Thompson's budget upsets educators

SPRINGFIELD (AP)— Gov. James R. Thompson unveiled Tuesday a package of $1.9 billion in state spending for local schools next year that educators and local school boards fear will force local tax hikes or slashes in programs.

Overall, Thompson recommended $2.85 billion in general state spending for education—including $955 million for colleges and universities—for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

He said his proposed spending represented a $182 million increase in overall education spending and would be sufficient to pay the state's entire share of programs it requires of local schools.

The state Board of Higher Education (BHE) had sought an increase of $94 million over this year's projected spending for colleges and universities. Thompson recommends $79 million.

The Illinois General Assembly will mold a final state spending level from everyone's recommendations.

Spokesmen for the state's two largest education lobbies complained that Thompson was being stingy in his spending recommendations.

Thompson said his budget would provide enough money to give university teachers an average 8 percent salary increase, non-academic university workers 10 percent salary increases and all community college employees, including teachers, 6 percent raises.

Although the higher education board has recommended tuition increases of $48 a year for nondergraduates and $68 for graduates, Thompson's recommendation makes no provision for them. The governor has opposed tuition hikes for fiscal 1979.

The pay recommendations would allow the universities to "preserve the competitive level of salaries compared with those of other institutions."

Thompson, in his letter to BHE chairman Donald Prince, said his budget recommendation was large enough to pay for the salary increases recommended by the BHE.

He said those increases would allow the universities to "preserve the competitive level of salaries compared with those offered by other institutions."

However, University of Illinois president John Corbally has been pushing for 10 percent salary increases for his faculty members. And, representatives of three unions which organize faculty members, have said that 10 percent was the minimum increase needed.

Thompson also asked the BHE to support increased funding of the State Universities Retirement System, which has a growing unfunded liability.

The BHE had recommended an increase of $16.7 million in state contributions to the retirement system, but Furman said Thompson's recommendation would probably mean an increase of about $10 million.

The employees covered by the system contribute their share, but the state has fallen short of its share every year. That has caused concern that if the state does not begin to make up the deficit, the retirement system could go broke or benefits to future retirees would have to be cut.

Owner: Beer helps business

S. Barbecue to appeal liquor denial

By Steve Lambert
Staff Writer

A downtown restaurant which has been denied a license to sell beer and wine will appeal that decision to the Carbondale Liquor Control Commission later this month.

Tom Fligor, co-owner of Southern Barbecue, 226 S. Illinois Ave., said Tuesday he has been granted permission by the city clerk to appeal the license denial at the commission's next meeting.

The exact date for that meeting has not been made public. City Clerk Leilani Weiss, who scheduled the meetings, was out of town Tuesday and could not be reached for comment.

Although Fligor said he has received support for friends who have written letters to the commission asking that the license be approved, he'll have to appeal without Joe Dakin.

Dakin, one of two commissioners who supported Southern Barbecue's request for a Class B license last month, resigned effective Tuesday to serve on the state's Prisoner Review Board.

Fligor said he wanted to sell beer and wine to improve his dinner business.

However, the commission, made up of City Council members, voted 3-2 last month to deny the license because, some commissioners said, expansion of liquor business downtown needs to be curtailed.

Helen Westberg and Hans Fischer, the commission's two most vocal opponents of increased liquor business downtown, both have said that such business has led to deterioration of the downtown area.

Many businesses, Westberg has said, are discouraged from going downtown because of the area's reputation as a "haven for bars."

Both Westberg and Fischer said Tuesday they would listen to Fligor's appeal with "open minds," but that they are still vehemently opposed to granting more licenses downtown.

Dakin and Carbondale Mayor Neal Eckert represented Fligor's only support on the commission.

Both said that Southern Barbecue, which has been operated by Fligor's family for 50 years, has had an excellent reputation as a "family restaurant."

Fligor said the restaurant's heritage should have been weighed more by the commission.

Southern Barbecue, he said, once held the oldest liquor license in Carbondale. However, it gave up the license in 1972 because the restaurant was run by one person—Fligor's father—and was forced to close each day at 3 p.m.

Coal supply holding out for 'time being'

By Bruce Rodman
Staff Writer

In the face of a nine-week United Mine Workers (UMW) strike, SIU's coal supply is holding out for "the time being," said Clarence Dougherty, director of campus services.

Dougherty expressed concern that SIU, which had a 90-day coal supply in early December, may run out if the strike lasts too long.

Dougherty said the recent cold weather has "obviously created a larger demand on the heating system and coal supply." But, he said no drastic cutbacks are anticipated, with heat currently being reduced wherever possible.

"When the University closed," Dougherty said, "we didn't have to keep the steam up as much as if we wanted to keep all the buildings comfortable, which helped conserve coal somewhat."

State Superintendent of Education Joseph Cronin has announced that the executive board of UMW District 12, which includes all of Illinois, voted to allow coal shipments to state schools. However, the coal involved would have to be already mined.

"If the University runs out of coal, we would do whatever is necessary to try to stay in operation," Dougherty said. "If that means talking to the UMW, we'll do it."

No new bargaining sessions have been scheduled since the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, the industry bargaining arm, walked out of the talks Sunday.

Gus says that since the City Council voted 3 to 2, why not let Southern Barbecue sell beer and wine but not bourbon, scotch and rum.

Study shows teen-age sex increase

By Brian Sullivan
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—A nationwide report on adolescent sex shows a one-third increase between 1971 to 1976 in both premarital sexual activity and pregnancy among girls 15 to 19 years old.

However, the authors of the report said that learning about the dimensions of sexual behavior among female teen-agers does not help to explain that behavior.

"Far more study is required before we can hope to explain and understand the sexual and reproductive behavior of young Americans," they concluded.

The study, directed by sociologists Melvin Zelnik and John F. Kantner of Johns Hopkins University, was published in Family Planning Perspectives—the journal of the Alan Guttmacher Institute, an affiliate of Planned Parenthood.

The 1976 study is based on 2,183 interviews nationwide; the 1971 study on 4,392. But the authors warned that the 1976 data on blacks is questionable because these teen-agers under-reported the incidence of abortions.

The authors said they reached this conclusion because estimates of the number of children born based on the survey would be higher than the actual number of births.

Because of this and the fact that women living in college dormitories were not reflected in the survey the authors said they could not provide a margin of error for the results.

The percentage of white girls 15 to 19 who had experienced premarital intercourse rose from 26.3 in the 1971 group to 37.2 in the 1976 group, the report said. The percentage of whites having a first pregnancy rose from 8.4 to 9.3.

The 1976 study also reported:

—Four out of five pregnancies among teen-agers were conceived out of wedlock.

—Eight out of 10 premarital pregnancies among teen-agers who did not marry before the outcome of the pregnancy were unintended, about the same as among the 1971 group. Just one in 7 of those interviewed used contraception.

—The proportion of first pregnancies terminated by abortion about doubled from the 1971 group to the 1976 group.

—Adoption and foster placement declined substantially from an already low level. In the 1976 survey, all but 7 percent of the babies born out of wedlock lived with their teen-age mothers.

Of all whites who had a premarital first pregnancy, only 36 percent married before the outcome of the pregnancy in the 1976 group, compared with 52 percent in the 1971 group. Only 9 percent married after the pregnancy in the 1976 group, compared with 12 percent in 1971.

City seeks sport players for area recreation plan

By Jean Ness
Staff Writer

The city is looking for more persons to play volleyball and basketball.

There is more room for persons age 13 and over to participate in neighborhood recreation activities organized by Carbondale's Community Education Program.

The Community Education Program provides learning opportunities for Carbondale children and adults in the areas of recreation, cultural events, supplemental education and social activities.

About 85 persons participate in the neighborhood recreation project, in conjunction with Carbondale Elementary School District 95.

Three recreation times are scheduled each week for anyone over age 13 from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday at Springmore School, 409 N. Springer St., and from 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesday and 12:30 to 4 p.m. Saturday at Thomas School, 1025 N. Wall St.

Basketballs and volleyballs are available during these times and the recreation times are supervised. The project is in conjunction with Carbondale Elementary School District 95.

About 55 persons participate in the program at Thomas School and 30 attend the program at Springmore each week.

Three new basketball teams are being sponsored by the Community Education Program in the 1978 Carbondale Park District basketball league.

Sherman Farmer and Arthur Thomas of Carbondale helped organize the three teams in the northeast and Lake Heights neighborhoods, by chipping in to buy uniforms and baseball equipment.

If these additional teams work out, Bob Stalls, director of Human Resources, said the community can look forward to expansions of already existing programs.

