ISSC awards up, but SIU-C students to get smaller share

By Ginny Lee
Staff Writer

Despite a $9.5 million increase in the Illinois State Scholarship Commission's award pool, SIU-C students will most likely get a smaller amount of the total than they did last year, a University official said Monday.

Dan Mann, assistant director of the Office of Student Work and Financial Assistance, said that his office expects SIU-C's share to be less than the $3.6 million its students received last year because of a change in the ISSC's eligibility formula.

"We think it will be less despite the increase in tuition and fees," he said. "The formula has been redefined to favor those students at private schools with the higher tuition cost."

Mann said that a "sizeable number" of SIU-C students will be affected by that change, although he said that it was too early to know exactly how many will be affected. Last year, 4,965 SIU-C students received ISSC monetary awards, he said.

The increase in ISSC's 1983-84 appropriation — a result of the tax increase passed by the Legislature in July — will allow it to award between 10,000 and 12,000 more scholarships than last year, according to Millie Wright, assistant director of the ISSC Office of Informational Services.

Last year, the ISSC gave out 106,000 awards, totaling $93 million, but as of July 31, the commission has received 17 percent more applications than at the same time last year, Wright said.

"We have a 17 percent increase already, so that's big," she said. "We're just lucky to get this extra money."

Mann said that despite an increase in the number of applications for all types of financial aid as of June 30 this year compared to the same time last year, it is not yet clear whether more students are applying for aid this year or whether more are just applying earlier.

Last year at the end of June, the financial aid office had received 11,291 ACT applications, which are the general applications students must fill out to apply for all types of aid, Mann said. This year at that time, the office had

Early release of prisoners is 'a surrender' Daley says

CHICAGO (AP) — Restoring the early release program to relieve overcrowded prisons would continue the "wholesale slashing" of dangerous convicts' sentences and undermine public faith in the justice system, Cook County State's Attorney Richard Daley said Monday.

"People are frightened," Daley, brandishing a stack of letters from the families of crime victims, told a legislative hearing. "We have examples of people sentenced to prison for 10 years on a rape charge who are out in four and committing crimes days after their release."

"To restore early release would amount to a surrender," he concluded.

Daley was the third witness to testify before the Illinois House Judiciary Committee chaired by state Rep. Aaron Jaffe, D-Skokie, which convened to consider proposals for an emergency solution to the state's overcrowded prisons.

The threat of overcrowding became a reality last month when the Illinois Supreme Court struck down the early release program, under which inmates were credited with "meritorious good time" and their sentences shortened by varying degrees. Justices said 90 days was the maximum an inmate's sentence could be reduced under present law.

The house panel is considering legislative remedies, among them restoring the early release program and less restrictive requirements for putting two inmates in cells built for one.

Daley and Will County State's Attorney Edward Pelka on Sunday proposed an Emergency Prison Expansion Act, which calls for the temporary doubling-up of inmates in about 2,500 cells and construction of modular housing.

"I do not believe it is a long-term solution," said Daley, who reiterated a call for building new prisons. "But it is a better alternative than early release."

Culen and Mahoney, however, said early release was preferable to putting two inmates in a cell built for one.

Mahoney pointed out that prisoners granted early release "do not re-offend (commit another crime) at a greater rate than those who serve their sentences."

Six commended for heroism by city

By Jeanna Hunter
Staff Writer

The astute observations and quick thinking of six people helped Carbondale Police catch several suspected burglars and one suspected rapist this summer.

Police Chief Ed Hogan said that the police department had more citizen involvement in investigations during the past three weeks than in the last 10 years. He said the police were grateful for the assistance and pleased and honored by the contributions.

Russell Kilpatrick, Tyler Smith, Dan Balehen, Brett Daugherty and Norman Horner were honored with citizens commendations at a press conference Friday. Dan Mayhugh was not present at the press conference but he was also awarded a citizen commendation.

"We don't advocate citizens going out chasing people on the streets, especially if it puts them in jeopardy," Hogan said. Nevertheless, that's exactly what Balehen, Mayhugh and Smith did.

A woman's panicked call for help during the early morning hours of July 24 brought Smith, Balehen and Mayhugh outside where they saw a man with a woman pinned to the ground across the street. Smith shouted at the man, who fled on foot.

The three chased the suspect and caught him as he was trying to escape on a bicycle and held him for police. The suspect is under arrest for attempted rape and aggravated assault.

Observation is easier and not as dangerous as participation, and that's what police recommend, Hogan said people should be alert to anything out of the ordinary and should observe at a safe distance.

Kilpatrick, who was across the street at the Carbondale bus depot, was watching out his window on the morning that Don's Jewelry was robbed. He said he noticed the men leaving the store lock the door. He knew this was not a usual part of the store keeper's routine.

When Kilpatrick went over to investigate, he found the victims tied up in the store. They had already tripped the alarm which notified police, but Kilpatrick was able to supply descriptions that led to the arrest of three suspects and recovery of much of the stolen property, Hogan said.

Horner and Daugherty, city code enforcement officials, were driving by the Rex Loan Company when Horner pointed out how strange it was that two men were wearing stocking caps in mid-summer.

About that time, Horner said, the men pulled the stockings.

Communists arrested in Sri Lanka

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — The government rounded up members of three banned leftist political parties Monday and temporarily lifted a nationwide curfew so people could buy food after a week of ethnic warfare in which more than 200 people were killed.

Douglas Liyanage, secretary of the Ministry of State, reported orders for the arrest of "a number" of members of the Communist Party, which has one seat in the 168-member Parliament, and the Janatha Vimukthi Peramusa and Nova Sana Samaj parties, which have none.

Cabinet ministers have also said there is evidence "foreign elements" masterminded the alleged plot. The Colombo Sun in an editorial Monday called for the closing of all Soviet bloc embassies, and specifically those of the Soviet Union and East Germany.

Economist says recovery will slow

PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — Economist Alan Greenspan told U.S. governors today that the recovery will begin to slow dramatically in 1984.

Greenspan, who was former President Ford's chief economic adviser, also said no real cure for the nation's economic problems is likely until after the 1984 presidential elections.

Greenspan said the problem underlying the recovery is that it is based on consumer goods and short-lived assets that are generally immune to the pressures of high interest rates. In a traditional recovery, this stage is followed by heavier capital investment and spending on durable goods which require financing.

Sears real-estate division sues state

CHICAGO (AP) — Coldwell Banker, the real-estate subsidiary of Sears, Roebuck and Co., filed suit Monday over an interpretation of state law it says will prevent its offering Illinois homebuyers a Sears' merchandise and services discount program.

Under the Sears Home Buyer's Savings Program, those who buy homes from Coldwell Banker receive a coupon book offering discounts on Sears merchandise and services.

Coldwell Banker had intended to offer the program in Illinois "as soon as possible." The suit contends that the law has been incorrectly interpreted and asks that the state be permanently enjoined from enforcing the law.

China and U.S. agree on export

GENEVA (AP) — China and the United States have broken a seven-month deadlock and signed a pact that sets new quotas on Chinese textile and clothing exports to America, a U.S. official says.

Chief U.S. negotiator Peter Murphy said Sunday that the agreement has improved "understanding between the two sides" — after a trade battle that strained political relations and curtailed Chinese purchases of U.S. farm products.

Reports have Percy far ahead in battle for campaign funding

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., has jumped to an overwhelming fund-raising lead over GOP challenger Tom Corcoran, amassing $757,064 in six months, the candidates' reports showed Monday.

Corcoran, a 44-year-old congressman who on June 13 became Percy's primary opponent, collected $49,819 in the same period, $40,534 of it by emptying his House campaign fund into his Senate war chest.

The candidates' reports were not yet on file at the Federal Election Commission on Monday, but were made available to reporters.

Corcoran's backing from Israel supporters, anti-abortion groups and conservatives appeared on his report. But it was a droplet beside what Percy collected from GOP businessmen.

Chase Manhattan Bank Chairman David Rockefeller and former Treasury Secretary C. Douglas Dillon each contributed $1,000 to Percy.

Executives of one Chicago investment banking house, William Blair & Co., alone accounted for $4,000 while 56 contributors of $1,000 or more who listed addresses in the affluent North Shore suburbs of Lake Forest, Winnetka and Kenilworth or on Chicago's Lake Shore Drive furnished a total of $80,000.

Corcoran's largest contributor was Washington Political Action Committee, operated by Morris Amitay, a former official of the American Israel Public Affairs Council. It gave him $3,500. Louis Morgan, a Highland Park, Ill., investor and strong Israel supporter, contributed $1,000.

The Conservative Caucus, a prominent New Right group, gave Corcoran $150, the Christian Voters Victory Fund $150, the National Pro-Life Political Action Committee $175 and the National Right-to-Life Political Action Committee $150.

