Let there be lights

ILLUMINATING: Plan to light intramural playing fields awaiting Trustees' approval.

TRAVIS DENEAU, DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

STUC officials are moving ahead with a plan to illuminate intramural playing fields, although complete student approval of a fee increase to pay for the lights has been in limbo for nearly a year.

If approved by the SIU Board of Trustees, construction for the lights could begin in the fall. A date for board consideration has not been set.

Last year's plan of raising the campus recreation fee from $2 to $4 to pay for the lights was buried within Undergraduate Student Government. Originally, the senate passed a resolution supporting the fee increase.

Then-President Troy Allred rejected the legislation.

The senate then tried to override Allred's decision, which required a two-thirds majority. The measure fell short, but the senate decided to put the issue on referendum during the student government elections.

However, the referendum never made it to the ballot. Last week, a resolution supporting the increase was tabled and then removed from USG's agenda.

The fee increase has not been so divisive in the General Purpose Student Council, which approved a resolution favoring the fee increase last week. GPSC passed the resolution favoring the increase last year.

Despite not having the unequivocal support of both undergraduate and underclass students — which is not required — the University is proceeding with the plan to light the playing fields.

Bill McMinn, intramural recreational sports director, said his impression was that the project did have support of both GPSC and USG.

USG President Dave Vingren said he supports the fee increase now, although he urged the senate to vote against it when he was vice president.

Instead, he told the senate they should vote to approve a fee increase to pay for renovations of the Student Health Services building.

At the time, the health service was the higher priority, but since they can't get their renovations done until after the year 2000 and the increase for the campus recreation fee fits into the 3-cent fee cap, I say let's do it," Vingren said.

McMinn said the project, which is estimated to cost about $450,000, will enhance students' experience on campus.

"We did a survey seven or eight years ago, which got a favorable response," he said. "For some reason, students still enjoy playing flag football and soccer under the lights."

By illuminating the fields, he said, intramural schedules will not be dependent upon daylight, so students will have a better chance to fill intramural recreation into their schedules.

USG announces candidates for upcoming election

SARA BEAN, DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Official results of the USG election petition process are in, and 55 candidates are left standing, including three presidential and vice presidential teams.

USG Executive Assistant to the president Kristie Ayers and USG Chief of Staff Jackie Smith; Students Organized Against the Athletic Fee Injustice President Rob Taylor and Student Trustee Pat Kelly; and USG Senators Sean Henry and Greg Akerl are the three tickets from which students will choose April 15.

USG's election commission checked the eligibility of the candidates Monday and a list of eligible candidates was posted outside the USG office on the third floor of the Student Center.

Initially, Taylor was declared ineligible after not meeting the grade point average required to be president.

USG Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Jean Pumire said when they checked Taylor's GPA Monday he did not meet minimum requirements. However, when they checked it again Tuesday he was eligible.

Taylor said he was declared ineligible after not meeting the grade point average required to be president.

Taylor said when he found out his GPA did not meet eligibility requirements he contacted Admissions and Records.

"It was some sort of GPA problem, but it is fixed now," Taylor said. "We did a survey seven or eight years ago, which got a favorable response," he said. "For some reason, students still enjoy playing flag football and soccer under the lights."

"The results for candidates for student officers were also posted. USG Sen. Mike Buna and pre-medicine student Robert Hasland both met eligibility requirements for both offices.

Student trustee hopeful Yvette Johnson did not meet eligibility requirements because she is a transfer and has not completed an entire semester at STUC.

Johnson plans to appeal the decision at the next Student Commission meeting, 7 p.m., Wednesday, April 1 in the USG/GPSC Conference Room in the Student Center.

USG Election Commissioner Mindy Scott said anyone declared ineligible must get eligibility changed today or they will have to run as a write-in candidate.

Not your ordinary concrete canoe

COMPETITION: Engineering students hope to take first at regional ASCE competition.

JAYETTE BAILOU DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

It's neon green, sleek, weighs 105 pounds and goes by the name "Atomic Dowg." It is a newly evolved superdog. Hardly, it's actually a 16-and-a-half-foot-long concrete canoe.

Although "concrete canoe" may seem an oxymoron, members of the SIUC chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers (ASCE) have spent most of this semester constructing the one. They hope to sink nine other builds.

