Policeman who beat King rests case

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES—Laurence M. Powell, the Los Angeles police officer who delivered the majority of baton blows against black motorist Rodney G. King, rested his case without taking the witness stand Wednesday, a surprise development that rocked the civil rights trial of the officers.

Powell's lawyer, Michael P. Stone, has said for weeks that Powell would take the stand in his own defense and announced as late as Tuesday afternoon that Powell would be a witness.

But lawyers for the other officers have expressed misgivings about Powell's testifying, and during a meeting Tuesday night the attorneys agreed that, despite Powell's strong desire to testify, he should not take the stand.

The four officers are being tried on federal charges of violating King's civil rights for beating him after a high-speed car chase on March 3, 1991—an event captured on videotape and broadcast around the world. Their acquittal last April on state charges of assaulting King triggered the Los Angeles riots.

Before resting his case, Stone consulted briefly with Powell in court. Stone rested one hand on Powell's shoulder and asked him if he was comfortable with the decision not to testify. Powell, looking pale and uncertain, nodded nervously.

Powell said afterward that he and Stone have discussed the issue for months and did not reach a final decision until Wednesday morning.

In fact, Powell said he was studying with a drama coach late Tuesday, going over videotapes of his testimony during last year's state trial and talking about how to improve it this time.

"It's always a roll of the dice when your client decides not to testify," Stone said outside of court. "But this is all a gamble. I'd rather not be at the gambling table, but we're here."

The decision not to call Powell also strongly increases the likelihood that neither Timothy E. Wind nor Theodore J. Briseno will testify, meaning that the trial, which had been expected to last well into April, could be sent to the jury next week.

Powell's last-minute decision reflects at least two defense considerations: The risks of

House OKs compromise budget plan

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—Advancing President Clinton's economic program, the House Wednesday approved a compromise $1.5 trillion budget resolution that calls for higher taxes, spending cuts in many federal programs and higher outlays for what the White House has termed "investment" in public and human resources.

The legislation, adopted on a 240-184 roll-call, was sent to the Senate for final congressional approval before Congress departs this week on its Easter recess.

In a related development, the House and Senate were expected Thursday to raise the federal debt limit by $225 billion to $4.370 billion through the current fiscal year that ends Sept. 30. Without quick action to increase the debt limit, the government would be

Students, faculty celebrate English with special day

Literature can be used as a tool for teaching students about the value of different cultures, the keynote speaker for English Day said.

Anna Jackson, a Carbondale East High English teacher, will be the opening speaker for the convocation program for English Day at 10 a.m. in the Student Center Auditorium.

Jackson will be speaking on making the cultural connection through literature.

"It's important to teach students about different cultures through literature," she said. "Our society would better understand each other if we take away the fear of differences between races."

John Jackson, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, said Jackson is known statewide and nationwide for good teaching.

Library starts work on world access system

By Michael T. Kuclak
General Assignment Writer

New technology at Morris Library one day may allow students to call up information on personal computers in their own homes from not only the University's library, but libraries all around the country and world.

Morris has already taken the beginning steps in to Library Information Networks, or Links, said Michael Schwartz, assistant director of computer affairs.

"(Links) takes a computer on a person's desk in the library, or in a building across the street, a dorm room computer with dial-in ability, or you could be at home," he said. "The computer could even be in Germany or Japan, if they are on Internet."

Schwartz said Links allows people to do a remote catalog search, a subject search or even get into Iliinet to access 799 other libraries in the state or in the country.

"A connection with the law library is in development," Schwartz said.

Jay Starratt, director of technical and automation services, said Morris also is connected to electronic mail.

"We get a lot of 'Who's linked?'" he said. "We also get questions on citations from people writing papers and small questions like what's the gross

Warm weather worries SIUC

Campus buildings uncomfortable as temperatures heat up

By Katie Morrison

SIUC student Carl Norman sat sweating in the library Wednesday, waiting to use the Infotrack.

"It's like a sauna in here," Norman, a junior in radio and television, said. "I try not to spend more than an hour at a time in here."

As the weather heats up outside, it is heating up inside, too, at Morris Library.

Norman is one of many students who endures the conditions each day.

Around this time each year, temperatures increase in SIUC's buildings until the Physical Plant can make the seasonal transition to turn off the heat and turn on the air conditioning.

"We judge on the outdoor temperature," Harrel Lerch, superintendent of building maintenance, said. "When it stabilizes, we turn on the air. There's no set date."

The Physical Plant monitors the building temperatures through a central control system.

Temperature gauges are set up throughout different parts of the duct work, Lerch said.

The Physical Plant usually turns the air on in the library first, then Life Science II and Neckers.

Besides the heat, there is no air circulating through the library. Part of the problem is that the building is old and so is the air circulation system, Lerch said.

"Some of the problem is that the windows don't open up to let fresh air in," University architect Allen Haake said.

The undergraduate library is one of the hottest rooms in the building. "We just have to bear it," said

Sharon Tompkins, undergraduate library employee. "I hear lots of students complaining about it. I think the heat is still on. It's got to be about 90 degrees in here."

Fans are set up in different areas of the building and the doors are being kept open to help lessen the suffering.

Salukis sweep pair from Evansville

SIUC sophomore first baseman Mandy Miller swings and misses at a pitch during the Salukis' doubleheader with Evansville Wednesday afternoon. The Salukis swept the Aces, winning 5-0 in the first game and notching a win by the 10-run rule, 14-4, in the second game. SIUC opens conference play this weekend.

The Saluki softball team trumped the Purple Aces of Evansville in a doubleheader Wednesday afternoon, winning the first game 5-0 and the second game 14-4 on the 10-run rule.

SIUC has now defeated Evansville 15 straight times.

In the first game, the Salukis ran out to a 4-0 lead in the bottom of the first inning. Jerry Klotz scored the first run off a Laurie Wilson single. Colleen Holloway and Wilson then came around on a Karrie Irvin double. Irvin came into score on a single by Christine Knotts.

Knotts and Irvin both went 3-for-3 with Irvin collecting three RBIs. Wilson went 2-for-2 with one run and one RBI, and Holloway was 2-for-4.

