Allied troops cleaned out the last pockets of Iraqi resistance in Al Khafji near the Saudi-Kuwait border Thursday after two days of the heaviest ground fighting of the Persian Gulf War and took about 160 prisoners.

The U.S. soldiers, a man and a woman, were reported missing, and Iraq said it had captured some U.S. soldiers during the ground fighting, including women. Meanwhile, Iraq launched its eighth missile attack on Israel, and the conventional warhead landed in the occupied West Bank. There were no reports of damage caused.

Most of the Iraq's forces that charged into Saudi Arabia from Kuwait all the way to the border about midnight Tuesday had bedded back in the fighting in which 11 U.S. Marines were killed. But fighting persisted for a day in Al Khafji, a town on the Saudi Gulf coast, when the war began Jan. 17. Saudi and U.S. troops finally retook the town Thursday, Brig. Gen. Pat Stevens IV of the U.S. Central Command said in Riyadh, the Saudi capital. He said the Saudi and Qatari forces were supported by U.S. Marine Cobra helicopters but no U.S. ground forces were involved.

Stevens said a news briefing that initial reports indicated 160 Iraqi prisoners were taken and 22 enemy tanks had been destroyed while only three Marine light armored vehicles had been turned over.

"It was a devastating fight for the enemy," said U.S. Col. Jerry Humble, operations officer for the 1st Marine Division. He said some Marine and Iraqi ground forces were firing at each other from a distance of a half-mile or less. "We lost two armored vehicles," Humble said. "Just look at the scoreboard. We lost two (armed vehicles), they lost 21 tanks." The U.S. military said later that three allied vehicles had been destroyed.

Stevens said two U.S. soldiers, a man and a woman who were rescued from a transport battle, were missing.

The Central Command spokesman said all that was known was that the two were not members of the 1st Marine Division, which was last seen in Eastern Saudi Arabia about 75 miles south of Al Khafji, far from the Kuwaiti border.

Iraq said it captured an unspecified number of U.S. soldiers, both men and women, during the ground fighting.

Bomber from ’50s hits hard in Gulf war

By John Patterson

The 36-year-old B-52 Stratofortress bomber is proving its useful among top-of-the-line laser-guided bombs and other state of the art technology used in the Persian Gulf War.

The B-52 is scheduled to be replaced by the B-1 and B-2 Stealth bombers, but with cuts to the B-1 and B-2 programs, the plane Boeing Co. first made for the military in 1955 is still an important Marine Corps bomber. U.S. Air Force, said Jeffery Rhodes, aeronautics editor for Air Force Magazine.

"The only thing nearly as old is the F-4 Phantom," Rhodes said. "If the B-52 isn't the oldest, it's definitely number two."

The U.S. Air Force has a total of 254 B-52s, but the number used in Operation Desert Storm is not known, said Air Force spokesman Capt. George Sillia.

"It's being used to bomb the Iraqi Republican Guards and in other bombing missions," Sillia said.

Standing more than 40 feet tall with a 185-foot wingspan the B-52 resembles a 747 in size, Rhodes said.

The plane can be used for a number of purposes, including laying mines, launching cruise missiles, hunting ships and bombing, he said.

In the Persian Gulf war, the B-52, has mainly been used for carpet bombing, which involves dropping a large number of bombs into a specified area to knock out a target, he said.

"The B-52 went after lower intensity threats," he said. "It carries 105 500-pound bombs. It's basically a dump truck."

Rhodes said the B-52 is one of the last conventional bombers in the Air Force.

"Because the B-2 (Stealth bomber has been cut, the B-52 is lingering longer on the Air Force want," he said.

Committee to change student conduct code

Members formed a subcommittee to draft a conduct code containing the agreed upon and proposed changes. When the amended code is completed, the committee will meet to discuss and vote on it.

Upon agreement, a draft of the the committee's recommendations will be sent to SIUC President John C. Guyon for final approval.

In the past, the president has been receptive to agreeing with similar committee's proposals, but the decision is up to him, said Jean Paratore, associate vice president for student affairs.

The area not voted on concerns the level of involvement a student has in determining whether or not a student has cheated.

No formal hearing is conducted at the department level under the current code, but instead the case goes straight to the college's dean.

In six seasons at SIUC, Coach Rich Herrin has yet to win at Bradley.

His chances weren’t looking too good this year with his Salukis without in-season arena. Then when figuring in 31 points by Missouri Valley leading scorer Curtis Stuckey, it’s no surprise the Salukis lost 89-87 to Bradley Thursday.

The Salukis biggest problem has been winning the close ballgames. All nine of the Dawgs losses have been by six points or less.

SIUC was down by as many as 13 points in the contest, but battled back late in the game to pull within two. Tightly free throw shot...g...by the Braves in the second half denied the Salukis the win.

The Salukis had their chance at 48 when senior forward Rick Shipley hit a 3-pointer to pull the Dawgs within four at 88-84.

After being fouled, the Braves’ Adam Carl missed the second of two free throws. The rebound came out to junior forward Kelvin Lawrence, who dished to freshman guard Chris Lowery.

Lowery drove for the layup, but was blocked from behind by Charles Shipley. From there the Salukis were unable to put anything together.

The big blow to the Salukis came with 14 minutes left in the game when sophomore center Ashraf Amaya picked up his fourth foul. He missed the next four minutes, then came back in and picked up No. 5 shortly after.

Lawrence also played much of the second half with four fouls and some limiting time on the floor.

Amaya contributed 16 points and seven rebounds before leaving the game to lead Saluki with 21 points and seven rebounds in the 79-69 win over Bradley Jan. 24 at home.

Stuckey, who had 24 points last week at SIUC, combined with the Salukis guard who poured in 18 points, to lead the way for the Braves. Stuckey, the SIUC senior, has been a player to watch all season and nine points in the MVC, ISU, who won the Valley Tournament last year, dropped its first 17 games of the season and a 3-16 record, 3-6 in the MVC.

The Salukis stay up north to play at a game in Illinois State Saturday night. The Salukis will be looking for 45 points for the first time this year.

Women begin second half of schedule on road at EIU

By Paul Pabst

The SIUC women’s basketball team will spend a weekend away from SIUC as the squad begins the second half of its Gateway Conference schedule.

First the Salukis will be challenging a conference foe at Eastern Illinois, tonight and then they will play the next ranked Western Kentucky Tuesday afternoon.

