•The Positive Youth Force broadcasts its program from noon to 1 p.m. Saturdays on WDBX 91.1FM.

It is shortly before noon, and the teenagers are on spring break. Many of their friends may be outside riding bikes or shooting baskets.

But these teens, known as the Positive Youth Force, are inside planning group projects during a weekly meeting.

Grove, a senior in social work from Chicago, coordinates the group as part of an internship with Jackson County Housing Authority.

Many people are unaware of this group of teenagers who are hard at work helping the community.

"The group is relatively new, but they are a group of kids who are excited about wanting to help within their own community," Grove said. "The Positive Youth Force is a group of teens

Fake ID users risk felony charge

UNDER 21: Legislation would make presenting false information for ID a class 4 felony charge.

JASON K. FREUND
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

People under 21 who enter bars or buy alcohol with fake Illinois identification cards could be found guilty of felonies under a bill designed to prevent credit card fraud.

A bill pending in the Illinois General Assembly would make it a class 4 felony to present false information to obtain an identification card from the Secretary of State's office.

The bill, which passed the Illinois Senate unanimously March 21, will be considered by a House committee when the House reconvenes April 7.

State Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, said the bill needs to be amended.

"I have trouble with it because if a young person uses it to try and get beer, it will stay with them forever," he said. "A felony will always carry with you."

Bost said the bill is intended to prevent people from using false identification to defraud others.

It penalizes people for using a false Illinois identification card to get an account, credit, credit card or debit card from any institution.

Class 4 felonies are punishable by one to three years in prison and with a fine of up to $10,000.

Currently, using false information to obtain a false state identification card is a class A misdemeanor, punishable by up to one year in prison and with a fine of up to $1,000. Buying an Illinois identification card not made by the Secretary of State's office already is a class 4 felony.

Jeff Vaughn, Carbondale Police Department spokesman, said a Carbondale city ordinance prohibits the use of any fake identification. He said violations result in fines from $5 to $500, or the offender could be charged under state laws.

Peter Hertzog, a freshman in health care administration from Rockford, said the law is justified.

However, Dylan Crawford, a junior in recreation from Chicago, opposes the legislation because he said each offense should be examined individually.

"I don't think they should have a mandatory felony charge," he said. "If a student is using it to have a good time, I don't think it's such a bad thing."

"A comet is a very large ball of solid material, such as water, methane and ammonia," Gulley said. "We think of it like a huge snowball."

When looking for the huge snowball in the sky, Gulley said it is most visible one hour before sunrise and one hour after sunset. To see Comet Hale-Bopp clearly, it is best to get away from any lights.

"It's a very bright object surrounded by something cloudy or milky looking, a little up above the horizon," Gulley said. "Just after sunset it should be the first object that they pick up in the northwest."

Gulley said Comet Hale-Bopp will not be seen from the earth again for about 4,200 years. He said

International SIUC alumni can help with recruitment

The international affairs problems on this campus finally are getting some sorely needed public scrutiny through the Daily Egyptian series on international student enrollment.

First to some errors in the stories: It was disheartening to see that longtime employees in Admissions and Records apparently do not know that international students pay not two but three times the amount of tuition paid by in-state students.

And it isn't only internationals; it is all out-of-state students. The internationals' problem is that they, by definition, can never become "residents," as can out-of-state U.S. citizens in a short time. Then, to hear from Admissions and Records that the serious changes in the immigration laws "won't be a big problem" (DE, March 26) is to learn where some serious recruiting and retention problems exist on campus.

This is validation for Mr. (Wan Kamal) Wan Napi's charges that certain offices have not treated the international students very well in the recent past (DE, March 27).

When the Budget Office first became alarmed about the potential declines in international student enrollment (1993-94), the IPS staff determined that the internationals comprised 9 percent of the student body, yet they brought in to University coffers nearly 10 percent of the total tuition revenue at that time. An International Student Recruitment and Retention Task Force was set up and produced a thorough report as to reasons and possible solutions. A number of its recommendations have yet to be implemented as set forth.

Numbers are down for several reasons, accurately reported in this DE series.

While it is true that cuts in U.S. overseas activities hamper our efforts to recruit internationals, many of those agencies have not received recent promotional materials for SIUC programs.

I recently, at my own expense, took a set of catalogs and other materials to the USIS library in Costa Rica.

They were happy to get them, and said they had not received any recent materials on SIUC.

While Wan Napi said that SIUC tuition is too high (what student doesn't?), he includes fees when he talks of tuition.

