USG election date still undecided

By Brian Gross
Special Assignment Writer

Less than a month away from student elections, Undergraduate Student Government leaders still are trying to find a date—the day of the election.

Despite bylaws in the USG constitution that aim to prevent many of the problems the student government has faced this year, USG leaders are floundering to get the election off the ground.

The senate failed to select an election commission by Oct. 15, as required by the USG constitution, and the president, to whom the responsibility then passed, did not appoint a commissioner until February. The Undergraduate Student Government problems seem to work in cycles, but students and faculty say students themselves get the runaround.

In 1985, the election commission disqualified presidential candidates after they won the election. The senate took the battle to the judicial board, which decided to seat the candidates. The election commission quit.

In 1987, USG ran out of money for first election commissioner resigned the same month, and the new election commissioner disagrees with the president on when the election, should be.

USG President Jack Sullivan wanted the election set for April 23, but election commissioner Yusuf Haqq said this date is too early and will not allow enough time for candidates to prepare. Haqq selected April 29 instead.

The USG senate will vote tonight on the election date.

"This may cause a lot of problems," Haqq said. "I'm trying to be optimistic, but I have a feeling the election is going to get thrown out. Some of the other commissioners have this feeling as well."

In spring 1990, USG threw out the entire election because the losing president and senators did not want to give up their seats.

City Council denies request to lengthen bar closing hours

Bars, liquor stores to open at 11 a.m. for Springfest

The Carbondale City Council voted Tuesday to approve 2 a.m. closing hours for liquor establishments during Springfest weekend.

It also passed the recommendation to delay the opening of liquor establishments until 11 a.m. Saturday, April 25.

Downtown businesses proposed extending the closing hours of liquor establishments until 4 a.m.

Bill Haupt, owner of T-Birds and ABC Liquor Mart, said downtown business owners are trying to provide alternative sources of entertainment to lessen problems on the Strip for Springfest weekend.

"If the city rejects this proposal it could be another nail in the coffin of an already dying downtown," he said.

City Manager Steve Hoffner said he does not support the proposal because of potential ramifications.

"It takes at least two hours after 4 a.m. to get the community under control," he said. "Extending the hours are encouraging people to drink even more."

Carbondale will have more problems when celebrants decide to go home, Hoffner said.

"By extending the hours, we'll have even more problems—whether they walk out, fall out, stumble out or crawl out," he said.

Councilman Keith Tuxhorn said he believes in exchange for the money, time and effort put forth by business owners, the city should support the two-hour extension.

"People are still going to be drinking—we have to face up to that," he said. "But I believe it's worth a chance."

A Friday night extension to 4 a.m. might lower the enthusiasm level of participants by Saturday night of Springfest, Tuxhorn said.

"It's a one-time thing, and the risk is minimal compared to the knowledge we could get for any future concerns," he said.

Tony Svach, vice president of Undergraduate Student Government, said the USG executive board finds the extension to 4 a.m. a positive step.

"At 2 a.m., people are more likely to get upset when they have to leave the bars," he said. "At 4 a.m., it's not only easier to drive people home, but they're tired and want to go home."

Mayor Neil Dillard said if the celebration continues beyond 2 a.m., the city would be providing an opportunity for people to over-indulge.

"I'm surprised that the liquor dealers asked for it and I'm sorry they have," he said. "Now we're being asked to delay liquor establishments (closing) not one hour, but two hours—I certainly can't support that."

The council members said they might consider a better idea after Springfest this year.

U.N. to impose sanctions on Libya

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—The U.N. Security Council voted Tuesday to impose a strict air and weapons embargo on Libya, beginning April 15, for defying demands that it surrender six suspects in the deadly bombings of U.S. and French airliners.

The United States, Britain and France, which co-authored the sanctions measure, had wanted it to take effect within 24 hours of its adoption. But they relented at the demand of Arab and developing countries and allowed a two-week grace period so a last-minute solution could be pursued.

The 15-nation council voted 10-0, with five abstentions to impose the sanctions on the government of Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi for not complying with a Jan. 21 council resolution that it surrender the suspects.

Countries that voted for the sanctions were the United States, Russia, Britain, France, Ecuador, Austria, Belgium, Venezuela, Japan and Hungary. China, Morocco, Cape Verde, India and Zimbabwe abstained.

The vote followed Arab League and U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Ghali efforts to persuade Libya to give up the suspects in the bombings of Pan American World Airways Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland, in December, 1988, and a similar attack on a French UTA airliner over Niger in 1989. A total of 441 people were killed in the attacks.

It was the fourth time in U.N. history that the Security Council imposed sanctions against a U.N. member. Previous targets of

Wilson, Venorsky lead SIUC hit parade as softball team sweeps doubleheader

By Norma Wilke
Sports Writer

In its final warmup for the Gateway season, the SIUC softball team swept Evansville 4-1 and 5-0 in a doubleheader Tuesday.

The two wins gave the Salukis a six-game winning streak and improved their record to 17-11. The game helped SIUC prepare for its Gateway opener, a doubleheader against Northern Iowa at 3 p.m. today.

Coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said SIUC was picked up on its hitting in its last few games.

"In the first game we were hitting well up and down the lineup," she said. "In the second game (sophomore catcher) Laurie Wilson displayed some clutch hitting. She and (senior shortstop Cheryl) Venorsky led us offensively."

In the first game, the Salukis took the lead in the first inning. Junior right fielder Colleen Holloway drove in Venorsky on a single. Venorsky doubled in the second inning to bring in freshman Marlo Pecoraro, and senior center fielder Kim Johannsen in turn singled to take Venorsky home.

Holloway led off the fifth inning with a double and scored on a single from junior left fielder Karrie Irvin.

