Center promotes World AIDS Day

By Diane Dove
Staff Reporter

The SIUC Wellness Center is working with several local organizations this week to sponsor events in connection with World AIDS Day.

Desiree Mills, the Wellness Center's sexuality education coordinator, said today has been designated by the World Health Organization as a day to focus attention on living with HIV and AIDS.

Living with HIV, AIDS focus of special events

"This is something that was started seven years ago by the World Health Organization," she said. "It's national, so it gives national attention to the disease."

In addition to the Wellness Center, the Southern Illinois Regional Effort for AIDS and Student Health Programs are sponsoring events to inform SIUC students of the problems in dealing with HIV infection, Mills said.

"This year's theme is AIDS and families," she said. "We're doing talks in residents halls to try to get at more students."

Mills said students need to understand the threat of HIV because AIDS is the sixth leading cause of death for people between 15 to 24 years old.

"One million Americans are infected with HIV now and a lot of people are getting this in

Suspicious link CIPS to oil spill

By Aaron Butler
Staff Reporter

The cleanup of a large oil spill near Campus Lake is still in progress, and those involved express suspicion that responsibility for the spill may lie with a local power company.

James Tyrell, director of the Center for Environmental Health and Safety, said the leak may have been the result of careless digging in the area, and that such breaks do not normally occur as a result of temperature changes or natural wear-and-tear.

"Our suspicion, although we can't prove anything, is that the line was broken while some gas lines were being installed in the area," he said. "We know that CIPS (Central Illinois Power Service) was operating in the area, and it is possible that the line was broken at that time."

Because any excavation of the oil-soaked soil must be done under the supervision of a fire marshal, the line has not yet been replaced and one nearby building is still being serviced by an

Sending letter home to cost 3 cents more

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—The price of a first-class letter will jump to 32 cents Jan. 1.

The Independent Postal Rate Commission Wednesday endorsed the proposed 32-cent stamp, declaring that the nation's troubled mail service would further deteriorate if the Postal Service were denied urgently needed revenues.

But the commission rejected a request for a 10.3 percent across-the-board increase on publications, bulk mail and parcels that the Postal Service and mailers had championed. Instead, the commission imposed higher increases on those mail categories, accusing postal officials of continuing to attempt to foist "a disproportionate amount" of the agency's costs on first-class mailers.

Postal officials and large commercial mailers expressed disappointment, but not surprise, at the commission's ruling. "We expected it," shrugged Gene A. Del Polito, executive director of the Advertising Mail Marketing Association, whose members will have to pay an extra $310 million a year under the commission's decision.

'93 flood cleanup continues

SIUC volunteers donate time off to refurbish cities

By Dean Weaver
Senior Reporter

While many SIUC students will return home for the holiday celebrations, some will be donating their time to helping Illinois residents still recovering from the great flood of 1993.

Kathie Lorentz, coordinator of student development, said the flood relief project is sponsored by the Saluki Volunteer Corps, a student community service group with over 1,100 members.

Lorentz said she hopes to have 20 student volunteers for the five-day project where students will work refurbishing homes on Kaskaskia Island and possibly Prairie du Rocher. Students will leave on Jan. 8 and return by Jan. 14.

Bryan Fulton, a member of Volunteers In Service To America, said he is helping to organize the volunteer effort that will benefit the community of Kaskaskia.

"Many of the structures in this community have been devastated," he said. "We are working to help people move back into the homes that are left."

Fulton said SIUC students may also be working on refurbishing a 319-year-old church, which is the only community structure still being used in Kaskaskia.

Lorentz said the relief project will cost students very little because meals, sleeping bags, transportation and tools are provided. Students will be using the Chester High School facilities during the project.

Steven Green, a junior in pre-medicine from Elgin, said he volunteered for the flood relief project because he enjoys helping people and realizes employers look at applicants who have had volunteer service.

Lorentz said SIUC students can volunteer for the flood relief and after completing the five days they will receive a certificate, a resume-style transcript from the student development office outlining their volunteer efforts and one credit hour.

Fulton said this opportunity provides students with a good experience and is helpful if they are considering careers in social service or are interested in joining the Peace Corps.

Lorentz said students interested in volunteering should contact her at 453-5714.

Circuit court drops charges of stalking against student

By David Vingren

Stalking charges have been dropped against an SIUC student who still faces a charge of disorderly conduct.

Douglas A. Lambert, a senior in journalism from Chicago, was arrested in March for allegedly stalking a female SIUC student and shouting obscenities at her.

The stalking charges were dropped by the Jackson County Circuit Court Nov. 18 at the request of State's Attorney Mike Wepsiec.

Wepsiec and Lambert declined to comment since a disorderly conduct charges still being

PALESTINIAN AXES ISRAELI SOLDIER TO DEATH — JERUSALEM—An ax-wielding Palestinian hacked to death an Israeli soldier Wednesday as she waited for a bus in the northern town of Afula, Israeli police reported. The assailant, identified as Wahib Abu a-Rubb, 25, of the West Bank town of Qalqilya, was said to be a member of Hamas, a militant Islamic organization that has vowed to sabotage Israel's peace accord with the Palestinians. The ax attack came just one day after the Israeli Army announced it had arrested 40 members of the Izzedin al-Qassem military wing of Hamas. The Army has arrested some 400 Hamas members in the past few months, a Army spokesman said Tuesday. Among the 40 Izzedin al-Qassem members arrested were several men suspected of helping to plan the bombing of a bus in Tel Aviv last month that killed 22 people, the spokesman said.

HAITIAN POLITICS COMPOUND AIDS PROBLEM — PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti—The fight against the spread of AIDS and any effort to help those infected with the virus in Haiti are daunting tasks that outstrip the resources of local authorities. In the havoc of military repression and the isolation of international sanctions, officials have lost track of how many have died of AIDS and how fast it is spreading. In the cities, military rule left a grim legacy. AIDS research and treatment were all but halted, health officials say. The regime suspended free HIV testing after an international embargo made it more difficult to import test kits. An AIDS hot line was diverted to the regime's use. And the extensive network of Haitian nonprofit religious and humanitarian groups that had been working to combat the disease quickly became targets of the regime, which suspected some might support the pro-democracy struggle.

EATING DISORDERS SPREADING AMONG MEN — WASHINGTON—Specialists who treat eating disorders have been noticing something different about their patients lately: More of them are men. The majority of those suffering from eating disorders still are women, but more men are coming forward for treatment now. Generally, eating disorders manifest themselves in two major ways: anorexia nervosa and bulimia nervosa. Anorexia is an emotional disorder characterized by severe weight loss, or, in young people, failure to gain weight. Studies have suggested that one in every 250 women is afflicted, and 90 percent of those with the disorder are women. Bulimia is characterized by episodes of binge eating followed by some form of purging, usually self-induced vomiting.

PMS BLUES: SCIENTISTS SAY DISORDER EXISTS — Scientists have discovered a severe form of premenstrual syndrome known as late luteal phase dysphoric disorder. The syndrome affects 5 percent to 7 percent of American women, experts say. The disorder's physical and emotional symptoms can disrupt or even destroy their lives, said Jean Endicott of the New York State Psychiatric Institute at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center. Researchers still don't understand exactly what causes PMS, but that may not matter. The latest word from the front lines is that the symptoms can be defeated. Specialists now offer lifestyle changes and, if that doesn't work, prescribe anti-depressants, anti-anxiety drugs or hormone therapies.

