Georgians vote on independence amid violence

MOSCOW (UPI) — Georgians voted Sunday in a referendum on independence from the Soviet Union, but on the eve of the vote Georgian vigilantes besieged the republic's minority Ossetians and Soviet television reported that the situation was "still volatile."

As 3.5 million registered voters, of whom 30 percent are non-Georgians, trooped to the polls, an Ossetian leader stood in the Russian Congress in Moscow on Sunday and accused Georgia's new nationalist leadership of seeking to exterminate the people.

One of the six republics that boycotted the March 17 nationwide plebiscite on whether to keep the Soviet Union intact, Georgia chose Sunday to stage its rebel referendum on winning Georgia's independence, which was ended 70 years ago when Red Army troops occupied the Caucasian republic.

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev has declared the renegade Georgian referendum just a survey of "opinion" in the same way that he invalidates separate plebiscites by the three Baltic republics who voted to split with Moscow in referendums in February and March.

The registered electorate of Georgia were asked Sunday to answer "yes" or "no" to whether they wanted "the independence of Georgia to be restored on the basis of the independence act of May 26, 1918." That independence lasted until 1921.

But in the crazed hothouse of nationalist intolerance that the Soviet Union has become, Georgia's own Iranian-speaking Ossetians are now covered by their autonomous region Saturday night, the official news agency Tass reported.
Swimmers win All-American honors

SIUC men's swim team ties for 24th in nCAAs

Six Salukis swim their way to All-American status this weekend in Austin, Texas, while the SIUC men's swimming and diving team brought home a 24th-place finish in the NCAA Championships.

Senior Chris Gally, who was an All-American last year, took eighth place in the 200 meter butterfly (1:46.14) and ninth place in the 100 butterfly (47.77). The time in the 200 butterfly was the second fastest ever for SIUC.

Senior Eric Brelad, also an All-American last year, place 14th in the 1,650 freestyle with a time of 15:39.3.

The 200 freestyle relay team of sophomores Brian Gargan, junior Deryl Lebner, senior Jeff Goetz and Gally swam a 1:20.44 to break a school record and take 12th place in the NCAAs.

The 400 freestyle relay team of senior David Morovitz, Gargan, Gally and Lebner took 14th place with a school record 3:05.87.

Lebner and Morovitz also received All-American honors in 1990.

"I'm proud of all our athletes," SIUC coach Doug Ingram said, "but I'm especially happy to see our seniors go out in style." SIUC, which took 20th in the NCAAs last year, collected 31 points to place 24th in Michigan State for 24th place in the meet. Host school the University of Texas took first with 746 points, 56 points ahead of second-place the University of Stanford.

"We were real proud of the fact our kids came on strong during the last day of competition," Ingram said. "This has been a tradition for SIU's swimming program and I was happy to see them do well down the stretch."

SIUC had one other member of its team qualify for the NCAAs. Freshman Rob Siracusano qualified competed in the diving events, but the young diver didn't place in the top 16 finishers.

Last week, the SIUC women's swimming team had junior Julie Hosier swim her way to a 16th-place finish in the 100 butterfly with a time of 55.80.

Salukis drop three of four in conference opener

By Eric Bugger
Staff Writer

Missouri Valley Conference coaches have to wonder if an inviting Southwest Missouri State into the Valley was a wise move.

The Bears' basketball team just missed taking the basketball title and now Southwest is taking MVC basketball by storm. Earlier this season, the Bears split two games with nationally-ranked Wichita State.

The Bears also missed out on conference sweep this weekend and surprised the Salukis by taking three games of the four-game series.

"We knew coming in we should be a nice club," SIUC coach Sam Riggelman said. "They're right in the hunt and it's a nice situation for them to go and beat us three out of four."

Sunday afternoon, the Salukis (11-10, 1-3) fell 84-4 to the Bears (21-7, 4-2) in a nine inning contest.

Southwest jumped out to a commanding 5-run lead in the top half of the first. Senior starting pitcher Dale Meyer was ripped for three singles, a double, a triple and a home run before finally working out of the inning.

The Salukis failed to score until the eighth inning when senior first baseman Boyd Mann and junior second baseman Kurt Endebrock led off with walks. Junior shortstop Brian Heathier hit into a fielder's choice scoring a run. Senior center fielder Jeff Nelson tropped a single to shallow center to drive in a run and freshman left fielder Dan Espin rapped a triple to the wall in left.

With a 6-4 score, the Salukis were hoping for a come-from-behind win again, but their defense fell apart in the top of the ninth inning.

The Bears' shortstop Evan Pratte rapped a double to left and scored on a throwing error by Heathier. Southwest center fielder Chad Lunsford drove in Pratte with a single to left by catcher Greg Foron to make the score 8-4.

The Salukis threatened again in the bottom of the ninth with singles by Mann and Saluki freshman Dan Espin splits into third base just ahead of a throw from the outfield in SIUC's only victory of the weekend. The Salukis dropped three of four against Southwest Missouri State in their conference opener.

Director of Athletics Bob Geary ripped three hits and scored a run. Junior catcher Derek Shelton, sophomore designated hitter Marus Grace, Espin, Endebrock and Heathier added two hits apiece for SIUC.

In the second game of the twinbill, Southwest scored 3 runs in the third inning and 5 in the fourth to outhit the Dawgs 9-2.

Saluki runners place high among in Florida

The Salukis' men's track team gave notice of things to come in Tallahassee, Fla., at the Florida Relays during the weekend.

The Florida Relays is an unscouted meet split into collegiates and invitational divisions. The invitational division includes participants from club and amateur associations.

The 4x100-meter relay team of juniors Adam Moreland, Bridges, Garrett Hines and Ed Williams and senior Guy Sokora won the collegiate title, then took third in the invitational division. The quartet also placed second in the 4x200-meter relay. Saluki head coach Bill Cornell said the team surprised some people.

"All of our sprinters opened eyes in these two events," Cornell said. "The 40.31 time they turned in Friday was outstanding and they came right back with 40.35 in Saturday's event. Both performances are very good for this time of the year."

Individually, Williams took third in the 110-meter hurdles and the invitational division with a 13:89 time. Williams

Indianapolis (UPI) — The Duke Blue Devils still have some demons to exorcise. Duke put one bad memory to rest Saturday night, beating invincible Nevada-Las Vegas in Saturday night's NCAA semifinals.