Holloway was three-for-four and Venorsky, Johannsen and Irvin were two-for-four in the first game.

In Game Two against the Purple Aces, Wilson led the team offensively going three-for-three with four RBI.

Wilson drove in one run on a single in the first inning and two runs in the fifth on a double. She also had a sacrifice fly in the seventh to drive in Holloway, who reached base on an error and stole second and third.

Brechtelsbauer also said she was pleased with her team's improved pitching and defense.

Evansville's only run came in the fourth inning of Game One. Freshman pitcher Shelly Lane, 6-4, scattered seven hits for a complete game victory.

Senior pitcher Dede Darnell, 4-4, picked up her third shutout of the season in the second game against Evansville.

Brechtelsbauer said Darnell pitched extremely well and stayed in control throughout.

"Defense also was solid in both games," she said. "In the first game Venorsky snagged a bullet in the first inning to save a couple of runs. In the second game Holloway made a running catch on a short fly to right leaving two runners in scoring position."

Owners' offer revealed; players vote on strike

TORONTO (UPI) — NHL President John Ziegler Tuesday offered details of the owners' final contract offer, with players voting on whether to strike for the first time in the league's 75 years.

Results of the vote, conducted on a team-by-team basis, will be released Wednesday. If the membership votes to reject the NHL offer, as the Players Association negotiating committee recommends, the strike will start Wednesday at 2 p.m.—a week before the Stanley Cup playoffs begin.

A walkout would come at a time when the owners make 13 percent of their revenue. Both sides concede a strike could extend through the playoffs into the start of next season.

Details of the team-by-team vote are not expected to be released, but a number of player representatives indicated they felt the vote would be for a strike.

"I'm less optimistic than I was (Sunday)," said Detroit player representative Steve Yzerman. "My feeling is that the inevitable (strike) is going to happen. Speaking for our guys, everyone has the same train of thought. I would expect we would reject it. I would think the proposal would be rejected by everyone."

Chicago alternate representative Mike Hudson said: "For the last 20 years, the owners have had us in their hands. They put a new contract on the table every three or four years. We signed it and played hockey like a bunch of good-old Canadian boys."

In a news conference Tuesday, Ziegler said the owners would lose $9 million in 1992, with losses growing to $55 million in 1993 and $102 million in 1994, based on current projections.

To combat these losses, Ziegler said the owners have asked the players to adopt revenue sharing, fixing the player share of broadcast and gate revenue at 70 percent. Using the same method of calculation as the NBA, Ziegler said the players' share of

Salukis Smothered in spring, fall sports

Bo knows football, Bo knows baseball and Bo knows track. But does Bo know the Salukis' three-sport star?

Saluki sophomore Clint Smothers has made quite an impact on the SIUC Athletic Department. He came to SIUC on a football scholarship, but spends his free time patrolling the shortstop position for the baseball Salukis and pole vaulting for the men's track and field team.

SIUC head football coach Bob Smith said the Dawgs recruited Smothers out of Marion High school—where he earned 14 varsity letters—because of his all-around ability.

"Clint brings a lot of things to the sports he plays," Smith said. He has tremendous speed, he's tough and he's smart. But the thing that puts him a cut above most athletes is instinct. He just has the natural ability to be in the right place at the right time, and that is something he will never lose."

Smothers said he came to SIUC largely because of the freedom the University has given him to play several sports.

"I've always been involved in a lot of things," he said. "When I was younger it seemed like I was always doing something athletic. If I wasn't riding motorcycles I was off playing ball some place."

Smothers credits his sports background for inspiring him at SIUC and in life.

"The hardest thing I ever had to do since I got here is sit

New lineup to face Billikens

By Scott Wuerz

The baseball Salukis will play a single game today at St. Louis University before returning for a four-game home stand beginning Thursday.

The Dawgs will send senior George Joseph to the mound, and head coach Sam Riggleman said he will stick with lineup changes that led to a 5-3 victory Sunday at Southwest Missouri State.

The changes included moving senior outfielder Ed Janke up into the cleanup spot in the batting order.

Janke and (first baseman infielder Pete) Schlosser are really swinging the bat well right now," he said. "So it makes sense to bunch them up in front of Janke and hopefully he can pick up some more RBI."

Janke picked up three RBI in the Dawgs' 5-3 triumph Sunday at SMSU, including two in the first with a clutch double that put the Salukis on top to stay.

The Dawgs face Austin Peay Thursday. Sophomore Bobbs Richardson will take the mound Thursday against the Governors.

That game will be followed by three games against conference foe Creighton Friday through Sunday. The Blue Jays are 15-8-1 on the season, including a 2-0 MVC record.

Poshard, Durbin want Bush to reconsider ethanol limits

By Todd Welvaert
Politics Writer

Two Illinois U.S. Representatives have sent an open letter to President Bush asking him to stop Environmental Protection Agency roadblocks for the manufacture of ethanol.

U.S. Reps. Glenn Poshard, D-Marion, and Richard J. Durbin, D-Decatur, sent the letter, signed by 45 members of Congress, to "restore the hope of ethanol growth, rural economic development and job creation" by creating a level playing field for ethanol as Congress intended.

In the letter, the lawmakers expressed concern about recent EPA actions that, if not modified, will establish a regulatory block to the use of ethanol-blended gasoline in areas with high levels of pollution.

Poshard and Durbin said the EPA started with ethanol being the best choice and is now backing away from it without scientific study or reason.

"The confusion that the EPA's signals have created may very soon cause the door to shut on hundreds of millions of gallons of potential ethanol production," Poshard said. "The cost to our nation's clean air and the economic hope of rural America is incalculable."

"Rural economic development and jobs will be unnecessarily lost as other imported oxygenates take up the market slack caused by ethanol's government-imposed strait-

The lawmakers fear the roadblocks will stunt economic funding for research and create an unlevel playing field for ethanol.