The winning pitcher was Angie Mick, who evenly her record at 3-3.

"Angie Mick pitched really well; a couple of runners got on base, but she came on really strong and retired the sides," SIUC pitching coach Gary Buckles said.

In the second game, the story was the barrage of runs SIUC put up late in the fourth inning to break the game open.

The Salukis jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first inning, as a Wilson double plated Klotz and Holloway.

Evansville answered, scoring three runs in the second.

The Salukis tied it on a Kelly Higgins score off a Jami Koss single, and broke the tie by way of a two-run double by Maura Hasenstab, scoring Wilson and Irvin.

"That was a critical hit," Saluki coach Kay

Salukis 12th at SMSU

The SIUC men's golf team had a rough trip to the Show-Me State, finishing near the bottom in its tournament earlier this week.

The Salukis competed Monday and Tuesday at the Southwest Missouri State University Invitational in Springfield, Mo., and finished 12th of 15 teams with a combined score of 312-325-321-958.

Sam Scheibal and Clyde Bering tied for the Dawks' best score at the Invitational, placing 32nd out of 74 in the individual standings.

Scheibal finished with a 78-80-

78-236, while Bering turned in a 76-82-78-236 performance.

Saluki Quinn McClure finished 51st with a 78-86-80-244 score.

Chris Pytell finished close behind with an 80-80-86-246, good enough for 55th place.

Jason Stillely placed 63rd with a score of 82-83-85-250.

The Salukis will travel to Wichita, Kan., this weekend to compete in the Diet Pepsi/Shocker Golf Classic.

The meet runs Sunday through Tuesday. Last season, the Salukis finished 10th out of 15 teams at the classic.

NBA fines, suspends Shaq

The NBA announced that Orlando rookie center Shaquille O'Neal has been suspended for one game and fined $10,000 for his part in a fight during the Magic's game Tuesday against Detroit.

O'Neal was suspended for punching Detroit's Alvin Robertson with 2:13 left to play in the Magic's 125-91 victory.

Robertson was assessed a $7,500 fine for retaliating against O'Neal.

Long fourth dooms Salukis in 8-4 defeat at Austin Peay

When it rains it pours for the SIUC baseball team.

The Salukis gave up six runs in the fourth inning to allow Austin Peay to come back and take an 8-4 win Wednesday in Clarksville, Tenn.

The Governors exploded in the fourth, connecting for six runs on six hits, including five straight singles, to erase a three-run deficit.

The Governors opened the fourth with a walk, and after an out, slapped five straight singles to knock in four runs. A sacrifice fly and double produced the other two runs.

Saluki hurler Mike Van Gilder came in to put out the fire with an inning-ending strikeout. Van Gilder pitched pitched three more innings and recorded five strikeouts.

"It was encouraging that Van Gilder did well," SIUC head coach Sam Riggelman said. "Hopefully, this will boost his confidence."

The victim of the Governors' barrage was Dave Farrow. Farrow surrendered 10 hits and seven earned runs in only 3 2/3 innings of work.

The Salukis jumped out to a 3-0 lead with runs in the first two innings. In the first, a walk, hit batsman and error loaded the bases for Pete Schlosser, who delivered a run with an RBI single. A sacrifice fly by Jeff Cwynar upped the SIUC advantage to 2-0.

The Salukis extended their brief lead to 3-0 in the second frame, as Chad Isaacson plated Dave Bernhard with a single.

"We jumped on them offensively; I wish we could have scored more runs early," Riggelman said. "The fourth inning is where they really got us."

An RBI single by Dan Esplin in the ninth concluded the SIUC offensive output.

With the loss, the Salukis fell to 13-9 on the season. The Governors improved to 13-10.

SIUC will be back in action today when it plays host to Missouri at 3 p.m. at Abe Martin Field.

At least new baseball expansion teams will get experience is 59-103.

Los Angeles Times

TUCSON, Ariz.—As the Colorado Rockies approach their National League debut next Monday, they no longer require the name tags that pitcher Bryn Smith gave his 62 new teammates during the first week of spring training.

The identity crisis is over.

The Rockies and the Florida Marlins, their expansion brethren, all know each other by name now.

History indicates that they might wish they didn't. History indicates that anonymity can be a blessing for expansion players. Each of the 10 previous expansion teams lost at least 90 games, and five lost 100 or more. The average first-year record with, you could pick any five and come up with only 14 major league victories last season. Charlie Hough won seven games. Jack Armstrong won six—he is 14-34 since starting the 1990 All-Star game for the National League—and Richie Lewis won one. Hough and Armstrong probably will be joined in the rotation by Ryan Bowen, 0-7 at the major league level last season, and Chris Hammond, acquired last weekend from the Cincinnati Reds, with whom he was 7-10 in 1992.

■ The Rockies' probable lineup of first baseman Andres Galarraga, second baseman Eric Young, shortstop Fred Benavides, third baseman Charlie Hayes, left fielder

Jerald Clark, center fielder Alex Cole, right fielder Dante Bichette and catcher Joe Girardi totaled 42 major league home runs last year, an average of six per player, but as Manager Don Baylor says, "I'm more worried about ERAs than HRs."

■ Orestes Destrades, a 30-year-old Cuban, will hit cleanup and play first base for the Marlins, whose lineup also includes Bret Barberie at second base, Walt Weiss at shortstop, Dave Magadan at third base, Benito Santiago at catcher, Jeff Conine in left field, Chuck Carr in center field and Junior Felix in right field. Destrades hit 154 home runs in his last 3 seasons in Japan, but has hit fewer in the big leagues than Hough, who has one.

None of that has dampened the enthusiasm of fans in South Florida or the Rocky Mountains, nor is the reborn Santiago, signed as a free agent by the Marlins, dissuaded from jabbing the San Diego Padres, his former team.

"It's kind of sad, they had so much talent there," he said of the Padres' turnover. "I think (the Marlins) are a better team than San Diego now."