The SIUC tuition costs still are the best deal in Illinois, right in the middle when compared with all other state universities, but near the top in the quality of its offerings. Concerning fees, the student government has elected to pay for the fine services those fees provide, including the new bus service, which is especially important to international students.

Wan Napi is correct when he says that word of mouth is a major reason internationals choose SIUC, which leads to my main points. The annual reports for IPS in 1993 and 1994 predicted that continuous cutting of services to international students (budget cuts) would have a negative effect on future numbers.

Informal IPS surveys had indicated that the services provided for internationals here were a major reason for choosing SIUC.

Those cuts continued, however, with the major blow coming after the untimely death of Charles Klasek in 1994. All graduate assistant positions in IPS were cut during the transition.

The remaining staff have done yeoman's duty in the struggle to maintain the services.

Another component of the University outreach which produced significant numbers of international students and which was seriously weakened was International Development. Many of the internationals came to SIUC because of special projects SIUC conducted in such regions as Africa, Central and South America, and the richest source of international students, the Far East (not Europe).

It is true that the U.S. government funded many of these projects, and that situation has changed radically with the demise of the Communist system worldwide. The needs of developing countries did not change, however, and the development money still flows to those who know where and how to look for it.

There are numerous other benefits from a university's good international reputation and having many international students on campus.

The monetary component, while highly significant to the University and the community, is of lesser value than, say, the opportunity to educate many of the world's future leaders, or the values of cultural exchange. But a final question must be asked.

Why aren't the many fine and influential international alumni being more formally encouraged to recruit, now that they are back home? They represent an existing and willing corps of recruiters that is essentially untapped, not just by SIUC, but by many major universities.

Those who know the power of this resource have been willing to invest in it.

Funds tight for Career Services' off-campus efforts as year ends

INCREASING THE UNIVERSITY CAREER Service's travel budget and Internet networking activities would help promote both the campus and its students.

This year — at one of the busiest times of the year to find jobs and internships — University Career Services only has $125 left in its travel budget to help network students.

University Career Services officers actively network potential employers and recruit new students to SIUC.

DESPITE THE NEW FRONTIERS OF cyberspace, the office still relies on conventional ways of networking with potential employers and students to this campus. And they are expected to continue to travel and network with $125.

The shortage of funds in the original $8,500 budget illustrates the necessity to increase the travel budget and to place more emphasis on continuing exploration of Internet career services.

While Career Service officers travel around the state to promote SIUC and its quality students, the agency needs to join with other groups around campus to place students' resumes on a home page.

BY COMBINING MONETARY AND technical resources with other technology-enhanced areas around the campus — primarily Morris Library — students could have a job-seeking edge from now into the 21st century.

By giving future graduates individual Websites to place their resumes, they are at least two steps ahead in the job-seeking game. They can get their resumes and cover letters out on the World Wide Web. Not only would the advertising help the individual graduate, but it would be some free promotion of the University.

When SIUC students have internships at different jobs around the country, they are products of the University and the quality of education SIUC has to offer. SIUC students and alumni are some of the best recruitment tools for the University — something that surpasses the glossy brochures about the campus — and we promote it through networking on foot and at the keyboard.

WE NEED TO EXPAND OUR CYBERSPACE horizons and have more money to send those recruiters into the sunset on that networking highway, because not all students are Internet-literate nor are all employers.

Let's get on the Web and start promoting ourselves and the University.

Some of the major concerns for the future of higher education in this state are the ability to place graduates in jobs and continue improving technology.

By placing graduates' resumes in cyberspace and exploring more frontiers in networking via computer or on the road, more graduates will find jobs, and more potential students will find SIUC.

"Our Word" represents a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board.

Overheard

"We go through this every year. We plan to do a little more each year, but no matter how much we plan, we are still held captive by how much money SIUC receives."

Jim Scales, director of University Career Services, on the depletion of funds in his organization's travel budget this year.

Internal problems may be cause of drop in international students

Dear Editor:

Recently, three reports, which concern the falling of international student enrollment at SIUC, were published in the Daily Egyptian. According to their analyses, the main causes that led to this falling enrollment are external: the budget cut of the American Centers in foreign countries, the cut (or possible cut) of the scholarships that support foreign students to study in the United States and the forthcoming change of U.S. immigration law.

If these are responsible for the falling enrollment, all universities around the nation should suffer evenly. Unfortunately, the statistics from the Chronicle of Higher Education show a quite different trend. Some data are cited here to share with your readers.

