Ensor lobbies USG not to pass resolution asking for hearing to replace Housing officials.

By Signe K. Skinion

An Undergraduate Student Government resolution asking the SIUC Board of Trustees to decide the fate of two University Housing officials was voted down Wednesday night after the author lobbied the senate not to pass it.

The proposed resolution asked for a hearing to replace University Housing Director Ed Jones and Assistant Director of Residence Life Steve Kirk for alleged job misconduct. Jones allegedly presented the SIUC Board of Trustees incorrect information about

IBHE approves new degree programs for University

By Lori D. Clark
DE Assistant Politics Reporter

The Illinois Board of Higher Education recently approved eight bachelor's of science degrees at SIUC and one master's of science degree at SIUE in part to reform the College of Technical Careers, IBHE officials say.

Kathleen Kelly, an IBHE deputy director, said the reason for creating the nine new degrees on the Carbondale and Edwardsville campuses was threefold.

"It is part of a plan to reorganize the College of Technical Careers (at SIUC), workforce preparation for the people in Southern Illinois and as part of a statewide initiative to improve quality and productivity," Kelly said.

The programs include bachelor of science degrees in physician assisting, dental hygiene, radiological science, mortuary science and funeral services, architectural studies, automotive technology, aviation technology and industrial technology. IBHE also approved a master in science degree in nursing at SIUE.

John Haller, SIUC vice president for academic affairs, said the new degrees are part of an effort implemented in the early '90s to reorganize the College of Technical Careers.

"It goes back to Nov. 1991 when the Board of Higher Education recomended the College of Technical Careers be closed down and all programs eliminated," Haller said. "We have re-engineered the college and sought to enhance the number of programs which were moving nationally to the baccalaureate level."

Haller said that with the reorganization of the College of Technical Careers, only two associate degree programs remain in the college. They are physical therapy assistant, which will eventually become a baccalaureate program and flight aviation, which will remain a two-year program.

Haller said the programs will have to be organized and will be implemented gradually.

He said that along with the approval of the degrees, the IBHE recommended the University consider eliminating the advanced technical studies program within the college.

The program is a bachelor of science program including more than 60 areas, such as construction, drafting, photographic technology, commercial graphics, heating and air conditioning and marketing.

Haller said IBHE suggested eliminating the program and replacing it with a technical management program at the baccalaureate level which would meet the needs of community college graduates who are unable to come to SIUC for a baccalaureate degree. The technical management program would be offered at community colleges, he said.

The blues are back: A.C. Reed's reopens after temporary closing

By Jason E. Coyne
DE Arts/Entertainment Editor

The blues will live on. After rumors and reports that A.C. Reed's B & S Lounge, 213 E. Main St., was closed, it will open its doors once again at 4 p.m. today.

Velvet McNaire, manager of A.C. Reed's, said that while the lounge has not had live acts recently it is not closed for good.

McNaire said money troubles were at the root of the temporary closing.

McNaire said she is getting everything back in order so the business can run smooth again.

"I am going to do everything in my power so we can get a foothold on this business," she said. "You know, get it running like it is sup-

McNaire sees the road to stability a difficult one but insists that through commitment, it will stay open.

"I'm not going to let him (owner

A.C. Reed) down," she said. "I'm trying to work it all out and so far, so good."

Reed and his band The Sparkplugs currently are touring Europe and will return in late February.

The lounge was closed the entire weekend of Jan. 20 but did open on Saturday.

"We're not closed. McNaire said. "We just have not had any entertainment."

Live entertainment returns to the lounge tomorrow night with Jim Skinner Rhythm and Blues Band, a local band that has been together off and on for the last seven years. Skinner also will perform Saturday night.

The lounge will once again have regular business hours Thursday through Saturday night from 4 p.m. to 2 a.m.

ZAIRE COLLAPSES, BUT ITS PEOPLE IMPROVISE — KINSHASA, Zaire—The president and his cronies are accused far and wide of using the treasury as their personal bank account. Buses don't run. Phones don't work. The jungle is fast overtaking many roads. But the people of Zaire, despite decades of corruption and ineptitude, have found ways to adapt. Education has all but collapsed in parts of the country where teachers are not being paid. To fill the void, parents have started their own schools, or if they can afford it, are paying teachers' salaries themselves. Ambulances are few, so when a disaster happens — such as a plane crash here in the capital in January that killed as many as 350 people — private citizens take the injured to the hospital in their own cars. To prevent soldiers from stealing civilians' food, people in one town have taught the soldiers how to harvest crops themselves. Money is so tight that some families have been reduced to feeding their children every other day.

55 KILLED IN SRI LANKA SUICIDE BOMB BLAST — NEW DELHI—Suspected Tamil militants struck with deadly fury Wednesday in the heart of Sri Lanka's capital, smashing a truckload of explosives into the Central Bank building and detonating a mammoth blast that killed at least 55 people, wounded as many as 1,400 and reduced much of Colombo's business district to rubble and flames. The suicide bombing was the most devastating and deadly attack in Sri Lanka's capital since armed insurgents on the Indian Ocean island began battling 12 years ago for a separate homeland for their Tamil minority. The mid-morning explosion left bodies strewn by the dozens on streets and in wrecked buildings. At least a half-dozen high-rises caught fire, and the flames kept police and rescue workers from pawing through the debris for survivors. Panicked workers, many whose shirts or saris were soaked with blood, fled the downtown neighborhood on foot.