The Marlins have sold 19,000 season tickets. The Rockies have sold 26,000 season tickets and 2.6 million tickets in all. They have put OFFICIALS EATEN UP BY CANDY CONDOMS — Health and justice officials in the southern German city of Darmstadt are getting chewed up about candy condoms served up by a lewd local baker. The 54-year-old pastry whiz, known as "the porn baker," sells all sorts of sex-inspired sweets and cakes, which he calls "erotic works of art." His latest creation — pralines with a condom baked in — have set the pulses of health inspectors and lawyers racing.

CLINTON PREPARES FOR MEET WITH YELTSIN — President Bill Clinton is hoping for a "good summit" with his Russian counterpart Boris Yeltsin that "leads to more action" by the West on aid for Russia. White House spokesman George Stephanopoulos said Wednesday. Stephanopoulos said Clinton was preparing for the meeting, which is set for this weekend in Canada. Today Clinton plans to outline a financial package to Russia during a speech before top editors in Annapolis, Maryland.

HORMONE HELPS WOMEN WITH ALZHEIMER'S — Two Japanese doctors announced Wednesday the female hormone, estrogen, is effective in treating female patients for Alzheimer's disease. Assistant Professor Takeyoshi Okura of Dokkyo University and Kunihiro Ise of the Tokyo metropolitan government's Tama Geriatric Hospital said they will disclose details of treatment data during a conference of the Japan Society of Obstetrics and Gynecology beginning April 10.

LOANS TO IRAN GRANTED BY WORLD BANK — The State Department Wednesday called a World Bank decision to grant Iran a loan of $165 million for a new electrical grid "inappropriate." The World Bank's Board of Governors vote came about two hours after Secretary of State Warren Christopher described Iran as an "international outlaw" in congressional testimony. The State Department listed the Tehran government a supporter of world terrorism since 1984.

SEVERAL DIE IN ATTEMPT TO ESCAPE BOSNIA — Several people were killed Wednesday when hundreds of people desperate to escape from the Bosnian enclave of Srebrenica fought each other for a place on a United Nations convoy preparing to leave the town. An unknown number of people were trampled or crushed to death in a stampede to join the convoy of 14 trucks. A U.N. representative said over the radio that the scenes in the town had been "distrressing."

EXPERT SAYS BATON BLOW WOULD KILL VICTIM — A defense medical expert testified today that Rodney King would not have survived baton blows to his head by Officer Laurence Powell. Carley Ward, billed by attorney Michael Stone as a "bio-mechanics" expert, said King's face would have been crushed by such a blow. "If power strokes would have been applied (to his head and face), Mr. King would be dead," Ward said.

ALIENS OVERWHELM IMMIGRATION SERVICE — The Immigration and Naturalization Service is overwhelmed by the nation's vast illegal population, government investigators told a House subcommittee on Tuesday. "INS does not have sufficient resources to detain the millions of aliens who are subject to detention or who have been ordered deported," said Henry V.ray, director of justice issues at the General Accounting Office, an investigative arm of Congress.

SAN FRANCISCO MAYOR FIGHTS POETRY LAW — San Francisco, famous during the beatnik era for its free-verse poets and coffee houses, has become embroiled in a legal tussle over the right to read or recite poetry in public. Under a city law passed in the 1960s, coffee houses must buy a $600 permit to allow non-professional poetry readings. San Francisco Mayor Frank Jordan says the law is "outrageous." He has asked the city's Board of Supervisors to suspend its enforcement.

USG advocating plan to raise insurance fee

By Michael T. Kuciak
General Assignment Writer

The Undergraduate Student Government Wednesday passed 13-9 a resolution to support raising the student health medical insurance fee by $20 to $106 a semester.

Jake Baggott, senior administrator of the student health program, said the proposal came up when SIUC's insurance company announced a premium increase. He said it is going up because claims more than doubled last year.

"We are actually in the third year of a five-year contract," he said. "The first year was very favorable, and we even got a refund. But in the second year claims doubled to more than $3 million."

The insurance company probably will take a loss because of the jump in claims, Baggott announced at the meeting, and the company expressed hopes the increase in claims would not continue.

Senator Petros Koutsopanos asked Baggott if the jump would coincide with an increase in benefits.

"The answer is no," he answered. The resolution provided for an additional $20 increase in the spring 1994 semester and a $12 jump in summer 1994.

Baggott said the only alternative was to rebid with other insurance companies, which he said probably would cost more because most companies would not want to cheaply deal with the University after the claim increase.

Insurance pays 80 percent of the first $2,000 of costs and 100 percent beyond that. The insurance covers special cases such as emergency room, hospitalization, ambulance, specialty care and surgery.

Koutsopanos, who voted against the fee increase, said the increase will hurt students.

USG also decided to fund Iota Phi Theta and Kappa Alpha Psi. A resolution to add student government polling booths to Trueblood and the SIUC Arena for election on April 21 was struck down. The resolution would have brought the number of polling booths on campus from four to six.

State services lack funds despite average taxes

By Jeremy Finley
Politics Writer

Taxes in Illinois are about average compared to other states, but it spends less on education than the neighboring states of Iowa and Indiana.

At a forum Tuesday, more than 30 SIUC students and faculty listened to a discussion on how services such as education could benefit if taxes were higher in Illinois. The talk was led by economic professor Paul B. Trescott and political science professors David Kenney and John Baker.

Trescott did research in the Department of Commerce government finances for 1989-90 and said Illinois's rank in the nation is 13 on per capita tax expenditure, spending $2,102 in comparison to the U.S. average of $2,017.

Illinois's $2,102 tax revenue is higher in comparison to Indiana's $1,631 and Iowa's $1,881, even though Illinois spends $1,036 on education per capita, less than Indiana's expenditure of $1,130 and Iowa's $1,236 on education, according to the Department of Commerce.

But Baker said if people in the state want higher funds for services such as education, they are going to end up paying for it through taxes. "The politicians give us a general answer that someone else is going to pay for (the services), like rich corporations and wealthy people, but it always seems to come back to me and you," he said.

Baker said people believe in false sources to pay for these services.

"The public believes in the tooth fairy," Baker said. "We believe the tooth fairy is going to provide the services and we won't be taxed. We want to believe in that desperately."

"As long as we think that, we're going to want increases on education and health issues, but not a higher income tax," he said. "Illinois is not an undertaxed state, but we've got to expect an increase in taxes if we want those services.

