Ryan hopes to deter fake ID possession

By Dan Page
Politics Reporter

A statewide effort to crack down on the use and manufacture of fake driver's licenses and ID cards will have a direct impact on the number of minors who drink and drive, Secretary of State George Ryan said Monday.

Ryan visited Carbondale City Hall Monday to promote "Operation Straight I.D.," a program which aids local law enforcers in spotting and confiscating the fraudulent identification.

"Operations Straight ID's mission is to save lives. People buy fake IDs for one reason — to buy alcohol. Young drivers who hit the bars before they hit the roads are killing themselves and others," Ryan said.

"Statistics clearly show that a minor with a fake ID is an accident

Bar-entry age returns to City Council agenda

By Dean Weaver
City Reporter

The Carbondale City Council tonight will once again discuss the bar-entry age after receiving complaints that the 18-and-a-half entry age will be confusing and ineffective.

The council voted 3-2 Nov. 9 to raise the entry age to 18 and a half, effective July 1 after citizens waiting to happen."

On the street, fake identification often is purchased for about $50 to $150, but there are instances where some have paid up to $400 to "back alley ID mills," Ryan said.

Altering license photos or birthdates, fabricating fake licenses, and impersonating friends expressed concern about high school students in bars.

Mayor Neil Dillard said the council is reconsidering the age because the Liquor Advisory Board still recommends the 19 entry age and the city staff, along with many people from the community, agree.

"Since that time we (the council) have heard it would be difficult to enforce and keep high school students out," Dillard said.

City Manager Jeff Doherty said the council will give serious consideration to raising the age to 19.

"Eighteen and a half will eventually be ineffective because of all the confusion it will cause," Doherty said.

Carbondale is not the only college community struggling with goals are to familiarize local law officials with Illinois' new driver's license design.

The new design, issued since Jan. 1, features a unique two-sided hologram which Ryan describes as tamper-proof.

Professor's life shaken by Los Angeles temblor

By Chris Davies
General Assignment Reporter

Awakened by breaking glass and the screams of tenants being crushed under the collapsing second floor of his apartment building, former SIUC faculty member Charles Lynch was trapped for hours, but lucky to be alive.

"The bed shook for at least a full minute, but it seemed longer and glass shards from a near by window shot across the room just missing the bed by a few feet," Lynch said. "My second-floor apartment suddenly fell through and now sat on what used to be first-floor apartments."

In a phone interview Monday, Lynch recalled the chain of events that took place immediately after the first shock of the California quake that forced him from his home.

"The door to my apartment was jammed and I was trapped for what seemed like forever," Lynch said. "I remember seeing a person pass right by my bedroom window, I knew something was wrong because my apartment is on the second floor."

A former chairman of the SIUC Department of Radio and Television, Lynch moved to Northridge, Calif., to fill a similar position as chairman at California State University.

Musician lives battle against discrimination

Classical pianist Edwin Romain once was unwelcome in concert halls because he is an African American, but the prejudice he now encounters is much more subtle.

"Times are quite different now," Romain said. "I don't think anyone would tell you anymore that you weren't being considered (to perform) because of race."

Years ago, Romain and his partner, Wilfred Delphin, would be told by their manager that certain orchestra associations had said audiences might be offended if too many African Americans performed, Romain said.

Prejudice in Carbondale and at SIUC is less obvious, he said.

"The more educated a person is, the less it shows," Romain said.

Delphin and Romain will deliver the keynote address for Black History Month at 8 tonight in the Student Center Auditorium.

Romain said he is sometimes asked to be on committees to represent the black voice in the community, but said this is not enough to ensure equality.

"If you're interested in more black input, you'll invite more blacks to get input from," Romain said.

By selecting only a few African Americans, groups achieve only token representation, he said.

"They'll say, 'We're open minded; we have you here,' and I'll say, 'No, you're close minded. If you were really open-minded, you'd have more of me here.'"

ISRAELI COURTS OPEN DOOR TO RELIGION

Last week the powers of the religious establishment suffered a setback in two cases brought before Israel's highest court. In one decision, the court opened the way for Israelis from the Reform and Conservative movements in Judaism to serve on municipal religious councils. The Reform and Conservative movements see Jewish law and tradition as adaptable to modern times, and they reject the binding authority of ancient codes of Jewish law that the Orthodox seek to enforce. In the second case, the court called for creation of a committee to study the complaints of the women praying at the Wall, although the judges were so divided that they stopped short of ordering a solution.

CANADIAN TROOPS CAUGHT IN SREBRENICA

The plight of the 150 Canadian infantrymen in Srebrenica, established as a U.N. "Safe area" last April, is one of the most pointed examples of the United Nations' problems in Bosnia. The Canadians are trapped in Srebrenica because the Bosnian Serbs, whose forces surround the U.N. zone, will not let the United Nations send a Dutch unit to replace them. The Dutch want to send 600 men to Srebrenica, a number considered by U.N. officers as the minimum necessary to implement the U.N. safe-area resolution. But Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic has said he will agree only to a "man-for-man, bullet-for-bullet" switch.

PHILIPPINE GENERAL TRIED FOR KIDNAPPING

IOWA GAMBLING LAWS UNDER DEBATE

Iowa, of all places, became the first state outside Nevada and New Jersey to authorize full-scale casino gambling—on riverboats on the Mississippi and Missouri rivers. Three years after the floating casinos began operating on the rivers, this political compromise, which enabled the gambling law to squeak through the state legislature, is under assault, reviving a contentious debate over the extent to which Iowa should rely on gaming for revenue and as a tool to promote tourism and economic development.

PENA RECEIVES PRAISE AFTER QUAKE

From the afternoon of the quake when he was the first Cabinet member on the scene, Transportation Secretary Federico Pena has been a guy on the go: offering suggestions, cutting red tape, approving major projects on the spot, bringing factions together. Within 12 hours of the quake, the Transportation Department had approved the first contract to clear away debris from a freeway interchange, and a contractor was on the scene with heavy equipment. A former mayor of Denver whose strengths include knowledge of how local government works, Pena has scored points in Southern California with politicians from both parties.

CLINTON CUTS FEDERAL WORKERS' JOBS

One in every three federal workers could wind up in a different location, a different job or jobless if the Clinton administration's realignment of the bureaucracy goes as planned. The White House wants a government-wide reduction of 12 percent of the white collar work force, or about 252,000 people, over the next several years. About 100,000 would leave the payroll this year. The cutbacks are supposed to be made without layoffs. But turnover is at a record low: 1.5 percent by retirement and 2.7 percent by resignation. Under the plan, most of the workers who will leave government are longtime managers and supervisors who would take cash buyouts within 12 months. If Congress fails to approve buyouts, cuts will take place, but over a much longer time.