CALIFORNIA LAWMAKERS VOTE NO TO PADDLING — SACRAMENTO, Calif.—Moderate Republicans in the California Assembly broke ranks Tuesday with their conservative colleagues and helped administer a stinging rebuke to a controversial bill repealing the state's decade-old ban on corporal punishment in the classroom. Capping an hour of often emotional debate, the Assembly rejected the bill by Republican Assemblyman Mickey Conroy on a surprisingly decisive 47-19 vote that saw 10 Republicans join in opposition with 36 Democrats and one independent. Conroy, who gained extraordinary national attention after introducing the measure and a companion bill to allow the paddling of juvenile graffiti vandals, was stunned by the result. He chalked it up to generational differences.

MILITARY ADVISED TO BE DIPLOMATIC AT PORT — SHANGHAI, China—Earlier this century, American sailors starting shore leave in Shanghai received a helpful booklet containing "prices of rickshaws and two pages of prophylactic advice," recalls one U.S. official. The sailors and Marines aboard the 7th Fleet's amphibious assault ship, the USS Fort McHenry, which docked along Shanghai's historic Huangpu River on Wednesday, were advised to play it safe, too. But the concerns these days are a bit different, as much political as practical. This generation's servicemen — and for the first time in China, servicewomen — were told to keep their uniforms on, be back on board by midnight and remember that China may be just one of 40 countries where they stop in Asia, but it's the one that matters.

SAFETY COMMISSION ISSUES HEAT TAPE ALERT — The Consumer Product Safety Commission has reissued safety guidelines for electric heat tape, which is used to keep pipes from freezing in attics and under porches and floors. The tape causes about 1,500 fires yearly, resulting in 10 deaths and 100 injuries, according to the commission, which acted in the wake of a December fire at the Philadelphia Zoo that killed 23 primates.

Bitter weather delivers health precautions

Local meteorologist:
Temperature to remain in the 20s through the weekend.

By Mary Beth Arimond
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Some SIUC students walked a little bit faster to class and bundled up more, and others headed for the indoors for warmth and hot drinks because of the cold weather this week.

The halls of the Student Center were filled with shivering students as they raced for the nearest coffee and hot chocolate lines.

Winter weather guidelines can be exhaustive, but they need to be taken seriously when the high temperatures for this week are expected to be 20 degrees, Doc Horsley, American Meteorological Society meteorologist and assistant professor of SIUC Geography department, said.

Horsley said people need to take the necessary precautions to prevent them from experiencing frostbite or hypothermia.

"Layering is the best," Horsley said. "A lot of students wear a big coat, but they wear a T-shirt underneath. That's unhealthy and unsafe."

Carla Griffin, nursing supervisor from Jackson County Health Department, said there are certain signs people should be aware of if they think they are suffering from frostbite or hypothermia.

"Symptoms of frostbite are cold, firm white patches, usually found on the face, nose, ears, toes and fingers," Griffin said. "Hypothermia could cause mental confusion, drowsiness, slow respiration and can lead to cardiac arrest. People with these symptoms should seek medical attention."

Horsley said people could prevent frostbite and hypothermia by having their ears, nose, hands and toes dry and by keeping their clothes and body from getting wet.

Griffin also said people should avoid alcohol, especially when they are outdoors.

"It may feel warm going down, but it can cause vessel constriction, which is where the blood vessels could constrict," Griffin said.

Other tactics, such as heating a house and staying warm, could be dangerous if people are not careful.

Electronic fund transfer delayed a few semesters

By Donita Polly
DE Politics Editor

SIUC students will have to wait a few semesters before getting their loan checks electronically transferred to their student accounts. University officials said at Wednesday's Graduate and Professional Student Council meeting.

Jeff Holder, of the SIUC Controller's Office, said the University does not have the financial resources at this time to put student names into the computers for the electronic fund transfer system. He said the University is committed to the system, and the SIUC faculty and staff will be on the system this fall.