However, to completely shake the stigma of four Final Four appearances in the past five years without a national title, the Blue Devils, 31-7, will have to beat Kansas State in the NCAA championship game, Monday night (9:12 EST).

Junior Coach Mike Krzyzewski brought the Devils to the finals in 1986, 1988, 1989 and last year, losing semifinals in 87 and 88 and falling in the title game in 86 and last season.

"You learn from your successes and failures," he said Sunday. "I'm a better coach this year than I have been. It's important in college sports to talk about this year. All they care about is this game right now.

"I don't think anything we've done in the past is a failure. I look at it as a great experience."

Greg Koubeck, a senior forward, has learned to live with coming to rely on the talents of three Final Four players without a title. Freshman Grant Hill is new to these things. He can't help himself coming back to Durham, N.C., without a championship trophy.

"It would be a major letdown of sorts," Hill said. "This was our major goal starting Oct. 15 (the start of practice)."

Duke was not supposed to get another chance at a championship. UNLV, which was seeking an undefeated season and a second straight championship, was a heavy favorite.

But Duke shot 52 percent, the only team to better 50 percent against the Rebels this season. He worked six innings, allowing 3 runs on nine hits.

The entire Saluki line-up got into the offensive swing of things. Senior left fielder Bob Geary ripped three hits and scored a run. Junior catcher Derek Shelton, sophomore designated hitter Marus Grace, Espin, Endebrock and Heathier added two hits apiece for SIUC.

In the second game of the twinbill, Southwest scored 3 runs in the third inning and 5 in the fourth to outhit the Dawgs 9-2.

Ethnic groups in Yugoslavia clash; federal troops called in BELGRADE (UPI) — Federal troops Sunday moved into the Ptitvice Lakes National Park region in western Yugoslavia to separate Serbians and Croatian police following gunfire that left at least two people dead. One Croatian policeman and one civilian were killed and more than 10 persons were wounded in the bloodshed. Authorities fear that tension over several recent confrontations threatening to turn tension between Yugoslavia’s two major ethnic groups into a civil war. Croatian Deputy Interior Minister Slavko Degenic said police arrested 20 persons, 21 of them “armed civilians.”

PLO refuses to surrender arms in Lebanon
BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — A war of words between Palestinians and Lebanese authorities got hotter Sunday with a guerrilla leader refusing to drop arms and a Lebanese official hinting that force would be used. “We will give up our souls but will not surrender arms,” said Zeit Webbe, the representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization in Lebanon. “How can we give up our weapons and the enemy is only few meters away and is comfortably anchored in caves?” It was the first Palestinian reaction to the ultimatum set by the pro-Syrian Lebanese government.

Shevardnadze condemns actions in Baltics
MOSCOW (UPI) — Former Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze Sunday condemned the crackdown in the Baltic republics and the show of force in Moscow to quash dissent as “very dangerous experiments” that confirmed his warnings of approaching dictatorship. In his first interview on Soviet television since his Dec. 20 resignation, Shevardnadze said the threat from “reactor forces” that he cited when his quast has increased in the past three months. Shevardnadze said conservatives and democrats are engaged in a deadly struggle for power in the Soviet Union.

Christian visitors in Jerusalem pray for peace
JERUSALEM (UPI) — Christian faithful, returning some thousands grains to a visitation of the Middle East, prayed for peace on Easter Sunday at the site where Jesus Christ, according to tradition, was buried and resurrected. Roman Catholics, Protestants and at least one member of Jesus for Jesus, walked through the ancient stone crypts in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, lighting candles, singing hymns or simply watching the spectacle. But the continuing conflicts between Israelis and Arabs that mark the region were not lost on the hundreds of pilgrims.

Hendricks calls for prosecution ‘illegal, immoral, unethical’
CHICAGO (UPI) — David Hendricks says prosecutors who failed this week to convict him for the six murders of his family acted in an “illegal, immoral and unethical” fashion and he is still thinking about suing them. Hendricks also says he may undergo therapy to work through his anger and that he hopes to confront the man he thinks really killed his wife and his children in their Bloomington home in 1983. Hendricks, 36, an Oak Park native, was convicted of the bloody killings in 1984 after a trial that even the judge said left him in doubt about Hendricks’ guilt. The Supreme Court last year ordered a new trial because of gained evidence.

Daley wants to top winning margin in primary
CHICAGO (UPI) — Mayor Richard M. Daley hopes to top his winning 64 percent primary margin in Tuesday’s ballotting, capturing what some are calling the quietest election in a quarter century. Daley, who has gained black support since he was elected in 1989 to finish the term of the late Mayor Harold Washington, is running for his first full term at the helm of the city his father ruled for more than two decades. David Wilhelm, Daley’s campaign manager, said the mayor hopes to “equal our share of the vote and perhaps improve upon it both.”

Candidate wants more activities for children

By Leslie Colp
Staff Writer

Sandra Henry Bartelmeyer says she wants to be a Carbondale Park Commissioner because she can offer a fresh point of view.

"I thought I would give voters a choice," said the 42-year-old challenger. "They (park commissioners) need new people in order to have new ideas.

Henry Bartelmeyer said her opponent, Michael Curtis, who is running for a fourth term, has been a park commissioner too long.

"It's important to do a job, do it well and then step back," she said. "It gets to be a choice if you do a job too long." The Carbondale Park District maintains and operates about 750 acres at 16 different locations, including Doug Lee Park, Evergreen Park and Turley Park. It is governed by a board of five park commissioners who are elected from the city for staggered six-year terms.

Park commissioners meet twice a month to decide what services will be offered and how money will be spent.

"I don't have an ax to grind," Henry Bartelmeyer said. "They're (park commissioners) all fine people. But it's something I can do, too."

Henry Bartelmeyer said she wants to provide more activities for children and senior citizens.

The park district sponsors activities including swimming lessons and tumbling classes for children and crafts for senior citizens. But Henry Bartelmeyer said if elected, she wants to determine what is needed before she tries to add new services.

Incumbent wants to see more programs, services

Park Commissioner Michael Curtis said the Carbondale Park District offers some of the best community services in the state, but he would like to see some new ones.

