More people than beds turned out to give blood Wednesday at the Student Center as the two day drive came to an end. More than 500 people volunteered to give a pint of blood which should work to lessen the current shortage.

Blood donors give 700 units as Red Cross reaches goal

SIU students continue giving tradition during two-day drive

Staff Writer

The American Red Cross exceeded its donation goal of 700 pints at the Student Center during National Blood Donor Month. The drive collected 991 pints Tuesday and Wednesday.

Tuesday more than 500 people came in and 444 pints of blood were donated so extra help was called in for Wednesday's drive, Nancy Agronin, Red Cross mobile unit supervisor, said.

"We put in a call and we had seven nurses from Effingham come in today," Vivian Ugent, regional blood drive coordinator, said.

January is traditionally a month of heavy usage because many surgeries are scheduled after the holidays, Ugent said.

"Children with leukemia, dialysis patients and other cancer patients all have an ongoing need. Ninety-eight percent of us will use (donated) blood during our lives," Ugent said.

Willard Hart, a retired SIU staff member from Murphysboro, was volunteering his time to sign up donors after receiving a blood transfusion Tuesday for pre-leukemia.

"I walked up here today on somebody's blood," Hart said.

Disabled students claim services offered by University inadequate

A group of University students says it wants Disabled Student Services to start delivering on some promises. Disabled Student Services says all the students have to do is ask.

Greg Thagard, a junior social work major from Galesburg, said DSS has promised to help him find note takers and a lab assistant for his biology class, and neither promise was fulfilled three weeks into the semester.

"They keep giving me the run around," Thagard said. "With no lab assistant I had to drop my biology class, bringing me down to 10 (credit) hours. That puts my Pell (Grant) in danger because I have to carry 12 hours to get the grant."

But Ellen Bradley, assistant coordinator for DSS, said DSS does everything it can to help students find assistance if they ask.

"I can't help anybody unless they come and tell me," she said.

Bradley said DSS encourages students to find note takers from their classes; if that doesn't work, she will go to the students' classes and try recruiting volunteers.

"If I don't have any luck finding volunteers, the students find paid note takers from a list," she said.

Students supported by the Illinois Department of Rehabilitation Services can find funding for note takers from DORS. Other students must pay

Bush calls for deep troop cut

Daily Egyptian wire services

WASHINGTON — Seeking to "take the lead in forging peace," President Bush proposed a 26 percent superpower troop cut Wednesday night, spurring U.S. policy to catch up with the "Revolution of '89" that has changed the shape Europe.

In his first State of the Union address, delivered to a joint session of Congress and a nationwide broadcast audience, Bush offered to cut from 275,000 to 195,000 a troop limit now under negotiation in East-West talks in Vienna.

In a 36-minute speech that offered an optimistic assessment of the nation's well-being and role in world affairs, Bush portrayed the troop cut proposal as evidence of "our new relationship with the Soviet Union" and declared:

"Today, with communism crumbling, our aim must be to ensure democracy's advances, to take the lead in forging peace and freedom's best hope: a great and growing commonwealth of free nations."

Except for the troop proposal and an announcement that U.S.

invasions forces would be out of Panama within four weeks, the address was largely philosophical — it emphasized education goals and environmental aspirations, concern for children and the nation's needy, rooting out crime and drugs, and guaranteeing a continued economic expansion.

"The events of the year just ended — the revolution of '89 — have been a chain reaction — change so striking that it makes the beginning of a new era in the world's affairs," Bush said.

House Speaker Tom Foley, D-Wash., who gave a televised Democratic response, also noted the "glory of a new era of freedom" and gave credit to 25 million Americans who have served in the Armed Forces since World War II.

Foley was restrained in his criticism of Bush but did rebuke the president for his moves to make peace with China despite their leaders' massacre of students in Beijing last June. And he said Democrats are not satisfied with a trend "that has seen this nation drop from first to sixth in standard

Deans discuss Pettit's 21st Century strategy

By Tony Mancuso
Staff Writer

The University's academic units will benefit or be unaffected by Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit's 21st Century Strategic Plan, according to all 10 deans.

Pettit's plan includes increasing the number of graduate students and research projects on campus and increasing external funding for the University while maintaining a strong undergraduate curriculum on campus.

One of Pettit's main objectives is to get SIU-C to a Carnegie Research I status, a goal that will include strengthening doctoral programs, expanding Morris Library, enlarging the engineering building and constructing a new science research facility.

James A. Tweedy, dean of the College of Agriculture, said the Chancellor's suggestions would not have much of an impact on his college, because "the College of Agriculture has been and will continue to be moving in a research-oriented direction.

"Our faculty members have demonstrated a commitment to research and gaining external funds. The college brought in $2,786,853 in external funding last year, second only to the College of Engineering and Technology," Tweedy said.

He said the primary commitment in the college, however, will still be to undergraduate education.

"Ag is a dynamic and changing field, and professors investigating new discoveries in the field are able to integrate the newfound technology into the classroom. This makes for extremely interesting lectures, which can only serve to"

The College of Business and Administration also has begun to emphasize graduate education.

Coast Guard disables Cuban freighter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Coast Guard cutter shot at and disabled a Cuban-chartered freighter suspected of carrying illegal drugs Wednesday after the freighter's skipper refused for almost a day to allow a search, the Coast Guard said.

The Panamanian-registered freighter — taking on water, belching black smoke and sending "Mayday" distress calls — fled from international waters in the Gulf of Mexico into Mexican territorial waters after the shooting, authorities said.

The ship, suspected by U.S. authorities to be carrying drugs, later docked at Tampico, Mexico, 205 miles northeast of Mexico City, a spokeswoman for the Mexican navy said. The United States was attempting to arrange a boarding by Mexican authorities, the Coast Guard said. There was no word on casualties on the Cuban-chartered vessel.

The U.S. cutter Chinotegaue chased the 250-foot freighter M.V. Hermann in international waters in the gulf beginning early Tuesday, receiving permission from the Panamanian government to board the vessel after the ship's captain denied permission, a Coast Guard spokesman said.

"I don't know of any specific knowledge (to indicate the ship was carrying narcotics), like prior intelligence, although we do often get that," Coast Guard spokesman Capt. Randall Peterson said.

Gus says the Coast Guard isn't dopey, that Cuban ship was shooting a line for high ground until we took a pot shot and it cracked up.