If we don't want taxes to go up, we're going to have to face a dramatic reduction in services."

Kenney said an increase in taxes may cause other problems for Illinois.

"Would not higher taxes in Illinois drive businesses from the state?" he said. "And that would mean less money in the state and it would reduce tax revenues. It's a very real danger."

Kenney said higher taxes would take more money from private hands and put it to governmental use.

"If I have to send more money to Springfield, it's not going to be spent in the local area," he said.

Baker said citizens must have faith in the government to spend the money in useful areas.

"If I had $2 million a year, I might not spend it on education," he said. "The government does this for me. The state is in the business of getting us to spend money in places that we wouldn't ordinarily. I'm willing to take the risk that they're spending it on services."

The forum is sixth of a series designed by John Jackson, dean of the college of liberal arts, and Harry Haynsworth, dean of the School of Law, he said. The series has been offered for faculty, students and citizens for two years. The forums are designed to discuss political and governmental issues affecting the public, Jackson said.

Clinton must reject litmus examination

SINCE SUPREME COURT JUSTICE Byron R. White's resignation, speculation has abounded about whether there will be a litmus test imposed on President Bill Clinton's nominee.

During the campaign, Clinton said "it makes me feel uncomfortable" about an abortion litmus test but that he thought it was necessary because of the courts erosion of abortion rights.

Now he says he will not apply one. This is the right decision.

A litmus test would make one factor the criteria for a decision that should be based on many professional and ethical standards. In judging a nominee for Supreme Court Justice, Clinton will be choosing an individual that not only interprets the law but shapes the very fabric of society.

THUS THE CHOICE OF NOMINEES for this position should not be restricted to one sole criteria but on the overall excellence of what the nominee has to offer.

In noting this, however, it must be recognized that ideological factors do play a role in the selection of court justices and are not likely to cease when Clinton makes his own decision.

These ideological factors have been leaning to the right for the last dozen years. As the first Democratic president in 26 years to appoint a Supreme Court Justice, Clinton's choice offers a chance to rectify the imperfect balance existing in the court's Reagan-Bush-era conservative shift.

Clinton realizes the importance of his decision and has said the candidate he is looking for is someone that "has a fine mind, good judgment, wide experience in the law and in the problems of real people and someone with a good heart."

WHILE CLINTON'S CHOICE APPEARS likely to provide a more liberalizing influence, one should not be overly optimistic about the impact of White's replacement.

Even when justices are appointed because of their ideologies, past appointments have illustrated that they are not always reflective of the party that nominated them.

One case in point is the aforementioned Justice White. Appointed 31 years ago by President Kennedy, the 75-year-old White has sided with court conservatives on many issues, especially on divisive matters such as abortion and church-state relations.

He was one of only two original dissenters to Roe vs. Wade, the 1973 decision which made abortion a constitutional right and he authored a 1986 decision called Bowers vs. Hardwick, which upheld state sodomy laws.

THUS EVEN WHEN LITMUS TESTS of sorts are applied they are not always reflective of behavior. This juxtaposition further serves to underscore that qualities of excellence should not be restricted to ideological factors alone.

However, Clinton's desire to choose someone on the court that is pro-choice among this list of other desired qualities does not constitute a litmus test.

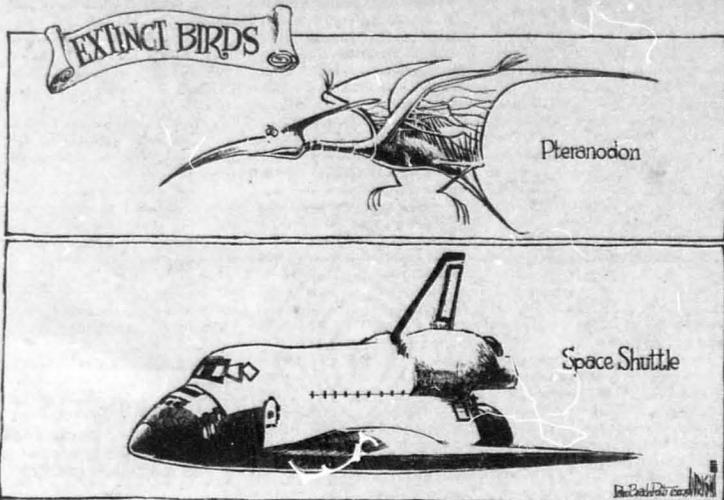

Only when it is used as the only deciding factor for such a choice does it fail to take into account all of the other qualities needed to make a truly viable justice.

Raised entry age not solution

A rumor has been circulated about bars' entrance age being raised as a result of the death of a student at Checkers. There have been other rumors too, but the above mentioned is most likely to come true.

In my opinion, this decision would not solve the problem.

First, the student in question was 24, so this should not be the event that helps to pass the higher age requirement.

Second, as was proved at Checkers, it is not always the bargoers' age that shows how mature they are. Had the student been under 21 and acted in this irresponsible manner, city officials would have a legitimate reason to raise the bar entry age.

I go to the Strip maybe once or twice a month, so, although my experience is limited, more often than not I find the people causing the most problems are over 21.

There are other solutions I think would solve the problem much better. For example, I think there should be more training and stricter qualifications in hiring bouncers. They should be trained on a more social level when hired, so, when a problem arises, they can deal with

Younger students would choose more dangerous entertainment

I am writing in response to your article in the Daily Egyptian about raising the age to enter the bars to 21 years of age. I believe this may be a drawback, not a resolution.

If you raise the age to 21 then underage students may turn to drinking on the road in cars. This could result in serious injury, death, or driving under the influence.

Students may also resort to their dorm rooms to drink, in which if they are caught could be fined or kicked out.

When students go the bars

they at least have some sort of supervision, and many of them walk home instead of driving.

Not everyone who goes to the bar drinks. Many of them find it a place to relax and socialize with friends.

I strongly feel they should keep the age at 18 to enter and keep a better watch on those who seem to be getting out of control. These types of people can lead to a disaster.

Thank you for your time and consideration. — Angela M. Patton, sophomore, law enforcement the problem drinkers verbally before physically.