"There are reports the EPA has placed unreasonable limitations on the oxygen content in the fuel program which are intended by Congress to be fuel neutral," Poshard said in the letter. "These limitations would preclude the use of 10 percent ethanol blends, reducing consumer choice and forfeiting additional reductions of carbon monoxide emissions in clear violation of Congressional intent that ethanol blends be permitted in these markets."

City Council appoints fire chief; Rushing to retire after 27 years

Carbondale will have a new fire chief May 15.

Carbondale officials announced Tuesday night at the City Council meeting that Clifford E. Manis will take over when Everett Rushing retires.

Rushing has been fire chief since 1987.

"I'm real excited about the appointment," Manis said. "I'll give one hundred percent effort to ensure your confidence."

Manis currently is assistant fire chief and has been a member of the Carbondale Fire Department since 1970.

He served six years as a firefighter, 11 years as captain and four years as assistant fire chief.

Manis is taking over for Rushing, who is retiring from the post after 27 years of service to the Carbondale Fire Department.

Manis has completed several training courses from the University of Illinois-Fire Service Institute and the National Fire Academy, including management, incident command and arson investigation.

In 1991, he attended the Illinois State Police Academy for arson investigation and was elected class president.

He has served on the Firemen's Pension Board for 19 years.

Manis is a sworn police officer and State of Illinois arson investigator.

He is a 1962 graduate of Carbondale Community High School and attended SIUC.

Manis, 47, and his wife Nancy are the parents of four children, Julie, Francine, Mike and Tom.

Manis was chosen from among seven applicants within the Carbondale Fire Department.

"Manis will be an outstanding Fire Chief based on his experience, training and progressive views for the future of the Department," said Steve Hoffner, city manager in a press release.

The Department has 30 full time paid firefighters and an ISO rating of 5.

Gay film stereotype blots silver screen

THE TIME BOMB OF GAY AND LESBIAN frustration toward Hollywood did not go off as expected during the 64th Academy Awards telecast Monday. Activists protesting the negative stereotypes of homosexuals in mainstream films staged their most vocal performances in the street outside the Los Angeles ceremony.

HOWEVER, A MUTED PROTEST DOES not mean the bomb has stopped ticking. The last two years have been poor ones for movie depictions of gays and lesbians, and like other minority groups slighted by Hollywood in the past, they are righteously angry.

The Best Picture nominations this year underlined homosexuals' frustration. Many of the plotters against John F. Kennedy in Oliver Stone's "JFK" are gay, and this is emphasized in a short but gratuitous orgy scene; the serial killer targeted by the FBI in "The Silence of the Lambs" is a transvestite who murders women for their skins; and the nominated screenplay adaptation of "Fried Green Tomatoes" left out lesbian scenes described in the original novel.

THE FILM WHICH TRIGGERED THE PROTEST is "Basic Instinct," in which each of the movie's three lesbian characters is a suspect in a brutal murder.

Perhaps frightened by threats of disruption, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences made a few gestures toward reconciliation. Presenters and many recipients wore red lapel ribbons to show sympathy with AIDS sufferers, and the late Howard Ashman's Best Song award for "Beauty and the Beast" was accepted by his gay lover.

BUT TOKEN ACKNOWLEDGMENTS WILL NOT undo wrongs, and homosexuals may have a long way to go before their depictions in film are even-handed. It took Hollywood more than 60 years to move from the Steppen Fetchit portrayal of blacks to such films as "In the Heat of the Night" and "Boyz 'n' the Hood."

Right now gay lifestyles are taboo for most mainstream films, with a few exceptions such as "Longtime Companion." But perhaps if Hollywood takes an honest look at its treatment of gay characters in the past, it can create honest portrayals that will help straight society understand gays and lesbians in the future.

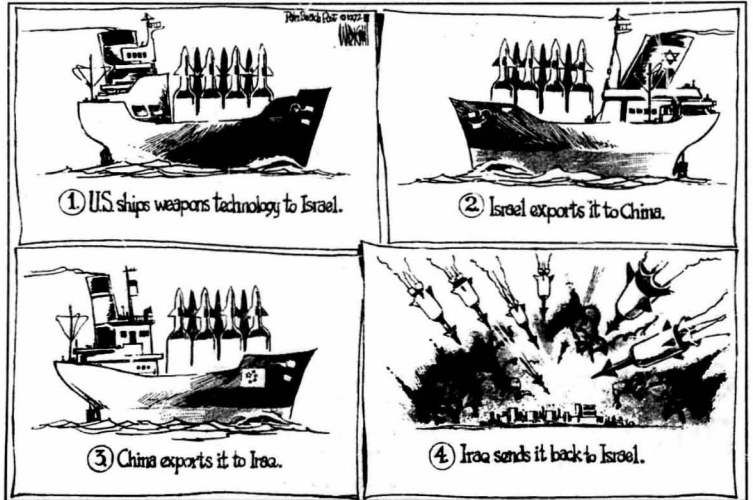

The traditional go-for-the-buck approach to movie making has left minorities of all types feeling abused and angered. Hollywood film leaders must remember they are setting standards for the entire nation. As society calls out for role models, the silver screen should give the public realistic portrayals of real people and their everyday battles.

Letters to the Editor

Administration receives blame for foreign TAs' poor teaching

It appears time to defend myself against accusations of chauvinism, close-mindedness and ignorance. I never claimed all foreign teaching assistants corrupt the English language. Like you, Mr. Narayan, I've met several whose accent is minimal, even charming, and whose grammar is better than the average American's.

However, the problem is those who cannot communicate effectively. I know they exist because they teach my classes, and many others have suffered the same experience.