The numbers of total enrollment of 15 institutions enrolling most foreign students showed a slight yearly increase; in contrast, SIUC experienced an unusual falling of 30 percent in three years. SIUC's enrollment of Japanese students also dropped 31 percent in the last three years, but the overall number of Japanese students in the United States increased 11 percent.

Of the top 15 institutions enrolling most foreign students, 11 steadily stayed in this group. The next four institutions shifted around, but kept within the top 20. SIUC moved out of this group.

All these data tell that there was no nationwide noticeable change in the number of foreign student enrollment during the last five years. Basically, the situation is unchanged, if the small increase is not worth being counted.

SIUC is an exception. There must be some hidden internal causes rather than the external ones.

Dissections cruel, unnecessary

Dear Editor:

My fourth daughter will be starting high school this fall. All of my children have been fortunate in attending a school in Chicago that has a challenging curriculum and a respect for its students. Unfortunately, not all students in Illinois will be so lucky.

As the executive director of the National Anti-Vissection Society, which operates the national Dissection Hotline (1-800-922-FROG), we hear from thousands of students every year who object to harming animals as part of their science education. Some of these conscientious young people have been threatened, ridiculed and unfairly punished. Students should have a choice. Illinois students should have a right to choose an alternative project that allows them to responsibly learn about the life sciences without violating their ethical beliefs.

Senate Bill 271 is now under consideration by the Illinois House of Representatives. This bill will allow students from kindergarten through undergraduate college to choose an alternative project with their teacher's approval instead of participating in or observing a dissection on an animal. It also would allow teachers to elect an alternative project for the entire class.

Why should S.B. 271 be supported?

- Studies have shown that students learn better using innovative alternatives to dissection;

- It costs the Board of Education nothing to implement this measure;

- Long-term implementation of alternatives to dissection will actually save school districts money by replacing animal specimens with renewable resources;

- Students should not be turned off to science and penalized because they object to harming animals;

- Animals suffer needlessly. The harvesting of frogs captured for dissection damages ecosystems, leaving insects (which damage crops and may carry diseases) without natural population controls. Undercover investigations revealed that cats were grabbed off the streets, thrown in burlap bags and drowned. Some cats were injected with formaldehyde while they were still alive.

Given the pervasive violence in today's world, shouldn't the young people of Illinois who pursue credible, innovative and humane methods of learning be encouraged, not punished?

The hunt is on

Annual Easter egg hunt for kids at Evergreen Terrace

STORY AND PHOTOS BY ANNETTE BARR

As a group of more than 25 anxious adults prance around the "starting gate" like thoroughbred horses on the big race day, a shout can be heard from one mother. "You might want to get out of the way if you don't want to get run over."

Before Jamie Corr, family housing community aide, can finish the countdown to commence the second annual adult egg hunt, she has to scramble out of the way to avoid the mad dash of squealing adults.

"I didn't even get to three," Corr said. "I told you this was crazy. No one ever believes me."

The adult egg hunt is part of the annual family housing egg hunt at Evergreen Terrace. The children's hunt started 9 a.m. Saturday and concluded with the adult hunt at noon.

"Two years ago a bunch of moms were talking outside saying, 'The kids are having so much fun. We wish we could have one (egg hunt).'" Corr said.

"We thought that this would be a good chance for them to have fun and give their kids a chance to cheer them on."

One mother, who spent last year on the sidelines, decided to take advantage of her first egg hunt.

"We thought it was just for the kids," Noraini Ahmad, a Carbondale resident from Malaysia, said.

"It's very enjoyable, and it's a great thing for family and kids as well."

Ahmad said the egg hunt also was a chance to see what her daughter and the other children had been working on all week after school. During the week, children involved in the after-school programs at Evergreen Terrace dyed 85 dozen hard-boiled eggs for the event.

There also were 110 dozen plastic eggs, as well as candy, toys and household items for the adults placed throughout the soggy lawn near the play equipment.

Eric Choi, 3, wandered around the lawn during the 9 a.m. hunt, grabbing eggs and gently placing them in his basket.

After the hunt, Choi said, "I want to share all the eggs with the bunny."

Eggbert, the bunny, was on hand to visit with the children and hand out candy. At times it was debatable who was more excited, Eggbert or the children grabbing at her fur and offering her fresh-picked dandelions.

"I'm a rookie bunny, and I'm lovin' it," Eggbert said with enthusiasm.

"The littles kids are my specialty. I've been getting kisses and hugs and love."

