Top chancellor candidate announced

Illinois leadership: Committee to interview Ted Sanders Friday in St. Louis about position.

By Stephanie Moletti
DE Assignments Editor

SIU trustees confirmed Saturday that a former state education official is the top candidate for the chancellor position.

Ted Sanders, former Illinois Superintendent of Schools, was one of the two candidates to meet with the board during special closed meetings in March 23 and 24 in Chicago, according to A.D. VanMeter Jr. of Springfield, chairman of the board.

Lawrence Dennis, chairman of the Chancellor Search Constituency Advisory Committee, said the 10-member committee will interview Sanders Friday in St. Louis.

Sanders also will meet with SIUC President John Grayson and SIUE President Nancy Belck Friday.

Dennis said the committee has not received information on Sanders, but he expects to before the Friday meeting.

James Ludwick, superintendent of Unity Point Community Consolidated School District 140, said Sanders was appointed to the position of state superintendent from out of state.

(Sanders) came in as a big name," he said. "But I think there was always a feeling that he didn't really know Illinois."

Ludwick said he remembers Sanders' performance, and nothing negative and nothing positive. "I just don't think it was a good fit for him," he said.

The advisory committee and the two presidents will submit written reports to the trustees after the interviewing.

VanMeter stated in a press release that the information was confirmed after Sanders was mentioned in a newspaper report.

The search has entered the final stages with a decision in the near

Buyout causes landlord to file suit against city

By Rob Neff
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Before officials can begin construction of the Mill Street underpass, they must first acquire the needed property. One Carbondale landlord is going to make them do it the hard way.

Carol Morrison, owner of six residential units on five lots of property on East Freeman Street, forced the city to file suit to acquire her property through eminent domain.

The complaint, filed March, asks the court to transfer the property to the city. The court will decide how much compensation Morrison is entitled to.

Morrison also filed suit against the City of Carbondale, and

Campaigning efforts made on foot

By Shawna Donovan
DE Governmental Affairs Editor

Sunday's nice weather made it an ideal day to campaign, and city government candidates took advantage of it while trying to win last minute support for Tuesday's election.

Write-in candidates Matt Parsons, mayor, and Lorenzo Henderson, city council, visited some student Carbondale precincts Sunday afternoon.

Parsons said the three student candidates had not started because they were afraid of students would forget about the election.

Carbondale candidates make final preparations for Tuesday's election. page 8

"We are going to canvass (walk around neighborhoods) on Sunday and Monday," Parsons said. "We were afraid that if we campaigned two weeks early, students would forget overnight."

But, while the student candidates have just started campaigning, other candidates started years ago.

This election is the second time mayoral candidate Mark Robinson has run for the office. The first time was in 1987. Robinson, a local businessman and chairman of the Liquor Advisory Board, said he has focused on talking with groups of people.

"I know when I am at home, I would not want somebody coming to my door and bothering me for support," Robinson said. "I'd rather go to groups of people and sit and talk with them."

Robinson said he was encouraged by a recent campaign experience.

"I was at PK's (a Carbondale bar) just to socialize and I began talking about my candidacy," he said. "More people began listening to me and pool games ended.

"I think it was the first time a pool game ended at PK's just to listen to a politician."

Incumbent mayor Neil Dillard said he has been walking through neighborhoods and writing personal postcards asking for support.

"My wife is helping me write postcards to personal contacts," Dillard said.

Dillard, who has been involved with city council since 1981, has been mayor since 1987.

Education focus of referendums on ballot

By Stephanie Moletti
DE Assignments Editor

Education is the highlight of three referendums appearing on the April 4 ballot for voters living in and around Carbondale.

The first concerns the proposed addition to Unity Point Community Consolidated School District 140.

If the referendum passes, $750,000 would be generated to build an addition to house six classrooms for junior high students, lockers, two bathrooms and a teacher-preparation area, according to James Ludwick, Unity Point superintendent.

The referendum proposes an increase in property taxes for those in the Unity Point district of 4.5 cents per $100 of assessed property value.

Voters in Carbondale precincts 17, 20 and 24 will have the opportunity to vote for the Unity Point referendum. Ludwick said the addition would allow the fourth, fifth and sixth grades to expand into the area currently used by junior high students.

About one-third of the 687 Unity Point students come from Evergreen

RIVAL OF YELTSIN DECLARES 1996 CANDIDACY—MOSCOW—Former Vice President Alexander V. Rutskoi, the decorated Afghan War veteran who led a deadly revolt against President Boris N. Yeltsin in 1993, on Sunday launched another attempt at unseating his rival by declaring he will be a candidate in next year's presidential election. At a convention of his nationalist Power political movement, supporters nominated the 47-year-old for the June 1996 balloting. Rutskoi, who spent five months at Lefortovo Prison in Moscow after Yeltsin sent tanks to crush the October 1993 armed uprising, used his moment in the political spotlight to accuse the incumbent of plotting to postpone elections with a referendum to extend the current presidential term for four more years.

BOMB-MAKERS SET OFF EXPLOSION, KILL EIGHT—JERUSALEM—Militants making bombs in an apartment in the Gaza Strip accidentally set off a blast Sunday that killed eight persons, including a 3-year-old child, according to Palestinian Police. Police said they carried from the rubble four unexploded bombs wrapped with nails and ready for use, and also said they found a cache of automatic weapons. The 4 p.m. explosion was so powerful it tipped the cement-block walls from the middle floor of the three-story apartment building. Thirty others were injured. Two or three of the dead were members of the violent wing of the Hamas Islamic fundamentalist group, which opposes the steps by the mainstream Palestinian Authority to make peace with Israel, according to police.