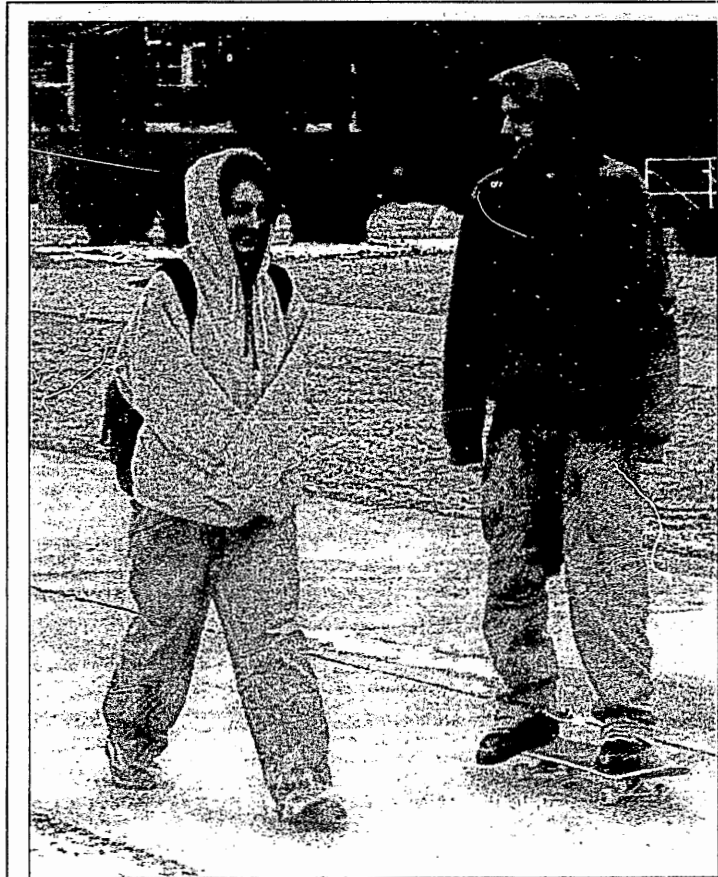

Holder said the EFT system would allow students to have their financial aid checks deposited into their accounts 10 days before the first day of class. He said it is against federal regulations to disperse the money before then.

Pam Britton, director of Financial Aid, said the Financial Aid Office offers direct deposit to students already, but the new system would allow students to get their checks even faster.

"We hoped to have EFT in place by this October but we had to put it on the back burner," Britton said. She said it is important for students to get their financial aid checks early because they need to buy books.

Also at the meeting, GPSC President Bill Karrow said Information Technology and the SIUC President's Office is giving a total of $15,000 worth of computers to all student organizations located in the Student Center.

He said GPSC could expect to pay about $1,173 for the new computer that would be hooked up to the University's network.

Mineral buildup and corrosion plague pipes

By Brian T. Sutton
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Some residents of Norwest Drive in Carbondale say they are tired of dirty water coming out of their faucets and do not think city officials have done an adequate job of working on a solution.

Jim Swayze, Carbondale Water Operations manager, said Carbondale purchased the Murdale Water System in 1983 and inherited corrosive pipes. He said some have been replaced, but now pipes on Norwest Drive have turned corrosive as well.

He said the pipes on Norwest are on the end of the pipe system with no return pipe to continue the flow of water, causing a buildup of minerals and corrosion. Until a loop (a continuous pipe to keep the water running) is created, residents will have dirty water, he said.

Swayze said in an attempt to clean the water on Norwest Drive until a permanent solution is found, the city has opened valves on two fire hydrants to let the water spill out on the ground and keep a continuous flow of water through the pipes. Some residents said the water still is dirty, however.

Juanita and Carroll Crackel, 901 Norwest Drive, have one of the hydrants in their yard. Juanita Crackel said the hydrant has been running since July 1994.

"They came out in the summer and said this would clean the water," she said. "They shut it off that winter and turned it on last spring (1995), and it has been running ever since."

Ancient plants get new life with research grant

By Erik Bush
Daily Egyptian Reporter

After being awarded funds from a national foundation and establishing the only World Wide Web site of its kind, two SIUC researchers say they hope to change contemporary forms of research while studying some of the oldest plants in the world.

The husband-and-wife team of Raymond E. Stotler and Barbara Crandall-Stotler announced Wednesday that they have received a $528,000 grant to study a group of plant species.

The grant, funded by the National Science Foundation, provides funds for a five-year study of bryophytes, a small, green plant that dates back 450 million years, consists of more than 18,000 species and is found in many areas of the world. The plants play a crucial role of rain filtration in fragile ecosystems ranging from tundra to the tropical forests.

One unusual aspect of the study is that all research findings will be posted on the World Wide Web, a global computer network accessible from virtually anywhere a computer and telephone line is available.

"This is the first site of its kind in existence," Stotler said.

Robert Brenstein, SIUC computer information specialist, said developing a first-of-its-kind web site like this will enable instant access for researchers all over the world.

"I have been working on the project with the Stotlers' since last spring. We will be able to update material continually as it becomes available," he said. "The site will contain up to the minute findings, color pictures, background information and links to related sites."

The Stotlers, both SIUC professors of plant biology, said they applied for the grant for a number of reasons, with students being high on the list.

"We wanted this to be a student-oriented grant, one that would allow us to develop the skills of the students working with us," Stotler said. "And in the end, we hope they will be capable of independent research."

Crandall-Stotler agreed, saying that it will be important to involve students with the research.

"Using the University as a backdrop, we want to train a new generation of botanist," she said. "Each student will participate in all methods of research so they can become independent researchers."

John H. Yopp, associate vice chancellor of Academic Affairs Research and Dean of the Graduate School, said that the Stotlers' contributions have outstanding possibilities.

"There are seven researchers of this type of plant species in the country, and we have two here at SIUC," Yopp said. "SIUC is recognized for excellence in environmental sciences and research of natural resources, and this grant awards that and the work being done."

