero hours required by excellent private schools and by institutions of higher learning. They would like to extend their empire, but the contrast could be better modified by contracting it. The teacher shortage could evaporate and the quality of teaching staffs could at the same time be raised if the arbitrary restrictions on teacher certification were revised. If Illinois wants and needs more and better teachers, all that is necessary is for the legislature to permit certification as teachers of persons who have not bowed the knee to departments of education. The shortage is artificial, and of no discernible benefit to anyone except the educationist bloc.

China's Turmoil Quite Real

With all the smoke continuing to pour out of Red China, there surely must be some fire. The question of the moment is whether the flames of the "cultural revolution" have roared out of control over much of the ancient country or are only shooting up in a series of civil disorders that Mao Tse-tung can end whenever he is ready to give the word to the People's Liberation army.

As for the turmoil itself, there no longer can be the least doubt of its existence. Travelers and refugees coming out of mainland may differ on details.

But there is enough "hard" evidence of violent incidents so that at least some of the lurid accounts on Peking wall posters can be accepted as factual.

SIU Is Great

To the editor:

In reply to Farewell SIU" I would like to say that SIU would be much better off if all the students who felt as Glenn Bogart does would transfer to another school. I will admit that SIU does have a few rules that are a little trite, but with 18,000 students there has to be a few rules which are for the best.

If I had a dictionary handy I could throw some nice long words around complimenting SIU just like Glenn did as he downgraded our school. I could go on but I would like to wish Glenn luck when he transfers to his small, private expensive university in Decatur; but for me, I think SIU is great.

Goodbye, Uncle

To the editor:

Dear Uncle Ray,

I am glad you are trying to help me stay.

I am now an undergrad who doesn't know what to do. I've been staying with you for nearly five quarters, too.

But it looks like our friendship is ending at last. Boy I hate to see that stop quite so fast!

If the off-campus housing is going to take me out, I see that you have finally lost your bout.

The off-campus housing I am sure is going to win. But I hate to see such a nice man as you done in! Thank you for your kindness in seeing this through. If you can't get approved, I must leave you.

I am not going to get married to stay in your court. THAT would have to be the last resort!

What Then?

To the editor:

Hey, Uncle Ray, your thought is ok, but when they build the 300 apartments they'll take these 300 kids away.

Danger Point

To the editor:

Scattered here and there along Campus Drive are signs--in the middle of the road, mind you--which plead: "Stop for Pedestrians."

An example is in front of the new Technology Building. The poor, befuddled driver going east on Campus Drive who wishes to turn left onto the drive leading to the Egyptian office has a battle with destiny. When making a left turn he cannot see an oncoming car because of the sign.

Would it not be possible to place these "Stop for Pedestrian" signs in a more convenient spot?

Education Needs New Techniques To Aid Learning

By Jenkin Lloyd Jones

In a few weeks a record number of young Americans will be streaming back to the public schools and we will be faced once again with a "teacher shortage" that grows worse each year.

You cure labor shortages in one of three ways. You train and hire more workers. You require your existing workers to work harder.

You evolve new techniques which will improve the output without increasing the work force or adding to the work load.

The entire success of the American industrial system has been based on methods of boosting the output faster than the work force. Only by so doing has it been possible to increase real wages, to pay the dividends necessary to attract capital for expansion, and to accumulate surpluses so that obsolescence may be fought.

We do not look upon public schools as we do upon industry, yet there are limitations that are common to both. An educational system that underpays or overworks its labor may have trouble with walkouts and will certainly have trouble with recruitment. Voters who won't pass bond issues or submit to higher school assessments are the equivalent of angry stockholders. Hence, it is not unreasonable to expect educators to seek among the successful devices of business some answers to their own problems.

Teaching is a form of salesmanship. Neither is adequately done by a mere recital of dull facts. Both require what we call impact. The best-sold customer is the one who becomes excited about the offered commodity or service, and identifies his welfare with its possession. The best-taught student is one who becomes excited about the subject and who sees in its mastery some relevance to his own welfare or happiness.

