Conley wins gold; wind steals record

BARCELONA, Spain (UPI) — Michael Conley took three of the longest steps in history Monday and although they will not go down in the record book as such, they brought him the Olympic gold medal he has worked eight years to obtain.

On his last attempt in the finals of the triple jump, Conley produced the kind of moment that transcends the Olympics and becomes an instant part of the lore of athletics.

His three huge strides carried him 57-7 1/2 — eight inches farther than the world record established seven years ago by Willie Banks.

Conley knew instantly he had achieved greatness. He raised his arms to the crowd, which replied with a roar that could be felt as well as heard. And when he saw the distance he had achieved posted on the electronic scoreboard, he did a somersault on the track.

Seconds later, however, Conley learned that the wind at his back as he raced down the runway was measured at 2.1 meters per second. For Conley's effort to be listed as a world record, the wind had to be blowing 2 meters per second or less.

Nevertheless, it was a jump for the annals of track and field and it brought Conley, at the age of 29, the biggest moment of his career. It was the second longest wind-aided jump ever, falling an inch short of a jump turned in by Banks four years ago in Indianapolis that also came with a following wind and thus does not appear in the record book.

Conley's achievement came on a day in which South Africa won its first Olympic medal in 32 years, the best female diver in the world announced her retirement after winning a gold medal and the host nation continued its astonishing climb up the medal standings by winning its seventh, eighth and ninth event of the Games.

Never before had Spain won more than a single gold medal in any Olympics.

Sixteen gold medals were awarded Monday — five of them in yachting and six in track and field.

It was in yachting that Spain won its three gold medals Monday.

American boxers also began clinching medals by reaching the semifinals and so did those involved in the Olympic tennis tournament — Americans Mary Joe Fernandez and Jennifer Capriati among them.

The victory by Conley gave the United States its first and only gold medal of the day, but the Americans wound up with nine medals overall Monday to run their total for the Games to 65.

The Unified Team has 76 total medals, 32 of them gold to 20 for the United States.

Before Conley's huge triple jump, activities at the track had already produced dramatics.

Tigers' Schembechler fired as club president

DETROIT (UPI) — Bo Schembechler, the president of the Detroit Tigers, was fired Monday by Thomas Monaghan, the owner of the American League club.

In addition, the Tigers announced that Jim Campbell, chairman of the board and chief executive officer who joined the club in 1949, was also "leaving the team," the Tigers said.

Schembechler, the former head football coach of the Michigan Wolverines, reportedly had threatened to sue Monaghan for breach of contract for failure to pay him certain bonuses when he became the 12th president of the Tigers on Jan. 8, 1990.

Schembechler succeeded Campbell as club president.

Monaghan, who has been reported to be selling the club for $80 million to $85 million to Mike Ilitch, owner of pizza empire Little Caesar and the Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League, said there are differences between Schembechler and himself that involved no one else that made the action necessary.

In the interim, Monaghan, owner of Domino's pizza chain, has "assumed the role of president of the club.

Monaghan said Campbell, also a former general manager, will be leaving the team. Monaghan expressed his "heartfelt thanks" and appreciation to Campbell for his many contributions to the Detroit Tigers organization over the years.

"Jim has been an invaluable ally, confidant and consultant throughout my years as the Tigers owner," he said.

"I will miss working with him very much."

Schembechler, who celebrated his 24th wedding anniversary Monday, was responsible for the day-to-day operations of the Tigers.

Olympic women hoopsters defeat Spanish team 114-59

BADALONA, Spain (UPI) — Medina Dixon scored 28 points and the U.S. women's basketball team used its paralyzing pressure defense to hold Spain without a field goal for a 10:50 stretch Monday night in posting a 114-59 Olympic victory.

The United States, seeking a third straight gold medal, improved to 3-0 with the victory to clinch the top spot in Pool B and will meet the Unified Team in Wednesday night's semifinals.

The United States has won 15 straight games in Olympic competition, boosting its own Olympic record. The United States has not lost since a 112-77 setback to the Soviet Union in the 1976 Montreal Games. Dixon's 28 points was the most ever scored by a U.S. women's player in the Olympics, breaking the record of 27 held by several others. The 114 points was also the most scored by a U.S. team, breaking the record of 111 scored in the opening game victory over Czechoslovakia.

The tenacious U.S. defense recorded 31 steals to run its three-game total to 101.

Football Commissioner Tagliabue defends player restrictions at trial

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue spent Thursday morning making the case for the league's Plan B player restrictions, but was attacked in the afternoon as the leading defender of monopolist pro football owners.

Tagliabue took the stand as the first witness called by NFL attorney Frank Rothman after lawyers for the eight players suing the NFL under antitrust laws rested their case Wednesday.

Under friendly questioning by Rothman, Tagliabue explained why he thought the owners' right of first refusal for players offered contracts from other teams under the league's Plan B system was necessary.

"The right of first refusal preserves and reinforces the distribution of talent around the league," Tagliabue said.

"It provides depth of talent and continuity of core players on teams.

"The league's competitive balance and financial stability would be jeopardized if there weren't such a system."

The eight players, led by former New York Jets running back Freeman McNeil, are challenging the legality of the NFL's Plan B system, which they say inhibits free agency for players and denies them the right to market themselves freely.

Under the plan, any team that signs one of 37 "protected" players from another team must compensate the original team, usually with a pair of first-round draft choices.

The original team has the right to match the offer and retain the players.

"It's extremely important for us to maintain a competitive balance," Tagliabue said.

Marines prepare to land in Kuwait

U.S. to conduct three military exercises in gulf

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. Marines are preparing to land on Kuwaiti beaches in one of three simultaneous military exercises designed to demonstrate the American commitment to the defense of that nation, the Pentagon said Monday.

A spokesman, Navy Lt. Cmdr. Joe Gradisher, said the amphibious landing will begin on Tuesday morning Kuwaiti time. The landing, code-named Eager Mace 92-3, will be coordinated with another drill code-named Native Fury 92. That second exercise will test the offloading of heavy equipment such as tanks stored on ships in the Indian Ocean. The ships are intended to speed up any U.S. military deployment to the Middle East.

In a hasty response to Iraqi dictator Saddam Hussein's grudging cooperation with U.N. inspectors seeking to enforce a ban on nuclear, chemical or biological weapons, U.S. Army troops will be going to Kuwait over the next three weeks in a third exercise code-named Intrinsic Action. The reinforcement comes almost exactly two years after Iraq invaded Kuwait.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said Saturday that the Army maneuver had been planned for next month but was moved up in response to Iraq's tardy admission last week of a U.N. inspection team to its agriculture ministry, where evidence of Iraq's nuclear weapons program was believed to have been stored. The U.N. inspectors had kept the building under surveillance for three weeks until they were driven off by mobs of demonstrators. Iraq had agreed to dismantle its nuclear, chemical and biological weapons programs as a condition of the cease-fire that ended last year's Persian Gulf War. "If there had never been a dust-up at the agricultural ministry," Cheney said in a CNN television interview, "if there was no controversy at all in Iraq today, we would have done this exercise in September."

"What we have done since the end of the gulf war," Cheney said, "without building a major U.S.

base in the Persian Gulf region...is to conclude a series of agreements that allow us to demonstrate our capacity to return rapidly to the region in the event of a crisis."