Student waitress serves up smiles

By Melissa Edwards
Entertainment Reporter

Name: Amy Thornton
Hometown: Springfield
Major: Psychology
Year: Senior
Job: Waitress at Garfield's
Hobbies: Gardening, cooking and reading

Amy Thornton, a senior in psychology from Springfield, serves customers at Garfield's with food and a friendly smile. She balances her waitressing job with classes at SIUC.

SIUC student Amy Thornton has a tired smile. Trying to keep a wayward strand of hair in place, she speaks in an extremely friendly manner, but after a busy shift, she is anxious to slow the pace.

"They were the sweetest couple," she said, which in waitress lingo refers to a couple who has left an appropriate tip.

Thornton, a senior in psychology from Springfield, is a waitress at Garfield's in the University Mall in Carbondale. This is her first semester back in school after a year layoff.

When asked why she decided to return to school, she laughs.

"(The time off) has given me a real appreciation for what its like to work full-time," she said.

Thornton has worked for Garfield's almost a year, and trying to combine working with school has been a challenge, she said.

"I was such a night person," she said. "Now I have 9 a.m. classes — and I'm trying to adjust my sleep schedule," she said. She normally works between 20 to 25 hours a week, but last week she worked 30.

"Everyone asked off for the Super bowl," she said.

She also tries to find time to spend with her boyfriend of four and a half years. They live together in a house he recently bought, and Thornton spends much of her spare time doing home of financial need, Willis said. Single apartment or home dwellers can qualify if they earn less than $726 a month; two dwellers can qualify if both earn less than $982 monthly and three roommates can qualify if all earn less than $1,238 monthly.

The end of cold weather may be months away, but for students who live off campus, dreaded utility bills will arrive earlier.

For some students, winter electric bills may not be a problem, but for others, the Western Egyptian Economic Opportunity Council offers energy assistance grants to help make ends meet.

Janey Willis, spokeswoman for the council, said students who pay most of their rent and bills with a part-time job salary would be eligible for energy assistance.

The Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program provides federal funds for renters or homeowners who qualify. Energy-assistance grants are necessary especially during winter months when utility costs often are highest, Willis said.

"For many students, the program would help free up money that could be used for something else," Willis said. "Many are working part time to pay bills, and (the program) could help them get through the winter a lot easier."

Applicants can qualify on basis of financial need, Willis said. Single apartment or home dwellers can qualify if they earn less than $726 a month; two dwellers can qualify if both earn less than $982 monthly and three roommates can qualify if all earn less than $1,238 monthly.

The program can help students, but the majority of its users are low-income families, Willis said. "For many low-income families, high utility rates often mean the difference between eating and paying bills," Willis said. "Inflation and utility rates are rising, and some families can't keep up with it."

According to Western Egyptian Economic Opportunity Council statistics, 2,215 households in Jackson, Monroe, Perry and Randolph counties have received grants. Of these, 68 have received emergency assistance, which is given when a utility company threatens to disconnect service.

Willis said this is likely to fit the budgets of students off campus that have minimum-wage campus jobs.

Willis said interested applicants need to supply a social security

Administrator, women take safety walk

By Emily Priddy
Administration Reporter

An SIUC administrator will join the Women's Caucus for a walking tour on campus this evening to observe security precautions firsthand.

Linda Benz, SIUC institutional research project coordinator, said the caucus invited James A. Tweedy, vice president for administration, to join them on the tour to see what areas on campus are safe and where improvement may be needed.

Tweedy said SIUC administrators are aware of women's safety concerns and have responded to them with police foot patrols, special safety-education programs and extra campus lighting.

"We invest a lot in preventing (dangerous) things from happening," he said. "I think we have worked hard to improve the safety of the campus. We have nearly 200 more lights burning on the campus than we did a year ago."

Tweedy said extra safety measures are expensive but important for SIUC students.

"We've done a remarkable job at a time of budgetary constraints to help make (the campus) a safer place," he said.

Tweedy said he thinks SIUC is at least as safe as any other campus in the United States, but students still should use common sense in potentially risky situations.

"I would not encourage anyone to walk alone late at night. I think that our campus is a very safe campus, but that doesn't mean that there couldn't be accidents."

Tweedy urged students, especially women, to take advantage of campus-safety services such as the night safety van and Brightway Paths.

Benz said although the tour has been difficult to arrange because of conflicting schedules and inclement weather, she is impressed with Tweedy's cooperation and appreciates his concern.

Clinton's reform talk could result in action

A WEEK AFTER PRESIDENT BILL CLINTON'S State of the Union address, the dust has settled and the time for change has arrived. During his 65-minute speech, the president outlined a broad and optimistic social and domestic agenda that includes health care reform, welfare reform, job training programs and a tougher stance on crime. During the rest of his term, the president will have the opportunity to make his vision unfold.

In a sharp departure from the Reagan and Bush years, Clinton proposed revolutionary changes in government that may give the phrase "a kinder and gentler nation" real meaning. A universal health care plan could provide a sense of security to millions of uninsured Americans. Job training programs could give hope to displaced workers confronting an increasingly technical workplace. Security has become a national priority.

But Clinton's support of welfare reform and crime control were more reminiscent of past Republican positions. Welfare reform could cut through government waste while restoring the dignity of unemployed recipients. A tougher stance on crime, theoretically, could keep dangerous felons of the streets and honest citizens in control of their neighborhoods. The president's centrist positions on these issues show he is not the "typical" tax and spend liberal Democrat so often criticized by Republicans.

ALTHOUGH FEW PEOPLE AGREE ON SPECIFIC solutions to health care reform, most people in Congress agree that a problem exists. Millions of Americans lack adequate health insurance, but cannot afford high medical costs. Clinton's threat to veto any health care bill that does not provide universal coverage could make passing the legislation difficult. But the president's willingness to compromise on other areas of health care reform may get him the votes needed to accomplish the goal.

Job training programs combine pragmatic conservative values with liberal ideals. The plan is to fund programs that help misplaced workers learn the skills needed to function in an increasingly technical workplace. Many Republicans hate the idea of increasing funding for social programs, but like the idea of keeping people off the unemployment rolls. Most Democrats support some type of job training, so it will probably happen.

Revising the welfare system poses a different problem for the president. Democratic leaders in the House and Senate, not feisty Republicans, jeopardize his reform plans. Recent polls have shown public support for welfare reform exists, but getting Congressional support may be difficult.

Perhaps the easiest sell on Clinton's list is approving tougher anti-crime legislation. Bi-partisan support exists for stricter anti-crime laws. However, it remains to be seen if the laws will do more than give lip service.

MAKING THE SPEECH WAS THE EASY PART. Delivering the goods will be the challenge. But, with a Democratic majority in both the House of Representatives and the Senate, the broad goals outlined in the address seem within reach.

