DEVIN MILLER - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Greeks help make a house a home

Habitat for Humanity project gets a helping hand

Geoffrey Ritter
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Heather Hanson says the task of building a house for a family in need unites SIUC's various greek organizations in a worthy project and helps to paint a better image of the greek system.

"I've never seen everybody come together to work like this," said Inter-Greek Council Vice President Heather Hanson. "It's a good example of how the greeks are moving forward and coming together."

The Carbondale house, at 104

Hanseman St., is being built as a project of Habitat for Humanity, an international Christian organization that builds homes for needy families. Since 1976, volunteers for the organization have built more than $5,000 homes in 64 countries throughout the world, according to the organization's website.

The greeks, who have been toiling away on the $38,000 house since January, first began their work after the Inter-Greek Council was approached earlier this year by John Annable, president of the Carbondale chapter of Habitat for Humanity, asking for their help in constructing the house from the ground floor up. Annable said he thought the project would show a better side of greek life to the community.

"We're kind of reserved that house for the greeks," Annable said. "I thought if the greeks could help us, it shows that they can make a contribution to the community."

Since then, the greek population has rushed into the project. Weather permitting, each Saturday morning this year has seen members from all across the greek spectrum participating in the project, working from about 8 a.m. until late afternoon. Officials from the Inter-Greek Council said that oftentimes there is more help present than there is work to be done.

"It's pretty incredible to see all these people helping out," said Phil Robertson, a professor in plant biology, who is helping with the project. "I think it's a very worthwhile project."

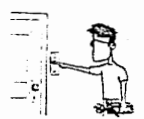

In fact, the Inter-Greek Council is looking to pour even more effort into the project. President Brienne Cichella said a fund-raiser in two weeks will raise even more money. The fund-raiser, which she called a "24-hour teeter-tottering marathon," aims to raise an additional $15,000 to invest in the house. In addition, officials say they are considering the possibilities of constructing more houses in the future.

In the end, greeks working on the house say the project is a positive experience, not only because it will soon provide a home for a family that desperately needs one, but also because it is a testament to greeks trying to redefine their image to the community.

"It's such a great project," Cichella said. "It's something that people can drive by and say 'the greeks did this.'"

New vice chancellor Dietz takes office

SIUC alumnus and De Soto native begins work today

Rhonda Sciarra
STUDENT AFFAIRS EDITOR

Personnel choices and a pending bookstore decision await Larry Dietz when he arrives on campus today as the new vice chancellor for Student Affairs and enrollment management.

Dietz, an SIUC alumnus and De Soto native, left his job as vice chancellor of Student Affairs and enrollment management at the University of Missouri-Kansas City in March to take the SIUC position.

"We're very pleased to have Larry Dietz join our University and to begin work Monday morning," interim Chancellor John Jackson said. "He is an excellent candidate for this position, and I look forward to working with him."

Dietz has said that he decided to take the job partly because of the changes and improvements he thinks he can bring to SIUC and the impact students, faculty and staff had on him during campus visits in October and December.

Jackson named Dietz to the position in January, after the retirement of Harvey Welch. Associate Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Jean Paratore has been serving as interim until Dietz's arrival.

USG approves student group funding for Halloween

$25,000 set aside for student events for Halloween weekend

Karen Blatter
GOVERNMENT EDITOR

Undergraduate Student Government approved saving $25,000 for student groups and organizations to use for Halloween 2000 events.

On Wednesday, USG senators approved the legislation that would provide student groups with the opportunity to create events for the weekend that would provide fun and a peaceful atmosphere for the weekend while the University is closed.

USG Senators Eric Waltmire and Rob Taylor requested the funding because of the City Council's decision to keep the bars open for the weekend, despite the University being closed.

"This will give several groups a chance to have organized events," Waltmire said.

"They will have the money to get funded."

On March 9, the council voted 3-2 to keep the bars open and "just go on with Halloween," despite recommendations to close the bars for the sixth year in a row. The council's decision came after the University decided to continue fall break from Oct. 28 to Nov. 1.

Some think that the only way to ensure a successful weekend is to have organized events. Acting on those theories, Waltmire and Taylor created the bill to ensure student groups will have access to money to have such events.

Student groups would have to ask the USG Senate for the money, after providing information about the event they would like to have. The Senate has the opportunity to approve or deny the funding for the event.

Taylor had originally asked for $50,000 to be set aside until Nov. 1 for possible funding. He said his goal for the money is to provide organization for the weekend

A piece of legislation to change lives

The ADA has paved the way for people with disabilities for the last decade

JENNIFER WIG
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Fifteen years ago Owen Zimpel may not have been able to work as a teaching assistant at the Rehabilitation Center. Today, Zimpel, who is legally blind, can reap the benefits of employment because of the Americans with Disabilities Act.

Zimpel, a non-traditional student in rehabilitation from St. Cloud, Minn., said the ADA was a necessary change that has affected the lives of many people, with or without disabilities.

"It makes the general public more aware of people with disabilities and what their needs are," Zimpel said. "Nobody really knew what was going to happen, how it was going to play out. It took a few ADA lawsuits to make those happen."

The ADA was signed into law July 26, 1990. The wide-ranging legislation is divided into five titles, and primarily applies to disabled individuals. According to the ADA, an individual is disabled if he or she "has a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more of

The five titles of the ADA include employment, public services, public accommodations, telecommunications and miscellaneous.

These titles contain requirements for new construction or alterations to existing buildings, for "reasonable accommodations" when hiring the disabled, for accessibility to public services and programs, such as buses and trains, and for telephone compa-

Law School to conduct discussion on immigration

Symposium shines light on refugee life

ANTONIO YOUNG
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The United States has always been a place where victims of political, religious, ethnic, and other forms of repression could find refuge. Although some refugees are able to return to their homes, many are forced to leave.

The SIU School of Law is welcoming a group of panelists on Monday to examine U.S. asylum laws and their impact on people displaced by war, famine, or the internal policies of repressive regimes, said Maria Frankowska, professor of immigration at the SIU School of Law.