I am also aware of the many ways English is spoken. I have British relatives, black, Korean and Hawaiian friends. I can understand them, and any confusion is cleared up with a simple question or a request for a restatement. Such is not the case in several of the classes I've taken, where repeated requests for clarification result in more confusion.

Mr. Banerjee, you are right. If bad communicators are allowed to teach after passing a comprehensive oral exam, it's the administration's fault. I hold no grudge against foreigners. We learn most from those different from ourselves. I have always blamed SIU's overly political, bureaucratic administration.

However, you are wrong about American universities collapsing without foreign TAs. There is no shortage of American students seeking assistantships. Reference, Mr. Adams' March 25 letter. Maybe you out compete by under-bidding. Foreign governments often pay for their citizens to attend college abroad. Most of us middle-class Americans have to pay our own way. Money is very important for our ever-increasing bills.

Neither have I claimed ownership of the English language. As an amateur etymologist, I am aware of the origins of our expressions and grammar. We are enriched with words or phrases from other cultures.

But when in the United States, entrusted with instructing American students, it is the obligation of all teachers to be able to speak basic English.—Brian Boyer, senior, civil engineering technology and paralegal studies.

U.S. students opt for salanes

In response to Mr. Boyer's March 13 letter, I applaud his effort but disagree with one point that he made.

Mr. Boyer suggested that American students be encouraged to fill the TA positions. The fact is that Americans do not bother to apply for TA positions because they have the opportunity for higher salaries and career advancement if they go directly into the job market after receiving a bachelor's degree.

International students see the chance to be a teaching assistant as an opportunity to remain in America to further their education at a U.S. school.

I have no problem with giving teaching assistant positions to foreign students. The problem arises when a prospective TA has not totally mastered the English language.

An individual who has difficulties with English grammar has no place at a U.S. school instructing U.S. students. Students with TAs who know only the bare minimum of English must spend over half the class time trying to figure out what is being said in lecture.

Oftentimes a foreign student is allowed to get by with a poor CESL score, or to get by without taking the exam at all. There are hundreds of students on campus subjected to teaching assistants who can't communicate with them. It is unfortunate that the students who are bothered by this problem do not speak up to voice their frustrations.

Without hesitation, I am able to say that I am sick and tired of paying through the nose for an education at an American school where many of the individuals teaching classes cannot speak the official language of the United States.—Maya Ewing, junior, English.

Graduate level disregarded by U.S. students

Mr. Boyer asks why more American student are not encouraged to fill TA positions. The first problem is not encouraging American students to do this, but encouraging them to apply and work hard enough to be accepted to graduate school.

I worked on campus processing 30-50 requests every week. It takes little estimation to determine that rarely were any from an American. And believe me, when an American applied, he was recruited very hard.

I also want to respond to your statement "during the first week of class I go to every lab wondering what connotations of the English language I will have to suffer through for the rest of the semester."

You and a lot of others automatically turn off your ears when you see a foreigner, especially in an instructor's role. I too have had a foreign instructor who I had trouble understanding, and it wasn't the best class I've had. But I have also had a foreign math instructor who, when I failed a test, stayed with me for two hours and helped me work through problems, showing me what I did wrong. I realized then many of us are quick to complain, but slow to understand.

When you say "I've always felt that buying American should also include hiring American," you must realize that when America is not offering the quality products we need, we have no choice but to turn to foreign products. So I encourage you to apply to graduate school, study your English hard, and become a teaching assistant in civil engineering.—Amy M. Manuel, senior, special education.

October with the selection of an election commission, according to the USG constitution, but a group was not selected until March.

"Things have been really hectic," Haqq said. "I was appointed real late. We're talking about things that should have been done in late October and is being compiled in March."

The USG constitution states that the senate's Committee on Internal Affairs will seat an election commission of eight members no later than Oct. 15.

No commission was appointed. Sullivan said it is important for the senate to appoint a commission but not crucial.

"It makes it easier on the person doing it if they have from October," Sullivan said.

Sullivan said the CIA was busy in October and probably over-looked the appointment.

If the senate committee fails to seat a commission on time, the president is empowered to seat the commission with the advice of the senate.

Sullivan appointed Cynthia Snair as election commissioner in February, but she resigned the same month.

If Snair had been appointed in October, she said she probably would not have resigned.

"It would have been a lot smoother sailing," she said. "But it's just all so political."

The same thing happened last year when USG found a commission at the last minute, Snair said.

Three USG office secretaries were selected.

"They said, 'Here's three warm bodies—you're the election commission,'" Snair said. "We ran out of ballots, we were short staffed, and I thought, 'Gosh, I'm putting a lot of energy into this.' It entails a lot of work, and so I weighed my priorities. It wasn't worth it. It's just all so political."

Sullivan said Snair's resignation was unanticipated registered student organizations in the middle of the year.

In 1990, the senate refused to seat winning presidential and senatorial candidates because most of the incumbents lost. A new election was run in the fall.

And this year, an election commission was appointed five months late, the date of the election is in dispute, and USG again has run out of money for RSOs.

USG acts as a representative of undergraduates to the University and distributes money for student activities and clubs.

RSOs that have projects or events coming up at the end of the semester and did not request money in advance will have to wash a lot of cars, said Jack Sullivan, USG president. Money was accounted differently this year, and the finance committee planned its budget for money that never came.

Election commissioner Yusuf Haqq said 1 people in the USG office want to work together, but the power makes them do things of which they are unconscious.

"There's a lot of monkey business going on, and when that happens nobody wants to be a part of USG," Haqq said. "There's no doubt about it—these things kind of destroy the credibility of USG."

Politics are about who gets what and how, said John S. Jackson, dean of the College of Liberal Arts. "Not surprisingly students develop struggles for resources," Jackson said. "Spending all that energy on squabbles hurts their credibility."