"It's not a logical concept to build a concrete canoe, but it's a non-practical resourcefulness the students exhibit each year," said Doug Frocks, captain of SIUC's concrete canoe team, who construction of their canoe is nearly complete.

"We still have to finish and paint the outside. Structurally, it's finished," he said.

Frocks said the most common question his team is asked is: "Does it float?"

"Obviously it's not a logical concept to build a concrete canoe, but it's a non-practical application of what we learn in the classroom," he said.

Each year ASCE invites student chapters of the organization to construct, exhibit and race canoes constructed of concrete and other environmentally-safe materials. Winners from 20 regional competitions ultimately advance to a national competition, of which SIUC has never won.

April 10 marks the American Society of Civil Engineering member Doug Frocks, a senior in civil engineering from Greenville, vacuuming modeling particles from the ASCE's concrete canoe Monday near the Engineering Building.

AP staff moves closer to unionization

NEXT: SIUC's administrative and professional staff could be newest union on campus.

J. MICHAEL RODRIGUEZ DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Administrative and Professional staff are lining closer to joining the ranks of the faculty in being represented at the bargaining table by an organized union, two officials say.

Talks of unionizing began in January when AP personnel said the November 1996 unionization of the SIUC faculty could be overshadowing AP staff's collective voice.

David Vitoff of the Illinois Education Association said the distribution of authorization cards to other universities in state about 700 workers committed to the cause.

"The personnel union is inching closer to joining the union that was sent out in January, and professional staff indicate they want to organize because "we frequently work in common problems," he said.

Vitoff would not elaborate on the exact number of responses. But 30 percent of the administration and professional staff indicate they want to engage in collective bargaining, the Labor Board will call for an election.

"It is amazing to see the ingenuity and resourcefulness the students exhibit each year," he said.

Pension amendment movement spreading

GRASSROOTS: Movement which started at SIUC spreads to other universities in state.

KIRK MOTTJIAN DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Proponents of the pension amendment releasing full health care coverage to retirees think they may have found a winning formula in their effort to acquire Senate approval, assembling a statewide army of university staffers to curry the flag in their respective districts.

Statewide the movement is represented from SIUC and Northern Illinois University, who are contacting coordinators from the 12 remaining state universities.

"It certainly is an attempt in fashion organizations resembling those in Carbondale and DeKalb. SIUC has about 700 workers committed to the cause while NIU has more than 700,000," he said.

With a concerted statewide effort, these crusaders believe passage of the amendment will be successful.

"What has been lacking in the past, according to SIUC coordinator Pam Pommier, is a full-scale lobbying effort on Springfield. Though Pommier and company have had success in persuading local legislators to pass the amendment, there exist a host of other university-backed senators who have yet to hear the pitch.

"We have a coalition of students, faculty, retirees and administration that is strong in our own district and will come together," she said.

The amendment, bill's lukewarm reception in the General Assembly. University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign and Eastern Illinois University has contributed to the bill's lukewarm reception in the General Assembly, she argues.

"The other schools have bought into all the propaganda that this is a done deal," Pommier said. "That's what's holding us back."

"We have a substantial number of responses," she said. "The results are overwhelming."

The realignment of the SIUC faculty could be over-shadowing the administration and professional staff's collective voice.

With a concerted statewide effort, these crusaders believe passage of the amendment will be successful.

"Hopefully they can begin as early as the spring or summer," Vitoff said. "The support is there. We confirm that by our outreach. Until our outreach is completed we cannot begin the formal card drive."

A second mailing was distributed to AP staff to get policy makers to sign the first mailing that was sent out in January.

The flyer stated AP staff feel they need to be represented to "fight against wage inequity and to protect the individual." AP staffers feel they need to organize because "we frequently work in common problems," he said.

"We have a common need for an improved system of dues process," he said.

The mailing also stated issues that some AP staff moves closer to unionization.

"The administration and professional staff indicate they want to engage in collective bargaining, the Labor Board will call for an election," he said.

"They are confirming that by our outreach," he said. "We confirm that by our outreach. Until our outreach is completed we cannot begin the formal card drive."
Enjoy spring weather with wacky Frisbee fun

With strange warm days upon us, many students will undoubtedly choose to spend some time outside enjoying the weather. Experts have been predicting a break in the typical collegial climate of a campus in a week full of unseasonable weather, and the result is quite simple. Today: Throwing - Catching - Throwing - Curse - Find a holder. No rule books here, just fun.