CLINTON EXPECTED TO VETO KEY LEGISLATIONS—WASHINGTON—House Speaker Newt Gingrich said Sunday he expects President Clinton to veto key pieces of legislation passed by the Republican-controlled Congress but that the measures then will be added to a crucial debt-ceiling act that allows the government to pay its bills. The Georgia Republican said he expects Clinton to try to veto the tax cut bill, a revised crime bill, and bills to abolish the Housing and Urban Development and Energy departments and merge the Education and Labor departments. Such a veto battle would be the biggest confrontation yet between the White House and the Republican Congress over the GOP "Contract With America."

UNIVERSITIES CONSIDER COMMON APPLICATION—In the wake of record numbers of applications to Harvard University after it adopted a standard form used by other schools, officials at several undergraduate institutions say they are considering joining the Common Application system. The growing popularity of the standard form is being hailed by many high-school teachers and students as a blessed timesaver during stressful senior-year fall semesters. But some guidance counselors warn that college-admissions offices may be flooded with applications from students only marginally interested in their schools. The Common Application, created in the early 1970s by a few New England schools, can be filled out once and photocopied to send to as many schools as will accept it.

NEW INVESTIGATION DISPROVES BERMUDA BLOB—A team of Maryland biologists has found that two huge masses of flesh washed ashore over the past 100 years, including the so-called Bermuda Blob of 1888, are not remnants of an enormous mythical octopus, as some scientists and fishermen had theorized. Tissue specimens saved from the 150-foot-long remains of an unidentified creature grounded on a Florida beach in 1896 are almost certainly part of an ordinary whale, the researchers conclude; a similar fleshy mass that washed ashore in Bermuda seven years ago was probably part of a very large fish or shark. Pierce and colleagues from the University of Maryland and Indiana University describe their findings in the April issue of Biological Bulletin which created a new category in its table of contents, Sea Monsters, to accommodate the work.

CONSULTANT MAY BE INDICTED FOR PRIVACY—Last week Philip Zimmermann got one of the highest honors in high technology: a Pioneer award from the Electronic Frontier Foundation. Within weeks, however, Zimmermann could receive another, less welcome, form of recognition: He may be indicted—for the same act that won him the award. What did Zimmermann, a 41-year-old Colorado computer consultant, do to attract this attention? He created a powerful software program for scrambling information and communications on personal computers, and he distributed it free so that all computer users could have privacy protection. That brought adulation from the computer community, which sees the program as a boon to personal privacy in the information age.

Africa Week: Enhancing 'bonds'

By Michael D. DeFord
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Africa Week reminds us of the relationship between the U.S. and Africa and the need to work together to achieve greater unity, said Dele Omosogbon, president of the African Student Association.

Omosogbon, a graduate student in economics from Nigeria said the objectives of the ASA are to enhance the ethnic, cultural, political and economic relationships that have existed between the U.S. and the people of Africa.

"This is a moment we remember once again that the people of African descent have a lot in common with American society," Omosogbon said. "We want to send the message to the community about Africa Week so they can rejoice with us."

This week's activities will start Monday evening at 6 p.m. with a keynote address by civil rights activist Stokely Carmichael in the Student Center's Ballroom D.

Omosogbon said Africa week's activities remind us of the need to come together and the need to respect one another.

"This week will remind us of the need to cooperate, to bond," he said. "It reminds us of the need for solidarity, goodness and the need to work towards the goal of achieving peace."

Omosogbon said Africa Week has been running consecutively for 21 years and is the most comprehensive program the ASA undertakes.

Omosogbon said the ASA's membership is very diverse and represents 37 African countries and 4 Caribbean nations.

James Quisenberry, director of International Programs and Services, said SIUC is well recognized among when it comes to African students.

"Typically SIUC remains a sponsorship for African students and a leader in accepting African students," Quisenberry said.

Quisenberry said SIUC has an enrollment of more than 2,800 African students and ranks 10 in enrollment among U.S. schools.

Quisenberry said the ASA is a well recognized Registered Student Organization.

"The ASA is well established," he

John Jackson, Dean of College of Liberal Arts, said Africa is an important element in the world.

"Africa is an important player on the world's stage," he said. "This week will symbolize the African students' as well as the continent's importance."

"Africa week is an effort to raise the awareness of African culture and the countries' relationship with the U.S.," Jackson said.

Known sex offenders to notify police of presence

By Dustin Coleman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The new legislation which requires sex offenders to register with local law enforcement agencies has local women's groups praising this major step towards decreasing sexual assaults.

The bill, signed March 21, will be helpful because rehabilitation does not always work and sex offenders many times repeat the crime, Laura Martin, the Women's Center Rape Action Committee coordinator said.

"It is a good idea to be aware of who has committed sex offenses, especially in cases of children," she said.

The bill requires all felony sex offenders to register in person with law enforcement officials annually for 10 years following their release from prison and requires out-of-state sex offenders to provide DNA samples to police when they move to Illinois, and will go into effect Jan. 1, 1996.

Martin said the bill sends a clear message that the police want to keep an eye on these people, which may cause these felons to be reluctant to commit the crime again.

Tim Capps, public defender for Jackson County, said this bill is a good measure, but information on the sex offenders needs to be carefully handled because there is the question of privacy.

"I think it will be helpful to law enforcement, because it creates a pool of people who have and who are able to commit these crimes compared to just the general public," he said. "But I don't think it should be available for public knowledge because there is a concern of privacy."

Martin said this is not an invasion of privacy because it is only fair that these offenders notify law enforcement agencies of their presence.

"It is important that they are reminded of their crime where ever they go," she said. "What they have done to these victims is permanent, and the victims are reminded of it everyday, so it is only fair that the criminals do not forget."