Stalls said the city is contributing $600 to cover the expenses of the basketball teams. The Community Education Program operates on a yearly budget of $1,400.

Civil service range workers vote on bargaining Thursday

This is the second of a two-part series on the civil service election.

By Debbie Thronburgh
Staff Writer

An election on collective bargaining for civil service range employees will be held from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Thursday in Student Center Ballroom A.

The question involved in the election will be whether nearly 700 range workers want to be represented by the Civil Service Bargaining Organization-Illinois Education Association (CSBO-IEA) or whether they do not want representation by any union group.

One hundred forty-four range workers will be ineligible for the election, however. These workers fall into three groups:

—Eighty-six persons in classifications in which less than half the workers turned in authorization cards. Authorization cards request approval for collective bargaining.

Mike Cook, IEA staff member, said that another authorization card drive for these workers will be conducted after this election. If half of the workers in any of these categories sign during that drive, there will be another election for those workers, said Cook.

—Thirty-four persons said to hold "sensitive" positions. According to Cook, some of these people include secretaries in the administration offices in Anthony Hall.

—Twenty-four persons in supervisory positions.

Students fined in drug case

Two SIU students were sentenced Tuesday in Jackson County Circuit Court on drug-related charges by Circuit Judge Richard Richman.

Andrae M. Scurlock, senior in forestry, was sentenced to one year probation and a $100 fine. Scurlock was charged with unlawful possession of cannabis.

David A. Frunk, senior in psychology, was sentenced to six months probation and a $100 fine. Frunk was charged with illegal delivery of cannabis.

Frunk was also ordered to pay $60 restitution to an agent of the Southern Illinois Enforcement Group (MEG). The agent had paid that amount to Frunk for the cannabis.

Minor's don't need consent for abortion

CHICAGO (AP)—A federal court judge issued a temporary restraining order preventing the state from interfering with abortions sought by juveniles who do not have parental consent. The ruling, by Judge Prentice H. Marshall of U.S. District Court, also restrains the state from enforcing a second provision of the law which requires judicial approval before a juvenile may have an abortion. The judge will determine later whether to issue an injunction, making the restraining order permanent. He left standing a provision of the law requiring that minors wait 48 hours between the time of seeking an abortion and having it.

American, Vietnamese indicted for spying

WASHINGTON (AP) — A State Department employee and a Vietnamese who has applied for permanent U.S. residence maintained their innocence against federal charges of spying for communist Vietnam. A federal prosecutor, however, said the American, Ronald Louis Humphrey, "has confessed to the crime for which he was arrested." Humphrey told reporters as he arrived at the federal courthouse in nearby Alexandria, Va., "I am not a spy, and I did not know he was a spy." In a seven-count indictment returned by a federal grand jury in Alexandria, Humphrey and Trung Dinh Huong were accused of stealing and transmitting documents and information "relating to the national defense of the United States."

Protest filed against nominee for FBI head

NEW YORK (AP)—A strong protest against the nomination of Judge William H. Webster to head the FBI was registered by representatives of civil rights and women's organizations. James Foreman, former head of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee, and Kathy Fairchild, editor of the Red Stocking's Feminist Revolution, criticized the appointment in a telegram to President Carter. The telegram charged that Webster is a member of all-white, all-male clubs, and other "secret racist societies. Webster is a known racist and a male chauvinist," the telegram read. The telegram cited Webster's membership in the Noonday Club and the Mysterious Order of the Veiled Prophet, which it termed "a secret racist society of all white males."

Fragments of spy satellite recovered

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP)—A Canadian nuclear response team headed for Canada's Great Slave Lake to recover from the ice two tiny, potentially hazardous pieces of a nuclear-powered Soviet spy satellite located electronically. Canadian Atomic Energy Control Board spokesman Roger Eaton told a news conference earlier the two fragments were giving off radiation that could be dangerous to living beings exposed at close range for a number of hours. The latest fragments from the satellite, which fell from orbit Jan. 24, were located near the Reliance weather station on the northeast end of the frigid lake about 240 miles east of Yellowknife, capital of the Northwest Territories.

Blood, Sweat and Tears sax player dead

AMSTERDAM, The Netherlands (AP)—Gregory Herbert, a saxophone player and recent member of the rock group Blood, Sweat and Tears, was found dead in an Amsterdam hotel room where a search uncovered "significant quantities" of heroin and cocaine, as well as a number of hypodermic syringes, a police spokesman said. The cause of death was not immediately determined and an autopsy was planned. Herbert's body was found by other band members who were returning from dinner. The rock group immediately canceled an evening concert in The Hague and flew to London where a spokesman said they will decide whether to continue their European tour.

Watch out for snow, cold

After a month which brought Southern Illinois its worst snow in 60 years, the Weather Service has issued a winter storm watch for this area Wednesday.

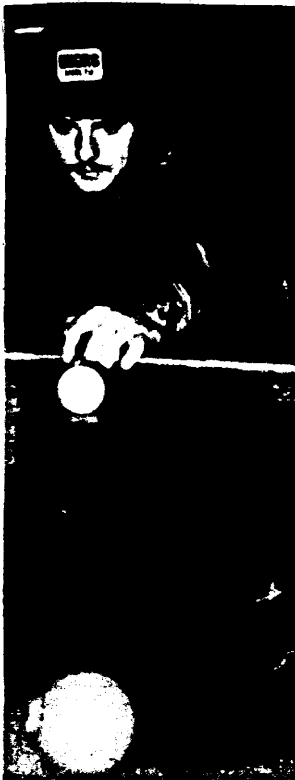

About an inch of snow is expected with temperatures in the low or middle teens.

Around the state, salt supplies have been nearly depleted by a blizzard that dumped a foot of snow last week, and officials say further storm cleanup will be hampered unless fresh supplies can be found.

Duane Carlson of the Illinois Department of Transportation said the state's salt supply is "lower now than what we'd like."

He said the DOT is considering mixing salt with sand and cinders to make the supply last longer.

Researchers with funding problems to be financed from special program

Brenda Hood
Staff Writer

For researchers who have encountered difficulty in getting projects funded, SIU has designed a Special Research Program to combat the problem.

Robert Hallissey, associate director of research and projects said the bulk of the $200,000 state-appropriated budget is earmarked for half-time research assistants. All full-time faculty are eligible.

Hallissey said 175 projects are currently being funded.

"The institution receives a tremendous return on its investment," Hallissey said. If SIU is to be a major research-oriented institution, this program is essential.

All full-time faculty are eligible. Hallissey said the program will fund projects not likely to receive outside funding. This includes projects involving radically new concepts, in areas where other money is simply not available, and small projects requiring a minimum of funds.

Hallissey said the goals of the Special Research Program include continuance through external grants, and projects a publication or presentation at a scholarly meeting.

In 23 out of 25 cases, Hallissey said, at least one of the goals is achieved.

Jack Snowman, assistant professor in education, found the program helpful. Snowman said the first research proposal he had ever written was funded. He said he got less than he asked for, but the amount was sufficient.

"I think for the young faculty member just starting out, it is an excellent program," Snowman said. "Most federal funding agencies look for evidence that you have done some work in the area. Now that I've got some concrete data in my hands, they should be more receptive to my proposal."

Snowman plans to seek outside funding to continue the project he has just completed.

Proposals may be submitted at any time.

Free home fix-up offered

By Ron Keeler
Staff Writer

Student homeowners financially unable to insulate or repair their homes may find carpenters willing to repair their home for free if they qualify for the Northeast Congress Weatherization Program.

Replacement of broken windows, installation of storm doors and windows, attic insulation and other minor repairs will be made by the program's carpenters if homeowner qualifies for the program.

Those persons eligible for the program must own their own home and have an income of less than $3,700 yearly for single person and $4,900 for families.

The organization weatherizes homes in Jackson County under a grant from the federal Community Services Administration and the Governor's Office of Manpower and Human Development.

The program is in its second year of operation in Jackson County and served 51 homes last year. Cardella Scott, coordinator of the program, said the program is aimed at enabling low income, elderly and disabled persons to weatherize their homes and conserve energy.

The program provides its own carpenters to make the repairs and limits expenditures to a $350 material cost a home.

Scott said the program operates on a first-come, first-serve basis and persons applying after the organization's grant has expired will be placed on a waiting list. Interested persons should contact Scott, Northeast Congress program coordinator, Tuesday through Thursday at 549-1888.

Senate to debate athletics fee split

A resolution calling for an "equitable split" of the athletics fees between men's and women's sports is scheduled to be introduced at the Student Senate meeting 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Student Center Mississippi Room.