The refugee problem was brought close to home when more than 80 Chinese asylum seekers were sent to a privately owned detention center in Ullin, Ill., Frankowska said.

"The problem of refugees seem, for us here, to be a far away occurrence. We seem to think that there are such occurrences happening in Florida or in New York, California or Texas," Frankowska said.

"All of a sudden it became clear that our local law community was ill-prepared to provide legal advice or legal assistance to those asylum seekers."

Another purpose of the symposium is to draw attention to the need for trained legal attorneys in immigration law and energize the local

NEWS IN BRIEF

EAST LANSING, MICH.

Birthday cards urge students to drink responsibly

One of the most encouraging birthday cards for students at Michigan State University is likely to come from two people they don't even know.

Cindy and John McCue started sending birthday cards to students turning 21 after their son, Bradley, an MSU junior, died last March from alcohol poisoning. The cards urge students to drink responsibly and have been effective in changing some students' drinking habits, according to a poll conducted by the university's health center.

Nearly one quarter of the 4,000 students who have received the cards responded to the online survey. Of those, half said the card had taught them something about alcohol poisoning. Two-thirds said the cards prompted them to consume alcohol more responsibly, and 31 percent said they drink less alcohol now than they would have if they'd never received the card.

The cards are produced by B.R.A.D. (Be Responsible About Drinking), a not-for-profit organization founded by the McCues. The university coordinates the mailings.

Opera used as alternative for punishment on campus

Minor violations of campus code land students at Eastern Connecticut State University a seat at the opera.

After finding that free tickets to the opera and symphony didn't generate much interest among students, Kirk Peters, associate dean of student affairs established the university's Alternative Restitution Program, which gives students guilty of minor offenses a choice between performing community service or attending an opera performance.

Some students have actually said they'd rather serve the time, but so far, about 50 students have taken Peters up on the show. Among them is Felipe Dossou, a first-year student cited for tearing up the women's softball field during a rain-drenched pick-up football game. Dossou said he'd always thought the opera was a "rich, snobby" thing to do, but would definitely return now that he's actually been.

Despite the chance to attract new fans, officials at the Connecticut Opera have complained about having their art being presented as a form of punishment, but Peters shrugs off the criticism. He said he thinks it's important to punish students — particularly those from disadvantaged backgrounds — in ways that will help them in the long run. "My idea was to raise the bar here anyway I could," he said.

OUR WORD

One vote isn't big enough for SIUE and SIUC

The Illinois Senate overwhelmingly passed a bill empowering one of SIU's two student trustees with a binding vote on the Board of Trustees. As the bill awaits Gov. George Ryan's signature, the DAILY EGYPTIAN congratulates lawmakers because we understand real change at the state level often comes in baby steps. Congratulations for taking the first step to a more representative board.

The bill extends and slightly modifies a 1998 bill that would remove the binding vote from student trustees in 2001. After Ryan signs House Bill 4182 into law, the two student trustees, one from SIUC and one from the Edwardsville campus, will continue to be elected by the students. The governor will then endow one student trustee with a binding vote and the other with an advisory vote. Elizabeth Bell, the student trustee from the SIUE campus, had the binding vote this term.

To give one student an official voice on the board was the easy part. Regardless of how fervently our governor-appointed trustees research issues that affect students, they will likely never know the daily trials and tribulations of living in the residence halls, core curriculum or parking. But what is the logic behind providing an official student voice from only one campus? Just as Chairman A. D. Van Meter would be unable to truly understand the epic struggles involved in finding a parking space in the parking garage, Ben Syfert, SIUC's student trustee, could just as easily talk about the University of Illinois as the Edwardsville campus. Assuming that empowering one student trustee was meant to provide the board with a better understanding of the students they serve, legislators stopped short of the finish line in the race to provide representation for the student body.

Any logic to provide a binding vote for one student trustee is undermined by the omission of the other trustee. Some may argue that to accurately represent all the students of SIU, the board would have to include members of every gender, ethnic background, hometown and a ridiculous array of groups with different needs and opinions. But the interest of the board is to find out how facilities and services at SIU are meeting the needs of the students. The Edwardsville and Carbondale campuses have totally different facilities and services among other things. SIUC has, roughly, twice as many students, a greater emphasis on research, a larger budget and far less students that commute. The campuses are both ever-changing and growing, bound together only by their administration.

Students elected to the trustee positions sacrifice huge amounts of time because of a commitment to their University. There are seven other appointed trustee positions on the board, so any fear of the students attaining too much power is illogical and disrespectful of the maturity and work ethic our student trustees have had in the past. A binding vote for one trustee is better than nothing, but it should be nothing more than a baby step.

Africa's AIDS crisis is not its problem alone

In Africa, you can hear the death drums beating in the night.

Funeral drums are heard on a regular basis, alerting the people to yet another death because of the continent's AIDS epidemic. When I saw that opening text about "the death drums," on an Internet site about Africa, it said more to me than anything I've seen concerning this issue.

We do have our own AIDS problem in America, but AIDS is a world-wide problem, and I'm troubled that little coverage has been given to Africa's situation in the American media. We've given attention to places such as Russia and the Middle East, so why not Africa?

In 1998, a report was conducted by the United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs Population Division concerning the AIDS/HIV outbreak in Africa. What it found still holds true after two years.

Africa recorded the largest rate of HIV infection in the world. Of the 31 million people living with HIV/AIDS worldwide, 21 million of them live in Africa. At least one in four people in 34 sub-Saharan countries are infected with the virus.

The country of Botswana was hit the hardest, where the life expectancy rate, once 61 years as of 1993, now stands at 47. It's expected to drop to 41 between 2000 and 2005. Another shocking fact is that 80 percent of women worldwide with HIV/AIDS are in Africa.