Associate Chancellor: Illini probe to continue

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UPI) — The University of Illinois said Wednesday it is continuing its investigation of basketball recruiting at the school despite a claim to the contrary by Coach Lou Henson.

"The investigation is not over," said Judy Rowan, Illinois Associate Chancellor for Public Affairs. "I am of speaking of both the NCAA and the internal investigations."

She said the university is expecting an "official inquiry" letter from the NCAA. The NCAA Wednesday would not confirm the letter is being written or sent.

Even if the letter arrives, Rowan said that would not signal an end into allegations of illegal recruiting at the Big Ten school. Henson had told a Chicago newspaper the investigation had ended, but backed away from that statement Wednesday.

"My perception was when you get the allegations, it's over," Henson told UPI in anticipation of the inquiry letter. "I just assumed when we get those, it's over."

Henson said he felt free to talk in general terms about the flap since he presumed the allegations were complete.

The coach said he doubted the university committed a "major violation" since it would trigger the "death penalty" against the program.

Dawgs sniff 1st place, look to sic Creighton

By Kevin Simpson

The Salukis can take a big step toward the conference championship with a win over Creighton on the Bluejays' home floor.

SIU-C (17-4 overall, 3-2 in the Missouri Valley Conference) will be in Nebraska tonight to face the Bluejays in the Omaha Civic Auditorium. Game time is 7:00 p.m.

Creighton, (15-6, 4-1 in the Valley) is the defending conference champion after posting an 11-3 league record (20-11 overall) last season. The Bluejays are riding the crest of six-game winning streak and have won eight straight at home after losing their first home-game of the season.

The Dawgs stretched their own winning streak to five games with a road victory against St. Louis University Monday.

Saluki head coach Rich Herrin acknowledged the race is far from over and is looking at this game as a great opportunity to cut into Creighton's lead.

"They're the team to beat in the league," Herrin said. "Right now, we're playing very good but I also think Creighton is playing outstanding basketball."

"We'd like to come in and upset them," Herrin said. "If we can do that we can be in contention to win the league title. It's their home game and they've got to be ready to play."

Creighton won all three games against SIU-C last season, 84-74 at the Arena, 102-100 in overtime in Omaha and 79-77 in the MVC tournament championship game that kept the Salukis out of the NCAA tournament.

Bluejay head coach Tony Barone is not taking those victories for granted.

"I think Freddie McSwain put it best, we were lucky to win all three," Barone said. "I think we've improved as a basketball team. I think Southern is a team playing the best of anybody in our league right now and it will be a good test for us."

Knowing the race is far from over, Barone said he does not want to put too much emphasis on tonight's game.

Attendance at Recreation Center climbing greatly since its expansion

By Sean Hannigan
Staff Writer

The expanded Recreation Center has more students breathing faster and pumping harder than ever before since its grand opening last November.

"We've been averaging over 5,000 people during the weekdays normally," Bill McMinn assistant director of the Recreation Center, said.

"Prior to the opening the best numbers we've had were just under 4,000," McMinn said.

The $6.2 million addition added 63,000 feet of recreational space to the existing facility, including a multi purpose court, an NCAA-standard six-lane 200 meter track, a suspended track, six racquetball courts and 3,500 square feet weight room called the fitness forum and multi-purpose room.

"We've seen an increase in faculty and staff as well as the students which is very encouraging," McMinn said. He expects the attendance to remain high until after spring break when classes and warm weather lure students away.

He said reaction has been overwhelmingly positive. "I like to think we have something for everyone," McMinn said.

"I dig the indoor track,

Women set to blow Westerwinds away

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

The Saluki women blew away the Western Illinois Westerwinds in their first meeting and wouldn't mind a repeat performance on their home court tonight.

The Salukis broke a nine-year-old school record with .702 field goal shooting (40-57) in their 86-68 victory over Western Jan. 8. The Westerwinds were limited to 16 rebounds.

Western is 2-7 in the Gateway Conference and 5-13 overall. Western has become a more respectable team since sophomore center Gail Dlsk bounced back from a shoulder injury and returned to the lineup. Dlsk has averaged 22.2 points in her last four starts.

Saluki coach Cindy Scott recognizes the threat Dlsk represents in the Western lineup.

"We'd better realize that Western is a different team with Dlsk in there," Scott said. "They are a much improved team and we know they will give us a good game tonight."

In Dlsk and junior forward Robin Hasemann the Westerwinds have the last two Gateway Conference Rookies of the Year. Dlsk, who won the award last season, is averaging 17.7 points, 4.6 rebounds and converting .529 from the field in Gateway play.

After winning the 1988 Gateway Rookie of the Year Award, Hasemann was named to the 1989 preseason All-Gateway team. She is averaging 17.4 points and 3.8 rebounds. Hasemann is ranked sixth in Gateway scoring, ninth in field goal percentage (.500) and fourth in free throw accuracy (.795).

Joe Hanig, 5-7 junior guard, is the Gateway's assist leader (7.3) and also averages 2.6 steals per game for Western.

Scott feels that Western, like every other Gateway team, is a force to be reckoned with.

"There's no team in the conference not capable of beating any other now," Scott said. "We'll need to handle Western's fullcourt pressure like we did in Macomb and contain (Robin) Hasemann."

Junior forward Amy Rakers (20.4, 10.4), the Gateway's leading scorer and rebounder, was 14 of 17 from the field for 30 points against Western.

"I think Amy Rakers is a tremendous basketball talent and she is beginning to live up to the expectations I and lots of other people had of her," Scott said. "I'm happy for her and she has obviously been a key factor in our victories this season."

Scott has another challenge for Rakers:

"Teams are going to key more and more on Amy," Scott said. "We're going to have to see some scoring from some of her team-

Boy suing Nintendo, claims baseball game not sufficient

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (UPI) — A 9-year-old boy has sued Nintendo of America and Major League Baseball over a video game he claims fails to live up to its promises, his lawyer said Wednesday.

Lawrence Kanaga said Wednesday that he filed the suit in Bridgeport Superior Court on behalf of Clark Thiemann against Nintendo, LJN Toys Ltd., and Major League Baseball.

LJN makes the game for Nintendo and the Major Leagues endorses it.

The lawsuit, which seeks class action status, aims to stop Nintendo from continuing to produce or sell the game, Kanaga said. A hearing has been scheduled for Feb. 20, the attorney said.