SIUC wind ensemble blows into Shryock

By Paul Eisenberg
Entertainment Editor

Students do not necessarily have to wear their hands on anything to get hands-on experience. For example, seven SIUC School of Music undergraduates will obtain valuable job skills by waving their hands in the air tonight.

The students will be conducting the SIUC Wind Ensemble at Shryock Auditorium as part of the group's winter concert.

Director of Bands Mike Hanes and Associate Director of Bands Dan Phillips will conduct the first half of the concert before giving way to the students.

"It's really a unique policy," Hanes said of the student conductors' concert, a tradition since the early 1970s. "Usually, in many colleges, student conductors don't get a chance to work with the major ensembles."

Hanes said all the conductors are currently in a conducting class, as well as in the Wind Ensemble.

"I think it promotes growth, confidence and ability," he said. "It's the best way to learn how to conduct."

"I wish we could provide them with more practice time. Each conductor had less than an hour total of practice time, because we still have to prepare for the full concert."

The most demanding piece the band will play is "Symphony No. 3 for Band" by Vittorio Giannini.

"It stretches the band to its fullest," Hanes said.

Also on the set list is "Do Not Go Gentle Into That Good Night," a work by contemporary composer Elliot Del Borgo inspired by the Dylan Thomas poem of the same title.

"That piece has six or seven massive sonorities running through it," he said. "It's marvelously emotional, one of my favorite emotional pieces."

Phillips will direct Karl King's "Purple Pageant March."

"We're still a band, so we're doing the march," Hanes said.

The students will conduct Gordon Jacob's "Suite in B-Flat," "Mountmarre March," by Hayden Wood, "Canto" by Francis McBeth and "Burlesk for Band II" by Robert Washburn. "The Bells of Christmas," arranged by John Higgins, will wrap up the performance.

"We're going to finish with some Christmas-time spirit," Hanes said.

The SIUC Wind Ensemble will perform at 8 p.m. tonight at Shryock Auditorium. Tickets are $3, $2 for students.

Morris announces re-election bid for City Council

By John Kmita
Staff Reporter

Councilman Richard Morris announced he will seek re-election for his seat on the Carbondale City Council in the upcoming city election.

Morris, a council member since 1987, said he feels there have been many positive accomplishments made by the council during his tenure.

"I have enjoyed seeing Carbondale experience the positive growth that has occurred over the last few years, and enjoyed contributing to that growth as a member of the City Council," he said.

Morris specified the major improvements made by City Council decisions during his eight years on the council.

"The continued economic growth on the east side of town, the retention of existing industry, the new state-of-the-art water plant, and support for and resulting growth of the economic development and tourism of the city are just a few of the many accomplishments of this council," he said.

Morris also said he wants to remain on the council in order to see important projects he has helped initiate through to completion.

"The downtown revitalization has made great strides, but there is still much to be done," he said.

"The beautification and development of the town square area on North Illinois and Washington is something that I look at with a lot of pride, but we still have a lot of work to do," Morris said.

"The new city hall and civic center will create an anchor and stabilizing force to continue the facelift of the downtown area," he said.

In addition to Councilman Morris, Mayor Neil Dillard and Councilman John Mills will be up for re-election next spring. Dillard has already announced his plans to run for re-election.

Trial date to be scheduled for Carbondale landlord

A Jackson County circuit court judge has determined there is enough evidence for a prominent Carbondale landlord to stand trial on an array of sex-related charges.

Following a preliminary hearing Tuesday, Henry Fisher was ordered bound over for trial.

Fisher is charged with home invasion, two counts of aggravated criminal sexual assault and two counts of criminal assault.

A trial date has not been set, but a motion hearing has been scheduled for Dec. 23.

The charges arose from an alleged incident which occurred Oct. 20 in the victim's home in Carbondale.

Fisher was arrested Oct. 21, and was released from the Jackson County Jail after he posted a $10,000 bond that same morning.

Fisher, the owner of Home Rentals in Carbondale, rents living quarters throughout the community to many SIUC students.

Fisher was unable to be reached for comment.

Annual holiday craft sale draws vendors from Midwestern states

By Anika Robertson
Staff Reporter

Beginning today, vendors from all over the Midwest will sell their handmade goods at the 15th annual Holiday Craft Sale.

Crafts on sale include jewelry, woodwork, woven fibers and blown-glass objects.

Ronald Dunkel, SIUC civil service employee and part-time student, is one of the coordinators for the sale.

He said the sale is a major event for the University.

"There will be 85 artists contributing to the sale — students, community members and vendors coming from places such as Missouri, Indiana, and Kentucky," Dunkel said.

He said some student groups are significant to the sale.

The Craft Shop in the Student Center has student workers who teach craft classes and produce crafts for the shop.

The School of Art has students in Southern Clayworks and Southern Glassworks who produce hand-made pottery and blown glass, donating time and producing works to raise funds, so they can travel to national conferences.

Acme, a student metal-working organization, also will contribute to the craft sale.

Dunkel said many individuals who bought from the sale in previous years count on coming back.

"We usually get a great turnout. We hope that both students and the community comes out," he said.

The Craft Sale will be from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. today and from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday in the Student Center Hall of Fame and the International Lounge.

Band Preview

Velocity Girl, the buzz band that has received international attention for its serrated melodies, will whirl into Carbondale Thursday.

Velocity Girl has been compared numerous times to Lush and My Bloody Valentine. The band's sound grabs the listener with its warm fuzzy guitars — distorted yet soothing.

Lead singer Sarah Shannon's vocals are like a temperamental cat, purring sweetly in your lap one moment before clawing your face with a passionate wail the next.

Velocity Girl began at the University of Maryland in 1989, when guitarist Archie Moore and bassist Kelly Riles formed the Goterdammacrats, a band which specialized in noise-rock.

After a not very well-received performance at a fraternity party, the band took a mellow turn, enlisting future Unrest singer Bridget Cross, guitarist Brian Nelson and Jim Spellman of Washington D.C.'s High Back Chairs on drums.

Cross left the band and operationally-trained vocalist Sarah Shannon replaced her.

The band recorded the "My Forgotten Favorite" single and came to the attention of Sub Pop Records, who signed them and released "Copacetic," their first album.

"Copacetic" became Sub Pop's biggest selling release since Nirvana's "Bleach," outselling acts like Soundgarden and Mudhoney.

Chancellor search needs student voice

AT LEAST 40 APPLICATIONS HAVE BEEN received so far to fill the seat of retiring SIU Chancellor James Brown. Of all the applications and decisions involved in replacing a major SIU official, it is important to have student input during this whole process. As Chancellor Brown meets with constituency groups this week, the Daily Egyptian urges Brown to include more than one student to sit on the search committee.

Under the guidelines, one student will be on the committee of members from the different constituency groups, or those groups which represent the student and faculty populations. According to the current SIU Board of Trustees policy, five constituency members will be chosen for the final committee to review chancellor applicants. The constituency groups, including both student governments from SIUC and SIUE, Graduate and Professional Student Council and the Faculty Senate, must nominate a list of potential members to serve on the committee.