"I think we've got a good thing and I'd like to see it become better," said the 46-year-old incumbent.

Curtis said Carbondale needs to offer more recreational services such as water slides and an outdoor pool. These could lower taxes because they would generate revenue, he said. They could also help the park district offer more services.

The Carbondale Park District is a unit of local government with the authority to assess taxes. It maintains and operates about 750 acres at 16 different locations including baseball, softball and soccer fields.

Park commissioners meet twice a month to decide what services will be offered and how money will be spent. Services include swimming lessons and tumbling classes for children.

The park district has about a $400,000 budget that comes from fees and property taxes. Curtis said it is spent for a variety of projects including additions to playground equipment and helping to sponsor the annual Sunset Concert in the summer.

"We all feel taxes are too high," he said. "Services aren't free whether they're parks, schools or whatever."

Curtis said he likes the progress the park district has made in his 18 years as a park commissioner.

He said the most positive accomplishment in the past few years is cooperation among

Students must vote in order to better city

STUDENTS HAVE THE OPPORTUNITY Tuesday to change the relationship between Carbondale and the University.

Many have taken this step in the past, perhaps because of apathy, lack of knowledge about the candidates or the feeling that voting will do little good.

In the 1989 city election, only 13 ballots were cast from Precinct 23, which includes Brush Towers. In Precinct 25, which includes the Thompson Point area, 28 ballots were cast.

WITH SUCH A LOW TURNOUT, Carbondale representatives only can feel that students have no interest in what happens in the city.

But student concerns do exist, from the ongoing debate about the Halloween street party to the possibilities of an off-track betting parlor and continued downtown expansion.

Quite simply, students who want their voices heard on such matters must elect the people who hold the same views.

STUDENTS, THEREFORE, SHOULD NOT complain that the city does nothing for them if these students will not address the problems adequately.

Many have failed to reach out to candidates during campaigning to let them know what student concerns exist within the city. Without this information, candidates cannot address these problems adequately.

Candidates cannot operate without input, just as generals cannot make adequate decisions in a war without reports from the battlefield.

SO EACH STUDENT HAS THIS responsibility to report to their representatives. The first step lies in getting these people into office.

Students can take this initial step of voting for mayoral, City Council and park commissioner positions at the numerous polling places in the city, including those at Thompson Point and Brush Towers.

The appropriate polling place can be found on the back of each student identification card.

The students visiting these places this year will affect the role students will play in the city for years to come.

Quotable Quotes

"In all the Powell years, we didn't see military equipment on Red Square except for parades."—Former Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said regarding the force shown in Moscow to control pro-democracy advocates.

"It was really cooking."—Employee James Le Viness said about the fire on the top floors at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

"It's pretty heavy here, pretty spiritual."—said Shira, an American visitor celebrating Easter in Jerusalem during wartime.

Many not informed about national debt, countries finances

Mr. Hewitt, you are right.

Mr. American is concerned about government finances.

Our present deficit is not due to profligacy, it is the unexpected consequence of our successful effort to fight inflation through tight fiscal policy.

The consequence has ballooning entitlements inherited from inflation behind us, a slowdown of tax receipts from the recession and a startling increase in interest cost that tight fiscal policy imposed and, indirectly, trade deficits via Japan.

We are not likely to see this combination of forces again. The national debt is not liability; it is the sum of our obligations issued by the Treasury, backed by the productive power, human and physical, of our whole society.

AS OF 1988, our national debt was about the same proportion to our gross national product, as it was in the 1940s. Also, instead of paying off the debt, it makes more sense to reserve existing debt with new obligation vs. replacing those that have matured.

SENSATIONALIZED figures characterizing the debt don't adjust for inflation and they treat all government expenditures as consumption or, sometimes, as capital investment.

The Treasury, states, localities, government agencies, trust funds and banks (private and public) own 83 percent of the debt.

How will the debt be paid back? Who cares?

Students need more red parking decals

I am opposed to the GPSC proposal that teaching assistants be allowed to purchase blue parking decals.

This proposal is unfair to the other graduate and undergraduate students who have red parking decals.

Many of these students who can't purchase blue parking decals are student workers.

Further, rather than suggesting red parking spaces be eliminated, the university could do much to increase the available red parking spaces. Increasing the number of red parking decals would be a starting point.

"Tskhinvali (capital of South Ossetia) is in a complete blockade of fighters with weapons and ammunition, since its strength exceeds 12,000," Tass said late Saturday. "Additional groups of fighters are moving to the city."

"The situation with food and medication is catastrophic in Tskhinvali," Tass said. "A humanitarian aid is not reaching the besieged city because of the hands of the opposing parity. Georgian posts are continually firing at the residents in the city to force them to leave their houses.

"Some 200 people with grave wounds are now in the regional hospital. The existing situation calls for their immediate evacuation."

"The situation in South Ossetia becomes even more aggravated with every hour," Bagatov said. "Bands of the Georgian extremites are building up their armies against the full extermination of the people of the South Ossetian autonomous region."

"They continue to kill old people, women and children, and destroy villages," he said.

On Sunday, Gorbachev demanded in a telegram that Georgia's non-Communist President and the Abkhaz takeover mas are "for stopping the bloodshed" and keeping the armed Georgians from carrying out "their criminal plans to destroy the native and historically populated localities," Tass said.

"Deserters Gamsakhurdia was imprisoned by the late Leonid Brezhnev for founding Georgia's Helsinki Human Rights chapter to protect the rights of all citizens, the anti-Communists for stirring up the society, and the Ossetian for his independence-seeking republic.

Itself a microcosm of the post-Soviet Soviet empire, Georgia is a crazy quilt of nations. Besides the Ossetians, the Abkhaz and Achar and peoples possess their autonomous areas.

The Abkhaz and besieged Ossetians boycotted Georgia's referendum just as the Georgians boycotted Gorbachev's nationwide plebiscite.

Georgia, which nests in the Caucasus Mountains along most of the republics of Christian Armenia and Moslem Azerbaijan, has a population of 5.2 million people of which 70 percent are native Georgians, 9 percent are Armenians, Russians 7.4 percent and Georgians, 5.2 percent. Ossesians 3.2 percent and Abkhazians 1.7 percent.

Iraqi homeless Kurds fled across the border into Iran and were being cared for in camps.