The figures were no indication of what those groups might contribute before the March 1984 primary.

So far, Corcoran has had rough sledding among business and professional political action committees (PACs). Corporations and unions may not contribute directly to candidates but may do so through PACs, often operated by their lobbyists, which collect funds from employees and union members.

The American Medical Association gave Corcoran $1,200. Percy opposed a ban on federal regulation of the health care industry which Corcoran backed it. The Chicago & North Western Transportation Co. gave Corcoran $1,500. He is a former vice president of C&NW. Chicago-based I.C. Industries contributed $1,000.

After that, Corcoran's biggest business supporter was the Chicago-based Commonwealth Edison Co., the nation's largest nuclear utility. He has championed Edison's drive to reprocess, or make reusable, spent nuclear fuel rods. It gave him $600.

Ruff PAC, operated by Howard Ruff, the financial adviser whose "Save the Eagle" group has been opposing an increase in the International Monetary Fund appropriation, gave Corcoran, a leading opponent of the appropriation, $500.

Envoy meets on Israeli troop pull-out

BEIRUT (AP) — President Reagan's new Middle East envoy, Robert C. McFarlane, opened talks Tuesday on the stalled Israeli-Lebanese troop withdrawal agreement, but Syria vowed to keep its forces in Lebanon as long as Israeli units remain in that country.

McFarlane met at the presidential palace with Lebanese Foreign Minister Elie Salem and President Amin Gemayel's national security adviser, Wadi Haddad, the state radio reported.

The radio said McFarlane would meet later with Gemayel, Prime Minister Shafiq Wazzan and other Lebanese leaders in a fresh effort to break the deadlock over foreign troop withdrawals.

Gen. John Vessy, chairman of the U.S. Joint chiefs of Staff, met with Gemayel Sunday night, and was scheduled to confer with Lebanese commanders Tuesday. The Beirut newspaper An Nahar said Vessy was discussing ways of strengthening Lebanon's army.

Syrian President Hafez Assad marked his country's Army Day Tuesday by vowing to keep his 30,000 troops in Lebanon until the Israeli army pulls out.

"As long as the Israeli invasion of Lebanon continues, our armed forces will stay to confront the usurpers over Lebanese soil as part of the wider confrontation of the Arab-Israeli conflict."

McFarlane, 46, was appointed July 26 to replace Phillip C. Habib as the top U.S. negotiator for the Middle East and flew to Beirut Sunday on the first stop of a six-nation tour. Details of his tour schedule were not disclosed, but he is expected to visit Syria, Israel, Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Jordan during his trip.

The Syrians, who have blocked the U.S.-sponsored withdrawal agreement by refusing to remove their troops from Lebanon, had reduced Habib's effectiveness by spurning his last attempt to visit Damascus.

Meanwhile, Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens said Sunday in New York that the United States and Israel are close to an agreement on "a common strategy" in Lebanon.

down over their faces and went into the loan company. Horner and Daugherty called police on their car radio and then pulled their car up the street to observe from a safe distance.

Horner, a former police officer, went around behind the loan company and spotted a parked van with the side door open. It started honking, and drove away, but not before both Horner and Daugherty took down its license plate number.

Two of the suspects were arrested and police are still seeking a third. Hogan said the investigation has led police to believe that these men were involved in bank and loan company robberies in other states, he said.

Bike travelers pedal with a purpose

By John Schrag
Student Editor

Riding a bicycle across the country during one of the worst heat waves in recent memory may not be everyone's idea of a good time, but several people who recently pedaled through Carbondale are hoping that such an activity will pay off.

John and Bertie Grownski and their son Stephen cruised into town Monday morning on their way to Scranton, Penn. The family is raising money for the Scranton chapter of the Boys Club of America.

Stephen, who at 17 months has not yet mastered the art of two-wheeled locomotion, is pulled in a covered wagon by his father. The wagon is equipped with a child seat and safety straps to keep the toddler from tumbling out.

"He loves it," said the boy's mother. "Sometimes he gets a bit cranky, but usually he's very content."

Grownski, who grew up in Scranton, said he spent a lot of time at the Boys Club there, both as a participant and a volunteer. He said the family is moving back there and hopes to said, laughing. "And they weigh a lot too."

The threesome started from Tacoma, Wash., June 1 and hopes to make it to Scranton by mid-September. The cyclists are traveling along the Bike-Centennial Trail, a network of back roads stretching from Astoria, Ore., to Yorktown, Va.

Curtis Martell, president of the SIU-C Cycling Club, said thousands of bikers use the trail each year. He said the trail, which was established in 1976, is continually being expanded.

Martell, who works at Phoenix Cycles, said that as many as 30 cross-country bikers stop in the store every week.

"And that's just the ones we see," he said. "A lot of them don't even stop."

Grownski said he and his family stopped in Carbondale because they heard that Phoenix Cycles was a good place to get repairs done.

"There are no bike shops along the route at all in Missouri," he said. "We asked everybody where a good bike shop was and they said Phoenix Cycles."

He said they also were told that the Alpha Tau Omega are riding from the coast of Oregon to Washington, D.C., to raise money for Habitat For Humanity, an interdenominational Christian organization which helps poor people improve their housing conditions. The cyclists began their journey June 5 and hope to be in Washington on August 29.

Cahn and Stollings hope to receive pledges totaling $6 per mile, which would raise $28,000. And whenever possible along their 4,500-mile journey, they stop and tell people about Habitat for Humanity.

Cahn also took advantage of the repair services available in Carbondale to replace tire rims damaged in a spill he took in Missouri.

Although he did not even own a bicycle last summer, Cahn said the trip has not been too strenuous, and that he and Stollings have been encouraged by the hospitality of people wherever they go.

The two are seniors at Westminster College in New Wilmington, Pa. Cahn said they both wanted to do something special during their last "summer of freedom."

On Sunday morning, Cahn spoke and showed slides about Habitat for Humanity to the congregation of the Church of the Good Shepherd in Carbondale. He and Stollings spent the weekend at the home of the Rev. Ted Braun, the church's minister.

Since it was formed in 1976, Habitat for Humanity has built thousands of houses across the globe which have been sold to low-income families on a no-profit no-interest basis.

Much of the work of Habitat for Humanity has been done in Africa, but the organization has also provided housing in the United States, from Portland, Ore., to New York City. Homes in East St. Louis and Paducah, Ky., have been built by Habitat.

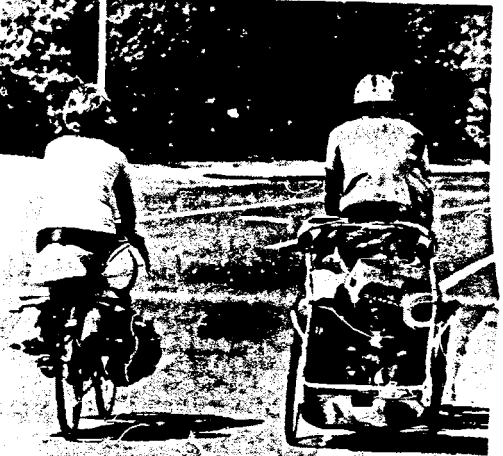

Construction is done by volunteers, who either donate their time or are sponsored by churches.

The money used to construct the new homes is returned to HFH through monthly payments made over a 20- to 25-year period.

Braun said people interested in making a pledge or getting more information about the organization should contact him at the church.

Or so it would seem from the above two photos of the John Grownski family of Scranton, Pa. who were on a cross-country bicycling trip in an effort to raise money for the Scranton chapter of the Boys Club of America. Along for the ride is 17-month-old Stephen who his mother, Bertie, says loves to travel. "Sometimes he gets a bit cranky, but usually he's very content," Mrs. Grownski said.

raise about $10,000 for the club, which just opened a new facility and needs money for new equipment and programs.

Pulling the wagon, which was built by a company in Oregon, is not all that difficult, Grownski said, but keeping the youngster comfortable is costly.

"Buying all those disposable diapers has been the biggest expense of the whole trip," he

On Friday, another pair of two-wheeled travelers pulled into Carbondale as part of another cross-country fund-raising trek.

12,894 applications in file.

"If the rate keeps up as it is now, then the case will be that more students are applying," he said. "It's just really hard to tell at this point in time."

Mann said that some students wait until they get to school in the fall to hand in the application, so the office will not have totals until about a month after school begins in the fall. Although SIU-C students may get less from the ISSC this year. Mann said that he expects the maximum award for dependent students to be increased, as it has in past years, to reflect increases in tuition and fees.

Currently, the maximum award for SIU-C students per semester is $602.75, but Mann said he expects the ISSC to increase it to $651.35 to reflect increases in tuition and the bond retirement fee.