Leslie Straigier, the Women's Services Campus Safety representative, said even though much more needs to be done about sexual assaults, the bill may be a sign of what is to come.

Expanding its art collection

Student Center buys six works in annual purchase

By Kristi Dehority
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The young artist is always eager to sell a piece of artwork and the Student Center satisfies that goal by purchasing works at the annual purchase awards competition.

The Student Center Purchase Awards reception was Friday night and the winners were announced at the Art Alley. There were 102 works of art submitted for judging. There were 24 honorable mentions with six new works being purchased by the Student Center.

John Corker, Director of the Student Center, made a short speech and was quick to point out the importance of student artworks being displayed in the center.

"When I got in here in 1976, there wasn't a single picture on any wall," Corker said. "The only piece was a metal sculpture. We had a very sterile facility."

"When we started (purchasing) we did not want to be a museum. We wanted works that were representative of student's interest and feelings."

Corker said the Student Center has purchased 90 different pieces since 1976 and has spent approximately $13,050.

This year $1,250 was spent on the different works.

Ted Smith, the chairman for SPC Fine Arts, said the artists ask for a price and a committee of judges decides on the winning artwork based on that price.

Caitlin Hyde sold her work titled "Small Demons" for $175.

The art work was a water color painting medium called gouache.

Hyde said her artwork focuses on mythology and culture.

"All of my work is examining the importance of mythology through history and how it influences and reflects our culture," Hyde said.

Ming Ru Tsai, focused on the photography medium with his "Untitled" art work. Tsai applied different transparent colors to the film before exposure during the darkroom process. The photograph has deep reds, purple and teal colors overlaying a stone figure.

Jim Roche won a purchase award for his oil pastel "Rural Cobden."

The process he used was placing a layer of paint on the canvas and then spray-painting a clear layer over the first layer. He repeats the process with different colors and layers until he gets the desired look.

Roche is a senior in art and design and said he has entered many competitions including the Rickett-Ziebold and won an honorable mention in the undergrad show. Roche said this is the first time he has sold a piece of artwork and he received $275.

"It's the first time I've won. I've been ready," Roche said.

Other winners were Bryan Addington — "Untitled Photograph," Yukinobu Mogaki — "Chat," and Justin Diggle — "Untitled Etching."

Diggle said he has entered many art shows in England but felt it was great that the Student Center contributes to the arts.

"It's great the fact that they (Student Center) buy (students) work, supporting various departments," Diggle said. "It's nice that my work will be viewed in the Student Center."

The works will be shown in the Art Alley for the next two weeks and will be permanently displayed in the Student Center following the removal from Art Alley.

DE backs Robinson in mayoral election

OF THE FOUR CANDIDATES FOR CARBONDALE mayor, Mark Robinson seems the most qualified, energetic and well-informed, and the Daily Egyptian urges readers to support him tomorrow at the polls.

A former SIUC student, local businessman, eight-year Liquor Advisory Board member and 15-year Carbondale resident, Robinson has a strong understanding of many aspects of the community. This awareness of his fellow citizens gives Robinson an edge over the other candidates as he seeks a position that affects all Carbondale residents.

Robinson's views on student-related issues are well thought out. For example, he supports raising the bar-entry age, in one-year increments, to 21. This would give liquor-related business owners a chance to prepare and make plans for the change in their clientele.

Robinson also wants to make the office more user-friendly, helping citizens directly where he can or guiding them through proper channels when problems, such as disputes between landlords and tenants, fall outside his jurisdiction.

UNLIKE INCUMBENT NEIL DILLARD, ROBINSON presents solid ideas about specific issues and maintains direct ties to many factions within the community. With his credentials and enthusiasm, Robinson appears well-equipped to make decisions that will benefit Carbondale now and in years to come.

Stalls best candidate in city council race

THERE ARE TWO OPENINGS FOR CARBONDALE City Council members in Tuesday's election. Of the six candidates, the Daily Egyptian urges the election of Robert Stalls, a longtime Carbondale resident who has worked for the city in various capacities for years and Lorenzo Henderson, a full-time SIUC student.

Stalls was involved in the "Model Cities" program of the 1960s, a federal plan aimed at implementing experimental policies and programs in various cities throughout the country to see what could be done to improve the quality of life in Carbondale and other similar cities.

Stalls, much like other candidates, is in favor of the proposed mass-transit service, but he sees the system as a way of helping financially poorer residents as opposed to just benefiting students and other citizens. He says such a system would foster industrial development by offering workers a ride to their jobs.

Although representation and improvements in the northeast area of town are key issues in Stalls' platform, he understands how changes in one neighborhood affect the city as a whole and is prepared to explore measures that benefit all citizens.

WHILE HIS EXPERIENCE IS VERY LIMITED, SIUC student Lorenzo Henderson, a write-in candidate, seems the best choice among the remaining candidates to fill the second vacant seat and balance out the council. As a one-time member of the Undergraduate Student Government, Henderson proved that he is not afraid to stand up for what he believes in. With a little time and effort, Henderson could be a valuable asset to the council.

These endorsements represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian editorial board, based on information gathered in voluntary interviews with the candidates.

Letters to the Editor

Students lack real representation

Election chance to bring interests into city spotlight

As local city elections draw near I would like to remind all students that have registered to vote that this is an opportunity for SIUC students to gain some political power. I would also like to praise the students that took time to register many SIUC students.

For all students that are registered to vote, I urge you all to turn out in grand numbers to support the student candidates for city elections.

Remember, fellow students, that the local city council makes decisions that directly affect what we as students can and cannot do.

The city council can pass ordinances that can regulate when and where one can drink alcohol, have mass transit and regulate landlords.