In Washington Sunday, Senate Democrats and Republicans of the Middle East subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee asked U.S. soldiers to shoot down Iraqi helicopters and planes and to try to overthrow Saddam Hussein.

"The clear intent of American policy is to prop up Saddam Hussein and to prohibit the use of aircraft that might threaten the American forces — and that was both fixed-wing and helicopters — from operating," Senator Richard G. Lugar, Indiana Republican, said.

"I think we should enforce that policy," Senator Joseph R. Biden Jr., Delaware Democrat, said.

The meeting was held on a day a newspaper reported that 2,000 Kurds were traveling on foot toward the border in order to escape on foot to freedom.

On Sunday, a U.S. official said the President has no plans to make a peace move to the region after the withdrawal of non-Arab troops.

The meeting had agreed that Baghdad would allow the United Nations to send troops with a peacekeeping force to the volatile region to prevent a repetition of Iraq's Aug. 2, 1990, invasion of Kuwait.

"We must expect the oil-rich Gulf to bankroll their peacekeeping role to the tune of billions of dollars," the official said.

The official said the U.S. government is not ready to try a diplomatic solution to the situation.

Egyptian and Syrian forces were key Arab members of the U.S.-led coalition which drove Iraq out of Kuwait last month after 43 days of aerial and ground warfare. Troops from both states took part in the liberation of the emirate.

Society writers ignore laccocca's wedding

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca's wedding to a California restaurant owner brought little novelty from a city used to higher-level celebrities.

No pose of paparazzi was on hand for the wedding of Iacocca, who has earned more than $57 million during the past five years as head of the nation's No. 3 automaker, to Darrien Earle, 42, of Beverly Hills.

"We have no interest in it at all," Jeanine Stein, the society writer for the Los Angeles Times said Sunday.

Frank Swertlow, who writes the syndicated Hollywood Freeway gossip column for the Los Angeles Daily News, was asked to peg the wedding's importance on southern California's social Richter scale. "Oh, about a zero," he said.

"A celebrated person, decidedly," said Paul Dean, automotive writer for the Times of Iacocca, "but not a celebrity."

The Saturday afternoon civil ceremony was attended by about 100 guests. The event was complete with Chrysler bodyguards and D-Day-like secrecy.

Nightshade fad putting street teens in hospital

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — Florida teen-agers searching for a cheap high are taking a dangerous risk by ingesting blossoms from the belladonna plant, a mind-bending bloom also known as deadly nightshade, drug experts said.

In the last week, three street teens who ingested the blooms turned up at the Covenant House shelter in Fort Lauderdale. Two of them, half-coherent, were taken to local emergency rooms.

Ingesting belladonna is a seasonal mini-fad among street kids on the Fort Lauderdale beach strip, according to a Sunday report in The Miami Herald.

John Weatherhead, associate executive director at the 104-room Covenant House, said most of the kids seeking drug help there have tried belladonna at least once.

"Once one kid uses it, then they pass the word because it's a free high," Weatherhead said.

The plant, which has purple-red trumpet-shaped flowers and poisonous black berries, seduces teens with its promise of vivid hallucinations.

But the visions can be violent and terrifying. The plant's effects also include dizziness, confusion, atonement with a burning thirst and fever so intense that users have died in a week or two. The trip lasts 12 to 48 hours.

"It's something I wouldn't give my worst enemy," the newspaper quoted a 20-year-old identified only as Kevin as saying.

He ate the flowers off a Hollywood shrub a few years ago and said his mother had to lock him in his bedroom. He chanted with a clock, then took three showers at midnight, insisting he had to leave for school.

Each year, Broward General Medical Center treats three to five teens suffering from a bad belladonna trip. A dotty well known among toxicologists sums up the symptoms, "Mad as a hatter, dry as a bone, red as a beet, abdominal pains and groans," said Dr. Stanley Tenenbaum, medical director of Broward General's emergency services.

On occasion, the youths must be strapped down to stretchers.

Congregation finds angel in construction company

(Chicago, Ill.) -- Members of Holy Angels parish, a predominantly black Roman Catholic congregation on the city's South Side, got more than they bargained for when they hired James McHugh Construction Co. to build a new church. They found an angel.

Holy Angels Church was destroyed by fire in 1987, and McHugh landed a $4 million contract to build a new church for the parish. But it was hardly business as usual.

The company quickly decided it wanted to do something special for the parish and its pastor, the Rev. George Clements, the priest who made headlines around the world by adopting a child to encourage black families to adopt.

So McHugh began soliciting suppliers and subcontractors to contribute labor and materials for the project. The drive raised $2 million in labor and materials, cutting project costs in half.

The new church will open later this spring, but that won't end the relationship between McHugh and Holy Angels.

While working on the church, the company also took an interest in Holy Angels School and its pupils. "As we became more involved with Holy Angels we realized that we wanted to do something for its students," said James P. McHugh, president of the 94-year-old construction company.

"Many of the children were curious about our work," McHugh said. "We'd like to continue to spark their interest more formally and show them some of the opportunities construction offers." Holy Angels offers South Side youngsters an alternative to street gangs and drugs, emphasizing self-esteem, pride in the African-American heritage, self-discipline and academic achievement.

The school operates year-round, providing not only an opportunity to learn but offering a safe haven from the violence of the streets. Tuition is $2,000 a year — a steep price for poor South Side families. But the school's principal, the Rev. Paul Smith, says it is just a fraction of the $7,000 it costs Holy Angels to keep a child in school for one year.

McHugh Construction has "adopted" three Holy Angels pupils — eighth-grader Nakia Lyons and fourth-graders Amanda Daniels and Johnny Jones — and is paying their tuition. The children were selected on the basis of academic achievement and financial need.

Smith said the help is particularly welcome, since corporate contributions to elementary schools are rare. But McHugh's commitment goes farther than that. The company has promised to help finance their education through college if they work hard and keep their grades up.

"We know the value of a good education and admire the sacrifices that families make to send their children to Holy Angels," McHugh said. "It's a pleasure to help them, and we've enjoyed getting to know Nakia, Amanda and Johnny."

McHugh executives recently took the three youngsters on a field trip — a tour of some of the company's major projects.