Library and lake lacking lights

I am writing to two articles in the DE on night safety. The articles were printed on Jan. 20 and Jan. 21, they were titled "University officials dispute night safety issue" and "Student safety precautions, awareness vital in daily life", respectively. The administration cited in the articles talk about students having "a false sense of security" when walking around the SIUC campus. I do not believe there is "a false sense of security", but rather no sense of security. Many times, I have left a night class and gone outside into total darkness. The paths are lined with lamp posts that contain burned out bulbs and the areas that are lit seem to be dim and lined with bushes. The problem is not only with the lake area, but also the main campus. Perhaps the University should not have night classes if it cannot supply adequate safety precautions such as lighting. Services on campus such as the library which is open late at night are also in poorly lit areas. The main paths leading to the two main library entrances are very dimly lit and the walkways have bushes alongside them.

I found the example (in the Jan. 21st article) of the woman who accepts a ride from someone who wants her parking space resulting in attempted assault to be an unfair and inaccurate generalization of women on this campus. I do not think women on this campus feel "a false sense security" nor do I think anyone is safe when walking on campus at night. Lights, in addition to the Night Safety Van and self-defense classes are necessary safety precautions.

State should support athletics

I write to urge my fellow students to take the time to vote on the increase in student fees for athletics. I ask that you vote down the proposed increase and send a message to the State of Illinois, the Administration, and the Board of Trustees, "we already pay too much money!" No more!

We students are being asked to take on the burden of the cost of athletics here at SIUC. Nothing has changed in the last few years to warrant such action. The burden correctly belongs with the State of Illinois and the tax payer.

Illinois exports a very high percentage of it's high school grades to other states. If the State of Illinois cannot see the wisdom of keeping their Universities' competitive with other states, then neither should it be a concern of the students of SIUC, and certainly there is no reason why we should be paying for it.

Few of us get to participate in the athletic program at SIUC. The Board of Trustees didn't pay too much attention to the program until they found out that they might have to start paying for it. Had they paid closer attention perhaps SIUC wouldn't be suffering from a coaching staff who can't get the job done.

There is one indisputable fact. The demographics to support the kind of program needed to succeed without state funding doesn't exist here in Southern Illinois. It never has and never will. If the athletic program is to succeed it must be moved to a demographic area that can support it. A metropolitan area. The only one available to the University is the Edwardsville Campus. Just don't ask the students to pay for something the state should be paying. Please Vote No on the New Fee!

Student wants available care reviewed, fixed

I'm writing regarding an article in the Jan. 25th DE "Few day care options available for students". I was very excited to finally see this issue addressed in your publication, however the points which were brought up merely scratched the surface of this issue.

First allow me to say that Karin McClure was very fortunate that she has family nearby who are not only willing, but also financially able to assist in caring for her child. There are those of us who are single parents with no family near to lend assistance. SIU certainly doesn't make our ability to attend study sessions or final exams any easier by scheduling them in the evening, well after conventional day care centers are closed.

My second point is the fact that Rainbows End is not a participant in the Title XX program. Even though their rates are on a sliding scale, for students to afford them is at best a financial burden. Should Rainbows End participate in title XX their rates could be as low as .50 cents per week.

As a non-traditional student I have faced many injustices at SIU, but the lack of concern over child care facilities and cost is certainly one of the worst.

Correction

The letter written by Sara Supancic concerning animal rights that appeared in the Letters to the Editor section on Monday, January 31, 1994 was incomplete.

Points two and three of the letter should have read: "2. Dairy cows do not produce 49 gallons of milk a day, but more like 55 lbs. which is roughly 7 gallons. 3. It does not take 16 lbs. of grain to produce 1 lb. of meat, but only 6-8 lbs."

Seal of Illinois on the other. Among security features of the new design are: the hologram cannot be duplicated; the hologram will burst if anyone tries to alter it or if the laminate is cut or punctured; the laminates are numbered and can be traced; and the date of birth and expiration date are highlighted.

Ryan said although the new licenses were issued beginning Jan. 1, it will be four years before all Illinois citizens will be converted to the new design.

As a matter of law, it is illegal to display or possess another person's license or identification as one's own. The Secretary of State's Office warns it will revoke driving privileges if an individual is convicted of presenting false identification.

To make processing and prosecution of these offenses expedient, Ryan has developed a database in the Chicago office specifically to handle identification-fraud cases.

Ryan said he is confident the operation will have significant results. "We have the enforcement record. We have a new, tamper-proof license. And we've enacted tougher minimum penalties for the possession and use of a fake driver's license," he said.

Carbondale Police Chief Donald Strom said he believes the issue of fake identification especially is relevant in Carbondale.

"This represents a substantial problem, but we have trained bar owners and retail liquor establishments over the years to try to combat the problem," Strom said.

"There are a variety of options to crack down on this problem which include suspending a license for up to 12 months, substantial fines and also the option of community service sentences.

Strom said Ryan's visit is also symbolically noteworthy.

"Today is significant because it represents a renewed partnership between state and local police officials."

Ken Cowgill, manager of the state community liaison division said that the crackdown is likely to show a ripple effect.

"When you start taking some fake IDs and get them off the streets, word gets around really quick," he said.

bar-entry age. Macomb City Attorney Jim Lee said the Macomb City Council, home of Western Illinois University, voted 5-1 Jan. 24 to direct the city attorney to draft an ordinance to raise the bar-entry age from 18 to 21.

Lee said the council also directed him to draft ordinances on keg registration and increased penalties for ordinance violators.

The college communities of De Kalb and Bloomington already have a 21 bar-entry age. Charleston and Champaign have a 19 entry age, but that could change quickly, city officials said.

Champaign has had two of the three Liquor Advisory Commission meetings to discuss alternatives to raising the entry age to 21.

According to the Champaign City Council, if the commission does not come up with some good solutions to halt the under-age drinking problem, they will raise the age to 21.

Bobby Smith, speaker of the senate at Eastern Illinois University, said Charleston Mayor Dan Coughl will raise the city's entry age to 21 if Champaign goes 21.

"They are afraid the city will be flooded by college students from Champaign," Smith said.

Carbondale Councilman Richard Morris, who made the 18-and-a-half entry age motion Nov. 9, said he thinks the 19 entry age will pass tonight.

"I made the motion for 18 and a half because I wanted the 18 age but did not want high school students in the bars. I think the 19 age will be more effective," Morris said. Councilwoman Maggie Flanagan said the longer underage people can be kept out of the bars the better.

"I did not vote for the 18-and-a-half entry age in November, and I favor the 19 entry age for now," Flanagan said. "I don't think we can raise it more than 19; maybe we will push for more next year."

Councilman John Yow also said he would like to see the entry age raised to at least 19.

"I do not see where 18 and a half does anybody any good because it's confusing. I will support 19 and in a year we can reevaluate to see how effective it has been and evaluate the results of other universities going to 21," Yow said.

Councilman John Mills said initially he supported the 18-and-a-half entry age because he did not want to keep college kids out of bars, but now he supports the 19 age.

"The town still has a problem on Halloween weekends and the party image has not gone away," Mills said. "The 19 age will be easier to enforce."

Mills said the Undergraduate Student Government and the Graduate Professional Student Council need to look at alternatives and bring them to the council.

