Billy Carter visits Carbondale to promote mobile home sales

By Juli Lawrence
Student Writer

Billy Carter likes his new job promoting mobile homes so much that he says, “If I didn’t need the pay to eat, I’d do it for nothing.”

The former president’s brother has sold his famous gas station in Plains, Ga., and hits the road often to tour promotionally. He stopped in Southern Illinois Friday through Sunday to make his pitch and to reflect on his much-publicized life with salty good humor.

Billy Carter signs autographs at Royal Mobile Homes in Marion.

The unopened cans of Billy Beer are a reminder because the beer is no longer brewed.

Hunching over a table in a Carbondale lounge, Carter sipped club soda, announcing in his thick Southern drawl that he had given up alcohol. “Even Billy Beer.” His sandy hair, bipolar disorder and brown kangaroo boots remained, however, to call to mind his good boy image.

Carter said he left Georgia “to go to work.” He will return to Plains to visit, but will never go back to live.

“ heck, I’m a Yankee now,” he laughed.

His friendship with his brother, since last year’s election has been pretty good. “I see him every other week,” he said.

The former president is in Plains writing a book about his years in the White House. Billy said, adding, “I’d rather not be in it.”

He admitted to possibly following those footsteps and writing his own book sometime in the future.

In 1980 Carter was investigated by a Senate subcommittee concerning $250,000 in loans from the Libyan government. “The only one on that committee who had a lick of sense was a Republican,” he said. “I’m not a Democrat from Indiana, was the worst of all. He didn’t have any sense in his whole head.”

When he had begun repaying those loans, Carter repeated, “That’s what I said.”

“None of your damn business,” he shot back.

“Little bit I’ve seen of Reagan’s policy has been pretty good.” Carter said.

“He’s a doing a good job. What he wants to do with his tax cut and all that is great, but I’m not

Reagan says he’ll fire strikers, orders air controllers to work

By Mike Frisliber
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Air traffic controllers illegally walked off their jobs Monday and crippled commercial flights in the first nationwide strike of federal workers in history. President Reagan called them lawbreakers and gave them until 5 a.m. today to return to work or be fired.

“I must tell those who failed to report for duty this morning, those who are in violation of the law, and those who have forfeited their jobs and will be terminated,” Reagan declared.

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis vowed not to resume bargaining with the controllers’ union until the strike ends. He said any controller still on strike at 11 a.m. today would never again get a job with the government. He said that was true no matter how many were arrested.

“If we’re all fired, I want to know who’s going to work the airplanes.” said a defiant Lewis Monday. Reagan said he would not order his members to go back to work. The FAA said after he was served with papers ordering him to return to court later in the day.

The airline industry estimated the strike might cost the U.S. economy a quarter of a billion dollars a day.

Three Air Force jets brought local flight controllers to Washington in time to participate in the final debate on Reagan’s tax-cut proposals. One passenger, Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, said if the strike continues “the union should be broken up and its leaders put in jail.”

FBI agents on 15 cities were dispatched to gather evidence that could be used to bring criminal charges against the striking controllers. Such charges could result in fines or jail sentences.

Having 10 to 15 percent of the country’s 14,200 daily commercial flights were operating, guided by 2,500 supervisory and non-striking controllers, with military controllers standing by if needed.

Sixteen of the 17 unionized air traffic controllers at the two Southern Illinois FAA towers went on strike Monday morning, but spokesman Charles Ehert said that one of the airport’s two daily flights to St. Louis left at 7:57 a.m. The 9:47 departure to Carbondale was canceled. Ehert said the same schedule will be in effect Tuesday.

“Travelers should proceed with this information,” he said.

The airport control tower was staffed Monday morning by the FAA tower chief and one unidentified controller who was defying the nationwide strike. The tower hours have been reduced.

At Southern Illinois Airport near Carbondale, tower operations were reduced Monday morning as all its eight air traffic controllers honored the strike. The FAA tower chief also will be controlling air traffic there and hours will be reduced.

The airport is the home base for Air Illinois commuter airlines.

Lawbook delays move of Law School library

By Doug Hamm
Staff Writer

Law school faculty will begin moving into the new Hiram E. Loyd School of Law next week.

If the building’s library will remain empty until a lawsuit involving construction of essential bookstacks costing $10,000 is decided, according to Allen Hakke, supervising architect and engineer at the Illinois School of Law.