Unprotected heterosexual sex is blamed for the rampant increase, according to the World Health Organization. That may suggest that more can be done in the area of education. However, there is so much awareness about disease in America, and the problem persists, so who are we to lecture.

I'm not trying to lecture Americans either, but consider if the roles were reversed. If our HIV/AIDS statistics were skyrocketing, the issue would be on the front page of every major newspaper and magazine, and all the major news networks.

Yet, for whatever reason, we don't immediately respond to an issue until it explodes. By the time screen-legend Rock Hudson shocked the world with his disclosure that he was dying of AIDS in 1985, the disease was still America's dirty little secret.

I was a just a kid when Hudson died. I knew little about him, and even less about AIDS. I grew up with the whole "gay plagued" myth, a stereotype associated with AIDS in the 1980s because it first showed up among gay men.

Even after Hudson's death, which was considered a turning point in the AIDS fight, awareness of disease didn't begin to pick up until it showed up among heterosexuals. So what should we do about the millions of men, women and children dying in Africa?

There's no easy answer. I don't know what can be done about the actual crisis, but the American press can do a great deal more in making us aware. Would a visit to Africa by the Pope stir up some interest? It probably would. But what do we do in the meantime?

We can start by paying more attention to Africa's plight. Maybe we can't hear the death drums beating. Or maybe we can, but just refuse to respond.

Kerr's letter shows he doesn't get it

DEAR EDITOR,
Mr. Kerr made some very defamatory comments in the March 29 issue [letter] about me and my character. I could stoop to his level and make comments about his character, but I do not feel the need to put another person down to make myself feel better. I just have a few comments for him.

First, I would like to ask where you get your facts about the safety of the residence halls, specifically the towers. Since you do not live or work on this side of campus, I would like to know your sources because I do live here and I do work here. I know for a fact that it is quite the opposite. Most of the residents complain about how tight security is in the towers. That does not sound like they feel unsafe to me.

Second, the humor of the particular comic strip was not lost on me. If fellow staff members had not been harmed by the actions of some students, I would have found it quite amusing. I am not immune to the fact that students don't like fire alarms. I don't like them, either. The fact remains that fire alarms do happen and they MUST be taken seriously. Every fire alarm is real. THIS IS NOT A DRILL. If students don't take them seriously, lives are put in danger.

Mr. Kerr, I would also ask that you not pretend to know what is in my mind. I never said that my personal safety was in danger. I said the strip promoted violence toward staff members. I also ask that you not pretend to know what kind of person I am. You don't know me and you have no right to judge my character. I will admit that, because of my job, there will people that do not like me, but I did not take this job to make friends. Without ever meeting me or talking to me, you in no way are a judge of whether or not I am a horrible person. That statement was just not called for and I guess that is the difference between the intelligent student and the ignorant one. An intelligent undergraduate student who is not a mindless sheep would have stuck to the issue at hand rather than resorted to name calling. I would also like to address the issue of my last name. I realize it is not the best name; however, there is one huge difference between my name and the comic strip. I can't change my name. Mr. Adams can change the content of his strip.

I would also like to take this opportunity to tell Mr. Adams that I have not been unhappy with his strip. I was unhappy with a particular days content. I thank him for the humor he has put into March 29 issue. At least he has the common sense to realize that he did in fact offend someone and in his own humorous way made an attempt to address the issue. Thank you Mr. Adams.

Mr. Kerr, I will close this letter with REAL sensitivity because I care. I hope you work through the issues you may be having in your life right now so that you may move beyond name calling and character bashing before you graduate from college.

Find out the facts before complaining about them

DEAR EDITOR:
Regardless of the comments made by the International Students Council President Mr. Lakhani about the $95 fee being imposed by the Immigration and Naturalization Service to keep track of all foreigners in America, it is unbelievable that such comments regarding whatever it is the ISC president said. The suggestions Mr. Roush made to the president are disgusting. How many foreign students have cars which would enable them show concern about the gas prices, and beer — everybody is not an alcoholic or concerned about that, either. The ISC president was put in office to talk about issues of general concern to all foreign students and it was right for him to voice his opinion on the fee.

Mr. Roush, those of us fortunate enough to be here do not need the U.S. tax payers' money to pay those fees — we leave that to Uncle Sam to use as aid for our less fortunate brothers and sisters back home in Africa and all around the world.

Mr. Roush, for your information, it was easier for some of us to get into universities in America than our own countries. Don't be saddened by the fact that somebody can at least beat you at what you think you are the best in. Colleges in America and everywhere are opened for all to apply and only the most qualified get in.

Maybe you need to find out why those you woefully cry for could allow their places be taken by foreign students. Probably they need to put in more effort in their school work to make the college entry requirements in their own country.

Local band to perform on Keillor's T-Tutt competition

Southern Illinois fans can vote for the band online during the performance

JAYETTE BOLINSKI
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

"For us, performing on 'A Prairie Home Companion' is the equivalent of a garage rock band opening for The Who," Tom Cummings said Saturday night before going on stage with the Brownbaggers at a local bar.

Cummings, bass player for the Makanda-based Cajun band, can't hide his pleasure when he talks about the group's upcoming April 15 performance on Garrison Keillor's Talent from Towns Under 2,000 competition in New York. It was Cummings' initiative that led to the group being chosen as a finalist in the first place.

"I sent in a tape because nobody was buying them anyway," Cummings said. "I didn't even tell the band."

That was late January. Cummings had nearly forgotten about the entry, he said, when he was notified in early March that the Brownbaggers were one of six finalists out of 700 entries for the competition.

The group will perform under the name Bon Temps Roulez during the competition. The band plays Louisiana Cajun music, and many of the lyrics are sung in authentic Cajun French. Band members include Cummings, John Giffin on rhythm guitar, Dennis Stroughmatt on fiddle and lead vocals, Kenny Johnson on drums and Dan Schingel on lead guitar. All members are SIUC graduates.

"It doesn't matter if we win or not," Giffin said. "It's great that we'll be in front of a national audience. We just hope there's more opportunities for gigs with the exposure this performance will bring us."