From the list of nominees, trustees will select the final members. The final members of the committee will include faculty and non-faculty representatives from both campuses, and the one student; five in all. The chancellor is considered to be one of the most important roles in the university system because the position serves as a liaison to the trustees and the state legislature and deals directly with implementing and creating policy on both campuses. The chancellor's office has more than a $1 million dollar annual budget and impacts university procedures.

CRITICS, INCLUDING FORMER SIUC President Albert Sommit, have argued that there no need for the chancellor position, and the duties carried out by the position could be placed upon the campus presidents. In fact, an earlier study, recommended by ousted State Rep. Gerald Hawkins, D-Du Quoin, was to look at the validity of the position. The study really never got under way and in the meantime, the chancellor position was retained. If this position is so important and needed as the trustees say, then it is important enough to let at least one or two more students sit on committee that will help determine Brown's replacement.

The student voice is crucial in this decision-making process. This voice will determine which candidate will effectively fill the needs of thousands of students. In order to effectively represent a large, diverse population of students, Brown and the trustees should also consider placing a graduate student, along with an undergraduate student from each campus, on the committee. Graduate students need to have just as much representation as undergraduates because of the many graduate programs offered on campus.

BUT BEFORE BOTH STUDENT GOVERNMENTS and graduate student organizations start making a list of nominees to sit on the committee, officials must realize students must be represented and a have a clear voice on major university decisions such as this.

Viewpoint

Caring instead of judging AIDS victims

In 1988 the World Health Organization designated December 1st as World AIDS Day in order to focus the attention of the human family on the magnitude and implications of a virus as insidious as HIV. This year marks the seventh observance of World Aids Day and the theme is "Aids and Families".

Jan Jacobs
 SIUC student

The concept of family has expanded and grown in recent years to include those whom a person turns to for support, love, understanding and care especially when faces with what appear as insurmountable problems. In the case of persons with AIDS this extended family has become increasingly important because of the nature of the disease and the pre-judgment of the people in the larger community. This is not to say that the mothers, fathers, sisters, brothers, aunts, uncles and cousins of any one person living with AIDS desert their loved one. On the contrary the love, caring and comfort exhibited in these courageous persons have often set an example of selflessness and service which awakens the human spirit.

But in honesty we must recognize that often the immediate family fails, it has difficulty coming to grips with the reality of a so horrible and untimely death. It is here where friends, lovers, neighbors and community enter into the picture lending their own kind of comfort and support which may help soften the impact.

When AIDS first intruded upon America it was perceived as a disease which afflicted the community of gay men. Americans were ignorant of its heterosexual nature as it ravaged communities in Africa and had no idea that one of the first victims of AIDS was a woman surgeon from Denmark.

With some justification the gay community felt it could not rely on mainstream America and began to build an extended family of their own. As it became clearer that AIDS was a world-wide epidemic concern grew as people became linked one to the other through the reality of the HIV virus and the desire to act against it.

"But in honesty we must recognize that often the immediate family fails, it has difficulty coming to grips with the reality of a so horrible and untimely death."

As the link grew so did the awareness among the human family that AIDS was an equal opportunity virus, recognizing no race, religion, culture or sexual orientation over another. It afflicts men, women and children.

It is not something that is happening to other people, it is something which is happening to us... to all of us.

Today is a day where each and everyone of us needs to stop and take a moment to put ourselves in the place of those who must deal with the devastation wrought by the intrusion of this virus. Today is a day for each of us to reassess our commitment to safe sex.

It is a day to educate ourselves and others against the attitude of "it can't happen to me."

It is a day to recognize that AIDS is not something which afflicts people from "outside" the community because the community does not stand "outside" the larger, human family. The Wellness Center of SIUC, the Southern Illinois Regional Effort for AIDS(SIREA) and the Jackson County Health Department are three local organizations with programs and information about AIDS. Please for your own sake as well as for your family utilize these resources because, for these resources because, for the time being, AIDS is a part of our lives.

Finally fifteen minutes has been set aside between 6:45 p.m. to 7 p.m. on the evening of December 1st to commemorate World AIDS Day. At that time the lights of the White House will be dimmed.

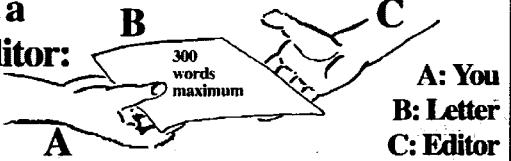

It is fifteen minutes for all of us to remember the members of the human family who have been afflicted with the AIDS virus and a time to remember those who have passed through and on to other moments. Their talent, wit, compassion and strength are deeply missed...it is not the same world nor the same family without their presence.

—E. Jan Jacobs is a graduate student in history at SIUC.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Board. Letters to the editor must be submitted in person to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 300 words. Letters fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. considered. Evidence on the disorderly conduct charge is scheduled to be heard on Jan. 18, 1995. Lambert allegedly called the victim a profanity at the Student Center earlier this year.

Lambert, 47, was the first in Jackson County to be charged under the 1993 amended Illinois stalking statute, which outlaws a person from continually following or surveying another person knowingly and without lawful justification. Lambert's defense attorney Robert McCormick, an SIUC student, motioned to the court in July that the stalking statute was unconstitutional, in which case Judge David W. Watts, Jr. decided further research needed to be done.

Wepsiec said his office donated a lot of time to the research. McCormick said Wepsiec may have dropped the charges because researching the case required too much time for such a minor infraction. Even though he was defending Lambert on the matter, McCormick said it was a shame that an issue as serious as stalking was not dealt with.

"I know I was his defense attorney, but this case should have been dealt with but in this case, no decision was ever made," he said.

auxiliary tank.

Tyrell said the situation is good in that the spill is now completely contained, although things could have been different.

"This type of oil is very light, not like the crude oil that you see on television, but you wouldn't want to get it in your mouth," he said. "We were pretty lucky things turned out the way they did."

The 2,000-gallon spill was discovered Nov. 13 at the Delta Chi house, after residents smelled oil in the basement and called the Illinois Emergency Management Agency.

Tyrell said much of the oil was absorbed by the ground, and almost all the remaining oil was stopped by absorbent material in a storm drain, which prevented the spill from spreading into Campus Lake.

"This type of oil evaporates fairly rapidly just from the heat of the sun," he said. "We had the Fish coop check Campus Lake and they found no sign of damage to the fish in the lake. This could have been a mess, but it's under control."

Jim Richardson, operating supervisor for the gas division of CIPS, said no one really knows how the leak occurred.

adolescence," she said.

Carol Johnson, coordinator for the Wellness Center's POWER peer program, gave two presentations of an interactive workshop in Trueblood and Lentz Halls Wednesday night.

Called "Walk in My Shoes," the workshop put audience members into the place of people who have HIV/AIDS, Johnson said.

"I put them in place of finding out that they have HIV to get people aware of HIV/AIDS from a different perspective," she said.

Johnson, who previously presented the workshop at Western Kentucky University, said the workshop is intense and provokes a mixed response from the audience.

"I've had people cry, I've had people with a shocked look on their face and people ask a lot of questions," she said.

One goal of the workshop, Johnson said, is to show students that people can remain healthy for several years after finding out they have the virus.

"There is a misconception that as soon as you find out that you have HIV you die," she said. "You can live five or 10 years and one person has even lived for 15."