The completion of the library hinges stalled because the New York Corp. of Red Bank, N.J., filed for bankruptcy. Estey contracted to furnish new bookstacks for the library but the company became financially unable to finish manufacturing and installing the shelves.

Estey has asked the court for time to reorganize and secure financial backing so it can complete installation of the bookstacks.

"We hope to have the bookstacks installed by Christmas break at the latest. As of last Friday, we still hadn’t received a definite date on the bookstacks and all we can do is wait for the attorneys to reach an agreement in the meantime," Hakke said.

Law books are stored in showers in the women’s restrooms of the old law building. The showers are left open when the building was a dorm.
Job, salary study nears finish

By Brenda Wilgenbusch

A study to determine inequities between pay, positions and salaries at SIUC will probably be finished by the end of September, Barbara Spears, coordinator of the seven-member evaluation committee, said Monday.

The study, being handled by Hay Associates and the University committee, started last week. Questionnaires were sent to about 500 employees. The total cost is about $25,000, Spears said.

The questionnaires asked for information about job descriptions and salary. Spears said the answers are being evaluated so that adequate pay will be given for each job. The questionnaires were sent to Hay about a month ago and evaluations were returned to the University July 30.

The committee has met several times since then to review each questionnaire and Hay's findings, Spears said. The process is taking much longer than was expected, she said, because it takes a lot of work.

About 450 questionnaires were submitted to Hay. Spears said the University committee is going over them in an effort to find errors. The rationale for any changes must be noted and substantiated, she said.

After this, the committee will receive its findings to Hay. Spears said, where a final consensus may be reached. Then a consensus on the findings is reached. Hay will run them through a computer to correlate University positions with comparable positions at other universities, she said. Then the committee will start its effort to change things, Spears said, "but I doubt we can."

However, she said she hopes to return the reviews to the committee by the end of this week. Spears said, "but I doubt we can."

Tax cuts get Senate's final approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Monday gave final approval to the largest tax cut in history after rejecting an effort by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy to reduce the bill's tax breaks for the oil industry.

The measure was passed on a 66-38 vote and sent to the House, where it is expected to be approved Tuesday and sent to President Reagan for his signature.

New Iranian president takes office

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Mohammad Ali Rajai took office Monday as Iran's new president, replacing ousted Abolhassan Banisadr, who said from his Paris exile Saturday that the election results were rigged and only 2.7 million of Iran's 21 million eligible voters went to the polls.

Candidates for computer post to visit

By Brenda Wilgenbusch

The last two of the three finalists selected for consideration by the search committee for director of computing affairs will visit SIUC this week, Terry Mathias, doctoral coordinator of the president's office, said Monday.

Each candidate will undergo about two days of in-depth interviews with the president, committees and various students and faculty, Mathias said.

A public meeting will be held for the second candidate. James J. Lennon, who is director of planning and information systems at the Community College of Baltimore, at 11:30 Tuesday morning in the Student Center.

Another will be held Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 for the last candidate.

Charles Blunt, director of information and administrative services at Pennsylvania State University, he said.

The first of the three finalists, Arthur S. Gistler II, arrived in Carbondale last Thursday and left on Saturday. Mathias said Gistler is director of university computing, data processing and professor of computer and information science at the University of Oregon in Eugene, he said.

Business owners are unhappy about convention center plans

By Joe Agnew
Staff Writer

Business owners who will be affected by the construction of the downtown hotel-convention center and parking garage are still waiting word from city hall on when they will have to relocate. Some have also indicated that the prices being offered for their businesses are too low.

Eighteen businesses bounded by Elm and Monroe streets and Illinois and University avenues face having to relocate due to construction of the 10-story, 230-room hotel and convention center and the 300-space parking garage.

The hotel-convention center will go on the block bounded by the two streets, and Illinois and University avenues. Don Monty, director of Community Development, said that until the city receives the $2 million Urban Development Action Grant from the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development, it won't be able to start the acquisition of properties in the area.

Monty said the city doesn't want to tie up businesses until financing is secure. "This process takes time. If I were somebody down there, I wouldn't expect to be displaced until the beginning of next year," he said.

Monty said the businesses will be purchased through federally regulated land acquisition procedures, which include formal notification by letter and personal visits by the developers.

Monty said that last year the city solicited options to purchase businesses in the proposed area.

Tom Fleig, manager of Barbecue at 207 W. Walnut, said he thought the idea of a convention center "stinks." Monty also said that owners and tenants in the area are eligible for relocation funds.