Cummings said the band has decided to perform "The Mardi Gras," a 400-year-old Cajun song, for the competition.

"We're playing for fun," he said. "We're real happy about this. Every band seeks exposure."

Talent from Towns Under 2,000, or T-TUTT, has been an annual feature on "A Prairie Home Companion" since 1996. Finalists may perform one act during the live broadcast, and the audience determines the winner. The winner receives the Silver Water Tower Trophy and the opportunity to perform again at the end of the show. This year, listeners at home can cast their votes online at www.prairiehomecompanion.com.

"A Prairie Home Companion" is heard each week by nearly 2.8 million listeners on more than 485 public radio stations, including WSIU. The show airs locally at 5 p.m. Saturdays and is rebroadcast at 10:30 a.m. Sundays.

Cummings said he hopes symptoms of stage fright don't kick in as

Six year old first grader enrolled in college level classes

OCALA, Fla.— Justin Chapman is the only student at the University of Rochester who's on the verge of losing his baby teeth. The 6-year-old is the youngest student ever to enroll in the university, where he's taking an ancient history class. Of course, that's just one of an awfully full load. Justin is enrolled in 29 other classes offered through the Internet and Monroe Community College.

Despite all the schoolwork, his mom, Elizabeth Chapman, insists her son is in class less than the average first grader. Officially, Justin is a sophomore at Cambridge Academy, a private high school in Ocala, Fla., that offers correspondence courses. Rochester allowed Justin to enroll in a program admitting exceptional high-school students. School officials say they have no questions about his abilities.

Neither does Elizabeth Chapman, who said she first noticed her son's intelligence when he passed one of her college-level exams at the age of 2. She thought he was just filling in bubbles at random.

She also said she has no idea where the kid got his smarts. "I don't remember him reading books on string theory," but he knows all about it, she said.

Aside from his young age, Justin is the typical student. He talks during class and doesn't study. His mom — who insists on speaking for him — says his biggest problems stem from often doing "more than what's expected for class." She said she has to tear him away from his computer to make sure he gets plenty of exercise.

Asian Americans represent a unique entity to SIUC, said Corban Shaw, president of the United Asian American Council. Many are either first generation, born to parents of Asian descent, or naturalized citizens with permanent residence in the United States. Asian Americans are not alone, however. Other American born or naturalized citizens with ties to two cultures must deal with similar questions of loyalty and identity, she said.

Although many are quite comfortable being from a multicultural background, some Asian Americans are working toward bridging the gap between International students and Asian-American students.

"We want people to know that we're on campus and that we have a voice," Shaw said.

UAAC, a co-coordinator for Asian American Awareness Month activities, represents SIUC's Asian-American student body. Shaw, a senior in foreign language and international trade from Japan, has been working for a year to promote Asian Americans on campus. Part of her work has been to make UAAC a member of the International Student Council. The council comprises international student organizations representing countries from around the world, including Greece, India, Turkey and Africa.

UAAC is not a member of the council because it has recognized only those associations with purely international students, said Ashish Lakhani, president of the International Student Council.

UAAC have made requests concerning the joining procedures for entry into the council. Lakhani said he would welcome UAAC's entry, noting that linguistic students, though not of purely international students, are also a part of the council.

"We're not keeping them out," Lakhani said. "We do have a place for them if they want to join us."

Shaw is looking for this year's awareness month to help her with that effort. Shaw came to SIUC in 1994 from Fukushima, Japan. She would like very much to have UAAC recognized, not only by the council, but by the entire student body as a strong student organization.

"We're hoping to provide the backbone for other students and Asian-American students," she said.

KERRY MALONEY - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Matt Arnold, a senior in mechanical engineering from Jacksonville, and Dan Walker, a senior in mechanical engineering from East Moline, show the machine they built with two other students that placed third in the design competition at the Region Six Engineering Conference.

Engineering a strong finish

SIUC wins seven awards, including third place in design competition

CODELL RODRIGUEZ
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Dan Walker and Matt Arnold disassemble their machine in a matter of minutes and fit it into a 12-inch by 12-inch by 20-inch box they also made themselves.

Walker, a senior in mechanical engineering from East Moline, and Arnold, a senior in mechanical engineering from Jacksonville, took apart the machine that won third place in the design competition at the American Society of Mechanical Engineers Regional Student Conference 2000. They are two of the four students that took part in the design competition. The Region Six conference was held in Milwaukee between March 24 and March 26 and pitted SIUC against 32 other universities including Purdue University, the University of Illinois, University of Wisconsin-Madison, and the University of Notre Dame. SIUC had the highest attendance at the conference with 51 students counted.

The design competition challenged a team of four students to make a machine that could move a one-liter bottle, fill it with water and screw a cap onto it. The bottle used for the competition is placed one meter from its final destination.

After the machine is turned on, a claw reaches down and grasps the bottle. Then a car attached to the claw moves across a track toward the direction of the bottle's destination. There is a string attached to the track that tightens as the car moves further away. As the string tightens, the claw rotates up.

By the end of the car's journey, the bottle is turned with the mouth facing up. The claw then drops the bottle down a chute and into a canister. The bottle's drop triggers a switch that empties a bag of water into the bottle. As the bag loses water, it tips over to one side. When it is drained of all water, it triggers another switch that lowers a platform and a capping mechanism that screws the cap onto the bottle.

There were certain restrictions placed on the competition that all the students had to follow. One was that there could only be a single 1.5 volt AA battery per motor.

Walker, who is engineering student council president as well as captain of the team, said the hardest part was the fact that the entire disassembled machine had to fit into the regulation size box. However, all of the teams had to remove their machines out of the box and assemble it within two minutes. The average time was about five minutes.

As he is taking the machine apart, Walker points out that they used everything from fishing line to rubber bands to build the machine.

"We tried to utilize everything we could to build it," Walker said.