Thiemann also wants a return of the $40 he used to buy the video baseball game, Kanaga said. The Westport boy made the money by returning cans and bottles.

Thiemann claims the video game falsely claimed its users can simulate being a manager of a baseball team by choosing which ballplayers to field.

'The National' sells big on first day

NEW YORK (UPI) — The National, an all-sports tabloid, made its debut Wednesday in three cities and sports fans snapped it up at a pace that pleased the publisher.

"The biggest problem was getting enough copies out to sell," Publisher Peter O. Price told a news conference at the newspaper's New York office. "People are really upset that they couldn't get enough newspapers."

Sports fans and newspaper buffs went after the premier edition so avidly in New York that all but a few vendor boxes sold out before sunrise, Price said.

In the days leading up to its debut, the Sunday-through-Friday paper had taken some knocks from widely quoted skeptics who believe the chances for its survival are slim.

The National's initial run of 250,000 copies, available in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles, showed the paper to be a tabloid in the best tradition of alluring headlines, cheeky gossip and lively layouts.

But the meat of the paper — whose nameplate includes the Latin words that roughly translate to "fair play for all" and "fun and games" — is sports reporting that includes game coverage, statistics and in-depth investigative articles and features.

Editor Frank Deford described the 50 cents-a-copy paper as "local and national at the same time" since its cover and various inside pages can be tailored for each market.

Mandela, de Klerk to meet, talk about release from jail

CAPE-TOWN, South Africa (UPI) — President Frederik de Klerk has arranged a meeting Thursday with Nelson Mandela in an effort to iron out differences over the terms of the black nationalist's release from life imprisonment, the Cape Times reported. The Cape Times quoting a senior government source saying the two would meet at an undisclosed location to try to reach a compromise to allow de Klerk to give a firmer indication Friday of when Mandela may be freed.

Car bomb explodes in Kabul; 122 wounded

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — A car bomb exploded Wednesday in a busy area of the Afghan capital of Kabul, killing at least six people, wounding 122 and causing extensive destruction, official Kabul Radio said. The radio blamed the explosion on "extremists," the government's term for U.S.-backed guerrillas based in Pakistan fighting an 11-year-old war against the pro-Soviet Afghan regime.

Unrest by Albanians continues in Yugoslavia

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia (UPI) — Thousands of Serbs and Montenegrins demonstrated Wednesday against the government's failure to control unrest by ethnic Albanians and volunteered to go to Kosovo province to help troops and police control the situation. Thousands of ethnic Albanians exchanged fire or threw stones at riot police in Kosovo, 190 miles south of Belgrade, demanding more autonomy from Serbia since the eighth day of anti-Serbian demonstrations.

Chile's 'Great Escape' leads to resignation

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — The massive jail break through a 300-foot tunnel by some of the most famous political prisoners of President Augusto Pinochet's military government led to the resignation Wednesday of the national head of prison security. Col. Horacio Ojeda, head of the Gendarmerie, which guards the nation's prisons, resigned the day after 50 political prisoners escaped from a downtown jail through a tunnel they had spent months building. Police captured seven of the prisoners shortly after their flight was detected, but the rest remained at large.

Senate votes to phase out harmful solvent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate approved legislation Wednesday to phase out U.S. production of methyl chloroform, a widely used industrial cleaning solvent that damages Earth's protective ozone layer but which remains unregulated. Senators, working on the clean air bill, voted 95-2 to adopt the measure by Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., that sets a deadline of the year 2000 for halting production of the chemical.

Prosecutors to re-try McMartin defendant

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Former McMartin Pre-School teacher Raymond Buckey, acquitted of 40 child molestation charges in the nation's longest trial, will be retried on 13 counts on which jurors deadlocked, prosecutors said Wednesday. Ending speculation that he might dismiss the counts, District Attorney Ira Reiner late Tuesday night made the decision to re-try Buckey on one count of conspiracy and 12 counts of child molestation.

Jury decides Paula Sims is eligible for the death penalty

PEORIA (UPI) — Jurors needed only two hours Wednesday to find Paula Sims eligible for the death penalty for killing her 6-week-old daughter, Heather, Sims, 30, was found guilty Tuesday by the same Peoria County jury, which deliberated for more than 10 hours over two days on charges she suffocated her infant daughter, dumped the body in a Missouri garbage can and covered up the crime.

Opinion & Commentary

Standardized tests need replacement

VETO OVERRIDES: A) never occur B) almost always occur C) rarely occur D) occur about half the time.

Anything wrong with a question like that? Aside from the ambiguity of it, this sample test question is like hundreds of others. Most students in public institutions of higher learning have answered entire tests full of questions like it.

After years of students being measured by standardized tests, pressure groups are attacking members of Congress. Multiple choice, those magical words that save study as well as grading time, suddenly have become dirty words.

THE ATTACK is a timely one. President Bush, the education president (or is that environment?), has announced a fox hunt for educational reforms. So far, he has come up with "performance goals" for U.S. students.

A number of pressure groups have said that scores of multiple choice exams should not be the basis for the proposed goals. Public schools, they contend, have become dependent on them.

STANDARDIZED TESTING has too many faults to be the sole method for basing student performance. Yet some University instructors rely on this method to judge an entire semester's worth of work.

Too often these types of tests are used in general education courses and classes that are large in number. Frequently, instructors will use the same test twice a year, once a semester. And frequently, students will save a copy.

Multiple choice tests are most effective when coupled with other means of testing. A combination of essay, multiple choice, short answer and homework may be the best judge of a student's work.

COMPUTER GRADING has not gotten past multiple choice. Grading written tests undoubtedly would require more manpower for larger courses. Hiring more teaching assistants is one option.

Some University personnel seem reluctant to find a substitute. William Eaton, chairman of the Educational Administration and Higher Education Department, believes that multiple choice test are a truly objective method of assessing student knowledge.

Donald Beggs, dean of the College of Education, says multiple choice tests will not improve education. As justification, Beggs pointed out that standardized testing has not ruined education.

CLEARLY, YEARS of standardized testing has not destroyed the U.S. education system. But it hasn't allowed our system to grow as it should.

It's time to change our testing standards for public education.

Carter: Self-appointed envoy

Scripps Howard News Service

Jimmy Carter has taken on a grave responsibility in his Nicaragua poll-watching operation. His visits to the Central American nation leading up to the Feb. 25 election are intended, among other things, he says, "to reassure the Nicaraguan people that they can vote with confidence that the world is watching to reaffirm their decision."