Playhouse '83 ends exceptional season

AS THE SUMMER semester comes to a close, so does the Summer Playhouse '83. The Department of Theater, the School of Music and the playhouse members have brought to SIU-C what has become a tradition of high-quality theater.

This season, Summer Playhouse drew exceptional attendance, averaging 97 percent of capacity in 22 performances of "Harvey," "Oliver," "Deathtrap" and "Guys and Dolls."

Part of the reason for the exceptional attendance was extension of the advertising coverage area coupled with special group ticket rates that drew many community, art and church groups from Indiana, Kentucky and Missouri.

WITH THE EXCELLENT production of "Oliver," an increase was also seen in the number of families attending the theater together, taking up slack in the usually slow period around the July 4 weekend.

Battling a tight budget and a temporary lightboard, Summer Playhouse presented superbly creative set design, exuberant performances and tight production.

We also say goodbye and offer our best wishes to Darwin Payne, professor of theater, who has served as Summer Playhouse set designer and director. The graduate of SIU-C and native of Carbondale will resign at the end of this semester to pursue a freelance career.

HIS EXEMPLARY career at SIU-C began in 1963 when he received a bachelor of arts degree. In 1965 he received his master's of fine arts and began teaching in 1967. Since then he has participated in hundreds of productions in his over 31 years with community theaters and stock companies from Boston to New Orleans.

In addition to having written many plays and adaptations, Payne has published textbooks on stage design. The most recent, "The Scenographic Imagination," was chosen by Choice magazine as one of the best academic works of 1981.

His creative talent in McLeod Theater and his excellence as a teacher will be missed. And, at least until next summer, so will the enjoyable performances of Summer Playhouse.

DE should get Shryocks straight

In your article about Arlie Boswell's death, you speak of Burnett Shryock being president of SINTC in 1916. Burnett was 12 years old in 1916. His father, H.W. Shryock, was president. Burnett never was president. Such an error is inexcusable. — Mrs. M. J.

Myers, Carbondale.

Editor's Note: The mistake occurred when the writer of the obituary obtained background information from a 1978 Daily Egyptian story about Boswell containing the same mistake. The DE regrets the error.

Should suicide coverage be taught to DE writers?

Press Watch
Don Sneed
DE Ombudsman

A LETTER TO the editor last week asked for an apology from the DE for coverage of a story about a death which police labeled an apparent suicide. The writer claimed that the DE sensationalized the story and slandered the deceased's name, and that the facts pointed to homicide as just as likely a cause of death as suicide. My opinion is that the DE handled the story appropriately.

DE faculty managing editor Bill Harmon said the story had not been sensationalized. Harmon: "The story ran on an inside page with a small headline, and it was a small story in terms of length. It was handled matter-of-factly and was not overplayed."

WHERE WAS the information for the story obtained?

Harmon: "From the police. Our report was an accurate representation of what police said about the incident and the tentative conclusion they had reached. The story was qualified. It said that the death appeared to be a suicide and that the investigation was continuing. That leaves the investigation open, and if more facts are uncovered, we will report any changes in the story."

Many journalism schools do not deal with suicide coverage per se in a prescribed course. Harmon said he has never dealt with suicide coverage in journalism courses he's taught. Thus, should suicide coverage be taught?

HARMON: "Yes, it's a subject that ought to be dealt with, perhaps in the reporting class or in public affairs reporting. But, even though it isn't dealt with, our staff writers have feelings and know the implications of suicide. They are not callous about it."

Editorial page editor Jay Small said suicide coverage had not been dealt with in his journalism coursework.

Small: "About the closest to it was learning the format for writing an obituary in Journalism 310." (Journalism 310 is the first writing course in a news-editorial major's sequence.) Small thinks suicide coverage should be taught. I agree. Suicide coverage should be first introduced in a required course for news-editorial majors. But I also consider it imperative that some DE editor should discuss suicide coverage prior to the beginning of each semester with, in particular, the DE police beat reporter to heighten that reporter's awareness that such stories are to be handled accurately, matter-of-factly, and with a certain degree of empathy.

FIFTEEN NEW FACES

To be sure, several DE staffers have stubbed their ethical toes this summer, but there is hardly a reporter or editor alive who hasn't. The summer has had its peaks and valleys, but mostly there have been plateaus, according to Harmon.

Reflecting on what was and will be, Harmon's assessment of the past and future is:

"The biggest headline this summer was the SIU-C budget and the financial plight of higher education. And there was the 11th hour drama of the tax bill's passage. Ginny Lee did a competent job of keeping abreast of those things, but she'll be leaving this fall for a master's program in public affairs reporting at Sangamon State.

"KAREN TORRY will be our designated hitter this fall, covering county government, politics and general assignments. John Schrag will return to writing from being editor. He will be a utility man-designated hitter type. Paula Finlay has showed enterprise and ability in her first term and will cover city government.

"Jay Small's work as editorial page editor this summer has been super. He'll return this fall as editorial page editor.

"We'll also get several back from internships. Sherry Chisenhall is at Harrisburg. She'll be our sports editor. Pat Williams is at the Southern Illinoisan and will be on city news. Jennifer Phillips will return to the police beat after interning at the Peoria Journal-Star, and Phil Fiorini will be on the administrative beat after interning at the Sterling Gazette. Dan Devine, our sports editor this summer, wants to move into general news, and Rod Stone, who has been a reporter and associate editor, will be our student editor this fall.

"We will also have more new staff members this fall than in the past. Fifteen new faces."

OMBUDESMAN TO RETURN?

Several weeks ago I asked DE staff members to respond to a survey. One finding was that 86 percent of the staffers thought there was a need for an ombudsman at the DE. No staffer said there was not a need. The staffers also assigned grades to their ethical performance (a mean grade score of 3.16) and grades to the DE's overall ethical performance (a mean grade score of 2.70). Those are B- and C grades. Considering all that is written about grade inflation, the grades are eyebrow-raising.

Which leads to: Will I continue as ombudsman this fall? I'd like to. Six of the summer DE staff are either former or current students of mine. In the fall, more of my former students return to the DE, and I enjoy watching them and new DE staff acquaintances develop as writers and editors. Perhaps another "old" face will return ...

Mad diesel drivers should try college cars

A LOT OF General Motors diesel owners are upset these days about soaring and increasingly frequent repair costs, I discovered in an article in my Sunday newspaper.

Their cars are poorly built, the owners say. The repair costs are exorbitant and seem never-ending, they contend. And the autos produce enough noise, smoke, leaked fluid and general misery to make them good and mad.

In fact, they're mad enough in some cities to organize under assumed acronyms and fight Detroit as a team. In Chicago, it's GM Diesel Users Demanding Satisfaction (GM DUDS); in Portland, it's Dies-igate; in New York, it's Lemon on Wheels. And, in the proper California spirit of one-upmanship, a San Diego group calls itself Dissatisfied Owners of GM Automotive Diesels (DOGMAD).

MOST MEMBERS of these makeshift consumer groups own GM midsize and large diesel cars from the 1978 to 1981 generation. Many of the dastardly diesels are massive Buicks, Oldsmobiles and Cadillacs.

One woman in the Chicago area said her 1980 Cadillac had been in the shop 29 times. "I drive a loaner car half the time," she told the Chicago Sun-Times. "We're the laughing stock of the neighborhood."

Any neighborhood that guffaws at a woman who could afford a Cadillac diesel in the heat of recession in 1980 is the kind of neighborhood I wish I could live in. At least she gets to drive her Caddy half the time.

If this woman and her fellow diesel-owning complainants saw what most college students drive, they'd stop grumbling and be happy with a loaner. I know I would.

THE CAR I DRIVE may not be a diesel, but if noise, smoke, leaks and frequent repairs are all diesel owners have to grumble about, they might as well drive their big, shiny noisemakers home and open a jar of caviar. This car has cornered the market on all those miseries.

Jay Small

It is a 1975 Chrysler Newport, dark green with rust trim (the trim was installed by nature not the factory). My father still owns the car, though I drive and take care of it in its old age. Dad promises (threatens?) on occasion to give it to me for Christmas.

It's a banged-up, worn-out, gas-guzzling rust bucket with spastic turn signals and a fuel gauge chronically positioned at a quarter-tank. I love it, but that's no excuse

AND I KNOW that misery is shared by many college students here and elsewhere. If there's a hood up on or near campus, you can bet the head under it is that of a miserable student trying to wind up a beloved old Pinto, Vega or Volkswagen just one more time.

Just about any student who owns one of these misery-mobles has heard all the guff from bike riders and pedestrians: "Sell that heap and buy a bike. You'll be happier," they tell you. Or, "Walking is much better for you. That bucket-of-bolts of yours isn't worth the trouble."

Come on, folks. This is America. Our love of cars made wasteful laziness the rage. The least we can do is live up to our own standards.