Don Dalessio, owner of the Monty Trophy Company at 212 S. Illinois, said he is moving partly because of the city's intention to go through with the project, and partly because "I'm tired of playing with their game."

James Cleland, owner of the Southern Illinois Gem Company, 207 W. Walnut, said he would "just wait and see" what happens in regard to the start of construction for the project. "We're concerned with our loss. We want them to pay us for the loss we will suffer because of construction, and the cost of having to relocate," Cleland said.

The director of the University of Illinois' vivarium has resigned, while the director of career planning and placement is one of the finalists being considered for a position at the University of Pittsburgh.

William R. Voss, director of the University vivarium since 1978, left SIUC Friday to become associate director of the animal care center at the University of Texas at Galveston.

Harvey Ideus, director of career planning and placement at SIUC, is one of the candidates being considered for placement director at Pitt.

ACTION Grant from the federal Community Development said he doesn't know if he will relocate, he said. "I'm tired of playing with their game."

Armed robber steals wallet

Carbondale police arrested a Chicago man early Monday morning and charged him with the armed robbery of a Carbondale man.

Arrested was Carl L. Brown, 20, of 2242 W. 15th Place in Chicago. The victim was James Lundry of Route 7, Carbondale.

A police spokesman said Lundry was waiting for a bus across from the Amtrak depot at 103 W. Monroe St. at about 3 a.m. Monday when a man approached, brandishing a pistol. The man took Lundry's wallet, which contained $94, keys, a pocket knife and a watch, and then fled the scene in a 1973 Chevrolet Monte Carlo.

The suspect was seen driving the vehicle at 3:14 a.m.

Head of vivarium leaves; placement director may be there tomorrow.

What things could your fee money buy?

I have no problem with the ticket system. I have been happy with the concerts at the SIU Arena. I would not like to see it change. But I have spent over six nights sleeping in line. I would love to want to thank the Arena for keeping the system as fair as possible. I also want to thank the Arena management for realizing the amount of money we campers carry, by keeping SIU security close by in the days that preceded the first day of ticket sales.

The arena was fair for a lottery or some other organized ticket system have been based around one issue, Some people think it is as important to you, then you have the potential to go out and get something. But I don't like it so much. At least one time, I saw a man out and did some quick three photography classes. 21

You'd be amazed Alan Sculley. He attempts to explain that by saying that no I would like to buy. But I don't have to use it. The money to provide material for two photography classes. 21

I do not claim to be touching on the 'real' issue, maybe I am an everyday man. But a for-profit system for gun related crimes seems to be a very popular one. 2. a person rob a gas station; 2. shooks the attendant;

Letter showed author’s insecurity

The letter is in response to “Unsafe conditions in SIU cafeteria” by Tom Curley in the April 21, 1981, issue of The Daily Egyptian. Although the author is concerned about the poor conditions in the cafeteria, the letter focuses more on the author’s personal experiences and feelings rather than addressing the issue thoroughly.

The author mentions the prevalence of overweight students in the cafeteria and expresses his concern about the food being served. However, the letter does not provide any concrete solutions or suggestions for improvement. Instead, it seems to be more of a personal reflection on the author’s observation of the cafeteria’s conditions.

The author concludes by expressing his hope that something will be done to address the issue, but ultimately, the letter doesn’t offer a clear path forward or a call to action. It seems to be more of a lamentation on the state of the cafeteria rather than a constructive piece of writing.
Morris Library obtains grant, will acquire philosophy papers

By Vicki Olgeaty

Morris Library will receive two grants totaling $334,000 in fiscal 1982 and 1983 that will enable it to purchase the Library of Living Philosophers archives, Kenneth Koch, dean of library affairs, has announced.

The grants, totaling the anticipated total library grants to $170,000 for fiscal 1982. They will also allow the library to convert to the Library Computer System, a statewide computer-based data file, Peterson announced Friday.

A $180,000 grant from the U.S. Office of Education will be used to acquire the living philosophers collection, which is owned by Paul Schilpp, professor emeritus of philosophy.

The Library of Living Philosophers, conceived and edited over the years in a collection of criticism about living philosophers and their comments on the criticism, Albert Einstein, John Dewey and Bertrand Russell are among the philosophers studied in the 15 volumes.

The Schilpp papers have been on deposit at special collections, but will be available for use Friday to the University to permanently acquire them, said David Koch, University archivist and curator of special collections.

