SIU expenditures questioned by auditor

By Mike Anthony
Staff Writer

The SIU System has failed to meet requirements of some state laws, regulations and guidelines in its expenditure of state funds, a report issued by Illinois Auditor General Robert Cronson said.

The auditor general’s report covered a two-year period ending April 30, 1981.

According to the report, about $301,000 in tuition and fees for SIU-C students, who last year were charged to outside agencies and foreign governments for the 1981 spring semester.

"We have been charged to outside agencies and foreign governments for the 1981 spring semester," said Bhumf, who has been with SIU System for six years.

"We’ve established better controls in the Reserve Officer that should prevent those things from happening in the future," Bhumf said.

"In some cases of cash," said Bhumf, "we’ve established internal points of control for the flow of cash within the system.

The auditor general’s report further stated that the system doesn’t have sufficient controls for the timely collection of student accounts receivable.

"The Billing Receivables System has improved controls for the analysis of receivables area," Bhumf said.

He said that "we were not sure that the report was talking about in the loan area," but his office and the Reserve Office have been working together to improve control systems.

Cronson said the report also pointed out a number of deficiencies in the SIU System’s data processing systems and a lack of strict enforcement of regulations governing travel procurement policies.

In addition, the report said that an overall budget for actual expenses, which is financed by both state and federal funds, is not prepared by the system.

Sterling special assistant to SIU-C President Albert Pomeroy, Cronson said, "should not be reached for comment.

City looking at ‘party policies’ to end noise-level problems

By John Schrag
Staff Writer

Carbondale city officials, seeking a solution to residents’ complaints about noise levels at student parties, are looking at a plan to establish a set of party rules.

Don Monty, director of community development, said a city staff committee told the city council that residents should consider adopting a "party policy" similar to one in effect in Normal, home of Illinois State University.

It said that if there is a statute prohibiting disturbing the peace, Carbondale might have a reasonable noise ordinance, and if people who are being disturbed are often reluctant to sign formal complaints against their party hosts, which hampers efforts to quiet the party down.

Monty said a public hearing will be held on the subject on Dec. 14, with a second public hearing slated for March.

Two men indicted on cocaine charges

By Douglas Hamm
Staff Writer

A federal grand jury in East St. Louis has indicted two Miami men in connection with an investigation of drug dealing in which allegedly operated from Miami to Carbondale.

Francisco Jose Tobon and Gregory Patrick were indicted Nov. 18 on charges of conspiracy to distribute cocaine, distribution and possession with intent to distribute cocaine, unlawful use of a communication device and interstate travel in aid of racketeering.

Nine other persons were listed as "unindicted co-conspirators" by the grand jury, according to the U.S. attorney’s office in East St.

Named as unindicted co-conspirators were Maria Antoinette Estrepe de Tobon, Alvaro Enrique Fiorillo, Barry K. Glasgow, Christopher B. Jacobs, Steven S. Sounen, James O. Luke, Matthew A. Coledrea and Brian A. Steiner.

The 18-month investigation culminated three weeks ago in Miami with the seizure of 20 pounds of cocaine, the arrest of five Colombian nationals.

Thirteen persons were arrested in Carbondale during the investigation, and seven of cocaine was seized in what Drug Enforcement Administration agents labeled "the largest cocaine seizure ever in Southern Illinois.

The investigation was conducted by the DEA, the Illinois Division of Criminal Investigation, the Southern Illinois Enforcement Group and Carbondale and SIU-C police.

A conviction on all counts of the indictment would result in maximum penalties of 29 years imprisonment and $90,000 in fines.

In a separate case, the grand jury also indicted Everett J. Hickenlooper and Bobby L. Arnett of Perry County on five counts of distribution of a controlled substance.

The indictment was based on information developed in an L.

U.S.-Israel agreement reached on Mideast

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israel and the United States agreed formally Monday to cooperate militarily against any threats to the Middle East by Soviet-controlled forces from outside the region.

It was the first agreement of its kind between the two countries.

One of the few details released by the Pentagon said the two countries would undertake joint military exercises, including naval activities in the eastern Mediterranean.