However, this pure fun can become repetitious. The cure is to take the opportunity to become creative while playing the sport. After years of playing Frisbee, my associates and I have developed a unique and remarkably entertaining Frisbee game. Realize and pick one best suited for you.

1. Attack-a-cast: Kind of like a shooting game, replacing the bulleI with the Frisbee and beer can as a target. Place the can, probably on the center of the lawn, and try to snuff off the object with a Frisbee. Simple, yet intricately addictive. For added challenge, tape the can or a frisbee as a附加值 when moving.

2. Nut Sack: An indoor Frisbee game, especially suited for being played in the upstairs of Levi Park Apartments. Three people are involved, two in a bedroom and the third in the middle. The two bedroom players attempt to throw the Frisbee at the other (who may be in the middle). Should the Frisbee hit the target, the Nut Sack tries to block the throw. Very fun, very painful, very insurance deposit damaging.

3. Nut Sack: In this game, the jackass (you), tries to throw the Frisbee in such a manner that the unsuspecting partner sits under a puddle of water, runs into a tree or wall, or trips while attempting to catch the Frisbee. A fun, great way to end a game or friendship.

4. Ooosah!: Great game to play if you're really fool costume. Playing Frisbee to Throwing a Frisbee through the window of a shiny silver Camaro. Make sure to have the rubber on the back end.

5. I'm-a-jackass: In this game, the jackass (you), tries to attract a pretty member of the opposite sex by jumping, dancing and attempting to impress her. She will usually never works, unless they happen to be into uncoordinated megadorks, like my sweet and pretty girlfriend Lisa. Frisbee is a great way to approach a pretty lady.

6. Switcharoo, and if the Frisbee goes into the woods someone with red hair has to go get it. This encourages the beneficiary or the administration and facilitates some of the issues presented by both sides.

Some also could argue that administrators and representatives would not bother to talk to students and their leaders, but Chancellor Don Begg and Athletic Director Jim Hart did attend both USG and GPSC meeting to discuss the student fee increase. Learning about the issue would allow GPSC and USG to develop a platform continuing the issue and criticizing others for speaking out, and give Pat Kelly something to speak about.

The Daily Egyptian editorial board sat down at the beginning of the semester to discuss its opinion on the union. The DE's stance at that time, which continues to be its stance today, was that it supports neither side. It does, however, support a swift resolution to negotiations so that student interests are not tarnished.

The editorial board was able to come up with this stance among itself because its members are not elected and do not have a constituency to answer to. USG and GSPC do not have that luxury.

The editorial board was able to come up with this stance among itself because its members are not elected and do not have a constituency to answer to. USG and GSPC do not have that luxury. If Kelly's comments were so unfounded, should the DE reserve the right to express its opinion on the union?
Emeritus professor speaks out for Women’s History Month

HERSTORY: Professor helped develop Women’s Studies Program in 1982.

KAREN BLATTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Elizabeth Eames witnessed unequal treatment of women while she was a professor at SIUC, which motivates her to fight for the equal rights of women.

"The young women on campus don’t know of the battle," she said. "They think that the battle has been won, but it hasn’t been for women yet."

Eames, an emeritus philosophy professor, gave the closing speech for Women’s History Month Monday night in the Northwest Annex in front of about 50 people. The month of March was marked with numerous lectures, readings and exhibits.

Eames taught at SIUC from 1963 to 1999 and was on the committee that developed the Women’s Studies Program in 1981. She then became the program’s first coordinator.

Eames has also worked with many of the women’s groups on campus and helped bring affirmative action to SIUC.

A major effort made by Eames was working toward the equal pay for women and men in comparable jobs.

"The young people on campus don’t know of the battle. They think that the battle has been won, but it hasn’t been for women yet," she said.

Eames remembers a story of a professor who was working toward the equal pay for men and women at SIUC. When the professor won, but it hasn’t been for women yet.

"I will never forget it," she said. "I have been able to help women better understand reality."

Women’s groups have been fighting to obtain equal rights for years. With the support of Eames, more women were able to stand up for their rights during Women’s History Month. Eames said her support of Eames comes from a feeling of unity — women fighting for their rights.

"The young people of the 1970s also saw the long journey women have to take before obtaining equal rights," Eames said. "The young people of the 1970s also saw the long journey women have to take before obtaining equal rights for women and men in comparable jobs."