George Mace, vice president for University relations, and Charlotte West, women's athletics director, plan to attend the meeting.

West Side Senator Gary Figgins, sponsor of the resolution, said Mace and West planned to speak to the senate on the issue.

Men now receive 70 percent and women 30 percent of the fee Figgins said he considers a 60-40 split "equitable."

The resolution was scheduled for introduction at last week's meeting but was withdrawn because Mace and West wanted to be present when it was introduced.

Post office checks legality

SIU fights mail-order term papers

By Pam Bailey
Staff Writer

SIU's ongoing war against "term paper mills," firms which sell ready-made research reports to students across the country, is being stepped up.

Frank Horton, vice president for academic affairs and research, said Tuesday he has contacted Attorney General William Scott's office and inspectors of the U.S. Post Office.

The Attorney General's office is gathering information on the scope of the research firms' business on Illinois campuses. The Post Office is investigating the matter to determine if the firms' use of the mail constitutes mail fraud, Horton said.

Arthur Sussman, University legal counsel, wrote a letter this month to Authors' Research Firms, Inc., the "most conspicuous" of the research firms peddling their papers on campus.

He informed its president that "in our opinion the firm's service is illegal and we will not allow the company to advertise on University bulletin boards."

Horton said the head of Authors' Inc., which is based in Chicago, replied "at the firm disagreed with the opinion that its service is illegal. However, it agreed to refrain from advertising on University property."

In December, Horton had signs posted in academic classrooms, the Student Center and dorms that read: "Any instances of plagiarism involving the use of research papers provided by private sector firms should be reported to the office of Frank E. Horton."

Persons responsible for the various bulletin boards on campus have been asked to monitor them. Horton said he has not received reports of any advertisements for research papers being posted since then.

According to a 1972 Illinois statute, it is illegal to "assist or promote plagiarism in institutions of higher education."

To bring a civil case against a research firm, the chief executive officer of a university must submit a written petition to the attorney general or the state's attorney before any action may be taken against the companies.

Horton said if Authors' Inc. persisted in advertising its services on University property he would immediately refer the matter to the Attorney General.

The two departments which fear the impact of the research peddlers the most are the English Department and the Political Science Department. In November, the Political Science Department unanimously adopted a resolution calling for legal action against Authors' Research Firms, Inc., and others like it. However, Sussman said at the time there was not enough evidence against the firm to proceed.

Any student found guilty of plagiarism could be expelled from the University, said Sussman. However, he pointed out that plagiarism is very hard to prove.

Faculty members can only watch to see if a student's work is inconsistent with his prior work. And even if a teacher is reasonably sure that the student didn't write the paper, it's extremely difficult to prove who did write it," said Sussman.

Despite the warnings of faculty and administrators, a supplier of research papers in Carbondale intends to stay in business.

Ron Stout, Academic Rescue's one-man staff, said Tuesday that being unable to advertise on the University bulletin boards will not slow his business.

"My customers are a very select group of people. I've known them for years," said Stout.

Stout, who is also a television repairman, said he does a very modest business, selling about one or two papers a term, at about $3 to $8 a page.

Vote 'yes' to collective bargaining

SIU-C civil service workers earn 26 percent less than their counterparts in state code department positions. This week, campus range employees can change their situation by voting for collective bargaining.

On Thursday, 675 civil service range workers at SIU will vote on whether or not they want to be represented for collective bargaining purposes by the Civil Service Bargaining Organization (CSBO), an affiliate of the Illinois Education Association (IEA).

The range workers should vote in favor of collective bargaining because they need the clout a union wields at contract negotiating time.

All civil service employees who are not unionized are called "range" employees by the University. These workers should vote "yes" to collective bargaining so they can get their fair slice of the economic pie.

A look at the record shows that range employees aren't getting equitable salaries under the current system. Although some civil service workers received 7 percent pay hikes this year, the increase was paltry compared with the $1,000 to $3,000 annual pay raises some high-ranking administrators got.

A study presented at the Board of Trustees meeting in December showed that SIU-C civil service salaries are 26 percent below what state code employees in similar positions earn. The study also showed that SIU-C civil service workers' wages are less than similar workers' wages at most other state universities. Collective bargaining by united civil service workers can end such inequity.

The board has petitioned the state for more funding to bring its range employees' salaries up to statewide levels. But the problem does

are teachers or miners
they get a better deal
when they unite in unions.*

not lie in more state funds which the state may not grant anyway, but rather in how the board apportions the monies it already receives. If the University can afford to give its administrators hefty pay increases, it can surely afford to give its civil service workers equitable wages too.

Lee Hester, CSBO chairman, has said that collective bargaining is the only way to ensure a living wage for civil service workers. Hester is right. He has pointed out that few civil service workers make as much as $1,000 a month. The Board of Trustees was wrong to approve substantial raises for administrators while giving token increases to civil service employees.

Collective bargaining brings with it the power to strike, the union's ultimate weapon. After the custodian's strike last fall, the University is painfully aware of the damage an effective strike can have on SIU's operations. SIU range workers, who receive lower wages than most workers in similar jobs in our area, must have collective bargaining so they too can exercise the strike option if it should ever be needed.

After two years of fighting for a collective bargaining election on campus, Hester and his CSBO have finally gotten one. Range workers should vote to join the CSBO and IEA and give themselves the collective bargaining representation they need.

By voting for bargaining, and thus enhancing their own positions, the range workers will strengthen the case for collective bargaining throughout the University community. Whether wage earners are teachers, custodians, bricklayers, coal miners, longshoremen, or whatever, they get a better deal from management when they unite in a union. If range workers vote in favor of collective bargaining on Thursday, they'll get a better deal too.

It's a bird, it's a... pepperoni pizza???

By Arthur Hoppe

As you know, a Russian nuclear-powered satellite carrying 100 pounds of radioactive uranium fell out of the sky by mistake over Canada the other day.

Actually, our scientists knew more than two weeks ago that the solid little fellow was losing altitude and was about to fall down.

They told our national security adviser, Mr. Brzezinski. Mr. Brzezinski told our President, Mr. Carter. Mr. Carter told Mr. Brzezinski to tell the Soviet Ambassador, Mr. Dobrynin, and to express Mr. Carter's concern that "if the debris fell near a populated area there could be a serious hazard to the public." This he did, he said, on January 12.

Mr. Dobrynin presumably thanked Mr. Brzezinski and promised to stay away from populated areas. In any event, he also told his government.

The Russian government, Mr. Brzezinski said, acted in "a very cooperative manner" by immediately telling "numerous other governments" including Canada's and ours.

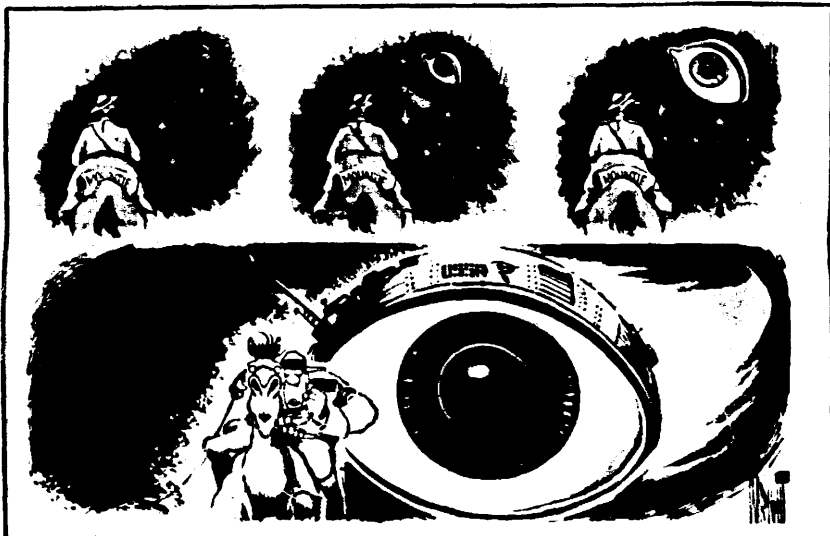

That must have reminded Mr. Brzezinski to tell the Pentagon, the CIA, NASA and so forth. He said he got around to that on January 17.

A week later, the thing fell down. But it all ended happily because everybody concerned remembered to tell everybody concerned to look out for 100 pounds of radioactive uranium falling out of the sky.

Everybody told everybody, that is, except us.

I'm sure the reason our government neglected to tell us was that it didn't want to worry us. Since the dawn of history, our leaders have gone to every extreme not to worry us followers. If there's anything that makes leaders uneasy, it's a pack of worried followers.