Carter did negotiate new promises of good behavior from the Sandinistas. But only a world that has not been watching could take the Sandinistas at their word.

Just a month ago, after the U.S. intervention in Panama, the Nicaraguan government blatantly threatened the opposition. It issued a communique saying that when the Americans invade Nicaragua (as the Sandinistas have predicted for a decade), plans will go into effect for the "neutralization, cutting off, and execution of all those stubborn sell-outs of the nation."

Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Caller-ID service aids in phone privacy

By John C. Dvorak
San Francisco Examiner

Various regional phone companies are test marketing a controversial new phone service called Caller-ID. For a fee, you can subscribe to Caller-ID and you'll get a little box that tells you the phone number of the person from whom you are receiving a call.

The paranoids out there all believe that this is an invasion of privacy.

Consumer advocates in Pennsylvania have effectively stopped the service by insisting on something called blocking. Blocking means that if you don't want the person you're calling to know your number, you can block the Caller-ID device from displaying it at the other end of the call. What's the point of the service if this is allowed?

In fact, Caller-ID protects our privacy more than it invades it. It will effectively stop crank callers and heavy breathers from annoying us. The system can even be put through a personal computer and be used to screen calls before they are even answered.

People with unlisted phones who are so afraid of letting their number be displayed, lest they get called by salesmen or old lovers, can get an inexpensive two-line phone system. One line is used only for outgoing calls. It doesn't ring and it's never answered, so it doesn't matter if the whole world has the number. The other line is a super private line — just like current unlisted numbers — that will only be used by the select few to whom you give the number.

This is the solution for unfortunate technophobes, such as ABC's Ted Koppel, who recently explored the Caller-ID issue on "Nightline."

Unable to understand how it worked or its value, Koppel completely botched his normal cold, objective approach and instead whined about how his privacy would be invaded by such a device because the pizza parlor would get his number when he made a phone order. Koppel only needs the two-line system to end his fears.

Of course, some people are simply too cheap to put in the extra phone line. I have news for them: Privacy has always cost money. If your lifestyle requires it, you'll have to pay a premium.

I suspect that privacy isn't the issue. The issue is advantage. If I go out of my way to protect my phone number and privacy, I can now harass people without them harassing me. Unfortunately, perhaps, Caller-ID won't change that.

Defense cuts seen as increases; future plans for military called 'questionable, expensive'

St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney argues that his proposed cuts in the Pentagon's 1991 budget request are "careful, orderly, prudent." A more accurate description would be marginal, shortsighted, highly partisan.

While higher than the current budget, the request of $292.1 billion does represent a 2 percent after-inflation decline in real military spending. However, the details show that President Bush is still plunging ahead with some expensive and militarily questionable programs of the Reagan years.

Mr. Cheney proudly points to nearly $3 billion in procurement savings. However, many of the programs cut — aircraft such as the V-22 Osprey, the F-14D, the F-15E and the M-1 tank — were already on a hit list or near the end of their production run. Similarly, many of Mr. Cheney's proposed $1.7 billion cuts in force structure are marginal. The proposed reduction of 38,000 troops from the 2 million people in the active-duty military is 16,000 less than last year's decreases. Mr. Cheney made no sharp cuts; he barely trimmed around the edges.

The real story is the increases, including:

— $5.5 billion for five B-2 Stealth bombers, up by $1.2 billion over fiscal 1990

— $2.8 billion for the rail-mobile MX missile, up by more than $1.1 billion

— $4.5 billion for the Star Wars anti-missile system, an increase of $900 million.

Similarly, the Navy is full speed ahead with a new 15-ship, $10.9 billion building program.

All of these programs should be cut back or even terminated, as in the case of the B-2 and MX. In a political first strike, Mr. Cheney has released a list of 55 major military bases in the United States that could be closed or cut back. Many may be surplus, but the fact that many are in the districts of Democratic congressional critics of military spending is no accident. The administration's warning is clear: Oppose our budget at your peril.

Such political strong-arming should not deter Congress. With the decline of the Soviet threat, the United States has a rare chance to make sizable cuts in the Pentagon's bloated budget. Congress could more than double the administration's 2 percent reduction without endangering security.

Bush forgets to consider legislative branch when allocating funds; expenses questioned

Scripps Howard News Service

While there are plenty of complaints in Congress that President Bush's new budget stints on money for the courts, education and other social programs, little beefing has been heard about the amount proposed for the legislative branch.

No doubt the reason is that Bush proposes nearly 20 percent more money for Capitol Hill operations than was provided in the current budget. The figures come from Congress itself; the White House merely incorporates in the overall federal budget what Congress says it needs. For fiscal 1991, Congress says it will require $2.67 billion, up from $2.24 billion for fiscal 1990.

There's a whopping 40 percent increase in Congress' free mail budget. Members plan to spend $94.5 million of the taxpayers' money next year informing their constituents, via newsletters and the like, of what great representation they're getting in Washington.

There also are big increases for salaries and expense; for members and staffs. Part of that will go for the pay hikes members recently voted themselves.

Austerity may be the word elsewhere, but Congress obviously plans to live in the grand manner to which it has become accustomed.

cent undergraduate enrollment at present, but that it will move toward stressing quality undergraduate student enrollment and a greater percentage of graduate students.

"We will begin to lower the undergraduate enrollment over the next few years," White said. "Beginning in the fall of 1990, we will increase grade-point average requirements from 2.2 to 2.5."

Marvin Kleinau, acting dean of the College of Communications and Fine Arts, said he is unsure of how the 21st Century plan will affect CCFa.

"I believe the Chancellor's plan is still a year away from being clearly defined. I intend to wait and see what happens before I assess it," he said.

Kleinau said he believes the University as a whole and CCFa in particular will continue strong support of undergraduate programs as well as continue to increase the graduate programs.

"Many people say you cannot emphasize both grad and undergrad programs, but I feel it is quite possible if the 21st Century plan will allow for both," he said.

The College of Engineering and Technology's goals very much coincide with Pettit's, according to Chen Juh Wah, COET dean.

"We want to develop sound graduate education in all fields. There are many new hi-tech research opportunities in our college, including basic research in energy, neural network engineering and materials engineering," Chen said.

He said an initial step to further the college's research capabilities will be a 60,000 square-foot addition to the existing COET complex. The addition is in its preliminary process, but Chen said he hopes an architect will be chosen for the project within a few months.