Barbara Brown, lecturer in political science, said USG has not and he could not think of too many people who could do the job. USG lost its core group of qualified election commissioners in 1990 when the election was thrown out.

"We lost our core experience when we had the election fiasco," he said. "They had a horrible time, and they all split. We were left empty. The last thing I wanted to do was have to do it myself. That would have been hell, especially while trying to keep the integrity of my office."

Haqq was appointed on Snair's recommendation, but things still did not run smoothly.

"There was a lot of internal, dirty politics that I had no idea of," Haqq said. "I was not someone who stays in the office 24 hours a day, so when they appointed me, it was kind of like appointing someone with a blindfold."

The first problem Haqq said he encountered was the tension in the office.

"It seems certain members are kept in the dark, so when it comes to making a decision, they are unprepared," he said. "I quickly got informed to the prior problems in the office."

The second problem he encountered was communicating with the president.

"Jack (Sullivan) has been helpful, but I felt for a while he was undermining me," Haqq said. "A couple of times I called a meeting, and the office all of a sudden was closed, and I was not told it would be closed before. I have to think of it as something to undermine me."

Haqq also went to the Student Center scheduling office to reserve rooms for the election but found the rooms already were reserved by Brad Cole, USG chief of staff. Cole also is a presidential candidate.

Haqq said it bothered him Cole knew the election date and other come under scrutiny in the past, and when an organization is not scrutinized, it can do anything.

"It's interesting that traditionally on this campus we don't pay much attention to student government," Brown said.

Brown said she remembers student government when it was not a social club, when the issues of the 1960s were pulling students together on campus.

"But without a large social issue, people withdrew," she said. "The administration did what it could to discourage active student government."

A weak student government invites evasions or excuses for mistakes and has no good lessons to learn, Brown said.

"The administration is probably not going to care," she said. "A forceful, voiceful student government is not something they want. Anything done to set it right is going to have to come from students."

SIUC President John C. Guyon said he would not get involved with USG.

"It's up to the students," Guyon said. "I would like them to be effective so I can get student input."

Penny Felton, a senator from Brush Towers, said the Trojan Party spiced up the elections in 1990 with new ideas like campaign T-shirts, but it led to more under-the-table practices.

"Our credibility does get hurt during elections," Felton said. "There is politics, and it does give USG a bad name. But people forget over summer break, and new freshmen come in in the fall."

information so far in advance of other candidates.

"Incumbents have a real big advantage," Haqq said. "They all know the internal business. I want to keep the elections even, and that's hard to do if the president and chief of staff are in the same party."

Cole said his job is to schedule for USG and sees no conflict of interest. As for his advantage of knowing the workings of USG, he said it is a positive trait for a candidate.

"I have a broad, firm grasp of what's going on," he said.

Sullivan said he wanted to schedule the election in advance, so last summer he marked April 23 as a proposed election date.

In addition to the commission being appointed five months late and the date of the election being disputed, the student trustee election commission has no formal undergraduate representation.

The student trustee election commission must be appointed by March 1, according to by-laws. The Graduate and Professional Student Council appointed three members, but USG failed to do so this year so the commission went to work without formal undergraduate members.

"GPSC reminded them several times," said Dara Lawyer, student trustee election commissioner. "It is a shame. It's a joint effort and should be done by both. I don't know who's to blame, but we have to go ahead."

Sullivan said graduate students traditionally have run the student trustee election because USG has so much to do with its own election.

"It's always been a courtesy," he said. "We do not have a vote, though, and that's kind of disturbing. I'm a little fuzzy on why that is. As far as I know, we should have three people."

The student trustee election is scheduled for April 29.

Clinic filling need for women who want female physicians

By Jackie Spinner
Special Assignment Writer

Women who seek female physicians as their primary health care providers may come up short from a profession that sends more men than women doctors to the examination room.

But at SIUC, nurse practitioners at the Women's Health Clinic, are trying to fill the gap.

The clinic, located on the second floor of the Health Service, has four female nurse practitioners and a female physician.

Dr. Mary Pohlmann, clinic supervisor, said the Women's Health Clinic is an alternative for women who want their doctor's care from a female.

"There are certain females who will not want to see any doctors that are male," Pohlmann said. "If you have never had a gynecological examination, the whole idea of being seen by a male is frightening."

The clinic specializes in reproductive health care, specifically gynecological examinations, pap smears, contraception prescriptions, pregnancy testing, breast examinations and post-abortion care.

Nurses also take extra time with patients to give education and prevention information.

"We do a big service in promoting safe sexual habits, assertiveness and self-esteem," Pohlmann said. "If a woman feels good about herself, she is more apt to demand safe sexual practices."

Although neither the clinic nor the full SIUC Health Service has a certified gynecologist on staff, Pohlmann said the nurses and physicians are trained for basic gynecological care.

"A gynecologist is a surgeon," she said. "We don't have time for someone who is going to the hospital to operate. We hire physicians who can take care of everything that walks through the door."

If nurse practitioners or physicians detect a serious abnormal pap smear or other complications, they refer patients to a specialist.

"I don't want to miss anything," said Pohlmann, who also is the acting chief of staff for the Health Service. "I don't want to miss a cancer."

But the clinic takes care of 80 to 90 percent of all patient problems without having to refer out, she said.

Female specialists outside of the University, though, are often scarce.

Nationwide 26,146 male doctors specialized in obstetrics and gynecology in 1990, but only 7,551 female doctors practiced in the same specialty, according to the American Medical Association.

For family practice, in which Pohlmann is certified, there were 8,248 female doctors compared to 39,381 male doctors in 1990, the last year figures are available.