"This is one more piece of that program that allow us to demonstrate to would-be adversaries that the United States is ready to go on short notice and to reassure our friends, such as the Saudis, such as the Kuwaitis and the other gulf states that we are prepared to come to their assistance if it's needed," the defense

Bush: Clinton lacks experience in foreign affairs

DALTON, Ga. (UPI) — President Bush, lagging in the polls, campaigned in the South Monday and accused "a certain Southern governor" of having "crazy ideas" on domestic issues and no experience in foreign affairs.

On a one-day swing to Georgia and Florida, Bush again played up his running theme of trust and who had "pretty good credentials" to be president.

In rambling remarks to employees of Shaw Industries, carpet manufacturers in Dalton, Bush said:

"These days you get some crazy ideas. These days the other side says the way to improve economy is to raise taxes by $150 billion and at least half of that will fall on family farmers and small businesses and they call that change.

"I guess it makes sense because if the other side gets into power, change will be all you have left in your pocket," he said.

"And here's another crazy idea," he added, declaring that Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton's health care plan would call for "a 7 percent payroll tax to finance a government take-over scheme."

"When you get down to it,

Violence erupts in South Africa; five people killed

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Five persons were reported killed when violence erupted Monday at the start of the African National Congress's pro-democracy campaign.

An undetermined number of wounded included two journalists shot by unknown gunmen, the South African Press Association reported.

ANC Secretary-General Cyril Ramaphosa confirmed at a press conference Monday afternoon that Washington Post correspondent Paul Taylor was shot in the shoulder and Philip van Niekerk of the Johannesburg-based Weekly Mail was shot in the jaw.

Both journalists were in Sebokeng township, 37 miles south of Johannesburg, covering the pro-democracy campaign when they were shot at by unknown gunmen.

Taylor and van Niekerk were taken to the Sebokeng hospital for treatment from where they are expected to be transferred to Johannesburg General Hospital.

University orders parts to repair air conditioning

By Jeremy Finley
Administration Writer

The breakdown that has left eight SIUC buildings without air conditioning since July 24 may be repaired by the end of the week, an SIUC official said.

The breakdown of the air conditioning in the Recreation Center, Faner Hall, College of Technical Studies, Lawson Hall, Agricultural Building, Davies Gym, Life Science II and Lesar

Law Building has caused low class attendance and prompted some professors to move classes.

Harrel Learch, SIUC Maintenance Superintendent, said the damaged parts of the air conditioning system are being repaired in Pasadena, Texas and should arrive by the end of this week.

Learch said maintenance has not been able to investigate what caused the shutdown of the system.

The breakdown occurred in the refrigeration system of the west plant located in the Communications Building.

Learch said fans have been turned on in the buildings and some sections in Life Science II have received air conditioning.

"We have been fortunate with the cool weather," he said.

Darla Hartline, Recreation Center information desk employee, said attendance has been considerably low, and some

"We have had a number of phone calls, and even some people asking for a refund of their money for the day," Hartline said.

Signs are posted across the Center warning about the heat, and recommending participants wear light clothing, drink plenty of fluids and take frequent breaks.

Fans are in the aerobics room and the freeweight room at the Recreation Center.

SIKH MILITANTS EXECUTE 29 INDIAN CAPTIVES — Sikh militants shot dead 29 people and left their bodies strewn along a river bank in northern India Monday, just three days after taking them captive as they collected firewood from a jungle near their village. The incident was part of a spate of violence that killed at least 38 people in the northern part of the country Monday, including two boys who were slain when a bomb exploded in a mosque in northern Uttar Pradesh state.

HEAVY FIGHTING LEAVES 33 DEAD, 170 WOUNDED —Serbian guerrillas fought Bosnia-Herzegovina's forces across the newly independent republic Monday and news reports said at least 33 people have been killed and 170 injured in the past 24 hours. The casualty figures were supplied by Bosnia-Herzegovina's crisis committee. Of the total, 18 people died and 57 were wounded in the capital of Sarajevo. Telephone links with Sarajevo have been cut since Wednesday.

ISRAELI JETS RAID HEZBOLLAH POSITIONS —Israeli Air Force jets attacked Muslim guerrilla positions in southern Lebanon Monday for the third time in less than 24 hours, wounding at least four people. Two Israeli helicopters raided positions of the pro-Irani Hezbollah in the Iqlim Al Tuffah region, a cluster of Shiite villages, east of the southern port city of Sidon. Eight rockets crashed on hills overlooking the villages of Milta, Louweizeh, Arab Salim and Ain Bouswar.

Military officers on the Navy P-3 Orion surveillance plane pinpointed Escobar's location by intercepting his conversations on cellular telephone.

DEFENSE EXAMINES FIERS, ATTACKS CREDIBILITY —The defense attacked the credibility of Alan Fiers Monday, with a goal of showing the former Central Intelligence Agency official is trying to cover up his own involvement in the Iran-Contra affair at the expense of his spymaster boss, Clair George. During his third day of cross-examination of the government's chief witness, attorney Richard Hiby attempted to point out inconsistencies in Fiers' testimony.

PROTFESTERS SEEK NEW TRIAL FOR NAVY SPY —Jewish activists mounted a vigil Monday at the nation's most secure federal penitentiary to protest the life sentence of convicted U.S. Navy spy Jonathan Jay Pollard. Members of the Jewish Defense League and political groups Betar and Tagar said the three-day vigil that began Sunday is intended to publicize what they believe is Pollard's unduly harsh sentence. The groups have made similar protests before.

SEARS ROEBUCK COMPANY MOVES TO SUBURBS —The first of 5,000 Sears Roebuck & Co. employees who are leaving Chicago for the suburbs boarded vans and chartered buses Monday to begin the move to the new Merchandise Group headquarters in suburban Hoffman Estates. The move to be completed late this year — nearly 20 years after the first employees reported to the downtown Sears Tower, the world's tallest building — is intended to reduce Sears' costs.

Local ironworker artist's work to be featured with paintings

By Christine Leninger
Entertainment Editor

Ironworker Roberta Elliott said she does not work full time at her art. She works overtime, and has been for four years.

With a doctorate in physiology, Elliott was hooked on the art of ironworking since her days of college, she said.

"I decided I was getting sick of the physiology work, so I started focusing on my ironworking more and more until I finally decided to do it as a job," said the Cobden resident. "Now I can't seem to find time not to do it."

Elliott's ironworks will be featured in an exhibition at the United Associated Artists Gallery, along with watercolor paintings by Rene Potter of Makanda.

The functional ironwork items forged by Elliott reflect patterns of growth and forms in nature. These decorative pieces were created for use both within the home and in the garden.

Elliott began ironworking while in college where she took some classes in blacksmithing.

"I enjoyed the classes very much," Elliott said, "but I knew that horseshoe making was not what I was interested in."

Elliott will show three tables, a wind sculpture, a sample from a railing she has created, a screened room divider and candle holders, as her part of the exhibition.

Potter's watercolors take the form of tablescapes, incorporating both fabricated and natural objects. The patterning often is complex and the colors range from intense jewel tones to delicate pastels.

Potter said her watercolors have been a part of her life since childhood.

"Most children start out with painting using watercolors," Potter said. "I have worked with other media, but watercolor has always been my favorite."

Potter said she has been painting seriously for 20 years.

"My painting is something that always has been fulfilling for me," she said. "I paint because I enjoy it."