The council also can pass laws that dictate what you can do and who you can live with while being a student (house parties, roommates, etc.)

The fact that the city leaders attempted to keep our fellow students from being on the ballot is evidence that they do not want our concerns addressed.

I for one enjoy SIUC and Carbondale. However, I am tired of it being open season on students. Those in power presently take advantage of students economically.

As long as they are in power and control local legislation, we as students will be subject to exploitation.

If we as students do not take this opportunity to take advantage of gaining a say so in local politics, we will be subjected to the same exploitation by landlords, towing companies and other entities that prey on and exploit students.

Even if student voters are not successful at electing a student candidate, a strong turnout will demonstrate to those in power that students are what make SIUC and are what keeps Carbondale from being just another small Southern Illinois village that one would miss if they blinked when passing through.

I urge all students to turn out and vote on April 4. Remember your vote does count and those people that you vote for will directly affect your life as a student and resident of the City of Carbondale.

The time and opportunity is now to stop taking the attitude of "what can I do?" and do something about it by showing up and voting.

USG referendum promotes members' political agendas with constituents' fees

To my disbelief, during the meeting on Wednesday, the Undergraduate Student Government became a political action committee.

Yes, the political agenda of the "non-political" student government reared its head. In a nearly unanimous vote, the "leaning to the left" Undergraduate Student Government passed a resolution placing a referendum on the April ballot to increase student fees in support of a group not affiliated with SIUC in any way.

There should be no vote. Regardless of the political agenda being supported, student fees should not be allocated to any group not affiliated with the University. If students become aware of the United States Student Association, let them donate their own money and time to promote the cause(s) of the group. Better yet, form an RSO, and go through the proper channels, but don't label

As a group, the Undergraduate Student Government should not support any political party or agenda.

Jason Wittman
 Senior, political science

the political causes of a few of the political causes of the entire undergraduate student body. It is improper for the whole of the undergraduate student body to be forced into paying for a particular political agenda (no matter what the agenda).

As a group, the Undergraduate Student Government should not support any political party or agenda. The members were elected to look out for the best interest of the students. If this is the case, the members are suggesting that a mandatory collection for the Democratic National Committee is in the best interest of the student body. Each elected senator needs to rethink his or her decision, choose the correct action, and do not place the referendum on the April ballot. It is neither what you are elected to do, nor is it in the best interest of the undergraduate student body. We are a group of intelligent adults; allow us to think for ourselves and support your personal political agendas with your own time and checkbook.

Carbondale City Manager Jeff Doherty last fall to recover damages caused when they moved her tenants out last summer.

The four-count lawsuit seeks more than $30,000 from the city for financial damages and more than $60,000 from Doherty for financial and punitive damages.

"They bought all the renters out, but they haven't bought me out," she said. "They came to me with an offer of $92,500 for all five lots. That is unacceptable."

The underpass project would connect Mill Street to Freeman Street with an underpass that would route traffic under the railroad tracks, allowing drivers and pedestrians to cross the tracks when a train is crossing.

Officials hope to begin construction on the $6.1 million project by summer of 1996.

In her suit, Morrison alleges the city interfered with the business relationship between her and her tenants by telling them the property was in imminent danger of being condemned under eminent domain.

Morrison also alleges that through agents, Doherty and the city coerced and induced her tenants to violate and/or not renew their contracts with her by offering them large sums of money.

However, Doherty said these actions were part of a federally-mandated procedure for acquiring properties under eminent domain.

He said under normal circumstances the process would not have begun until much later, but she requested to be bought out early.

The official land acquisition process for the properties is expected to begin in the fall.

Gene Turk, attorney for Morrison, said if the city is following federal regulations in acquiring Morrison's property, they have not shown those regulations to him.

"I've asked them repeatedly to show me the regulations that allow them to do this," he said. "I've read all through the act, and I don't see how they can buy out a tenant before they acquire the property."

James Blackwood, a land acquisition engineer for the Illinois Department of Transportation who has been advising city officials on the land acquisition process, said land acquisition for all federal projects is governed by the Uniform Relocation Assistance and Real Property Acquisition Act of 1970.

He said the city has been complying with the act.

Blackwood said according to the act, the city must inform the tenants within eight days of making an offer to the property owner. They also must give the tenants at least 90 days to move off the property, and the usual practice is to give tenants longer than that to find a new place to live, he said.

"Of course, the sooner they move, the sooner they receive their benefits," he said. Blackwood said tenants were compensated monetarily for their inconvenience, but he would not disclose how much they were paid because it was a private matter.

Sean McElroy, a junior in cinema and photography from Springfield, said he was planning to move into one of the units, until he found out it was going to be condemned.

"Carol Morrison did not tell us about it," he said.

"A tenant next door who we were friends with called me and told me the property was going to be condemned," McElroy said after attempts to contact Morrison failed, he made a special trip to Carbondale two weeks before the semester began to find another place to live.

"We panicked," he said. "She still has $300 we put down as a deposit."

McElroy said he contacted the Illinois Department of Transportation about receiving compensation for the inconvenience, but they told him he was not eligible because he did not actually live in the house.

Morrison has not officially answered the city's lawsuit and must do so before any motions or rulings can be made on the case.

Morrison's complaint has been amended twice at the request of the defendants, and neither Doherty nor the City of Carbondale has answered the newest complaint yet.

Once the complaint is answered, additional motions are likely to be filed and ruled on before the case is argued before the court.

future, VanMeter said.

"But the final and most important steps remain to be taken," he said.

"It would be presumptuous for anyone to say at this stage that a decision has been made."