"What's a little rumble?" as the Mayor of Pompeii said in 79 A.D. "Who's afraid of a bunch of barbarians?" to quote the last Roman emperor four centuries later. Or, as the captain of the Titanic put it so well, "Don't worry, ladies and gentlemen, we're merely stopping to take on ice."

Nothing worries me more than this solicitousness on the part of our leaders for my peace of mind. In fact, I haven't had a moment's peace of mind since that satellite missed me. What worries me is what the hell else is heading my way from up there that they also haven't told me about.

In the darker passages of the night, I have gone so far as to envision our President's Farewell Address on network television:

"Good evening, my fellow Americans. I do not wish to alarm you in any way. But I feel it is my duty as your President to put before you the facts at my disposal.

"Two weeks ago, our astronomers picked up a strange object heading our way from the Andromeda Galaxy. Initially, they informed me that it would miss our planet by several million miles. I will not bore you at this point with a detailed explanation of their mathematical miscalculation. Suffice it to say they goofed.

"But I'm happy to say that the object has now been identified as nothing but a common, ordinary pepperoni pizza. And I know I speak for every American when I say I love pizza and pepperoni is one of my favorites.

"I should perhaps add a note of caution: It is a large pizza. As a matter of fact, our scientists now estimate it is large enough to bury the continental United States under a layer of hot marinara sauce twenty feet thick, which it should do in—let me see—12 seconds.

"I only wish there had been room for all of you here at our Antarctic White House. Meanwhile, good-bye, good luck and please don't worry."

SIU's winter anthem: Slip-slidin' Away

By Tom Rafferty
Student Writer

Singer-songwriter Paul Simon should get a job forecasting the weather.

His popular song "Slip-Slidin' Away" was a big hit during Christmas break. Most of us thought the lyrics were good, but we never dreamed they would haunt us when we returned to school in the foothills of the Ozarks. For SIU students know that "a-slipin' and a-slidin'" is never used to describe winter at this southern latitude.

But somehow Simon knew what Mother Nature had in store for us—20 inches of that fluffy white stuff. To someone in a wheelchair, like myself, all that snow represents more than an ordinary challenge.

Traveling would be easier if I had a 300-pound Siberian Huskie hitched to my 12-volt wheelchair. This outfit isn't easy to drive on a sunny day when the sidewalks are clear; it's almost impossible when the axles are mired in slush.

As do auto drivers, wheelies must learn how to outfox the ruts and the ice. I like to compare driving a wheelchair in this mess to a football game: If there's a snow bank or an icy bump in front of you, throw the wheelchair in reverse and seek a clearer path to your goal.

For if you try to keep on plowing through dangerous spots, you will damage those

Commentary

Everest and Jennings wheelchair masterpieces. Even in 90 degree weather these rattle-traps are apt to cause a severe ulcer—and in this weather, well, all the Pepto Bismol in the world won't help.

Our wheelchairs move fairly easily on smooth surfaces of ice or packed snow, but when we try to negotiate 20 inches worth, that means trouble. As cars spin their wheels trying to get traction, they push the snow toward the curb, where it forms insurmountable mounds. This is compounded by the snow plows, which shove the snow in giant piles, often covering the smooth incline we need to get up and down curbs.

So, while most people have trouble crossing streets in this weather, we also have the additional problem of finding just the right place to cross, where the snow is even with the curb.

And curbs are not the only problem. Soldiers earn hazardous duty pay for less nightmarish activities than we go through traveling sidewalks in this weather. With the sudden holes and leaping peaks of unshoveled snow, they often seem like obstacle courses designed by some fiendish ice architect.

This sort of activity can turn a five-minute jaunt for a wheelie into an adventure any ski buff would be more than eager to relate at the lodge's cocktail lounge.

But there's one benefit for us in all our struggles—the bouncy rides will prepare us for the new SIU Wheelchair Alpine Ski team.

Whether or not we all make the team, I hope Paul Simon's next song is called "Soakin' Up the Sunshine."

Crime bill—a milestone in law

By James J. Kilpatrick

The Senate came back to town on the 19th, and plunged swiftly into debate on one of the most important measures of this session. This is S. 1437, the bill to recodify the federal criminal code. After 12 years of patient labor, the time has come to push the bill to enactment.

Unhappily, the bill has provoked a kind of Pavlovian reaction on both right and left. Say "S. 1437" to some of my conservative friends, and their adrenals start pumping. At the other end of the spectrum, the American Civil Liberties Union is having the purple complexion fits; in a shameful display of ad hominem rhetoric, the ACLU denounces the bill because Richard Nixon and John Mitchell once had something to do with it.

For a time, it appeared that Jesse Helms of North Carolina was seeking to kill the bill by delaying it to death. He invoked Senate rules to prevent en bloc consideration of committee amendments. He was sore because he felt the leadership was trying to railroad a long and complicated bill to premature passage, and it may be that Majority Leader Robert Byrd erred in pressing too hard.

But in the end Helms relented and threw his own valued influence among conservatives into the cooperative effort. He is not happy with a number of provisions; he fears one result may be to clog the federal courts with appeals from state court convictions. I think his fears in this regard are overblown, but until we have a few years of experience, we don't know.

The point is that in a legislative field as controversial as this one, senators at the far ends of opposition must give a little toward the center. This is not like a Panama Canal treaty, to be voted up or voted down with no opportunity for committees to do their work of refinement. In this matter of recodification, scores of interested parties have labored earnestly to rewrite the old Senate Bill One that raised such turmoil two years ago. In the process, an infinitely better bill has been perfected. What is insufficiently understood is that virtually all of the most objectionable features of Senate Bill One have been eliminated from the measure emerging from the Senate. Within the Judiciary Committee, liberals and conservatives have struggled to reach agreements tolerable to both points of view. These months of hard work have brought together such ordinary opposites as Kennedy of Massachusetts and Thurmond of South Carolina. We saw a yielding by the liberal Bayh of Indiana and the conservative Garn of Utah. Senators as far apart as Abourezk of South Dakota and the late John McClellan of Arkansas agreed to half leaves as better than none.

The sponsoring senators understand the pressing need to get a recodification law onto the books. The Federal Criminal Code is a patchwork proposition of conflicting and ambiguous statutes loosely stitched together over the course of 200 years. It cries out for orderly revision and modernization.

The bill would be justified for one reason alone: It would impose some sensible limitations upon the almost unlimited discretion of federal judges in imposing sentences on convicted defendants. It is simply bizarre that robbery, on the average, is punished by 39 months in prison in northern New York and by nearly 19 years in Texas. Substantially identical offenses by similarly situated defendants ought to result in fairly comparable punishments. That would seem to be elementary justice. The pending bill would take us in the right direction.

But there is much more in this bill that is good. Such stains on the Criminal Code as the old Smith Act would be removed entirely. The last vestigial remnants of the Comstock Act would be replaced by some rational provisions on pornography. We of the press would gain new protection against the unconstitutional gag orders of despotic judges.

This past Monday, in a healing gesture of statesmanship, Helms himself moved for adoption of 300 uncontested, perfecting amendments. If the same constructive approach can be obtained in the House, by the end of the year the task of recodification could be complete. Count it a milestone in our law, and let us get there soon.

Incompetence: Duffers dilemma

By Garry Wills

Our children were infants so long ago that our pediatrician still made house calls. When he noticed one door had a broken handle, our doctor asked my wife why her husband did not fix it. "He doesn't know how," she rightly informed him. After several visits, he fixed it himself. We duffers are not so dumb.

Well, maybe we are. When I was a graduate student, deep in study in our little attic with a stand-on-legs bathtub, I reached up on mid-sentence to turn off the water and the ancient faucet came off in my hand. Reacting coolly, I called for my wife, explained the problem, and told her to call the landlady downstairs while I stayed in the tub and bailed water into the sink. She looked at me with her endearing condescendence and said, "Wouldn't it be easier to pull the plug?"

Some people never get rattled. On the other hand, when our infant daughter took poison, I called the poison center and relayed information to them, shouting each question to my wife. How much does she weigh? How old is she? How much did she drink? What is her name? I relayed dutifully. My wife said, "I'm certainly not going to tell you your own daughter's name."

When I told my wife I had accepted a request to write an article about the city we live in, she answered: "Why? You don't know anything about it." Compared to her, of course, I don't. But this is the kind of thing that gets under your skin after a while.

My son saw a new typewriter with cartridges to pull out instead of ribbons to change, and told me I should have that, as he is going off to college soon and he knows I can't change typewriter ribbons. (He does it for me.)