Mills said the Wellness Center sent red ribbons to University faculty and staff to recruit their involvement in the AIDS awareness campaign.

"The red ribbon is a symbol of hope — the hope that one day the threat of AIDS will be over," she said. "So we're encouraging people to wear their red ribbons to show their support."

the pop-punkers, but the band was content to remain on Sub Pop, which signed it to a five-record deal.

"We felt they were the best label for us," said drummer Jim Spellman.

"We try to only work with people we like and respect. We're one of their biggest things, so we get a lot of attention."

Sub Pop is not the only one giving Velocity Girl the eye. Velocity Girl has received very good reviews in publications ranging from the culture-defining "Rolling Stone" to the teenage fashion bible "Sassy," which gave them a "Cute Band Alert." All this attention has increased the value of the group's stock rapidly.

Velocity Girl has had four videos on MTV's "120 Minutes," all of which did well, according to Spellman.

After previous tours had the band heading small clubs around the country, the latest tour had the group opening for Pavement and Sugar, allowing the opportunity to play larger venues for more people.

"I really enjoy opening for people now," Spellman said. "It's challenging, I like the change."

Spellman said that both large and small venues have their attractions.

"(Chicago's) Aragon felt less nervous because of the anonymity of the crowd," he said. "People cease to be individuals."

"We're more comfortable playing 600-seat places. We like moving around — it's exciting."

Spellman does not feel Velocity Girl's snowballing popularity has suddenly changed his life.

"It doesn't seem that weird because it happened in small little steps," he said.

"It's harder (than a conventional job), but the rewards are much greater."

Velocity Girl plays Thursday at 8:00 p.m. in the Student Center Ballrooms. Fig Dish, from Chicago, and Girls With Tools, from Carbondale, will open.

Tickets are $8 and are available at the Student Center Central Ticket Office, Plaza Records, Disc Jockey Records and at the door.

Hunger release satisfies appetite for blues with psychedelic mix

By Aleksandra Macys
Senior Reporter

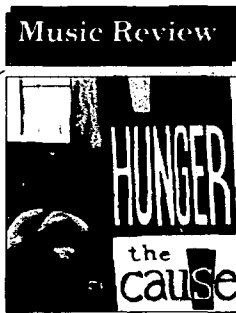

A band that has played in Carbondale on several occasions, but has not appeared here recently, now offers fans a new CD that allows them to hear their music.

With talent that surpasses many other nightclub bands, the Columbia, Missouri-based band The Cause has released a CD that should help them to play bigger venues.

The 10-track CD, "Hunger" released on the being music label, is not yet being sold in local music stores, but the band hopes it will soon be available to fans here.

"Hunger" offers listeners an escape from monotony, with each song having a unique style and sound.

The first track on the CD, "Putting me on" has guitarist Peter ("Ubi") Ubracio playing the guitar with a rhythmic wa-wa pedal sound, a sound that mixes well with the other two band members, bassist John McHale and drummer

The Cause's Hunger

Mike Turallo.

The bluesy, rhythmic and sometimes psychedelic guitar work by Ubracio in the rest of the tracks, coupled with McHale's range on the bass and Turallo's talent on the drums, makes this CD a must-hear.

The Cause takes hard rock, funk, jazz and alternatives styles and mixes them into songs that you cannot help but listening to over and over again.

The Cause traces their influences to The Beatles, The Clash and jazz artist Wes Montgomery.

"Because of our divergent influences, you can't really pin us down to grunge this or punk that," McHale said. "And we're more than just eclectic."

Their strength as a trio and polished yet free-flowing style give them an edge over bands with less musical experience.

The powerful messages sung by McHale with his raw, Bruce Springsteen sound deal with issues such as racism and politics, but songs are kept lighthearted and, messages are not thrown in your face. The band wants people listening to the CD to think about these and other issues, but not dwell on them.

Those who can get their hands on this CD should do so because it offers talent and songs that make you feel good and want to get up and dance.

Poor King makes Carbondale debut with original music, lyrics

By Aleksandra Macys
Senior Reporter

Hitting the circuit as a new band in Carbondale can sometimes be difficult, but gigs might be coming more quickly for one fresh group here because the band's personnel includes some talented musicians who performed with a popular local predecessor, Diving Mules.

The Carbondale-based band Poor King will appear at 10 p.m. tonight at Beach Bumz, 611 S. Illinois Avenue, with special guests Phyeaux from Bloomington-Normal.

Poor King guitarist/vocalist Dan Jones, late of Diving Mules, said sound quality is not very good at Beach Bumz, but he plans to put up screens at the back of the room and carpet on the floor in front of the speakers to keep the sound from bouncing around the room too

"I'm not much for categorizing music. If I had to, I'd say we have a hard-edge, classic-rock sound with some grunge."

—Scott Strait

much.

Poor King formed this year near the end of summer and features Jones, Rick Burrow on bass and Scott Strait on drums. The band's repertoire consists strictly of original tunes.

Strait said the original music and lyrics have been written and conceived by Jones.

He said band members blend well with each other in an alternative, hard-rock sound, but the band also features some melodic numbers with "changes that'll break your neck."

"I'm not much for categorizing music," Jones said.

"If I had to, I'd say we have a hard-edge, classic-rock sound with some grunge."

The band is currently working on a demo tape in Jim Forester's Mole Hole Studios, which will feature four of their songs. The band has gigs coming up at the beginning of 1995 and hopes to play more in this area.

Opening for Poor King is Phyeaux, a band which features cover tunes from Primus and Living Color, but with a harder edge at times.

"Come see us with Phyeaux — they're a really good band from Normal," Strait said.

CBS' spring lineup contains combination of comedy, drama

Newsday

Prepare thyself for a blizzard of new programs—and changes—on CBS by early next year. Peter Tortorici, president of CBS Entertainment, said at a November sweeps briefing Wednesday that the network could launch as many as eight new shows in January and March. Tortorici called impending schedule changes "significant" but bristled when asked whether they were being made because of a widespread impression that CBS' fortunes have taken a "downturn." Tortorici would only say that schedule changes will affect "three and possibly a fourth night."

First, a brand new Wednesday night comedy block, 8-10 p.m., is expected to be launched in January. In addition, "Northern Exposure" is expected to move to Wednesdays (at 10) in January. What's going to go in this new Wednesday comedy block?

There are many candidates: Some of the new shows have been in development for months (even years) and will bring some of TV's best-known stars back to the tube. They include: Cybill, Shephard, Delta Burke, George Wendt, Bob Pastorelli ("Murphy Brown"), Dolly Parton and Valerie Harper.

The Shepherd show—about a divorced actress—is considered pretty funny and may land Mondays at 9:30, says Paul Schulman, president of an advertising firm that bears his name. "Love and War"? It could land Wednesdays.

Tortorici also said two major dramas were in the works—both by veteran drama producers. Of interest: Thomas Carter will produce an African-American drama—one of the rarest things in all of TV-land—called "Under One Roof," with James Earl Jones. Also, Dick Wolf ("Law & Order") has a New York-based show called "The Right Verdict" starring Tom Conti. Shows that will launch in January: the ones starring Pastorelli ("Double Rush"), Shephard, Harper and Burke. OK, the "numero uno" question: Why this massive influx of new stuff? "It's a lot of bench, but they need it," says Schulman.