One of Eggbert's helpers for the day was Aaron Green, a freshman in biology from Murphysboro and Circle K president. Members of Circle K helped set up each egg hunt.

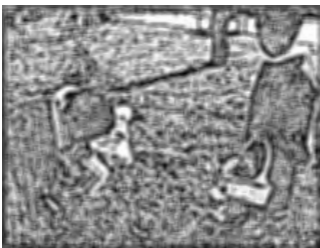

"That's basically our job — putting eggs out, cleaning up and keeping everyone lined up," Green said. "This was the nicest egg hunt I've been to."

After all the hard work of the volunteers, their reward could be seen in the children's faces.

"The smiling faces of all the children (made the day special)," Corr said.

primarily from Jackson County Housing, and it's about seeking positive solutions to the harsh realities that teens have to live with on a day-to-day basis."

Among their efforts to help the community, the group broadcasts a weekly show on WDBX 91.1 FM that uses skits, music and free-flowing discussions to confront realities such as teen pregnancy, homelessness and drugs within the community.

The group also coordinates drug- and alcohol-free gatherings for teenagers who do not have many options for entertainment on weekends.

Joella Pearson is the president of one of the Jackson County Housing Authority complexes in Murphysboro. She said the foundations of the Positive Youth Force came from a desire to give Murphysboro teens something to do that is positive and constructive.

"We had a program for younger children, but I was trying to find out more about programs for older youth to keep them off the streets," she said. "Lori came while doing her internship, and they started doing their radio show and getting into other things.

"The kids love it, and I always thought it would be a good thing. Every few weeks more kids contact us and want to join the group."

Supported and funded by the Jackson County Housing Authority, the foundation of the present group has been active in the Murphysboro community for one and a half years. The group has 13 members.

Pearson, co-coordinator of the group, said the group was named the Positive Youth Force once Groves and the teenagers started broadcasting their radio show in February, a month after Groves started her internship with Jackson County Housing Authority.

Groves's desire to learn how to help people directly, instead of pushing papers across a desk, resulted in the work that she does with the Positive Youth Force.

"Past interns have done office work or other similar work," she said. "I wanted to network directly with the community because you get a better understanding of what people are going through."

Carbondale teen Sana Miles, 17, heard of the group by word of mouth. She likes being part of a group that gives her the chance to be on the radio and help the community at the same time.

"I like being on the radio, and I like helping others not to make the same mistakes I see people make," she said. "The Positive Youth Force shows that all teenagers are not all negative. The group shows that there are positive teenagers out there who will work to better themselves."

The group constantly is working on raising funds for additional equipment for its radio show, as well as funding to support programs including volunteering and mentoring that the group wants to include in its activities.

Grove intends to continue working with the Positive Youth Force once her internship ends in May. Working with the teenagers reinforced her aspirations to work directly with the community.

"My internship ends in May, but it's not all about the internship," she said. "I really care about these kids. I want to keep the radio show going, and I want the kids to keep doing the positive things that they are doing.

"I really don't want to let these kids go, because when I see the excitement they have in them about the group, it makes me feel good and want to help them more."

the exact amount of time is debatable because the comet could be pulled off course during its journey.

John Myers, professor emeritus in economics, took advantage of the opportunity to view the comet from the telescope on the roof of the Neckers Building Friday evening.

Myers has been interested in comets and stars since he was a child.

"I read the classics and they always talk about them (stars), and the gods got their names from them," he said. "It's exciting that two amateurs discovered (Comet Hale-Bopp)."

Alisha, an amateur stargazer herself, learned a few things about Comet Hale-Bopp on the observation deck.

"When I first saw it I thought it was weird with a tail," she said.

No cult members remain alive

UNFOUNDED: Police convinced rumors that more cult members plan suicides are false.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

LOS ANGELES—Authorities in San Diego said Monday that despite "bizarre rumors" that surviving Heaven's Gate UFO cult members are planning additional mass suicides, they are convinced that the 39 people who were found dead in a Rancho Santa Fe mansion last week — and one former member who left the cult compound several weeks earlier — comprised the entire group.

"To this point, we have found nothing that would lend credence to these bizarre rumors," said Lt.

Jerry Lipscomb of the San Diego County Sheriff's Department.

Rumors of a second mass suicide have been circulating on the Internet. A recent posting on the World Wide Web warned that 13 people were waiting somewhere in southwest Arizona to be "picked up" by an alien spacecraft. Lipscomb said the FBI, which is assisting local investigators on computer-related lines of inquiry, did a Web search and located the originator of the posting. "It seems to be bogus at this point," Lipscomb said.