Eames worries lie with today’s generation of women, but she feels there is still hope.

"Women feel very satisfied, but they shouldn’t," Eames said. "They are still not treated right. There’s a renewed excitement and a broader awareness that is out there. We can get there in the future."

Speakers show SIUC horrors of U.S. policy against Iraq

WAR: Voices in the Wilderness's dedicated to end U.S. sanctions against Iraq.

J. MICHAEL RODRIGUEZ

DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

With riveting photos of Iraqi children sprawled across a table, two "Voices in the Wilderness" representatives spoke to a room full of SIUC faculty and students Tuesday on their eyewitness account of the U.S. policy in Iraq.

Kayla Kelly, a longtime peace and social justice activist from Chicago, helped organize "Voices in the Wilderness," a campaign to end the U.N. sanctions against Iraq.

She spoke in the Kaskaskia Room of the Student Center Tuesday afternoon during a brown-bag lunch lecture.

In January, the United States responded to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's refusal to allow U.N. weapons inspectors access to presidential palaces suspected of storing weapons of mass destruction by amassing an arsenal of aircraft in the Persian Gulf.

President Bill Clinton initiated the build-up with the intent of bombing targeted Iraqi sites if 11th-hour negotiations failed.

After three hours of negotiations with Hussein Feb. 22, U.N. Secretary General Kofi Annan announced a deal that allows UNOSCOM, the weapons inspection team, to carry out inspections of suspected weapons sites, accompanied by senior diplomats of both countries.

Sanctions, however, remain in place against Iraq.

Kelly said that political leaders of this country should stick to their words, not only in this country, but in others we deal with.

"I think we should hold Hillary Clinton accountable for her very fine words of 'it takes a village to raise a child.' The village needs water.

The village needs food.

KATHY KELLY

PEACE AND SOCIAL ACTIVIST FROM VOICES IN THE WILDERNESS"

Kelly said she, witnessed many revolting things that are very typical all over Iraq.

"When you go into the houses, it's very typical to see one room just stacked with broken incubators," she said. "You see X-ray machines that are lined up that are not being used."

Kelly said she has many memories of children and families dying in her visits to Iraq.

"Every child with cancer in Iraq today is literally under a death bed," she said. "I certainly don't want to see kids dying as children as an educational event for U.S. people."

Kelly said UNICEF statistics show that every month 4,500 children under five die as a direct result of these sanctions. Kelly said children and families often sleep on blood stained mats on top of broken incubators in the most gruesome of conditions.

"Doctors have told us 'we not going to save you,'" she said.

people and fielding questions." Don Castle, coordinator of student programming, is one of the professional staff personnel who is fielding questions from concerned SIUC AP staff.

Castle said a group of about 10 have been meeting and discussing their issues, and the group grows everyday.

Castle said his board is drawing a line down the middle of the AP unit and they are calling them the Professional Staff Association, which cuts out mostly the administrators.

Staffers considered to be in the Professional Staff Association under the bargaining law are academic advisors, coordinators, assistant directors, program managers, assistant directors, researchers, and field representatives.

The bargaining law talks about people who are not managerial in nature. He said it is not up to him on whether or not the Professional Staff Association should unionize.

"That's up to our group to decide," Castle said. "That's the beauty of what I like about collectively bargaining is that we can decide if it is what we want to do and nobody else could tell us this.

The University classifies 700 staff as administrative and professional.

In a previous article, William Caple, associate vice chancellor for administration, said it is unknown how much a union would affect SIUC or who in the administration would negotiate with them.

Castle said his goal right now is to provide information for those searching for it.

"In the mean time we're just trying to educate people," he said. "We're trying to find out what the issues are among the members.

We're just trying to create communication networks among the groups, and it's a very diverse group spread out among the campus.

It takes a while to create that network.

Castle said many people may question the thought of unionizing.

"I encourage people not to ever be intimidated by this process that is by us, and of us and for us, and it's not like anybody else is going to tell us what to do."

Luechtefeld, R-Oakville, would counter the charges prescribed in the 1997 Pension Act by allowing retirees to opt out of the new program and retain their original pension packages. The new plan, which took effect Jan. 1, requires retirees to pay 5 percent of their health insurance premium for each year under 20 years.

Luechtefeld, like Pommier and Challgren, is optimistic a deal can be brokered. The bill's success, however, largely depends on the amount of pressure applied to legislators who view the issue as trivial and those who aren't familiar with it at all.