I PROPOSE a different approach for students who want out of the misery of middle-aged jalopies: collective bargaining. If diesel owners can do it, so can we.

But we might as well forget arguing with Detroit. The Big Four automakers aren't about to let a group of college smart-alecks get in the way of planned obsolescence. Still, we might put some pressure for contribution on all the used car dealers and private citizens in the country that sold us our four-wheeled follies.

If that doesn't work, we could always form a political action committee. Get those candidates that won't support unlimited warranties for the garbage scows we have to drive out of office.

I EVEN HAVE an acronym for our organization (what prosperous car-owner grip group would be without one?) that I believe fits the situation: the College-Age Roadhandlers Stuck In Corporate Klunkers. What's that spell? CARSIKC — of course.

High tech, health care jobs show growth signs, panel says

WASHINGTON (AP) — High tech, low tech or no tech? Where are the jobs of today — and tomorrow?

A group of experts provided some of the answers at a recent career workshop sponsored by the National Council of Career Women; the Capital Press Women; an affiliate of the National Federation of Press Women; and the Clairvol Living Care Scholarship Program.

Among the panelists were Anita Gates of New York City, author of "90 Most Promising Careers for the 80s," and Howard Crane, a senior vice president of MCI Communications Corp. in Washington.

Ms. Gates said the two fastest growing job fields are high technology and health care, because "technology is everywhere," and because a large segment of the nation's population is aging and is in need of health care.

Crane agrees about the growth in job opportunities in the health care field but not in the field of high technology, perhaps because Ms. Gates' definition of high tech is somewhat broader than Crane's.

Crane said high tech is officially defined as any industry where research and development expenditures and the number of technical employees runs twice as high as the average of all U.S. manufacturing.

"But don't bother writing that down because only 36 of 977 industries in this country qualify," he said. "These include makers of lab equipment, aircraft, computers and electric components. It does not include companies that are among the decade's fastest growing businesses."

New high tech industries will account for only a fraction of total U.S. employment by 1990, he said, while the number of high tech jobs created in the next decade will be less than half of the 2 million jobs that have been lost in manufacturing in the past three years.

"Will high tech change careers in the 80s? Again, not as much as you might think," Crane said. "High tech will change the way work is performed, but it will not, for the most part, in my opinion, change careers. I'm afraid high tech is this year's fad, pushing aside last year's fad."

"What we have here is a distinction without a difference — high tech, low tech, no tech — the terms don't matter. What does matter, whether you're looking at any industry or career or an employer, is not whether it's high tech but whether it's high growth, and I can only define high growth unofficially as any company I wish I owned stock in."

Crane said most of the new jobs will be in traditional occupations, not in technical ones, and that fewer than one-third will be for engineers and technicians.

Ms. Gates said that in addition to health care, there will be job opportunities in the following fields: travel, accounting, paramedical work, the repair of computers, video and business equipment, insurance, banking and real estate.

She said it's important to remember that "gluts follow shortages," so, for this reason, she doesn't recommend training to be a computer programmer or systems analyst because the number of persons trained to do these jobs is higher than the number of jobs that are available.

Crane suggests job-seekers look at those things that need doing in society that aren't being done well, and then figure out better ways of doing them.

He said teaching, health care and law enforcement are three areas where there's plenty of room for improvement and no sign of slackening demand.

Banking is also a good field, he said, particularly for those people who are good at devising, explaining and selling solutions to people's money problems.

Crane has one final word about technology.

"Now, don't get me wrong about technology, I'm part of it and I believe it's going to play a tremendous role in helping us revitalize and transform our basic industries and helping us invent some brand new ones," he said.

"But," Grande added, "the job is not going to be done by technicians in white coats, it's going to be done mostly by the same kinds of people who have done it before, people who have curiosity, imagination and nerve, and people with proven skills of management and communications . . . We are putting very new and exciting tools at society's disposal, but they are only tools, and as always, how they're used will be up to you and me."

Indian Movement spokesman claims Peltier 'railroaded'

By Robert Green
Staff Writer

As a member of the Leonard Peltier Defense Committee, Steve Robideau has traveled far and wide telling the story of his imprisoned friend to whoever will lend an ear.

He found a receptive audience of about 30 people Thursday at the Church of the Good Shepherd in Carbondale, and although the young man from South Dakota was soft-spoken, he was also blunt in accusing the federal government of "railroading" Peltier.

Like Robideau, Peltier is a leader of the American Indian Movement. Unlike Robideau, Peltier's travels are confined within the Marion Federal Penitentiary where he is serving two life sentences for the murder of two FBI agents during a shoot-out at the Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota in 1975.

As Robideau tells it, Peltier is not a criminal but a political prisoner who was framed by a federal government intent on destroying the leadership of AIM and on finding a scapegoat for the killing of the two FBI agents.

Robideau described the reservation at the time of the shooting as a virtual war zone, with hundreds of FBI agents, National Guard troops and state and local police searching for possible suspects in the shoot-out.

The "occupation army" engaged in house-to-house searches, threatened reservation residents and coerced statements implicating four suspects in the shooting, including Peltier, Robideau said.

Knowing that he was a suspect and fearing for his life, Peltier fled to Canada. The other three suspects were arrested and later acquitted of the murder charges, but after being extradited and tried Peltier was convicted and has been imprisoned for seven years, Robideau said.

Besides coercing testimony, Robideau said the FBI also fabricated evidence, committed perjury and obstructed justice. He said the federal government was especially intent on convicting Peltier because he was and remains one of the top leaders of AIM.

"We have difficulty telling people about the injustice in Leonard's case because people don't believe we have political prisoners in this country," Robideau said. "But believe me, we do, and a number of them are Indians."

In recent years the Peltier case has been a rallying point for American Indian and civil rights activists who maintain that Peltier did not receive a fair trial.

Last December Peltier was denied a motion for a new trial and a new judge. His supporters are now seeking an evidentiary hearing so that Peltier's

Amuzement Park cut a groove

By T.E. Sparks
Entertainment Editor

Mixing their own originals with covers of other artists' tunes, Amuzement Park on Thursday led a crowd outside Shryock Auditorium through two rather short sets that nonetheless had it grooving.

The weather, as it has been for all of the Sunset Concerts, was hot — but that didn't keep the crowd away. In fact, many of about 4,500 who attended were on their feet before the finish of the second song — something of a rarity at these events.

Concert Review

Another thing worth noting was the sound. For the first time this season at a show on the Shryock steps, the sound was good. Whether you were up front or back by the fountain, the music and vocals were clear and loud enough to be heard.

Opening with "We'd Love to Groove You," followed by Michael Jackson's "Billie Jean" and David Bowie's "Let's Dance," Amuzement Park did its best to live up to its claim of "an amuzement park of sound."

The highlight, by far, of the first set was the song that brought Amuzement Park to nationwide attention — the group's first single, "Groove Your Blues Away."

Following an intermission that seemed as long as the first set, the band returned to cruise through a decidedly different version of Donna Summer's "Hard for the Money," which featured some soulful falsetto singing.

The band's sets were made up of predominantly up-tempo funk and rhythm and blues, the type of songs that cry out for the punctuation and accents of a horn section.

Upon announcing the dropping of the horn section, the group's management stated that with the use of a synthesizer, horns just weren't needed anymore. Aaron Samal on keyboards did add some nice frills, though something was definitely missing.

Where the hornless Amuzement Park excels, however, is not the fast funk. It is with slow, soulful ballads featuring the group's smooth harmonies — songs such as

"Who Do You Love" and the much-requested "So Inspired."

These songs had even more of the racially-mixed crowd up on their feet and swaying to the sounds

A new LP is expected from these folks within a month. The album will feature several contributions by members of Toto and is being produced by Rufus leader, David "Hawk" Wolinski. It will be interesting to see the direction they take

Marching Salukis getting ready for fall

By Terry Leveck
Staff Writer

While most students are getting their act together for the fall semester, the Marching Salukis will be on their way to their first performance.

The marching band will be stepping off its season with an appearance at the Knights of the Cauliflower Ear dinner on Monday, Aug. 22. This peculiarly-named group consists of business and civic leaders that support St. Louis' professional sports teams.

The appearance is bit extraordinary for a marching band — the entire marching band will come marching into a sit-down dinner at the Chase Park Plaza in St. Louis to play the Star Spangled Banner.

This rare set up is only the beginning of another big season for the band, Mike Hanes said. Hanes is a faculty member with the School of Music and has been directing the band for 18 years.

Although this season doesn't have a World Series appearance on the horizon yet, it does have a Monday night football game appearance at Busch Stadium.

Hanes said he is shooting for a bigger unit, too. Last year the band numbered about 140, and the size of this year's group will depend "on how many show up," Hanes said.