They rode the glass elevators at the Chicago Place mall on Michigan Avenue's Magnificent Mile — one of the world's most exclusive shopping districts — and visited the Chicago Place project's million-dollar penthouse condominiums.

Researchers: Nuclear threat cause of storm cell demise

COFFEE STATION, Texas (UPI) — Many residents of the nation's "tornado alley" grew up feeling there was no escape from a nuclear bomb, thereby needlessly exposing themselves to danger from tornadoes by also abandoning that once staple household shield — the storm cell.

At least that is the feeling of Texas A&M sociologist Ben Aguirre, who is measuring the socioeconomic impact of more than 29,000 tornadoes that touched down in America between 1950 and 1980.

Funded by the National Science Foundation, the $285,000 project will investigate nearly 70 variables that affect a population's vulnerability to natural hazards, and the impact of those variables when subjected to twisters of different sizes.

"We are attempting to determine what social and economic characteristics ameliorate the impact of tornadoes," Aguirre said.

Building codes, warnings, land use patterns and population density are important factors, but they alone cannot determine vulnerability.

One factor often overlooked is the growing disease of storm shelters. Aguirre said the abandonment of storm cells might be partially attributed to the movement of city folks to the country and a resulting unfamiliarity with them, but the larger reason is the nuclear age we live in.

"A lot of people went through a period when they seemed to decide that if there was going to be an atomic war, we would all die whether we had shelters or not. Somewhere along the way they simply forget the original purpose of storm cells.

"Without cellars we have become sitting ducks," Aguirre said.

That's unfortunate because technology allows us to provide people a lead time of up to 20 minutes on a tornado.

Aguirre's study will ultimately merge volumes of U.S. Census data with information provided by the National Severe Storms Forecast Center on severity and other characteristics of tornadoes.

The study also will incorporate the results of a 17-state, 700-city study on the socioeconomic codes for tornadoes.

"We are extending the research of atmospheric scientists into the areas of human ecology," Aguirre said.

"No one, for example, has a clear picture of the distribution or impact of building codes in tornado alley."

"What is clear is that insurance companies are not correcting building codes by adjusting their rates according to a building's survival characteristics, and this study should provide us the data to communicate this message," he said.

Dr. Dennis Wenger, director of Texas A&M's Nuclear Reduction and Recovery Center, and Dr. Rogelio Saenz, a Texas A&M rural sociologist and demographer, are helping in the project.

Floating four bags from sunken ship mistakenly for drugs

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — Hundreds of bags of what was purchased as hard drugs on Florida's beachfront during the weekend but, to the dismay of some fortune hunters and the relief of police, the bags contained flour, not cocaine.

"Everybody thought their retirement fund had washed up on the beach in bags of cocaine," said SeaTours Inc. Police Lt. Arlen Shon, chuckling.

The plastic-sealed white bags were part of the cargo from the 184-foot Honduran freighter Jose Luis that caught fire and sank Thursday 10 miles off Elliott Key in Miami.

Most of the cargo, which included cars and bicycles, sank. But the 50-pound bags of flour and rice floated.

By Saturday, hundreds of them were seen in a 130-mile strip of beach from Miami north to Fort Pierce, Coast Guard officials said.

Beaches throughout the Fort Lauderdale area stumbled onto half-buried bags as they took morning strolls or set up beach chairs Saturday. Children built sand castles around them.

City officials sent out crews to pick up the parcels. Coast Guard officials said they did not test the bags for hard drugs.

University Air Force ROTC cadet to fly at world's top training base

By Kylie Robertson

Staff Writer

University Air Force ROTC cadet Brian Trethorn is flying straight to the top.

The science and industrial technology major will train with fewer than 10 percent of the nation's Air Force pilots at the most prestigious pilot training base in the world.

Trethorn will attend the Euro Nato Joint Jet Pilot Training course at Sheppard Air Force base in Wichita Falls, Texas.

He is one of 61 cadets chosen from 300 nominations.

His training will involve intense classroom and extensive flight experience for 56 weeks and will prepare him for flight in front line fighter aircraft, said Craig Hansen, chief of ROTC public affairs.

Trethorn said he is excited about the opportunity.

"I've always wanted to be a fighter pilot," Trethorn said. "If I am going to fly a plane I would prefer to fly aggressively, and this opportunity will allow me to do that." Hansen said the training won't be easy for the cadets.

"This course involves a lot more than our regular undergraduate pilot training," Hansen said. "The training is set aside from other programs in that it is multinational."

Cool weather keeps hot heads in line during break—police

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (UPI) — Cooler temperatures and cooler heads prevailed during spring break week, with police and townpeople reporting Sunday that most of the fun-seeking college students were on their best behavior.

“We survived,” said Palm Springs Police Lt. Lee Weigel. “It was pretty active, but not as big as in the past. I think the weather had a lot to do with it.”

A series of thunderstorms rumbled through the parched area earlier this week, making local ski resorts the preferred destination for young people emerging from academic hibernation. A ban on wearing skimpy “dang” bikinis and an increased police presence also were credited for reducing crowds and discouraging rowdiness in the laid-back desert community of 38,000 people.

“Everything’s been real smooth,” said Stephanie Graham, manager of the Best Western Host Motel. In response to past student rampages, the motel is one of several that no longer accepts guests under 25 during the spring break holiday.

“It seems like there are less people this year,” Graham said. “It’s gone fairly well, considering this is spring break,” said the manager of another motel, who declined to be identified. He said his motel was about 85 percent filled with students.

“I would say, on the whole, they were pretty well-behaved,” the manager said. The only problems were some noisy guests and students bringing glass bottles into the pool area, he said.

Merchants that cater to students reported business was down from previous years, which was disappointing news at the cash register but good for the nerves.

Nina Riggs, manager of “Fit to be Tied,” a T-shirt and gift shop, said activity at the shop was “a lot slower than we expected.”

“I have mixed feelings about it,” she said. “As a business, I would like more sales. But I don’t care for spring break. They (rowdy students) came here and ruined our town.”

Brett Skinner, manager of a nearby Baskin-Robbins ice cream parlor, said business was “down quite a bit this year.”

“We need more students down here,” he said. He blamed most of the drop in sales on cool, rainy weather early in the week.

Palm Springs officials enacted a series of new laws designed to thwart a repeat of the 1986 student riots in which students hurled rocks and bottles at police and caused thousands of dollars damage to the business district.