It is in this matter of impact that our schools are far behind proven techniques of salesmanship and advertising.

Take a high school course in Shakespeare. We have literally millions of students who are "taught" Shakespeare without ever having seen a Shakespearean play. Yet not fewer than five have been done magnificently for the screen. No student should ever finish the study of an act without watching an Olivier or a Gielgud do that act. Shakespeare can best be "sold" as high drama.

Modern language has too often been taught as an exercise of memory instead of a live method of communication. Some of our best schools have "language labs" in which tapes are used to good advantage. You cannot ignore dull essentials like vocabulary and grammar. But few students are benefitted from language study unless they think it will be useful.

The French class of the future will use color motion picture travelogues containing printed French subtitles, keyed, of course, to the class level of proficiency. Students will simultaneously absorb, not merely the language, but a lot of geography and history.

The day must come when the finest voices of the stage will read English poetry to our kids. The nasal monotone of an ungifted classroom teacher can kill poetry, and often does. The day must come when no class in physics or chemistry will be without film clips showing the practical application of each rule or process, when biology will go far beyond dissected frogs and dramatically reveal life processes by animated diagrams and microscope photography.

"Teaching machines" and programed learning are in their infancy. There will be blind alleys, but any device that turns learning into a game has value. Machines are now available that can grade hundreds of multiple-choice examination papers in seconds. Much of the drudgery of teaching can now be avoided.

Instead of complaining that their students waste time staring at TV or going to the movies, let our educators rub the same lamp. We are now at the point where a million-dollar educational film would be a tremendous bargain if it could comprise one high school lecture series and be shown to tens of millions of students over a period of years.

Teachers can be stretched. Learning can be made more exciting. The imaginations of the bright can be stimulated and even the dull or the disadvantaged can be intrigued.

It is the education industry that needs to be dragged, kicking and screaming, into the last "hurd of the twentieth century.

Leaders Should Copy Kosygin

By Arthur Hoppe
(San Francisco Chronicle)

Mr. Kosygin and family are spending their annual month-long vacation at the Black Sea.

All of us who are deeply concerned with the conduct of world affairs can't help but dwell uneasily on the problem the Soviet Premier's lengthy absence from the Kremlin raises: How come Mr. Johnson, Mr. Ho Chi Minh, Mr. De Gaulle and other world leaders don't take a month off, too?

If they'd all agree to get away during, say, August, we'd have 31 days without bombastic threats, snide remarks and diplomatic insults. They'd have a vacation we could all enjoy.

Of course, a month-long vacation for any world leader has one inherent drawback that appears impossible to surmount. Take the case of Mr. Kosygin.

There he is on the first day trying to relax on the porch of his samovar (summer cabin), a glass of troika (pink lemonade) in his hand, his feet up on a borsch (a kind of Russian footstool).

"Was that the phone?" he cries, jumping up. "It was only a cricket, Daddy, says daughter Kosygin soothingly. "Now you simply must relax and enjoy your vacation. I'm sure the country will get along fine without you."

"That's what I'm afraid of," says Mr. Kosygin gloomingly. "Remember Khrushchev."

So for the first week he reads Pravda each morning religiously and burns up the wires to the Kremlin. "Can't you forget your troubles, Grandpa?" says an offspring hopefully.

"I don't want anybody forgetting they're mine," he says. "Remember Khrushchev."

But by the second week, he begins to notice the vastness of a starry sky, the eternity of waves, the mystery of squirrels and the delight of children shrieking on a beach.

By the third week he's only reading the comic page and by the fourth, when the phone rings, he says hopefully to one of the younger Kosygin, "Maybe it's for you."

So he returns to the office a new man, fit, relaxed and imbued with a sense of what's truly important in life--like stars, waves, squirrels and children.