To help illustrate natural implications, Stotler emphasized the

Sunset Concerts will continue to shine in memories

WITH THE RECENT VISIT TO SOUTHERN Illinois by the Arctic express, it is comforting to recall the summer evenings spent lounging in the company of fellow music lovers, allowing the sounds from the band to wash away a day's troubles, and if you were so inclined, to hoist the beverage of your choice with old friends or new acquaintances on the blanket next door.

With a City Council vote Tuesday night, the Carbondale Park District received the Fair Days designation it had sought for the Sunset Concerts at Turley Park. This designation allows for the consumption, but not the sale, of alcohol at the concerts. The Sunset Concerts held at Shryock Auditorium do not require the city's designation for alcohol consumption.

CONGRATULATIONS TO THE CITY COUNCIL for remembering the Sunset Concerts at Turley Park as the majority remember them - peaceful times with friends - and not the way a minority would have them viewed - unruly crowds of drunken hooligans. A "public-sponsored beer bash" is the description used by one opponent to alcohol at the concerts.

With its vote Tuesday night, the Carbondale City Council gave local residents and SIUC students a whiff of those sweet summer memories without censoring the beverage.

In 1987, the City Council submitted to the fears of a minority and refused the Fair Days designation for that summer's series of concert. George Whitehead, director of the Carbondale Park District said the result of that ban was an embarrassingly low turnout for that summer's series of concerts in the park.

Whitehead said Turley Park concerts averaged 2,000 to 2,500 people, but the four concerts at Turley Park that summer averaged only 200 to 250 people. Meanwhile, the Shryock concerts, where alcohol was still allowed, had a larger than normal attendance.

One concert in the 1995 summer concert series experienced problems when a reggae band attracted an unusually large crowd of 5,000 to Turley Park. Carbondale police made seven arrests at that concert. Since that event the Park District has made plans to hold known, popular events on the steps of Shryock Auditorium.

THE SUNSET CONCERTS HAVE BEEN A popular event in Carbondale since 1979. The original organizers of the event wanted a annual live entertainment series, offering the community and SIUC students a variety of music. This series has been a success in pulling the community together.

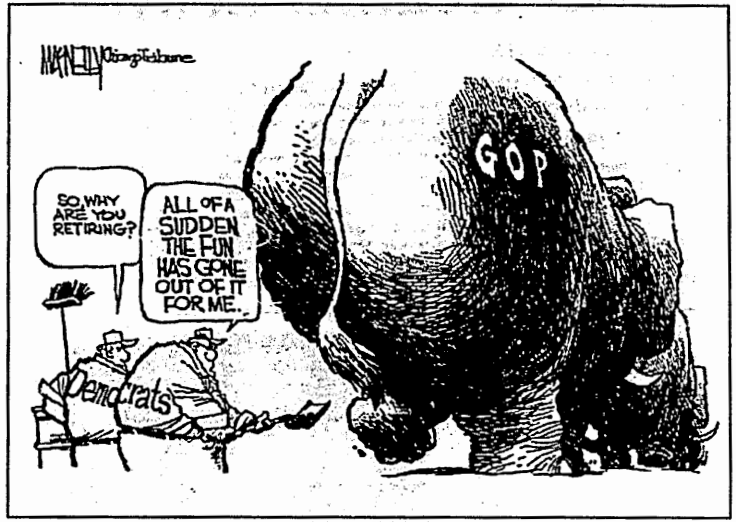

The combination of community and University support has been an example of what can be done when both sides cooperate. It has been a collaborative effort that has benefited everyone.

In October, when the park district voted to request the Fair Days designation, opponents argued that the concerts were terrific events marred by alcohol, that the exposure of alcohol to children sent the children a confusing message.

That same day, Park District member Sandy Bartelsmeyer reminded us what the concerts truly mean when she said, "It's a wholesome environment to take children to, a place where there's old people and young people, whites, blacks and people of other races enjoying the concert."

With the vote Tuesday night, the City Council has agreed with the majority and not given into fears that can be refuted with the 17 years of success the concerts have experienced.

The Daily Egyptian congratulates the Carbondale City Council and Park District for the measured and accurate responses.

Commentary

SIU Law professor refutes letter

Several of my colleagues have written to your editorial page expressing their displeasure with the Daily Egyptian's coverage of events in the law school and have labeled me "disgruntled and isolated." Predictably, they have elected to avoid discussion of the issues raised by my grievance, lawsuit, and the dean search process, and have instead attempted to make me the issue.

This tactic was tried in the grievance and failed and undoubtedly will again be attempted in the lawsuit.

Moreover, your readers should note that their letter studiously avoids any discussion of the facts.

The following facts have not been disputed: 1) A Judicial Review Board panel (including one representative selected by the law school dean) unanimously concluded that the hiring procedures were seriously flawed at all levels. 2) Minority applicants who appeared to have better records than white males interviewed by the law school were not given interviews. 3) No member of the search committee was able to provide a satisfactory explanation as to why the minority applicants were not interviewed. 4) The committee made a number of recommendations which were endorsed by then President Guyon but the law school has refused to implement them (for example, the committee recommended an President Guyon accepted the recommendation that a copy of the law school's hiring ad be sent to Asian and American Indian law associations so as to attract minority applicants, but this was not done in the 1995 search. 5) After the grievance was issued, the law school actively participated in changing the grievance procedures so that no more grievances could be filed. 6) The law school attempted to engage in only an internal search for a new dean knowing that there would be only one candidate for the position. 7) The candidate did not hold tenure in the School of Law, but rather held a staff position. 8) The law school attempted to limit the search even though it was informed that an external minority candidate had shown interest in the position.