In an obvious effort to reassure Arab countries that the United States and Israel would not act together against any of them, a joint statement by Defense Secretary Casper Weinberger and Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon said the new agreement "is not directed at any state or group of states within the Middle East."

The four-page "Memorandum of Understanding," as it was called, was a general but left most details to new U.S.-Israeli bodies, including the U.S. "Overseas Policy Council" and "Joint Working Group." The first meeting will be in January.

Burris says state economy is 'dark,' not heartening'

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — As a chilly rain fell outside the Statehouse, Illinois Comptroller Roland W. Burris issued an equally dismal assessment Monday of the state's financial condition.

"The Illinois economic picture is not heartening," said Comptroller Roland W. Burris in his monthly report on the state's fiscal condition. The report projected "darkest days ahead for the state's economy, possibly the most severe Illinoisians have ever experienced, and there are no signs of recovery in sight." According to the report, the state's fiscal health continues to decline, a short of intensive care," the report said.

Burris said by high interest rates and recession are in- dizing producing durable goods such as transportation equipment, metals, electrical equipment and wood products, the report said. Illinois and other Midwest states producing durable goods are suffering from the energy crisis and unemployment.

The trend is likely to continue, Burris said, until the national economy improves. Illinois' jobless rate in October was 8.3 percent compared with a national rate of 8 percent. It was 10.4 percent in Ohio in October and 12.7 percent in Michigan.

The report, which included financial information gathered through the end of October, blamed the recession on the Board of Directors raising money policies, aimed at lowering the inflation rate.

"Just as consumer credit controls of the spring of 1990 caused a brief recession. . . . the extraordinary high interest rates which have prevailed over the past 20 months have finally caused a collapse in the purchases and production of durables."
University relations VP interviews scheduled

By David Murphy
Staff Writer

Interviews will begin here Wednesday with the first of three finalists for the job of vice president for university relations. William J. Farrell, 45, associate vice president for educational development and research at the University of Iowa, will be on campus for two days, according to Terry Mathias, doctoral assistant to the president.

Farrell will meet with the search committee in charge of finding a new vice president, leaders of campus commission groups and President Albert Somit, Mathias said.

Farrell, a native of Milwaukee, Wis., received a bachelor's degree in English from Marquette University. He has a master's and a doctorate in English from the University of Wisconsin, and he holds a master's degree in business administration from Marquette University.

Two other candidates for the position will be interviewed next week, at which time their names will be released, according to Mathias.

An open session for members of the community to interview Farrell will be held Thursday from 3:30 p.m. to 5:00 p.m. in the Illinois Room of the Student Center.

The vice presidential position was vacated May 12 when George Mace took a leave of absence to become an executive consultant with the American Council on Education in Washington.

The 12-member search committee was appointed in September by Somit.

After the candidates have been interviewed, Somit will appoint the new vice president.

Carbondale man falls five floors, dies

A Carbondale man who apparently fell Saturday from his fifth floor apartment in the Carbondale Towers, 820 W. Mill St., died early Sunday at Memorial Hospital from injuries.

Lewis Kent Otterson, 28, was found lying on the ground near his apartment building about 11:06 p.m. Saturday by passersby, police said. Otterson died at about 2:10 a.m. Sunday. Police said Otterson's fall was an apparent accident but they are still investigating the incident.

Private funeral services for Otterson will be held at 10 a.m. Tuesday at the Huffman Funeral Home in Carbondale. Burial will be at the Oakland Cemetery.

When you can't put laughter in an envelope.

Sometimes a letter just doesn't say it.

What's more, a letter never says anything back.

There's something about picking up the phone and hearing your best friend's voice the very next second, long distance. You can give her the lowdown, get the scoop, confide, complain, console—share everything— in the time it takes you to hunt down an envelope.

And a phone call has neither rain nor sleet nor dark of night to contend with at the other end.
Pre-charging consumers for pipeline is ‘new-style’ free enterprise

SEN. Howard Metzenbaum (D-Ohio) is no micew of Washington. A man who has become known, but he does not mince on offering his time or effort either.

In the Senate a few days ago, in the debate on a resolution that would greatly help an energy-consumption and bank to move ahead with the construction of the Alaska natural gas pipeline, Metzenbaum told his colleagues that the resolution "reflects greed."