The band is open to anyone at the university who plays an instrument, Hanes said. Students need not be music majors. Last year 60 to 70 percent of the members weren't music majors, Hanes said.

The band's repertoire will be one of variety. "That's another thing we take pride in," Hanes said.

Hanes plans on trying some big band sound, along with contemporary tunes. The band's basic orientation to jazz will be further explored, with some "oldy-moldy" jazz tunes as well as jazz styles established more recently, like that of Chuck Mangione, Hanes said.

"We'll try anything we think will turn on an audience and will be fun," Hanes said.

The Marching Salukis will also be introducing two new fight songs to the football crowds this year. Alumnus Eob Pina wrote one of the songs and music student Jon Patton wrote the other one.

Craig Ryterski will be returning as Drum Major for his fifth season and David T. Henderson is moving up from the tuba section to fill the other Drum Major position.

The Marching Salukis will be trying to instill some spirit into the home crowd at the first game, which has been adopted as the Saluki spirit show.

Anyone interested in joining the band should contact Mike Hanes at the School of Music. Each member receives two hours credit.

'Krull' is yet another sci-fi bore

By Matt Holdrege
Student Writer

The movie "Krull" seems to be a part of a new genre of filmmaking. Several science fiction adventure films have been released recently. The most notable of course is the "Star Wars" series.

Since "Star Wars" was such a big box office smash, it is no wonder that there have been several attempts to cash in on its style.

Unfortunately, "Krull" didn't copy the right aspects of George Lucas's filmmaking to achieve success. It has a deliberate and highly predictable plot which is quite boring to endure. The characterization also gets the same marks. "Krull" reeks of being a "formula" film.

A "formula" film is that which uses an old tried and true plot and screenplay that has been used for years in film and television. Most "formula" films achieve some success but never as much as an original film does. The "formula" style is used basically by filmmakers who are too afraid to deviate from a standard.

They have the same type of characters, the same situations, and the same buildup to the climax. Only the names have been changed to protect the innocent. "Krull" starts out with the bad guy making trouble. He kidnaps the beautiful girl and tries to coerce her to marry him. He doesn't seem to notice the difference between his gigantic insect alien-type body and her delicate little human body.

Then her boyfriend begins to band together a group of good guys to save the planet and his lady. The good guys are made up of the young handsome boyfriend, a couple of wise old men, a cowardly but benign

'Farewell Tour' album offers retrospective of good music

By T.E. Sparks
Entertainment Editor

The Doobie Brothers' latest, and last, effort — a live two-record set put together from the group's farewell tour — is more than just a fitting coda to a career filled with making enjoyable music.

The set is a viable collection of music from almost every facet of that career. Ranging from the Doobies' first hit "Listen to the Music," to "Minute by Minute," the album offers a musical progression through the evolution of the group's sound.

Unlike most live records, "Farewell Tour" loses almost nothing, track for track, from the studio versions of its songs. In fact, in some cases, the songs are enhanced upon live performance.

What is also interesting is the contrast demonstrated by the song selections of the records. There is pretty much an equal sharing of the pre- and post-Michael McDonald Doobies sound.

Before McDonald joined the group, the band was a guitar-sounding band that reveled in its party sound. Following his arrival, to the consternation of several of the band's members, the group acquired a softer blues leaning that was showcased mostly on songs dealing with relationships.

Throughout the LP, the two styles of the group alternate. On side one, the listener is treated first to McDonald's "Takin' it to the Streets" followed by the rowdy "Jesus is Just Alright." Side two has "What a Fool Believes" back to back with "Black Water." Sides one and two showcase the contrast between the older and newer sound.

Album Review

Side three with the exception of McDonald's "You Belong to Me," features the two other dimensions of the Doobies. "Slat Key Soquel Rag" and "Steamer Lane Breakdown" showcase the bluegrass-picking that influenced several of the band's members, while guitarist Patrick Simmons' "South City Midnight Lady" exhibits that even the pre-McDonald Doobies had a way with a ballad.

The highlights of the LP, however, can be found on side four. Its four cuts are worth the price of an LP. The first two are the never-before-released gems, "Olana" and "Don't Start Me Talkin'."

Both exhibit, once again, the two sides to the Doobie Brothers coin. "Olana" is McDonald at his best — a blues ballad featuring his "blue-eyed soul" voice. "Don't Start Me Talkin'" is more along the lines of a rhythm and blues shuffle.

While it is no surprise that the final two selections serve as the encores for both the shows and the LP, the appearance of founding member Tom Johnstone to sing lead on them is a surprise.

The cuts, "China Grove" and "Long Train Runnin'" originally rocketed the group to superstardom — with Johnstone at the helm. Johnstone, unable to handle the pressures of almost non-stop shows retired for several years from the music scene. The hiatus doesn't seem to have hurt his voice.

However familiar someone may be with the Doobie Brothers, the "Farewell Tour" LP offers something for almost everyone.

foot, a young loveable kid (no robots in this one), a group of softhearted toughies, and a quiet, but powerful giant who has an old score to settle with the bad guy.

Finally, against incredible odds, and after numerous killings on both sides, our heroes beat the bad guy and live happily ever after.

Sounds familiar, doesn't it. One important thing that "Krull" misses out on is the "miracle gimmick." "Star Wars" had "The Force." "Krull" has the magic five-point blade which is shown on all the posters and commercials.

In the beginning of the film we see the young king climb a mountain in search of the mystical blade. After about five minutes of boring mountain scenes, he finally finds "the Blade."

You expect him to show off all the magical powers of the blade. Maybe kill a couple of bau guys with it, or even perhaps just a rabbit for dinner. But no, he puts "the Blade" in his pocket and keeps it there until the very end of the film.

Throughout the movie he keeps the powerful weapon in his pocket unused. His friends are dying all around him due to inferior weapons, yet he waits till the very end to use his "Blade."

By that time, the audience is thoroughly bored and the "miracle gimmick" is lost along with the rest of the movie.

1983 SUMMER SESSION FINAL EXAMINATION SCHEDULE INFORMATION

Because of the limited number of examination periods available, no departmental examination times are scheduled for the Summer. The following points are pertinent to the final examination schedule:

1. The class final exam period is scheduled based on the meeting time and days listed on the first line of the class entry in the up-to-date Schedule of Classes book (which would be the same as the first printed line for the section on the registered student's schedule print-out). For example, a class section is listed in the Schedule in the manner:

07:30 - 08:30 T TH
08:40 - 09:40 W F

The scheduled class time for the first line of the entry starts with "07" and the meeting days for that line are "T TH" only. Therefore the exam time is 12:00 - 1:50 p.m. Friday, August 5, as is indicated on the attached Summer 1983 Final Examination Schedule.

2. Classes should plan to hold their final examination in their regularly scheduled class rooms. The space scheduling section of the Office of Admissions and Records will forward to departments information relative to the location for examinations for those classes that cannot hold their examinations in their regularly scheduled rooms because of a space conflict. This will be done sufficiently in advance of the final examination dates to provide sufficient notice for all.

3. Students who find they have more than three examinations on one day may petition, and students who have two examinations scheduled at one time should petition their academic deans for approval to take an examination during the make-up examination period on the last day. Provision for such a make-up examination period does not mean that students may decide to miss the scheduled examination time and expect to make it up during this make-up period. This period is to be used only for students whose petitions have been approved by their deans.

4. Students who must miss a final examination may not take an examination before the time scheduled for the class examination. Information relative to the proper grade to be given students who miss a final examination and are not involved in a situation covered in the preceding paragraph will be found in the mimeographed memorandum forwarded to members of the instructional staff at the time they receive the final grade listing for the recording of grades.

1983 grads receive fewer job offers; women's salaries still lag, survey says

BETHLEHEM, Pa. (AP) — The improvement in the nation's economy has not helped 1983 college graduates, who found a sharp decrease in the number of job offers from the previous year, according to a survey by the College Placement Council Inc.

About 33,600 offers went to students graduating with four-year degrees in 1983, compared to 51,200 a year ago, the council said.

But the council found that the job market improved for humanities majors, who found slightly more opportunities awaiting them this year and a 7.6 percent increase in starting salaries to $16,560.

Petroleum engineers continued to command the highest starting salaries, at $30,816, but the number of offers dropped, the council said.

The survey was based on data submitted by 185 placement offices and 160 colleges and universities.

The council said that while many employers had fewer job openings, the decrease in offerings might have happened because graduates accepted offers more quickly.

The council found that the number of job offers to engineers continued to decline for the second year.

Women continued to receive offers for lower starting salaries in all fields except economics, in which women averaged $19,116 a year compared to an average starting pay for men of $19,056, the council said.