In internal medicine, 79,178 men practiced medicine compared to 19,172 women.

Dr. Gabrielle D'Elia, a physician with the SIU School of Medicine Department of Family Practice, said in rural areas, the number of available female physicians is even less.

"Rural areas in general face shortages in health resources," D'Elia said, "and women physicians are less likely than men physicians to enter rural practice."

But the number of women physicians should continue to grow, as it has since the 1960s, she said, offering more women the choice in choosing between a male and female doctor.

Women medical students now comprise 36 percent of U.S. medical students.

"Since care to women accounts for two-thirds of all health care expenditures, appealing to women is good business," D'Elia said. "Problems with a paternalistic model of physician interactions with patients have made many women further dissatisfied with the health care system."

effect on him, he said.

"You live in a fish bowl and everyone knows everyone," he said. "When you're a preacher's kid you're always in the public's eye and never beyond the scrutiny of old women."

But being part of that world still gives him an emotional charge when he writes, Haruf said.

"Essentially my childhood was good and my parents were good people, but being a preacher's kid drove me to live inwardly," he said. "It made me someone who wanted to write—an impulse to express myself in some way."

Part of his development as a writer depended on growing up in a small town, he said.

"You know the town mayor and you know the town drunk, and they Author Kent Haruf remembers sitting around the dinner table listening to his father tell stories—now he has some stories to tell of his own.

Haruf, SIUC associate professor of English, said growing up in a small town in Colorado was the perfect setting for his writing.

"As a writer, that was an ideal kind of childhood for a number of reasons," he said. "You have a very specific and definite sense of place and a sense of how a whole society works—in a city you only know how a tiny part works."

Haruf, the son of a Methodist preacher, grew up in Pueblo. Being a preacher's son had a significant may be the same person," he said. "And you have a sense of history and how families' lives unfold."

His family had a large influence upon him and was responsible for introducing him to reading and telling stories, Haruf said.

"My father was a great storyteller—he was someone who came home everyday with stories about his life," he said. "And both of my parents were great readers."

Haruf said he read mostly books about horses and cowboys and did not begin reading "important literature" until college.

"My junior year I discovered Hemingway and Faulkner, and it was a wonderful shock that changed my life," he said. "It made me realize what I wanted to do."

In 1973, Haruf worked on his first novel while living in Colorado. He shelved books at a local library and did construction work to help his family get by while he worked on the novel, he said.

When the novel was half written, Harper and Row Publishers signed an option agreement with Haruf. But when he finished the novel, the company decided not to publish his work.

"In retrospect I can see it wasn't good enough and it was bitter," he said. "I was angry, upset and disappointed at the time, but not any longer."

Haruf, who came to SIUC in August 1991, has published two books. "The Tie that Binds," published in 1984, is about a brother and sister living together in northeast Colorado.

His other book, "Where You Once Belonged," published in 1990 by Summit Books, is about a man who commits a crime against a community.

Haruf said it is hard for him and most other authors to make a living at writing, so that is why he chose an alternative.

"I'm teaching on a college campus and writing too," he said. "This way I get paid to do what I love—talk about writing fiction."

Haruf currently is working on another novel, also set in Colorado. But he is hesitant to discuss the theme of the novel until it is finished, he said.

"I guess I'm old-fashioned, and a little superstitious," he said with a smile.

Festival offers chance to see alternative, political movies

By Ronn Byrd
Entertainment Writer

A national film competition that provides an opportunity for audiences to experience developments in filmmaking will be connected with a University student group for the first time this year.

The Big Muddy Film Festival gives Southern Illinois residents access to films usually shown only in larger metropolitan areas.

"We're trying to give the public a diversity in films instead of just giving them the mainstream type," said Mary Ann Naas, director of the Big Muddy Film Festival and Film Alternatives, which supports the Festival. "Most of these are films that the mainstream won't touch, mostly because they're political and issues that aren't dealt with by mainstream audiences. We hope that by bringing them here, more people will become aware of them."

The 14th annual festival is also the first annual of a kind.

"It's been restructured," Naas said. "This is the first year the Big Muddy has been affiliated with the University through Film Alternatives. Hopefully, this will be the kick-off for much better festivals to come."

For this year's festival, the core members of the Big Muddy are from Film Alternatives, a student organization founded to promote film events throughout the year.

"Film alternatives is a new group started last August to generate more interest in the college of cinematography and interest in seeing films and broadening audience's scope. It's brought even more people into the Festival," she said.

The 1992 festival is dedicated to student filmmakers from Illinois and surrounding states and will consist of a small student film competition.

Public screenings of the entries as well as those of independent films made by women, including "Who Killed Vincent Chin?" by Renee Tajima and Christine Choy, and "Privilege" by Yvonne Rainer will be presented. Both films deal with issues in the Asian and women's communities.

Neaenic Tenembaum, a graduate student in cinema and member of the festival committee, said these films both deal with issues commercial film will not touch.

"But I think they are more flexible because they don't have to deal with convention," Tenembaum said. "In 'Privilege' by Yvonne Rainer, the movie deals with menopause and sexual identity and the way each race relates to gender and class. Rainer's films are sexual and explore a lot of these themes."

"Who Killed Vincent Chin?" is about the murder of an Asian American. The movie is what killed him and the relationship of his death with racism. The way the film is structured, several interviews with people who were involved with Vincent Chin's death are used," Tenembaum said.

The festival this year is smaller to give organizers an opportunity to strengthen the annual event.

"I think it's a great opportunity for the community and the students to have contact with film as art," Tenembaum said. "This is what we're aiming for—to evolve in the Southern Illinoisan community."

The Big Muddy Film Festival will be April 2 to 5. Daily screenings of films will be at the Student Center Auditorium, the University Museum Auditorium and the Cinema Sound Stage in the Communications Building.