"The ball is in their court, maybe disciplinary action should be taken on campus," Mills said.

USG president Mike Spiwak said he does not see the purpose in raising the age to 19.

"Eighteen and a half will keep the high school kids out, but I am afraid it will go 19," Spiwak said.

The council meets at 7 p.m. in the City Council Chambers at 609 E. College St.

Romain said this token representation perhaps is most evident during Black History Month.

"Some organizations hire black artists only in February," he said. "If you'll look at the series (of some performance-hall programs) and there are no other (African-American) artists, that says something very loudly about February."

Although this subtle discrimination was evident throughout his and his partner Wilfred Delphin's, career, he never let himself become discouraged, Romain said.

Any time they were told a performance hall already had met its quota of hiring minority musicians, Romain said he and Delphin simply would move on to the next show.

Delphin said the discrimination experiences he and Romain encountered in the United States were not unique.

"There's not a black person in the United States who hasn't felt discriminated against, but it's not something you allow to defeat you," Delphin said.

Too many students allow social pressures to determine their career choices, he said.

Delphin recalled a former student who decided that because he was a black male interested in classical music, he would not be successful.

Too many African-American students drop out of college after their freshman or sophomore year because they do not have a clear focus on their dreams or the confidence to pursue them, Delphin said.

Flynn seeking governorship

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—Ray Flynn, the former mayor of Boston and U.S. ambassador to the Vatican, says he's looking seriously at challenging Massachusetts Gov. William Weld (R) this year but won't formally announce a decision until St. Patrick's Day.

Flynn, who quit in the middle of his third term as mayor to accept President Clinton's offer to be the Vatican envoy — a job he has tried to expand well beyond the borders of the Vatican, even beyond the borders of Italy — was back in Boston late last week taking some soundings and told reporters there is "more than a 50-50 chance I will run."

Just for the record, Weld doesn't seem intimidated.

In an interview during the NGA meeting, Weld brushed aside the speculation about Flynn by saying, "I don't think he's going to get in."

UNIVERSITY CAREER SERVICES PRESENTS: THE TOP TEN REASONS TO USE THE TOTAL SCHEDULING SYSTEM (TSS)

- 10) Avoid the Woody Hall shuffle. Use your touch tone phone from your home, car, plane, boat.
- 9) Schedule interviews with companies recruiting at University Career Services. ("No more waiting in line, I can do it from my touch tone phone at home.")
- 8) Verify company interview dates and times by touch tone phone. (No more, "Hey, I forgot!")
- 7) Access the Total Scheduling system for upcoming UCS workshops and special events. (Don't be a chicken, use the phone!)
- 6) Leave messages for your assigned placement counselor via TSS! ("Hey, my cover letter is six pages long. Is that a problem?")
- 5) Check the testing date and time of the GRE. ("Grad school, here I come!")
- 4) Learn more about upcoming career fairs by accessing the Total Scheduling System. ("Gee, I didn't realize there were six annual career fairs.")
- 3) Hear a listing of resume workshops with dates and times. ("You mean I have to write my own resume?")
- 2) One of the best ways for you to uncover job leads.
- 1) Access critical job related information 24 hours a day, seven days a week, via touch tone phone. ("I can access the system from anywhere in the United States!")

Quartet to open Shryock spring series

By Bob Chiarfo
Entertainment Reporter

Classical rifts will be echoing through Shryock Auditorium Wednesday night as The Vermeer Quartet will be featured as the first performers in the Shryock Celebrity series.

The Celebrity series will also feature acts in the future such as Russian dancers Tziganka on February 13, Cabaret on February 28, The BalletMet on April 15, and Cloris LaChman as Grandma Moses on April 21, SIUC publicist Michelle Suarez said. Since the quartet formed at the 1970 Marlboro Music Festival, they have achieved world-wide recognition as one of the world's foremost chamber ensembles.

Their elite status in the music field has given them the opportunity to play at some of the most prestigious festivals in the world. According to International Creative Management Artists, LTD; the quartet has played at Tanglewood, Aldeburgh, Mostly

Vermeer Quartet

Mozart, Aspen, Bath, Flanders, Berlin and the Spioeto festivals.

Quartet members are on the resident artist faculty of Northern Illinois University at Dekalb and give annual master classes at the Royal Northern College of Music in Manchester, England. Although the quartet makes their home in Chicago, they come from vastly different cultural backgrounds.

Violinist Samuel Ashkenasi was born in Israel and has performed with many of the leading orchestras in the United States, Europe, the former Soviet Union and Japan, said ICM.

Viola player Richard Young, originally from New York. He won a special award in the Rockefeller Foundation American Music Competition.

Cellist Marc Johnson, from Lincoln, Neb., studied at the Eastman School of Music with Ronald Leonard. He also studied at Indiana University while he was the youngest member of the Rochester Philharmonic.

Violinist Mathias Tacke, is from Bremen, Germany. Among his countless honors is first prize in the Jugend Musiziert National Competition.

"I'm learning to become domestic," she said. "I think I'll enjoy it once I'm good at it."

She also enjoys cooking, gardening and reading, listing as her favorite authors John Grisham and Andrew Greeley.

But Garfield's shapes her life, she said.

She has been a waitress for seven years, and said the most frustrating part is that the worst tippers often demand the best service.

"Fifteen percent is not the norm," she said. "Dinner would cost so much more if (waitresses did not receive tips)."

Thornton is a shift leader at Garfield's, which means she is one of eight or nine servers who get the better sections and always close the restaurant.

The Carbondale Garfield's has been very successful since its opening in 1992. Out of 40 nationwide, it is second in sales.

she said.

It is one of the only moderately priced restaurants in Carbondale, and that is why they have been so successful, she said.

Although Garfield's has been a good job, she said she would like to graduate and get a "real" job.

She almost has completed her bachelor's degree, but will have to remain at SIUC for a few more semesters because she is working on a minor in English and a teaching certificate.

She said she hopes to teach either high school or junior high, but would like to remain in Illinois.

Wherever she ends up, however, she is certain of one thing in her life.

"I'm so happy I'm back in school," she said.

Thornton jumps up again, seating a another couple who has just walked in the door. Her steps quicken, and the tiredness vanishes, replaced by a professional smile.

number, copies of their most recent utility bills and proof of gross income for 30 days before an application date.

Grant amounts vary with the number of household residents, income and utility costs. The system is established so that those with the lowest incomes receive the most grant money, which can last several months according to the amount of utility costs, she said.

For more information, applicants may call 1-800-252-8643 from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Clinton plans for schools

Los Angeles Times
WASHINGTON—The Clinton administration's ambitious plan to channel more money toward school districts with large numbers of poor students is faltering and a glimpse of where it might be headed could come Tuesday in a key congressional hearing.

The debate will begin in earnest as a subcommittee of the House Committee on Education and Labor begins its review of the multi-billion-dollar program.