Amid the zillion facts and figures that blew out of the various networks Wednesday about their November sweeps performance, one simple truth emerged loud and clear: Fox had a really fine month. Herewith the final tallies: CBS, 13.1 prime-time rating (unchanged from last November); NBC, 12.2 (down 3 percent); ABC, 11.6 (down 4 percent); Fox, 8 (up 8 percent). What carried Fox? Shows like "Melrose Place," "Beverly Hills, 90210" and its rebuilt Tuesday movie. As you may also notice, CBS had a perfectly decent sweeps as well (and, you can be sure, the press was reminded about it).

Even without the eight-hour "Scarlett," the network would have won the sweeps, according to David Poltrack, senior vice president of research. NBC had a particularly poor month (blame "JFK").

The network "stunted" with many specials — and fell on its face.

According to industry figures, only 65 percent of the network's schedule in November was regular programming (compared to 87 percent for ABC, 76 percent for CBS and 89 percent for Fox). So much for stunts.

Is this the Origin of Life?

Two plant biologists expand theory with new research

By Aleksandra Macys
Senior Reporter

The questions researchers have tried to answer for centuries about the origin of life are questions a former and a current SIUC professor claim to have the answers to.

Aristotel Pappelis, a professor in SIUC's plant biology department, and Sidney Fox, a researcher at the Coastal Research and Development Institute at the University of South Alabama, said they found the missing link between the chemical energies that spark life and the building blocks of life, cells.

Researchers have struggled for decades to find the missing portion that brought the chemical and biological elements together.

Origin-of-life researchers believe the chemical and biological existence of the first classes of species came into existence through a process of evolution and not simply by a divine miracle from a higher being.

Fox and Pappelis conducted their research at SIUC and first presented their findings, which they call the Thermal First Protein Paradigm, this year at the A. N. Bach Institute of Biochemistry at the Russian Academy of Sciences in Moscow.

The presentation was part of the celebration of Alexander Ivanovich Oparin's birthday, a scientific researcher who first linked the concept of chemical evolution to the origin of life.

Oparin's experiments were not successful in creating cellular life, but Fox, Pappelis and other researchers drew on his findings to further the studies.

In the 1950s, Fox expanded on Oparin's ideas. Oparin knew that cells made up of proteins that make nucleic acids, such as RNA, grow in a cellular manner. These cells, called protocells, form living cells when heated and in the presence of nutrients.

Protocells discovered by a former SIUC researcher are the essentials in forming life. The white substance surrounding the cells hold the nutrients that enable life to form and also baffled researchers until their importance was discovered by another SIUC researcher.

Scientists widely believe that some of the first formations of cellular life occurred in hot springs in the ocean, and on land.

The thermal springs contained organisms which converted carbon compounds, such as carbon dioxide, to amino acids, which arrange themselves into proteins and form protocells.

Although Pappelis ultimately discovered the process that would allow cells to grow in a laboratory at SIUC, it was Fox who did most of the research that allowed him to discover the process.

Fox found under laboratory conditions, that the cellular structure was present in the protocells, but the nucleic acids that allowed cellular life to proliferate were outside the cell in a milky, white substance — a substance Fox washed off to better observe the cellular structure.

But in washing off the white substance, Fox removed the nutrients that would allow the cells to grow. It was Pappelis who discovered that the white substance must remain.

In allowing the cells to remain in the milky, white substance, the nutrients needed for cells to grow was present and Pappelis showed that this was the process that allowed protocells to grow in the laboratory.

Cyril Ponnampertuma, a biochemist at the University of Maryland at College Park, said that the findings are possibly models of the first cells and should be taken seriously.

"This phenomenon is very significant for origin-of-life studies, especially given the ease with which it happens," Ponnampertuma said. "The fact that these spheres form so readily, in a variety of forms, is very intriguing."

Fox and Pappelis will soon be releasing their findings in a book, but they and other researchers agree that more studies into the origin-of-life are needed, but that science is coming to grips on how life began on Earth.

Scientific study finds place with religious beliefs

By Aleksandra Macys
Senior Reporter

The possible proof of the existence of the theory of evolution does not come as surprising news to local religious and scientific leaders, and an SIUC researcher said it is feasible the two groups will now work hand in hand to resolve the origin of life.

Aristotel Pappelis, a professor in SIUC's plant biology department, and Sidney Fox, a researcher at the Coastal Development Institute at the University of South Alabama, claim to have found that thermal proteins in laboratory conditions display all the attributes of living cells, and the substance surrounding them allows them to grow.

Suzanne Webb, a pastor at the First Christian Church, 304 W. Monroe Street, said the positive proof for the process of evolution is exciting, but will not take away from people's faith in God.

"Science explains creation," Webb said. "Faith celebrates that there is a God. Beyond all of that, the two don't relate."

Webb said she does not believe it is sacrilegious to research creation from the standpoint of evolution.

"God gives us the brains to think about these things," she said.

Bill Hoesch, a public information officer at the Institute for Creation Research based in El Cajon, Ca., said it is a fact that everything came to be from chemicals, but some type of intellects, such as a higher being, had to make the chemicals.

"You have to look at the origin of information," he said.

Hoesch said an example of the origin of information is similar to discovering where an encyclopedia came from.

"Nobody would study the ink and paper to find the encyclopedia's origin or to find where the information came from," he said. "It points to an external source."

Pappelis, as an origin-of-life researcher, agrees that some type of external source may have started the evolutionary process and that no one can prove or disprove the existence of God — only the evolution processes can be proven in the laboratory.

"In the sciences, you can prove evolution, but in creation, you can't prove or disprove God," he said. "There is no evidence to support or refute the view scientifically."

Hoesch said even if people did evolve, an external source had to begin the process. This external source came before nucleic acids and other compounds which form life.

"You can call it whatever you want to call it, but you need to have a source of intellect," he said. "I don't know what motivates researchers to do this type of research except if they are trying to explore naturalistic origins."

Although some religious leaders have no problem with studying the theories of evolution, some believe more religious study classes should be offered at SIUC to compliment classes in the sciences that teach evolution theories.

Pappelis said it is safe to teach creationism in history or philosophy classes, but not in science classes.

He said although there are no guidelines specifying what he can and cannot teach, there is a conflict of interest in teaching creationism in science

Sister Kate Reid, director of the Newman Catholic Student Center, 715 S. Washington, said she supports expanding religious studies programs on campus and the theory of evolution is no threat to her belief as a Catholic.

"The creation process was initiated by God and it is fascinating in terms of evolution," she said.

She said people who believe science is a threat to religion have a misunderstanding of religion.

"People need to view the (Biblical) scriptures differently — not as an historic account of what happened, for example that God created the world in seven days, but more as a story and a guide," she said.

Karen Knott, director of University Christian Ministries, 913 S. Illinois Avenue, said she also supports religious studies programs on campus, but that the subject of evolution and the sciences should not be ignored.

She said classes on different creation theories would be a good policy.

Although the religious studies department was canceled at SIUC in June 1993, some classes dealing with religion are still offered through the history department.

"You need to explore both aspects," she said. "You really shouldn't avoid either."

Knott said she has no problem with how science and religion mix because every religion has its own creation theory.

"The Bible is not a science book," she said. "There has to be separation of religion and creation."