I think they should be more selective when admitting people into the bar. If people look like they may cause a problem, then the employee at the door should refuse the patron entrance.

I would like to stress that even though I have primarily spoken of the bouncers, I am not blaming them for what happened. I put more blame on the bar owners and managers for not being more thorough in training their employees.

I do not believe that those of us under 21 should be punished for something that we were in no way involved with. — Erik Berrey, freshman, physiology

DE wastes time with self-promotion

In response to the half-page advertisement on March 26 celebrating your newspaper's awards for "excellence," I would suggest giving this self-aggrandizing behavior a rest.

Perhaps the staff of the Daily Egyptian have become so intoxicated by their awards (mostly second and third place) that they are unable to see the paper's multiple shortcomings.

Until awards are given for syntactical errors, proofreading lapses, convoluted or incoherent story construction, and the general promotion of hate-mongering letters to the editor, I believe some degree of humility is called for.

Rather than indulging yourselves by trumpeting a spurious success, turn that energy toward creating the truly excellent newspaper of which your staff is capable. — Robert Cole, graduate, speech communication unable to pay its bills. Clinton, clearly pleased by the action on the budget, later told reporters, "We are moving with remarkable speed."

Despite the president's urgings to Congress to enact his $16.3 billion emergency stimulus package, however, it remained bogged down in the Senate amid increasing doubts that it can be salvaged before the weeklong Easter break.

While it does not have the force of law, the budget resolution would establish a framework for future legislation that envisions tax increases of $272 billion over the next five years to reduce the deficit $496 billion by 1998.

"We have the opportunity today to move the president's vision forward," Rep. Martin Olav Sabo, D-Minn., chairman of the House Budget Committee, said before the vote.

If the resolution's spending caps and revenue-raising targets are followed, however, the deficit would be trimmed by $50 billion more than the president requested in his deficit-cutting proposal on Feb. 17.

Republicans angrily declared that the blueprint would amount to the largest tax increase in history, raise spending to record levels and increase the deficit by $1 trillion over the next five years.

"It's not our package, folks," said Rep. John R. Kasich, R-Ohio, ranking Republican on the budget panel.

The resolution does not require the president's signature. It lays out spending caps for Senate and House committees and suggests ways to accomplish savings.

But the recommendations are not binding and committees may find other ways to meet the spending limits.

Later, Congress will pass a giant "reconciliation" bill to lock the tax increases and spending cuts into a law that will require Clinton's signature.

"She started teaching at Carbondale East in 1980 and has won five awards since then including the $25,000 National Educators Award. She's an exceptional teacher," he said.

Anna Jackson, on the other hand, said her teaching technique is no different from many of her colleagues.

"She said she just was picked out of a pile."

"All I know is that when I walk into the classroom I feel a certain amount of warmth that makes me give these students the desire to learn through teaching," she said.

Betty Mitchell, assistant chair of the SIUC English department, said English Day was originated by Richard Peterson, chairman of the English department, more than six years ago.

The purpose of the event was to incorporate a special honors day for the department.

Peterson said the program is a ceremony open to the public that recognizes the most outstanding students in English as well as outstanding teachers.

"We will be awarding students and teachers from nine different high schools along with our own teachers, undergraduate and graduate students in the department," Peterson said.

"A total of 14 awards will be announced at this ceremony but we're still trying to expand the number of awards given away each year to recognize teaching and scholars," Peterson added.

Also in celebration of English Day will be the release of the spring 1993 edition of "Grassroots," the SIUC undergraduate literary magazine.

Lex Williford, lecturer in English and faculty adviser for "Grassroots," said the spring 1993 edition is the best ever.

"This year we've restructured the whole magazine. We've got some really fine poetry and fiction this year," he said. "In some aspects, it's as good as the graduate level."

The book will be available to students in the English department and outside the Student Center Auditorium during the program for $2.

Poetry readings in the Saline River Room of the Student Center and fiction and AEGIS readings in the Meckinaw River Room beginning at 1 p.m. will be the closing events of the day.

Originally, the 12th Annual Harry T. Moore Lecture was going to present the closing speech of the night.

Moore has been re-scheduled for 8 p.m. April 8 in the Student Center Auditorium along with readings from Ellen Gilchrist.

Most students, regardless of the temperature outside, wear shorts to battle the heat.

"It's OK. I can afford to lose a couple of pounds," Ed Janke, senior in advertising, said.

Temperatures in the Student Center also are increasing because of the warm weather.

The volume of students moving through the building and the heat from the building's kitchens also make it uncomfortable, said Ken Jaros, the Student Center's chief building operating engineer.

Building maintenance has been taking measures to decrease the heat, he said.

"We've been running the fan system 24 hours a day," Jaros said. "The dampers are open when it's 40 to 70 degrees outside to bring cool air in. We're keeping air movement throughout the building."

national product of some country."

Besides listings, links can call up actual material on the screen, such as the complete works of William Shakespeare. Schwartz said the works of Shakespeare actually are called up from Dartmouth University in New Hampshire, and the computer is able to search the entire works for information such as where "To be or not to be" is located.

Starratt said the first version of Links began Aug. 24, 1992, and took two months to hook up. After that, he said, the library has just been building on the foundation and adding features.

"This year we are working on multimedia and campus video and several campus-wide information projects," he said.

Schwartz said in the future Morris Library will try to get into imaging and full text databases.

"The concept is that you don't actually have to get a book or a resource," he said. "You can just call it up on the screen, get it printed and get a very nice image of what you wanted."

Schwartz said the main driving force behind this push for information access is a group called Library of the Future.

"Library of the future is a committee laying the groundwork to build an annex to Morris Library," he said. "It would house the state of the art, a library without walls."

"It does not necessarily have to hold books, though it will," Schwartz continued, "but it will give access to library holdings across the world."

Starratt said the new computer capabilities did not cost any money because no new equipment is involved.

"Time was the biggest investment," he said. "We didn't have to buy anything."

Starratt said Links is being primarily used by researchers and faculty members, though many students are also taking advantage of it.

subjecting Powell to cross-examination and the faith that the other defendants have put in the testimony of Sgt. Stacey C. Koon, who spoke up for all four of the officers during his powerful three days on the stand.