SIUC students trade books for cleaning supplies, tools

By Marc Chase
Law School Reporter

SIUC law students broke away from the books last weekend to help future communities in the second annual National Work-A-Day.

Volunteer work crews from the law school cleaned the Good Samaritan House and provided laborers for the Habitat for Humanity Food Pantry and GTE phone book recycling program in Carbondale.

Law school Dean Harry Haynsworth said the school is pleased with the students' efforts.

"This (Work-A-Day) is a good way of providing opportunities for students to do good things in the community," Haynsworth said. "It also prepares them to carry over community service when they get out into the law field."

Adam Fleischer, national chairman for Work-A-Day, said the program was started last year at the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana to give law students a chance to reach out to their communities.

"(National Work-A-Day) is to encourage future lawyers to become acquainted with their communities and with social problems that deserve legal attention," Fleischer, who also is a third-year law student, said. "This is not intended to be a flash in the pan," he said. "It is done one day a year, but through participation in Work-A-Day, students get exposure that hopefully turns into a continuing relationship with community groups."

First-year law student Karen Meade said SIUC law students who participated in the event feel good about serving the community and appreciate the overall experience of the program.

"It makes you feel good to get out in the community," Meade said. "It's nice to know that maybe we (the law students) are making at least a little bit of a difference."

Sometimes people at all levels forget about the needs and issues of their communities, Derek Hirohata, first year law student, said.

"It's great to give something back to the community," Hirohata said. "I think something is lost when students come to law school and focus on ideas and philosophies that are laid out for them...it is good to be reminded that we should be involved in community service."

The American Bar Association awarded the U of I School of Law the 1993 Public Interest Outstanding School Award for its role in organizing last year's Work-A-Day program.

Free health lectures offered

Student Center Special Programs to present healthy hints

By Jamie Madigan
Entertainment Reporter

Just in time to revive those flagging New Year's resolutions, Student Center Special Programs is offering a series of free informative lectures on topics such as diets, stress reduction and relationships.

Joanne Yantis, University Programming coordinator, said the Lunch-time Presentations are at noon, every Tuesday through March 8 in the Student Center's Ohio Room.

Yantis said the presentation topics were chosen by what is current and popular.

"I did some investigating and surveys," she said.

"I also looked at magazines and talk shows to see what was current."

Yantis said she also had input from the SIUC Wellness Center, the Counseling Center, and Intramural-Recreational Sports, co-sponsors of the presentations.

Yantis said some programs will contain important health information.

"The key is knowing these things to stay healthy," she said.

Yantis said once topics were chosen, sponsors looked for qualified people to speak.

"We looked for people with expertise," she said.

"The key is knowing these things to stay healthy."

—Joanne Yantis

Lynn Schenk, a graduate student in food and nutrition, will give today's presentation.

"It's called 'Why diets don't work,'" Schenk said.

"We'll cover the various traps that dieters fall into."

Schenk said changing eating habits is more effective than dieting.

"It (dieting) is just a short term thing," she said. "People just go back to their unhealthy eating habits."

Yantis said last week's presentation attracted more faculty and staff than students, and she would like to see more students attend these lectures.

"These programs were designed with students in mind," she said.

Schenk said it is important for students to have this information.

"A great percentage of the students (attending the lecture) have been on some kind of diet," she said.

"It's important for them to learn healthy eating habits. We need to stop the diet cycle."

Talk-show host deletes violent outburst from broadcast; sensationalism blamed

Newsday

NEW YORK—No violence and sensationalism for the "Sally Jessy Raphael" talk show, no sir.

A slapping, kicking fight between serial killer Richard Ramirez's fiancée and a woman who has developed a "relationship" with him since he has been in jail was deleted from the program to be broadcast Tuesday.

QVC, Viacom resume battle for Paramount

Newsday

NEW YORK—As football fans and the Buffalo Bills learned Sunday, you can't call a game at halftime.

It's no different on the corporate playing field, where Viacom Inc. and QVC Network continue to skirmish for control of Paramount Communications Inc.

For the moment, Viacom, the cable TV programmer headed by Sumner Redstone, is leading, with a bid that both traders and the Paramount board prefer. But both players have until 5 p.m. EST Tuesday—dubbed "Super Tuesday"—to come back with their best and final offers to shareholders of the entertainment and publishing giant.

"My sense is that QVC will do something. They've worked with the banks for more financing, and I just don't see the story ending this easily," said David Boczar, an analyst at New Japan Securities International U.S.

"We're all glued to the wires waiting to hear something," said a Paramount source. One Wall Street trader said he wouldn't make any decision on tendering his shares, still expecting a new round of bidding Tuesday.

Indeed, the Paramount takeover saga—now into its fifth month—is like an endless TV miniseries. Even the most ardent watchers seem thankful end is near.

The so-called California "Nightstalker," Ramirez was convicted of committing 13 murders in the mid-1980s. The outburst was "too violent and sensational," the show's executive producer Rose Mary Henri said in a press release Monday.

The broadcast "examines the increasing tendency of some people to glamorize and be attracted to such serial killers as Jeffrey Dahmer and Charles Manson, she said.

Some people. Not Sally, though.

flights and to relieve a beleaguered Canadian peacekeeping unit, Secretary of State Warren Christopher said Monday.

By offering seemingly unqualified backing for Brucos-Ghali's plan, Christopher drew the United States a step closer to combat operations in the Balkans.

The secretary-general said last Friday that he was ready to call for allied air strikes to punish Serb guerrillas if they interfere with U.N. efforts to rotate the U.N. garrison at Srebrenica or to reopen the airport at Tuzla. Both towns are crowded with desperate Muslim refugees who have fled fighting elsewhere in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

"We've endorsed that report," Christopher told reporters.

"That could lead to the use of air power if there's not an agreement for the replacement of the Canadian troops at Srebrenica or for the opening of the airport at Tuzla."

President Clinton and German Chancellor Helmut Kohl discussed the Bosnia conflict Monday during a 90-minute working lunch at an Italian restaurant in Washington's Georgetown neighborhood.

But U.S. officials discouraged speculation that the discussion, or talks scheduled for later this week with British and European Union leaders, were aimed at forging a new policy to counter French efforts to pressure the Muslim-led Bosnian government into accepting a peace settlement that would ratify territorial gains registered by Serb and Croat militias during the bloody ethnic war.

and served as an instructor in radio-television for 12 years, and was chairman of the department for five years.

He said he has experienced the minor earthquakes of Southern Illinois before, but nothing could have prepared him for a disaster of such magnitude.

The earthquake, registering 6.6 on the Richter scale, hit Northridge at about 4:35 a.m. Jan. 17, damaging power lines and leaving 100,000 people without water and electricity.

"I consider myself lucky," he said. "This was the most scary experience of my life and I came through without a scratch."

But at least 16 others died in the quake that demolished Lynch's 163 unit apartment building.

At least 400 people were left homeless when the second and third floors of the building came crashing down on ground floor tenants, trapping many and crushing others.