Among the restrictions is an ordinance restricting women wearing bikinis-bearing thong bikinis to pool areas. A young woman who flashed her bare breasts is blamed for triggering the 1986 melee.

Band finds success in Carbondale

By Jeff Pavlu
Staff Writer

Five men in Carbondale are at their wits' end, and they like it. The five are members of the band Wang End, which in only a few months has gained a strong local following.

Wang End is comprised of vocalist Joey Smith, lead guitarist Dan Karahic, rhythm guitarist Dave Adams, bassist Shane Beuver and drummer Scott Uzzle.

With three members from the Chicago area and two from Southern Illinois, it made Carbondale the first step in its bid for fame.

Known for their driving rock cover tunes of songs by bands such as Kiss, Aerosmith, and AC/DC and other energetic originals, their work to date has been a consistent winner in performance at Foghurt at Gatsby's several times a week.

Adams said it was a night he would never forget.

"It was an incredible experience, our best gig yet," Adams said. "The place was just packed, and it was an older crowd than we are used to.

"They were very responsive, even when we played some of our originals," he said. "They had never heard them before, but they still were up and dancing."

Adams said the local success hasn't spoiled them because they know they still have a lot of work ahead of them.

"Some bands make it in Carbondale, and think they're at the top," he said. "We know that to be successful takes a lot more than that. We have no illusions about it, and we're ready for the challenge."

"None of us are gifted musicians either," Adams said. "We have been disciplined enough to work very hard at it, and it has been really paying off.

"The band feels that although they play a great selection of songs, it is the current line-up that is the key to its popular sound.

"Karahic says the difference is in their new unity.

"There have been several other members in the band, but the five we now have seem to be a great mix," Karahic said. "We have been together for six months, and have decided to stick with it until we make it." They said the other reason for their success is their manager Jim Conway, of Cherry Productions. Jim just used to help us set up the equipment, but while ago he decided to go ahead and be our promoter," Karahic said. "Dave (Adams) used to manage the band and play guitar, which is a lot of work.

"Jim has been doing an incredible job at getting us gigs and dropping our name to everybody he knows. Now Dave can just concentrate on playing guitar, and it makes everybody's job easier," Karahic said.

He said one problem the band faces is being a rock band in a town where alternative music is more popular.

"It seems that in Carbondale, music by bands like R.E.M. gets a better response," Karahic said. "We got lucky because we have started to make sort of a niche for ourselves at Gatsby's, where hard rock is more appreciated."

"As a band, we are pulling hard for our own success, but aren't asking anyone else to pull hard for our success," Adams said.

"We're just asking people to support us when we play around town."

"We're asking for support," Adams said. "He who pays the piper should call the tune, and that's how it is with us."

Photographer: Oil exploration endangers Alaskan wildlife

By Sherri L. Viteck
Staff Writer

Oil exploration in the North American arctic lands would destroy wildlife in the area permanently, said a photographer and environmental activist.

Lee mechanism presented his argument in support of the preservation of U.S. wildlife to a crowd of 200 residents and Southern Illinois residents Thursday evening.

"The tundra of Alaska's arctic coastline is already opened for oil exploration," said Kohm. "And now the industry wants to develop an area that makes up less than 1 percent of that, at the cost of the wildness."

Kohm is a part of the Coalition for the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge, a wilderness area in northern Alaska. The U.S. Department of the Interior wants to allow oil exploration in the refuge's coastal plain, a 100-mile-long arctic tundra.

This refuge is home to musk oxen, wolves, wolverines, bears, and more than 140 species of birds. Kohm cited the importance of the "biological heart of the last complete ecosystem in North America."

He said according to figures from the Department of the Interior, there is an 81-percent chance no oil will be recovered from the refuge. The same figures reveal that even if oil is found, 3.2 billion barrels would be the most that could be produced, an amount that would supply the United States for 200 days.

Kohm became involved in the coalition after photographing the refuge in 1987 for Audubon magazine. He said after seeing theundra and spending time with the people who live there, he couldn't walk away from it.

"The thought of that place being defiled by massive industrial development disgusted me," he said. "The place really is America's last great wilderness."

But oil exploration risks more than destroying the wildlife in the area. It is also home to the porcupine caribou, a herd of animals imperative to the lives of Alaskan natives.

The Gwich'in Ninnystaa Athabaskan Indians of northeast Alaska rely on the caribou for their nutritional, cultural and spiritual needs. The coastal plain is the primary area where the caribou ranges its young.

Kohm said endangering the lives of the porcupine caribou herd would be a violation of Article One of both the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights which protects the indians from being deprived of their current means of survival.

"With all the experience we've had in the arctic, the way we've treated North American Indians, I can't understand why we would do it again," Kohm said.

Kohm said the area is public land, and people shouldn't let the government decide what to do with it. He said he doesn't want to see the refuge end up like Prudhoe Bay. He said oil exploration is now taking place.

"I've seen the oil exploration set-ups at Prudhoe Bay," he said, "It looks like someone took Gary, Ind. and plunked it down in the arctic wilderness."

He said 400 to 500 oil drums were abandoned in the tundra and have been used for other purposes.

Now there is talk of developing in the arctic refuge, and they (the Department of the Interior) say there is no reason not to, because the petroleum industry has an impeccable environmental record." "I think Kohm said. "But most of the oil now scattered over Prince William Sound comes from Prudhoe Bay."

In the political side, Kohm said southern Illinois is on the right side, because U.S. Rep. Glenn Poshard, D-Carbondale, is in favor of preserving the refuge.

"Your guy is a good man," one told the audience.

Kohm stressed that stronger auto efficiency standards and the development of other energy sources would be better than digging for oil.

He presented a slide show, allowing the audience to see the refuge and the refinery at Prudhoe Bay. He also asked his audience to write to representatives in Congress, asking for support of preservation, not oil exploration, in the arctic refuge.

Kohm admitted, however, that his efforts at educating the public could be handled better. "I travel about 15,000 miles a week driving around trying to convince people to use less oil," he said.

Soviet president vows to keep army powerful

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev told army commanders Saturday the Communist Party must be kept as the armed forces to keep them strong, Tass said Sunday.