VCU, 13-4 overall and 8-1 in the Gateway, will try to make a clean sweep of EIU this season. Jan. 7 at the Arena the Salukis dumped the Panthers 70-54.

But this time around, Saluki head coach Cindy Scott thinks the Panthers will be a lot easier to dispose of. The difference this time should be EIU’s forward Tracy Roller. Roller was basically a no-show offensively for that game. She has come on strong lately and is averaging 14.3 points a game.

“Roller is a great player,” Scott said, “So we’re going to try and limit her at all costs.”

Roller is flanked on the baseline by seniors Stacy Friedrich and Beverly Williams. The pair have combined to average more than 27 points.

While the big test of the weekend will be a showdown with Western Kentucky, Scott said there is no way she will let her team look past EIU. The Salukis are just following each game.

The Saluki men’s and women’s swimming and diving teams will face 15 competition at the Gateway Conference invite this weekend.

The meet will pit six schools at the 23rd annual Saluki Invitational today the Sunday. The Salukis and divers will compete in the Recreation Center in a meet against the University of N. Dakota, Ball State, Western Kentucky, Vanderbilt and the University of Cincinnati.

“The biggest team is going to be Nebraska,” said senior Chris Gally, who won the 100-yard backstroke. “It’s been a very big rivalry for at least four years.”

SIUC coach Doug Ingram agrees this weekend Nebraska will be a challenge.

“This is our chance to compete against them and prove ourselves,” he said. “It would be very good for us to show our standing.”

The Invitational will allow the swimmers to rate themselves against half of the Midwest. Ingram sees this as one of many steppingstones to the NCAA championships.

“This weekend we hope to continue to build up to the championship season,” he added. “We’ll try to do our best to win but we won’t sacrifice our preparation for the championship just to win.”

Ingram said the team has a good chance at scoring in the NCAA’s. Three chances have been lowered, however, because of the departure of diver Laine Own, a two-time NCAA qualifier from last year, and after SIUC last semester for personal reasons.

The swimmers practice four hours each day. They see the tougher competitions as challenging and fun.

“I will get excited to swim,” said junior Deyl Leunbecher. “I’m just excited when you know you’re better because you play down to their level.”

Leunbecher scored in the NCAA relay last year against Texas in the Midwest. Ingram sees this as one of many steppingstones to the NCAA championships.

"We hope to continue to build up to the championship season," he added. "We’ll try to do our best to win but we won’t sacrifice our preparation for the championship just to win."

BONN, Germany (UPI) — German currency bills stamped with the words “No money for war” began circulating in recent days — apparently in protest to Germany’s financial support to Operation Desert Storm, police said Thursday. A police spokesman said it was not known who stamped the German marks but that members of peace movements were known to undertake such operations. He said stamping a bank note is not illegal because the currency in the property of its holder, but said nobody has to accept a stamping as a business transaction. The government gave $6 million more to the war this week.

Closing of fur saloons ‘ends era’ in Canada

TORONTO (UPI) — The Fur Council of Canada said Thursday that Hudson Bay Co.’s decision to close down its fur saloons “marks the end of an era.” “The fur industry opened up and sustained this country,” said Del Haylock, executive vice president of the council which represents trappers, fur, farmers, designers and retailers. “It built Canada,” Haylock said, “and it built The Bay,” as the company, which was egging liquidating its fur inventories next week, is known. Hudson Bay announced Wednesday it was getting out of the fur business after 320 years. Spokesman for Hudson Bay said the move was based on a downturn in sales.

Gumming grunts in gulf go without SPAM

United Press International

If an army truly travels on its stomach, U.S. troops in the Persian Gulf are traveling light. At the onset of the Saudi government, Americans are going to war without SPAM, a staple of the military diet since World War II. “A war without SPAM is like a day without grumblng,” said a Marine cook. “It’s the best grunts (infantry) got to eat. They like to grieve about it, but they appreciate it,” a marine spokesman said. “It tastes pretty good when you haven’t got anything else. Some of them probably miss it.” Islamic dietary rules proscribed pork.

Study: Iraq years from having nuclear bombs

CHICAGO (UPI) — Iraq was years away from having usable nuclear weapons even before war broke out in the Persian Gulf, an article in the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists said Thursday. Authors David Albright, a physicist, and Mark Hibbs, a reporter for two nuclear industry publications, questioned President Bush’s citing of Iraq’s nuclear weapons potential that “the administration began pushing last November as a rationale for the use of military force. After months-long investigation of the requirements any country would need to build nuclear weapons, we conclude that Saddam Hussein was many years away.”

Class curbing of black dialect insults parents

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Parents of black children at a suburban Washington school Saturday they are insulted that their children were encouraged to attend an after-school class designed to curb the use of black dialect and promote standard English. “If anything, they could have done something for the white kids geared toward their slang when they say ‘That’s awesome, or ‘That’s radical,’” said Vera Thompson, the mother of a black student at Burnt Mills Elementary School in Silver Spring. Another parent, Lizzy Gibson, called the class “insulting” because it was a single out a group of kids.

Oil prices expected to remain at current level

NEW YORK (UPI) — Oil prices should remain in their current range unless Iraqi forces damage Saudi Arabia’s oil fields, Ashland Oil Inc. Chairman John Hall said Thursday. In a prepared speech opening Ashland’s annual meeting, Hall noted that crude oil prices currently are trading around $71 to $22 a barrel. “We expect them to stay in this range unless the Iraqi forces successfully attack Saudi production facilities,” Hall said. “Looking to the longer term, we find some reason to be encouraged that the situation will improve after the war is over.”

Minority leaders say history month about ‘roots, heritage’ not just color

By Rennie Walker
Staff Writer

Although February is designated as Black History Month, local African-American leaders say it is not about color.

Black History Month is a time for all people to think about their roots, regardless of their race, said Kara Davenport, president of the SIUC National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

“It brings everyone’s attention level to the past, present and future of the African-American race and also to other races,” Davenport said.

IT IS IMPORTANT for all Americans to realize where they have come from and where they are going, she said.

“The beginning of ending racism in America is to know about everyone’s roots and heritage,” she said. “When people try to understand what I’m about, then I can try to understand who they’re all about.”

Black History Month is a nationwide observation of African-American contributions to the country. On-campus events are held everyday throughout the month, such as seminars and videos on racism, exhibits at the University Museum and several African-American guest speakers.