Speaker: Black doctors may suffer from success

CHICAGO (AP) — Not only do blacks have more difficulty than whites getting into and through medical school, but success can bring devastating guilt over blacks left behind, speakers said Monday at a convention of black physicians.

"made it" often experience rage when they find that success does not always bring the power expected, said Dr. Jeanne Spurlock, deputy medical director of minority and national affairs for the Washington, D.C.-based American Psychiatric Association.

"They play the game by all the rules and when they get close to the top, the rules are changed," said Spurlock.

"You still can go only so far." Chicago's first black mayor, Harold Washington, may be a good example of a man suffering such frustrations, Spurlock told a reporter after addressing psychiatrists among the more than 2,500 black physicians at the 88th annual convention of the 13,000-member National Medical Association, an association of black physicians.

Washington and his supporters may find that a continuing legislative standoff with a City Council bloc dominated by white aldermen is a bitter pill to swallow, said Spurlock, a former Chicagoan.

Washington's bloc of 21 supporters in the 50-member council includes the 16 black aldermen, while the majority bloc is comprised of 28 whites and one Hispanic alderman.

Spurlock said blacks who help put the former congressman in City Hall on April 12 also may be angry that he has been unable to exercise as much control as did the late Mayor Richard J. Daley.

Chicago's government structure provides the mayor, relatively little power, although many Chicagoans who remember Daley's 21-year reign are unaware of that.

The guilt that successful blacks often experience is "like being a Nazi concentration camp survivor — they feel guilty that they were saved and their loved ones are dead," Spurlock said.

One successful black committed suicide after leaving his job with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission to become an executive in a largely white corporation, an example of black guilt "over those we leave behind," she said.

"Many as they climb the corporate ladder still realize they are powerless. They have guilt, not to mention depression and sometimes extreme anger. This interferes with work performance," she said.

Soviet leaders question U.S. 'reliability' as grain supplier

WASHINGTON — U.S. officials, responding to Soviet concerns that America be a reliable grain supplier, dropped the so-called "escape clause" in negotiating the new long-term grain agreement with the Kremlin, the delegation's leader said Monday.

"Clearly, the embargo and the reliability of America as a supplier was the major issue discussed by the Soviet side," Robert Lighthizer of the U.S. Trade Representative's office said, referring to the 16-month grain embargo.

"They thought they couldn't depend on this country for delivery of products," Lighthizer said in briefing Senate Agriculture Committee members on the recently concluded negotiations.

The expiring grain agreement contained a provision allowing the United States to reduce or suspend deliveries to the Soviet Union in the case of a commodity shortage. There was no similar clause allowing the Soviets to abrogate their responsibilities under the agreement.

"They looked upon it as an escape for us when they had no comparable escape," Lighthizer said.

A PICNIC will be held by the Southern Counties Action Movement from 4 to 9 p.m. Friday at the Murphysboro Riverside Park. Picnickers are asked to bring a food dish and something to grill.

A FUND-RAISING event for Touch of Nature, will be held from noon to 8:30 p.m. Aug. 13 at Touch of Nature, Camp Two. Sirloin steaks will be broiled, American Indian style, on hardwood coals. Baked potato, salad, dessert and drink are included in the price of $25 per individual and $40 per couple.

THE WOMANLY Art of Breastfeeding will be discussed at the La Leche League meeting at 9 a.m. Aug. 10 at 748 S. Division St., Carterville.

AN AMATEUR hour will be held by the Murphysboro Area Senior Citizen's Club at 7:30 p.m. Thursday. The club is at 17 N. 14th St., Murphysboro.

He said the decision to drop the escape clause in the new five-year pact "is consistent with the president's position that we're not going to use short supply as a reason to embargo."

Under Secretary of Agriculture Daniel Amstutz said that current excess supplies of American grain make such a provision unnecessary.

The new agreement, announced last Thursday, calls for the Soviet Union to purchase at least 9 million metric tons of U.S. wheat, corn and possibly soybeans each year. The expiring agreement set a minimum purchase level of 6 million metric tons. A metric ton is 2,205 pounds.

The pact also allows the Soviets to buy up to another 3 million metric tons a year, bringing to 12 million tons the amount of grain they can purchase without further U.S. approval. The limit in the expiring agreement was 8 million metric tons.

Lighthizer and Amstutz said the U.S. delegation tried to include products other than basic grains in the new agreement but the Soviets declined because "they understood now that in no way were they limited in buying processed agricultural products."

Amstutz said he hoped groups interested in selling processed goods or commodities other than wheat and corn will establish contracts with the Soviets to spur sales.

Both men also said they expect grain trade with the People's Republic of China to return to normal now that the U.S. has reached a trade agreement on textiles with that nation.

Special of the month

Taken in 1976, SIU-C photographer Rip Stokes named this aerial shot as his favorite.

Memories of changing campus go with retiring photographer

By David Baldwin
Staff Writer

He might have made more money in private business, but for the past 32 years Rip Stokes has been able to do pretty much what he wanted to do in a place where he wanted to do it. Later this month he will retire as SIU's university photographer and take a great many memories with him.

Stokes first saw the SIU campus in 1943 when he was assigned to an Air Corps officer's training class here. After the war he went back home to Anna where he worked in a photo studio with Bill Horrell. The careers of the two men dovetailed from then on. Horrell came to Carbondale to run the University's photographic services and then convinced Stokes to follow. When Horrell later moved to teaching photography, Stokes was put in charge of the photo unit, where he has been ever since.

The changes at SIU-C since Stokes first saw the campus have been many. "When I first came here, chapel was compulsory and there was no smoking on campus," he said. "By the end of the 1960s, some students weren't even wearing clothes."

Stokes said the University saw a long period of stability during the years Delyte Morris was SIU president. But times have changed and there have been six administration changes in the last 13 years, he noted. The large growth of the University began in the late 1950s, when the campus began to spread out. In Stokes' early days all the buildings were on the old quad, he said.

An early function of photographic services was the issuing of student IDs. In those days enrollment was about 8,000 students, but the task was still unwieldy. Stokes later had a hand in the development of the current computerized ID system.

The period of student unrest in the late 1960s and early 1970s was a difficult period for everyone, Stokes said. As angry students took to the streets, Stokes was directed to try to get as many photos as possible of the participants in hope of identifying the leaders.

"As far as I know, the responsibility was never placed on anyone. No one was ever really disciplined," he said.

But during that period Old Main burned to the ground. Despite rumors of arson, there was never any proof that someone had deliberately set the building ablaze. Stokes explained that the fire had an ironic twist, though. A few years earlier Delyte Morris asked Stokes to photograph the new university master plan, and Old Main was not to be found on it.

When word got out that Morris planned to get rid of the difficult-to-maintain building, public sentiment changed his mind, and the building was retained -- until the fire.

"I saw Morris for just a minute during the fire," Stokes said, "and tears were running down his face" as the building burned.

Stokes said he has had many proud moments in his career at SIU.

"If the University tried to contract for the services this office does, the cost would be almost prohibitive," he said. His photographs have been published in nearly every publication imaginable, both in the United States and abroad.

"I'm especially proud of the exhibit of athletes in the Student Center which he photographed. But Stokes has seen problems at SIU, too. There has been a reluctance, he said, on the part of the university to hire its own graduates in top administrative positions.

Moe named acting theater chairman

Christian H. Moe has been named acting chairman of the Department of Theater, according to John C. Guyon, vice president for Academic Affairs and Research.

The appointment took effect Monday and will be submitted to the Board of Trustees for ratification.

Moe has been a member of the department since 1959 and has served in several administrative capacities. He was named director of the Playwriting Program in 1969 and has been director of graduate studies since 1977. Moe earned a master's degree from the University of North Carolina and a doctorate from Cornell University.

He replaces Mary Lou

Higgerson, who accepted the one-year acting chair position in July 1982, while also serving as associate dean. Higgerson returned to full-time duties as associate dean in the College of Communications and Fine Arts Monday.

The Theater Department began a nationwide search for a new chairman last fall, and David M. Ferrell of Hartwick College in New York, accepted the position in mid-May. But in early June, Ferrell contacted the University and said he would not be coming. Ferrell said he was impressed with the University and the department, but that he could not give up the advantages available for his family in his current position.

Couple opens home to 32 needy children

EDWARDSVILLE (AP) — James and Nancy Wheeler both were raised as orphans and they say that's probably why they like kids so much.

Over the past 26 years, 32 children have come to live with the Wheelers. Some stayed a week, others stayed years.

"I been told I got sucker written on my face," Mrs. Wheeler said, sitting on the floor of her Edwardsville home, surrounded by hundreds of pictures of children. "They say we're both suckers. But that's not true. We just love kids."

None of the children were adopted. Nor were they foster children. Word of the Wheelers' hospitality to children spread from child to child, from parent to parent. Children from troubled homes came on their own or were brought by relatives to the Wheelers' farm.

in a remote part of Madison County. Later, the journey led to the Wheelers' house in town.