Potter paints still-lives using layers of cellophane on large paper, and said she uses things from her own life and things received from others as subjects for paintings.

"I'm starting to think of my paintings as being my children—I would hate to betray any one of them," Potter said. "I think my favorite is usually the one I am presently working on."

One of Potter's works includes a tabletop of Sunday comic strips and a television with an Olympic newscaster on the screen.

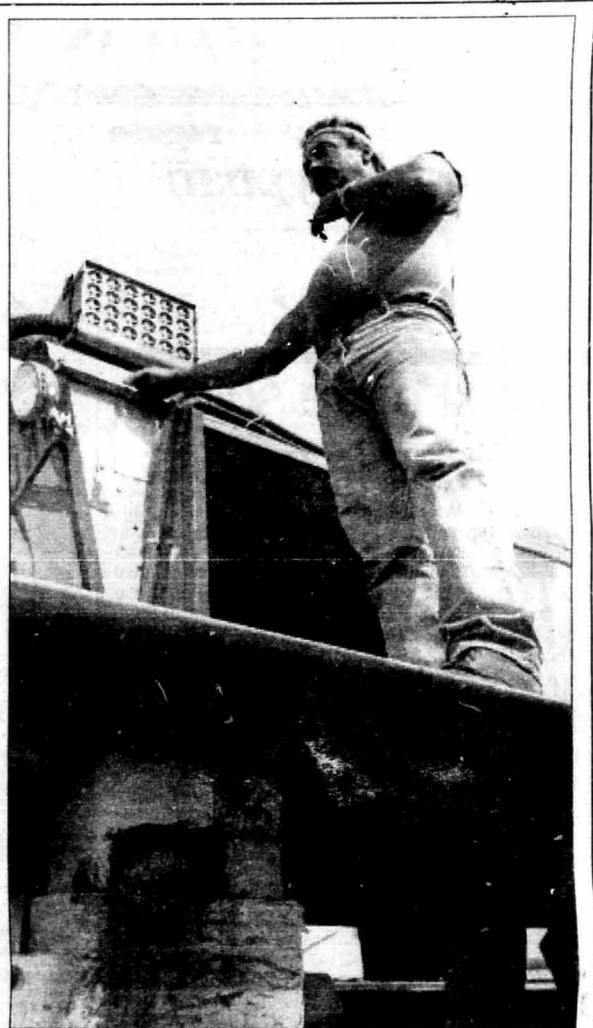

Another of her works includes an array of colorful peppers Potter found at a recent Farmer's Market.

"I call it 'Hotter,' because it is so colorful, and the peppers are beautiful," Potter said.

The focus of Potter's work, as opposed to the functionality of Elliott's, is painting for the sheer pleasure of painting, rather than being able to use what she has made.

"If people like my paintings and buy them, they will find a place to put them," Potter said.

The exhibit opens Tuesday at 213 S. Illinois Ave. in Carbondale, and will run through Aug. 28. The show is free and open to the public from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays.

Bat tests positive for rabies

By Rebecca Campbell
General Assignment Writer

A bat testing positive for the rabies virus was found in a residential area five miles southwest of Murphysboro on Sand Ridge Road.

An unvaccinated dog was found playing with the bat early Friday morning by a neighbor of the dog owner, said Lloyd Nelson, Jackson County animal control officer. The bat still was alive when the dog was playing with it, but it died later and was tested by the Illinois Department of Public Health in Carbondale, Nelson said.

The owner relinquished the dog to the county and it was killed, he said. The other alternative was to keep the animal quar-antined for six months, which is very costly, Nelson said.

Two bats with rabies were discovered in the past year, which is an average number, he said.

Nelson said people should have their pets vaccinated because they are not always aware of what animals the pets come in contact with.

"If it hadn't been for the neighbor getting up at 2 a.m. to see what the dog was barking about, the chance of us discovering the bat would have been nil," Nelson said.

If someone is ever bitten by an animal, it should be reported to the animal control office, Nelson said.

The best way to treat a bite wound is to scrub it with soap and water, and to contact a physician immediately, he said.

Saluki pride shines at Olympic games

SIUC WAS PART of the Olympic dream again this year. High jump standout Darrin Plab, Connie Price-Smith in discus and shotput and cyclist Sally Zack, all former members of SIUC athletic teams, represented the United States in Barcelona. Former Saluki basketball star Kai Nurnberger was a member of the German basketball team, which faced the U.S. "dream team" July 29.

The presence of former SIUC athletes at the most important sports competition in the world is a source of pride for the University, and proof that Saluki sports can help athletes to get to the top.

PLAB, A TWO-TIME NCAA champion, was second at the U.S. Olympic Trial, after clearing 7 feet, 8 1/2 inches. Plab qualified for the trials after his second NCAA championship. He also won the NCAA title in 1991 jumping 7-6 1/2. He recently gave up his last year of eligibility to SIUC to turn pro, and competed in Europe while preparing for the Barcelona games. During the qualifying round, Plab failed to clear 7-5 and to advance to the finals.

Connie Price-Smith was both a basketball and track athlete at SIUC. She qualified for the discus and shotput events. Price-Smith did not make it past the first shotput round, and was eliminated from the discus competition after a throw of 192 feet, 6 inches, a far cry from her best throw of 210 feet, which made her the 12th ranked in the world this year. She had competed in the same events in the 1988 Olympics in Seoul.

Sally Zack, who was a member of the 1985 SIUC women's track and cross country team, was the best qualifying American in the women's 81 kilometer cycle road race. It was the second Olympic appearance for Zack, who finished 16th in the same event in the 1988 games.

Nurnberger played for the Salukis from 1986 to 1989 and was an all-conference player his last two years. His team became yet another victim of the U.S. "dream team" on the second day of the games, losing 111-68. Nurnberger plays professional basketball in Germany.

THESE ATHLETES HAVE carried at least some of the experience acquired at SIUC to the summit of international sports competition. It is this experience, together with the determination and sweat of these men and women that got them into the exclusive club of the Olympic games. Their efforts have brought Saluki pride as high as it has ever been and their achievement is a source of inspiration for all those who aspire to be all they can be.

Quotable Quotes

"You'd like to be a superhero, but my cape slipped off."—Unites States Olympic swimmer Matt Biondi, to reporters who asked him about his fifth place finish in the 100-meter freestyle, where American commentators perceived him as a winner. Olympic commentators have been heavily criticized for branding athletes who do not win gold medals as having "disappointing finishes."

Public-housing policy not logical; tenants unable to purchase homes

By Lawrence J. Vale
Los Angeles Times News Service

IN A SOCIETY that venerates the privately owned, single-family home, public housing has remained perpetually contentious. Now that there is reinvigorated debate over the successes and failures of a half-century of government-sponsored social welfare programs, public housing is also coming under renewed scrutiny.

LOST SOMEWHERE in the shuffle of rapid policy-making, however, has been the gap in logic between the Bush administration's ideological commitment to home-ownership opportunities for public-housing residents and the mounting evidence of their increasingly extreme socio-economic deprivation.

INSPIRED BY the sales of council housing in Britain, policy-makers at the Housing and Urban Development Department have wholeheartedly embraced the idea that American public housing should be sold off to tenants.

Yet an increasingly large majority of public-housing families lacks adequate financial resources to participate, and much of the public-homes stock falls far short of the desirable environments usually associated with home ownership.