But after a few days, naturally, he's right back in the swing of things, selling guns to the Middle East, doubling the production of nuclear missiles, shouting at Red China, insulting the U.S. and generally stirring up trouble.

And things like stars, waves, squirrels and the laughter of children fade slowly like an ill-remembered dream.

Even so, it's obvious that for any of our leaders to go off on a month's vacation does him, and us, a world of good. Let's hope they all, in the interests of a month's peace, will emulate Mr. Kosygin.

At present, unfortunately, there seems no way to surmount the one inherent drawback in giving them all a month's vacation. That, of course, is that they come back.

City Hall a Teacher?

To see City Hall as a job school for youth from deprived neighborhoods takes imagination. But when one considers the variety of skills required to run a city government, it becomes clear that municipal employees can teach many things that an unemployed boy or girl needs to know to get a good job anywhere.

So why not an apprenticeship program for youth in the municipal offices and shops?

Boston is to be commended for giving the idea a try. Upon recommendation of Mayor John Collins, the local antipoverty agency is arranging with city department heads to bring in job-seeking young people for a training period. The agency promises to supervise the workers and pay them a small wage. The young people will serve as assistants to automobile mechanics, draftsmen, file clerks, data processors, and so on, learning on the job. Officials hope to employ from 500 to 1,000 youths over a year's period.

It is ideas like these as much as dollars that will strike at the roots of riots.

General Assembly Passes 2,603 Bills

Altogether 2,603 bills were passed by the 75th General Assembly. Of this total, 848 are still to be acted on by Gov. Otto Kerner. The senate passed 1,162 bills, and there were 1,441 house bills sent to the governor.

Gov. Kerner vetoed 164 bills and parts of 2 bills. This unofficial record of action was compiled by the Illinois Information Service.

one who just doesn't care very much about the quality of the details of their job, they said.

One of the girls said, "We have a general policy here of 'manning the phones'. If you leave your desk you are supposed to ask someone to answer your phone if it rings. It is really unnerving at times to listen to a phone across the hall ring seven or eight times before someone gets up to answer it."

Another thing these people do, the girls added, is to give the wrong information out on the phone when they don't know all the answers. They partially answer questions, refer the call to another office (sometimes the wrong office) which often results in the call being lost somewhere along the way, she continued.

She thought it was these same people who give out faulty information to people coming into the office, which she said often results in an unnecessary exchange of several letters and a lot of needless phone calls.

The apple polisher is another type of office pest, commented one interviewee. "He tries to get in with the boss and to make everyone else look bad."

Students to Attend Canada Conference

Four SIU agriculture students will attend the annual Conference of the North American Council of Agriculture Students Sept. 5-9 in Montreal, Canada.

They will be representing the SIU Agricultural Student Advisory Council, a coordinating group composed of representatives of various student organizations in the School of Agriculture.

Students who will make the trip are Edward Musselman of Buffalo, Ill., Eugene Trotter of Kansas, James Bond of Galatia, and Rick Moore of Broughton.

The goof-offs and the do-nothings are variations of the same type, she said. The goof-off, she explained, "never does any work unless the boss happens to be around." The do-nothings, on the other hand, she added, don't even attempt a facade. "They just leave all the work up to you--all the time."

One office has no public phones. Some workers attempt, from time to time, to use the secretary's phone.

She has to follow instructions, and tell the workers, she said, "This phone is not for public use."

She said the usual answer to this is, "If I can't use your phone you can't come into my office."

"I don't think we really have any true office pest," said a young lady.

"Every office will have workers who have personality differences, but they are not very serious. Everyone gets along well," she said.

A student worker herself, the young lady did admit that a couple of things in the office did "bug" her. One minor problem that is just ignored is a graduate student's wife who constantly talks about the amount of work her poor husband has to do.

Several women from one office agreed, during their lunch hour, that their most prominent office peeve was the boss.