The machine from SIUC took third place at the competition. However, Walker and his teammates were the only ones who successfully transported every drop of water into the bottle. Arnold said the hard work they put into the project paid off.

"We put so much time into this one project," Arnold said. "It was a lot of fun."

The design team consisted of Walker and Arnold, as well as Brent Musgrove and Paul Kutcosky.

Other awards won at the conference included second place for the Old Guard Technical Presentation by Matt Bober, which is a 30-minute presentation about research conducted by the speaker. The SIUC American Society of Mechanical Engineers chapter won second place in the Ingersoll-Rand Competition, which rates overall accomplishments.

Another award went to Sonya Parsley, who won a certificate for Outstanding Student Member and the SIUC ASME chapter won first place in three different categories for having the highest attendance.

Walker takes a lot of pride for his ASME chapter and said the results of the competition speaks for itself.

"It says something great about our organization," Walker said.

Students at UNC-Chapel Hill observed their first "Death Penalty Week" on campus last week with call-ins from death-row inmates and speeches from well known activists, such as Sister Helen

Many considered Prejean's free, on-campus speech the highlight of the week. More than 2,000 gathered to hear about her works as a spiritual leader to men on death row. Prejean, who has accompanied five men to their executions, challenged students to consider the racial and economic prejudices that run rampant throughout the judicial system.

She also stressed the dignity of human life. Other events included reenactments of executions and a round-table discussion about the death penalty and the black community.

"It is going to be exciting around here," Paratore said. "It is going to be a new beginning for us, and we will be keeping busy."

The first decisions Dietz will make as the new vice chancellor concern vacancies for the Financial Aid Office director, S3re said.

"Since he has to live with any decision that's made, he wanted some input into it," Paratore said.

In his first few days at SIUC, Dietz will tour campus and departments, getting acquainted with his co-workers and staff, as well as the University.

"He will have a different style and a different way he'll want to use me," Paratore said.

As vice chancellor for Student Affairs and enrollment management, Dietz oversees four areas: Financial Aid, Health Services, University Housing and the Student Center.

The University plans to move the Office of Admissions and Records and the Bursar's Office under Dietz' jurisdiction — the first steps in SIUC's enrollment management effort.

Dietz will also act as dean of students, a special assistant to the chancellor and a tenured professor of educational administration and higher education. He will earn an annual salary of $145,000.

Taylor said he would like student groups to have hayrides, haunted houses and 3-on-3 basketball tournaments.

"The goal is to have multiple little things to spread the crowds around," he said.

Taylor said he requested the money now so it will be saved, rather than spent.

Both Waltmire and Taylor agree that having organized events is the only safe way to ensure that the weekend is successful and the open weekend will stay for another year.

Waltmire said the money will make the weekend positive and ensure that students will be able to have the weekend for years in the future.

"We need to make a successful Halloween," he said. "If we have positive events, we will have a positive reputation."

ADA

Last five years, recent lawsuits have narrowed the definition of a disability. For example, in Murphy v. UPS in 1999, the U.S. Supreme Court decided that nearsightedness correctable with glasses or contacts is not a disability. ADA cases such as this one are decided on a case-by-case basis.

Kathe Klare, special counsel for SIUC's General Counsel's Office, said the ADA has had a profound effect on employment. At the General Counsel's Office, essentially a law firm for the three SIUC campuses, Klare works with the legal aspect of applying the ADA to SIUC.

"It has increased the breadth of services for adults with disabilities," Klare said. "If you have the cognitive or physical ability to do [a job], why should you be discriminated against? Why should those doors be closed?"

And although SIUC has programs to continue progress in the areas of accessibility, challenges remain for both SIUC's Disability Support Services and the ADA. Zimpel agrees with Klare that the legislation has improved employment for the disabled. Both also said job obstacles are still one of the biggest issues to be conquered.

Zimpel emphasized the differences in unemployment rates for those with disabilities versus the majority of Americans. The general unemployment rate in the United States today is 3 to 4 percent, but for those with disabilities, it remains about 70 percent.

"One problem is that students with disabilities who graduate have never had to have jobs," said DSS Director Kathleen Pleško. "That may be their biggest handicap. The problem remains in the area of employment, and that's where change is needed in the future. That's the challenge."

Prior to the ADA, Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act was passed in 1973, protecting students with disabilities who attend federally funded schools from discrimination. And in 1974, the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act was passed. This act entitles disabled children to receive a free and appropriate public education.

Although the ADA is very similar to the Rehabilitation Act, the ADA expanded the services to include public areas. Prior to the ADA, people could not sue for punitive damages, meaning an individual could not sue and receive a monetary award for failure to comply with the law. The ADA is funded and enforced by the federal government.

Zimpel, who has been legally blind since a 1985 military accident aboard a nuclear submarine, said when the ADA was passed in 1990, he was still trying to adapt to the fact that he now had a disability.

"In those first years, it was quite an adjustment," Zimpel said. "It takes awhile to get used to that."

Not only did Zimpel take awhile to adjust, but the country took some time to adjust to the ADA. In 1995, the U.S. government still had groups traveling throughout the country explaining the new law.

But SIUC has been adjusting since the 1950s to such issues as accessibility for the disabled. Delyte Morris, president of SIUC in the 1960s, was an advocate for improving the campus to accommodate returning veterans from World War II. Many of today's programs, such as Women's Services and the Rehabilitation Institute stemmed from Morris' accessibility goals.

Zimpel said although SIUC has traditionally been known for its accessibility, the campus must not rely on its reputation as an excuse to discontinue work, halting SIUC's progress.

"You're only a leader if you continue to lead," Zimpel said.

However, DSS is constantly updating its equipment to aid students with disabilities, according to Pleško.

"We have what we know we need," said Pleško. "We try to stay on top of it, but it's all student driven."

Pleško, compared to her counterparts on other campuses, has an easier job because of SIUC's past.

"The difference in doing the ADA work here and doing it in other places is that the ADA is incorporated into the fabric of SIUC," she said.