Sanders left the Illinois State Board of Education in May 1989 to serve as deputy secretary of education at the U.S. Department of Education. He served as acting U.S. secretary of education from November 1990 to March 1991. He then oversaw a system serving 1.8 million students as superintendent of public instruction in Ohio.

Sanders has a bachelor's in mathematics from Wayland Baptist University in Plainview, Texas; a master's in teaching mathematics from Washington State University; and a doctorate in educational administration and higher education from the University of Nevada.

The chancellor search began last semester when Chancellor James Brown announced his retirement.

Chancellor is a University representative in the public forum including state and national legislators and political groups. The chancellor executes and enforces decisions, orders, rules and regulations of the board.

The chancellor also recommends board policy amendments, changes or additions in response to changes and needs of the university.

"I don't believe sex offenders can be rehabilitated," he said. "It is important we know who they are, but that doesn't stop them from committing the crime."

partisan, being endorsed by a state official does not hurt candidates.

Gov. Jim Edgar, at the annual Jackson County Lincoln Day Dinner, urged Republican voters to elect city candidates Michael Neill, Barbara Parrish and incumbent mayor Neil Dillard.

However, Neill, who is a park district commissioner, is not relying on just Edgar's endorsement.

"I've been going door-to-door and making personal contacts," Neill said. In the Feb. 28 primary, Neill received the most votes.

In major traffic areas around the city, political signs are budding all over the ground. But for some candidates, not having the budget to get a lot of signs out meant hitting the pavement.

Andrew Ensor, a write-in student candidate for mayor, said he had radio and television ads which explained how to write him in.

Ensor said he has campaigned around campus.

Mayoral candidates stake out positions

By Aaron Butler
Daily Egyptian Reporter

If the 1995 Carbondale mayoral race has focused on any specific central issue, it has been representation, with student candidates offering an option for students who feel current city government does not meet their needs.

Two candidates, Neil Dillard and Mark Robinson, will have their names on the April 4 ballot, but SIUC students Matt Parsons and Andrew Ensor hope to win the election as write-in candidates.

Neil Dillard, mayor for eight years, said he and the city government have done a great deal during his terms in office to increase citizen participation.

"We now televise city council meetings on channel 16, allowing everyone to see what happens," he said. "We represent all the citizens of this very diverse community, and let student government participate in the council meetings."

Mark Robinson, business owner and SIUC grad, said the current council does not adequately represent the citizens of Carbondale.

"Our city council winds up being judges more than mediators," he said. "They don't want to sit down and talk; just boss."

Robinson said personal contact will enable him to stay in touch with everyday individuals.

"Imagine if the mayor were to ride his bicycle around town and just talk to people on the street and ask them what they think is important, what bothers them," he said. "It would give citizens confidence that they were being listened to."

Write-in candidate Andrew

Ensor, an SIUC student whose controversial Halloween proposal to USG led to his resignation, said he can represent student interests better than the current city government.

"I have witnessed a division created in the legislative process," he said. "Students are not included in the policy-making process."

"I am going to support better relations between students and the city," he said. "They (the city government) are way out of whack with 23,000 individuals."

Write-in candidate Matt Parsons, who will graduate from SIUC in May, said it is time for students to "stand up and be counted." He advocates an aldermanic council structure, which would give areas with a large student population a better chance of putting their own representatives on the council.

Parsons, currently USG chief of staff, has been actively involved in voter-registration drives on and off campus.

Neil Dillard

A 30-year resident of the city, mayoral candidate Dillard has held that office since 1987. He began as a council member in 1981. An SIUC alumnus, he was director for regional research and services. He belongs to several civic organizations. Dillard has taken no public position on raising the bar entry age. He says economic development is his top priority.

Mark Robinson

Mayoral candidate Robinson is a 14-year resident of the city and a local businessman. He has chaired the Carbondale Liquor Advisory Board, and supports raising the bar entry age by ages to 21. He would peak for downtown renovation, and would work to attract new businesses. His top priority is better representation for all citizens.

Andrew Ensor

A write-in candidate for mayor, Ensor has been a Carbondale resident since 1991 and is a certified paralegal. He is a full-time student and former USG commissioner. Ensor does not support raising the bar entry age to 21. His reason for seeking the mayoralty is to bring more student representation to city government.

Matt Parsons

A write-in candidate for mayor, Parsons is a full-time SIUC student and serves as USG chief of staff. He is a four-year Carbondale resident who would support a raise in the bar entry age only if entertainment alternatives were available. He is a booster of the proposed mass-transit bus system, and would work toward a four-lane highway link with St. Louis.

Michael G. Neill

A lifelong city resident, council candidate Neill is a law graduate in private business as an investment counselor. He is a park district commissioner, and sees the recruitment of new business and industry to the community as a top priority. He would like to see the downtown area renovated. Neill supports the raising of the bar entry age to 21.

Barbara A. Parrish

Council candidate Parrish operates an employment agency and is a 33-year city resident. She is on the city's planning commission; is a member of Carbondale Uptown and various other community organizations. She does not support the raising of the bar entry age, but would like to see the city's "party house" toned down in order to attract new business.

Richard E. Morris

Council candidate Morris has been a council member since 1988. A lifelong resident of the city, he is an administrator with the Illinois Department of Employment Security. He would work for economic development through a broader tax base and the attraction of new industry. He supports downtown renovation. He does not support raising the bar entry age.

Robert "Bob" Stalls

A 49-year resident of the city, council candidate Stalls is a retired WWII veteran. He has been active as a volunteer in a number of community and civic organizations, including Bread of Life. Lowering the city's unemployment rate and promoting small businesses are goals Stalls would work toward on the council. He does not support raising the bar entry age.