Lynch said if it were not for a flashlight he would have been trapped.

"After I got myself together, I managed to find a flashlight and shine it out of my window," he said.

"Luckily, someone saw and helped me crawl out over my balcony railing to safety."

Like many other victims, the earthquake destroyed most of Lynch's possessions, leaving him with only a flashlight, battery-powered radio and some medication.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency said it expected to spend about $1 billion on quake repairs throughout the state.

Lynch said his experience after the quake could have been more harsh had it not been for local residents' quick reaction and willingness to get involved and help out.

"An off-duty mailman who delivers mail to my building heard what had happened and came to assist in the rescue of tenants and get us to phones so we could get help," he said.

"If it were not for him things could have been much worse."

Unlike 20,000 other victims who spent Monday night camping in recreation parks, Lynch stayed in a local high school converted into a shelter by the Red Cross.

More than 300 people covered the high school's gymnasium floor that night, Lynch said.

"There were 300 of us crammed in together all of us sitting right next to each other," he said.

"In order to eat I had to stand in line with over 1,200 other people and wait to be served."

After five days in the Red Cross shelter, Lynch managed to arrange transportation to his second house in Kalamazoo, Mich. Residents still are experiencing aftershocks, with one being as high as 5.0 on the Richter scale last weekend.

Academy cheating scandal has Navy examining school

The Washington Post

It was a dismal week, capping a dismal year at the U.S. Navy Academy. After a string of tragedies—the deaths of graduates in a murder-suicide and of midshipmen in car accidents—the school now is devastated by its own massive failure.

A report released Monday described the cheating scandal in the elite school's 149-year history.

No one, from the greenest plebe to the highest brass, came away unscathed by the chronicle of lying and coverup that made a mockery of the academy's sacred Honor Concept: "Midshipmen do not lie, cheat or steal."

"It leaves me sad," said Richard L. Armitage, a former State Department official and 1967 academy graduate. "It's a depressed feeling; even the weather over there adds to it: It's gloomy."

Many of us who have been in the Defense Department hierarchy feel like we let down the home team a little bit by not trying harder over the years to preserve the shrine of our honor," said Armitage, who serves on the civilian Board of Visitors, which oversees the academy.

After the report, parents flooded the school with phone calls, trying to determine whether their children would be expelled.

The academy's superintendent, Rear Adm. Thomas C. Lynch, singled out for criticism in the report, would not give interviews. And midshipmen, under strict orders to avoid the news media, would say only that the whole affair had left them emotionally exhausted.

"Since last spring, the morale around here has been the worst I've ever seen it," said a professor who has taught at the academy for more than a decade. "Now, with all these seniors waiting to see if they'll be (expelled), it's like a funeral."

The venerable school, which produced former President Jimmy Carter and other national leaders, is also, according to the Navy inspector general's report, the academy where 133 students cheated on the tough electrical engineering exam in 1992. Later, many of them steadfastly lied and colluded to cover up their involvement, the report says.

What's more, the report says top officials mishandled the investigation and fostered a widespread impression of favoritism toward football players who cheated.

As copies of the report filtered into the academy's small, walled campus, the finger-pointing began.

A senior athlete, who was not among those accused of cheating, criticized school officials, saying their leadership has left the students in a state of ethical "confusion."

"This place is screwed up, just the way it was handled," the midshipman said, referring to allegations that the investigation was halfhearted and plagued by favoritism.

Lynch, for his part, defended his actions, saying "the buck stops with the individual midshipman."

"He said he felt we'd let him down, betrayed him," said a member of this year's senior class, recalling Lynch's briefing on the report Monday to the senior class. "It was depressing."

Appalling as it was, the report was something of a relief after a year of grumbling and whispering about a coverup.

Perhaps the lowest point came last April, when Lynch faced the entire 4,200-member brigade with the results of the initial investigation: Only six of the 11 students recommended for expulsion by midshipmen-run "honor boards" would be expelled, and all five football players had been cleared by top-level academy officials.

Midshipmen began snickering, jeering and chanting the nickname of a student believed to have received the most blatant special break—a football player whose father is a close friend of Lynch's. The football player, whose expulsion was recommended by honor boards, was cleared by Lynch's second-in-command, Capt. John B. Padgett.

Outrage among midshipmen and civilian faculty mounted after word got around that the administration had failed to act on a midshipman's letter implicating football players who had been cleared by honor boards.

Stats found off record

Los Angeles Times

ATLANTA—Highs and lows from Super Bowl XXVIII you won't find on any game sheet:

Best reported offer for a ticket: $2,000.

Best attempt to get a ticket: A woman standing outside the Georgia Dome just prior to game time held up a sign that read, "Need five free tickets. I'm from Raleigh-Durham." When last spotted, she was still five tickets short.

Best ticket scam: Some fans, desperate for tickets, were willing to buy media credentials.

Unfortunately, they turned out to be counterfeit.

Best Super Bowl week shopping spree: Donya

McKeller, wife of Buffalo Bill tight end Keith McKeller, spent $2,690 on clothes and several accessories in a mere seven minutes.

Best news of Super Sunday: Fan Man was a no-show. The paraglider who had already disrupted a heavyweight fight and a Los Angeles Raider game, had promised to invade Super Bowl XXVIII. Maybe he didn't know at the time that the game was indoors.

Best postgame question: A man with a media credential walked by a booth where the Bills' Thurman Thomas was speaking. "Who's he?" the man asked.

Second-best question: Told it was Thurman Thomas, the man said, "Who does he play for?"

Bills fans keep faith after 4th loss, plan to watch Buffalo in next Bowl

Newsday

ATLANTA—You shovel your driveway on Saturday, on Sunday it's buried in snow again.

Al Saj has been through the drill countless times during his 46 years in Buffalo, so the Bills' defeat Sunday — their fourth Super Bowl loss in as many years — was just another gray day in January.

"Hey, we're tough," he said. "If we can put up with those winters, we can take anything. Bills fans will be back."

Jimmy McCarthy of South Buffalo drove to Atlanta to watch his team battle for the world championship. He paid $650 for a ticket.

"It's like buying a ticket to the New York State Lottery," said McCarthy, who works at a tool-and-die factory. "You take a little risk, because the potential for a payoff is so great. It's the same thing for Bills' fans."

Anyone who ever rooted for Willie Loman in "Death of a Salesman" the Christians against the Lions, or the Jets can empathize with the Bills' status as underdog.

But the city of Buffalo has been so maligned for so long, that the Bills play an unusually prominent role in the Western New York city's civic psyche.

The Buffalo economy was gutted by the collapse of the American heavy industry, its population drained by 30 percent since 1970. And every year, residents must endure those winters.

But talk to any Bills fan, there is the sense that a Super Bowl victory would miraculously transform their town into an Eden on Lake Erie.

"Of course people get a little over-excited about the Bills," said Dean Russell of the Buffalo suburb of Arcade. "At least they're to be psyched about."