But not calling Powell poses other pitfalls as well. A California Highway Patrol officer, Melanie Singer, testified that she saw Powell strike King six times in the head with a baton during the 1991 incident. Now Powell will not have the opportunity to answer that allegation directly.

Powell conceded that he was concerned about whether jurors would hold it against him that he did not confront the allegations.

"We thought about that. ... How badly does the jury want to hear from me? We had to go through a lot of things," Powell said.

The medical evidence about the baton blows has been conflicting, with two doctors testifying for the prosecution that there were direct hits to the head and two medical experts testifying for the defense that the facial injuries were the result of a fall to the ground.

Mayor honors officers, firefighters for bravery

By Erick J.B. Enriquez
General Assignment Writer

A roar of applause echoed through City Hall Tuesday evening when local firefighters and police officers were honored for their acts of bravery during the Pyramid Apartments fire last December.

Although five SIUC international students died in the fire, 21 Carbondale police and fire officials were recognized with awards of valor, service and merit for their efforts in saving other lives on Dec. 6, 1992.

"All of these personnel reflect what our profession and our department stand for," Carbondale Police Chief Don Strom said.

"The ability to put the needs and safety of our community above their own personal interest," he said.

On behalf of Carbondale and the City Council, Mayor Neil Dillard expressed his gratitude to Strom and Fire Chief Cliff Mazis.

"Thanks for serving all the citizens and doing your job so well above and beyond the call," Dillard said.

The investigation into the fire, which was ruled as arson has not resulted in any arrests, but Strom promised a strict dedication until an answer is found.

"We still have investigators who are working full time on the case," Strom said.

"We still have leads to follow up and it's our intention to maintain this case in its open status until we reach some successful conclusion. Our commitment to working on it has not changed in any way and we will continue to forge ahead," he said.

Strom said he will keep representatives from all branches of the student body informed.

"I met with the International Student Council and brought them up to date with the status of our investigation," Strom said.

"We've also met with other student leaders throughout the investigation to keep them apprised of what we were doing with the case," he said.

On Dec. 6, 1992, five SIUC students were killed and 13 others injured at 506 S. Rawlings St.

The students who perished in the fire were Cheng Teck Wong, 23, senior in electrical engineering from Johor, Malaysia; Ronald A. Moy, 23, a senior in economics from Chicago; Kimoko Ajirka, 25, a senior in marketing from Osaka, Japan; Lai Hung Tam, 23, a senior marketing from Kowloon, Hong Kong; and Mazlina Ab Wahid, 28, a freshman in vocational education from Malaysia.

The following police and fire officials were awarded for their rescue efforts.

- Firefighters Aaron Hine and Brian Rice, who were the first to arrive on the scene received the Fire Department's highest honor, the award of valor.

- Assistant Chief Bill West, shift supervisor performed to the highest standards of his profession and was awarded the award of merit.

- Firefighters Dave Lovell and Doug Briggs, members of the first fire-suppression entry team, were awarded the commendation award.

- Fire Inspector Larry Webb and firefighter Kerry Braswell, radio dispatcher, were awarded certificates of commendation.
- Patrol officers John Butler, Brent Nausley, Chuck Doan, Kevin Geisser, Mark Goddard, Greg Marez, and Sergeants Calvin Stearns and Steve Odum, were honored with a letter of commendation and a service award.

- Patrol officers Steve McBride, Hank Banycky, and Jeff Grubbs were awarded the chief's award of valor.

- Pastor Robert Gray, chaplain to the Carbondale Police Department, was awarded the chief's award of merit for his contributions to the department and the community.

Dillard also proclaimed the week of March 29 to April 7 Asian-American Week.

New York pianist to play at festival

By Andy Graham
Entertainment Writer

The SIUC Beethoven Society for Pianist's Spring Festival has been saved at the last minute by a top-notch, world renowned pianist.

A New York pianist and teacher at the Eastman School of Music, David Burge will perform at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Hiram H. Lesar Law Building auditorium in the place of Austrian pianist Banu Sozuar.

Sozuar originally was scheduled to play the festival, but she cancelled Friday when problems arose, said Donald Beattie, president of the Beethoven Society.

"She was set to play two wonderful programs for us, but there were difficulties in obtaining a Visa," he said. "So I made a few phone calls, but it was rather late to find somebody else to step in at that late date."

Beattie came upon some luck soon after Sozuar cancelled. Fernando Laires, a Brazilian concert great and his wife, Lolita True were distinguished guests at the 1992 Fall Festival. They heard about Beattie's predicament and did some networking at the Eastman School of Music, where they teach.

"She's the Chairperson and he's a faculty member and we have become very dear colleagues, he said. "They speak very highly about their times with us here at the society to the point where their colleague David Burge of Eastman basically heard of our situation this weekend and offered to play."

Beattie said Burge is a unique pianist, who has played concerts all over the world for forty years and is well known. One of the pieces Burge will be playing Saturday was written for him by George Crumb, a very distinguished American composer.

"This particular work, 'Macrocosmos volume one,' is rather well known. It's a beautifully conceived piece," Beattie said.

Another part of the Spring Festival is the presentation of awards to students who will play the festival. This is the sixth year the Bill Barras Awards will be given.

"The awards are given in the name of Bill Barras, the owner of Baldwin Piano in Herrin. Bill has been a great friend to the School of Music and to the society," he said. "These awards are in his name, totaling $500."

This year's five recipients, Ching Ming Lim, a senior from Singapore, Le Khin Wee, a graduate student from Singapore, Rochelle L. Joyner, a graduate student from Winston Salem, N.C., Ya-Yi Wang, a junior from Taiwan and S. Chad Reed, a graduate student from Carbondale will give a free concert at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Lesar law building auditorium.

"This has been a nice way and a nice incentive for our own students each spring to have a recital opportunity and to receive recognition and awards to support their work," Beattie said. "The Beethoven society for me very much is supporting our own students and supporting young people."

Clinton to mediate forest feud

Northwestern loggers, environmentalists to talk timber sales

Zapnews

SEATTLE — President Bill Clinton's persuasive powers are about to face a crucial test when he tries to reconcile conflicting interests of Northwestern loggers and environmentalists.