Seymour Bryson, the associate chancellor for diversity and ADA compliance officer, organizes compliance of the ADA at SIUC. He said because SIUC has always considered the needs of those with disabilities, the ADA's only effect was the allotment of funds to improve the campus.

"The University's attitude toward the disabled has not changed," Bryson said. "It's always had a commitment to making the campus accessible to the disabled."

The ADA appears to be working, but according to Pleško it has changed during the last 10 years. Initially the ADA served to accommodate those with physical disabilities, while today's cases include learning disabilities, or cognitive disabilities and even psychiatric disabilities. Issues such as fertility have been brought up and considered disabilities in some cases.

In 1991, when Pleško arrived at SIUC, there were no DSS students who had psychiatric disabilities such as Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder. Today, DSS serves about 40 students with such diagnosis.

Technology has, over time, become crucial in assisting people with disabilities. Pleško said many things we do today to aid people with disabilities would not be possible. And those that would be possible are easier to accomplish with the use of technology.

Le Friedner, a 41-year-old Carbondale resident, uses a motorized wheelchair to get around. While Friedner, who is hemi-plegic, is able to push a regular chair around slightly, she is unable to travel far distances.

Friedner, whose disability resulted from a car accident 24 years ago, moved to Carbondale from New Jersey in 1981. Friedner said the town is much more accessible than communities are out East.

While overall things are better here in Carbondale for people like Friedner, who resides in Carbondale Towers, she still encounters some difficulties in public bathrooms, such as at Wal-Mart. Friedner said the ADA still has work to do.

"I don't think it has cracked down on everybody," Friedner said. "They haven't followed through enough. They may have cited problems, but disabilities don't go away. It's this way for life."

However, the ADA has inspired confidence within her to change the world as she sees fit.

"Because of the ADA, I feel if I come across any problems, I can take it to the City Council and they'll have no problem getting somebody to do something about it," Friedner said.

KERRY MALONEY - DAILY EGYPTIAN

SIU men's track and field head coach Bill Cornell sheds a tear at the Salukis last home meet of the season, the 2000 Saluki April Fast Start, where his team placed third Saturday.

An epic career comes full circle in McAndrew

SIU coach Bill Cornell ends final career home match where it began almost 40 years ago

CHRISTINE BOLIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIU men's track and field head coach Bill Cornell had a hard time making it to his own retirement party Saturday.

Unannounced to Cornell, the men's track and field team planned to honor the 60-year-old, who is retiring in May at the end of the season, at McAndrew Stadium at the conclusion of the 2000 Saluki April Fast Start meet, the last home meet of the season.

But the honor would have been a little strange if the honoree was not there.

"I had only two hours of sleep (the night before)," Cornell said. "If it was a normal work day, I would not have gone to work, but since we had a track meet, I had to be there."

After an emotional afternoon, the Salukis placed third of five other teams — Purdue University captured first place (214-50), the University of Northern Iowa (185-50) placed second, SIU scored 113 points in its third-place finish, Southwest Missouri State University (57) placed fourth and Vanderbilt University failed to score any points and came in fifth.

Four first-place finishes paced SIU to its third-place finish. Three of those first-place finishes were earned by seniors. Erik Olson won in the javelin throw (187-1), Brad Bowers won in the long jump (24-2 1/2) and Charles Stelk triumphed in the 400-meter hurdles (53.15). Stelk also placed third in the 110-meter high hurdles, scoring a team-high 16 points for the Salukis.

The other first-place finish came from sophomore Joe Zeibert in the 800-meter run (1:51.36).

Second-place finishes for the Salukis were earned by freshman David Readle (55-3) in the shot put and junior Brock Lovlace (179-6) in the javelin throw. Third-place finishes were junior Chris Owen's personal best in the 3,000-meter steeplechase (9:44.30), junior Joe Hill in the high jump (6-10 3/4) and junior Greg Denagall's 49-1 performance in the triple jump.

Denagall was glad he jumped his personal-best on the day his coach was honored at home for the last time.

"The main thing I wanted to do is show coach what I can do before he leaves," Denagall said, "I wouldn't be on the team if it wasn't for him."

Once the meet was complete, the Salukis stood at the center of McAndrew Stadium and presented Cornell with an engraved watch.

A second milestone for Cornell, along with his wife Rose, was also celebrated. The couple's 39th wedding anniversary coincidentally fell on the same day. The joint celebration was enough to bring Cornell to tears on several occasions throughout the day.

"He's always been a very emotional person — that is nothing new," Rose said. "He has always been like that. I think people respect him and love him for that."

With Cornell coaching for 35 years, 18 of which were at SIU, he has developed a strong relationship with many of his athletes. He once was an athlete at SIU between 1962-65, when he competed on the SIU cross country and track and field teams.

Saturday's meet may have been the last home meet of the season, but Cornell still has six weeks left to enjoy his final season with his Salukis.

"It has not hit me quite yet," Cornell said of his retirement. "I realize I ran my first meet [at McAndrew] when I ran for SIU, and I am retiring in the same stadium. Carbondale will always be home to me. I have been very fortunate all these years."

where they want to put those asylum seekers, that before [asylum seekers] are processed, they are kept in detention."

Frankowka said. "So the point I would like to make is that we should be better prepared in terms of our legal advice to help those in need."

Panelists to address the state of immigration laws in the United States and refugee issues include David Abraham, William Birkett, Suzanne Brown and Pamela Goldberg.

Abraham, a professor at the University of Miami School of Law, is a nationally recognized expert on immigration law. He also teaches citizenship, comparative law, constitutional law and labor law. He will conduct a discussion from 3:10 to 3:30 p.m. called "U.S. Refugee Law & Policy: Are We Doing the Right Thing?"

An associate professor at City University of New York School of Law at Queens College, Goldberg teaches immigration law and international human rights and has written extensively on refugee issues, particularly pertaining to women. She also has served as a staff attorney for the Special Project on Immigrants Rights and was the director of the Central American Program at the Center for Immigrants' Rights.