Admission is $1 and all events are open to the public.

noticed an increase in women requesting female physicians.

"I don't know that (female physicians) do anything differently," she said. "We may have more empathy. Some women may feel more comfortable talking to women."

SIUC student Kelly Malone, a senior in public relations from Cahokia, said her own physician is male, something that does not bother her.

"As long as it's a respectable doctor, I don't care whether it's male or female," she said.

Pohlmann said this is precisely the idea behind the clinic. It only offers an alternative for women who want a female doctor.

The clinic conducts about 360 pap smears a month, a signal to her the clinic is successful.

"Women have told us they feel comfortable here, they wish they could talk to their mothers like this," Pohlmann said.

"We provide a confidential and comfortable atmosphere for women students," she said.

that took place in the area on the northeast side of Carbondale.

Shortly after the nickname reached the ears of subdivision residents, a council of six decided to try and stop the problems.

Tracy King, resident coordinator for housing authority at Parkview, watched Tuesday afternoon as a combination of students and residents worked together to plant the trees.

But their life at the subdivision may be a short one.

"There is a good possibility that the trees will not be here long," she said with a sigh. "Hopefully, the trees will be here longer than the signs were."

The signs were one of the first attempts to keep out those who do not live in the subdivision, the people who gave "crack alley" its name.

Eight signs with "No Loitering" were posted to keep out groups of non-residents who smoke, drink, cuss and cause problems in the subdivision, King said.

"Two of those eight remained after standing for awhile because of those who do not like our efforts, and the council of the residents decided to just get rid of the two until we can find some way to keep the signs in the ground," King said.

The tree planting is the most recent plan to improve the area.

The resident council contacted the SIUC horticulture department and received the trees for planting.

Brenda Cleveland, instructor for woody plant maintenance class, said her class needed a project and the subdivision seemed like a good idea.

Cleveland's students helped plant the trees Tuesday with the aid of residents.

The name of the subdivision was changed to Parkview Grove from Chestnut Street Projects to give the subdivision a better name, and the planting of the trees is designed to give the new impression.

Carolyn Skyes, member of the residents council, said the residents and police have been helpful in their work.

The main problem is not those people who live in Parkview, but the ones who frequent the area who do not live in the subdivision; that cause the trouble, Skyes said.

Margret Jamison, member of the residents council, said the problem is not with the police.

"The police come and tell those people to leave and the problems stop, but once the police leave the people come back," Jamison said.

Skyes said a resolution was given to Jackson County Housing Authority that would help control the problems, but the resolution was not given much attention.

"The letter of resolution was just pushed aside," Skyes said. "People are going to lose faith in the council if we cannot get done what we promise."

J.L. Seed, executive director of Jackson County Housing Authority, said the resolution has not been ignored.

"The problem is with the legal representation between our attorneys is not meshing," Seed said. "Sometimes what the residents want and what is legal does not work out."

"We need to find a common ground," he said.

King said a number of projects are being planned to help the subdivision. Field trips to SIUC are being planned so the younger residents can see what is offered to them.

"The kids maybe will get some sparks going in their heads," King said. "We are just trying to keep the future open for the kids."

economic or arms embargoes, or both, were South Africa; the former Rhodesia, now Zimbabwe; and Iraq in 1990 for invading Kuwait.

The countries that abstained said they wanted to give Libya "another chance" to satisfy the extradition demand. Chinese Ambassador Li Daoyu said the sanctions will complicate the situation and he said the country supports a "serious and thorough" investigation on the incidents.

The resolution asked the Security Council to begin imposing the sanctions on April 15. To prevent or lift the sanctions, it urged that Libya surrender the suspects and "cease all forms of terrorist action and all assistance to terrorist groups, and that it must promptly, by concrete actions, demonstrate its renunciation of terrorism."

A U.S. diplomat said the concrete actions demanded include the closing of training camps and financial assistance that Libya had been providing to would-be terrorists.

The resolution bans all air links with Libya, except flights on urgent humanitarian missions, and the transfers of weapons, ammunition, aircraft, aircraft components, other military vehicles and equipment as well as engineering and maintenance servicing of existing Libyan hardware.

Workshop to aid students returning to home countries

By Fatima Jarvekar
General Assignment Writer

International Programs and Services is organizing a re-entry workshop Thursday for international students who will return to their native country.

The workshop will be at 5.30 p.m. at the International Faculty House on 1000 S. Elizabeth, west of the IPS office.

"The IPS conducts this workshop once every semester, to address the re-entry concerns of graduating students," said Diane Wissinger, IPS foreign student advisor.

Wissinger will present the workshop along with IPS staff member Dianne Schaufelberger and Paul and Pauline Gibson.

The workshop will aid professional, social and cultural re-integration of the student returning home by providing helpful hints on the re-entry process, Wissinger said.

"Re-adjustment to the home environment is very similar to initial adjustment by the student when he or she first came to the United States," she said.

"People come here, adapt themselves to the U.S. system, adopt U.S. values which may conflict with the beliefs of their countrymen and when they return home they may be unaware of the fact that they have actually absorbed a good deal of U.S. culture," she said.

The workshop also will act as a period of evaluation and retrospect for the students to try and find a balance between what they have gained from their U.S. experience and what their tradition demands, she said.

For students returning to re-explore their country's customs, the workshop will help provide a smoother transition from one culture that has had a varied effect on their lives for a limited time, to another that may be a whole new experience when looked at from a re-entry perspective, Wissinger said.

"We will look at how the students' lives have been affected by living here, and how they have grown up more mature and experienced," she said.

"People don't expect to have problems when they go back home," she said.