Making good on a campaign promise to mediate a bitter feud over some of America's last old-growth forests, the Clinton administration will convene in Portland, Oregon, what it calls a timber summit April 2.

The White House calls the gathering a "conference" where those concerned will "sit down and discuss the issues, as opposed to something where major policy decisions will be made in the end."

But expectations of a major breakthrough in the longstanding forest controversy have been fueled by the presence of President Clinton, Vice President and outspoken environmentalist Al Gore, three senior cabinet secretaries and the head of the Environmental Protection Agency.

Some of these officials are expected to continue working at the conference site after Clinton moves on his summer with Yeltsin April 3-4.

At the heart of the battle are hundreds of thousands of acres of "old growth" or previously uncut forests on federal land in the states of Washington, Oregon and California.

For the past two years logging has been curtailed in these areas by court orders aimed at preserving the habitat of the northern spotted owl, which is protected under the Endangered Species Act.

Logging companies and residents of Northwestern timber-dependent communities complained that if the logging ban becomes permanent as many as 40,000 jobs will be lost.

Northwestern Forestry Association President Jim Geisinger said the summit will provide an "opportunity to educate the administration" on the problems faced by Northwestern timber workers.

However, Less Welsh, Northwest regional director of the environmental group "Lighthawk," said the focus of the summit should be on strengthening rather than watering down the Endangered Species Act in order to protect Northwestern ecosystems.

Rare Swainson's Warbler focus of Southern Illinois habitat search

By Angela L. Hyland
Environmental Writer

The Illinois Department of Conservation is beginning a search of Southern Illinois in hopes of finding habitat for what may be the rarest bird in the state, conservation officials said.

The study of the Swainson's warbler's habitat will be in two parts — an aerial search and a ground search, said Jim Herkert, project manager with the Illinois Endangered Species Protection Board.

Department of Conservation officials plan to begin their search as soon as weather clears, Herkert said. "We should have no problem finding habitat," he said. "The problem will be finding the bird."

Last year, a search for the warbler, endangered in Illinois, revealed only one pair, Herkert said. The previous year he said no birds were found in Illinois.

Many believe it was a loss of giant cane stands that led to the warbler's decline, Herkert said.

The light green coloring of the canes make early spring an ideal time to conduct a search, he said.

"Before trees leaf out, the cane stands out and is easy to locate," Herkert said.

Timber sales authorized by the Forest Service in areas surrounding cane stands are cited as one reason for the bird's decline, he said.

Jean Graber, who studies the bird, said if timber cutting had not been done, the Swainson's warbler might be more numerous.

"The one really good population (of Swainson's warblers) we had the Forest Service destroyed," Graber said. "They went in, did their cutting, and as a result, the population dwindled to almost nothing."

Even if its habitat is restored, the Swainson's warbler may never again be seen in large numbers in Illinois, she said.

"There may be plenty of good habitat, but not enough birds," Graber said. "I think the study's a good idea. The more knowledge we have the better. But I'm not sure we know enough about what is needed to attract them back."

March named time to realize female history

By Thomas Gibson
Minoteries Writer

On the surface it appears that women are in better positions than they were decades back, said James Allen, associate professor in European History.

But the role of women in America is not as good as it looks, he said.

Women's History Month gives great women of the past exposure for young women of the present to pattern themselves after.

In 1910, Claire Zetkin, a German laborer established Women's day that turned into Women's History month in America.

Leigh Wolf, graduate assistant for the women's re-entry program, said Zetkin proposed that March 8 would be Women's Day.

SIUC women's services established a newsletter called the Women in Transition that focused on women's history month.

James Allen, associate professor in European history, said women's history month is celebrated the same way black history is recognized.

"With exhibits in museums, lectures, essay contest, and history fairs," he said.

Allen said Women's History Month highlights the past of women who have done outstanding things in history.

"We take certain groups for granted," he said. Women are not presidents or generals, Allen said.

Allen said the reason why Women's History Month does not receive the same exposure as Black History Month is because of lack of money.

"Lack of big push by the grass roots to establish the month," he said.

City approves paintball sport location

By Sanjay Seth
City Writer

Students and the Carbondale community alike will have another entertainment alternative to the bars that dominate the Strip — an indoor paintball game.

The City Council approved an amendment to a city code Tuesday night that will allow the discharge of these carbon dioxide powered paintball guns within the city limits.

Jeff Feltman, a Pomona businessman, proposed establishing the game at 315 S. Illinois Ave.

It is expected to open the last week of April but does not have a name yet.

Feltman presented the council with a history of the game and the relative safety of the game.

After a study of the game, its regulations and effects in other cities where it is available, the council came back with an approval of a change in the ordinance to accommodate the game.

The 9,000-square-foot area where the game will be contained; commonly known as the T.J.

McFly building, will not permit anyone younger than 16 play.

Feltman said 16- to 18-year olds will have to provide parental consent forms. A field fee of $10 that is good for the whole day, will be charged to each participant, and guns, 50 paintballs and safety equipment can be rented for $12.

Though guns will not be sold at the site, Feltman told the committee that guns generally range from $80 to $500.

The decision for the ordinance amendment was approved 3-2, with opposition coming from Councilman John Yow and from a no-vote letter from Councilman Richard Morris.

Yow said he had two main concerns, including a letter the council had received and the image the game ported.

A letter from Herbert Donow, the president of the Uptown Incorporated Group, expressed concern that a paintball game would not fit in with the new image being created through the revitalization of South Illinois Avenue and downtown, he said.

Yow also said this type of game portrays violence and would give the younger patrons enactments of fantasies. He said Morris also was against the idea based on information he had provided the Mayor and the city clerk.

"I was just not ready to put support this proposal yet," Yow said. "I wanted to wait another week to discuss this. The vote could have come out differently then."

Feltman said he is providing the city with something they are asking for — a non-alcoholic, enjoyable recreational activity to alleviate the bar monotony on the strip.

"When I was a student in '66 I can remember walking down the Strip and stopping at a bar for beer before hopping to the next one.