Researcher's survey probes students' beliefs about life

An opinion written questionnaire conducted by Aristotel Pappelis and taken by students in Origin and Evolution of Life Biology 115 (GEA), Cell Biology 306 (Biology Core) and History of Biology 315 (Biology Core). 943 students completed the questionnaire.

1. 70 percent believed or assumed that the universe began from a determined bias that most people call God (or Gods); i.e., God(s) created the universe.
2. 60 percent believed or assumed that the universe began as described by the "Big Bang" theory. (Note that this question is not directed at whether or not God is involved).
3. 60 percent believed or assumed life and it's beginnings are a natural process, and not a miracle in the strict sense of the word. (Miraculous event or action that apparently contradicts known scientific laws; as the miracles of the Bible).
4. 63 percent believed or assumed that evolution did and continues to occur and God(s) made and make it happen as a natural process.
5. 64 percent believed or assumed that everything in the universe obeys physical-chemical laws (i.e., no miracles occur on Earth or elsewhere in the universe).
6. 85 percent believed or assumed that scientists who experiment with the retracement of aspects of the emergence of life (i.e., those who study protolife) will eventually contribute richly to identifying new biological processes, new biological phenomena and a new philosophy.
7. 71 percent believed or assumed that the synthetic approach of evolution is a significant principle and should be in our educational system from public schools through doctoral studies in universities.
8. 68 percent believed or assumed that it would be wise to teach both the science and creationist versions of the origin and evolution of life in our public schools. (Kindergarten through 12th grade).
9. 74 percent believed or assumed it would be wise to teach both the science and creationist versions of the origin and evolution of life in our public universities (undergraduate and graduate programs).
10. 54 percent believed or assumed that if number 9 and 8 were put into action, more people in the future would accept the science version of the origin and evolution of life (rather than in the creationist version).

Gay writers' market expands

Newsday

NEW YORK—It was one of the strangest questions Leslea Newman had ever fielded on the radio talk-show circuit.

"Did you ever think that if your father was gay and your mother was a lesbian," the caller asked, "you wouldn't even be here?"

Newman — Leslea "Heather Has Two Mommies" Newman, as she often calls herself, after her best-known children's book — was stumped. And that doesn't happen very often. Newman wasn't voted 1973 "class wit" in high school for nothing.

A published poet, novelist, writing teacher, self-proclaimed dyke and author of eight children's books, including "Heather," a controversial story about a child of lesbian parents, Newman is usually ready with a quick repartee.

"Well," she finally said to the caller, "and what is your point?"

"I started turning down talk shows shortly after that; they were too brutal," Newman said, as she recalled the exchange during a recent interview in Manhattan, where she read from her new book of short stories, "Every Woman's Dream," at A Different Light, a gay bookstore.

Newman, 39, who graduated from the University of Vermont, studied poetry at the Naropa Institute in Boulder, Colo., and lived in New York's Greenwich Village briefly, discovered she was a lesbian when she moved in 1982 to Northampton, the Massachusetts town she affectionately calls "Lesbianville."

She lives there permanently now, with her partner, Mary Vazquez. They do not have children — the idea for "Heather" was planted by a friend with a child — but they are "married."

In the late 1980s, Newman couldn't get anyone to publish "Heather Has Two Mommies" — the book whose inclusion in a New York City multicultural curriculum package two years ago brought her unexpected fame as it became the center of debate. (It was eventually removed from the curriculum.)

Even the feminist press had rejected the 35-page tale, saying they didn't have experience with children's books, and Newman was forced to self-publish, raising $4,000 by asking fans on her mailing list to pre-order a book for $10.

But times have changed. Today Newman is benefiting from what many gay activists have termed a renaissance of gay writing. Publishers, large and small, have recognized the potential of the gay book-buying market and are snapping up gay titles and lavishing gay books with attention and advertising dollars. Alyson Publications, an independent gay press in Boston, bought "Heather" for its new line of children's books, Alyson Wonderland, and last spring Ballantine, an imprint of Random House, approached Newman and asked her to compile an anthology of contemporary lesbian love poems, due out by Valentine's Day 1996.

Though gays and lesbians have been writing since the dawn of publishing, and novels by gay authors such as Truman Capote, Gore Vidal and John Horne Burns were critically acclaimed during the late '40s and early '50s, the trend ebbed during the last few decades as publishers shied away from gay material.

Pataki, Giuliani settle differences with first meeting

The Washington Post

The stand-off between New York Gov.-elect George E. Pataki and New York City Mayor Rudolph W. Giuliani ended officially Tuesday in Manhattan, after the two men met and talked for the first time since the Nov. 8 election.

For three weeks, Pataki had refused to return Giuliani's congratulatory election night telephone calls, out of revenge for Giuliani's decision during the campaign to cross party lines and endorse Democratic Gov. Mario M. Cuomo. Giuliani then refused to attend a post-election meeting Pataki had scheduled with some of the city's political leaders, saying that as mayor he rated his own meeting.

Police Blotter

SIUC Police

Barbara Mileur reported more than $4,000 was stolen from a bank bag at the Student Center McDonald's between 1:30 a.m. and 7 a.m. Nov. 29. There are no suspects in the theft, but it remains under investigation.

Connie Dollman reported a license plate was stolen from her vehicle between 8 p.m., Nov. 27 and 3:30 p.m., Nov. 29. The car was parked in the Evergreen Terrace parking lot.

Adam Jackson reported a license plate was stolen from his vehicle between 10:30 p.m., Nov. 25 and 2:30 a.m., Nov. 29. His car was parked in the Evergreen Terrace parking lot.

Yi Hong Wan reported personal items were stolen from her locker in the women's locker room at the Student Recreation Center between 5:30 p.m. and 7:10 p.m., Nov. 29. The items were valued at $90.

Jeffery Shabino reported his bike was stolen about 5 p.m., Nov. 23. It was parked on campus and is valued at $350.

Lawrence Creadon reported his bike was stolen between 9 a.m., Nov. 18 and 10 a.m., Nov. 28 from 105 Small Group Housing. The bike is valued at $532.

1994 Fall Semester Final Exam Schedule

The examination schedule attempts to avoid examination conflicts by providing separate examination periods for Tuesday-Thursday lecture classes. Other information about final examinations is listed below:

- The class final exam period is scheduled based on the meeting time and days configuration listed on the first line of the class entry in the Schedule of Classes book (which should be the same as the first printed line for the section on the registered student's schedule print-out). For example, a class section is listed in the Schedule book on two lines in the manner:

08:00 T TH
09:00 - 10:50 W

The listed starting time for the first line of the entry is "8:00". The meeting days of that first line are "T R", and therefore are in the category "Only T or R or T R". The Exam Date and Period is by the attached Fall '94 Final Examination Schedule to be Friday, December 16 at 7:50 a.m. - 9:50 a.m.

- Classes should plan to hold their final examination in their regularly scheduled class rooms. The space scheduling section of the Office of Admissions and Records will forward to departments information relative to the location for examinations for these classes that cannot hold their examinations in their regularly scheduled rooms because of a space conflict. This will be done sufficiently in advance of the final examination days to provide adequate notice for all.

Classes that meet less than the entire semester should hold their exams during the last regular class session prior to final examinations.