The grant money also will be used to hire staff that will examine all the philosophy collections for conservation and restoration needs. Koch said. Some of the collection is in fragile condition, he said.

The grant money also will be used for conservation and restoration needs. Koch said. Some of the collection is in fragile condition, he said.

The SIU-C grant money also will be used for conversion of library files to the LCS. The $174,000 grant is the second year of a three year project. SIU-C received $50,000 from HECA last year and will request $112,000 for fiscal 1983, the third year of the project.

When the library is hooked into the system in early 1983, library users will have access to about 5 million books, including those at other state university libraries.

The remainder of the grant will be used for computer terminal space for about 66,000 records from the book collection will be pulled from the card catalog and converted to machine-readable form.

A portion of the grant will be used to purchase 42 computer terminals. Half of the terminals will be available to the public with at least six located in the card catalog room. Chaff said.

The remainder of the $174,000 will pay to prepare the terminal sites. Phone lines, electrical cables and electrical conduit will connect the terminals to a central unit that will tie in with the centralized data center in Chicago. Chaff said.

Creativity research to be in archives

Extensive research on creativity done by the Foundation for the Philosophy of Creativity, is nearly ready for permanent residency in the SIU-C archives. Although he couldn't give an exact date, William Minor, emeritus executive director of the foundation, said the collections will be ready for use in 1983.

The research will be housed in the archives in the basement of Morris Library and will be available to anyone who has a scholarly interest in it. The Library will store the entire collection and has agreed to provide more space for further research in the future.

According to Minor, the basic premise of the Foundation is to determine through educational research how to best release one's creativity. Institutions studied include the family, the schools and the political system, he said.

Minor said the value of the collections cannot be estimated.

Center helps students gain edge in job market

Recruiters who come to the SIU-C campus in search of employees do not seem to care that SIU-C is known to many as a party school, said Richard Gray, director of the Career Planning and Placement Center.

"No recruiters have ever mentioned it to me, except in a joking manner," Gray said. SIU-C's party school image was reinforced two years ago by a scathing article in Chicago Magazine that dwelt on the fun and games of undergraduates here. The story was something of an embarrassment to SIU-C administrators, who maintain that it is inaccurate and undeserved.

Gray said many of the recruiters are alumni of the university and thus are able to keep the alleged image in perspective.

The Career Planning and Placement Center, located in Woody Hall, Room 304, is designed to help students find jobs they can obtain upon graduation. Gray said that the placement center not only helps students nail down jobs. It also (1) assists students in developing job-winning resumes—the kind that attract employers and put forward the student's best foot; (2) offers job workshops that introduce students to the intricacies of looking for suitable employment; and (3) presents interview training sessions that teach students how to: set, speak and dress for a job interview.

Special Education receives grant

The Department of Special Education will receive a grant of $240,000 this fall from the Office of Special Education and Rehabilitation Services of the Department of Education, part of $140,000,000 in grants during the next three years.

The money will be used to train as many as 40 minority doctoral students for leadership positions in special education, according to Sidney Miller, associate professor of special education.

According to Gray, poise, appearance and other personal characteristics are the No. 1 factors interviewers consider when choosing an employee.

Survey information indicates that although recruiters do take grade point average into account, academic performance takes a back seat to personal characteristics, he said. Gray contends that many students get jobs because they have gone through the placement program. He said students who use the service can have a decided advantage getting a job.

Gray said about 7,000 persons are in the "active file" at any given time and that all students should use the service. According to Gray, most of the companies that come to SIU-C return.

We have a clientele of companies that comes back because of the quality of our students," he said. Big-name companies recruiting include Texas Instruments, Inland Steel, Caterpillar, Carnation, Frito-Lay and Eastern Airlines. Many state and federal government agencies also recruit SIU-C graduates. Gray advises interested students to register with CPPC at least six months before graduation and to take part in the three career days held in fall, winter and spring.