THE RED, BLACK, and Green Ball will take place at 7 p.m. Friday in the Student Center ballrooms. It is a part of the singing and dancing talents at the African-American SIUC students, including gospel music by “Voices of Inspiration.”

Black History Month events are sponsored by the Office of Student Development and the Black Affairs Council.

The schedule of events is diverse, said Antonio Washington, president of the SIUC Black Affairs Council.

“In today’s society, you don’t see the real picture. People aren’t aware of all the contributions African-Americans have made,” Washington said.

“EACH EVENT portrays the African-American perspective carries messages of the culture,” Harriet Wilson-Barlow, associate director of OSD, said this is the opportunity for African-American contributions to be recognized.

“AFRICAN-AMERICANS, or blacks, are often excluded from history, literature and other areas of learning,” Wilson-Barlow said. “This is our chance to provide information on how African-Americans have made contributions throughout their stay in this country.”

This is not a course in African-American history, but simply American history, said Nathaniel Felder, member of NAACP executive committee and past president of the Carbondale chapter.

Black history month is a time to give increased recognition to people who have contributed to the development of America, and their contributions are significant,” Felder said.

“BLOOD CLINICS HAVE been called to collect a backup supply of blood for the Persian Gulf war,” he said. “An African-American was responsible for developing blood plasma, and many lives have been saved. That is significant not only to American society, but to humanity.”

Development center awarded funding to assist businesses

By Sherri L. Willcox

A $72,000 grant will allow SIUC’s Small Business Development Center to continue providing local business owners with education and counseling.

The Department of Commerce and Community Affairs approved the funding, which was provided by the Illinois Small Business Assistance Bureau and the U.S. Small Business Administration.

“We are honored to receive this funding because it is determined on the basis of performance. Not every development center receives it,” said Irene Carlton, SIUC development center director.

The center is one of more than 50 statewide and has received national funding in increasing amounts each year since its opening, Carlton said.

The money will help the center provide business management, technological, financial, hiring and training assistance for Illinois small businesses. The center also plans to use the funds to expand its business computer training.

The SIUC development center is one of the strongest programs in Illinois, according to performance evaluations done by the U.S. SBA and the Illinois DCCA.

SIUC’s center conducted 526 current and prospective business owners and managers in 1990, according to SBDC records. More than 700 people participated in 33 seminars and workshops at the center.

Client lists for 1990 almost doubled the average of all previous years.

In 1984, the first year of the center’s existence, it had 12 clients and received only $5,743.

The development center is located at the Southern Illinois Small Business Incubator in Carbondale. It is staffed by SIUC faculty, graduate students and business professionals who provide help to clients at nominal or no charge, depending on the services required.

TROOPS TRAPPED IN WAR; GOVERNMENT RESPONSIBLE

Perhaps Dan Sohn and Spike Perkins need to clarify a couple of things. They need to make clear exactly why they are not opposing the war.

We received phone threats, were ostracized at our jobs and even had to be in a car or on the phone discussing the Middle East crisis with several people who are not of us. Obviously we put forth the wrong impression.

First, we realized that name-calling was a cheap tactic, that has been what has characterized many of the pro-war letters we had already seen.

We were also utilizing sarcasm, which is a form of humor. We had hoped that some people would laugh. But also, laughs are difficult to come by when such a controversial subject such as war is discussed.

Second, let both of us clarify our position to all those enraged at us about our position on the troops. We have nothing against them. We view them as merely trapped in a situation that they may not be able to change no matter who is in power.

When they arrive home, the two of us will not be at the airports screaming, "War Criminal!" We, in fact, wish them a safe and loving return from this madness.

As a closing statement, we wish to add that if you are for this conflict, get involved in any way you can. Don't just stand on the corner holding a sign. Spike Perkins, junior, english; Dan "The Carpet" Sohn, junior, psychology.

EMOTIONAL SUPPORT OF SOLDIERS IMPORTANT TO TROOPS IN THE GULF

We recently heard a speech given at the Federal Building in Carbondale by an anti-war activist. This woman said that all draft-age citizens in America would not tolerate the "lies" of President Bush.

She also argued that our generation would not support Operation Desert Storm. We agree that you, as an individual, have the right to your opinion.

Just please remember that you do not have the right to make generalizations of the opinions of others.

Not all college students stand on your side of the street. We, and others like us, support President Bush. We do not like the idea of war, nor do we know what to expect from it.

One thing we do realize is that the additional support of our troops is of the utmost importance.

The men and women in the Persian Gulf face enough insecurities already. They do not need more scaring from home.

In the media, war protests receive high coverage. Those of us who support our troops need to be heard too. If you back the men and women who are risking their lives, tie a yellow ribbon in your backpack or sign one of the petitions supporting our troops.

As you may know, yellow ribbons have been used in the past as signs of support for those in combat and as symbols of hope (something we could all use). Evidence of these signs will hopefully reach the media, government officials and those overseas. We do not have to be loud to be heard.

We also have heard a lot of talk about Vietnam and how that mistake should never be made again.

Do you remember seeing a picture of a prisoner slipping on a wounded soldier returning home? This time, let's show the troops the respect and dignity they deserve. -Janice Hoffman, junior, history; Kelly Fitcher, junior, elementary education; Michele Velebely, junior, management.

Letters on war

Letters on war thick in quantity, thin on quality

During the time I have spent here at SIU, I have enjoyed reading the letters published in the Daily Egyptian that have been written by the students and faculty.

Usually the letters pertain to recent events and are obviously written by intelligent and well-informed people.

Unfortunately, ever since the crisis in the Persian Gulf has escalated into a war, the quality of the letters published has dropped considerably.

Letters published recently have been referring to previously published opinions.

This in itself is not bad, if they pointed out flaws in facts or logic of the previous letters; instead they state unsupported opinions that are opposite of previous letters.

"You are wrong" is not an argument that an educated adult should give when discussing an issue as serious as a war.

I am also sorry to say that writers have lowered themselves to name-calling when they cannot think of anything else.

In a time in which the open minds of the American public, it seems that at least some of us have set our opinions and closed our minds.

Whether you oppose or support the war, you should remain informed and rational so your opinions will be too. Whatever it was that said the pen was mightier than the sword, was right.

So let's be careful about what we write, because the letters published around the world affect us all and every one of us. -Doug Long, sophomore, economics.

A THOMPSON POINT DORMITORY displayed the poster announcing Yolanda King's address on campus Thursday night to kick off Black History month.

The title of the speech, "The Dream Is Still a Dream," ran beneath her picture.