Lorenzo Henderson

A write-in candidate for council, Henderson is a full-time SIUC student and a former USG vice president and commissioner. A resident of the city for four years, he supports both the mass-transit bus system and the building of a four-lane highway link with St. Louis area. He supports raising the bar entry age to 21 only if alternative activities are available for students.

Anna Lundsteen

Candidate for council, Lundsteen is a full-time SIUC student and a USG commissioner. A resident of the city for four years, she supports both the mass-transit bus system and the building of a four-lane highway link with the St. Louis area to spur business growth. She does not support raising the bar entry age to 21.

Council hopefuls split on raising bar entry age to 21

By Aaron Butler
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Every weekend thousands of students flock to the Strip to socialize, play pool, dance or drink, but those numbers could change drastically if the bar entry age is raised from 19 to 21.

Raising the entry age is a possible solution to the underage drinking problem in Carbondale, and some believe with students under 21 not in the bars the annual Halloween party may draw fewer people to the Strip.

The four candidates on the ballot and the two write-in candidates who are students all agree that underage drinking and the Halloween party are problems the city must address, but disagree on whether or not raising the bar entry age will solve these problems.

City council candidate Michael Neill said he would advocate raising the entry age to 21 as a necessary step to ending the city's party image.

"Kids are coming from all over. Southern Illinois to get drunk in the bars, and then driving home," he said. "The bad reputation is hurting our town."

Neill is the only candidate who strongly advocates raising the entry age to 21, a policy recommended by the Halloween task force which will be considered April 18 by the current council.

Candidates Barbara Parrish and Robert Stalls believe raising the entry age will only cause underage drinkers to turn to keg parties and buying alcohol from liquor stores, then drinking unsupervised.

"There are other things to think of (in addition to bar drinking)," Parrish said. "We need to consider stronger keg laws and stricter enforcement of the drinking age first."

Stalls also said raising the entry age to 21 would only drive underage drinkers to unsupervised private parties.

Richard Morris, a councilman since 1988, said there are more important things to worry about than whether 19-year-olds may enter local bars.

"(An entry age of) 21 isn't the answer, I have been warned by other communities that have raised their entry age," he said. "We need to set priorities — I am far more concerned about eight-to-12-year-olds selling crack than 19-year-olds getting into bars."

Anna Lundsteen and Lorenzo Henderson, two student write-in candidates running as a slate with mayoral candidate Matt Parsons, are opposed to raising the entry age unless entertainment alternatives are provided because they say a large number of students would be left without anywhere to go.

"Raising the entry age is a mistake," said Lundsteen. "Taking away the student's social ring will cause havoc — if the entry age is raised, I would like alternative entertainment programs."

If you choose to cast a write-in ...

By Amanda Estabrook
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Voting for a write-in candidate requires steps and brings with it legalities that must be followed, according to Jackson County Clerk Irene Carlton.

Carlton said if directions are not followed correctly the vote could be void.

In order to write in a candidate voters must:

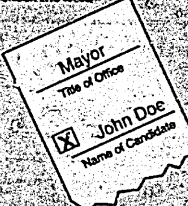

- Write the title of the elective office in a manner that will differentiate that office from other offices being voted upon;
- Write the name of the candidate below the office;
- Mark a cross inside the square.

Carlton said the top half of the ballot will be for write-ins.

Carlton said there will be a sign in every booth to inform voters how to correctly cast a write-in ballot. She also said there will be a list of write-in candidates available to voters at every polling place.

Voters:

Voters must write in the candidate's office, name, and check the box.

SOURCE: Irene Carlton, Jackson County Clerk. By Amanda Estabrook, Daily Egyptian

"These are the only write-ins that will be counted," she said.

"Only those that have filed a declaration of intent to be a write-in candidate will be on that list."

Four write-in candidates — who happen to be SIUC students — are campaigning for city government.

Matt Parsons and Andrew Ensor are running for mayor. Lorenzo Henderson and Anna Helene Lundsteen are council candidates.

Carlton said she is concerned those who elect to support a write-in candidate will follow the correct procedure.

"For example, if a hole is punched for a mayoral candidate and a write-in appears for that office, there is an over vote and no vote will be recorded for that office," she said.

Carlton said although there would not be a vote tallied for that particular office, all other

voters would be counted.

Voters must write the office above the name of the candidate and put an "X" or "+" in the box at the left. The mark in the box is important, she said, because these are the only symbols that will be counted as valid.

The spelling of the name does not have to be exact, according to directions, as long as the intention of the voter can be determined by some relation between the appearance or sound of the name written and that of the candidate.

Robert Ludwig, a USG senator, said Carlton has made it easier because voters will not have to draw a box next to the area on the ballot for write-in choices.

Ludwig said there are about 5,000 students registered to vote. Total turnout in past elections has hovered around 1,200.

"If the students come out hard Tuesday, there is no reason why the student candidates couldn't win," he said, but added student turnout is traditionally low. Only five students voted in Carbondale District 23 (Grinnell Hall) during the Feb. 28 primary.

"Student apathy is nauseating," he said. "Students don't understand these people govern us. They have a chance to get one of their own in and they are not doing it."

Henderson said the campaign fliers he, Parsons and Lundsteen have been circulating state they are write-in candidates and show the correct way to vote for them.

Polls for the city election will open at 6 a.m. and remain open until 7 p.m. There are 29 polling places located throughout the city.

Terrace and Southern Hills.

Residents in the apartments do not pay local property taxes. However, the district receives general state aid money for each of the students. These state aid dollars raise approximately $579,345 per year, more than is raised through property taxes.

"We actually receive more in student aid, it's just the way the system works," Ludwig said.

He said the school receives about $3,000 for each student.

If approved, the property tax would come into effect in 1996.