If you think that this deal can be justified in your state, go out and talk to your people and tell them what is in it. If you fail to come along and debate you publicly. This is a real deal. You should not be doing it.

Metzenbaum had no takers. That wasn't surprising. What senator, issues worth to several current energy laws, would want to go before citizens and be defended against the pro-consumer, pro-free enterprise arguments that Metzenbaum would offer?

IT WAS much better — because the debate is brief and speedy — to engage in a quick hour-long debate that ends with a vote on the passage of the bill. It's great to see the team with so much gusto at the beginning of the season, and also very artful for the fans. However, it matters to those that the House, like the Salukis heat Saturday, is hardly a basketball powerhouse. The Indians needed to win the bottom of their conference and they had no players taller than 6-foot-7 inches.

The caliber of competition is only going to tough for the basketball player because that is why going tough, the tough get going. It's been the men in the maroon and white that have kept on going—and that the fans will be ignored if the Salukis happen to lose a few.

Co-op should deal in credit

This idea seems so simple, I am wondering why the proper organizations and student organizations don't use it. I'm writing about the proper organizations because I think the cooperation of the student organizations is needed.

When a person sells his books to the student co-op, the co-op should issue coupons redeemable for another book of equivalent value. It's so simple but it's a system that is being disregarded by the book stores instead of cash and the books and the co-op instead of being bought with these coupons. Nobody wants to wait a month for their money. A person without coupons can buy books with cash. This will increase the number of books which they can pay people who didn't want to trade and use coupons.

Now the only problem I can see with this is that some creative person might try to forge coupons and put them on the shelf with the money. This problem can be corrected by marking the coupons with some kind of code that can be impossible to alter and which is so unique that it is very difficult to forge one.

Even if it's too late to use this credit method for the semester for spring semester, I think it would work just fine in the long run.

THE AMERICAN MEDIA:
A Monster gone wild

Beyond the question of Richard Allen's guilt or innocence, the controversy swirling around him provides a revealing glimpse of that monster gone wild: the American news media.

People no longer look at this point that Allen's goose is cooked.

For those who have not bothered to read a newspaper or watch TV news the last few weeks, the White House national security adviser said the media's "tarnished" villain had to be held because he committed the blunder of accepting $10,000 for arranging a Japanese magazine interview of Nancy Reagan.

Allen admits that he received that money in exchange for giving the envelope in the first place, but he insists that he was not aware of the content and that he completely forgot about it after placing it in his office safe. Perhaps. But that explanation will not save his hide. He has become the latest target of the news media's insatiable desire for another scandal; it is a battle he cannot win, whether he is innocent or not.

Allen confirmed his surrender on "Meet the Press" Sunday when he announced that he was taking an "administrative leave." But he did not roll over and die without taking a few parting shots at the treatment he has received at the hands of the media.

Since the controversy begun, he said, members of the press have gathered outside his home every day at 5:30 in the morning, have been climbing trees to get a better view of the inside and, on one occasion, entered to meet his daughter.

None of these statements were challenged by the members of the press questioning him, understandably because the so-called "truth" is an accurate description of the madness outside his home.

Not that the story of Richard Allen's alleged misdeeds is unwaranted; he committed a gross indiscretion. But nobody is suspected of taking gifts there is reason to be concerned about whether his hide will be preserved.

But in pursuing the Allen story, some members of the media have only raised significant questions about their ethics — or lack thereof. The White House is not the country. The government has become an all-consuming passion — a passion which is nourished by the media's concern for the public's and the country's interest.

It is difficult to understand what information can be gained by putting into the mouth of a government official in charge of 6-year-old children, and it is un-American to say that a man should be driven out of his job before a legal determination of his guilt is made. But there you have it. Such is the reckless use some journalists make of their power.

If you can't sell a story already worthy with a Richard Allen, what's to stop them from selling the news with the people of a country? Although the Watergate case was les a boon to investigative journalism than a portent of its deconsecration.

Hope for Saluki basketball

The men's basketball team won a game last Saturday. After a long drought, including the longest losing streak for basketball in St. Louis history, they won in a big way.