Underneath this, someone had neatly printed with a pen, "And will never become reality."

With all dream weavers come the dream stealers, but Black History month should be, if anything, an attempt to give dreams of the past a place in the future despite the voices trying to spoil them.

IN ORDER TO MAKE SOME of these dreams come true, action must be taken by all African-Americans.

The first thing anyone (of any race) could do is in registering to vote, but African-Americans especially should use this right.

For instance, David Duke, a Louisiana Republican who ran for senator last year, garnered over 40 percent support from his state. He openly condones white supremacy and is considering higher posts in the coming years.

Minorities cannot oppose such views just through outrage and while they actively must take part if they are concerned.

BUT REGISTERING TO VOTE MAY hold more potential than just voting for certain candidates.

Charles Koen, the Cairo minister and civil rights activist currently on trial for arson, theft and embezzlement in Benton, believes his jury trial is racially biased.

He said that out of 50 potential jurors, only two were black, and all but one of the jurors—an alternate—is black.

The absence of African-American voters plays a significant role in this case because a computer randomly selected jurors from registered voters in the area.

NATURALLY, MORE REGISTERED African-Americans leads to greater proportions who can serve on juries.

Voter registration alone may not make dreams come true directly, but it is a move laced with positivity.

With a kind of minority involvement, one of Martin Luther King Jr.'s dreams—crushing racial barriers through peaceful means—can be a little closer to reality.

Canadian Geese flock to Crab Orchard

Photos and Text by Mark Busch

Geese visit Crab Orchard to get away from the cold

Thousands of Canadian geese fly south each winter to vacation at a Southern Illinois refuge. Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge officials estimate that 750,000 to 800,000 geese frequent the area annually from the middle of September to the beginning of March.

At last count 65,000 geese were on the refuge itself Jan. 22, officials said. The geese have been coming here via the Mississippi flyway for hundreds of years from the Hudson and James Bay area in Northern Canada, said Jim Cameron, outdoor recreation planner at the refuge.

"That's where they nest, and they have been doing that for centuries," Cameron said. "There is nothing to indicate that that will change."

Goose hunting is a popular activity on the refuge during the season, which ran this year from the second week in November through Jan. 24, Cameron said.

"Hunting is only allowed in the open parts of the refuge, and no hunting is allowed in the sanctuary areas. Hunters were allowed to take as many as 71,000 geese this season, but only about 27,000 were harvested."

"Even with the large numbers of birds down, the season has not been a good one at all in the eyes of the hunter," Cameron said.

"Although the hunters didn't always get their bird, the area still profited from the season. "There are certain tourism bureaus that believe that hunting generates as much as $5 to $7 million annually for Southern Illinois, which is a tremendous amount of money," Cameron said.

Aside from hunting, the annual pilgrimage of geese also generates tourism. Cameron estimates that between 350,000 to 400,000 people come to see the geese each year.

"They may do two or three different things," he said. "They may be hunting while they're here. They may do some ice fishing while they're here, but inevitably they're going to wind up on those observation towers looking at those birds."
Amino acid halts AIDS virus in lab

NEW YORK (UPI) — A protein building block that plays a vital role in immune function has been found to substantially suppress the spread of the AIDS virus in the test tube, scientists reported Thursday.

The finding suggests drugs based on the amino acid, called glutathione, may hinder or even prevent the spread of disease in people infected with the AIDS-causing human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV.

The report, published in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Science, was based on research conducted by Dr. Alton Meister, chairman of the biochemistry department at Cornell University Medical College, and Dr. Anthony Fauci, director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases in Bethesda, Md.

Since 1989, researchers have known that HIV-infected people have decreased blood levels of lymphocytes, the disease-fighting cells of the immune system.

Smoking claims more than 400,000 lives every year

ATLANTA (UPI) — Cigarettes are continuing to take a grim toll in American lives, killing more than 400,000 people a year despite a decline in smoking, the government reported Thursday.

Cigarette smoking was responsible for 434,000 deaths and the loss of nearly 1.2 million years of potential life before age 65 in 1988, the latest year for which statistics were available, the Centers for Disease Control said.

Most of the deaths, up from 390,000 in 1985, were from lung and heart cancer and respiratory and heart disease, the CDC said.

"The bottom line is that tobacco causes one-fifth of all deaths in this country each year. The death rates are higher than for alcohol, drugs, homicide, AIDS and auto accidents," said Dr. Thomas Novotny of the CDC's Office on Smoking and Health.

Moreover, it was "very likely" that the death rate from cigarette smoking has exceeded 400,000 per year since 1988, Novotny said.

"We don't have any data but we predict that the number of smoking-related deaths may go up perhaps for several decades," he said.

Brave Indiana boy honored by FBI

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — The FBI honored a seventh-grade boy who helped authorities catch and convict a bank robber.

When Jesse Milton ran up to a man fleeing from a Teachers' Credit Union branch carrying a bag from the bank and try to hide in a trash bin Sept. 19, the boy ran up to a police officer and told him where to find the suspect.

Jesse later testified at the trial of Charles E. Gammon, 22, who was convicted of robbery, said FBI Special Agent Gary O. Schoon.

"He was instrumental in our getting a conviction," Schoon said.

Gammon had fired a pistol at a credit union employee and as a customer who chased him after the robbery. Jesse was among a group of pupils at St. Lawrence Roman Catholic School who were outside at the start of class during the action.

Schoon said Wayne Alford, special agent-in-charge of the FBI's Indianapolis office, presented Jesse a pat on the back expressing the bureau's appreciation.

"With the lower numbers of B-1s and B-2s, the B-52 will probably hang on for another six or seven years."

Although the plane has proved itself during more than 30 years of use, Rhodes said it needs to be retired.

"It's been modified and remodeled too many times," he said. Eventually they'll just fall apart.

The planes were first used in Vietnam under the model number B-52D. Rhodes said those planes are no longer in service, Rhodes said.

The B-52D was the base bomber model that has been upgraded to achieve the models used today, Rhodes said.

The "D" models are all retired and in storage at Bavis-Montan Air Force Base.

"It's a weird sight. There are B-52s lined up nose to tail nearly as far as the eye can see," said.

The B-52 was originally designed as a high-altitude bomber, but the threat of Soviet SAM missiles brought them down to low altitudes, Rhodes said.

"In training for bombing runs out West, they actually fly low enough to challenge cows," he said. "It's very unusual to see a plane that size flying at 400 feet."