John Yopp, Graduate School dean, said his school proposed many of the changes in Pettit's plan.

"We are obviously working toward the Chancellor's goals," Yopp said. "We believe it is the next logical step in the way the University is headed."

He said SIU-C has increased its external research and training funding from $35 million to $65 million in three years, completely due to what he termed unbelievable faculty work.

"We are very concerned about balancing both grad and undergrad programs, but if (the 21st Century plan) is fine tuned properly, we will have that delicate balance," Yopp said.

School of Law Interim Dean C. Peter Goplenud said his school will not be directly affected a great deal by the plan.

"We are fairly committed to keeping our current enrollment standards where they are now. We are very committed and very productive toward research, but at this time I see no great changes in our future," he said.

College of Liberal Arts Associate Dean Robert Jensen said he is definitely supportive of Pettit's plan.

"The Chancellor's idea is absolutely essential to the success of the University in the future. It is extremely important for us to obtain a Research I status," he said.

He said the plan has gotten a bad reputation because it appears to suggest liberal arts will be neglected in the future.

"Liberal arts will fare just fine, because they are the core of any major university. The document is in fact very supportive of COLA," Jensen said.

COLA, which has the most faculty members, graduate students and doctoral programs, is trying as hard as any college to expand its research and graduate capabilities, he said.

Jensen cited a number of new initiatives that will help expand COLA, including a computer lab expansion for the English Department, a marked modernization of the foreign languages lab and renovations of existing psychology labs.

School of Medicine Dean Richard C. Moy said the school's intentions are consistent with Pettit's in that it will try to increase the amount of research in cooperation with the other colleges on campus.

He said the new biological sciences building, scheduled to be completed within the next three years, will provide much needed research space for the School of Medicine as well as the College of Science.

"It will probably be the first building on campus dedicated purely to research," Moy said. He said most of the research in the building probably will be in the ever-expanding field of gene molecular biology.

College of Science Dean Russell R. Dutcher said he expected the architect for the building to be hired within the next month, and that the botany, microbiology and zoology departments would move faculty researchers to the facility.

for the note takers from their own pockets.

Disabled Student Services reports directly to University Student Services, which is headed by Deen Terence Buck.

Bradley said students who cannot meet those expenses should contact her, and she would make other arrangements.

Kathleen Dorsey, a freshman from Matteson, said the DSS system for providing note takers doesn't work.

"Last semester, all they did was give you a telephone list with names of note takers," she said. "I called people on the list and they didn't want the job."

"I told DSS that I took that route last semester, and it didn't work. What makes them think it will work this semester?" Dorsey asked.

She said her next plan is to get a group of disabled students together to start a better note taker system.

"DSS has to get a better system or they are going to lose us as a student body."

Bradley said she realizes that the system is not perfect, and she would love to have a list for volunteer note takers.

"Volunteers are hard to come by unless you catch them in a captive situation," she said. "We have a lot of trouble having volunteer continuity."

Thagard said when DSS would not help him settle the problem he contacted U.S. Sen. Paul Simon, D-Makanda.

Thagard received a letter from Simon in the mail Jan. 30. Simon also included a copy of the letter he had sent to Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit.

"Please investigate this matter and advise my Carbondale office of your findings," Simon stated in the letter.

Pettit was not available for comment on the letter.

Thagard said he was pleased Simon responded so quickly because, "I was getting nowhere with the people here."

Theresa Zezulak, a senior social work major from Chicago, said she has tried to play by DSS rules with a transportation problem, but it has gotten her nowhere.

"I have to come home by myself at 8 and 9 p.m. in the evening during the week because DSS won't send a safety van after they promised me they would," Zezulak said. "My roommate has been meeting me now, but that leaves her traveling alone, too."

Providing such transportation, however, is not DSS's responsibility. Travel Service provides the vehicles for transportation, Jerry Lacey, associate dean for student services, said his office furnishes the students with tickets for rides.

Bradley said that while she couldn't comment on specific cases, a new van program was being implemented for disabled students.

Jean Paratore, associate vice president for student affairs, said members from the campus safety program are working to get another van to accommodate disabled students.

The University's travel service is operating one van, but students must call in advance to reserve a ride.

"This presents a problem because many students don't know in advance that they need a ride," Paratore said.

Paratore said she has met with officials from the travel service and service enterprises to try to work on the problem.

"Service enterprises has agreed to donate another van for more spontaneous use," Paratore said. "Now a disabled student can call at any time and the van will be sent right over."

of living."

The only surprise of Bush's 35-minute speech was his proposal to bring home 80,000 U.S. soldiers stationed in Europe. Most of that must be negotiated with the Soviets, who would have to demobilize 340,000 troops to get to Bush's proposal of 225,000 soldiers for each side. He said he talked about it Wednesday to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, who was reportedly "appreciative" and said it bodes well for good relations.

In a highly acclaimed NATO speech in Brussels last spring, Bush proposed a cut from 305,000 to 275,000. But he said Wednesday night that the "chain reaction" toward democracy in Central and Eastern Europe has occurred so fast that the deeper cut is warranted.

Bush hopes to sign a conventional forces treaty implementing the troop cuts and cuts in tanks and other conventional warfare equipment this autumn in Vienna with Gorbachev.

"Since we really mean it ..." he said, "we're getting our own house in order," he said. He said Americans must win the fights against illegal drug use and racism.

Bush said he wants an America "where 'Made in the U.S.A.' is recognized around the world as the symbol of quality and progress."

AFROTC cadets earn their wings for another three years

By Weyne Wallace
Staff Writer

The University's Air Force ROTC detachment passed its December inspection with flying colors, according to an evaluation from the Inspector General at the Air Force's Air Training Command in Texas.

"This is the highest rating we've had here in 17 years," Capt. Mark Douglas said.

"I can't give you the exact scores," Douglas added, "but no unit in the state did better than us, and there are only a few ROTC units in the country that got a higher rating."

On Dec. 4 and 5, representatives of the Inspector General visited Detachment 205 to evaluate the overall effectiveness of the AFROTC program at SIU-C.

"This is actually our equivalent of an accreditation. We're inspected every three years," Douglas said.

"They evaluate our recruitment, how effective we are in training. They look at classroom instruction, and they speak with the cadets on an individual basis," Douglas said.

"We scored top ratings in five out of seven areas," he added.