One of the reasons they cited for this indictment was his aversion to answering the phone or intercom. The women said that after ringing him several times without success they would then have to go into his office and give him the message in person.

To further ill-will between the boss and his secretaries, he has recently imposed his non-smoking views on the rest of the staff while they are at work. "In a way he's right about smoking in the office," commented one of the women, "but I just don't like to be told I can't smoke."

Destruction of Jets Suggests Losses May Reach Record

SAIGON (AP)--Destruction of a dozen U.S. jets over North Vietnam in three days suggests that, while the intensified drive claims heavy toll on enemy supply lines, the plane losses may reach a record this week.

The North Vietnamese downed 15 planes in one week last August, the high in an air war that is now in its 30th month.

Six of the fighter-bombers, which cost about $2 million each, were lost in raids Monday that centered largely from the Hanoi area to Red China's frontier. Six more went down in strikes Wednesday. Of the 21 fliers manning these planes, three were rescued.

The others are listed as missing or captured.

The U.S. Command announced two MIGs were shot down by one pilot, 1st Lt. David B. Waldrop, 25, of Nashville, Tenn., during a series of dogfights Wednesday while missiles from similar Soviet-designed fighters felled two of the American planes, F4 Phantoms.

That brought the dogfighting score to 84 confirmed North Vietnamese and 22 American planes downed since the first aerial encounter in April 1965. Announced American plane losses over the North from all causes climbed to 659.

U.S., Soviets Submit Treaty To Prevent Nuclear Spread

GENEVA (AP) - The United States and the Soviet Union jointly submitted Thursday a draft treaty to prevent the spread of nuclear weapons. But left blank was the key article on enforcement that has been a sticking point for years.

Even though much hard bargaining negotiator William C. Foster told a news conference it was "a reasonable hope" that the treaty would be signed early next year.

Foster and Soviet negotiator Alexei A. Roshchin placed before the 17-nation disarmament conference identical texts for further negotiation here and at the forthcoming U.N. General Assembly in New York.

LBJ, Senate At Odds Over Poverty Bill

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson, bent on restraining domestic spending in the face of rising Vietnam war costs, is at odds with the Senate Labor subcommittee over its proposed $5.2-billion antipoverty bill.

Johnson asked for $2.06 billion for a one-year extension of the controversial antipoverty program, but the subcommittee authorized $2.2 billion and the panel's chairman, Sen. Joseph S. Clark, D-Pa., attached a special $3-billion emergency riot damage and job program for slum dwellers.

The Clark program is a particular source of dismay to the administration.

In a secret memorandum to the subcommittee, an official of the Office of Economic Opportunity, the antipoverty agency, demanded that the $3-billion program be deleted from the bill.

"OEO is trying to preserve what we have," the memo says. "You know the President has requested a tax increase. If this is going to be considered it should be considered as a separate piece of legislation."

Joseph A. Califano Jr., a special assistant to Johnson, acknowledged Thursday the memo had been circulated to some subcommittee members but said no one at the White House saw it in advance.

Califano said the document correctly outlined administration misgivings about some provisions of the subcommittee bill but it was inaccurate in a number of respects.

He said the administration's primary goal is to get a bill out of the full Labor Committee and passed by the Senate by Labor Day. Clark, however, said Thursday he sees no possibility that this could be done. The Labor Committee had scheduled another executive session on the bill Thursday but could not muster a quorum.

The memorandum listing the administration's objections has now had wide circulation on Capitol Hill, causing much mirth among Republicans and dismay on the part of liberal Democrats.

In addition to call for elimination of the proposed $3-billion emergency program, it also demands:

--Scrapping a special $105-million item to finance a slum job program backed by Sens. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., and Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y.

--Deletion of a requirement that the Office of Economic Opportunity disclose the projected five-year cost of the antipoverty program.

"THEN HOW COME WE'RE STILL IN THIS SAME POSITION?"