Ludwig said it will take two months to finalize the building plans. The plans would then have to be approved by the Illinois Board of Education.

This process should take about 5 to 6 months and construction should begin by the end of the year, he said.

The other two referendums will be with John A. Logan College.

The first referendum asks voters to approve $4 million in bonds for the local share of a $16 million building project.

Herb Russell, director for college relations, said if passed, property owners would pay an additional 8 cents per $100 of assessed property value.

The project includes the construction of a building to house classrooms and laboratories, and provide additional parking and more faculty space.

Russell said the state will pay $12 million for the project if the college raises the $4 million through taxes.

The second John A. Logan referendum asks voters for an increase of 10 cents per $100 of assessed property value for the college's educational fund.

"The educational fund comes from taxes," Russell said. "The fund pays for our faculty and building and maintenance."

Portions of Carbondale precincts 1 through 19 and 21 through 29 will be able to vote on the two John A. Logan referendums.

Russell said the college has not asked the voters for an increase since its opening in 1968.

The increase would take effect in 1996.

Game 3

The Redbirds jumped all over Dawgs scoring five runs in the first three innings, while Illinois State hurrier Brian Okrasinski pitched a three-hit shutout as the Salukis fell for the third time in the series.

Game 2

Illinois State again got out early lead after SIUC committed two first inning errors leading to three Redbird runs.

Saluki pitcher Mike Blang controlled the game from there, but the Dawgs could only muster two runs and fell 3-2.

In the seventh inning after SIUC's Jason Smith was hit by a pitch, Bill True was called out for stepping on the plate trying to bunt Smith over to second base.

Assistant coach Ken Henderson was ejected for arguing the call and the Redbirds were able to close out of games

Game 1

The Salukis out hit Illinois St. 12-9, but the Redbirds won where it really counted, on the scoreboard 9-3.

The big inning was a six run out burst in the fifth. The fame Illinois State's Andy Schofield and Greg Mote hit home runs to bust the game open.

SIUC missed several chances to have big innings

Chad Isaacson was one the few bright spots for Southern connecting on his second home run of the year in the sixth inning.

a team to beat. They won the indoor Big 10 conference and I expect they will win their outdoor conference as well. "After this invitational, I think they are going to go home and lick their wounds a little," DeNoon said.

Other teams at the invitational included Drake University, Eastern Illinois, Northeast Missouri, Washington University, and Bradley University.

Stephany Saracco, junior for the squad, stepped up to capture the new record for the women's hammer competition with a throw of 145'0", shattering the old record held by Northeast Missouri University by over 34 feet.

Saracco also garnered a second place finish in the discus while recording a personal best.

"We have a very young team, as Stephany is one of the few juniors on the squad," DeNoon said. "As our kids mature, they should be performing better and better."

With senior LaTonya Morrison anchoring the relay, the Saluki squad took first in the 4x400 event.

Morrison also continued her success in the 400 hurdles with a victory.

Other highlights of the invitational include junior Joy Williamson, who grabbed first in the long jump event and placed second in the triple jump competition.

Sophomore Vena Cladenin had her first collegiate victory in the javelin event, placing her about eleven feet above the nearest competitor, Saluki Lorraine Parkinson.

Cape Girardeau, Mo., will be the site of the next competition for the Salukis, as the SEMOTION Relays are held April 7 and 8.

We're delighted to have the players back. I think there's an unwritten commitment by both sides that the 1995 season will be played uninterrupted."

The owners gave no immediate indication that they would seek a no-strike pledge from the players for this season. Players will be permitted to begin reporting to spring training on Wednesday, the day after a U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New York will hear arguments on the owners' request for a stay of the injunction.

So, 234 days after the players' walked out, the strike ended without a new labor agreement in place. The owners and players are relatively close; the major—and perhaps the only—issue separating them is formulating a system for taxing teams' player payrolls. That is a formidable stumbling block.

In the meantime, the players will be on the field. The owners suffered a stinging legal defeat Friday when U.S. District Court Judge Sonia Sotomayor sided with the National Labor Relations Board's request for an injunction on behalf of the union. The injunction restored the salary arbitration system, anti-collusion protections for free agent players and competitive bidding for free agents.

Owners delay scheduled pro baseball game

Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK—Baseball's replacement season was put on hold Saturday. The dreams seemed to be darkening for those would-be major leaguers.

The clubs were instructed by management's Player Relations Committee to release temporary players by midnight Saturday, and Sunday night's scheduled season opener between the New York Mets and Florida Marlins was postponed.

In addition, Sunday's final seven exhibition games were canceled. Owners will vote on a lockout at Sunday's meeting in Chicago, but the possibility of approval seems slim.

Major league players could begin reporting to spring training camps on Monday. Management and the players' union began discussions Saturday on back-to-work procedures. The season would tentatively open on April 26.

Referring to the Chicago meeting, acting Commissioner Bud Selig said: "Until we have a chance to review all of our options, everyone felt we should cancel (today's) games."

The PRC, meanwhile, ordered clubs to release their temporary players — some will be re-signed to minor league contracts — in an effort to cut costs.

Any replacement player on an opening day roster, which were due by 6 p.m. Sunday, would have qualified for a $25,000 bonus and severance package.

"They've told us the season was over," said Pete Kauld, a replacement catcher with the Cleveland Indians.

"They're not going to have replacement games. Everybody's got their travel orders."

A National League general manager said that isn't quite the case, insisting that the replacement season hasn't been totally abandoned.

"Even though the contracts haven't been executed, teams will still have the ability to reassemble their replacement teams next week, depending on what the owners decide tomorrow," he said.