Gorbachev's refusal led to demands to depoliticize the army, according to a summation of his speech to an Army Communist Party conference. The summation was released Sunday by the official Tass agency.

The Soviet president equated depoliticization by liberals to remove the Communist Party from the army with demands to break up the Soviet Union and decollectivize agriculture, Tass said.

"Any unbiased person understands what this all will mean — a destruction of all elements of state, of subversion, and disinintegration of the united armed forces of the country," he said.

Instead, he said: "There is no doubt that the country's leadership will seriously proceed with the construction of the armed forces. We shall not permit any undermining of the army."

"Under our defensive doctrine, the armed forces must have all the necessary things to reliably guarantee the security of the state and the preservation of peace," Gorbachev said.

"Soviet forces, who is now relying on the support of the military, the KGB and the Communist Party in a get-tough policy, continued his assault on what he has called the so-called democratic opposition."

"A definite part of today's opposition forces is especially dangerous because they exploit and pump up tension in society at any price for their own political ends, often proceeding from the principle: the worse it is, the better (for them)," he said.

But Gorbachev, who is now locked in a political struggle with Russian President Boris Yeltsin, said the positive results of the recent nationwide referendum on preserving the Soviet Union "clearly showed the people favor a renewed union."

He said the March 17 plebiscite will now allow him to "begin practical actions with the signing of a new union treaty" with the republics.

The Soviet military has the largest standing army in the world and a defense budget that has been bilaterally for the parlous state of the civilian economy.

Warsaw Pact now memory for Soviets

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Warsaw Pact, the 35-year-old Soviet-led military alliance set up to counter NATO, passed out of existence Sunday in a simple ceremony in the Soviet capital.

"Commander in chief of the Warsaw Treaty union armed forces Pyotr Lushkov and chief of staff Vladimir Lobov surrendered their powers," the official Tass agency said.

With that simple formality, "the Warsaw Treaty Military structures ended their activities today," Tass said.

The Warsaw Pact will continue in name, but the military alliance, the original raison d'etre of the grouping, is gone, Moscow has experienced hope that bilateral ties can go on.

"I hope that our relations will develop on a bilateral basis, including the issues of security and military and technical cooperation," Lobov said.

He stressed the decreased level of confrontation between East and West made it possible to disband the military structures of the Warsaw Pact.

"Only under these conditions, an opportunity emerged to build a new model of European security and to map out ways for a gradual transition to a non-bloc system," Lobov said.

The non-bloc pact had for all nations and purposes lost its reason for being last year when its East European members were allowed by Moscow to choose non-Communist rule.

The decision to disband the Warsaw Treaty military bodies and structures by March 31 was taken in Budapest, Hungary last February at a special political conference.

The multilateral military alliance was born May 14, 1955, when the Soviet Union and its then seven Eastern European satellite nations signed the Treaty of Warsaw.

The signatories were the Soviet Union, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, East Germany, Hungary, Poland, Romania and Albania.

East Germany, which was the lynch pin of the alliance against NATO, has itself ceased to exist as a separate state.
Board game reflects couple's struggle to make ends meet

By Brandi Tips
Staff Writer

A native Southern Illinois couple who used to live from paycheck to paycheck, are finding their personal experience into what they hope will be a profitable board game.

The game, which was originally from Uillin, are calling their new board game Luck of Life.

Mrs. Taylor said officials at Walmart and KMart chains have expressed interest in selling the game for the Christmas season. The game currently sells for $19.99 at Toys "R" Us in St. Louis. She said the game could sell for as much as $24.95 depending on where it is sold.

"It has taken about two years to develop the game when: it can be played smoothly without any snags," Mrs. Taylor said.

"Luck of Life is a family game, she said. "In life, everybody is trying to make a living. We don't compete against each other because we are all doing the same thing - trying to succeed," Mrs. Taylor said.

"If you are doing the best you can, no matter what class you are in, you are a success," Mrs. Taylor said.

Financial woes cause cancellation of concert

By Natalie Boehme

The Big Easter Throwdown concert scheduled for Sunday was canceled because of financial difficulties experienced by Gregory Productions Company.

The company lacked funding to keep the artists on contract, said Antonio Washington, president of Black Affairs Council which sponsored the concert.

"Gregory could not be reached for comment," said the Times. "Full ticket refunds can be picked up at the BAC office on the fourth floor of the Student Center."

"We are truly sorry for the inconvenience we've caused everyone," said Washington. "This is only a unfortunate incident that we had no control over."

"More serious" topics entered in journalism contest

By University News Service

The Danville Vanguard newspaper won first place for general excellence in the 27th annual American Pen Press Contest.

Skywower Magazine, published by the Kentucky State Reformatory in La Grange, won general excellence honors for magazines.

The Long Line Writer, published by the Cummins Unit, Arkansas Department of Corrections in Grady, placed first in the micromapped publication division.

The contest is sponsored by the School of Journalism. Walter B. Jaehrig, director of the school, said the contest was more serious this year.

"AIDS, drugs, and overcrowding were topics written about in nearly every publication, and to a large degree. It reflects our national correction problems," Jaehrig said.

Last year, the 6-year-old Danville publication won a blue ribbon honor in the micromapped division. In 1989, the Danville center upgraded its equipment and won the newspaper title its first ever in a small school newspaper division.
Boxing great Leonard admits to cocaine use

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Boxing great Sugar Ray Leonard Saturday acknowledged he used cocaine for about three years in the early 1980s and abused alcohol because of a career-threatening eye injury and a marriage breakup.

Leonard, a 1976 Olympic champion and winner of five professional titles, confirmed most of his former wife Juanita's testimony during their divorce proceedings last summer. His admissions came after the Los Angeles Times Sunday reported portions of Juanita Leonard's testimony.

"I'm not here to defend myself ... to rationalize or justify what happened five, six years ago," he moaned-eyed Leonard said during a hastily called news conference. "I returned to drugs and alcohol. Occasionally, I did cocaine and occasionally, I did drink heavy. What I did was wrong, it was unkind, it was stupid.

"I stand here ashamed, hurt, and I let Leonard, who often paused and reflected between words, "I stand here and think about my paralyzing my ex-wife's career and the fans who stood behind me not knowing what I went through for two years. All I can do is say I'm very sorry and that's not enough.