My daughter, when she was five or so, saw me open a can of soup in some dire emergency, and said, "Daddy, you can't cook." My oldest son took me to the second baseball game I've ever attended in my life, and was so embarrassed by the questions I asked that he moved away from me. He also beats me at political trivia quizzes.

My second son beats me at tennis, ping pong and basketball. I don't dare challenge my daughter to any contest that is athletic, because a) she would probably beat me, or, b) she would go into fanatical training and beat me the next day. She does not like to lose. (I'm better at that than she is.)

When I started playing the piano again, they all knew what to expect, and have borne it bravely. Some children grow up thinking their daddy can do everything. Mine have grown up knowing theirs cannot do anything.

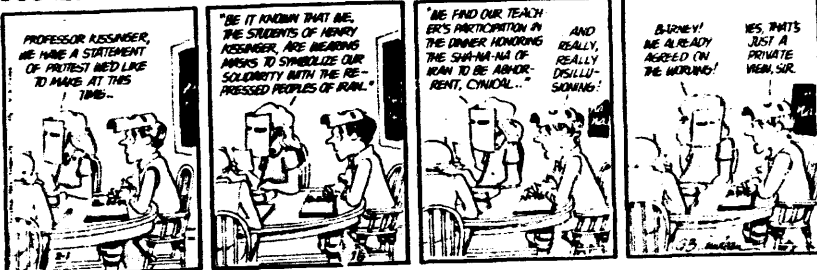

But I comfort myself with the thought that the world needs duffers, after all. Without us, there would be no one for other people to help. We occasionally are useful. We are the cause of nobility. Great social benefits arise from ineptitude. It creates friends and protectors. Even my children protect me. Who could ask for more?

Glee Club to sing; Kingsbury directs

By Nick Sorial
Student Writer

Both classical and popular music will be featured at the University Male Glee Club concert at 3 p.m. Sunday in the Student Center, Ballroom D.

The first half of the concert will feature the Glee Club's classical talents. Songs include an adaptation of Robert Frost's "The Pasture" and "The Old Hundred Psalm Tune," originally sung at the coronation of England's Queen Elizabeth II. Kraig Kerper, a freshman from Pequot, Minn., will be the soloist for "Trinkied," a German drinking song. No refreshments will be served, however.

A tune made popular by Mac Davis, "I Believe in Music," is one of nine songs in the second half of the performance. The second half will consist of folk songs and lighter, more secular music, including a barbershop quartet.

The 30-man group is directed by Robert Kingsbury. Linda Farnsworth is the accompanist.

In addition to directing the glee club, Kingsbury directs the University choir, Southern Singers, and the University Chorus. Of the 15 songs on Sunday's program, Kingsbury has arranged or helped arrange nine of them.

The man is really talented," Don Bishop, a senior in mathematics, said of Kingsbury, a Hattiesburg, Miss., native. "He won't admit it, but he's the reason I love a music department, doing the things it does." The University Chorus is touring Europe this year, and the Glee Club is going in the Spring of 1979.

Before teaching, Kingsbury was a professional singer. He made regular radio and television appearances on the Perry Como Show, the Arthur Godfrey Show and others.

Dance group to hold auditions

The Southern Repertory Dance Theatre "started out to be a modern company" and is currently into modern ballet and jazz, Cindy Paulsen, president of the company, said.

Auditions for the company, which needs to replace dancers who left after last semester, will be at 6:30 p.m. Thursday in Furr Auditorium.

Dancers will be asked to learn a "few combinations" at the auditions, Paulsen said.

The company meets from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. every Monday and Wednesday. Those accepted into the company can obtain 3 credit hours for the dance theatre.

The company plans a Spring concert and a tour to Rockford, Illinois this semester.

Last semester the dance group performed a Student Dance Concert and performed for Parent's Day.

Linda Kostalik, an instructor in women's physical education and choreographer of SU's Summer Playhouse Theatre, is the director of the group.

Custom-built live music club to open

Mike Gumenius
Staff Writer
and
By Nick Doonan
Student Writer

One night in 1971, as Gary Lotz, 31, and Ed Maher, 30, were shooting the breeze in a tavern in Stuttgart, Germany, they discovered that they each held the same goal for the future: To open a bar when they returned to the states.

Both men were helicopter pilots in the 34th Signal Battalion of the U.S. Army. Both men flew their helicopters out of Hangar 9, located at the International Airport at Stuttgart.

Lotz was discharged from the Army in 1971. He enrolled at SIU that same year, majoring in design. Maher was discharged from the Army in 1972 and went directly to Colorado where he worked at several jobs.

Lotz and Maher kept in touch with each other over the years, kicking around their idea of starting a tavern.

When Lotz graduated with a bachelors degree in design in 1977, Maher came to Carbondale from Colorado and the two began to turn their idea into a reality. Carbondale, it was decided, would be the site of "their tavern."

"We think there's a market in Carbondale for a bar where students can dance and listen to live music in an attractive and comfortable surrounding," Maher said.

The attractive setting, they talked about would take form in the shape of an airplane hangar. Appropriately, the tavern would bear the same name as the place they once flew their helicopters out of—Hangar 9.

From the outside, the building at 511 S. Illinois Ave. looks like a small airplane hangar. While Hangar 9 isn't large enough to hold one small plane, it can hold between 200 and 240 people, depending on fire and health codes which still must be approved.

The major difference between Hangar 9 and other Carbondale bars, Lotz stressed, is that from the beginning it was designed specifically for live music.

"The stage, the seating, the sound equipment, and the whole layout, are geared so you can see and hear the band comfortably from all over the floor," Maher said.

Hangar 9's sound system, including concert-type speakers, was designed by the same people who did the sound system for the band Heartfield, according to Lotz.

"Bands can plug right into our system with no problem," said Lotz who did most of the wiring himself. All of the wiring is built into the wall, he said, to avoid running wires across the floor and to make it easier for a hand to set up. A special control panel behind the main bar also allows for easy monitoring of lighting.

Lotz noted that the shape of Hangar 9's walls and the materials used in their construction are all designed for good acoustics. To control cigarette smoke, which often becomes a problem at bars, Lotz said they have installed electronic air filters at Hangar 9.

Eight stage lights equipped for spotlighting and other tricks, will illuminate a three-foot high and 15-foot deep stage in the back corner of the tavern. Hangar 9's dance floor in front of the stage will measure approximately 250 square feet, Lotz said.

To deal with the problem of crowding at the booze counter, Lotz and Maher are installing a 96-foot main bar with three stations and a 24-foot long standing bar under the front window.

Lotz also hopes that the multiple accommodations in Hangar 9's washrooms will both cut down on waiting time and save the johns from vandalism.

"If people don't have to wait as long to use the washrooms, maybe they'll be less inclined to tear them up," he said.

Naturally, Hangar 9's interior design will be in keeping with the overall aviation concept. Besides the various aviation-type posters and souvenirs which will eventually grace the bar walls, Lotz and Maher have contracted a painter to do a 5-foot by 3-foot oil painting of an aviation scene.

Also, a large canopy will hang over the length of the main bar. Lotz said Hangar 9 patrons would find an artificial skylight made of stained glass inside the canopy. The stained glass skylight will depict a blue sky filled with everything from clouds to a rainbow.

"I'm anticipating that it will be a quality showroom, running some of the better regional acts, with the possibility of occasionally having nationally-known acts play there," said booking agent John Lloyd of Shawnee Talent, the agency Lotz and Maher plan to book through.

"The place is big enough that they can afford to bring in higher-priced acts. They've got the potential to run a helluva lot of people through there," Lloyd said.

Maher said Hangar 9 would open in about three weeks if delivery of building materials is not seriously delayed by the weather.

Seminars give job-hunting tips

The Career Planning and Placement Center (CPPC) is sponsoring a number of student workshops this semester, ranging in topics from selecting a major to getting a job.

Three of the workshops currently in progress are:

"After Graduation—Then What?" A session on the future of the student after graduation meets at 11 a.m. every Friday in Woody Hall Room B204.

"Resume Writing" The session meets at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. every Wednesday except Feb. 8 in Woody Hall Room B204.

"Government Workshop." A session on how to prepare for government jobs meets at 11 a.m. every Wednesday in Woody Hall Room B204.

Other workshops, which begin in February, are:

"Government Career Day." Representatives of state and federal governments will be available to talk to students from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Feb. 3 in Student Center Ballrooms A and B.

"Getting Unstuck." A workshop for civil service employees will meet from 6:30 p.m. Feb. 9, and 8:30 to 5 p.m. Feb. 10, in the Student River Rooms.