IGNORING THE results of a

HUD-sponsored study that cast considerable doubt on HUD's Public Housing Homeownership Demonstration Project, HUD Secretary Jack Kemp incongruously continues to tout public-housing homeownership.

Can he really be oblivious to the ways that such limited and idealized alternatives to public housing are almost comically implausible notions for most public-housing residents?

PUBLIC-HOUSING tenants are very poor and getting poorer. In the vast majority of large public housing authorities, average household income has been declining, at least since the mid-1980s.

HUD NOW ESTIMATES that more than 80 percent of the non-elderly public housing population lives below the poverty line and that the very poorest families are disproportionately non-white.

IN LARGE public-housing authorities, approximately two-thirds of non-elderly families are headed by single women.

As a percentage of only those families with dependent children the preponderance of female-headed households is even more overwhelming.

The national average is 85 percent, and it surpasses 95 percent in some cities.

ABOUT THREE-quarters of public housing families report receiving no income from employment, and a growing majority of non-elderly public housing families receive welfare.

THESE TRENDS identify a population that is ever more vulnerable, both economically and physically.

Because public-housing has been asked to bear special responsibility to shelter the poorest of the poor, there has been an aggregation of particularly vulnerable households in many multi-family developments at a time when drug-related crime and violence is on the rise.

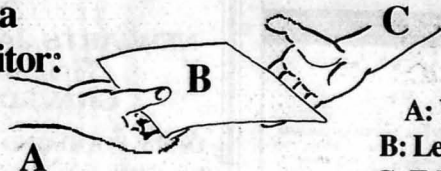

IS IT THEN SURPRISING that in some places the public-housing stock has been allowed to deteriorate so much that even the Bush administration calls it "severely distressed"?

THE NATIONAL Commission on Severely Distressed Public Housing was established by Congress in December 1989 and charged with establishing a "national action plan to eliminate distressed public housing by the year 2000."

This blue-ribbon panel of housing on text of extreme socio-economic deprivation that must be called into question.

Their condition was not immediately known.

In a separate incident a Sky-TV crew filming mass action in Alexandria township north of Johannesburg was fired at, correspondent Paul Tilsley said. No injuries were reported.

At least five deaths had been reported by late morning in scattered violence.

Burning barricades were erected on access roads leading to some black townships, and police have reported numerous incidents of stone throwing and the intimidation of people refusing to adhere to a two-day national strike.

In the most serious violence, three men were shot to death at 4 a.m. by police in Soweto, a sprawling township that borders Johannesburg.

Police said they fired in self-defense after they were fired on first upon investigating reports of stone throwing.

A burned body was reported found by police in a township outside Durban, 373 miles south of Johannesburg.

A 18-year-old youth was stabbed to death in a black township outside the coastal city of Cape Town, 900 miles south of Johannesburg, while trucks were covered with burning tires to stop trains carrying township commuters to their jobs in the city.

After the shootings in Soweto, four policemen were wounded in an hour-long gun battle with township residents, Soweto police spokesman Lt. Govindasamy Mariemthoo said.

A number of police vehicles were attacked with gasoline bombs in the area, the South African Press Association reported.

The clashes Monday follow a bloody weekend which saw more than 20 people killed and nearly 80 injured.

The extent of the two-day strike was still in the process of being assessed late Monday morning.

Some 1,900 U.S. troops will be involved in the Eager Mace 92-3 amphibious exercise.

Marine participants will include a battalion landing team and a helicopter squadron. The force's headquarters will be aboard the amphibious assault ship USS Tarawa.

Some 900 other marines and sailors will take part in the Native Fury 92 equipment landing. This includes a Marine support group, a Navy beach group and portions of a Marine aircraft wing.

Kuwaiti forces will participate in all three exercises under terms of a defense cooperation agreement that the two countries signed late last year.

Pentagon spokesmen said no Iraqi military reaction to the exercises had been detected. Iraq recently reiterated its claim to Kuwait.

leadership is about trust," and "trust works both ways," Bush said, adding, "It's not for the government to make the important decisions about your lives."

"We have a plan to provide insurance for all those who need it, those who cannot afford it, and will protect the basic quality of our health care," he said.

"As long as I am president I am not going to let our medical system to be socialized or nationalized," he told the gathering.

Touching on free trade, another issue where he and Clinton differ, Bush said the question today "is not can America compete in the global economy, the question is how do we stay No. 1."

"Every time I was out of the country I learned again how important America was to the entire world," Bush said.

"I heard a certain Southern governor say the other day that this country was being ridiculed around the world," he observed. "Well, I suspect, and I'm not going to name names quite yet, that he hasn't been around much."

"I'd like him to walk the streets of Warsaw, or Moscow or sit down with (Russian President) Boris Yeltsin or (German Chancellor) Helmut Kohl," Bush said, referring to his travels throughout the world. "He will find out what we already know — that the United States is the undisputed leader of the world."

Republican party delegation: Media treats Quayle unfairly

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — As the GOP convention nears, Vice President Dan Quayle stands on rock-solid ground with the Texas Republican delegation, whose members see him as a rising star eclipsed by an unfair and unrelenting media.

Despite widespread and open discussion about Quayle possibly stepping down — even among Republicans — he is all but certain to remain on the ticket with President Bush for what promises to be a bloody campaign with the Democrats.

The gaffe-prone Quayle has been the object of ridicule and media scrutiny and the butt of comedians' jokes since the day he was selected as Bush's running mate in 1988.

Last week, a Chicago Tribune editorial urged Bush to drop Quayle, saying "Hardly any American can be comfortable with the thought that Quayle could become president in the beat of a heart."

And a former chairman of the Florida Republican Party placed a full-page ad in the Washington Post criticizing Quayle for his lack of "political leadership" and urging him to "step aside with grace."

Although some Republicans fear

Bush said people who "tear down this country and try to make this country a second rate power...simply don't understand the greatness of the United States of America."

The president said, "If you want someone to lead the world, you need someone who understands and who trusts you." He added, "As long as I am president I am going to fight to see that you have a chance to sell these products anywhere around the world."

Arguing that free trade creates jobs, Bush said he would not let the country become protectionist. "Let the other side say our country is ridiculed, laughed at by the world... Let them ridicule and whine. I'm going to do what is right."

Later, in an address to about 4,500 people in Jacksonville, Fla., Bush responded to the polls showing him running 20 to 30 points behind Clinton.

"Others can listen to the polls," he added. "Others can pay attention to the polls. I am going to do what is right for the United States of America."

Bush likened his own political fate to contestants in the Olympics "who came on strong to win at the finish."

"And we are going to do the same thing to this so-called new team," he said, referring to Clinton and his running mate, Sen. Al Gore of Tennessee. "Don't worry. Let's see how they can take it."

Wildfire in California burns 5,300 acres

United Press International

Firefighters extended lines in the parched chaparral country of central California's Sierra Nevada foothills Monday to contain half of a 5,300-acre wildfire—California's largest this season.

Hot, dry winds and dense pine trees were impeding efforts to control another 5,300-acre blaze in Idaho where flames were devastating an area proposed as a wildlife preserve.

Officials expressed concern that more was to come.

"California is facing some of the worst fire conditions ever, with six years of drought, 10 million dead trees, thousands of acres of dead brush," said spokeswoman Karen Terrell of the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection. "Standing trees are as dry as kiln-dried lumber, and we are about six weeks ahead of what we normally would expect."