Because of its use with radar, the B-52 carries special equipment that will not damage the plane upon their explosion.

"Flying at such a low level, basic physics says that when the plane drops a bomb, it is right on top of it when the bomb hits," Rhodes said. "To correct this the B-52 carries what's called a "reverberated" bomb.

A "reverberated" bomb is equipped with a half parachute, a parachute designed to "loosen" the bomb. When the bomb drops the device inflates and slows it down to the plane doesn't shoot itself down.

The B-52 also is outdated in that it still uses a tailgunner, although the position is far removed from the Korean War era bombers, Rhodes said.

"The tailgunner is actually in the cockpit, but he faces toward the back of the plane," he said. "The gunner is equipped with radar that the gunner uses to target either four 52-missile guns or four 20-mm cannons.

The tailgunner is the primary source of defense for the B-52, which must rely on its technology rather than speed or maneuverability if attacked, Rhodes said.

"Its top speed is listed at 530 miles-per-hour, but it will never go faster than 500 because if it does the fuselage will "blow up," he said. "If a B-52 has to maneuver, it's not going to be a pretty sight."

RACE takes new approach to stop Shawnee timber cuts

By Brandi Tipps
Staff Writer

Although the Regional Association of Concerned Environmentalists has suffered a setback in the U.S. Supreme Court, members haven't given up yet.

On Jan. 16, the high court rejected RACE's request to halt the Fairview Timber Sale in the Shawnee National Forest.

But Bill Cronin, RACE board member and co-founder, said RACE is exploring other means to block the Fairview sale as well as turning attention to other areas of the forest.

The forest service is fragmenting (cutting trees sporadically instead of clear cutting the unfragmented parts of the forest), Cronin said.

"The neo-tropical songbirds (such as wood thrushes) are the birds that nest up here. Their numbers are dropping due to the fragmenting of the forest," he said.

Cronin said the population decrease occurred because the birds nest in the deep forest. When trees in the areas are cleared away, the result leaves no deep forests for nesting.

Tom Hagerty, public relations officer for the U.S. Forest Service, said he is happy with the Supreme Court decision.

"I think we did an excellent job (with the assessment of the forest) and I think RACE should be getting that message very soon," Hagerty said.

He said he did not know why the court ruled against RACE.

Cronin, however, said the group's attempt to halt the sale "isn't dead by any means."

He said the group's attorney is working on some new ideas.

Tom Bochele, RACE's lawyer, would not comment except to say, "this is litigation, there is another side and we would prefer not to publish what we're going to do."

Cronin said the whole Shawnee National Forest needs to be protected.

He said an area called Cripps-Bend, just west of Pomona, is about to be cut the same time as Fairview.

"We've got our eye on that one, too," Cronin said. "We feel Cripps-Bend is important because it boards on some of the wilderness area and we need these buffers for the wilderness."

He said the wilderness areas include Bald Knob, Hutchins Creek and Clear Springs.

One of the group's arguments against the cutting of the trees is that the U.S. Forest Service did not accurately assess the area for rare species of plants and animals, said Linda Harmon, RACE member.

The process is known as management indicator species, which tells the assessors what kind of species are living in the forest and the health of the forest as a whole, she said.

"I think it's real important that the forest have a comprehensive multi-seasonal environmental assessment, not only for wildlife but for plants as well," Harmon said.

Harmon said the Fairview area was taken over a three-day period during the summer.

"There are a lot of species that could have been there but would not have been visible," she said.

Harmon said the forest contains several types of plants that bloom foliage in the fall or spring during the summer. Some birds nest in the forests in the fall and spring but migrate to other areas in the summer.

Some species may have been overlooked, she said. Some of the assessment is done with computer programs that predice what kind of wildlife in the forest.

"I think this process leaves too much room for mistakes and there's no making up for it later," she said.

Foam cups friend, not foe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Foam cups, often portrayed as an ecological villain, may actually be more environmentally friendly than paper cups, a Canadian researcher reported Thursday.

Martin Hocking of the University of Victoria said his study, which received no funding from either the paper or polystyrene foam industries, found the environmental impact of foam cups appears to be less than that of paper cups.

Before conducting the study, Hocking said he thought paper was environmentally superior to foam for making single-use containers for coffee or other hot drinks. However, his analysis of the environmental costs involved in the production and disposal of the two different types of cups showed otherwise.

"The paper cups consume not only wood resources, but also petroleum resources," he said.
Timothy Leary, humanist psychologist, entertains with his views on government, religion, death and the war on drugs Wednesday night in the Student Center.

Leary: Drugs help to explore brain

By Kylie Robertson
Student Writer

Students should think for themselves and question authority, said Timothy Leary, a new-age humanist psychologist. Leary, 70, shared his thoughts and experiences about aspects of human behavior with about 700 people at the Student Center Wednesday night.

He entertained the audience with what he described as "stand-up philosophy," developed through years of "brain navigation."

AS A BELIEVER in the use of drugs, Leary attacked the politics behind the drug war. "If you become an acid head, then you are using drugs the wrong way. That is just brain masturbation," he said.

All human beings should explore their brains, Leary said, and drugs enable them to do so.

LEARY, WHO HAS A doctorate in psychology, was director of the Harvard University Psychiatric Research Project. He was dismissed from this role in 1963 for his controversial studies of psychedelic drugs such as LSD.

His two-hour lecture, which included moments of theatrical display, covered the Persian Gulf war, religion, death and the war on drugs.

The audience applauded, as he invented conversations between Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev and President George Bush.

HE SAID HE disagrees with the politics behind the gulf war, and his skit reinforced his disrespect for the Bush administration.

During his discussion he encouraged his audience to join him in chanting "No war."

"One thing politicians do well is create problems," Leary said.

The real reason for the war, he said, is to unite U.S. arms worth $2.7 billion.

DURING A BRIEF demonstration of mock prayer, Leary described Christians as "sheep." Religion, he said, leaves no room for individualism and destroys the ability to think for oneself.

Leary said he does not believe in death, but calls it "de-animation," and described to the audience his support for a group in California that freezes corpses, which then await "re-animation."
Demands for war goods creates new jobs in Illinois

Weapons factory to hire 145 workers on temporary basis

ROCK ISLAND (UPI) — Illinois' largest defense plant, the Gulf for high-tech military equipment, is expected to hire 145 temporary workers, but the Gulf war hasn't increased business at all Illinois defense plants.