Throughout the small city of loading docks, corner bars and tidy gray churches, the team's blue-collar values of hard-work, grit and perseverance are viewed as mythical inspiration.

At least one area priest wears a Bills emblem on his vestments. Last week, TV and radio stations interspersed Bills news with the report: "Good news for the local employment picture. Kenny Rogers' Chicken is coming to Buffalo, creating 400 fast-food jobs."

"Hey, when the Bills have bad seasons, no one talks about us at all," Saj said. "The Bills may make us feel a little queasy that one Sunday a year. But they put us on the map."

The problem with linking your fortunes to an underdog is that underdogs usually lose. American culture has little sympathy for losers, but Bills fans such as Gary Puffpaff are fated to a more difficult challenge: Accepting defeat gracefully. And never, ever, giving up.

"People will be bummed for a week or two, then they'll start to feel better, and by the time summer rolls around and the preseason is here, the stadium will be packed," said Puffpaff, a schoolteacher whose devotion to the team earned him a local TV show.

"So we've lost four straight. Have you ever heard the phrase, Strive for Five?"

Randy says that age difference, experience and their typical brother-to-brother relationship are the reasons why they have never gone head-to-head.

"The age difference was always big," Randy said. "When he was in college, I never really talked to him and once I came here he was done swimming."

Would the two ever want to compete against each other?

"Not really," Randy said. "I'd just like to beat him in the 200 back."

THERE'S SOMETHING ABOUT A TRAIN THAT'S MAGIC.

NBC's Super Bowl telecast on target from start to finish

Newsday

ATLANTA—Blessed with a close game until the fourth quarter at the Georgia Dome, NBC responded with a peach of a telecast.

Although the network was almost overlooked in the past month because of the departure of CBS Sports and the appearance of Fox on the football scene, NBC closed out its NFL season Sunday with a solid array of sights and sounds.

All week, NBC commentators, especially Mike Ditka, warned that turnovers could destroy the Bills, as happened last year. Sunday, after a sluggish start, the Dallas Cowboys put Super Bowl

XXVIII away by scoring 17 points off three turnovers.

Throughout the surprising first half and especially when the momentum changed on Thurman Thomas' second fumble in the third quarter and MVP Emmitt Smith began to run wild, NBC stayed on top of the shifting action.

"That was a huge plus for the Buffalo morale," play-by-play man Dick Enberg said after the Bills stopped the Cowboys with three minutes left in the third quarter to keep the score at 20-13. But moments later, when the Bills blew a drive with dropped passes, Enberg said, "Again, the mistakes are all on the Bills' side."

Producer John Faratzis and director John Gonzales provided mistake-free pictures, showing key replays and especially contrasting emotional shots of Thomas and Smith on the sidelines early in the second half. And of course, the obligatory Gatorade plotting and dumping in the closing moments, captured by a roof camera. Cowboys Coach Jimmy Johnson's hair stayed in place even after the bucket itself hit him.

"I thought we had a good telecast," Faratzis said. "Last year, by the middle of the second quarter, the outcome was evident. Today, it was only a one-touchdown game at the end of the third quarter."

consolation bracket in the sixth flight of the singles tournament. No. 1 flight doubles action saw Salukis Andre Goransson and Juan Garcia make it so the semifinals.

"Kei played a very good match," Rowan said.

"He has won a lot of matches for me and will improve as he plays more tennis."

The Salukis finished in third place last season in the Missouri Valley Conference and are looking to build on that mark after the loss of their top two players to graduation.

"We are a very young team," Rowan said. "There is a whole season to improve on this tournament."

Drake and Wichita State racked up the most individual winners with the Shockers leaving a strong impression on Rowan.

"Wichita State impressed me more than Drake," Rowan said. "We definitely have to go after those two schools in our conference."

The Salukis season opening meet is against Austin Peay on Feb. 4, in Clarksville, Tenn.

Herrin said it wasn't just basketball ability that sold him on the Minnesota native.

"Adam is a great young man who knows his role with us," the eight-year Saluki head coach said. "He's polite, he's nice, and he'll do anything we ask him to. He is definitely good for our basketball team. We need two or three players like him every year."

Knewton's statistics don't rival those of Marcus Timmons, Chris Carr or even fellow walk-on Patrick Greathouse.

Knewton has seen action against Tampa, Ole Miss and Southeast Missouri State for a grand total of six minutes, while attempting only two shots (unsuccessfully) from the floor.

But just being able to run up and down the court at full speed was in doubt only four years ago.

A 1988 Minnesota skiing accident the day after his last game of his sophomore season, which resulted in a severely broken leg and intense surgery, almost cut his basketball career short. The mishap kept Knewton out of action his entire junior season at Maple River High School (enrollment 375) where he teamed with his twin brother, and 6' 3" Maple River guard, Aaron Knewton. As seniors the two led their high school to a 26-2 record. The squad fell one game short of Minnesota state tournament participation after they lost to Fairmont 96-88 in the regional championship game.

"I guess I could have been out longer, but I just kept telling myself I could make it back," he said. "The more people tell me I can't do something, the more I want to prove them wrong."

"Adam is a great young man who knows his role with us... He is definitely good for our basketball team."

—Rich Herrin

Adam's hard-willed desire might come from his early years growing up on his parents farm in rural Blue Earth County.

"I'd say being raised on a farm develops a sense of independence, not found in cities," said Adam's father Wayne. "I think the value system growing up in a small town was very valuable."

Mr. Knewton, who is a self-employed farmer and owner of Knewton Seed Co., said he likes the small-town values his son receives at SIUC under the direction of Herrin.

"Coach Herrin seems like he has the same set of values we have up here, and that impressed me from the first time I met him" said the elder Knewton.

In addition to playing basketball and hitting the books, Adam is also a Resident Assistant at University Hall, an off-campus SIUC dormitory, just south of the Towers. His duties include supervision of the residents on his wing of the building and door security.

When he is not occupied with basketball, homework or his University Hall responsibilities, Knewton likes to do what comes naturally to him in his home state — hunting and fishing. Knewton can be found in his spare time a one of the lakes surrounding Carbondale, or at a favorite hunting spot, where he said he is most relaxed.

"Being from Minnesota, I'm an outdoors-type of person," he said. "I think it is a good way to get away from things being out in nature."

If you haven't seen Knewton on the bench in recent games, don't worry, he wasn't kicked off for missing practice or being late for the team bus, he is absent from the SIUC bench because he has a problem that could infect other teammates — the chicken pox.

Despite his itchy two-week hiatus, Herrin said he is anxious to get Knewton back.

"You can't take ten players and give them all playing time," Herrin said. "Adam helps the team out in practice and that's why we need him — because he knows his role."

Salukis cage birds in 97-76 victory

Carr, Timmons score 22 points each as Dawgs claim Missouri Valley win

By Dan Leahy
Sports Editor

The Creighton Bluejays came into the SIUC Arena Monday night hoping to build on an 82-66 upset of Southwest Missouri State. Instead, the Dawgs used and abused the hapless 'Jays to the tune of 97-64.