"We are basically judged on our ability to recruit and retain students capable of being commissioned in the United States Air Force. It's our job to maintain the quantity and quality of cadets," Douglas said.

There are 130 cadets enrolled in SIU-C's AFROTC program, Douglas said. Detachment 205 is staffed by a company commander and three captains, all of whom teach classes in aerospace studies at SIU.

Cadet Dave Brandolino, a junior in industrial technology and a 1st Lieutenant, gave credit for the high rating to "corps participation," noting, "everybody is pretty proud."

Brian Trenholm, a 1st Lieutenant cadet and a junior in industrial technology, said the instructor detailed a whole semester of preparation.

"A lot of extra care went into it, especially making sure we were observing all regulations," Trenholm said.

"It's that extra 10 or 20 percent that brought us up to such a high level," he added.

"It was a big challenge to face and a big relief when it was over," Trenholm said. "Our commander announced it at the Dec. 5 Leadership Lab that we had scored high, and you could see it in everybody's eyes that it was time to celebrate."

"I think it shows everybody that this is a good detachment to be in," he added.

Although Brandolino and Trenholm agreed a lot of the inspection preparation was paperwork, each noted the high quality of SIU-C's aerospace studies program.

Poll shows kids still hold strong values

NEW YORK (UPI) — A poll of 5,000 American school kids from the fourth to the 12th grades shows that Mom and Dad and God still rate high, but many say they would be willing to have sex with their steady or cheat on an important test.

The survey was commissioned by the Girls Scouts of the U.S.A., and conducted in October and November last year by Harris-Scholastic research, a division of Louis Harris and Associates.

In it, 65 percent of the high school students said they would cheat on an important exam.

Fifty-four percent of the boys and 22 percent of the girls in junior and senior high school said they would have sex with someone they love.

Art/rock quartet from Ohio set to play Carbondale gig

By Jeanne Bickler
Entertainment Editor

When the band gets done playing, it will be time to pay The Toll.

This performance art/rock band swings into the Carbondale scene tonight at II Hearts, Inc., 213 E. Main, and that swinging may be literal.

In 1987, The Toll's lead singer, Brad Circone, actually swung from a metal pole suspended above the crowd at a show in East Lansing, Mich.

Incidents similar to this have developed a name for the young band from Columbus, Ohio, a band not afraid to take chances.

"Whatever happens, happens," Circone said. "The bar owners don't worry about us; they know we're in control."

Besides Circone, the "controlled characters" of The Toll include Rick Silk on guitar, Greg Bartram on bass and Brett Mayo on drums.

The expression "a tight band" really applies to these guys.

"We all live together in a warehouse in Columbus," Circone said. "We rehearse there, live there and do business there." And according to Circone, this works "just great."

The situation when they tour is just more of the same. "We all expect to be sharing one small hotel room while in Carbondale," Circone said.

All of this closeness has led to a very productive year. Since the band's first album, "The Price of Progression," came out nearly a year and a half ago, the group has been working on a second.

"We have about 30 new songs we are considering for our second album," Circone said. "Touring helps us narrow down the list."

Creating 30 songs would seem to take a long time. But Circone said the songs just "come" to them.

"We are the receptors of our songs," he said. "They are really just one moment in time with the band, and changing them as we go makes it interesting for the audience."

The lyrics and stories told in The Toll's songs are very influenced by literature.

"We really listen to writing," Circone said. "We are especially influenced by stream of consciousness writers."

This influence makes it difficult to lump The Toll into one musical category.

On stage, Circone becomes various characters from an American Indian to a child.

"I'm just playing characters that I identify strongly with, or that I'm concerned about or that I'm feeling sorry for," Circone said. "There are some pieces of myself. Some are make believe characters and some I believe in."

'Driving Miss Daisy' offers humor, glimpse at mid-20th century South

Film holds Golden Globe awards for best picture, actor, actress

By Stephanie Steirer
Staff Writer

"Driving Miss Daisy" will drive you to laughter.

Starring Jessica Tandy and Morgan Freeman, "Driving Miss Daisy" gives moviegoers the quality they expect from a film, without any sex, violence or profanity.

The story, set in Atlanta, during the late 1940's, takes you into the lives of Miss Daisy, played by Tandy; Hoke Colborn, played by Freeman and Miss Daisy's son, Boolie Werthan, played by Dan Aykroyd.

At the beginning of the film, you soon realize why the movie is titled "Driving Miss Daisy."

Wanting to take a drive to the store, Miss Daisy proceeds to back out of her garage in her 1948 Hudson and drives it right off the driveway into a ditch. Knowing this "accident" all too well, Boolie decides to get a chauffeur for his mother. And to his mother's dismay, Hoke takes the job.

At first the relationship between Miss Daisy and Hoke is strictly employer and employee.

Miss Daisy, who is in her late 70s, is very set in her ways and refuses to be driven around by a chauffeur for fear of being thought of as rich by friends and neighbors. But Hoke, who doesn't want to be paid for doing nothing, does all that he can to get Miss Daisy to ride with him.

From their first driving adventure together to their last, "Driving Miss Daisy" is one laugh after another.

The movie, which is based on the screenplay by Alfred Uhry, takes place over a period of time from the late 1940s to the early 1970s, letting the audience become a part of the characters' lives. During this timeframe, you not only see the changes in the scenery, but also in the characters, their attitudes and the attitudes of society.

At the start of the film, Miss Daisy, a wealthy, elderly Jewish woman, is very dependent on her son. But as the film progresses, Miss Daisy shifts from dependency on Boolie to a close friendship to Hoke.

Because the film's underlying theme focuses on society's attitudes towards blacks and Jews, the audience gets a real sense of how it was like to live during that time period.

"Driving Miss Daisy" is a movie everyone can enjoy. It is no wonder it received three Golden Globe Awards for Best Motion Picture, Best Actor and Best Actress.

Other winning performances were given by Esther Role, who played Miss Daisy's maid Idella and Patti Lupone, who played Boolie's wife Florine.

Ag fair to provide sample of job spots

Opportunities numerous for graduates

By Phil Pearson
Staff Writer

As many as 17 companies will be on campus Friday looking to hire agriculture students for internships and full-time jobs.

Donald M. Elkins, associate dean for instruction in the College of Agriculture, said 14 companies have committed to attend the second annual "Career Fair" and three more companies are "highly likely" candidates to attend.

Elkins warned students should not expect to get hired on the spot, but they should attend the fair.