In Tuolumne County near the community of Moccasin, Calif., 2,970 firefighters built 7 miles of line around the wildfire that began in the foothills Saturday, with 4 miles of the perimeter remaining, CDF spokeswoman Sharon Torrence said.

It was touched off Saturday by a runaway campfire at the Moccasin campground near Don Pedro Reservoir west of Yosemite National Park and about 120 miles east of San Francisco. The campfire was set in a spot without the required ring of rocks around it and 10 feet of cleared area, authorities said.

Several hundred Tuolumne County residents who were evacuated from their homes at Moccasin, Big Oak Flat and Fernalde on the weekend were told they might be able to return by nightfall Monday, Torrence said. Highway 120 was closed at the Awareness decreased nationwide fire deaths

QUINCY, Mass. (UPI) — Fire deaths in the United States decreased in 1991 for the third straight year, due in part to education efforts and increased public awareness, a report said Monday.

About 4,465 civilians died in 1991 as a result of fire, a decrease of 14.1 percent from 1990, the National Fire Protection Association said in its annual report.

The total included some 3,500 deaths in home fires, a decrease of 13.6 percent from 1990.

Because home fires account for more than three-quarters of all fire deaths in the United States, "fire safety initiatives targeted at the home are the key to any reductions in the overall fire death toll," said Michael J. Karter Jr., who wrote the report.

The association said it could not pinpoint what brought about the reductions, but said the trend

"seems to indicate that people are doing some things right."

NFPA said public education, improvements in fire-safe design of products — such as fire-resistant fabrics — the increased use of fire detection and protection equipment and adoption and enforcement of fire safety codes and standards may have played a role.

"The decrease in civilian fire deaths over the past three years is encouraging," said George Miller, president of the 60,000-member organization, but he said he was "cautiously optimistic."

Miller said despite the three-year decrease, the United States "continues to experience among the highest rates of death, injury and property loss from fire in the world. We still have a long, long way to go in improving the fire loss picture in our country."

Miller emphasized the need for all homes to be equipped with smoke detectors, for increased use of automatic fire sprinklers in homes, and wide-reaching public fire safety education programs.

While fire deaths dropped last year, the number of fires — 2,041,500 — actually increased just over 1 percent from the previous year. There were an estimated 363,000 fires in one- and two-family dwellings, up just over one percent, and 101,500 fires in apartments, an increase of 6.3 percent.

The group said 490 deaths resulted from arson-related fires. It said there were 98,000 incendiary and suspicious fires last year.

Fires in 1991 caused an estimated $9.5 billion in property damage in 1991, up by more than 21 percent. The association said this increase was due almost entirely to the Oakland Hills fire in California that caused an estimated loss of $1.5 billion.

EPA standards reducing smog to remain same

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Environmental Protection Agency Monday announced a decision against implementing new, tougher standards to reduce smog.

The decision was based on scientific evidence gathered up to early 1989 that was reviewed by an independent agency advisory group, the EPA said. "EPA concluded that these documents did not provide a sufficient basis for revising the standard at this time," the agency said.

The EPA added, however, that "a number of new studies" had been conducted subsequently and the agency would review that evidence to determine whether any revisions were necessary. The agency estimated it would take two to three years to fully review the additional evidence.

"EPA has already taken a whole series of significant actions under the new Clean Air Act to significantly reduce smog levels throughout the nation," said William G. Rosenberg, EPA assistant administrator for air and radiation.

"Past EPA initiatives helped reduce atmospheric smog levels 10 percent from 1981 to 1990, with violations of the standard also dropping 51 percent during the same period," he said in a statement.

The agency reviewed the current standard for ground-level ozone, the major component of smog, after the American Lung Association, the Environmental Defense Fund, the Natural Resources Defense Council, and the states of New York, Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island filed a lawsuit in October 1991 demanding the agency comply with a requirement of the Clean Air Act that the agency review its standards every five years.

In February, U.S. District Court Judge John Bartels of Brooklyn ordered the EPA to propose changing or keeping the rules by August and to make a final decision by March 1, 1993.

Monday's decision drew immediate criticism.

"There is a significant body of scientific research that shows harmful lung health effects occurring at ozone levels below the current standard," said Dr. Lee Reichman, association president. "It is unfortunate that the EPA did not propose to adopt a standard that is protective of public health."

Nearly 32 million Americans live in areas that have unhealthy levels of ozone in the air but meet current federal standards, and 127 million Americans live in cities that violate the current standard, the association said.

"Ozone poses a health threat to millions of people, especially children, the elderly and people with lung disease, in many areas where the government says the air is safe," said Peter Baljet, chairman of the association's National Air Conservation Commission.

Navy boot camp tries coed training to contend abuse

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — The Navy has begun an experiment at its Orlando boot camp with coed training in hopes of reducing sexual harassment in a service notorious for abusive behavior toward women.

"I think we'll see a decline in sexual harassment when these men and women, having trained side by side, get to their ultimate assignments," said Rear Adm. Leonard Oden, commander of the training center.

"With a lot of hindsight, I've been asking myself why we didn't start this integrated training back in 1973" when women first began training at the camp, he said.

The Orlando center is the only Navy boot camp to admit women. About 23,000 recruits, one-third of them women, will undergo their two-month training in Orlando this year.

Last year a Pentagon report concluded that sexual harassment at the center was "unacceptably high." A survey of 2,000 women found that half had been harassed and one-third said they had been raped or otherwise sexually assaulted.

Until recently, the men and women were barred from even talking to each other, an unnatural state that some believe contributed to the rampant harassment.

In an experiment that began in February, male and female recruits drill, eat and practice salutes and knots together in 80-member companies.

Only their sleeping quarters, bathrooms and health clinics remain separated.

The program appears to be working.

Highway 49 junction and above Groveland.

Only minor injuries were reported and one shed was destroyed. The cost of fighting the three-day fire thus far was $860,000, Torrence said.

Elsewhere, helicopters flew in firefighters to beef up a 900-member force battling a 1,700-acre wildfire in the Ventana Wilderness near Big Sur on the coast of Monterey County and about 110 miles south of San Francisco.

Crews had more than 35 percent of the fire contained by midnight Monday and expected full containment Wednesday morning. U.S. Forest Service spokeswoman Juanita Freel said the fire was started Saturday by the explosion of some materials — probably by spontaneous combustion — in a shed on private land.

There were no significant losses to structures or major injuries, but the cost of two days' firefighting effort was $500,000. Arroyo Seco Road was closed to all but emergency equipment and residents.

The California wildfires were the worst of the current season, which already has exceeded five-year averages by some 600 fires and about 8,000 acres, CDF spokeswoman Terrell said.

In Stanley, Idaho, high winds and dense pine forests stymied fire crews working on a lightning-sparked blaze that has destroyed 5,300 acres in a proposed wildlife area in the Salmon River Mountain Range.

Debbie Chives, a spokeswoman for the Bureau of Land Management, said a force of 900 BLM, U.S. Forest Service and Idaho firefighters have been delayed in their efforts to get a handle on the blaze because of the rugged terrain.

"We are having to fight this fire totally on the ground and that is slowing us down," she said. "We tried to use air strikes the first day but the fire retardant just stuck to the top of the pine trees and did not reach the forest floor."