Talk of a second suicide was also rekindled by science fiction writer Lee Shargel. Appearing on the CBS "Morning Show" today, Shargel said that he and "other intermediaries" received faxed messages from the cult that "the all-clear signal has come through and we are gathering now."

Lipscomb said the only surviving — and recently active — member of the group of whom he is aware is Richard Ford, whose cult name was Rio DiAngelo. Ford left the Rancho Santa Fe house about four weeks before the bodies were found, and was the man who notified police after receiving two videotapes alerting him to the group's suicide plans.

Lipscomb said his department had interviewed about five people claiming to be former members of Heaven's Gate, out of one dozen to two dozen he estimated had left the group since the early 1970s. He said investigators had spoken several times with Ford, but did not know where he is now.

Investigators and FBI agents are winding up their investigation by examining data contained in the cult members' computers, a process he said could take four to six weeks.

Discount cards confuse students

NO ADVANTAGE:
Students get into local movie theater for less without their new cards.

TRANS DeNEAL
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Student discount cards, featured in the Daily Egyptian Friday, caused confusion at Carbondale's AMC University Place 8 theaters last weekend.

"We had right around 50 students show up expecting they would get $3 off of our student price of $3," said Thomas Stauffenberg, general manager of AMC University Place 8 theater, 1370 E. Main St.

Stauffenberg said students arrived Friday, Saturday and Sunday expecting to get free admission to AMC's movies but were informed that they would have to pay for their tickets.

"They left a little bit discouraged," he said.

The DE article explained students had to pre-purchase the tickets through Student Advantage, the company that offered the discounts, but Stauffenberg said students who did not read the entire article or did not closely read the article might have reached an incorrect conclusion.

Stauffenberg said tickets from Student Advantage still would be accepted at the Carbondale AMC location, but students would be paying $4 per ticket instead of the $3 per ticket that students with valid student IDs can get. The Student Advantage discount is based on the $7 price AMC charges at other locations in large cities.

Stauffenberg said the Carbondale location already is discounted with student identification, so the Student Advantage card does not apply.

"It is not an advantage for students at Carbondale's AMC," he said.

The cards, which AT&T is mailing to SIUC students, did not present a problem at Kinko's Copies, where students can get a 10-percent discount on copies.

"It seemed pretty simple," said Sharon Zoromski, a cashier at Kinko's Copies, 715 S. University Ave. "On the back of the card, it had the Kinko's logo."

Zoromski said the discount could be used on any copies except when a discount already was offered.

"We offer a discount of 50 percent after the first 100 copies," she said. "The card could be used to get 10 percent off of the first 100 (copies), but we could not give them a discount on the copies after that because they would already be discounted."

competing well against teams on both SIUC's conference and non-conference schedules.

"When we go to some of these other places that have lights, the girls really enjoy the atmosphere and are really impressed," she said. "A lot of the other teams we play have improved their facilities. We need these lights to be able to compete with these teams for recruits."

Nikki Cosentino, a freshman from Bloomingdale, said later game times would be a benefit to the team and its supporters.

"A lot of people have class or other activities while we are playing, so this will give them more opportunities to come and watch us," Cosentino said.

Schedule improvements also are high on the list of benefits for the SIUC program. Brechtelsbauer said teams often are discouraged from coming to Carbondale because the fields are not lighted.

"For tournaments, it's especially important to have lights," she said. "You can start the times a little later, and if the weather gets bad, you can postpone the games.

"From a competitive standpoint, we need these lights to improve our schedule and host better tournaments to get more recognition."

Practice times also present a unique problem that indoor sports do not face. Daylight hours conflict with some players' class schedules, causing those players to miss part of practice.

"We can start our practices later in the day," Remspecher said. "Some players can't get to the field until late because of classes, so we can move our practice time back now."

Brechtelsbauer said lights provide the team the opportunity to adjust practice schedules to the players' schedules.

"We seldom have a day with everybody at practice at the same time," Brechtelsbauer said. "We have a lot of players who are student-teaching, or have internships or class and can't make practice."

"Overall, the additions are valuable because we want to build a program within the community. Now, the younger kids can come out and watch us, and we can build a better relationship with the community."

this year," he said. "I hope to be injury free and have a great senior season next year."

Wright was not at full strength for most of the year because of a broken foot suffered at the Missouri Valley Conference Championships in December.