The ARSENAL announced this week that it would hire 145 temporary workers to keep up with the flow of supplies flowing to the Midwest.

Security and Administration Department of the Army, which operates the arsenal, said it would begin hiring workers immediately. The plant has been operating on a reduced schedule since the Gulf war began.

A spokesperson for the arsenal said it was hiring because of the current demand for high-tech military equipment. The arsenal is responsible for producing guided missiles, artillery shells, and other defense equipment.

Women in combat

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The news that Illinois was sending a soldier to war recently prompted some people to watch out for con artists seeking to exploit the presence of Illinoisans in war zones. A recent report in the Chicago Tribune showed that some Illinoisans who have family or friends in the military were tricked by scammers.

The Illinois National Guard, which operates the arsenal, said it was aware of the problem and was taking steps to prevent future incidents. The Illinois National Guard is responsible for producing guided missiles, artillery shells, and other defense equipment.

President places faith in God, sets pray day

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Declaring he has learned that one cannot be without faith in God, President Bush Thursday dedicated Sunday, Feb. 3, as a national day of prayer for peace.

Bush made his remarks at the annual National Prayer Breakfast attended by top-ranking government officials, members of the Supreme Court and foreign dignitaries. The event began their third week in the Persian Gulf war.

"I have learned, as all presidents have, that you cannot be president of our country without faith in God," Bush told the gathering. He said the nation's churches, synagogues and mosques are packed with persons "praying for our troops.

"God is our salvation and we must trust in him," Bush said.

Bush was accompanied by his Secretary of Defense, who with his wife, was a house guest at the White House, for the second time in three weeks.

Mrs. Bush also attended and received accolades as a "super grandmother" who had urged parents to guide their children while watching television报复.
Brazils cuts down on sexually explicit TV scenes

SAO PAULO, Brazil (UPI) — Sexuality in an explicit television broadcast — freely permitted in recent years — will be severely restricted under a code of ethics announced Thursday banning scenes of total nudity and "lavish kisses."

The code of ethics, devised by the Brazilian Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters, will go into effect at the beginning of this year's annual carnival, which starts next Friday.

The ban, apparently at the urging of President Fernando Collor de Mello, was devised by the same broadcasters who hailed the 1988 Constitution that permitted such sexual liberties on television and did away with the strict vestiges of the former military government.

During carnival, known as a wild celebration of lust and decadence, television has over the past few years broadcast frequent scenes of nude models and same-sex dances as well as nightclubs scenes of people having sex while dancing.

This year, none of that will be allowed.

The ethics code prohibits nudity before 9 p.m., after which is permitted only side and rear views of both sexes, as well as scenes from long distance. Regarding sex, it only permits "the stimulation of the sexual act — without showing both bodies, without lascivious kisses and without any eroticism that could be considered vulgar."

Also prohibited are scenes of dog sex or excessive violence.

The association also formed a new committee that will review exactly what can be allowed and what cannot, in case broadcasters are unsure of the rules.

"I can assure you that the broadcasts of this year's carnival will not be like those of past years," said Joaquim Mendonca, president of the broadcasters association.

Scenes like those shown before will simply not be seen because all the broadcasters have received copies of the new code and they know what can and cannot be permitted at certain hours.

A wave of sex on television had been spreading throughout Brazil, especially since the premiere in December 1990 of the racy television series "Pastoral," which frequently showed people having sex in the rivers and swamps of western Brazil's Pantanal region.

This year, however, indications are that things could get in the other direction, President Collor issued a decree in March aimed at cutting down on television sex and nudity.

Even carnival is cutting back. Samba schools are deducing points in their judging of parade contestants who expose or crudely display their sexual organs.

By Karen Radius
Staff Writer

The audience at Sprock stepped into a Grimm's Fairy Tale storybook when "Into the Woods" was performed Wednesday night. "Into the Woods," a musical by Stephen Sondheim and James Lapine, opened Sprock's Spring Celebrity Series.

About 1,000 people came to see the hilarious musical derived from Grimm's Fairy Tales. The musical had four separate storylines: "Little Red Riding Hood," "Cinderella," "Jack and the Beanstalk," "Rapunzel" and "The Baker and His Wife." The latter was written by the play's creators.

The production, although based on traditional fairy tales, tells the stories of the characters after they live happily ever after.

The beautifully and comically performed play began with this giant storybook in the middle of the stage. The audience was transported to the stories of "Cinderella," "Jack and the Beanstalk" and "The Baker and His Wife." The best part of the play was the characters, especially the wolf, played by Scott Mikita, and the witch, played by Kelly Ellerwood, each who stole the show with their humorous remarks and gestures.

One scene where this was apparent was when Little Red Riding Hood (played by Gina Valentine) encountered the Wolf in the woods. He was dressed in a disco-like tuxedo jacket with sequins. Through his sly remarks, he gets the naive Red Riding Hood to disclose information, such as where Granny lives.

All the fairy tales were tied together by the story of the Baker and his wife. The couple is commanded to kill the baker's father. The couple is allowed.

Good fortune comes to all by the end of the first act, even the baker and his wife who now have a baby boy and Jack and his mother who have money Jack stole from the giant before killing him.

All of the songs and the special effects were most likely fantastic. The actors' and actress' voices were beautiful and clear. The music was synchronized to each scene. The special effects were particularly outstanding in the scene where the witch disappeared after a light explodes like a bomb.

Make sure everyone in the audience jump with surprise.

The play's tone changes dramatically from the first act to the second. The moon changes from white to red and is shaded by trees. The play goes from light-hearted and comical to serious and sad. By the second act, the characters learn the lesson of the story: that making mistakes is human. The way the fantasy characters live after they live "happily ever after" is once again happily, but only after learning a lot more about reality and the sins of forgiveness.

USG supports extending surtax for education

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

Undergraduate Student Government passed a resolution in support of a permanent Illinois state income tax surcharge. The resolution urges the Illinois General Assembly to enact a permanent and temporary state income tax surcharge—due in part to Illinois’s public services, state schools districts, and local governments.

The surcharge provided SIU with $7.8 million in fiscal year 1991. Brad Cole, USG chief of staff and writer of the resolution, said the loss of this money may cause tuition to rise out of the reach of many Illinois citizens and he was not surprised the resolution passed unanimously.

“This is an issue that affects students across the state in an important way,” he said.

The resolution will be sent to Gov. Jim Edgar and all Illinois legislators to support the SIUCurricular expenses. The surcharge permanent, Cole said.