"Career Awareness Group for Women." A session how women can get back into the job market will meet from 10 a.m. to noon, Feb. 14, in Counseling Center Group Room A.

"Choosing a Major Can Be a Pain." Sessions will meet from 2:30 to 5 p.m. on Feb. 13, 20, 22 and March 1, and 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. on Feb. 24 and March 3. Students should sign up in Woody Hall Room B204.

"Fishing, Slavery and Parachutes." The job hunting workshop will meet at 8:30 a.m. March 11, in the Home Economics Building. Students should sign up in Woody Hall Room B204.

Meeting planned for summer study project in Mexico

A meeting for students who are interested in the Summer Study in Mexico program will be held at 8 p.m. Thursday in Neckers C. Room 218. Slides of Xalapa, Veracruz, and other places to be visited will be shown.

Participants in the program will stay with Spanish-speaking families in Xalapa. Students may earn from four to eight credit hours in courses offered by SUU and the Universidad Veracruzana. These courses include several levels of Spanish language as well as work in Spanish American literature and civilization, history, anthropology and psychology.

Two optional field trips to other Mexican cities will be available at extra cost.

The cost of the program ranges from $430 to $890 (not including personal spending money, textbooks, and the round trip between one's home and Xalapa), depending on the number of courses taken and on whether one participates in the field trips.

Students wanted to help take care of runaways

By Chris Muenich
Student Writer

WANTED: Students, preferably more than 21 years old and in graduate school, who have extra time to care for children who are runaways to Southern Illinois.

Under a program sponsored by the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services, short-term foster parents are being recruited from the area.

Ed Buerger, department coordinator, said he is trying to recruit students to take care of a child for as little as a few days to a maximum of 15 days.

During the child's stay, the short-term foster parent would provide food and shelter until the child's parents are contacted and transportation home is arranged.

Peggy Falcone, coordinator for the Illinois Status Offenders Program, said the responsibilities of taking care of a runaway child are not difficult if the foster parent "has a high degree of self-confidence and is able to adjust his life style for a short period of time to fit the best interests of a child."

Buerger explained that to fit the interests of the child, the foster parent should give as much time to the child as possible. He suggested that during the short stay, the child should be treated as if he were the younger brother or sister of the foster parent.

Falcone said, "It could be a fun experience for people geared to helping others." To promote the program and to find students who may be interested in caring for a runaway, Buerger and Falcone will be at the Home Economics Building for a question-and-answer meeting. The meeting in the first floor lounge will last from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Wednesday.

Following the morning meeting, two workshops will be organized for students interested in the program. The workshops will cover what to expect from the child and how to care of the child under the various situations which may arise during the stay.

Buerger emphasized that the runaway child is not a delinquent. He said the child may run away to Carbondale because of the city's party-time reputation.

He said that, when the child arrives, the excitement of partying may be replaced by the fear of having no place to go. Buerger said, "He is usually found wandering the streets by the police, who refer him to the Department of Children and Family Services."

Falcone and Buerger said they want to find at least six student volunteers for the program.

Buerger said if their quota of foster parents is found, the program should be underway by late February or early March after the foster parents are licensed by the state.

There is no cost for the licensing, but it includes an inspection of the foster parent's home. The inspection ensures that there is the required amount of living space for the care of a child and checks for safety hazards.

Falcone added that "the student does not have to be a counselor to participate. We are looking for big brother and sister images of students who want to be companions for a child over a short period of time."

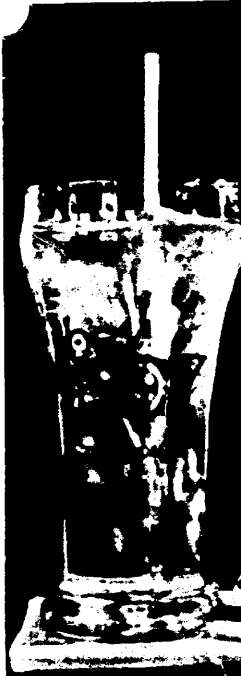

Angry motorist causes car clog

CHICAGO (AP)—An irate motorist caught in a morning traffic jam on the Dan Ryan Expressway Tuesday stopped his car, locked the doors, rolled up the windows and refused to budge, police said.

They said Abraham Johnson Jr., 27, remained in the car about 2½ hours and backed up traffic four miles on the Kennedy Expressway and two miles on the Eisenhower Expressway.

Patrolman Ulysses Crawford said that Johnson held up handwritten notes to police, some of them reading "Officer Crawford is going to kill me." The CIA is going to kill me. President Carter is going to rescue me.

A tow truck finally pried the car, with Johnson in it, to a police station. Johnson was charged with resisting arrest, failure to obey a police officer and obstructing traffic.

Planning group considers proposal for convention center, city complex

By Mike Jones
Student Writer

A local planning committee is considering a proposal to build a convention center, a new city hall and a parking garage on S. Illinois Ave.

The Carbondale Citizens Community Development Steering Committee (CCDSC) have met with a group of city officials who say a private developer from the Carbondale area would commit $5 million toward the project.

An additional $4 million to $5 million grant would be needed from the recently enacted Urban Development Action Commission (UDAC). The commission approves grants for justified residential, industrial and commercial revitalizations if private capital is also available.

The entire complex would be located on the east side of Illinois Ave. in the 200 and 300 blocks.

The private developer's commitment would go toward a 2,000-seat convention center, a new hotel, a shopping area and an office complex—all located on the same block.

On the next block, is at the new federal building, would be the new city hall, a public library and a parking garage.

The city has been trying to rebuild this area, which on CCDSC member called "an eyesore," for the past several months.

Not only would the proposed construction regenerate the downtown area, but it would also add at least 200 jobs and an estimated $5 million in tax money, officials say.

"The proposed construction," said Don Monty, an assistant director in community development, "would have a significant economical impact on the city. Carbondale is overly dependent upon the University and retail sales. The city is in trouble if either go down the tubes."

The additional jobs would aid the lower income groups whose homes are easily accessible to the central area.

"Not only would the construction provide immediate employment," added Frank Adams, chairman for CCDSC, "but it is important for the future."

Current businesses within the proposed area would be relocated. Officials have yet to discuss relocation with the proprietors.

The central location was mainly chosen for its easy accessibility from both U.S. 51 and Illinois 13. Monty said CCDSC would probably recommend the proposal to the Carbondale City Council.

Campus Briefs

The Future Farmers of America will meet at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Student Center Kaskaskia Room.

Solar project to request grant

By Lori Amend
Staff Writer

The Ananda Marga Solar Project will ask the National Center for Appropriate Technology (NCAT) for a $4000 grant to fund Shawnee Sunshine, a proposed solar energy resource center for Southern Illinois.

The resource center, which would include books, reference materials and sources of technical assistance, is an objective of the program funded through a Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA) grant.

More than 50 persons attended the project's second organizational meeting Monday night.

Ananda Marga Solar Project was started last September to help develop low cost solar heating programs. Areas of interest include space heating and cooling, sewage treatment and water quality.

Hugh Muldoon, one of two staff members for the project, said the group plans to share technical knowledge of its members through a network access system they are trying to establish.

This would eliminate dependence on high-cost experts, Muldoon said. Steve Miller, of the Jackson County Health Department, spoke on sewage treatment facilities in rural homes, such as the waterless composting toilet. He said it does not waste or contaminate the water supply.

Miller said that although regulations governing this recent method of sewage treatment are not yet settled, the state office in Marion does allow its use.

Girl need not swim—for now

ARGO, Ill. (AP) — School officials have agreed to a truce with a student who refuses to attend swimming classes because of a religious belief that it would be immodest to wear a bathing suit in public.

Cynthia Forrest, 13, had been threatened with being marked truant if she fails to attend the all-girls swimming class.

Her father, Ernest Forrest, met with school Superintendent J.E. Connelly. Forrest said Connelly agreed to temporarily assign Cynthia to other physical education activities while the matter is decided.

Connelly refused to comment after Monday's meeting. But Connelly had said earlier that he will consider excusing Cynthia from the swimming classes if her minister, the Rev. Homer Hensley of the Peoples Missionary Baptist Church in Justice, would write a letter on Cynthia's behalf. Hensley has declined to say whether he will write a letter.

Richmond to join task force

State Rep. Bruce Richmond, D-Murphysboro, has been appointed to the Illinois Futures Task Force. The task force was created last September to examine problems and opportunities in Illinois for economic and social development, jobs and conservation.

Richmond was appointed by House Speaker William A. Redmond. The task force is composed of four representatives and four senators, two from each party, and nine public members.