"The injury to my foot set me back this year," he said. "I hope to be injury free and have a great senior season next year."

Ardney said it was exciting to be back at the championships and at the same time be able to give the school some well-deserved recognition.

"To be back at the championship level is great," he said. "There are over 300 teams in Division I diving, and our school was one of 26 schools that brought divers who qualified."

Wright said he dove all right for his first time, but he is looking forward to better dives in the future.

"I was pleased, but the whole championships was one big learning experience for me."

Tennessee women take NCAA final

EARNING RESPECT:

Lady Volunteers prove they have what it takes to win all on the court.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

CINCINNATI — Pat Summitt looked into the hot lights of the interview room, and said it all in two sentences.

"Fifth place in the SEC and first in the country! Doesn't that sum up what this team has accomplished?"

It did, and it affirmed a couple of points about women's college basketball in the late 1990s: Tennessee's 68-59 victory over Old Dominion (34-2), its second straight national championship and fifth since 1987, has put Summitt at the summit, looking down upon all who challenge her.

Sophomore Chamique Holdselaw, known as "Mique (as in Meek)" on the Tennessee campus, now becomes the college game's greatest player, just as what's being called Summitt's best recruiting class in her 23 seasons assembles in Knoxville next September.

Before 16,714 at Riverfront Coliseum, Tennessee (29-10) fashioned a fifth national championship with its most improbable team, a club that stumbled to fifth in the Southeastern Conference and a third-place finish in the SEC tournament.

But it all came down to a couple of players: A freshman from Kentucky named Kyra Elzy who played fanatical defense on ODU's great senior guard, Ticha Penicheiro, in the first half, setting the tone for a team that wouldn't be denied. Holdselaw, who had 24 points and three assists, was brilliant and provided the game-turning play.

The Volunteers, who were in almost total command of the first half, let a 34-22 halftime lead slip away and in fact lost the lead during ODU's only run midway through the second half.

No matter, it simply set the table for a 6-foot-2, knock-kneed player with the softest shot in the game.

This was the graceful

Holdselaw's championship play:

With 5:33 to go and Tennessee clinging to a 51-49 lead, she had the ball at the top of the forecourt. She faked right and left, then made a third fake, showing drive down the paint. She sold it too.

But she pulled up and fired a bullet to 6-1 Pashen Thompson, all alone underneath, and she scored. Then, at the other end, Holdselaw seized a defensive rebound and Tiffani Johnson scored.

After that, ODU, which also had a 33-game winning streak ended, never came closer than four points.

Yet there was no celebrating on the Tennessee bench until nine seconds remained, when Summitt took out Holdselaw to a standing ovation — even by some ODU fans.

Now on the verge of a presence in her sport at least equal that of USC's Cheryl Miller a dozen years ago, here was Holdselaw (the Final Four's most valuable player) down the stretch: With 3:02 left, she put a great move on ODU center Clarisse Machanguana and dropped in a soft eight-footer for 57-51 lead.

At 2:35, she worked herself free underneath and scored a crumple to make it 59-51. At 2:28, she went up with the 6-5 Machanguana and blocked her shot.

At 2:08, she made a great assist to Kellie Jolly (who had a championship game-record 11 assists of her own) for a 61-53 edge. At 1:08, she coolly made two free throws for a 63-56 lead.

By herself, she carried this team during the heat of the final minutes, fashioning her sixth consecutive championship season, counting her four straight at Christ the King High in New York City.

Afterward, ODU Coach Wendy Larry credited Elzy, the Volunteer freshman, for setting the tone.

"Under the circumstances, I'd say Pat's plan to wear down Ticha was brilliant," she said.

Meanwhile, Summitt seemed almost in awe afterward.

"I feel very fortunate to have had the opportunity to coach these young ladies, for how they helped me learn and grow as a coach," she said.

First pitch of baseball season today

BATTER UP:

With or without the President, this should be a memorable year.

LOS ANGELES TIMES

The 1997 baseball season opens Tuesday without a ceremonial pitch by President Clinton, still recovering from '96 knce surgery.

Clinton will leave it to the professional hurlers as 24 of the 28 teams begin a season that features the introduction of interleague play and commemorates the 50th anniversary of Jackie Robinson's debut with the Brooklyn Dodgers, breaking the color barrier.

Among opening day highlights:

While Roger Clemens prepares to pitch Game 2 for the Toronto Blue Jays, Pat Hentgen, the American League's Cy Young Award winner, challenges Albert Belle and Frank Thomas in their official debut as Chicago White Sox teammates at the Skydome. Jaime Navarro, the former Chicago Cub right-hander, who was signed as a free-agent replacement for Alex Fernandez, pitches for the White Sox.