- Please note that University policy indicates that exams are not to be given prior to exam week, or at times other than those scheduled.
- Students who find they have more than three examinations on one day may petition, and students who have two examinations scheduled at one time should petition their academic dean for approval to take an examination during the make-up examination period on the last day. Provision for such a make-up examination period does not mean that students may decide to miss the scheduled examination time and expect to make it up during this make-up period. This period is to be used only for students whose petitions have been approved by their dean.

- One credit hour course ordinarily will have their examination during the last regularly scheduled class period prior to the formal final examination week.

- Students who must miss a final examination may not take an examination before the time scheduled for the class examination. Information relative to the proper grade to be given students who miss a final examination and are not involved in a situation covered in the preceding paragraph will be found in the mimeographed memorandum forwarded to members of the instructional staff at the time they receive the final grade listing for the recording of grades.

- Individualized Learning Program classes will be administered at the SIUC Student Center throughout final exam week. Students wishing to sit for an exam must contact the Division of Continuing Education at Washington Square "C" (536-7751) at least three days in advance in order to reserve a time-slot and receive a room assignment.

- Other classes (not those for 1 credit)

Gangsta rapper Shakur shot, robbed

The Washington Post

NEW YORK—Rapper Tupac Shakur—the best-selling musician and film star who has been arrested three times on weapons charges and convicted twice of assault, and who is currently awaiting a jury verdict in a Manhattan sexual-abuse trial—was shot five times Wednesday morning in Times Square by three unidentified assailants.

Shakur is listed in stable condition at Manhattan's Bellevue Hospital, with serious injuries to his groin. His best-known film role was in last year's "Poetic Justice."

Police said the three men fled on foot after making off with $45,000 in jewelry, including a diamond ring and several large gold chains. They have no suspects in the case.

The incident happened at 12:30 Wednesday morning, just hours after the jury adjourned following its first day of deliberating in Shakur's latest criminal trial, this one involving allegations by a New York City woman that Shakur engaged in "deviant sexual intercourse" and "sexual contact by forcible compulsion" with her in a Manhattan hotel room a year ago.

The jury's deliberations continued Wednesday, even as Shakur lay heavily sedated in his hospital room.

Shakur, 23, is one the so-called gangsta rappers, best known for the violent imagery in their lyrics. He first gained notoriety with his 1992 debut album "2Pacalypse Now," which sold some 400,000 copies and drew the ire of Dan Quayle, among others, for its reference to "dropping" a cop.

He returned to the same themes in last year's "Strictly 4 My Niggaz," in which he proclaimed on the title track that "Mr (expletive)-a-cop is back and I still don't give a (expletive)."

In the past three years, he has starred in three movies: The 1992 "Juice," "Poetic Justice," and, most recently "Above the Rim."

Corps unveils Everglades plan

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—The federal government, unveiling the engineering centerpiece of what could be the most ambitious environmental restoration project ever attempted, has proposed a massive replumbing to save the Everglades.

In a 1,945-page report released in Jacksonville, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers laid out options for restoring the hydrological conditions that existed before urban and agricultural development decimated one of the world's largest and most biologically productive marshes.

"This is a significant first step in the replumbing effort that is critical to the restoration of the Everglades," said Col. Terry L. Rice, the Corps' Jacksonville district engineer.

The Corps did not endorse any of the six increasingly complex options for re-engineering water flow in South Florida. All aim to re-create conditions similar to those which existed when the "River of Grass" flowed unimpeded in a 60-mile-wide swath, creating rich habitat for birds, reptiles and mammals.

Environmentalists hope that the agencies involved in Everglades restoration, a Clinton administration priority, will endorse the most ambitious plan.

Bosnian Serbs leave U.N. rep empty-handed

Los Angeles Times

SARAJEVO—Bosnian Serbs delivered a humiliating snub to the world's most prominent diplomat Wednesday, refusing to meet U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali at the airport here and sounding a death knell on their tolerance of foreign efforts to protect Bosnian Muslims.

Boutros-Ghali flew into the artillery-encircled Bosnian capital on an urgent mission to secure assurances from Serbian rebel leader Radovan Karadzic that his nationalist gunmen would halt attacks on the U.N. "safe haven" of Bihac and stop harassing U.N. forces.

Mission officials and aides pleaded by telephone with Karadzic underlings for a meeting at Sarajevo's airport, but were told the rebel leader would see Boutros-Ghali only at his self-styled capital, Pale, 10 miles east.

"I am not going to go to Pale because the United Nations has recognized the Bosnian republic but we have not recognized any other kind of entity," Boutros-Ghali told reporters.

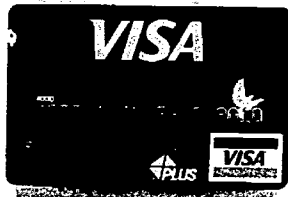

After being rebuffed for more than five hours by Karadzic, who refused to speak to the U.N. chief by phone, Boutros-Ghali and his international entourage left Sarajevo trailing grave warnings about what lies ahead for the country's targeted Muslims.

Serb gunmen loyal to Karadzic appear to have concluded the 24,000 U.N. Protection Force peacekeepers deployed in this country have exhausted their usefulness as purveyors of humanitarian aid and buffer forces that have effectively shielded the rebels from retaliation by Muslim-led Bosnian government troops.

In the past two weeks, Serb nationalists have defied NATO air strikes and plunged deep into the Bihac "safe haven," seizing nearly half the territory and uprooting tens of thousands more civilians.

Two million Bosnians have already been made homeless by the rebels' siege and their practice of "ethnic cleansing."

Wisconsin, we could be swamped later in the week.

"This bluebird sultan weather just doesn't cut it."

The goose season lasts from Dec. 3 to Jan. 22, unless the kill quotas are reached earlier. The four county quota zone for Southern Illinois consists of Jackson, Williamson, Union and Alexander counties. The quota for the four county zone is 39,800 geese this year, which is up from the 30,600 in 1993.

According to Whitton, when the hunters reach the quota, the season will close so the geese are not over-harvested.

The quota is determined by hunters who are required by law to report their kill within 24 hours by calling 1-800-WETLAND. The system asks for the hunter's waterproof stamp number, permit number, zone, month, day of the kill, and the number of geese harvested. If the quota is reached for a particular zone, the Department of Conservation will publicly announce the closure of the goose season by giving hunters at least a 48 hour notice.

The bag limit for the state of Illinois is seven geese per day, which may not include more than two Canada geese or their subspecies and two white-fronted geese.

An aerial photography survey was taken Nov. 28, and it showed that there are 66,200 geese in the Southern Zone at this time. Union county has 8,000 birds, Crab Orchard has 28,000, Horseshoe has 21,000, Rend Lake has 7,000, Ballard county, Ky. has 2,000, and there are 200 geese at the Buring Star mine, Whitton said.

Mickey Stewart, co-owner of The Wildlife Refuge located at 1130 E. Main street in Carbondale, said even though there are not that many birds in the area now, many hunters could come up big this weekend.

"Some clubs will have a decent opening this weekend," he said. "The deer hunters will keep the birds on the refuge moving, which will bring the geese out over some of the club grounds."

"Some guys will have a decent beginning, and others will say, what geese?"

Stewart said the lack of a full moon keeps the geese from feeding at night, which forces them to feed during the day.