"We was both raised as orphans," Wheeler said. "I was orphaned when I was three days old. I was raised at Father Flannigan's in Lincoln, Nebraska."

Mrs. Wheeler said she was orphaned at age 3.

"I guess that's why me and him get along so well," she said. "I guess that's why we like kids so much, too. Orphans know orphans."

There was never much money in the Wheeler home. Wheeler made a good wage before he retired from the steel mills in Granite City, but the money went fast — taking care of children.

Mrs. Wheeler said her house was always full of children, especially during the summers.

"Jim used to fox hunt with Rex and Bob," she said, as if everyone knew who Rex and Bob were. "Then the boys came up and ended up staying the summer. That's the way it all started."

The children spent mornings doing chores, such as mending fences, feeding chickens, or cleaning out barns. The afternoons were their own. They swam in a pond, rode the farm's donkey, fished or explored the farm on bicycles.

Mrs. Wheeler said many of the children came from homes with one parent who worked. The Wheelers simply served as full-time babysitters for extended periods, she explained.

Since the first boys came to stay 26 years ago, the Wheelers continued to take in children

Over the years, nearly all have stayed in touch with them. Five of the boys died in the Vietnam War.

"Seven or eight of 'em all enlisted at the same time," Mrs. Wheeler said. "Only two of them came home. They were the ones who told us about the other five," she said, removing her glasses and wiping her eyes.

"Yep," Jim added quietly, running a hand through his close-cropped, white hair. "No use 'bawlin over it. Still hard to take, though."

At 67, Wheeler says he isn't as spry as he used to be. But both he and his wife say they want children in their home again.

"Anybody that don't got no home, we want 'em," Wheeler said. "Any kid that's been beat on, we want him, too. We know what it's like not to have nothin

Children taken from sect adjusting to new lives

By Frederick Stamlisch Associated Press Writer

ALLEGAN, Mich. — Scattered in eight counties and separated from their parents, 66 children from the House of Judah are discovering new lives in foster homes a world away from the "law and order" punishment of their tightly knit sect.

"These are kids who have grown up in a world where the controls are not necessarily controls from within, but external controls," said Myrna McNitt, an assistant administrator for the Allegan County Probate and Juvenile Court. The court has temporary custody of the children while adults in the sect shuttle between courtrooms and their religious camp.

"If you're bad, you're going through a law-and-order, cause-and-effect kind of punishment," she said in an interview.

The punishment, or "chastisement" as the sect calls it, may have contributed to the beating death of a 12-year-old boy last month at the 22-acre camp run by the "Black Hebrew Israelite Jews," authorities say.

The youngster's mother,

Ethel Yarbrough, 33, is charged with manslaughter and five of the sect's leaders are charged with one count each of child cruelty.

Within five days of the boy's death, 66 of his campmates and playmates, ranging in age from 4 months to 16 years, were taken away from their rural world of blue and white mobile homes and sent to foster homes in eight counties.

"We don't really know what the needs are of these kids," McNitt said, agreeing to speak only if specific cases were not discussed.

Doctors and psychiatrists have been checking the children and juvenile court officials are awaiting their findings. None of the children suffers from any serious medical problems.

For now, care of the children will follow established guidelines, with some modifications, including adjustments for their religious beliefs and dietary practices, which ban pork and shellfish.

McNitt said foster parents usually can expect children to undergo "a grieving period" and feel anger after being separated from their families, friends and homes.

is someone who lives two hundred miles up the road," he said. "What we've had is a succession of carpetbaggers who've used the University as a stepping-stone to other things."

Although Stokes will have more time to indulge in his favorite hobby, golf, after his retirement, he has no plans to stop working. He plans to take some time to decide what it is he wants to do.

"You can't just quit something you've done as long as I've done this," he said.

Surgicenter plans to go before board

Plans for an outpatient surgical facility by Memorial Hospital of Carbondale will be presented to the Health Facilities Planning Board Friday in Chicago.

The agency reviews proposed health care facilities to prevent duplication and to see that consumer needs are met.

The surgicenter plan received an endorsement from Comprehensive Health Planning in Southern Illinois' board last week.

The project is in competition with a similar facility planned by the Carbondale Clinic. But, the CHPSI board indicated in its endorsement that the hospital's plan for a center nearby would give the center easy access to physicians and hospital facilities.

Reform of nursing home laws needed, health director says

CHICAGO (AP) — Reforms of Illinois nursing home laws, such as the power to impose heavy fines, are needed so quick action can be taken against the facilities in emergency cases, the state's public health chief said Monday.

State Public Health Director William L. Kempiners called for revamping nursing home laws as a Cook County grand jury prepared to begin an investigation of the deaths of nine patients in four nursing homes during the last several months. Late last month, four elderly patients died at a West Side nursing home after the air-conditioning broke down during a heat wave. Dr. Robert Stein, Cook County medical examiner, noted that the deaths were homicides, saying the residents were neglected. But he said that didn't necessarily mean a crime had been committed.

The grand jury probe also is expected to cover deaths in three other nursing homes in the Chicago area.

Kempiners' comments echoed those made Sunday by Illinois legislative leaders, who said nursing home laws will be a top priority in the fall General Assembly session.

Kempiners said the current law — the Nursing Home Reform Act of 1979 — "allows nursing home operators to tie us up in hearing and legal action for months" after serious violations are found.

The state needs authority to levy large fines or close homes before hearings are held, Kempiners said. The penalties could then be reversed, he said, if hearings find the operators were not at fault.

"I remember one nursing home where a death occurred and the fine amounted to only $1,200," he said. "When I questioned my staff about it, I was told that the fine was based on the present law."

Operators can be fined $1,000 or $4.50 per resident, plus 15 cents per resident for each day violations continue. Criminal prosecutions also are possible.

Larger fines might "nudge" home operators to correct problems more quickly, Kempiners said.

"Closing a nursing home isn't always the best solution even when serious deficiencies are found," he added. "Moving some patients can be life-threatening in itself."

Kempiners also said a large fine isn't always the solution, particularly in the four recent deaths at the Center for Human Development, which had little money.

On Sunday, House Speaker Michael Madigan said legislative leaders will present a package of bills this month to streamline the 1979 reform act.

Envoy meets with rebel leader

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — U.S. special envoy Richard Stone met with a Salvadoran rebel leader — the first such high-level contact by the Reagan administration — in what the rebel said today was "the first step toward a political solution to the Central American crisis."

Stone's meeting Sunday with Ruben Zamora, a director of the Democratic Revolutionary Front, was announced by Colombian President Belisario Betancur, who said he acted as a "go-between" in arranging the encounter.

Zamora's front is a coalition of five left-wing organizations opposing the U.S.-backed government in El Salvador, wracked by a guerrilla insurgency for more than three years.

In an interview today with CBS television, Zamora said: "We have agreed to have a full meeting between the central representative of the U.S.

government and the representative of our side... the full meeting is going to be with an open agenda."

He said that "at this moment the chances for a political solution are... much better than they were three or four months ago."

The two guerrilla groups he mentioned consider the United States "a direct part of the internal problem because it sustains the government of (President) Alvaro Magana," he told Caracol.

"We know that Mr. Stone considers his government's role in a different way. But we don't accept his role as mediator. This is one of our points of disagreement," Zamora said.

The Salvadoran guerrillas, he said, want Mexico, Venezuela, Panama and Colombia — known as the Contadora group — to mediate the Central American crisis.

defense can present evidence obtained under the Freedom of Information Act which they say would prove that the government denied Peltier a fair trial.

Robideau said the petition for an evidentiary hearing is now pending before the 8th Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis, and the court is expected to review the petition in early October.

At that time, Robideau said, the defense also hopes to present an amicus curiae i.e., friend of the court brief, which he said may be endorsed by a number of congressmen sympathetic to Peltier's plight.

Robideau said he hopes to organize a marathon "children's run" at the time of the hearing of the brief. The run, tentatively planned to begin near the Marion penitentiary and proceed through St. Louis and later through Iowa and South Dakota, would attract media attention to the case, Robideau said.

The Leonard P. Tier Defense Committee, of which Robideau is international director, has several chapters throughout the country including a local chapter which sponsored the meeting Thursday night

Honda beats Harley Davidson

By Matt Holdrege
Student Writer

An estimated 13,500 motorcycle enthusiasts descended on Southern Illinois over the weekend to witness and be a part of the famed Du Quoin Mile at the Du Quoin State Fairgrounds. The flat track motorcycle race was one of the stops on the American Motorcycle Association tour this year.

The event was won by veteran Hank Scott on a Honda RS750. It marked the first time that a Honda beat a Harley Davidson on a mile track.