The Salukis got things going in a hurry, as Marcus Timmons scored eight points in as many minutes to help SIUC (13-4, 8-2) build an 18-6 lead.

Creighton cut the lead to seven two possessions later on five straight points from Jerry Vanderhyt, but that was as close as they would get for the rest of the game.

The Bluejays were hampered when center Nate King picked up his third foul midway through the first half.

Creighton head coach Rich Johnson said King's foul problems had no impact on the game.

"It made no difference at all," Johnson said. "We were not guarding anybody tonight, so I don't think it mattered what he did."

Bluejay forward Jerry Vanderhyt picked up the slack for the rest of his teammates, shooting 11 of 17 from the field to lead all scorers with 28 points.

King chipped in 15 points to join Vanderhyt as the only Creighton starters to reach double figures.

For the Dawgs, it was the Chris Carr and Marcus Timmons show. The pair of Saluki forwards hit for 22 points each, while Timmons led the rebounding attack with 13.

Starters Mirko Pavlovic, Chris Lowery and Paul Lusk also reached double digits, with 14, 10 and 12 points, respectively.

SIUC head coach Rich Herrin said this was a perfect time to have an easy game.

"You have to realize you probably are not going to get too many games like this one," Herrin said.

"It's a good win and things are going to be different against Northern Iowa."

The Salukis had no problem against the Bluejay defense, as SIUC shot 60 percent from the field.

Johnson said he has a problem getting his younger players to play defense.

"We have a hard time understanding the concept of defense," Johnson said. "Our guys on the weak side were face-guarding and paying no attention at all."

Pavlovic said he did not see much off an effort from the Bluejays.

"They seemed like they did not want to play hard," Pavlovic said. "They kind of cruised and we cruised with them."

Even though the game was a breather for the Dawgs, Pavlovic said he was not impressed with the lackadaisical fan support.

"First I would like to thank the 4,079 that did show up," Pavlovic said. "But show me another team that is 8-2 in their conference that draws 4,000 people. I am disappointed because I think they are spoiled and I would like to see them show up."

Herrin said he does not want to worry about how many people are at the games because that is not his job.

"When you are successful for a number of years people get satisfied," Herrin said. "It's just human nature."

The Dawgs will stay home on Thursday night to take on the Northern Iowa Panthers. The action at the SIUC Arena tips-off at 7:05.

Senior Saluki Chris Lowery jumps up to make a shot in Monday's game against Creighton. Lowery also made two of three attempted three-pointers on his way to scoring 10 points. The Salukis won the contest 97-76.

Dream realized by basketball player

American News Service

The 12th man. Bench warmer. Walk-on. Adam Knewton has heard them all.

But don't believe for a second it bothers this SIUC walk-on — he is just happy to be playing basketball — and playing for the 12-4 Salukis doesn't hurt matters either.

The 6' 6" swing man from Good Thunder, Minn., made his way onto Rich Herrin's team after a tryout to aid the thin Southern bench. A bench whittled away by injuries and defections.

But regardless of how or why, Knewton is glad to be a Saluki.

"I was given a great opportunity by the coaches," said the blond, blue-eyed senior, who is majoring in Aviation Administration. "After coming out of high school, I never expected to play Division I basketball. It was a dream of mine to be on a big-time team, so I can't complain about anything."

Roberts' dynasty continues

Brothers maintain 2nd-place record in tie for 100 back

By Chris Walker
Sports Reporter

The name 'Roberts' is well recognized by the SIUC swimming program. Scott, who swam from 1986 to 1990, holds two SIUC records and is a three-time All-American. Randy, who has been in the swimming program from 1990 to 1994, is a standout performer whose accomplishments include two scores in the top five in backstroke events in SIUC history.

The Roberts come from a family known for their swimming. Their sister swam one year in the Air Force Academy; a step-brother swam one year at Central Washington University; and a step-sister swam in high school.

The Roberts' brothers have helped pave the way for Saluki success during the past eight seasons. Their reign has outlasted the tenures of both head coach

Rick Walker and head diving coach Dave Ardrey, who have been associated with the SIUC program for seven years.

Although the brothers haven't had the opportunity to go head-to-head in competition, they have been able to compare times to see where they stand against one another.

Last year Randy blew through the finish line in the 100-meter backstroke clocking in at 50.48 seconds, good enough for second in SIUC history and a tie with his brother Scott who notched the same time back in 1988.

Randy said his performance that day in the 100 backstroke was one of the strangest performances in his swimming career.

"I was really surprised that we tied with it being so many years apart," Randy said. "But now I'd really love to blow my brother out of the water and get the SIUC record while I do it."

When Scott hung up his trunks for the last time at SIUC, his four-year stint ended and on came Randy, who claimed Scott had a minimal, if any, effect on his decision to attend SIUC.

"Scott having been there didn't affect me," Randy said. "I wanted to go to a school that actually wanted me. I needed a scholarship and this was the best choice."

Coming into a program that had recently lost three-time All-American Scott Roberts turned a lot of heads toward Randy to fill his footsteps.

"In my freshman year, the swimmers expected me to be fast enough to get some relays to the NCAA's," Randy said. "As time went on I was accepted as my own individual, and now this year many on the team have just realized my brother swam here."

With Scott behind his desk at a furniture design firm and with Randy hundreds of miles away the two still find time to talk to each other about swimming.

"He just tells me to do my best," Randy said. "And to make sure I'm doing what is important to do in school."

Although the two rank according to career bests as two of the top backstrokers in SIUC history, competition has never mounted

Invitational previews talent, individual accomplishments

By James J. Faras
Sports Reporter

The SIUC men's tennis team saw their first action of the year this past weekend participating in the Missouri Valley Conference individual Invitational.

The meet is basically a preview of what to expect during the spring season, as well as a showcase for individual talent. No team awards are given at the event.

SIUC team captain Altar Merchant was the only bright spot for the Salukis, as he reached the semifinals before losing to Marcus Maboo of Drake 6 to 0, 7 to 6. Maboo went on to win the bracket for the Bulldogs. Merchant made it to the semifinals after a convincing victory over Brian Kelly of Creighton 6 to 2, 6 to 1.

Tennis head coach Jeremy Rowan said he was happy with Merchant's performance at the tournament.

"Merchant gave a fighting performance against Drake," he said. "Altar probably worked the hardest this weekend."

Aside from good tennis by Merchant, the Dawgs didn't do as well as they hoped in the tournament.

"I thought we could have had a better showing," Rowan said. "We didn't do as well as expected."

Because of the Christmas break and loss of practice time the Saluki coach said his team could have performed better with a little more time to prepare for this invitational.

"Our players didn't play up to their capability," he said. "We didn't practice as much as we would have liked to have practiced after break."

Also providing some positive play was sophomore walk-on Kei Kamesawa from Tokyo, Japan. Kamesawa won the