"The purpose of this is to make initial contacts," Elkins said.

He said the fair will give job seekers the opportunity to trade resumes and talk informally with potential employers.

Agriculture Placement Coordinator Darlene Blackstone said the agriculture market looks good. She said there are about 48,000 openings annually for new agricultural graduates and agricultural schools are producing only about 44,000 potential employees a year.

"There are more jobs than people, if we can just get them going in the right direction," Blackstone said.

She said the fair, though aimed at agriculture majors, is open to anyone. Area residents who are not attending SIU-C also are invited.

Elkins said the "Career Fair" will be in Room 209 of the Agriculture Building from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and will close for lunch from noon to 1 p.m.

Last year's fair was a success and Elkins said he is hoping for another successful meeting this year.

"I don't think this thing is going to do anything but grow," Elkins said.

SIU-C enters Black History Month with 'Beyond a Dream II' program

By Peter Zalewski
Staff Writer

February is Black History Month throughout the nation and SIU-C has many events scheduled.

The first of the month's activities will be a teleconference called "Beyond a Dream II, A Celebration of Black History." The program consists of various subjects from education and history to art and literature.

The Student Center Auditorium will televise the program from 11:45 a.m. today with the co-sponsorship of the SIU-C Affirmative Action and the Office of the Vice President for Student Affairs with the Division of Continuing Education.

Milton D. Morris, director of research and policy analysis at the Joint Center for Political Studies in Washington, D. C., will be the keynote speaker for the University's annual Black History Month observation at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Student Center, Ballroom D.

Economist and writer Julianne Malveaux, from the University of California at Berkeley, will visit Wednesday for a lecture on "Women and the Economy" in the Student Center, Ballroom D at 8 p.m.

"The History of Ragtime," will feature J. Hamilton Douglas at 7 p.m. Feb. 15, in Quigley Auditorium.

Paul Giddings, a historian and author, will lecture on black women's role in American history at 7 p.m. on Feb. 24 at Shryock Auditorium.

LOOK, PRESIDENT ARIAS, I APPRECIATE YOUR POSITION, BUT COME ON, THE INVASION WASN'T DANNY QUAYLE'S CALL! NOTHING IS! WHY TAKE IT OUT ON HIM?

BECAUSE THE NATIONS OF THIS REGION HAVE HAD ENOUGH, MR. PROCONSUL.

ENOUGH? ENOUGH OF WHAT?

IN 1901 THE US SENT TROOPS TO COLOMBIA; IN 1902, TO PANAMA. IN 1903, HONDURAS, DOMINICAN REPUBLIC AND PANAMA; IN 1904, DOMINICAN REPUBLIC AND PANAMA; 1906, CUBA; 1907, HONDURAS; 1910, NICARAGUA; 1911, HONDURAS; 1912...

"It's too early in the league to say it's a critical game," Barone said. "I think you have to win you're home games — at least 95 percent of them. And then you have to scratch and claw to win 70 percent on the road. If you can do that you have a chance at winning the championship."

"We just play them one at a time and try to do the best we can each time," Barone said.

The Bluejays' offense is based on a solid one-two punch with an accurate outside attack and a potent inside game featuring two of the top post players in the conference. Creighton relies heavily on the 3-point shot. The Bluejays are second in the Valley in 3-point accuracy (39 percent) and average 21 points per game from behind the bombing line.

Creighton's inside game consists of the "Dynamic Duo" of junior forward Bob Harstad (6-6, 240) and junior center Chad Gallagher (6-10, 240).

Harstad was the preseason pick for MVC "Player of the Year" and leads the league in scoring (22.6 points per game, 54 percent from the field) and is second in rebounding with nine per game. He has the potential to explode for a lot of points and has recorded five games of 30 or more points while not being held under double figures in scoring this season.

Gallagher is the league's leading shot blocker, (1.5 per game) and is fourth in scoring (10.6) and seventh in rebounding at 7.4 per game.

Basic is best for Herrin when it comes to defending Creighton's offense.

"We have got to be able to stop the three-point play while controlling them on the inside," Herrin said. "We'll probably go man-to-man. We'll stay with our basic defense."

Junior forward Rick Shipley said there is plenty of time for the Dawgs to make up for their two early league losses.

"We're going to have a lot to say with who wins the conference," Shipley said. "We're 3-2, Creighton is 4-1, but we still have two games left with them. We're in pretty good shape right now. We still got a lot of games left."

SIUC's strengths are Creighton's weaknesses. Defense and rebounding have been the key to the Salukis' five game winning streak. The Salukis have held their last five opponents to an average of 60 points per game while outrebounding them by more than nine.

break a major rule, our situation being what it is," Henson said. "There's no question we know that."

Henson stood by Jimmy Collins, the assistant coach suspected of trying to bribe recruits into choosing Illinois.

"I really believe in Jimmy," Henson told the Chicago Tribune. "I'm 100 percent supportive of him through this. I think he's an outstanding person. Anyone might inadvertently break a rule in recruiting but it will be a surprise to me if a major rule was broken."

At issue are the recruitment of two prep stars last year — Deon Thomas of Chicago and LaPhonso

Ellis of East St. Louis. The NCAA notified Illinois last July about its inquiry into the Thomas affair. The Ellis matter was revealed later, but never confirmed by the NCAA.

In a tape-recorded telephone conversation with Iowa Assistant Coach Bruce Pearl, Thomas, then a Chicago Simcon forward, reportedly told Pearl he was offered $80,000 and a sports-utility vehicle to attend Illinois. Pearl has denied he sought an NCAA investigation of Illinois over the claim after Thomas switched from Iowa to Illinois.

Ellis made a statement to NCAA investigator: s that he also was offered money to attend Illinois.

Ellis signed with Notre Dame. Henson said one day before the start of fall practice that Thomas would sit out until completion of the NCAA's preliminary investigation. He has since been ineligible for the year and Collins has been stopped from recruiting off campus.

However, Thomas reportedly has since changed his story. The Chicago Sun-Times reported earlier this week Thomas said it was Iowa, not Illinois, that had offered him the incentives. Pearl denied the statement.

Iowa Coach Tom Davis insisted Iowa did not report Illinois to the NCAA.

because when it's cold you can develop a lung infection running outside," Paula Rostan, a junior in foreign languages and international trade, said.

"I love it. Especially the fitness forum," Tom Kostka, a senior in administration of justice, said. He said he used to be problems getting into the weight room to work out.