Associate professor of education dies at 50 after battle with cancer

By Casey Hampton
General Assignment Writer

Carol Marie Jacko, a 16-year veteran of the SIUC education department, who her peers recall as a dedicated faculty member, has died.

Jacko died Thursday at the home of her mother, Wanda Jacko, in Cleveland, Ohio, after being on leave from the University since last November. She was 50.

Services were at Our Lady of Good Counsel Church in Cleveland. Jacko made Carbondale her home in 1975 when she joined the SIUC faculty as an assistant professor of curriculum and instruction.

A specialist in instructional supervision, Jacko coordinated student teaching centers in Herrin and Marion and was promoted to associate professor five years later. More recently, she coordinated an educational methods course in the College of Education.

Donald L. Beggs, dean of the College of Education, said Jacko was not only a special faculty member, but also a mentor in teaching, research and service.

"Carol Jacko was the epitome of the well-trained university instructor," he said. "It is too bad she was not allowed more time to have more of an impact on future teachers trained at this university."

Jacko battled cancer since diagnosed in October 1990, bringing out her true fighting spirit, said Donna Post, an assistant professor in curriculum and instruction.

"Carol had a tremendous will to live," she said. "She fought very hard to live and struggled with the knowledge she wasn't going to."

Jacko went home to Cleveland during Christmas break to recuperate but did not return.

Jacko was brought to SIUC her strong commitment to education, Post said.

"She had a tremendous commitment to all the students with whom she came into contact," she said. "She fought vehemently for quality instruction for undergraduate as well as graduate students."

Jacko, an accomplished pianist, earned her undergraduate degree in English from Notre Dame College in 1965.

Seven years later she earned a master's degree in English literature and a doctorate in curriculum and instruction from the University of Pittsburgh.

She was active in the Association of Teacher Educators, the Association of Supervision and Curriculum Development and the Phi Delta Kappa educational organization. She also was president-elect of the Illinois Association of Teacher Educators.

Memorials may be made to the Colon Cancer Research Fund of the American Cancer Society, 1148 Euclid Ave., Cleveland, Ohio 44115.

'Silence' roars at Oscars, captures top five, first film to do it since 1975

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The 64th annual Academy Awards was a triumph of actors over movie stars, professionalism over glamour as "The Silence of the Lambs" dominated Oscar's big show Monday night.

More than 2,000 members of the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences, including Hollywood's leading performers, directors and power brokers, applauded as the biggest prizes were carried off by relative outsiders to the film industry establishment.

"The Silence of the Lambs," a suspense thriller about a female FBI trainee joining forces with a cannibalistic madman to stop a crazed serial killer, won its lionshare of Oscars in all the top categories, including best picture, best actor, best actress, best director and best screenplay.

No other film has swept the top five awards since 1975, when "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" walked away with the same cache of golden statuettes.

Jody Foster captured her second Oscar in three years as Clarice Starling, the courageous FBI cadet. Her first Oscar was awarded in 1988 for her performance as an avenging rape victim in "The Accused."

Her competitors were Geena Davis and Susan Sarandon in "Thelma & Louise;" Laura Dern in "Ranblin' Rose;" and Bette Midler in "For the Boys." Britain's Anthony Hopkins was voted best actor for his chilling performance as convicted murderer Dr. Hannibal "The Cannibal" Lecter, making him the third consecutive Briton to win the award, following Daniel Day Lewis in 1989 for and Jeremy Irons last year.

Hopkins bested Nick Nolte in "Prince of Tides;" Robin Williams in "The Fisher King;" Warren Beatty in "Bugsy;" and Robert De Niro in "Cape Fear."

Jonathan Demme, a first-time nominee and winner of the Director's Guild Award earlier this month, won the Oscar for best director.

Writer Ted Tally won the golden statuette for best screenplay adaptation for the movie.

The EPA also has proposed inflexible reformulated gasoline certification requirements that would impose additional volatility standards designed to be neutral and preclude the use of ethanol in ozone high pollution levels, Poshard said.

"When the Clean Air Act was amended in 1990, there was a very clear understanding that ethanol-blended gasolines would benefit from increased market opportunities in both oxygenated fuels program for carbon monoxide pollution areas and the reformulated gasoline program for ozone polluted areas," the lawmakers said in the letter. "Many members specifically supported these programs because they were written with clear legislative language that assured that ethanol blends would finally have a fair chance to help fill the market for oxygenated fuels."

The concern stems from a byproduct of burning ethanol as a fuel in areas where low-level ozone pollution is a problem.

"When ethanol is burned, it forms low-level ozone formation," said Mark Lambert, spokesman for the Illinois Corn Growers Association. "Low level ozone is entirely different than the ozone in the atmosphere. Low level ozone is the stuff you see in and around industrialized cities."

Lambert said fuel burned will have an impact on the environment, but if measured in context with the other alternatives, ethanol is a clear winner.

"If we could increase the amount of ethanol in the gas mixture the problem would be less," Lambert said. "The current mixture of 10 percent ethanol 90 percent gasoline is still superior than the alternatives. Methanol, the next best alternative, produces formaldehyde and that's the stuff they use to preserve dead critters."

If the restrictions are not removed, Lambert said the cost to Illinois will be great.

"The impact will be fairly significant," Lambert said. "By the year 2000 we would be using a billion bushels of corn to produce 2.5 billion gallons of ethanol. This growth will be put on hold. The use of corn could double or triple with ethanol. This would increase the market price by 25 cents and that's a lot when a swing of a penny or two makes or breaks some farmers."

Lambert said the expectations for ethanol affect more than farmers.

"Currently the state receives $5 million in direct sales tax from ethanol production," he said. "The state receives $994 million in related economic activity. Ethanol production has already provided farmers with a 7-to-12 cent increase in the price of a bushel and that alone is a $86 to $150 million increase in income."