Goldberg will conduct a lecture from 3:30 to 3:50 p.m. called "Women and Children—Last But Not Longer Least: Recent Shifts in Asylum Law & Policy."

A graduate of the SIU School of Law, Birkett has been district counsel for the Immigration and Naturalization Service office in Seattle since 1998. He will conduct a discussion from 3:50 to 4:10 p.m. called "Enforcing U.S. Refugee Law — An Insider's Perspective."

Brown, an adjunct associate professor in the School of Social Sciences at Saint Louis University, heads the Refugee Project in Southern Illinois. She will conduct a lecture from 4:10 to 4:30 p.m. called "Refugees as Clients — The Rewards & Pitfalls of the Legal Representation of Prosecuted Aliens."

For the Salukis, it's the great outdoors

Men's tennis hitting on all cylinders as outdoor season begins to heat up

ANDY EGGENS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIU men's tennis team got the ball rolling on Saturday. All it has to do now is capitalize.

The Salukis won their second-consecutive match by defeating the University of Illinois-Chicago, 7-0, in their home-opener at the University Courts.

The team did not show any signs of weakness throughout the lineup en route to sweeping every singles and doubles match.

"We didn't have any let-downs," SIU coach Brad Ifner said. "Every guy had a really good match."

The Salukis (4-7) will need to take that momentum into this weekend's key home matches as they face three Missouri Valley Conference foes in two days. The Salukis will face Illinois State University at 11 a.m. Saturday and follow with Bradley University and Indiana State University on Sunday.

Ifner said getting some quality wins after a rough spring break trip should give his team a boost. He thinks the outdoor conditions favored his team against Illinois-Chicago so his players could wear down their opponents and persevere in the matches.

"I think in outdoors, it slows the match down and gives us more of a chance to set up the points for ourselves," Ifner said.

No. 1 player Kenny Hutz said the win gave the team some confidence after the disappointing results from the early spring season.

"Everyone was kind of down on themselves, so playing these schools and getting a win gives us a lot of confidence going into conference [play]," Hutz said.

Juniors Dante Santa Cruz and Valentin Epure continued to roll through their singles opponents, both recording 9-4 marks on the season. Epure is 8-2 since moving to the No. 2 position for the Salukis, good for second in the MVC.

Ifner did not want to look past UIC, which they could have done because Saint Louis University, a team that SIU beat March 22, also defeated the Flames.

execution of his relief pitchers.

"The two home runs that Schoenekase hit were fastballs up in his eyes," Callahan said. "I could roll out of bed and hit those probably. The pitchers have got to know if you don't know how to pitch down in the zone, your chances of having success are very, very slim."

A lack of timely hitting doomed SIU to being swept in Saturday's hotly-contested doubleheader.

Evansville took an early 2-0 lead in the first game on a Wes Carroll home run, but the Salukis scored twice to tie the game in the bottom of the second. But Carroll continued to ruin SIU's day with an RBI single in the fourth that gave his team a 3-2 lead.

The Aces added another run in the sixth and would hold on for a 4-2 win, but before some major theatrics took place. The Salukis had a golden opportunity to steal the win in their final at-bat of the seven-inning affair.

SIU loaded the bases for Andy Cenkush with two men out against Aces' starter Ryan Miller, and Evansville head coach Jim Brownlee elected to leave Miller in the game.

The move worked. Cenkush sent a long fly ball heading for the right field fence, but Schoenekase made a nifty backpedaling catch on the warning track to squelch the Salukis' comeback bid.

Things did not get any better for the Salukis, who lost the second game of the doubleheader 5-3 despite eight solid innings of three-run ball from starting pitcher Brendon Fort. The game was tied 3-3 going into the ninth, but Aces' first baseman Vince Serafini lined a one out, bases loaded single to center field off Jim Pecoraro to plate the winning runs.

Just like the first game of the doubleheader, the Salukis fell just short of stealing the win in their final at-bat. SIU loaded the bases with one out in the bottom of the ninth, but the promising inning fizzled when Steve Mazzola's ground ball led to a force out at the plate and Scott Boyd struck out swinging on an off-speed pitch from Aces' reliever Willie Glen.

The Salukis' win in the series took a big-time effort from SIU staff ace Jake Alley, who was too much for the Aces in Friday's series opener. Alley, who came into the game after three consecutive shaky outings, pitched a complete game shutout. He allowed only six hits in the game, but still had to sweat things out in the ninth.

The Aces had put two men on base when Anthony Molina came off the bench to pinch-hit with two men out. Molina worked the count to 3-2 before Alley struck him out to preserve the win with a nice fastball on the outside corner.

The Salukis' lone run off talented Aces' pitcher Preston Larrison resulted from solid execution in the bottom of the seventh inning.

Boyd led off the inning with a single and was bunted to second base by Jeff Stanek. Cenkush followed with a line single to right field, putting runners on first and third with one out for Roman Schooley. Schooley hit a slow chopper to first base, and Boyd raced across the plate while Schooley was forced out at first.

But Friday's win dimmed as the weekend progressed. It was an especially frustrating series for SIU because the Salukis received solid pitching Saturday but couldn't hit well enough, and the exact reverse scenario played out on Sunday.

NCAA may delay ban on summer recruiting

MALCOLM MORAN
CHICAGO TRIBUNE

INDIANAPOLIS — The controversial effort of the NCAA to eliminate summer basketball recruiting may be delayed for a year while the association leadership attempts to build what it defines as a new culture around the sport.

NCAA Executive Director Celdric Dempsey said at a news conference that he would support a legislative proposal to eliminate the summer as a time for coaches to evaluate prospective recruits. But Dempsey would prefer to have the implementation delayed to allow the association and its membership to "spend a year trying to rebuild a culture that is more beneficial to prospective student-athletes."