In other business, USG tabbed all 11 page resolutions. Cole said this will allow students to attend seminars or the Gulf War and get more information on the situation.

The senate also passed resolutions to support U.S. troops involved in Operation Desert Storm, ask the University to repair light fixtures and extend surtax, and reestablish a student union for the Student Center. For more information, contact Student Council at 526-4121.

U.S. misconceptions label all Arabs as violent—lecturer

By Tiffany Youther
Staff Writer

Many people in the Middle East believe the United States is involved in the Persian Gulf war not to liberate Kuwait, but to create a war against the Arab people, says Judith Caesar, lecturer in the SIUC English Department.

Caesar told participants at a Food For Thought lunch discussion at the Interfaith Center Thursday that Americans consider some Arabs dangerous. The discussion series is sponsored by University Christian Ministries.

She said U.S. citizens have many misconceptions about the Arab people, including the assumption that all Arabs are violent.

Caesar, who lived in Saudi Arabia for seven years, said she saw no fight between natives there.

"People will yell rhetorical threats at each other with no danger of actual physical violence," she said.

She said one reason U.S. citizens stereotype Arabs is the creation of false cognates in the minds of Americans between traditions and values in the United States and those in the Arab world.

"People see things that look very similar and assume they come from the same causes, although they may be very different," Caesar said.

She said one example of a false cognate is the way American women view Moslem women, who cover their bodies with long dresses and wear veils. Many American women feel sorry for them, she said.

Caesar said Moslem women she has spoken to about this custom say they do not necessarily do this because men want them to.

"The traditional dress acts as a kind of social signal," she said. Many Moslem women feel sorry for American women who dress provocatively, Caesar said. They assume Americans have been raised without dignity and have not learned self-respect.

She said if an American woman walks around an Arab city in Western clothing, men shout comments at her because they think that is what the woman wants.

Americans need to look beyond stereotypes and look into the background of Arab and Moslem culture to understand and respect them as human beings, Caesar said.

She is the wife of Mamoun Fandy, an Egyptian journalist working on his doctorate in political science at SIUC.

A discussion at the Interfaith Center on Thursday centered around SIUC lecturer Judith Caesar who said Americans have many misconceptions about Arab people.
Coaching John David Klingler conference enters the draft underclassmen have stayed through their senior season. There had been intention to the NFL's past. Klingler, in his whole time this was an Klingler, in his NFL's Giants can laugh now. That Gary Reasons called audible when Gary Reasons called audible. When Reasons, punt helped the punters. At Houston; football, Reasons said. In fact, he thought teammate actually had only 10 man on the field. Reasons began a run that would take him 30 yards to the Giants. Reasons said. All the while, Cross was blocking for the opening of Landeta's foot meeting the back. What he got instead was the signs of Reasonsfshing past. Reasons said Cross's failure to hear the audible did not matter.

Houston (UP) - University of Houston banners, David Klingler, who finished fifth in the Heisman Trophy voting, Thursday announced his decision to return for his senior season with the Cougars. "I'd say he's back, and I'm back," the 6-foot-3 junior said. "I came up with a list of 23 reasons to stay and three reasons to go. The most important reason (to stay) was to take care of my team and my coach." Klingler and Coach John Jenkins spent the past two weeks researching Klingler's prospects for the draft. There had been speculation the New England Patriots, who have the first pick in the draft, were interested in Klingler should he be available.

"There has been a lot of speculation," Klingler said. "I said the whole time this was an information-gathering process to find out as much about what was out there. We ended our information gathering last Friday, so I figure I'd clear the deck.

Klingler, 21, also sought the advice of his predecessor, Heisman Trophy winner Andre Ware, who faced a similar decision and opted to leave school early. He was drafted in the first round (seventh pick overall) by the Detroit Lions. "Andre gave me a look up to," Klingler said. "He's been one of my best friends. The whole time he really helped me out.

"Basically, we found out there was some interest in some teams. For me having only one year of starting experience, I think it's a different decision (from Ware). I have a commitment to my team first.

Klingler, in his first season as the starter, threw for 1,430 yards and an NCAA-record 54 touchdowms, and guided the Cougars to a 10-1 record. He led the nation in total offense, averaging 244.9 yards per game, and 5,221 total yards. Klingler also broke or tied 33 NCAA single game records, and 22 more than Heisman Trophy winner Ty Detmer of Brigham Young.

The three reasons Klingler listed to turn pro were: being among the Giants, Reasons called the audible, and Cross never heard it. Cross ran the punt, and Reasons ran the fake. It worked, and it led to a field goal, and so the Giants can laugh about it now.

Quarterback Klingler to remain at Houston; delays entry into NFL

Aggies basketball coach denies wrongdoing

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (UPI) — Texas A&M basketball coach Donn Woolf told the Aggies’ most recent NCAA investigation Thursday denied paying money to secure the transfer of Tony Scott from Syracuse.

Texas A&M denied the NCAA of possible recruiting violations last December after Scott told a Syracuse, N.Y., newspaper New York talent scout Rob Johnson he had been paid to arrange his transfer to Texas A&M.

"I absolutely deny this activity," said Woolf, 42, president of the Texas A&M. "It simply just didn’t happen, and certainly this will be brought out in the investigation," said Dave, who’s cousins with his attorney, George Parnham, said he could not go into details about the investigation.

The school is nearing completion of its investigation into allegations by Scott that his transfer from Syracuse had been arranged with Johnson, and that Johnson and members of Scott’s family had received, or would receive, air fare to fly from New York to College Station.

Allen the charges, if true, are NCAA violations and could put Texas A&M in position to receive the death penalty since the matter comes less than five years after the Aggies football team endured a major penalty.

Scott is enrolled at Texas A&M, but is not on the basketball team. He had to sit out the season because he was a transfer student.

Davis said two weeks ago that Scott retracted his charges after meeting with internal investigator Robert Smith.

The investigation has caused considerable havoc in the program. Davis suspended two players before Tuesday night’s loss to Houston, bringing in 14 the number of players who would have been on the current squad. One left for personal reasons, one was injured and the other had academic problems that led them to transfer to other schools or not be allowed to enroll at Texas A&M.

The Aggies suited up just six scholarship players for the 77-64 loss to Houston, which dropped the Aggies to 6-8 in the Southwest Conference, their worst start since the 1950-51 season.