The team seems to have rebounded from that fall season. The team looks as though it will be better. A few new faces, including a new head coach, dot the SU C bench. And there is a high point on the past season.

It's great to see the team with so much gusto at the beginning of the season, and also very heartening for the fans. However, it matters to those that the House, like the Salukis heat Saturday, is hardly a basketball powerhouse. The Indians needed to win the bottom of their conference and they had no players taller than 6-foot-7 inches.

Funding, community support named as keys to SIU-C orchestra’s future

The SIU Symphony Orchestra has been in existence for 20 to 25 years. But according to Daniel Mellado, its conductor, the orchestra has yet to become a major cultural impetus on campus.

Mellado conducted the orchestra Nov. 19 through its first performance of the school year, a concert featuring distinguished alumni performing as soloists.

At universities across the nation, the symphony is considered to be of vital importance in terms of the school’s cultural atmosphere.

According to Mellado, the development and prosperity of the orchestra could be extremely beneficial to the image of SIU-C.

"These days, we’re in the era of big names," said Mellado. "People need to see a name and miss out on the central literature of a performance. If we could develop a first-rate orchestra and then bring in some money and help improve Carbondale’s burned-out image at the same time.

Mellado said the orchestra currently faces two problems—lack of scholarship money and lack of support.

"The quality of its musicians is improving, but the orchestra is limited to one effort a semester due to rehearsal time, Mellado said, while other Illinois schools can present as many as three performances in a semester.

According to Mellado, although the Music School has been treated equally in comparison with other departments, the orchestra just doesn’t have adequate scholarship money.

"It’s not uncommon for other universities to entice soloists with yearly scholarships of $3,000," he said. "SIU just isn’t coming up with the money for specific orchestra scholarships."

The group’s other problem, lack of support, can’t be blamed on the faculty, Mellado said.

Faculty support for the symphony is strong, in fact, 10 of the symphony’s 50 members belong to the faculty.

However, Mellado said, support from the community and the University as a whole are lacking.

According to Mellado, many look upon the arts as unnecessary.

"We only value that which we measure quantitatively. You can’t measure a work of art by numbers. Just because we can’t put it on paper doesn’t mean it isn’t important." Dr. Edwin Romain, SIU-C's music professor, said.

Although the orchestra’s problems haven’t been solved yet, Mellado sees of things going in a positive direction.

"The discipline and experience are already there. If we can continue good programming, the community support will follow," he said.

In its concert, the symphony featured soprano Jeanine Wagner performing two operatic arias, "Veuillez spagner vous" from Mozart’s "Curtois indiscrét" and "Casta diva" from Bellini’s "Norma."

Wagner received two degrees in music at SIU-C and is currently enrolled at the University of Illinois in a doctoral program.

Also featured were Wilfred Delphin and Edwin Romain, duo pianists who performed Mendelsohn’s "Concerto in E Major" for two pianos. Both musicians received master’s degrees in music at Carbondale and are currently pursuing performance careers together, specializing in literature for two pianos.

GSC to vote on athletics resolutions

By Alan Scalley
Staff Writer

A resolution opposing the merger of the men's and women's athletics programs will be considered by the Graduate Student Council at its meeting Wednesday.

The council, which will meet at 7:30 p.m. in the Mississippi Room, will vote on two other resolutions, one opposing the addition of six scholarships for the football team, and the other urging the administration to make a decision on the women's athletics program.

Debbie Brown, GSC president, said the council's executive committee opposes the athletic merger partly because there is no evidence that it would save money.

The resolution opposing the additional six football scholarships proposes that the scholarships be awarded to men's sports and as heavily financed as football in order to help promote a broader sports program.

A third resolution calls for the administration to decide how it will allocate a surplus of about $125,000 from the fiscal 1981 year's athletics budget. The surplus was carried over to this year's athletics budget, but the administration has not yet announced how the money will be spent.

Sam Rinella, director of University Housing, will give a presentation on a proposed 15-percent rent increase for Evergreen Terrace for next year at the meeting. Many graduate students live at Evergreen Terrace.