The proposal to eliminate the summer evaluation period—and diminish the influence of basketball camps and outside competition—is part of a package to be considered next month at a meeting of the NCAA's management council.

A version of the legislation produced by a Division I working group to study basketball issues calls for a reduction of the July evaluation period from 24 to 14 days, to be applied during the period from July 8 through July 31.

Dempsey has supported a stronger version, put forward by the Big Ten and Southeastern conferences, that would eliminate the entire summer evaluation period and increase the evaluation period during the academic year from 40 to 70 days.

Dempsey, who met Thursday with representatives of the National Association of Basketball Coaches, acknowledged there is resistance to the proposal. Smaller colleges with limited recruiting budgets have found the camps useful because they can provide access, often within driving distance, to dozens of potential recruits that might otherwise remain overlooked. Dempsey, without making specific references, stressed the potentially damaging influence of coaches in summer programs.

"I would like to see people who have the interest of student-athletes at heart doing the advising," Dempsey said.

TED SCHURTER - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Saluki second baseman Joe Meeks could not believe the umpire's safe call during a play at second base Sunday afternoon at Abe Martin Field. SIU dropped its third game of the weekend to the Evansville Purple Aces, 14-9.

Baseball slides downhill in series

Faltering defense plays big role in Salukis losing three of four games to Evansville

JAY SCHWAB
SPORTS EDITOR

Any time a baseball team records 19 hits and still loses by five runs, something has gone badly awry.

Such was the case for SIU head coach Dan Callahan and his Salukis Sunday, as SIU lost 14-9 against the University of Evansville at Abe Martin Field. The loss gave the Purple Aces (21-6, 6-2 MVC) three wins in the four-game series, with SIU's lone win coming in Friday's opener.

Sunday's game was an entertaining one, but not in a positive way for SIU. The Salukis committed a ghastly five errors in the game, and the SIU bullpen trio of Ryan Aird, Billy Hardin and Pat Hon was rocked as the Aces rallied from a 7-4 deficit to win.

After losing by 10 runs to the University of Illinois on Tuesday and dropping three games this weekend, SIU (12-15, 4-8) has clearly hit a rough patch in the season.

"It's too early to panic, but I see things I don't like," Callahan said. "We've talked about it as a team how we've got to clean some things up on defense — it's one thing to talk about it, it's another thing to get it done."

Although Sunday's game was sloppily played throughout, the Salukis held the upper hand after the first six innings. But as it turned out, the Aces saved their trump card for the seventh, when they scored eight runs to turn an 8-6 deficit into a 14-8 lead.

Evansville outfielder Doug Schoenkase padded his stats at the expense of the Salukis in the fateful inning, clubbing two homers to help put the game away.

Callahan questioned the mindset and

Softball loses marathon to Bradley

Salukis take Braves to 18 innings before falling to MVC foe, 4-2

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIU softball team could have used a little advice from the Saluki cross country team Sunday concerning the logistics of winning a marathon.

The Salukis lost three of four Missouri Valley Conference contests this weekend, the last of which came in a dramatic 18-inning thriller against Bradley University in Peoria.

Saluki junior left fielder Amanda Rexroat smashed a two-run home run in the sixth inning to tie the game at two, setting up what would become the longest game in history for both schools, as well as the longest game in the history of the MVC.

The game endured three hours and 43 minutes before Bradley outfielder Kim Sunfield delivered the game-winning hit scoring Gina Calderone. The Braves (14-15, 3-1 MVC) scored an insurance run to seal the 4-2 victory.

Bradley hurler Cristin Evans (6-8) remarkably pitched all 18 innings, allowing only eight hits and striking out 13.

Saluki senior Carisa Winters pitched 12 innings of relief, striking out 15 before suffering the loss, which dropped her record to 12-6 on the year.

In game one, a two-out wild pitch from Winters scored the game-winning run in the bottom of the seventh inning for Bradley, who won the game 2-1.

Kerri Evans, the sister of Bradley's game two pitcher Cristin Evans, took a no-hit bid into the seventh inning, but the no-hitter was broken up by a leadoff single from Saluki junior center fielder Marta Viehhaus. It was the only hit the Salukis (26-12, 1-3 MVC) would muster all ballgame.

The Salukis opened MVC play Saturday, splitting a doubleheader against MVC foe the University of Northern Iowa in Cedar Falls, Iowa.

Winters shut down Northern Iowa in game one, holding the Panthers to only one hit in the 2-0 victory.

The game was scoreless until the sixth inning when SIU junior left fielder Amanda Rexroat tripled to lead off the inning. Pinch hitter Jenny Guenther singled Rexroat in to score the winning run.

In game two, the Panthers (15-21, 1-1 MVC) shut down the Saluki offense, holding it to only five hits in the 2-0 setback, which ended the Salukis eight-game win streak. A pair of solo home runs by Panther third baseman Lindsay Wood and shortstop Kylie Sloan were the only runs scored in the game.

Stremsterfer (7-5) picked up the loss in game allowing seven hits and two runs in seven innings of work.

SPORTS BRIEFS

Women's track team places second during weekend

The SIU women's track and field team placed second of four teams at the 2000 Saluki April Fast Start at McAndrew Stadium on Saturday.

Missouri Valley Conference foe Southwest Missouri State University (185) placed first. The Salukis scored 153 points in the meet, enough to beat the University of Northern Iowa (143) and Vanderbilt University (86).

Leading the Salukis was junior Caryn Poliquin, who placed in three events — the hammer throw, which she placed first with a toss of 162-2, the shot put and a third-place finish in the discus.

Freshman Rimna Turevsky placed first in both the long jump (17-8 1/4) and triple jump (40-0 3/4). Senior Jenny Monaco and freshman Latrice Gray both finished first in their respective events — Monaco (10:11.46) in the 3,000-meter run and Gray (5-4 1/4) in the high jump.

The Salukis will next travel to Cape Girardeau, Mo., Saturday for the All-Sport Invitational at Southeast Missouri State University.