In light of the above, I concur in the DE's belief that the happenings in the law school are newsworthy. The DE is to be commended for its effort to report them even-handedly and responsibly.

Who will pay for AIDS research?

By Dena Bunis
Newsday

Amid the hope that a new triple-drug therapy could be effective in battling the AIDS virus comes a sobering question: What will it cost, and who will pay?

The new treatment combines two drugs already in use against the AIDS virus with a new class of drugs - called protease inhibitors - that have shown good results in clinical trials.

One of these drugs - saquinavir, developed by Hoffman-LaRoche - was approved by the Food and Drug Administration in December for use in low doses. Two others are about to wend their way through the federal approval process.

By week's end Merck Co. will file an application for FDA approval of its drug, indinavir, which looked particularly promising in tests reported Monday. The FDA's outside review committee "That was the best data we've ever seen on AIDS, but I don't know who's going to pay for it."

Dr. Mark Feingold
National Institute of Health

will consider it March 1, a day after considering another protease inhibitor, ritonavir, developed by Abbott Laboratories. Both new drugs could be in pharmacies by late spring.

Officials at both drug companies refused to speculate on how much the new triple-drug therapy, including older drugs such as AZT, would cost. Hoffmann-LaRoche is charging $5,800 a year for a low dose of its protease inhibitor and has not yet set a price for higher dosages that might be more effective.

Industry experts, health officials and AIDS activists have estimated the cost to be between $12,000 and $30,000 a year for each patient.

"That was the best data we've ever seen for AIDS," the National Institute of Health's Dr. Mark Feingold said of the new therapy. "But I don't know who's going to pay for it."

Although AIDS activists are worried about the cost, they took some comfort Tuesday in the fact that the Hoffmann-LaRoche product is already paid for by Medicaid, the federal-state health insurance program for the poor. Many people infected with the AIDS virus are on Medicaid.

But health industry experts say deep Medicaid cuts that have been proposed could make future funding for such expensive drugs a difficult problem.

New semester, new dean

Ramaprasad new associate dean of communications

By Chris Kuhlmeier
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The new associate dean in the College of Mass Communications and Media Arts has a challenging task ahead, her peers and faculty members within the college say.

Jyotika Ramaprasad, an associate professor of Journalism, took over for former Associate Dean William Elliott at the beginning of the semester.

Elliott helped combine the Departments of Cinema and Photography, Radio-Television and Journalism into the College of Mass Communications and Media Arts in the summer of 1993.

James Kelly, an associate professor in the School of Journalism, said Elliott left SIUC in December to take the position as dean of the College of Communications at Marquette University.

As associate dean, it will be part of Ramaprasad's job to help connect the departments within the school as well as enhance the prestige of the school itself, Gary Kolb, chairman of the Cinema and Photography Department, said.

"Due to advances in technology in the past 10 years, there has been an increasing amount of overlapping within all forms of media," Kolb said. "And there is a need to educate students in all of its forms."

Kelly said he feels that Ramaprasad is an asset to the department because of her wide range of skills.

"Dr. Ramaprasad is very good at building interdepartmental relationships," he said. "She is very supportive of the faculty belief on collective venture between departments."

Kolb said convergence is necessary for the growth of the college as well as its students.

"Instead of training students in only their field of study, we want to incorporate other areas of media within a student's chosen major," Kolb said.

Recently, Ramaprasad returned from a trip to South Asia where she led workshops and laid the groundwork for an international journalism education convention.

The convention, which will include media representatives from the Asian countries they have visited this January, will take place in Anaheim, Calif. in 1997.

One of the different aspects that Ramaprasad brings to the school is her international connections, Kelly said.

Walter Jaehning, an associate professor in Journalism, said Ramaprasad knows how to deal with foreign constituents and had a big part in planning the South Asian trip. SIUC's Asian visit has won the University-wide recognition in those countries, said Ramaprasad.

"We get so many requests from other countries to do workshops and to attend conventions," Ramaprasad said. "Those requests have become so common that we cannot obligate ourselves to all them."

Jaehning said Ramaprasad has a good work ethic. "She brings many good qualities to the position," he said.

Although Ramaprasad's peers think very highly of her, she is humble when talking about herself.

"I am modest. I was brought up to be that way," she said. "But I think that my colleagues would say that I am consistent, very tenacious, and very hard working."

Prosecutors drop manslaughter charges against truck driver with sleep disorder

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—Prosecutors have dropped manslaughter charges against a truck driver because doctors have determined that he has a sleep disorder that could have prevented him from staying awake at the wheel before his tractor-trailer slammed into a van and killed four people in Bowie, Md., last year.

State's Attorney Jack B. Johnson said the medical evidence made it hard to show the driver exercised gross negligence, which would be required for a conviction on four counts of vehicular manslaughter.

The dismissal of all criminal charges against Raymond Glenn Holsopple, the truck driver, shocked relatives of the victims and advocates of truck safety reform.