"I think the forum separates the hard-core body builders from the people who are trying to get in shape," Kostka said.

McMinn claims expansion of the weight room was one of the primary goals for the new facility. The Recreation Center separated the Universal weights from the free weights.

Jodie Misuraca, a junior in public relations attending SIUC for the first time this semester, instantly was enamored with the center.

"I felt like I was a little kid set loose at the Y. There are so many things to do here," Misuraca said. She said she uses the track, the stairmaster, and aerobic workouts.

However, even fans sometimes have complaints.

"The aerobics gets very crowded. They need to use their space better," Misuraca said.

Her workout partner, Michele Toti, junior public relations said, "I use the bikes a lot, they're a great stress reliever." "We hope students will adopt a workout ethic that will last them the rest of their lives," McMinn said.

mates. We told her the other day that a good basketball player can score numbers — a great basketball player can help her teammates score numbers themselves. It will be interesting to see how she responds with special defenses some people will put on her."

Offensive punch for the Salukis could come from junior guard Alison Smith, the Salukis second-leading scorer who averages 9.3 points against Gateway opponents. Smith hit the winning basket with :03 remaining in the Salukis' 68-67 overtime victory at Wichita State.

Sophomore center Kerri Hawes is averaging 7.7 points and 6.7 rebounds in the Gateway. Freshman Angie Rougeau is averaging 7.1 points, 5.5 rebounds and 4.5 assists and sophomore point guard Colleen Heimstead is the Salukis leading free throw shooter (.867) and averages 3.7 assists per game.

The Salukis will look for help off the bench from senior Deanna Kibelk's (5.6, 2.3), sophomore Karrie Kedzker, who hit a crucial 3-pointer against Wichita State with :14 left in overtime.

Montana's surgery on elbow may no longer be necessary

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (UPI) — San Francisco 49ers quarterback Joe Montana, who will miss Sunday's Pro Bowl in Honolulu because of a sore elbow, may not need surgery as feared.

"They're just going to let it rest at this time," a 49ers spokesman said Wednesday. "Then they'll see if it's still bothering him in a few months."

Montana's right elbow was examined Tuesday by the 49ers' medical staff.

Doctors had been considering minor surgery next month on his throwing elbow, which was sore during Super Bowl week but did not prevent him from winning an unprecedented third Super Bowl Most Valuable Player award in the 49ers' 55-10.

1990 baseball cards are wild, tame; veritable smorgasbord

Scripps Howard News Service

One thing's certain about the 1990 baseball cards. There's something for everyone.

With designs ranging from wild to tame, loud to quiet and bland to outlandish, there's a veritable smorgasbord of colors, styles and photos available to the connoisseur.

For the past few columns I've critiqued this year's Donruss, Fleer, Score, Topps and Upper Deck cards. Here are my rankings.

1. Upper Deck — Clean, sharp and attractive. Upper Deck has retained the style that brought it so much success in its 1989 premier season. I like the large photos on front and back. I also like the team and Upper Deck logos on the front. The card's biggest minus, however, is the erasable ink. A solid swipe with a good pencil eraser will destroy a card. Still, an easy No. 1 choice.

2. Score — After two years of clean, conservative designs, Score has introduced a palette of colors. Two-tone front borders and color-splashed backs all seem to jibe into a fairly attractive package. I also like the debut of team logos on the front. Good job, Score.

3. Fleer — Nabbing a page from Upper Decks, Fleer used a lot of white background to enhance the cards. It's not nearly as effective as Upper Deck. There's too much white and not enough picture. However, I still prefer Fleer's comprehensive statistics on the back.

4. Topps — Throwing caution to the wind, Topps tried to capitalize on the computer age with a colorful dot matrix border design that reminds me of a programming class I took in college. I hated that class. I like these cards only slightly better.

5. Donruss — Red, red, everywhere. After thumbing through about 50 of these cards, I saw streaks of red flashing across my subconscious for hours. I don't like red. I don't like these cards.

Because I know my rankings don't necessarily reflect the opinion of the general baseball card-buying public, I conducted two unscientific surveys in an effort to determine which cards were most popular.

Cards used in the surveys were Mauro Gozzo of Donruss, Mike Statton of Fleer, Fernando Valenzuela of Score, Ryne Sandberg of Topps and Don Mattingly of Upper Deck.

I asked the respondents to rank the cards from worst (one) to best (five).

First I surveyed 33 adults (23 men and 10 women). Of those, 10 collect or have collected cards.

Upper Deck proved to be an overwhelming favorite with 15 first-place votes and 121 points. Fleer finished second with 109 points and six first-place votes. Score was third with 107 points and three first-place votes. Topps finished fourth with 95 points and six first-place votes. Donruss failed miserably with the group, scoring only 63 points with three first-place votes and 21 last-place votes.

Then I conducted the same survey with a group of 22 third-graders. The results were nearly opposite that of the adult survey.

Donruss, least favorite with the adults, was the overwhelming favorite of the children with 12 first-place votes and 93 points. Topps finished second.

Denver's loss tarnishes city image

Scripps Howard News Service

David Savageau, author of "The Places Rated Almanac" called the Broncos' fourth Super Bowl loss "just one more piece of bad news for Denver."

Though he won't subtract ratings points for Denver which ranks as the 39th best place to live in the United States, Savageau said the 55-10 blowout at the hands of the San Francisco 49ers underscored a national perception that the Queen City of the Plains remains highly tarnished.

In good times or bad, the Broncos have always helped to define Denver — a bad situation win or lose, said one urban-affairs expert.

"Any town that has to live on a football victory in order to prove its identity ought to go back to the psychiatrist's couch," said Neil Pierce, a nationally syndicated columnist on urban affairs.

"Here's a great city with lots of promise, and it has to depend for its identity on what a bunch of guys do on a football field?"

Still, the worst defeat in Super Bowl history didn't help the city's image. Only diehards in Minnesota, whose Vikings have lost four Super Bowls, can empathize with Denver's downtrodden fans, said one observer.

"Everybody's being elaborately noble about not hurting your feelings — there's a sense of pity," noted Jim Kloubucher, a columnist for the Minneapolis-St. Paul Star Tribune and a witness to all four Viking Super Bowl losses.

Kloubucher said the loss to the 49ers was "so absurd" that "there's been a great deal more compassion and understanding directed at the Broncos than at the Vikings.