State funds totaling $95,000 have been appropriated for the task force, which is scheduled to give an interim report to the governor and General Assembly in October 1978. The final report is due in October 1979.

The chairman of the task force is George A. Ranney Jr. of Chicago, secretary of the Inland Steel Company.

Hit-and-run accident unsolved

Police have no leads in the hit-and-run accident that injured an SIU student on Jan. 16.

Nancy Jose, a graduate student in health education, was struck as she walked south on Wall Street near Pleasant Hill Road.

Lt. Terry Murphy of the Carbondale Police said that because it was snowing heavily at the time of the accident, the driver may not have known he hit her.

Jose was taken to Memorial Hospital for treatment of cuts, bruises and internal injuries. She has since been released.

Finley not shocked by Kuhn decision; A's owner predicts battle in court

CHICAGO (AP)—Charlie Finley, owner of the Oakland A's, said Monday that baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's decision to void the Vida Blue trade to Cincinnati was "very disenchanted to say the least but nothing unexpected."

"It's ridiculous when you pour millions of dollars into a club over the years to develop five consecutive division titles and three straight world championships and not receive any support in doing so and then be deprived of selling a player like Vida Blue for $1.75 million who, without question, will be playing his option out next year and will be placing himself on the bidding block and receive $2 million or more himself and the club that developed him receives nothing," said Finley.

"I needed to sell Blue to keep the ship afloat in 1978," he said. "I lost $596,000 in 1976 and $1.2 million in 1977 and needed the proceeds from the sale of Blue to keep the ship afloat in '78."

"Kuhn states that this deal affects competitiveness. I don't know what he's talking about. Does he want to see clubs go bankrupt? I don't know why I should be penalized and not be able to get some of my money back, in order to stay in business," said Finley.

"I might add that my future actions will speak for me," he added. "At this time I do not wish to discuss what these actions will be other than to say I will enjoy meeting him (Kuhn) in the courts once again in round two. And, if I might sound like Muhammad Ali, round two might be the knock-out blow for Boohoioe Kuhn. Get that spelling right. It's B-o-o-h-o-o-i-e."

Seminars on jobs, moving to be held for new residents

Have you recently moved to Carbondale or are you interested in meeting new people?

The first of a series of three workshops dealing with job searching and the problems of moving will be held from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Thursday at the Women's Center, 408 W. Freeman.

"The workshop is aimed at anyone new in Carbondale or who wants to meet new people," said Nancy Schmid, program coordinator at the Women's Center.

Schmid said the first session will focus on the services, entertainment, events and organizations in Carbondale. The Women's Center will be handing out maps, brochures and pamphlets. The job search in Carbondale will be the topic of the second session. A counselor from Career Planning and Placement will discuss job possibilities in the area.

"How does it feel?" will be the topic of the last session dealing with moving. The group will discuss how to combat loneliness, depression and isolation when moving to a new place. A counselor from the guidance department will conduct exercises in getting to know other people.

University police want to get rid of recovered bikes

University police have some bicycles they would like to get rid of, but can't.

Capt. Carl Kirk, supervisor of the security office investigation section, says the police have recovered five bikes since last summer. He'd like to see the owners get them back—but police can't find out who the owners are. None of the bikes have been reported lost or stolen.

One was recovered on South Forest Street in Carbondale and another was found in northwest Carbondale. Two more were recovered from unknown locations and still another turned up in Herrin around Thanksgiving.

Kirk said one bicycle is a "motorcross" model and all the others are multi-speed men's bikes.

"One is a 10-speed that looks like it should be worth $300 to $400," Kirk said.

Kirk said if the bikes aren't claimed, they will eventually be given to needy families. He said the law prohibits the police from selling or auctioning off bikes or other found property.

Depth, experience featured by Terriers

IAC sets meeting to hear discussion

By Jerry Campbell
Staff Writer

In the course of a long basketball season, February is often times the month that never was—after January 31, all eyes are focused on March and tournament time. For Coach Doug Woolard and his Carbondale High Terriers, such is not the case.

"I think playing in the South Seven conference and playing the kind of tough competition that we do is good preparation for the regional tournament," Woolard said. "Right now we're tied in the huss color in with Herrin for the conference lead. We have to concentrate on winning the rest of our conference schedule so we can, at the least, have a share of the title."

Woolard knows of what he speaks when he talks about the tough competition in the South Seven conference. The Terriers lost a 53-48 decision to Herrin Saturday. The loss dropped Carbondale to second place in the conference with a 6-2 record, one-half game behind 7-2 Herrin. The Terriers are 15-3 overall.

The main feature Carbondale is known for is its depth and experience.

"We've got eight or nine players that see a lot of action and are able to contribute to the squad," Woolard noted. "We also have six seniors on the team. A lot of coaches try to limit their squads to three or four seniors, figuring that they'll complain if they don't get to start. The way I see it, if a senior can help the team, I'm going to carry him on the squad."

Woolard claims that he de-emphasizes the importance of starting a game.

"The important thing with me," Woolard said, "is contributing to the team effort. A player doesn't necessarily have to start to contribute."

Individually, the Terriers are led by Johnny Payne, a 6-3 forward. Payne's 17 points per game is high on the team.

"Payne is our only non-senior starter," Woolard said. "He's a good ballplayer but sometimes he has a tendency to overpass. We're trying to get Payne more involved in scoring. Most coaches have the opposite problem with players—they put the ball up too much. With Payne, he needs to do it more."

William Mathis is the player Woolard says is the most improved member of the team.

"Mathis has improved more over the course of a year than any player I've ever coached," Woolard said. "Of course, he has room for even more improvement. He's been the key to this year's success."

The 6-5 forward had his best games at the recent Benton Invitational Tournament, where he averaged 22 points over the three-game tournament. In the same three game stretch, Mathis poured in 30 of 38 shots from the 10 rebound-a-game average. Mathis was named the tournament's most valuable player.

On the year Mathis is averaging 11 points and seven rebounds a game.

Yet another reason Woolard cites for the Terriers' strong showing in 1977-78 is the play of his backcourt men 6-0 senior Randy Gibson, 6-0 senior Mike Rainey and 5-10 senior Travis Sumner.

"Early in the season our guard play needed to improve and since the Carbondale Holiday Tournament in December, it's been improving," Woolard said.

Of course, Woolard claims that he hasn't thought beyond the last seven games of the regular season. But if he would have, there would be a lot to think about.

Carbondale will host one of the Illinois High School Association's regional tournaments. The Terriers have been seeded the No. 1 team in the regional. Herrin was ranked second, Marion third and Murphysboro fourth.

Kentucky still leads basketball poll

By Dave Kayer
AP Sports Writer

Despite a 78-62 trashing at the hands of Alabama's Crimson Tide, Kentucky maintained its hold on the No. 1 spot in this week's Associated Press college basketball poll.

The Wildcats, 14-1, garnered 35 of a possible 50 first-place votes Monday and held the top position with 926 points.

Arkansas' Razorbacks, 19-1, defeated Baylor 56-35 in overtime, then beat SMU 72-65 and Texas Tech 54-49 to move up from fourth a week ago to No. 2 with 728 points.

Marquette, 15-2, lost to Loyola of Chicago 68-64 after beating Xavier of Ohio 78-62 and fell from second to third with 664 points.

(not including Tuesday's games)

Notre Dame, 14-3, beat Dartmouth 78-64, West Virginia 103-82 and Maryland 69-54 and moved up a notch to fourth with 649 points.

Of the 15 first-place ballots that Kentucky did not receive, Marquette received five, Arkansas four, Notre Dame two and seventh-place Michigan State four.

UCLA, 14-2, received 582 points after beating Southern California 63-71 and rose a spot from sixth.

North Carolina, 16-3, lost to Wake Forest 71-62 and beat Clemson 98-64, and fell from third to No. 6 with 562.

Michigan State, 15-1, remained No. 7 with 580 points as the Spartans beat Ohio State 70-60.

Kansas, 16-2, remained No. 8 with 564 points after beating Colorado 85-56 and losing 62-58 to Nebraska. Louisville, 12-3, routed Tulane 105-82 and moved up from 12th to No. 9 with 542 points.

New Mexico beat Brigham Young 95-82 and Utah 113-89, raising its record to 15-2 and moving up from 14th to 10th.

Virginia, 14-2, moved up from 18th to 11th after beating Duke and North Carolina State. Texas, 16-2, moved up from No. 15 to 12th after beating Texas A&M, Baylor and SMU.

DePaul leaped from 19th to 13th after beating St. Louis and Providence, raising its record to 16-2. Georgetown, D.C., 15-2, topped American University, then crushed New England College 80-30, and advanced from 18th to 14th.