"It is incredible to me that this man can kill four people and walk away from it," said Victoria Vickroy, of Bowie, whose parents died in the crash.

"That's outrageous," said John Undeland, spokesman for the Washington area chapter of the American Automobile Association.

"The system is badly broken if we can't hold truck drivers who fall asleep at the wheel, whatever the reason, responsible for the deadly consequences that follow."

The accident April 25 was one of the worst in the history of suburban Prince George's County, Md., prompting calls for better signs along the Route 301 corridor and reform of state law to make it easier to prosecute reckless drivers.

John and Edith Starry, both 68, of Bowie, were sightseeing in their custom Chevrolet van with their guests, Magda Schloemer and Rita Huebner, both 73 and visiting from Germany. Schloemer was Edith Starry's aunt.

All were killed when the tractor-trailer driven by Holsopple, 46, of Somerset, Pa., plowed into the rear of the van as it waited for a red light at a county intersection.

Haller said eliminating the program is something the University should consider.

"They're (IBHE) being very reasonable," Haller said. "We should take this opportunity and see what's possible."

Haller said IBHE could not force SIUC to eliminate the program but had the right to ask the University to consider the removal.

Ross Hodel, also an IBHE deputy director, said the approval of new degrees for state colleges and universities is something that occurs annually.

University Housing food service workers contracts. The resolution also stated that he did not properly supervise these workers, and misrepresented RHA as a legislative organization instead of a self-interest group. Kirk allegedly obstructed a senator attempting to conduct student surveys on over-21 housing.

USG President Kim Clemens said this resolution would be destructive to USG's chances of working effectively with RHA if passed.

Clemens said the resolution was poorly written and did not answer enough questions or give specific details to warrant a need for such a drastic action.

Andrew Ensor, Southern Hills senator and author of the resolution, asked USG not to pass it after listening to Jones state his position on the issues mentioned.

Jones told USG there was no basis for the resolution.

Jones also addressed the issue of Kirk's alleged obstruction of a senator working on student surveys about over-21 housing.

"I have personally spoken with President Clemens and (Thompson Point) Senator David Vingren, and we came to a compromise for the situation by making Warren Hall (located in Thompson Point) only open for sophomores and up for next year," he said.

However, in other business, USG passed a resolution that asks the SIUC Board of Trustees to look at the policy change and possibly make corrections to it. Ensor said the board needs to mediate this resolution because the agreement reached between Jones and the two senators does not meet the students concerned.

"There are freshmen and sophomores waiting to get out of the Towers when they turn 21, and this policy is pushing them back in," Ensor said. "This policy also goes against the Americans with Disabilities Act, which is the law of the land, since there is no access for disabled people on that side of campus."

importance this research has on environmental studies locally as well as worldwide.

"Natural habitat loss is accelerating at an alarming rate, even here in Southern Illinois," Stotler said.

The Makanda Bluff area in Giant City State Park was an excellent source of the type of plant life we are studying.

"The plants no longer exist there due to all the rappelling activity that people have done in the area. It is a shame."

Yopp, also a plant biology professor, believes that by naming and identifying the many different types of bryophytes, the plants, and those like it, will have a better chance for survival.

"Our biodiversity is disappearing," Yopp said.

"By doing this type of research, we can intervene and attempt to classify as many species we encounter.

"Knowing exactly what is being dealt with can possibly slow the decline of species," he said.

Classification may not be the only result of the study, as the bryophytes could have important meaning beyond the research aspect of the project.

"These plants have been found to be able to react with many hundreds of chemical products," she said.

"This could be very important in pharmaceutical and anti-tumor research."

The web site can be found at the following address: <http://www.sciencce.siu.edu/bryophytes/>.

Griffin said.

"People who keep their burner going and the oven door propped open have a greater chance for something to fall in and catch fire," Griffin said.

"Space heaters can release carbon monoxide by giving off fumes, which could be lethal," she said.

She said to prevent accidents from happening, maintain adequate temperature in the home.

Griffin also said the best way to stay warm is to wear a hat or hood, gloves, a thick coat, insulated shoes and plenty of clothes.

Native American artists design blankets for college benefit sale

The Washington Post

Four contemporary Native American artists, working with Pendleton Woolen Mills, have designed a new collection of blankets that is being sold to help Indian colleges.

Pendleton has been the major producer of Indian-design blankets for almost a century. In a project to benefit the American Indian College Fund, the Oregon company is putting out a limited edition of 1,200 each of four patterns drawing on the cultural traditions of tribes of the Northwest Coast, the Southwest, the Northern Plains and the Osage people.

The blankets, which cost $425 apiece, are intended to hang on walls, although some people use them on beds, said Barbara Bratone, director of resource development for the College Fund. (For information, call 800-987-FUND.)

The first of the four "Hope Series" blankets, the "Tree of Life" by Navajo painter Tony Abeyta, was introduced last fall. The second, released in January, is called the "Day and Night Robe," and was designed by painter and fiber artist Arthur Amiotte, a Lakota Sioux.

Bratone said 1,000 blankets already had been sold. She added that about $325 of the purchase price of each one goes to benefit 29 colleges where Native American students study a standard curriculum in addition to Indian history and culture.

still is dirty, and she said there are more problems now.