Saluki Baseball

Redbirds soar, sweep Dawgs

By Doug Dursler
Daily Egyptian Reporter

This weekend the SIUC baseball team resembled the "Bad News Bears" instead of a college team when the Salukis threw away numerous opportunities, as Illinois State completed a four-game sweep of SIUC, 13-8, Sunday.

The Dawgs committed four errors, threw three wild pitches and stranded 12 men on base in suffering their fifth-straight victory.

Saluki baseball coach Dan Callahan said he thought this weekend was a horrible display by his club.

"This was a pathetic weekend of baseball," he said. "If we were offering refunds everybody should get one."

The game was tied at eight in the top of the eighth inning with Redbird Jim Pyfer on third base and one out, when Saluki closer Brad Blumenstock's first pitch to Paul Popovich went all the way to

"I was concerned about when we were going to pitch-out because of a possible suicide squeeze, so a wild pitch was the last thing on my mind."

The Redbirds hit four home runs in the game including back-to-back shots off Saluki starter Jason Kline in the second inning. However, Callahan said Kline was making good pitches, but the Illinois State hitters were just able to connect and when that happens there is nothing anybody can do.

Callahan said there is not a lot he can do to offset the mental mistakes of the squad.

"We have so little depth," he said. "If we had more depth than we have now, there would be some guys that their asses would be on the pine so fast that their heads would be spinning."

The Salukis jumped out to an early 2-1 lead in the first, highlighted by Braden Gibbs' fourth home run.

Unfortunately for the Dawgs, Illinois State scored two runs in the second and third innings and put up a three-spot in the fifth.

SIUC fought back getting a single tally in the fifth and two runs in the sixth and seventh innings, but the Redbirds went ahead on Blumenstock's wild pitch in the eighth and exploded for four runs in the ninth to put the game away.

Redbird hurler Tony Formoso picked up his second win and Bill Brabec came in to secure his fifth save. Mike McConnell picked up his third loss for the Salukis.

The loss drops the Salukis below .500 at 12-13 and 3-5 in the Missouri Valley Conference.

Nice weather, tradition bring fans out to Abe Martin Field

By Kellie Huttes
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The change from Saturday showers to Sunday sunshine brought Saluki baseball fans out to the ballpark.

Although their cheers were unsuccessful in helping the Dawgs win, 385 fans filled the bleachers and the hill.

Jack Trella of Joliet, said he has been following Saluki baseball for more than 20 years and drives down to attend at least three games each season.

Slouched back in a front-row bleacher seat, Trella had his SIUC cap on and was cheering for the Dawgs in their match against the Redbirds of Illinois State.

"This is terrible," he said. "I've never seen SIUC lose four games in a row — never."

But the loss will not keep Trella from supporting the team.

"I love baseball very much," he said. "It's one of the best sports invented by mankind."

His love for the game dates back to his days as a high school and armed forces player.

"I was offered a major league try-out, but was injured in the service and didn't get the chance to do it," he said.

Trella said he watches certain Saluki baseball players, as well as their games.

"I followed Sean Bergman for three years when he was at SIUC and watched him go on to play for the Detroit Tigers," he said.

Atop the famous hill above Abe Martin field, Walter and Beulah Gibbs of Carbondale were following their grandson Braden, Saluki second baseman, Sunday afternoon.

"We come to about every game," he said. "We got to see him hit a home run today and that delights us."

"Not much keeps us away," she said.

Jason Looker, a junior in education from Beardstown, said Sunday was his second day in a row to watch the Dawgs.

Looker said he has been going to Saluki games since his freshman year to cheer and to enjoy the spring sun.

"I'm a good weather fan and if the weather's like this, we'll definitely be coming out," he said. "If the days were like this I'd be out here every day."

Kristie Thompson of Harrisburg brought her two children and their two cousins to watch the game and enjoy the weather Sunday.

"We just love baseball," she said. "We can only come to weekend games and the kids have a lot of room to play and run around out here."

Owners vote 'no' to lockout, 1995 season to begin April 26

By Mark Maske
Washington Post

CHICAGO—The longest, most destructive and possibly the nastiest work stoppage in professional sports history ended Sunday when major league baseball's 28 team owners accepted the players' unconditional offer to end their nearly eight-month strike.

The players will report to spring training camps in Florida and Arizona this week—the mandatory reporting day is Friday—and a shortened regular season, with 144 games per team rather than the usual 162, will begin April 26.

"It's good news," said union chief Donald Fehr from his home in Rye Brook, N.Y. "We should get things started as quickly as possible, but most importantly, we should continue to negotiate. I think we're making progress."

The owners, who met Sunday afternoon at an O'Hare Airport hotel, accepted the players' return-to-work offer because they had little choice. It had become clear even before the Major League Baseball Players Association offered on Friday to end its strike—after a federal judge in New York issued an injunction restoring terms of the sport's expired collective bargaining agreement—that there would not be 21 votes among the 28 owners to lock out the players.

"There was never any intention on the part of the owners to lock the players out," said Baltimore Orioles majority owner Peter Angelos, who indicated there was no formal vote, but that the owners unanimously were opposed to the lockout.

Women's track team captures Western invite

By Cynthia Sheets
Daily Egyptian Reporter

With a slightly different lineup, the SIUC women's track and field team sealed first place at the Western Illinois University Invitational held on Saturday.

The Saluki team racked up a total of 161 points, 22 points ahead of the nearest competitors University of Illinois, without the help of distance specialists Jennie Horner, Debbie Dachler and Beth Baysor.

Two other Saluki athletes, Sheila Hollins and Katrina Daniels, competed at the invitational, but not in their primary events.

SIUC women's track coach Don DeNoon said he was sure Illinois thought they were going to win the invitational with no problems.

"Most people look at U of I as