Election Saturday to Decide Area Junior College

Jackson County voters will decide Saturday whether they are willing to be taxed for the establishment of the Egyptian Junior College.

The proposed junior college is part of the State's Board of Higher Education Master Plan calling for the total of 40 junior colleges throughout Illinois.

SIU policy makers have indicated that eventually the University will be upper-class orientated, in keeping with the Master Plan.

The proposed site has not yet been selected. Possible districts include Jackson, Williamson, Perry, and Franklin counties. The plan is to have the location accessible to commuters from the entire area.

The school would have a triple program:

A two-year college curriculum of undergraduate work will be the prime function of the junior college.

Courses in occupational, semi-technical, technical, and business fields would be offered.

A third program would be terminal courses and adult education courses.

The state will pay approximately 50 per cent of the cost of operation. It would also subsidize 75 per cent of the construction done before 1971.

But local tax-payers may still have to pay up to 25 cents per $100 of their assessed valuation. The Carbondale League of Women Voters, says that only about half of the estimated rate would be needed.

The League also said that of 6,000 high school students questioned, 3,220 said they would attend a junior college if it were located in the area.

If the referendum gets a majority "yes" vote, an election of a seven-member board for the junior college would be the next step in the establishment of the school.

Research Funds Short

Illinois Suffers 'Brain Drain' As New Grads Leave State

Illinois is experiencing a scientific "brain drain," according to E. W. Houghs, assistant dean of research and graduate studies at the School of Technology.

"Illinois lacks sufficient industrial research capability," Hough said, "to attract and keep the personnel that we train in our educational institutions.

"This lack of research industry also prevents Illinois from obtaining its fair share of federal research and development funds," he said.

Illinois ranks 42nd in federal research and development funds, on a federal tax dollar basis.

In contrast, Illinois ranks fourth in population (5.49%), third in personal income (6.55%) and fourth in Federal taxes (7.62%).

According to Hough, the government contributes $14 billion a year to research and development. Of this $14 billion, $9 billion goes to industry, $1.7 billion goes to educational institutions and $3 billion is for research by the federal government.

"Illinois receives 7.7 per cent of the funds for educational institutions, but it gets only .26 percent of the allotment for industry, and only .47 percent of the funds for federal research," he said.

The statistics were obtained from a recent report by the National Science Foundation, and are based on the fiscal year 1965, according to Hough.

"To get its fair share of the federal tax money, the present research and development allotment to Illinois should be increased 5.8 times its present amount," he said.

"Two-thirds of Illinois' research and development funds go to universities," he said, "whereas, on the national level, three-fourths of the funds go to industry."

"This tends to indicate that Illinois lacks industrial research and development capability, and that we are training personnel who will go to the other states to work," he added.

"One answer to this problem seems to be to attract more research orientated industry to Illinois," Hough said. "But the first step in solving this problem is to make the people aware that the problem exists."

Smith Stars As Yankees Beat Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — Charlie Smith smashed a pair of two-run homers and Bill Monbouquette pitched a five-hitter in leading the New York Yankees to a 5-0 victory over Chicago Thursday, reducing the White Sox' American League lead to one percentage point.

The setback dropped Chicago's percentage to .561 while the runner-up Boston Red Sox, 7-5 victory over Washington, climbed to .560.

Smith hit his home runs in the fourth and ninth innings. He connected the first time off Tommy John after Micky Mantle had singled. Smith tagged reliever Hoyt Wilhelm for his second two-run blow after Mantle had reached on an error.

After Smith's second homer, the Yanks added another run when Bill Robinson scored on a wild pitch with the bases loaded.

Players Request Hearing

Eckert Asked By A's To Air Grievances

NEW YORK (AP) — The mushrooming squabble between the Kansas City Athletics and owner Charles O. Finley was thrust into the lap of baseball's highest official Thursday when the players formally asked Commissioner William D. Eckert to air their grievances.