"The vacant lot next to us fills up with water, and mosquitoes breed there," she said.

"One house a few blocks over paid for an exterminator, and the exterminator said nothing can be done because the constant flow of water washes his insecticide away."

Bob Kolkmeier, SIUC associate professor of aviation who lives on Norwest Drive, said his wife, Willa, has had nurse uniforms ruined in the wash by the dirty water.

"Despite the hydrants running, the water still stains some clothes," he said.

"You can see the mineral deposits. On some days it depends on how much the other residents use the water whether it will be clean or not."

Kolkmeier also said part of his bath mat is stained brown from the water.

He said he had his water heater replaced when an old one broke down and said the water that was drained out of the old heater was brown with mineral deposits at the bottom.

Swayze said the city is having trouble obtaining easements (permission of property owners to go through their land or work on it) which will allow them to create a loop with the water line, fix a portion of the pipe and solve the current problem.

He also said the city replaced one major line on Striegel Road last year.

However, residents like Mary Flanigan, 1002 Norwest Drive, said the city is giving them the run-around and is not explaining the situation to them.

"The city has been too slow about this problem," Flanigan said. "Our property taxes have gone way up, and they haven't fixed the water problem."

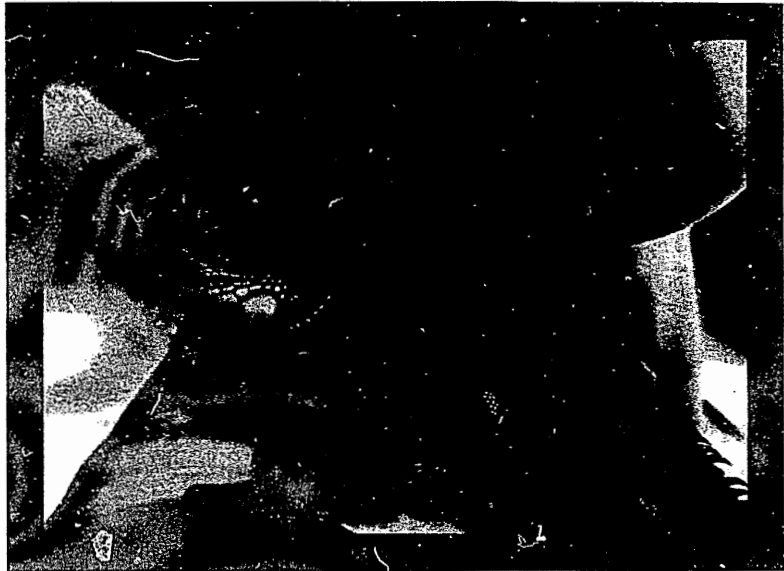

Wayne Wheels, Carbondale Maintenance and Environmental Services manager, said the corrosion and mineral deposits leaking on the ground do not pose a threat to the soil.

Swayze said the department is trying to solve the problem and is working on its third easement to connect the pipe to create the loop.

"We do not know when we will complete the project," Swayze said.

Crackel said she wishes the city could understand their situation.

"He (Swayze) should drink my water and see it when I wipe my glass with a towel, and it has orange on it from the water," she said.

Ground-breakers

Pioneer female group Shirelles to play Shryock

By Jason E. Coyne
DE Arts/Entertainment Editor

The newest members of the Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame, The Shirelles, have a special fondness for the stage. Perhaps it is because the stage has brought about endless success for the trio.

But Beverly Lee, the only remaining original Shirelle, is far from being a material girl. Her reaction to being awarded the highest honor in the music business reveals what type of person she is.

She said being inducted into the Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame is an incredible feeling.

"It was a magical night," she said. "It is nice to know the songs we're singing touch people's hearts, and that we will be a part of history as the years go on."

The original members of The Shirelles, Doris Jackson and Shirley Alison Reedes, were honored with Lee for their excellence in music. The latest line-up features Shirley Marshall Alston, Diane Spann-Miller and Lee.

Saturday's concert at 7:30 p.m. in Shryock Auditorium will be the first one since the induction into the Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame earlier this year.

The Shirelles have played for Presidents Kennedy, Johnson and Carter. Its songs have been recorded by the Beatles, Aretha Franklin, and Linda Ronstadt.

Lee said that even after 35 years, taking the stage is still a special thing for her.

"Each time it's a new adventure," Lee said. "It's a glorious feeling that I've been this blessed. God has given me this job to do, and it's something I really love."

Lee said she tries to accommodate fans by putting her all into every show.

"I try to bring honesty, energy, love and fun to the show," Lee said. "And hopefully, music that people want to hear. We want everyone to get into the groove and have a good time."

Lee's insatiable appetite for performing keeps her hungry for the next show. She said being out on the road is a place she feels comfortable.

"I love traveling and meeting people because I'm a people person," Lee said. "When I go away, I get antsy to get back to work."

As a group, The Shirelles were unaware of the ground-breaking moves they made when they were young.

"We were troopers, adventurous at a young age," Lee said. "Being adventurous leads to success. We didn't know exactly what we were doing."

The group was among the first to write its own songs. Lee said this was a rarity in the male-dominated music business.