"When the weather gets cold, it forces the geese to eat more corn to keep up their body temperature," Stewart said. "When it is warmer, the geese are less active and the hunters will be more likely to shoot at the first thing they see rather than letting them work the fields and come in closer."

"Hunters will typically pull the trigger earlier because they think the opportunities for a kill are likely to be less as the day goes on."

SIUC hosts first ever MVC Championships

By Chris Clark
Staff Reporter

SIUC will be part of Missouri Valley Conference history this weekend as it will host the first ever MVC swimming and diving championships Dec. 2-4.

Saluki women's swimming coach Mark Klumper said that hosting the event is an honor for him, as well as the University.

"It's pretty special for the athletes and the coaches to hold the first ever anything," he said. "It isn't that often that you get to do that."

Saluki men's swimming coach Rick Walker said being the host school is great, but winning the event would make it even more special.

"It's an honor, without question," he said. "But it would be an even bigger honor to win it."

SIUC's main competition is expected to come from Illinois State, but Klumper said

Evansville could pose some problems for the Salukis.

"Evansville could be tough, because they're the unknown factor," he said.

"We don't know a whole lot about them."

Walker said the Salukis may be the favorites going into the meet, but Southwest Missouri State will have an impact on the outcome.

"It's going to be a matter of depth," he said. "That's going to be to Southwest's (Missouri State) advantage, and not necessarily to ours."

Walker said he is confident in the Saluki's ability to do well at the meet, but he will be depending on the team as a whole to win.

"The competition will be tough, so we'll be relying on swimmers who have been finishing fifth and sixth in our previous meets to step up and do the job," Walker said. "We need them to do well because we could win every event, but still lose the meet. We need them to step up and get us the extra points we'll need to win."

The MVC Championships will be SIUC's first meet in three weeks, but Klumper and Walker said the layoff will help the Salukis this weekend.

"It's been good for us because it's allowed us to rest and prepare for it (MVC Championship)," Walker said.

"We probably went too many weekends in a row," Klumper said.

"We swam four straight weekends, and that's probably why we were flat going into Champaign. The time off has really helped."

The three-day MVC Championship meet starts Friday evening at 5 p.m.

The meet continues Saturday with preliminary heats at 11 a.m. and finals at 7 p.m.

Sunday's preliminaries begin at 10 a.m. with finals heats starting at 6 p.m.

Boxing club hosts rumble

By Doug Durso
Senior Reporter

Lets get ready to rumble! That will be the cry on Saturday as the Roundkick Rumble comes to Carbondale High School.

Several SIUC students will be participating in this boxing event, which is being sponsored by Roundkick Productions and the SIUC Boxing Club.

Jarett Kirshner, president of the SIUC Boxing Club, said this the first of several events that the club would like to sponsor.

"We are really just starting to get our boxing program going and this is a great step for us," he said.

"The money we receive from this event will go to buy some equipment and hopefully lead to us having an event like every month."

The Rumble will have three Muay Thai matches, four kickboxing bouts and three boxing bouts starting at 7:30 p.m.

Muay Thai allows elbows, knees and kicks to the legs, while kickboxing is just kicks above the waist and no elbows allowed.

The main event will be a five-round professional Muay Thai match featuring former SIUC student Shannon "The Cannon" Fulton(3-0) against Tammy "Princess of Pain" Leazier (3-0).

"Gangs have been on the rise in this area recently as has drug use, so I want to give kids another alternative..."

All the rest of the bouts will be three rounds, two minutes apiece except for SIUC student Kwame "The Crippler" Stephens four round Muay Tai match.

Other SIUC athletes participating in the event are Brad Batka, Jose Fernandez, Todd Matille, Eric Waggoner, Mike Marabella, and Anthony Lale. Other fighters will be furnished by Roundkick Productions.

"This will give some of fighters needed experience and bring more outside interest to the club," Kirshner said.

In addition to helping the boxing club, Roundkick Productions promoter Pete Peterson is looking for this event to be a springboard to opening a gym for kids.

Peterson is involved with the Keeping Youths Off Streets program and will take some of the proceeds from the event to open up a gym in Carbondale area.

"This is a great opportunity to help the kids in the area as well as the boxing club," he said. "Belleville and Cape Girardeau both have Silver Gloves boxing, so this area is good for boxing."

Peterson said it is important to give children other opportunities than joining gangs and doing

Twenty-five things you absolutely must know about this college basketball season:

1. Let's get this out of the way right now: Arkansas, UCLA, Massachusetts and Alabama will reach the Final Four.
2. Clip and save for your April NCAA Tournament office pool: If UCLA, UMass or Alabama don't make it, Georgetown, Kentucky or Arizona could.
3. The newcomer of the year won't be St. John's freshman Felipe Lopez, but Georgetown freshman Allen Iverson.

4. Nevada-Las Vegas will win the Big West Conference, earn the automatic NCAA Tournament bid and win a first-round game... if nobody in the Runnin' Rebels' starting five gets hurt.

5. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar wants to become a college head coach. What he might want to do is pay his dues, like Steve Alford at Manchester (Ind.) College.

6. The five best players are: Arkansas forward Corliss Williamson, Indiana forward Alan Henderson, Oklahoma State center Bryant Reeves, Villanova guard Kerry Kittles and Georgia Tech point guard Travis Best.

Quack! Quack! Warm weather may give Southern Illinois hunters a slow start

By Sean Walker
Staff Reporter

The goose season opens Saturday for Southern Illinois, and hunters can expect a slow start due to the mild winter in Wisconsin and other parts of the northern goose staging areas.

According to Richard Whitton, a waterfowl biologist for the Department of Conservation for the Southern half of Illinois, said the flight prediction for the Mississippi Valley goose population is 1,119,000, which is up from the 1993 total of 1,050,000. Even though the population is higher this year, Whitton said the start of the season will be slow because the weather has not become cold enough to push the geese down from the northern staging areas.

"The geese breed in Ontario, and move to Northern Wisconsin to staging ground to prepare for the move to the south for the winter," he said. "So far, the weather hasn't gotten cold enough to move them out of the staging grounds."

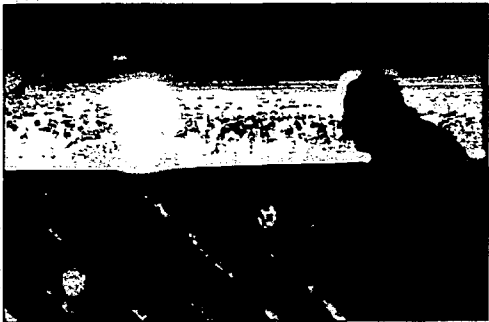

Whitton said geese stay at the staging areas until it snows, which takes away the goose feed. The snow also freezes ponds, lakes and rivers to ice, which takes away the goose water supply and forces the geese to go south in search of more water and food.

The migration will continue until the geese reach Southern Illinois, where they will spend the winter. Whitton said the geese usually stay until late February or early March before going back up north to the breeding grounds.

Steve Pike, the owner and operator of Pike's Hunting Club, Inc. in Marion, said the geese are half-way between the Horicon Marsh, a goose staging area in Wisconsin, and Southern Illinois.

"They are half-way here, and we need a cold snap to bring them down to our area," he said. "If it gets cold in Chicago and