Davis said Johnson at one time was a "legitimate candidate" for a graduate assistant position. Scott, who was unhappy at Syracuse, said he and Johnson traveled together to Houston last fall.

Davis said the two traveled together for economic reasons and both were going to see some of the same campus. Davis said he did not know at Houston.

"I didn’t know Rob Johnson, I didn’t know anything about his background," said Davis. "He seemed articulate on the phone and had good basketball knowledge. That’s the reason you bring people in for interviews."

But Davis did allow Johnson to work two weeks as a counselor at his basketball camp in College Station last summer. Davis, however, denied Johnson was paid $2,400 for his work, and would not address allegations Johnson charged A&M had called to the university.

Davis said he met Thursday morning with Athletic Director John David Crow, and his job is secure.

"I’m still the basketball coach here," he said. "I’m concerned with getting Texas A&M back to the level we want it to be at."

Sports Briefs

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (UPI) — Olympic champion Cari Lewis and Canada’s Ben Johnson have signed to meet in a long-distance 100-meter race on July 21.

Lewis defeated Canada’s Frank Fredericks and American Leroy Burrell in the Swedish city of Malmo on Aug. 5.

MALMO Track Club Thursday presented three contracts in which Johnson, Lewis and Burrell confirm they will run against each other over 100 meters in Malmo.

"We are the first organizers to sign up Lewis and Johnson to the same race since the Olympics," assistant meet director Daniel Wessfeldt told United Press International.

Wessfeldt would not disclose financial terms of the deal.

"It was a reasonable price and we will now begin to sell the race to TV stations around the world," Westfeldt said. "We hope to make a profit of $1 million kronor ($180,000 for the whole event)," he said.

Johnson defeated Lewis in the 1998 Olympics, but was stripped of the gold medal and his world record time of 9.79 seconds after testing positive for steroids. Johnson returned to competition Jan. 11 after a 2-year suspension, winning one race and finishing second in two other events.

Burrell, a Santa Monica Track Club triumvirate of Lewis, was the fastest man over 100 meters last year. He defeated Lewis at the Goodwill Games in Seattle.

Unless another meet signs them up, Malmo will be the first meeting between Johnson and Lewis before the Aug. 25-Sept. 1 World Championships in Tokyo.

"We don’t have an exclusive right for staging the very first meet, but no one else has signed up Johnson against any of the two Americans yet and it’s most unlikely that anyone will manage to do it," Westfeldt said.

Options for an event in Seville, Spain, had already been ruled out for May, but according to Westfeldt, their negotiations halted after the meet was moved to a car accident in December.

In addition to Johnson, Lewis and Burrell, the Malmo meet is trying to sign three other sprinters. They are Nigerian Olapade Adeniken, who handed Burrell his only loss last season in Malmo, Daniel Sangouma of France and Mark Witherspoon, another Santa Monica athlete.

FIELD team is competing in the 1991 Indiana University Invitational today and Saturday and Williams is named one of the 55-meter hurdles.

"I he - no goal sets," Williams said. "I think to my coach and go into it every win, so when the race this weekend at the invitational, let's just see what the outcome will bring."

Men's track and field coach Bill Cornell has stressed the 'go out and win' attitude.

"Ed is learning how to relax during races," Cornell said. "I have been telling him to run against the competition and not against the clock. When he does that, he runs faster. Right now he is one of the best hurdlers in the nation. With a repeat performance of his time of 7.20, he could win the NCAA championship — the winner last year had a slower time than that."

Olympic committee to select sites

DALLAS (UPI) - Representatives from five areas billed the "Olympic" Festivals made their final presentations Thursday to the U.S. Olympic Committee.

The candidates for the 1993, 1994 and 1995 Festivals are Denver, Maryland, South Florida, St. Louis and San Antonio. The USOC will announce the winners Friday. The Festivals are held in the United States every three years between Summer Olympics.

Although the Festivals have been an excellent proving ground for many of America's greatest Olympic athletes, they have yet to make a major dent on the consciousness of sports fans.

Several aspects of the Festivals will be discussed during this weekend at the USOC's board of directors meeting and the meeting of the site selection committee headed by Don Ponce, executive director of the American Softball Association.

"We're looking at whether to pare back on the number of days the competition goes on," Ponce said. "We're looking at all financial aspects of the Festival. We're looking at ways that we can bring in the general public and the local organizing committee can work together in sharing the financial load.

"The USOC's Festival television contract with ESPN expires after this year's event in Los Angeles, and the USOC is considering setting up its own network to produce the coverage and make money.

The five finalists made concluding 30-minute presentations Thursday. The San Antonio and Maryland contingents have bid to host a Festival in any of the three possible years.

Denver and South Florida have requested consideration only for 1993 and 1995, while St. Louis has bid to host the festival for 1994 and 1995, St. Louis officials said a new swimming facility should be ready by 1994.

"They qualified and have one of the best times in the nation now, but I think he has still got more. I think he can run faster.

"Even though he qualified and has one of the best collegiates 55-meter hurdle times, Williams said there is still room for improvement. "I am taking everything in stride," Williams said. "Every meet I try to improve and if I don't, I'm still taking it in stride. I'm going to keep running hard and improving, but most importantly, I am keeping my faith strong."

Bill Cornell said, "He is happy for Williams and thinks he is deserving of this achievement."

"Ed is dedicated, conscientious and a very hard worker," Cornell said. "He has one of the best times in the nation now, but I think he has still got more. I think he can run faster."

Many athletes have a certain routine or ritual which brings them luck and Williams is no exception. He said one of the keys to his success is his training schedule.

"Every day I go to the Recreation Center a little bit early to practice by myself," Williams said.

"I do a workout my high school coach gave to me and then I do the regular workout that Cornell gives to me. I think putting the two together helps me out and keeps me strong and ready to go out and run.

Williams started running in grade school and continued with it because he said it was something he was really good at. He also said his family played a major role in helping him get to where he is today.

"My mom and my aunts and uncles are all sports-oriented and they kept me going through it all," Williams said. "They helped me out and encourage me to do it.

In the immediate future Williams wants to keep his grades steady, to do the best he can at nationals and to stay healthy. After graduation Williams hopes to get sponsored by a sporting goods company so he can continue running. And after he is through running, he wants to make a career out of graphic design. Williams said he knows this will require much patience and dedication, but he is willing to wait.

"Good things will come to those who wait," Williams said. "And for those who put their beliefs strongly in God, these things will positively come."