Luechtefeld said, "We are trying to put together a group so we can get this through.

There are possibilities that can happen in the session. You just have to kind of play it by ear."

"If we don't step forward and take charge nothing will happen."

The amendment, embodied in SB 1368, and proposed by first test in the Senate Rules Committee March '10 and now must be attached to one of the four "vehicle" pension bills heading to the Senate floor. Though more difficult of a task, the alternative would be to push dent on the Senate floor. Though more difficult of a task, the alternative would be to push yet another vehicle pension bill through. Einhorn said the aspect of the canoe, from the hydrodynamic and structural design to the specially designed lightweight concrete, is created from scratch by the team. A steel mesh reinforcement keeps the canoe from falling apart, and the concrete, which is created from scratch, does not allow the canoe to sink. Einhorn said the canoe itself, and a static display, will be a part of the team’s project.

Nighthawk just gets nuts

ROCK 'N' ROLL: Party band enjoys classic rock and no competition.

KELLY E. HERRELL
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Creating an energetic atmosphere while wiping out the beloved classic rock tunes of such entertainers as Jimmy Buffett, Nighthawk keyboardist John Jeremiah finds it easy to get wildly performing on stage.

“We're a party band,” he said. “We do a lot of visuals. We dance around, and sometimes we just get nuts.”

Nighthawk performs interesting angles to older classic rock songs, but Jeremiah finds the younger crowds will always admit their favorite tunes and want to hear them.

“A majority of the Carbondale students like ‘Margaritaville.’ We perform in the Carbondale area for nearly four entertainers as Jimmy Buffett, and we’ve never had any competition, with regional bands going home and finding no one likes our music versus formalization, he said. “I’ve met a lot of famous keyboardists like Harry Connick Jr.”

With 37 years of experience behind him, Jeremiah said the entertainment industry is thrilling, yet he finds the diversity of Carbondale the most exhilarating part of performing.

“Almost everyone says, ‘I just listened to music and met a lot of different keyboard players, and I took in a lot of what was going on.’ Jeremiah said. “I’ve met a lot of famous keyboardists like Harry Connick Jr.”

Whitcomb said, “It’s a lot of fun in my life as long as I stay in Carbondale.” he said. “I’ve played at a few college proms from Mississippi to the East Coast, and I find the widespread people in Carbondale to be my favorite.”

only rewrite the synapses, we sometimes, reuse the needles,” she said.

“I believe that these sanctions are a crime against humanity. The United Nations was founded to eliminate this type of warfare,” Jeremiah said. “I can then have steady jobs, so we pass each other so everyone knows what the other three are working on.”

“All of the guys in the band are really close so we pass around cassette tapes, and we just experiment in front of the audience,” Jeremiah said. “I can then go home and practice what I felt the audience and Jeremiah’s successful talent taking lessons and tedious practice. He never took piano lessons but loved music ever since he could walk, which gave him the desire to be a musician.

Music was something that came naturally to Jeremiah, and it is his inherent abilities that have granted him many opportunities to meet legendary musical artists.

“I just listened to music and met a lot of different keyboard players, and I took in a lot of what was going on,” Jeremiah said. “I’ve met a lot of famous keyboardists like Harry Connick Jr.”

With 37 years of experience behind him, Jeremiah said the entertainment industry is thrilling, yet he finds the diversity of Carbondale the most exhilarating part of performing.

“I have never had any more fun in my life as when I play in Carbondale,” he said. “I’ve played at a few college proms from Mississippi to the East Coast, and I find the widespread people in Carbondale to be my favorite.”

DOMINATOR: Buffalo goalie shows why he is one of the elite goalies of this century

BUFFALO TIMES

Buffalo Sabres goalie Dominik Hasek, 26, commands respect, do things the way he wants; the book by the book. He nºs too much to be a classic story player. His leg and arm flail too much to call him graceful, and his trademark rolling, whipped-backlop is a maneuver no coach would recommend.

Behind the acrobatics of his self-taught technique, however, lies an unquestionable desire for perfection. It's an impossible quest, yet Hasek -- who last season was the first goalie to vote the NHL's most valuable player since 1963 -- has come as close as any goalie could do his best.

"No one really tried to change my style, but the media and the league, especially when I was in Chicago, didn't believe my style is good," said Hasek, who made his NHL debut with the Chicago Blackhawk's in the 1993-94 season and was traded to Buffalo in 1992. "I always believed what's good for my game is not good for all goalies."