Marina man

Former Carbondale policeman buys bait shop

By Jay Reed
Sports Writer

When Buddy Murphy retired from the Carbondale Police Department in 1992 he not only went fishing, he bought a bait shop and marina.

Murphy, a Memphis, Tenn., native, is a broad man with the Mississippi Delta coloring his speech and a white mustache that could pass for Mark Twain's. Murphy purchased Pirates Cove Marina near Crab Orchard Lake in May after 16 years of police service in Carbondale.

Murphy, who moved from Memphis to Murphysboro during his high school days, said that the relaxation and recreation of the many Southern Illinois lakes enticed him to stay and buy the 10 employee marina.

"We are in an area with six lakes within fifteen minutes," he said. "The lakes of Southern Illinois will draw people because of their accessibility."

Murphy knows about fishing in Southern Illinois. In 1985, he won the Illinois division of U.S. Bass State Point Championships and came in 21st out of 360 teams at the U.S. Bass World Team Championships at Lake Mead, Nev. In 1988, he won the Illinois State Police tournament at Newton Lake and he won the Hawkins Shriver four-man bass tournament at Crab Orchard Lake with a four day tournament record haul of 59 pounds 11 ounces. Murphy also has won three bass tournaments on Kinkaid Lake from 1985 to 1987.

"I guess my partners and the knowledge from local fishermen added to my success," he said. "It also helps to have started fishing at 4 years old and 12 years of tournament fishing."

"My favorite fish to eat is crappie, but my favorite fish to catch is bass."

Murphy suggests different baits for five popular fish in Southern Illinois Lakes.

Murphy said that channel catfish can best be caught on cut shad, leaches and minnows. Striper Bass are being caught on live minnows and Little Andys (a heavier lure) and Little Suzys (a vibrating lure). Largemouth bass are being caught mainly on artificial Cottonmouth lures. Bluegill are being reeled in with meal worms and artificial tiny jigs. Crappie are being caught on minnows and artificially colored jigs.

Murphy said that fishing on Crab Orchard Lake slows during the hot, humid days from July 15 to the end of August, peaking from 5:30 to 10:30 a.m. and 5:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Buddy Murphy of Carbondale checks over a 200 horse power Mariner at the Pirates Cove Marina at Crab Orchard Lake. Murphy, the Marina's owner, was working for the shop Monday morning.

Murphy said that prime fishing business occurs in the fall and spring, when fishers have the longest and best possible fishing hours.

Murphy said that Crab Orchard is monitored carefully to ensure a high quality of fishing on the lake, which includes keeping the food chain intact for the fish.

"They have programs where fish biologists study the habitat and monitor the fish," he said. "They try to keep the lake full of food sources for the fish."

Murphy recently expanded

Pirates Cove to include sandwiches, ski accessories, boating accessories and boat welding.

Murphy said his biggest bait sellers are crickets, minnows and worms. Murphy hopes to expand his line of artificial bait and hopefully big fish stories.

Local fishing holes abound with crappie, catfish

By Jay Reed
Sports Writer

Fishing holes within a 15 mile radius of Carbondale offer anglers the opportunity to tell the fish stories about the one that did not get away.

Fishers have the opportunity not only to enjoy the prime catches that come from the little Egyptian waters, but also the natural beauty which surrounds the many lakes, which were dammed and flooded.

Cedar Lake, located four miles south of Carbondale, is a secluded wooded setting lake with bass, bluegill, crappie, catfish and walleye ready for the catch. The lake boasts bass averaging 2 pounds and walleye weighing in at 7 pounds. The bluegill and crappie are best in April and May when they spawn toward the shore.

Jake Cox, Cedar Lake Chief, said the main goal of lake management is the enforcement of lake policies, such as fish regulation and maintenance of good water quality. Cox said that the lake has a 15 inch length limit for fish which are kept by the fisher.

"The main reason we police the lake is to guarantee and maintain the growth of the fish population," he said.

Boat motors on Cedar Lake are limited to 10 horsepower capacity.

Crab Orchard Lake, a 6,965 acre lake located in the Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge four miles east of Carbondale, is known for the largemouth bass, channel catfish, crappie, bluegill and striped bass which inhabit its shallow waters.

"It is an excellent lake for large mouth bass, because the lake has a fertile food supply," said Neil Vincent, Crab Orchard Refuge coordinator. "This makes everyone interested in catching a trophy caliber fish."

The lake attracts fishers May through October looking to catch a Crab Orchard catfish which weigh an average of two and a half pounds.

Vincent said lake attracts 350,000 fishers a year from St. Louis to Paducah.

Devil's Kitchen Lake, located 12 miles south of Carbondale, is deep enough to support cool water trout during the hot summer months and warm water largemouth bass, bluegill and crappie.

The lake averages 36 feet in depth with a maximum depth of 90 feet at the dam.

Steve Timcak, Devil's Kitchen Concessionaire, said that the lake is underutilized because the flooded timber in the lake keeps many boating fishermen from trolling the lake.

Located just west of Devil's Kitchen is Little Grassy Lake. Little Grassy, a 1,200 acre lake, has 36 miles of wooded shoreline with an average depth of 27 feet with a 90 foot depth at the spillway.

Bluegill and crappie are fisherman's delight at Little Grassy in April when they spawn toward the shoreline. Largemouth bass that average 2 pounds can be found in this Williamson County lake, along with channel catfish. The lake was created in 1940 as part of the Crab Orchard National Refuge.

Little Grassy along with Devil's Kitchen have a 10 horsepower motor limit and users must pay a $2 entrance fee to enter Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge for seven days. A duck stamp, for the fisher who uses the refuge often, costs $15 and is good for refuge entrance for one year.

Lake Murphysboro, located one mile west of Murphysboro, contains largemouth bass, bluegill, sunfish, channel catfish, redear sunfish and crappie.

In 1950, the lake was stocked with 260 largemouth bass. Redear sunfish were stocked in 1951 and bluegill were added to the lake in 1952.

Nelson Gilman, Lake Murphysboro site technician, said that the lake stocks channel catfish and uses phosphates to keep the weeds down.

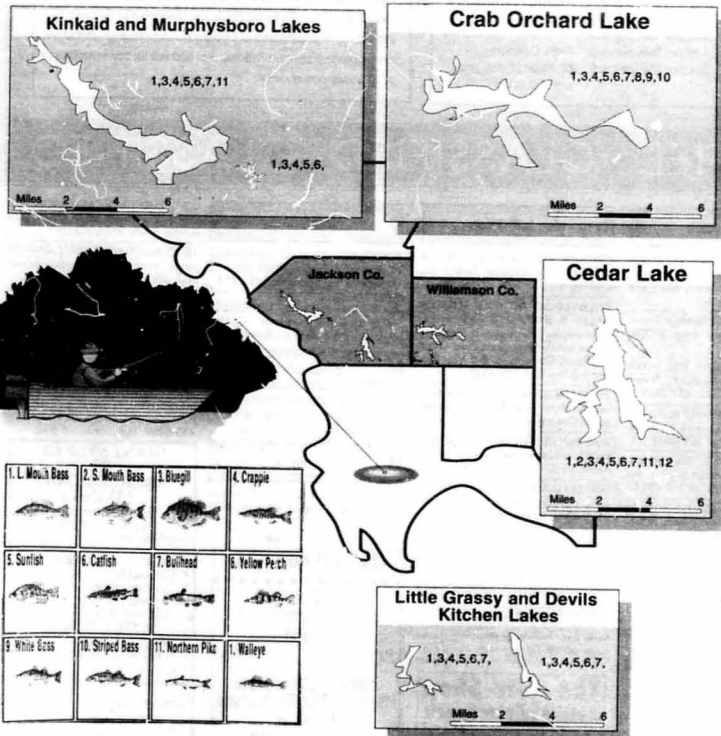

"We have people that come in mostly to catch bass and channel catfish," he said. "The busiest time on the lake is spring and fall."