Leonard, 34, and his wife reached an out-of-court settlement in Montgomery County, Md., last December, ending their 10-year marriage. Juanita Leonard also testified that her ex-husband physically abused her and threatened to kill himself with a gun while she was drunk. "He said he would kill himself," she testified. "He tried ingesting a lot of alcohol and pills to kill himself.

Juanita Leonard testified the last time she knew her husband used drugs was in 1987, but Leonard said he stopped in early 1986 without entering a treatment center or seeking any outside support. "I didn't go to a center, I didn't take medication," said Leonard, clenching a fist at the Washington Post, which ran the Los Angeles Times article on its front page.

"I woke up one morning and looked in the mirror and what I saw was terrible kids," Leonard, who succeeded Muhammad Ali as the world's most charismatic boxer and was the most successful fighter of the 1980s, said he felt like a "recreational user" and did not believe he was ever addicted. He said the only drug he used was cocaine and it had no impact on his boxing career.

He denied ever attempting suicide and said testimony about physically abusing his ex-wife was "exaggerated" though he acknowledged having shown her. According to the Times story, Leonard testified he shocked his wife during drinking.

Leonard, of the exclusive Washington suburb of Potomac, Md., and rival Thomas Hearns appeared on nationally televised "60 Minutes" last Sunday and announced their retirement from boxing.

Leonard said his "dark moments" and subsequent cocaine use and alcoholism began when "my career was put on the back burner" because of an eye injury suffered during training in 1982.

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Alonzo Jamison’s importance to Kansas has evolved from defensive specialist to All-American. All year, Jamison drew the toughest defensive assignment, whether he was Missouri swingman Anthony Peeler, Colorado shooting guard Styve Weise, Nebraska forward Todd Holloway or Oklahoma State center Byron Houston.

In Jamison’s case, it was effective. He was named to the Big Eight All-Defensive team. But his defensive intensity came at a price: his offensive suffered.

“It’s been a heck of a challenge for him this year,” Kansas head coach Roy Williams said. “Every single night he’s had a big challenge on both ends of the court and he expects so much energy defensively that I know that detracts from some of the things he could do on the offensive end.”

But somehow Jamison has found new sources of energy, and since the NCAA Tournament began he is producing at both ends. After averaging 9.6 points and 5.8 rebounds a game during the season, Jamison has been worth 13.4 points and 8.2 rebounds during the NCAA Tournament. Over his five NCAA games his has hit 68 percent of his shots, up from 62 percent in the first 29 games.

He is a key reason the Jayhawks will be playing Duke for the NCAA championship Monday night.

“This is my first full year at a four-year (school level),” Jamison said by way of explanation. “I think I am improving as games go on. I dedicate that to Coach (Williams), because he makes you want to get better in practice. He’s a motivator. He makes you want to learn more. Other than that it’s just wanting to go out and do the best you can.”

Jamison, a 6-foot-6 junior transfer from Rancho Santiago (Calif.) Junior College, originally signed with Oregon State but could not enroll because of a high-school transcript problem. He sat out a year because junior college classes had already begun. He washed cars during the off-season and tried to use that money to pay for five or four nights work.

After playing at Rancho Santiago for a season, Jamison transferred to Kansas but then missed some more games as he tried to improve his academic standing. That accomplished, he became a mainstay for the Jayhawks and has started every game but one this season.

“I have been very pleased with his progress and the way he’s played the entire season, and you seem to get a lot more attention by scoring,” Williams said.

“He did against Arkansas, taking the ball to the basket, really got him a lot of attention. Being named the outstanding player of the Southeast Region gets him a lot of attention.

“He knows that I’ve been very, very pleased with his play during the entire season, and I think he can get a lot of attention and a little more consistent on his outside shot and drop about 10 pounds and he’ll be really something.”

IN INDIANAPOLIS, Indiana is looking for its 11th national championship this week. Although it only has a 4-3-1 record for the season, the Hoosiers are the No. 1 team in both polls.

The Hoosiers have a strong pitching staff led by senior Randy Johnson. Johnson has won 16 games this season and has an ERA of 1.38.

But the Hoosiers have struggled in the field this season. They have committed 123 errors, which is the highest total in the Big Ten.

On the offensive side, the Hoosiers have been led by senior catcher J.R. House. House has hit .340 with 10 home runs and 46 RBIs.

But the Hoosiers will need a strong performance from Johnson to reach the final.
Baseball's Opening Day pitchers still undecided for many ballclubs

Ben McDonald won't be on the mound Opening Day. Roger Clemens still doesn't know. McDonald won't start the Baltimore Orioles' season opener April 8 against the Chicago White Sox because of a side injury. An examination Saturday revealed a strained flexor muscle in McDonald's elbow, his physician Charles Silberstein said.

McDonald missed Thursday's exhibition start against the Montreal Expos because of the pain in his right elbow and will not be allowed to pick up a baseball for three days.

"We just have to see how that happens," said McDonald, who was 8-3 with a 2.43 ERA in his rookie season. "I won't be out there until (the elbow is) 100 percent.

Terry Brown was up 8-5 during the third inning, so he now has 15-()()·metre run with 3 points in 10 innings, as he took his 20-game relief streak for NCAA finals. Brown, a junior college pitcher, Mark Gooden under the American League Championship Series against umpire Terry Croom. Clemens was ejected in the second inning.

If the suspension is upheld, Clemens will be unable to start until April 14. If overturned, Clemens could have two starts by that date. Brown is expected to release his decision this week.

The New York Mets expect to have pitcher Dwight Gooden under a new contract by Monday. The club says his agent, Jim Neader, is flying to Port St. Lucie, Fla., for the signing.

"Hopefully, by the end of the day, we'll have a final imprint on a more concrete extension," Mets spokesman said.

Financial terms were not disclosed. The last prenegotiated Mets made was 3 years, $13.8 million. He had said he wanted 3 years, $15.9 million.

Kansas City pitcher Mark Gubicza was critical of Opening Day, despite a strong spring showing. Sunday, he was placed on the 15-day disabled list to continue his rehabilitation program from arthroscopic shoulder surgery last Aug. 2, a 2·a game winner in 1988, Gubicza was 4-7 last season. He spent last season in the minor leagues with the Mets.

"It should have been used in middle relief upon his return."