When you got to Walnut you would turn around and walk back again," Feltman said. "Things haven't changed in all these years, and hopefully this is a start to the change needed."

Feltman stressed that anyone under the influence of alcohol will not be allowed in.

Why Me?

When trouble strikes your life or the lives of those close to you, do you find yourself asking why? Or why me?

A series of lectures by Ed Myers, Dean of the Harding Graduate School of Religion, explores these questions this weekend.

Myers has asked "why" all his life since he and his twin brother lost their father when they were only ten years old.

He has written four books including one about evil and suffering.

You're invited for any or all sessions. There's no charge or collection.

Reese's contributions overshadow dunk miss

Los Angeles Times

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Although Brian Reese is not about to admit it, his missed dunk at the end of regulation in Sunday's NCAA East Regional final against Cincinnati will not soon be forgotten in these parts.

Sure, the North Carolina Tar Heels advanced to this weekend's Final Four in New Orleans with a 75-68 overtime victory, but some still were wondering Tuesday how a talented 6-foot-6 swingman could miss an uncontested dunk.

"It's over and done with," Reese said on a warm and windy spring day here. "Nothing more can be said about it."

Reese, a talkative junior from the Bronx, N.Y., wishes it were so simple.

Guard Derrick Phelps is not about to let it be. Phelps said Tuesday the players are enjoying some verbal sparring.

"Brian Reese missing a dunk is shocking to me," Phelps said.

This locker room banter keeps the Tar Heels loose as they prepare for Saturday's semifinal game against Kansas. Even if North Carolina had lost to Cincinnati, Phelps said teammates would joke about the mishap.

"That's part of life," he said.

The ignominious moment came when North Carolina inbounded the ball with eight-tenths of a second remaining in regulation and the score tied. Reese caught the inbounded ball about five feet to the left of the basket. He was alone. As teammates encouraged him to snoot, Reese lunged toward the basket and tried to dunk, but the ball went off the back of the rim.

Officials said it would have counted had it gone in, but that probably would have elicited protests from Cincinnati coaches. It seemed more time had elapsed than 0.8 of a second before Reese shot.

Although the miscue came at an inopportune time before a national television audience, Reese has had a gratifying season.

North Carolina might not be in position to win its second NCAA title except for his late-season exploits. Reese, 21, scored 56 points in three Atlantic Coast Conference tournament games as the Tar Heels (32-4) finished second to Georgia Tech. In the last 13 games, he has averaged 14.3 points and five rebounds.

After starting the season slowly because of injuries, Reese is peaking. Best of all, he is feeling good.

Already this season Reese has suffered a pulled back muscle, sprained ankle, pulled hamstring and injured hand. It was a disappointing start considering how hard he worked last summer to improve his stamina. Last season, he was unable to play long stretches without tiring and was thought to have asthma.

But he wondered about it. "I never had asthma before in my whole life," he said in November. "Then I come down here and all of a sudden, people say I have asthma."

North Carolina fans are more apt to marvel over Reese's development in the past three seasons than dwell on his medical history. Reese came to Chapel Hill as a highly touted scorer from St. Nicholas of Tolentine High.

As happens to so many other prep All-Americans who enter Coach Dean Smith's system, Reese has become a complete player. Smith has been criticized for stifling young talent such as Michael Jordan 10 years ago. Reese said the rigid program is beneficial for those interested more in NBA contracts than NCAA scoring percentages.

Reese was determined to attend North Carolina after watching the 1982 NCAA championship game in which the Tar Heels won when Jordan scored in the final 17 seconds. He might not have watched the game, in which Smith got his only NCAA title, except that a friend played for UNC.

North Carolina's disciplined style had a profound effect on him. "Growing up in New York, it's more one-on-one, so you can see those moves I make," he said.

Reese was unprepared for the rigors of collegiate basketball.

"It was a big change for me," he said of playing for Smith. "I mean, I'm from New York, I never ran a day in my life. Run the track? Get in shape? I ride on buses, trains, cabs everywhere. Running? I didn't even know what that was."

SALUKI BASEBALL

Non-Conference Action

SALUKIS VS MISSOURI

3:00 p.m. ABE MARTIN FIELD

Brechtelsbauer said.

Evansville closed to within one, before STUC broke the game open in the bottom of the fourth. Klotz and Holloway scored on a Wilson single, Wilson and Irvin scoring off a Mandy Miller double, and Miller scoring off a wild pitch to make the score 10-4.

In the bottom of the fifth, Holloway scored off an Irvin single, Irvin and Wilson scored off a triple by Knotts, and Knotts scored off of a Miller single to end the game by the 10-run rule.

"It wasn't a very good day...we made some hits but we couldn't sustain their hitting," Evansville coach Gwen Lewis said. "They are a very good team; they deserved to win. They just outplayed us, outthusted us. They just did everything."

Evansville was suffering from injuries to their two shortstops and their starting first baseman.

"They stayed with us throughout most of the game; we didn't break it open until late in the game," Brechtelsbauer said.

Miller, Knotts, Irvin, Wilson and Koss proved to be dominant offensive forces, combining for 13 hits and 8 runs off a combined .812 batting average.

The winning pitcher in the second game was Kristie Spielman, who improved to 2-0 with the win.

"Kristie Spielman pitched against Evansville on Saturday, so they were used to her pitches; she just wasn't real sharp today," Buckles said.

The Salukis will return to action Friday when they will play host to the Shockers of Wichita State in a conference-play opener.

up 4,000 auxiliary seats at Mile High Stadium and expect to draw 80,000 for the April 9 home opener, topping the mark set in 1958 by the Dodgers when they played their first game in Los Angeles against the San Francisco Giants at Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum and drew 78,672.

"This franchise is important to an entire mountain area," said Baylor, making his managerial debut.

While refusing to define those standards, he presumably meant surpassing the first-year expansion record of 70-91 by the 1961 Los Angeles Angels.

"We want to be able to throw strikes and catch the ball," said Jerry Royster, former Dodger infielder and minor league manager who will be Baylor's third base coach. "None of us want to be part of something that looks sloppy. A good year would be if we went out and played like a team that had been together for a while and worked up to a more competitive and contending level by the time we go into the new stadium."