What's good for Hasek has made him the dominant goalie of his era. Hasek turned the Nagano Olympics into one main show, emerging as the hero and the U.S. in the quarterfinal, shutting out Canada in overtime and semifinal shootout and making 2 saves in a 1-0 victory over Russia in the gold-medal game. He had an NHL-record 0.97 goals-against average and a .961 save percentage in six games, a margin that would have been inestimable in the past. "It's not only the way he plays, it's his mental and psychological impact," Russian Coach Vladimir Zuzulov said, "because at times I felt not quite sure if we would be able to score at all."

Many NHL players share that frustration. And even though the gold medal launched Hasek on a post-Olympic whirlwind, he hasn't slowed down. Since the Games, he has recorded five shutouts for a league-leading total of 12, three of them were also 100.000 modern world set by Tony Esposito in 1969-70. His .930 save percentage is the NHL's best.

"...the media and the coaches and the people in the league, especially when I was in Chicago, didn't believe my style is good."

and his 2.15 goals-against average ranks fifth.

"In the beginning, I had a little bit of trouble with the body at the time. Now, everything is back to normal," said Hasek, whose team faces the East Coast Hockey League's Sunday at Marine Midland Arena. "I still have some problems from the Nagano Games, I think, but that is easy to handle."

"Mentally, it was a little tough," was tried from the Olympics. I was thinking too much about beating the U.S. and Canada in Russia. I taught myself not too focused on the NHL. I was thinking too much about what happened in Nagano Games, I announced, in Olympic competition," Hasek said. "I will never forget it."

It was followed by an equally memorable visit to Prague, about 60 miles from his hometown of Pardubice, for a celebration that was like a big party. "I think sometimes people get frustrated and they want to make a change, but that is something now that's an option."

The Sabres will need to continue to play well in the field boxes only a sweater for those guys for that upcoming weekend, which obviously conference are what is the most important at this time of year.

"At the same time, as much as we are trying to get those guys ready for the upcoming weekend, we're still trying to use our top four or five guys in those mid-week games -- not only as a makeup for the weekend, but we're still trying those games. That's why you see their SUIC career with her eighth and final All-MVC honor.

"Definitely would be totally surprised if that didn't happen at this distinction again," DeNoon said. "She's been working out every single day, every day. We've got 180corer champ, he would be shocked if he shocked."

Callahan said he may move Bensen out of the three, and even get on track offensively because he was up to bat in key situations and failed to produce hits. Bensen struck out and failed to move the runner from second base in the top of the ninth of the 1-2 loss.

Callahan is not sure where he will pitch Bensen in the line-up during the game against St. Louis University Wednesday. More than likely, he will use several pitchers to prepare for the weekend series against Wichita State University. The lifestyle of Kentucky coach Smith

WASHINGTON POST

In the modest one-story cinder block home in Scotland, Md., near St. Mary's County's southernmost point, Tubby Smith's large family — he has 16 brothers and sisters, 10 of whom still live in Southern Maryland, and 38 nieces, nephews, and great-grandnieces and great-grandnephews — gathered Tuesday at the family home to celebrate a victory for life, said William Smith, one of Tubby Smith's younger brothers who joined the crowd at The Mixs.

"He's the greatest!" said Guffrie Smith Sr., Smith's father, who worked three jobs while raising his family: He drove a school bus, fried chicken at Peaunt River Naval Air Station and fixed boilers at Pa1uxent River Naval Air Station.

"Congratulations, Tubby Smith," sign outside proclaimed.

"You can't help but smile to think that Tubby, who is liked by everyone here, came from being a farm boy to what he is now. We are proud," said DeeDee Smith, who lives in Glasgow, Ky., the N_CAA champion Kentucky coach of the year. "For me, Tubby Smith is a believer out of a season worse than Pokey Reese's.

The SIUC football team announced the hiring of two new assistant coaches Tuesday to replace departed coaches Ambrose will take over the offensive backs. Lambert was hired as a defensive assistant and quarterbacks coach.

GO FOR IT:

Mindy Bruck, a senior in radiology major, is competing for SIUC in four indoor and four outdoor track and field events this season.

She's a really positive person, says Bruck. "It takes a little bit of everything," Bruck said. "It takes speed and perseverance."