The racers rode 750cc bike at speeds close to 100 mph. There were four qualifying heats, two semifinals, and the final 25 lap race won by Scott.

The fastest qualifier was Jay Springsteen, whose Harley Davidson completed the mile in 36.736 seconds at an average speed of 96.684 mph. Springsteen, the pre-race favorite, led early but went too wide on a turn and fell out of the pack. Ricky Graham, the defending Du Quoin champion, fell out of second place with engine troubles halfway through the race.

Finishing behind Scott in second was Bubba Shobert on a Harley. The third place finisher was 17-year-old Doug Chandler, also on a Harley. It was a seesaw race with the top three riders passing each other back and forth until Scott finally won.

The importance of the race to the Honda team was reflected in the work of their mechanics. Before each race they worked at a furious pace to fine tune their bikes perfectly. As the racers were lining up for the final race, two Honda mechanics jumped over the rail to make a final adjustment on Scott's bike. Their last minute effort may have spelled victory for Scott.

The crowd, predominantly Harley owners, were disappointed that a Japanese bike beat their American brand.

"I was in shock," said Ricky Johnson of Missouri. "Seeing a

"rice-burner" (slang for a Japanese-made vehicle) beat our "hogs" (slang for a Harley) really hurt."

Before the race however, everyone was in good spirits. Many riders camped out on the fairgrounds Friday night.

"It was one big party the night before," said Marty Baker of Chicago. "That in itself was worth the trip."

There were several extracurricular events conducted outside the stadium Friday and Saturday. The most popular was illicit drag racing. On one area of the grounds, there was a strip about two hundred yards long, lined with people watching their friends race street bikes.

"It's not often that you can get together with this many bikers, and get down to some real drag racing," said one man. "Sure it's dangerous, but that's the fun."

Another popular event was watching everyone leave after the race was finished. There was an authentic parade scene as half of the bikes rode out, and the other half lined the street to watch and admire them. Unique custom "choppers," "trikes," (three-wheeled bikes) and bikes with sidecars rode to the cheers and sometimes jeers of the fans.

Every female that went by drove the male fans wild. Some of the ladies would provoke them by removing their tops, while others hid behind their boyfriends fearing for their lives.

The State Police kept guard on the outside of the park, making sure the party stayed mostly inside.

Intramural tournaments almost over

By Bruce Kirsham

The summer's intramural sports season is nearly completed, with champions crowned in softball, tennis, racquetball and basketball. Championships are being held this week in Frisbee and badminton.

In men's 12-inch softball, the Spankers defeated BAMF 10-5 in the championship game to win the A division title. In the B division, The Unknowns beat the Wings 7-4 in the title game. Diddy Squat scored a 7-5 victory over Masterbatters to take the co-rec 12-inch championship.

Diddy Squat also took the 16-inch, co-rec A division with an 18-0 win over Homologues to become softball's only double winner. In the co-rec B division, The A Team wrapped up an undefeated season by taking the championship over Bo's Briefs, 7-6.

The men's 16-inch A division was won by The Beer Nuts in a 20-13 decision over Maltese Falcons. Cousin It took the B division in a close one, 4-3 over Graphics.

In men's tennis doubles, SIUC staffers Dennis Leitner and Darrill Jenkins advanced through the winner's bracket and won the championship over Terry Risley and Kevin Fisher, 6-2, 6-3. Leitner repeated with partner Lucinda Jackson by winning the mixed doubles championship 7-5, 7-6, over John Cana and Kim Mirocha.

Mark Bullock and Phillip Keasler battled back through the loser's bracket to win the double elimination men's racquetball doubles from Wade Hearn and Bill McMinn, 21-8, 21-17.

Frisbee and badminton finals are being held this week.

Salukis produce major league players

By Joe Paschen

The Saluki baseball program is known nationally — not just among other college teams, but throughout the major leagues.

Since 1967, SIUC has had 67 players promoted into professional baseball. Fifteen of those have made their mark in the major leagues and six former Salukis are active at baseball's highest level.

Fourteen names who played under Coach Itchy Jones remain on various minor league rosters. All are fighting for the chance to "make it to the bigs." Only a small percentage will, though.

Best known of the current crop of former Salukis with major league lockers is Toronto Blue Jay pitcher Dave Stieb.

The righthanded hurler is among the top five American League pitchers in several categories, including wins, complete games, innings pitched, and strikeouts. He went from All-American centerfielder to starting pitcher in last month's major league All-Star game.

Former All-American Saluki players Bill Stein and Jim Dwyer were drafted into pro ball in 1969 and 1971 respectively. Both have established themselves on big league rosters.

Stein, a utility infielder, is principally a pinch-hitter for the Texas Rangers, with four game winning RBI's this season and a

.283 batting average.

Dwyer platoons in right field for the Baltimore Orioles. Like Stein, Dwyer was originally signed by the St. Louis Cardinals. He played for the Boston Red Sox before signing a three-year contract with the Orioles in 1980.

Another former Saluki drafted into the pros in 1971 was Duane Kuiper. Signed by the Cleveland Indians, Kuiper is currently platooned at second base for the San Francisco Giants. He spent six weeks on the disabled list early this season after a collision with Dodger outfielder Mike Marshall resulted in a fractured shoulder.

Another Indian player with a Saluki past is outfielder George Yukovich. The former All-American was one of the heroes who help send the Phillies into the World Series three years ago. He was traded to Cleveland prior to last season and has played just 32 games this season.

The most recent Saluki to gain access to a major league team is Billy Lyons. The second baseman replaced the injured Dene Iorg on the St. Louis Cardinals last week and according to Cardinal director of player development, Paul Fauks, "Lyons has already impressed Whitey (Herzog)." Fauks said Lyons is the righthanded pinch hitter on the Redbird bench, and can play several positions.

There are other ex-Saluki players currently toiling in the Cardinal minor league system, the most prominent of whom is probably outfielder Jim Adduci.

Adduci signed with the St. Louis organization in 1980 and currently leads the Cardinals AAA club at Louisville with 22 home runs and 83 runs batted in while hitting .293. Fauks believes Adduci may share a locker beside Lyons at Busch Stadium before this season is over.

Another Cardinal prospect is lefthanded pitcher Tom Caulfield, whose 3-0 record and 1.88 ERA have made him a strong starter for Class A Erie. Two other players who played for SIUC this spring, Richard Ellis, a lefthanded relief pitcher, and second baseman Jim Reboulet, play for the Cardinals rookie team in the Appalachian League at Johnston City. Reboulet began the season starting at second base, but injured his arm last month and has played sparingly since.

Two other former Salukis are playing well on the Triple-A level.

Jerry DeSimone is putting his switch hitting and versatile fielding skills to work for the Las Vegas Stars, the San Diego Padres Pacific Coast team and may make the jump to the Padres in September, according to Joe Hawk, public relations director for the Stars.

Working his way up the minor league ladder at Tulsa is pitcher

Rob Clark. When he signed with the Texas Rangers in 1962, several scouts felt Clark was a definite major league prospect. A Tulsa spokeswoman said Clark went on the disabled list a week and a half ago and will remain there for another two weeks due to a pulled back muscle. Through July 26, he had pitched 125 innings, while striking out 70, and earned a 9-3 record and a 4.03 earned run average.

Rickey "Buster" Keeton became the property of his third club since signing with the Milwaukee Brewers in 1978. After spot duty for the Brewers parent club, Keeton and his sore arm were sent to the Houston Astros AAA team in Tucson.

Schranz still waiting for pro offer

By Joe Paschen

Not all former Saluki players get the chance to play pro baseball — and sometimes not even the ones with proven talent. An example of an SIUC player waiting at home for a phone call that might send him into the minor leagues is P.J. Schranz.

Schranz had the second highest totals for the Salukis last season in batting average (.366) and stolen bases (15), and was a more than capable centerfielder.

His speed in the outfield made him a pro prospect as early as 1979, when as an All-State player from Bloom High School in Chicago Heights, Schranz was picked by the Los Angeles Dodgers in the June amateur draft. But he chose to attend SIUC instead.

Four years later he finds himself playing for a successful semi-pro team in Chicago, waiting for a call from the big leagues.

"I have been talking to a few ballclubs about a tryout," said Schranz from his Chicago Heights home. "I had a shot to sign with the Cubs, but pulled a hamstring muscle. They told me they couldn't wait for it to heal because they needed a player to fill in a spot right away."

Saluki assistant baseball Coach Jerry Green said Coach Itchy Jones have talked with several major league general managers about signing Schranz, but there haven't been any spots open. Green said that at this point in the season it may be too late for Schranz to join a professional team.

"A couple of clubs said I would be too old by next season (Schranz is 22) to start on a minor league team. If that's so I may just quit the idea and go on to graduate school," he said.