Evergreen Terrace's house council has voted to support the increase, and the GSC may consider a resolution on the increase following Rinella's presentation, said Laura Nelson.

TENONITIS PROBLEMS

If you have a muscular pain in any part of your body, it may be caused by a condition known as tenonitis (inflammation of a tendon). The tendons in your body, in addition to bone and muscle, include tendons. These are fibrous cords that attach the muscle to the bone. When a tendon becomes inflamed, it can cause pain as sharp as that associated with bursitis. The cause may be excessive stress caused by muscles out of balance.

Every joint has muscles that must work in unison for normal joint movement. As some of the muscles contract or tighten, others relax, and this should happen at the right time and with the right amount of pressure. If the muscles are out of balance, this can result in excessive stress on the tendons, causing irritation and inflammation.

Treatment to restore muscle balance is a good idea to check for any misalignments in the spine and nervous system may stimulate the source of the problem and the pain.

SIU-C, Argonne scientists look for coal research funding

By Kathy Kaminski
Staff Writer

Because federal funding of study on more efficient uses of coal has been weak, SIUC and Argonne National Laboratory scientists hope to coax coal-related industries into helping finance research.

Recent reports are trying to convince the Illinois coal industry, coal-mining utilities and high-technology industries that they all have something to gain by pursuing the potential of magnetohydrodynamics or MHD—a method of generating electricity from the high-temperature combustion gases of burning coal.

Kenneth E. Tempelmeyer, dean of the College of Engineering and Technology, says scientists are trying to put together a consortium of coal and technology industry interests who want to pursue the research.

Before coming to SIU-C, Tempelmeyer had been involved in MHD research for the past 10 years with scientists from Argonne and the University of Tennessee.

During that time, the federal government has spent $400 million on MHD research.

But, like most researchers, Full and others, scientists were deterred from the huge initial budget, which allotted nothing for research and development. Congress restored $20 million of MHD funding, Tempelmeyer says, but that is about half of last year's $75 million appropriation. Researchers would first like to work on a model retrofitting project with a utility using a coal burning system.

"We'd take an existing coal-burning boiler and retrofit it, it's a matter of adding equipment to make it possible they'd be able to use MHD," Tempelmeyer says. "It's significantly more efficient and it costs about one-fourth or one-third what a new steam plant might.

An old steam plant could increase its efficiency by about 5 percent, in one instance the researchers have studied. "In the utility business five points is significant," Tempelmeyer says.

Second, the scientists want to work out a cost analysis and to see just what an MHD power operation would look like.

Coal burning utilities would reduce their costs, coal producers would at, more coal to be used in the process and high-technology industries would expand their product lines by making new components for the system, Tempelmeyer contends.

"MHD technology isn't new. It was pioneered in this country in the 1950s and early '60s. The Soviet Union began with it in the 1960s and has kept at it more persistently. About two years ago the United States and Soviets were cooperating in MHD research and development."

In fact, Tempelmeyer was within a week of boarding a military transport plane bound for Moscow with a $12 million U.S.-built generator that was to be connected with a Soviet boiler to further test MHD research theories.

But Soviet troops invaded Afghanistan and the United States cooled its cooperation on the MHD project as well as many others.

The process essentially produces more energy than traditional steam turbine generators because the combustion gases from burning coal contain electricity. A chemical compound is added to the gases to produce the electrical energy, eliminating the need for some components of a traditional energy system.

"The electricity is moved into a duct and generates a current. The duct takes the current out and produces energy directly, instead of having to pass it through the turbine and power the generator."

For a utility it would mean about 30 percent more energy produced from a pound of coal, Tempelmeyer says.

MHD's basic advantage is its efficiency. It also eliminates emissions of sulfur dioxide pollutants by 90 percent and uses all types of coal, not just cleaner-burning Western coal.

There are disadvantages, however. Tempelmeyer says. Very high temperatures—about 5,000 degrees as compared to 2,500 degrees in a traditional steam plant—reduce the lifespan of certain plant equipment.

The average steam plant operates about 7,000 hours a year without stopping, except partially, for routine maintenance. MHD operations have an average lifespan of 1,000 hours because the high temperatures cause more wear to components.