"In general, everybody is a Democrat if you vote, but the Republicans aren't doing too bad," he said. Carter said he was in Southern Illinois about 20 years ago but thought it was "kind of in the middle of nowhere." He said he doesn't do much fishing, adding that what he liked to do best was "sell mobile homes.""I'm not enduring nothing," he said of his mobile sales job with Tidwell Industries. "I sell the homes to the dealers, who sell to the public. I like the traveling, but the only time we have off is when we go from one place to another." Carter bragged about the company's planes. "We've got a twin-engine, a 707 and a Lear jet," he said. At Royal Mobile Homes, where Carter appeared to be in public, his popularity was evident. "Even people who disliked

BILLY came and within 30 secounds they liked him. He ain't changed," said Bones Creed, vice-president of sales at Tidwell Industries. Carter spent the days signing autographs and joking with the crowd. "I was impressed with his personality," said Clarence Campbell, a salesman for Royal Mobile homes. "He talked about his personal problems like anyone else." Fritz Emil, 73, of Carbondale, waited all day at the Marion operation for Carter to hear a song he had written called "Let's Put Jimmy Carter Back in the White House." Emil, who has composed over 400 songs, said he became impressed with his personal problems "as a misaligned vertebra," and he described the "lay of the land." 'I'm sending a copy with my personal problems," said Dave Coracy, vice-president of Carbondale's B and A Travel Service. "However, each new day will bring something different. Bad nutrition may stifle creativity

By Tom Hogensen
Student Writer

Does your diet consist mainly of hot dogs, cola, and coffee? If so, you may be stunting your creative ability, says William Minor, emeritus executive director of the Foundation for Philosophy of Creativity. People who suffer from malnutrition will not be as creative as those who have well-balanced diets, Minor said. Junk food, soda pop and caffeine are likely to keep people from realizing their creative abilities.

Minor, who taught philosophy at the University of Missouri at Columbia, said that everyone has a creative ability to some degree. "Creativity is a product of the highly complex central nervous system," Minor said. "There is a creative interchange, in health, between cells, organs and the systems."

According to Minor, the most creative people are awakened intellectually. "Highly creative people are educated in their total personality," he said. "They have confidence in their abilities, but also sense their limitations." People must be willing to learn to become truly creative, Minor said. "The context of learning provides conditions truly creative," Minor explained.

"Some people are more likely to be creative because of the academic environment they're exposed to," said Minor. "The amount of creativity that flows from school systems depends on the administration, faculty and students. Some schools cultivate creativity, while others do not."

In addition to junk foods, Minor said, various forms of authoritarianism obstruct creativity in social and individual life. Certain institutions, not all churches, tend to fail in this category. Minor said. "There is a basic distinction between authoritarianism based on fixed opinion, as opposed to knowledge based on evidence. Authority that is 'good' is based on evidence and not mere opinion."

MVC officials still evaluating plans for two-division football

By Mike Anthony

The Missouri Valley Conference will have divisional football play in 1982, but a definitive plan has not been determined.

The concept of divisional football was advertised last year by the conference, but was not supposed to go into effect until 1983. The proposal was made this year to go divisional by 1982, because it is the thought of most administrators to alleviate the cost in the long run.

The plan, devised by Jack Jessell, Indiana State's faculty representative, is the plan that states that a team will play two games against the division (twice at home and away) each year, and the other two members once. Also, teams will play a team from the other division once each year on a rotating basis.

The east division would include Illinois-Illinois State University, and the west division would include SIU-C, Saluki State, and SIU-C, East St. Louis.

The split season would consist of the regular season and a playoff. Teams emerging as winners in the division will play a mini-playoff series with the first division. The winning team in each division will then play a third game against the team in the other division for a third divisional championship.

The proposed plan is supposed to go into effect until 1985. The proposal was made by telephone call to athletic directors that the MVC officials still evaluating the plans for the 1982 season.

CHICAGO (AP) — A scheduled meeting of major league baseball owners last week to gradually recovering from the effects of the strike has been postponed again because of the air traffic controllers strike.

The meeting, originally set for Tuesday, was rescheduled for Thursday in Chicago. If the travel is still blocked on that date, the owners will discuss the settlement of baseball's strike plan and plans for the remainder of the season by conference telephone call.

One choice is to finish the season in regular fashion and have a playoff. A popular alternative is to split the season in half and start new races when championship play resumes Monday following the All-Star Game in Cleveland Sunday night.

The split season, common-place in the minor leagues, appears to be the way the owners will go because interest would be stimulated among teams that are all but out of their respective races.

The New York Yankees, the Oakland A's, the Los Angeles Dodgers and the Philadelphia Phillies probably would favor the split season because they already have clinched playoff berths by being declared winners of the first half.

Teams emerging as winners in the division would play a mini-playoff series with the first division to determine which team would play the third team in its own division. Teams that are all but out of their respective races would-be stimulated among teams that are all but out of regular play.