Florida State, 15-2, beat St. Louis to jump two spots to 15th.

Rounding out the Top Twenty were Providence, 16-2, No. 16; Duke, 15-4, No. 17; Syracuse, 14-3, No. 18; Illinois State, 18-2, No. 19; and San Francisco, 15-4, No. 20.

San Francisco was the only newcomer to this week's poll and Indiana State, which was 13th a week ago, lost twice and fell out of the Top Twenty.

YOUR EDUCATION DOESN'T STOP HERE

Your education doesn't stop with a four-year degree. It begins then. If this is the world of work you will enter, you will need more than a degree. You will need the skills, the knowledge, the experience that only the Air Force ROTC can give you.

Take the Air Force ROTC program. As a commissioned officer you'll be trained in the most advanced, most complex systems. You'll be expected to perform well, and you'll be paid well, too. It's worth working for.

You can get there through the Air Force ROTC program. In fact, we have a scholarship program that will pay you $100 a month, tax free, and pay for all tuition, books and lab fees. And that will free you to concentrate on your studies so you can get well prepared for where you're headed.

Check it out. Find out how you can get into a "graduate" program like the Air Force ROTC. It's a great way to serve your country, and possibly, find your future education extended at the Air Force ROTC as well.

Holmes says Valley to shoot for I-A

Valley Standings

The Missouri Valley Conference (MVC) football teams will attempt to qualify for Division I-A (large school) classification, according to Valley Commissioner Mickey Holmes.

The Valley teams have been forced to decide what course to take after a proposal to split Division I football teams into two classes I-AA and I-AA-passed at this month's NCAA meetings in Atlanta.

Seven MVC schools play football: SIU, Wichita State, Indiana State, Tulsa, Drake, New Mexico State and West Texas State.

Holmes, in his sixth year as commissioner, said the major football schools wanted to split Division I into two classes in order to have more power in making decisions and to make money through television revenue.

In recent years, the smaller Division I football schools have held back the larger football schools through their voting. This year, proposals to increase the football scholarship limits over the 30-a-year and 90-per-program and an expansion of recruiting privileges failed.

"The primary reason they wanted a split is to control their own destiny," Holmes stated. "An underlying consideration is the $118 million, four-year television contract they've just signed."

Holmes said the TV contract with ABC-TV will be more lucrative to the larger schools if less schools share in the revenue.

The guidelines for admittance to Division I-A football are:

—the school must conduct at least eight varsity sports

—the school must have a stadium capacity of at least 30,000 seats and draw an average of 17,000 spectators to home games in the one of the last four years, or —the school must average at least 17,000 in all of the past four years if the stadium capacity is less than 30,000, or —the school may qualify if it conducts at least 12 varsity sports. The school doesn't have to meet the other three above requirements.

—a school must play 60 percent of its schedule against Division I-A opponents.

Holmes noted that Wichita State is the only Valley team to presently qualify for Division I-A classification.

Ted Bredehoft, Wichita State athletics director, said the Shockers averaged over 21,000 attendance last year. Have a stadium which seats 31,500 and sponsor eight intercollegiate sports.

"There's no question about it," Bredehoft said. "Division I-A is the highway on which WSU will travel. It's a professional thing, a matter of pride."

The other Valley schools vary greatly on how much they must improve their programs to meet Division I-A status.

Southern Illinois and Indiana State each sponsor 11 intercollegiate sports, so they must add one sport to make Division I-A status.

Holmes noted that Tulsa makes the stadium requirement with 40,235 capacity, attendance requirement with over 17,000 average home crowds, but doesn't meet the eight sport rule. Tulsa sponsors only five intercollegiate sports.

The NCAA guidelines permit a school three years to comply with the new guidelines and an additional year under probation in some cases.

Holmes feels the requirement of playing 60 percent of a team's games against Division I-A opponents could give the MVC teams a problem.

"The larger schools might not let us schedule them," Holmes said, "and if that occurs we will have trouble qualifying under the 60 percent rule at least until we start round-robin play."

Muenz brothers shrug off publicity

By Steve Conran
Staff Writer

What do you do when you want to do a feature on a pair of talented brothers but they would rather the attention go to their team, fans, assistant coach, and most of all, their head coach?

You call it a case of unselfishness and just listen.

Kevin and Dan Muenz represent two of three Saluki gymnasts who rank among the top all-around men in the country. The Muenz brothers, along with teammate Rick Adams, have an excellent chance of qualifying for the U.S. Gymnastics Federation (USGF) tryouts.

The USGF team is formed to compete in international meets throughout the coming year.

To qualify for the tryouts, a gymnast must record a minimum composite score (compulsories and optionals) of 106 (an average of better than 8.8 for each event) sometime during the season. If they were to make the team, next year's USGF schedule includes the World Games, which will be played in France.

But the Muenz brothers would rather talk about a different team: the Salukis.

"We're a young team," said the year-older of the two, Kevin. "We have a progressive team. We're not the kind of team that starts out great. We try to peak at the end of the season."

"Everybody is more of a team during the meets this year. They're not off in their own little world after they compete. We are a lot more motivated than last year. It helps knowing that the other guys are behind you."

One situation that the Muenz brothers have been less than satisfied with has been the crowds (or lack of crowds) at the meets.

Kevin remembers the vociferous crowds of more than 1,000 that came out to the meets two years ago and how they reacted compared to the quiet crowds of about 400 that have shown up for the meets this year.

"We need that crowd participation," said Kevin, a major in graphic design. "This place used to be known for its yelling."

"This year's crowds don't participate as much as they used to. We like to hear them yelling about what scores the judges give out."

Another important part of the team, according to Dan, is the job done by the assistant coach, Jerry Hinkle.

"He is well liked and gets along with everybody," said Dan, an architecture major. "He is always willing to work. He has saved many a life with his spotting."

The man responsible for getting the Muenz brothers to attend SIU is Coach Bill Meade. Kevin recalls how he was enticed to become a Saluki.

"He (Meade) came and talked at a winter sports banquet. He told me 'if you want to be good, come to Southern,'" Kevin said.

Both the Muenz brothers agreed that Meade was an excellent coach—a motivator—that he scheduled only the best teams that he took his gymnasts to their limit.

"He is a coach in the true sense of the word," Kevin said. "He knows a lot about people in the gym. He could coach any sport in the country."

Despite Kevin and Dan's kidding that practices were a lot harder when Meade was younger, their coach is still very happy to have both of them.

"Dedication is the key word," Meade said. "They are the first in the gym and the last out. They do extra work after practice."

Valley commissioner talks about football problems

This is the second article in a two-part series dealing with Valley Commissioner Mickey Holmes' comments about the Missouri Valley Conference (MVC).

Q—The MVC football teams had a 9-33 record against non-conference foes. Any comment?

"The only thing you can say is that it's disappointing. We had a lot of freshmen playing and you know it's going to get better. We'll just give it another try next year," Holmes commented.

Q—The Valley football scheduling caused a lot of problems. New Mexico State and West Texas State played four home games while SIU played two home games and Indiana State had one home date. What's the problem?

"With SIU and Indiana State joining the Valley for the first year we ended up with just what we could get," Holmes said. "All the teams like to retain their home playing dates and it's something that'll even out, or we'll try to even it out. We have another football scheduling meeting set for March 4, the Saturday before the conference basketball championship game."

Q—What's the long range forecast for Valley football scheduling?

"Everybody won't play everybody else until 1983," Holmes said. "But we have a possibility for maybe 1981 or 1982, too. We'll have all the Valley teams play each other from 1983 until 1993."

Q—What's the unusual problems with football scheduling?

"It's the ridiculous aspect of football scheduling. Everyone schedules far ahead. We still have problems. I believe SIU has four home and one away game one year, then four away games the next year. We're going to try and even these things out," Holmes stated.

Q—SIU and Tulsa have had trouble getting scheduled in football. What's the problem?

"It's Tulsa," Holmes said. "Tulsa's schedule is locked in. If they want to break a contract they can play SIU.

That'll cost anywhere from $25,000-50,000."

Q—Last year three Valley teams played "designated" conference games. That is they played non-conference games, but the games counted as Valley games. What's the problem here?

"We had the three teams—SIU, Tulsa and Indiana State—play teams of relatively equal ability on the road. Teams needed five conference games to qualify for the title."

Q—Will these designated Valley games continue in the future?

"I'm not sure, but I believe so," Holmes said.

Q—Some MVC teams played six conference games last year and others played five MVC tilts. Shouldn't the teams play an even amount of games?