The New York Yankees, the defending World Series champions, face the Seattle Mariners, a team many predict will knock the Yankees off the October throne, at the Kingdome, with David Cone opposing Jeff Fassero, who's making his Mariner debut.

Boggs hit in eye at practice

New York Yankees third baseman Wade Boggs got a scare Sunday when he was struck in the left eye during batting practice prior to an exhibition game in Atlanta.

He was taking grounders at third and apparently turned his head when a ball came up and hit him near the eye.

Boggs initially was treated in the clubhouse, then taken to a hospital as a precaution. He needed 47 stitches to close the cut above the eye, but suffered no broken bones.

Boggs is questionable for Tuesday's season-opener in Seattle, but he has said he will be ready. Boggs beat out teammate Charlie Hayes for the starting third base job this spring.

BOXING

Buster on comeback trail

Former undisputed world heavy-weight champion James "Buster" Douglas continued his comeback effort with a sixth-round technical knockout of Brian Scott at the Mohegan Sun Casino Sunday. Douglas was in control throughout the bout, despite weighing 20 pounds less than the 272-pound Scott.

Often tagged by a good left jab from Douglas, Scott had swelling near his right eye by the fourth round. A Douglas right-left combination sent Scott to the canvas in the final minute of the fifth. Scott took a standing eight-count, then got pummeled again, twice going back down.

However, referee Steve Smoger ruled that the second time was the result of a fall as Scott was trying to hang on to Douglas, and the third knockdown, which came after Douglas landed several quick shots to the face, actually was after the bell had sounded.

Douglas went after Scott right away in the sixth and after flooring him with a left, Smoger stopped the fight at the 30-second mark.

Douglas, who turns 37 on April 7, hiked his career record to 34-5-1. That includes a 4-0 record since ending a lengthy stint away from boxing.

Douglas, who lives in Columbus, Ohio, gained worldwide fame when he stunned then world champion Mike Tyson in Tokyo Feb. 10, 1990.

However, his stay as champion was short, as Douglas lost the undisputed titles to Evander Holyfield just six months later. He did not fight again until starting his comeback in June 1996.

Scott, a Kansas City, Mo., resident, falls to 22-4.

Daly enters alcohol rehab

Golfer John Daly, an admitted alcoholic who had resumed drinking several months ago, has decided to withdraw from the PGA Tour and enter the Betty Ford Alcohol Rehabilitation Program.

The decision comes after it was learned Daly had a lengthy drinking session at a Jacksonville-area beachfront nightclub Thursday night, one day before he withdrew from The Players Championship, citing a painful right hip. He had shot a four-over-par 76 in the opening round on Thursday.

Daly, who gained fame and huge fan popularity by winning the 1991 PGA Championship, has had a history of alcohol-abuse related problems. He was twice suspended by the PGA, but went through alcohol rehabilitation in 1993 and got his game back to the point that he captured the British Open in 1995.

Shedding some light on softball

FIELD UPGRADE:
SIUC's plan to install lights at IAW Fields becomes reality.

Saluki coach Kay Brechtelsbauer has seen everything but lights in her 29 years as head coach of the SIUC softball program.

But after playing on a field that she said resembled a "cow pasture" when she first began, Brechtelsbauer is finally getting lights at IAW Fields next year, thanks to an SIUC fund-raising campaign.

Saluki Futures, a campaign for SIUC athletics announced in February to make improvements at athletic facilities on campus, will raise $260,000 in private donations for lights at IAW Fields and Abe Martin Field, the Saluki baseball team's field.

Brechtelsbauer said her program will reap a lot of benefits from the addition of lights.

"This could really make a difference," she said. "We'll see improvements in recruiting and attendance, and we can play host for some bigger and better tournaments."

The program's playing facilities have come a long way in Brechtelsbauer's tenure.

"When I started out, we were playing on a grass field that had no backstops," she said. "Then we moved to a field by Wham (Educational Building), but the field was so hard and bumpy it got to a point where other teams wouldn't even come and play us."

The team moved to IAW Fields nearly 25 years ago, and the program has looked forward to the opportunity to play under the lights.

"It took a long time to get the facilities like they are today," she said. "There a lot of benefits to having lights that we have missed out on."