Lake Kinkaid, located five miles northwest of Murphysboro, is a 2,750 acre lake with a steep, forested 82-mile shoreline that offers anglers an average 2 pound bass, which is caught at an average lake depth of 18 feet.

Bill Randell, co-manager of Lake Kinkaid, said that the fish caught at Lake Kinkaid are catfish, largemouth bass, crappie, white bass, striped bass, bluegill, walleye and muskie.

"We've got a lot of bass and crappie fishers during the day and catfish fishers at night," he said. "The water is so clear and beautiful it makes for a good fishing environment."

Randell said a 24-pound muskie recently was caught at the lake and he expects the state muskie record to come from Lake Kinkaid.

Shuttle crew gears up for complex, risky exercise

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The Atlantis astronauts fired the shuttle's braking rockets Monday, lowering the ship's orbit for the launch Tuesday of an Italian satellite that will be cast 12 miles into space on the end of a fishing line-like tether.

Gearing up for one of the most complex — and risky — exercises ever attempted by a shuttle crew, the astronauts spent the day Monday testing equipment that will be used to measure electrical and optical effects generated by the half-ton satellite as it trolleys through the extreme upper atmosphere.

The tethered satellite's movement through Earth's magnetic field in the presence of electrically charged particles is expected to generate 5,000 volts of electricity. Or so theory predicts.

"We don't know what to expect, that's been the excitement in this whole mission," said flight director Ron Dittemore. "We don't know what's going to happen when we deploy. We have a good idea from our simulations, but what we're doing is brand new."

"So the excitement is certainly high. Maybe there's some apprehension, but basically most of the folks are looking forward to the deploy tomorrow. They've worked too hard and too long and they're anxious to get on with it and see just what's going to happen."

On board Atlantis are commander Loren Shriver, 47, co-pilot Andrew Allen, 36, Swiss astronaut Claude Nicollier, 47, Marsha Ivins, 41, Jeffrey Hoffman, 47, Franklin Chang-Diaz, 42, and Italian Franco Malerba, 45.

The shuttle is scheduled to land Friday at the Kennedy Space Center, but NASA officials are expected to extend the flight one day, which would result in a landing Saturday morning at the Florida shuttleport.

The extra day is being considered to give the crew time to complete experiments toward the end of the flight that otherwise might be affected by time lost launching a European science satellite over the weekend.

Engineers in Germany scrambled Monday to install fresh guidance data aboard the European Space Agency's Eureka satellite to correct problems that prevented the 4.5-ton spacecraft from reaching the proper orbit Sunday after its day-late launch from Atlantis.

A critical 24-minute rocket firing was cut off after just six minutes when engineers at an ESA ground station in Darmstadt, Germany, received data indicating the boxy solar-powered Eureka satellite was not maintaining the proper orientation.

ESA officials said Monday an analysis of the telemetry indicated on-board data used to calibrate a sun sensor in the satellite's guidance system may have been in error and that a second attempt to boost Eureka into its operational orbit could be made as early as Tuesday at 5:22 a.m. EDT.

Engineers originally planned to fire Eureka's thrusters Monday, but they decided to delay the maneuver to make sure they fully understood the problem.

The $213 million satellite, the largest ever built by the European Space Agency, is scheduled to be returned to Earth next April by another shuttle crew.

Streep, Hawn prove life after death, awoken at No. 1 in weekend box office

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The debut of black-comedy "Death Becomes Her" showed plenty of life as it dominated the Friday-through-Sunday box office with $12.1 million at 1,410 screens.

"Death Becomes Her," replete with the trademark special effects from director Robert Zemeckis (all three "Back to the Future" films, "Who Framed Roger Rabbit"), performed well above expectations and shrugged off competition from the second weekend of the Summer Olympics in Barcelona, Spain.

The Olympics telecast is estimated to have taken away about 15 percent of the movie-going audience.

The Universal release stars Meryl Streep and Goldie Hawn as two women battling with youth serum to win the heart of a mortician, played by Bruce Willis.

In contrast, the opening of 20th Century Fox's teen comedy, "Buffy the Vampire Slayer," was a disappointment in fifth place with an estimated $4.4 million at 1,973 screens. The film, starring Kristi Swanson, Paul Reubens, Luke Perry and Donald Sutherland, appears likely to fade away quickly.

The weekend's other opening, Paramount's animated comedy "Bebe's Kids," was somewhat more impressive at an estimated $3.3 million at just 646 screens, good enough for seventh place.

"Death Becomes Her" will face competition this weekend from the opening of Warner Bros.' Clint Eastwood Western "The Unforgiven," due to debut on more than 2,000 screens. Also opening will be Disney's "Three Ninjas" and two thrillers—Universal's "Whispers in the Dark" and Paramount's

"Raising Cain," directed by Brian De Palma.

"Death Becomes Her" grossed nearly double the total of the No. 2 film, Disney's third weekend of "Honey, I Blew Up the Kid," which took in an estimated $6.5 million at 2,429 screens to push its 17-day gross to $38 million. The sequel received a boost because it was tied to Saturday night sneak previews of "Three Ninjas."

Last weekend's No. 1 film, Columbia's swindler comedy, "Mo'Noney," took in $6.1 million at 1,705 screens, losing about half of its audience and bringing its 10-day gross to about $23 million.

Columbia's baseball comedy, "A League of Their Own," continued to score well in fourth place at $5.4 million 2,084 screens, pushing its 33-day total past $75 million.

Controversy over 'Cop Killer' to end with call of cease fire

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — The state's largest law enforcement group Monday called a "cease fire" in its battle with Time Warner Inc. over the promotion and distribution of the controversial song "Cop Killer" by rapper Ice T.

Ron DeLord, president of the Combined Law Enforcement Associations of Texas, said he was confident that law enforcement's point of view on the song "penetrated into the inner sanctums of Time Warner corporate structure" at its shareholders' meeting July 16.

Last week, rapper Ice T voluntarily removed the "Cop Killer" song from his album but said he would distribute the single for free at his concerts to show the black community's anger at police brutality.

The song became controversial over perceptions that it advocated violence against police, a perception Ice T and Time Warner said was erroneous.

DeLord said the "symbolic" removal of the song from distribution was hailed by law enforcement organizations as a major victory.

"I applaud the decision of Ice T to remove the record from distribution because it now allows the parties to cease these negative attacks and concentrate on future positive actions," he said.

Mark Clark, CLEAT's director of governmental relations, said it is time to cease fire and allow the police and public to see if Time Warner got the message.

BARCELONA 1992

SUMMER OLYMPICS

Medals bring more than gold to Olympic athletes

BARCELONA, Spain (UPI) — Cash payoffs for winning gold medals is becoming commonplace among European and Asian countries.

It's become a major reason to participate in the Olympic Games.