The request for a hearing and a determination of the dispute which resulted in the firing of Manager Al Dark among other developments was submitted for the Kansas City players by the Major League Players Association through Marvin Miller, executive director of the association.

Eckert acknowledged receiving a letter from Miller requesting the hearing.

"I have received the request from the Baseball Players Association," said Eckert. "I am gathering appropriate data on the subject and will take further appropriate action at a later date."

The letter, Miller said, read "On behalf of the players of the Kansas City Athletics, the Major League Baseball Players Association hereby certifies to you the current dispute between said players and the management of the Kansas City club for prompt hearing and determination pursuant to Article 1, Section 2 of the major league agreement.

"Please advise us, at your earliest convenience, of the date, time and place established for such a hearing."

The dispute was touched off last week when Finley suspended pitcher Lew Krausse for an alleged incident aboard an airliner. The players subsequently contended in a statement that the incident had been overplayed, supported Dark and criticized Finley for undermining team morale.

Finley reacted by firing Dark, firing pitcher Jack Aker and giving Ken Harrelson, a first baseman, his unconditional release after Harrelson also had criticized the clubowner.

Krausse, who said Finley was completely justified in penalizing him, later was reinstated.

SIU Girl Gymnasts Depart for Tokyo World Games

By Tom Wood

Four American women gymnasts, headed by SIU's Donna Schaezner and Joanne Hoshimoto, and accompanied by Southern Coach Herb Vogel, departed Wednesday for Tokyo and the World University Games.

The team will become the first United States women's gymnastics entry in the Student Games. Vogel is coach-manager of the squad.

The SIU coach has conducted a campaign all summer to get the American girls to Tokyo for the competition. They were denied federal funds after the State Department cut the budget for the United States team.

America will also be represented in track and field, basketball, swimming and diving, judo, wrestling and men's gymnastics.

The U.S. team made up of Linda Metheny, Kathy Gleason and the two SIU girls, was finally given approval by the State Department and the AAU sanction and financial assistance by each institution of the participating girls, gymnastics interest groups and non-profit organizations.

Miss Schaezner, the captain of the recent Pan American Games team, is a two-time All-American and collegiate all-around winner.

Miss Hoshimoto received All-American honors in her freshman season. She climbed from a 21st national ranking in 1966 to join the top six female gymnasts in 1967.

Miss Metheny, from the University of Illinois, is the defending National AAU all-around champion and a four gold medal winner at the 1967 Pan-Am Games.

Miss Gleason, a freshman at the University of Buffalo, is the 1967 North American all-around champ, a member of the 1966 Pan-Am team, and a 1965 World Games team member.

Dale McClements, former SIU collegiate all-around champion and now an instructor-coach in Seattle, Wash., is a coach-chaperone of the team.

The girls will be bidding for America's first gold medal in women's gymnastics competition. The U.S. team is ranked sixth, according to Vogel.

He said, "The U.S. is the best in this hemisphere, but the teams we will face in Tokyo compete year round just as our collegiate teams would."

The top-ranked squad is the world champion Czechoslovakian team, Russia is ranked second, Japan third, East Germany fourth and France fifth.

The highest U.S. team placement in the sport was sixth. No U.S. competitor has ever placed in the top six in any event.

A new organization has been formed hopefully to eliminate future financial and miscellaneous troubles in raising Games and sending a World University Games team according to Vogel.

The International Collegiate Sports Council, consisting of members from NCAA, NAIA

American Association of Health, Physical Education and Recreation, will petition for recognition to the International University Sports Federation in Tokyo.

The University games are made up of college students, both graduate and undergraduate throughout the world.

The last games were held in 1963 in Prague, Czechoslovakia.

Representing the men's gymnastics team for the 1967 Games will be Makoto Sakamoto, the lone U.S. entry at Prague, Kanati Allen, Sod Freudenstein, Arno Lascari and Dave Thor.