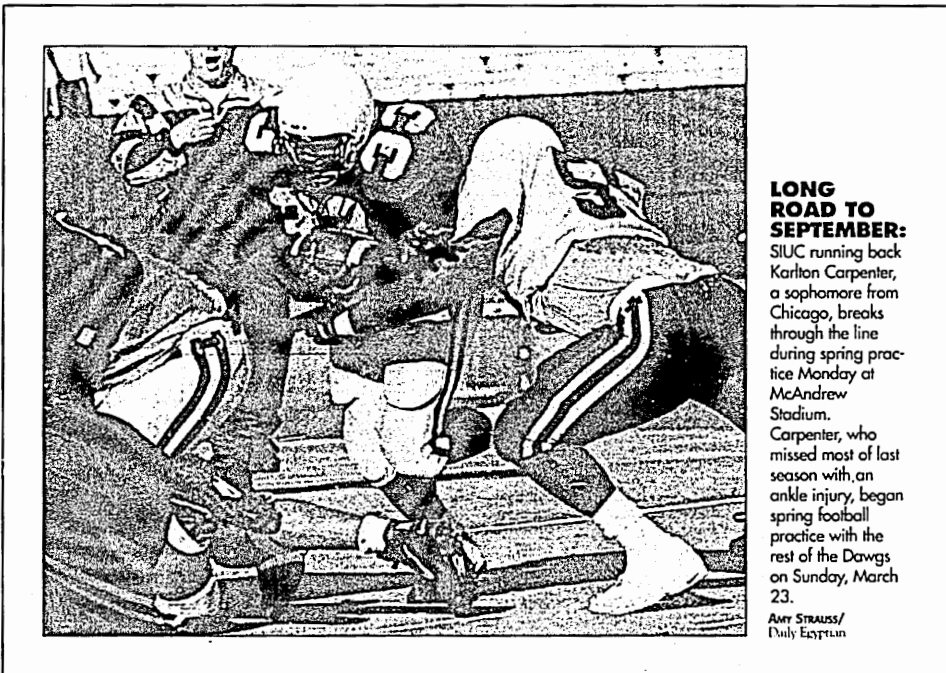

Tracy Remspecher, a freshman from Florissant, Mo., said the lights will have a positive impact on the team's recruiting efforts.

"The biggest advantage is that we can bring in some more recruits," she said. "We have a nice field as it is, but I think we have lost some recruits because we haven't had lights. By adding lights, we have a better chance to sell our program and our field to the recruits."

Brechtelsbauer has won at least 20 games in a season 15 times and made four appearances in the Women's College World Series. She has won more than 500 games and ranks in the top 20 on the NCAA's all-time win list.

But Brechtelsbauer said improvements in recruiting are especially important to

Wright grows from NCAA diving experience

TOPS IN DIVING:
Saluki diver says first national championship was learning experience.

BRAD WEBER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Junior Alex Wright approached his first diving championships with much anticipation last weekend, but was simply overwhelmed by the tough competition.

Wright competed at the NCAA Diving Championships in Minneapolis Thursday through Saturday.

Wright finished Thursday's 1-meter springboard in 27th place and then Friday finished 32nd in the 3-meter springboard. Saturday Wright finished the championships by placing 19th on the platform overall. To be an All-American, which was Wright's goal, he would have had to place in the top 16.

Wright said the overall experience of competing around the best divers in the country helped him learn how to be a better diver for the future.

"I was overwhelmed because the place was packed with just so many fans," Wright said. "Not as many people were there to cheer me on, but the fans saw the best. It was great to be there with the top divers."

"The championships made me look forward to diving and getting back next year."

Even though Wright did not qualify for All-American status, coach Dave Ardrey said Wright's performance was nothing less than spectacular.

"I was very pleased with the way Alex handled the first-day pressure," he said. "I think his performance was as well as any first-time diver we ever had at the championships."

To prepare for the championships, Wright said he had to focus on the meet in an entirely different mind set.

"I had to be more focused because it was just myself diving at the meet," he said. "I got more one-on-one attention to work on dives with the coach this time around."

Wright said it was a great experience to be a part of the elite in the country and it is something he will never forget.

Ardrey said Wright's championship experience was a learning one, which should help him in the long run.

"Two things were accomplished during the weekend," he said. "The championship helped Alex learn what it takes, and once you get there everyone is a great diver."

Wright said next year he will be able to come back just as strong or even stronger than this year.

Wright was not at full strength for most of the year because of a broken foot suffered at the Missouri Valley Conference Championships in December.

"The injury to my foot set me back