While fame and fortune await American Olympic champions like Carl Lewis, foreign athletes for many years were driven solely by the pride of competing for their country.

No more. Spain, for example, gives each gold-medal winning athlete an insurance policy guaranteed by La Caixa bank that will pay them 100 million pesetas ($1 million) when they reach the age of 50. It's no wonder Spain already has won far more gold medals (9) than ever before.

The bank's policy doesn't only reward gold medalists. Second place finishers through fifth are also rewarded with amounts dropping gradually to 20 million pesetas ($200,000) for fifth.

Japan, too, rewards its gold medal winners handsomely. Japan has won three gold medals so far and each athlete will receive 3 million yen ($24,000).

"This is not prize money," insists Shin Taira of the Japanese

Olympic Committee. "It is training money."

China's gold-medal winning divers, Fu Mingxia and Gao Min, will each receive $2,000. That may not seem like much when compared to the Spanish payoff but for Fu, who turns 14 this month, her prize money is a small fortune.

"That's about 100 months worth of my salary," explained a journalist from China's Xinhua news agency.

Not all prizes are cash. Czechoslovakia's gold medal canoeist Lukas Pollert and trap shooter Petr Hrdlicka will receive new $8,200 Skoda Favorit Forman cars when they return home.

It appears these Games will cost the Czech car company less than the Winter Games in Albertville when the 23-member ice hockey team won the bronze medal.

Some sports administrators from the old eastern bloc are not happy to see materialism creeping into the Olympics.

Romania, for example, will be paying out $8,500 dollars to its four-gold medal winners. That's about 16 years worth of wages to the average Romanian.

Despite this Iolanda Balas Soter, President of the Romanian Athletics Federation, believes the country's Olympic spirit has disappeared since winning high jump gold medals in 1960 and 1964.

"The passion for sport has diminished. People are ruled by the material side," she said.

As is always the case when money is involved, the awarding of cash prizes does not always bring out the sportsmanship in competitors.

Russian weightlifter Ibragim Samadov had his bronze medal confiscated Saturday after hurling it to the ground in a fit of disgust when he did not win the gold medal.

Table tennis tales

Sport not idle recreation; Asians take competition seriously

BARCELONA, Spain (UPI) — Deng Yaping didn't grow up playing table tennis surrounded by wood paneling in a finished basement. She started at age 5 in Henan, China, where table tennis is no suburban amusement, but a most serious business.

Deng, ranked No. 1 in the world, is playing Yu Sun of North Korea in a women's quarterfinal Monday night in the Olympic table tennis arena, a converted railway station with clean halls, good lights and flawless air-conditioning.

Earlier in the day, Deng won the doubles gold medal. Now, in singles, she has taken the first two sets, but Yu is making a go of things in the third, much to the delight of North Korean athletes and officials in the stands.

When the game is played right — and it most assuredly is in Barcelona — table tennis is no idle recreation, but a blinding exchange, where a white plastic ball can whiz across the net at 120 mph, overloaded with mind-bending spin, rotating faster than the machinery whining in an airplane engine.

Ichiro Ogimura knows all about spins and smashes, having been a 12-time world champion. Growing up in Japan he dabbled in baseball and gymnastics, but table tennis became his calling. He says it's a game that makes you think, a game that calls for "responsibility."

Now, as president of the International Table Tennis Federation, Ogimura sits in the VIP lounge, overlooking the two courts, waiting for the evening session to begin.

"Table tennis is not only quick but dynamic," he says. "It's also like chess or bridge or mah-jong. It's quite fascinating."

Table tennis goes back to the 19th century. It was invented by the English and called "Gossima." By the turn of the century, the American game company Parker Brothers had a patent for what was called Ping-Pong — ping, for the sound the ball makes when it hits the racket; pong, for the sound the ball makes when hitting the table.

The game grew in the 1920s and '30s across Europe and in the United States, where immigrant Ping-Pong hustlers plied their trade. The imperial reach of England sent the game bouncing toward Asia, where an English cleric was said to have introduced the sport to Japan.

Ogimura estimates 300 million to 400 million are playing table tennis worldwide, maybe half of those in China.

Spain, France defeat U.S. to claim golds in yachting

BARCELONA, Spain (UPI) — Spain and France took control of the sea away from the United States Monday at the Olympic Games.

World championship 470 sailors defeated the U.S. armada for two gold medals and France whipped U.S. Tornado ace Randy Smyth to claim another.

Skipper Jordi Calafat and crewman Francisco Sanchez Luna were so jubilant on crossing the finish they stood up, capsized their boat and quickly had it upright again.

The gold haul seized by the host country in sailing rose to four, surpassing the total nautical bounty of three golds the Spanish managed in its previous Olympic history. Spain earned the top accolades Sunday in the Flying Dutchman and Finn.

"This is a momentous triumph," said Javier Gomez Navarro, vice president of the Barcelona Olympic Organizing Committee and secretary of state for sport.

Four golds in a single sport is "a spectacular success and makes us extremely happy," he said.

After the 1st full day of racing, France was the only other nation with multiple golds, including the Tornado and men's Windsurfing. The United States secured a Star gold Saturday, New Zealand wrapped up the women's Windsurfing gold Sunday and Norway, capitalizing on two disqualifications for American Julia Trotman, emerged with the Europe laurel.

U.S. men's volleyball team topples Italy in preliminaries

BARCELONA, Spain (UPI) — The United States finished the men's preliminary Olympic volleyball competition Monday with a confidence-boosting victory over reigning world champion Italy.

The Americans, gunning for a third successive Olympic crown, sealed the win on their fifth match point to triumph 9-15, 16-14, 15-11, 15-13. But they still had to settle for second place in Group A behind the world champions.

The two teams ended the preliminary round tied, but the Italians were awarded the top spot because of a superior record in the number of sets won during the five-game round-robin portion of the tournament.

However, the Americans had been stripped of two points in its opening match against Japan after the Asian team successfully protested the result of the game won by the U.S. in five sets.

The Japanese contended the U.S. should have been assessed a penalty point on match-point in the fourth set because an American player received his second yellow card.

Canadian comeback

McKoy returns to Games, wins gold in hurdle event

BARCELONA, Spain (UPI) — Canada's Mark McKoy, who walked out of the Seoul Olympics four years ago after his teammate Ben Johnson tested positive for drugs, Monday won a surprising gold medal in the men's 110-meter hurdles at the Olympic Games.

McKoy clocked 13.12 seconds to beat out American hopes Tony Dees and Jack Pierce.

Following his hurried exit from Seoul, McKoy was suspended from representing his country for two years. He later admitted to having used steroids to a government inquiry investigating drugs in Canadian sport.

Dees made a strong run to grab the silver ahead of Pierce and Britain's Tony Jarrett. Pierce and Jarrett were timed at 13.26, but race judges decided Pierce had crossed the finish line slightly ahead and awarded him the bronze medal.

Favored Colin Jackson of Britain crashed through the third hurdle and ended up a disappointed seventh in 13.46.

In the women's 800-meters, Ellen van Langen of Holland made a strong run down the stretch to win the gold medal ahead of Liliana Nurutdinova of the Unified Team. Van Langen's winning time was 1:55.54.

Van Langen made her move down the final straight in the 800 to get inside Nurutdinova, who had led for much of the race.

The Russian eventually took second, ahead of Cuba's Ana Quirot.