"Everything was male controlled at that time," she said. "We had a publishing company, which was unheard of at the time."

Being a first in numerous things seems to be Lee's forte. The Shirelles were the first pop act chosen to record a radio commercial for Coca-Cola, inaugurating a series of ads that lasted over 10 years.

The Shirelles did not realize the path they were paving for females in the music world's future. Groups like L7, Salt-n-Pepa and TLC have all benefited from the The Shirelles innovative nature.

Pumpkins, Pound create rockin' sound

Smashing Pumpkins "1979" (Virgin)

After the immediate success of the double disc "Mellon Collie and the Infinite Sadness," the Smashing Pumpkins deserve credit for chutzpah. Never before has any alternative band made such a risky move into the '70s territory of the rock opera. The Pumpkins bounce back with a wiry, skeletal guitar groove in "1979" a newly released single about the good old days of being a suburban teen discovering new wave. But other than that, Smashing Pumpkins don't really rock out on the new single — they're more interested in putting together sounds the way some people erect monuments. The other tracks on the single, "Ugly," "Believe" and "Cherry," are a quiet storm compared to the ravishing loudness most fans are used to.

Guitarist James Iha is still earning his Jimmy Page merit badge. When he stretches out into one of his psychedelic guitar riffs in "Believe," a song which he wrote and sang, his soft-spoken interludes help set the stage for the moments when Billy Corgan swoops into his trademark squawk. Whether you love or hate Billy, he has become a rock icon — nerdy by nature. The boy with the least cake is a grown man who dresses like Little Orphan Annie. The new single gives Billy room to express himself, and it's the catchiest argument for misery he has ever made. Overall, Smashing Pumpkins "1979" relies on the softer side of their abilities to rock, rather than the in-your-face-kicking-ass sound the provide in concert. (J. Fares)

Tha Dogg Pound "Dogg Food" (Death Row/Interscope)

Tha Dogg Pound's debut CD "Dogg Food," was released despite the barricade set up members of the American government and Interscope Records. The Dogg Pound project was pushed back after being forced to provide Interscope Records with all the rap sheets to review the content of their lyrics because of pressure by special interest groups and government officials concerned with the lyrical content of gangsta rap.

The first single off "Dogg Food" is the commercialized "Let's Play House," featuring Mich-I'le, a member of Tha Dogg Pound. The next single will be "New York, New York." When you hear this one, you will say, "Yo son, I heard this track somewhere before." That's because it was used on a St. Ides beer commercial featuring the Notorious B.I.G. On this track the West Coast mimics the East keeping conflict going.

The only somewhat hip-hop-sounding song, "Do What I Feel" features Rage, another member of Tha Dogg Pound.

Not only did the Pound keep the production in the family, but Daz, the group's producer, did all the work on the boards, causing the tracks to sound repetitious.

The familiar West Coast deep bass flavor groove is heard throughout the CD. Kurrupt represented with tight lyrics and his rugged flow.

The lyrical content slips throughout the course of "Dogg Food." Most of the lyrics are structured on some of the drama that plagues the concrete jungles of America such as drugs and violence. The lyrics also go back and forth between corny topics of boasting about themselves and dissing wannabe gangstas and women.

"Dogg Food" also features other members of Tha Dogg Pound, Nate Dogg and Snoop and Mr. Malik, a former member of Illegal. Overall "Dogg Food" could have been better production-wise, but I give them a B- for effort.

Rock 'n' soul at Tres

Carbondale next stop for touring Kansas City Streetband

By J. Fares
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Glen "Bummer the Drummer" Ward tried to put together a band in 1977 in Kansas City, Mo.

Oddly enough, he came up with an original name. The Kansas City Streetband.

Ward and his rock 'n' soul-sounding band will hit Carbondale tonight to play at Tres Hombres, a mecca for blues and rockabilly.

In the past, Ward had connections with RCA Records, Roulette Records and Capricorn Records. The musicians he wanted to form the Kansas City Streetband with also had worked with these record companies in the past.

"I got most of the ones [musicians] I wanted," Ward said. "But when you are a good musician, you get a lot of calls for work, and I could understand that."

Since the band's inception, Ward has toured the United States, and his band has evolved into a dynamic rock 'n' soul force.

"I can't say enough about touring," Ward said.

"We played our hearts out, and people love it."

The Kansas City Streetband plays music that ranges from the likes of Koko Taylor, the Rolling Stones and Van Halen to their own original music.

Recently, The Kansas City Streetband backed up blues legend John Lee Hooker on the campus of the University of Missouri in Columbia.

"I'm looking at the live Streetband cuts from that concert for a possible release on cassette or CD," Ward said.

"Whenever John Lee Hooker plays, there's magic that happens between the audience and the musicians."

"There are some cuts on there that smoke."

The Kansas City Streetband brings the kind of intensely and high energy to the stage that can only be attained by true professionals.

"We just don't play songs," Ward said. "We perform for our audiences and get them involved in the experience."

"That's the difference between a good band and a great band."

The Kansas City Streetband plays at 9:30 p.m. at Tres Hombres, 119 N. Washington St. Admission is free.

What: Kansas City Streetband

'Mr. Holland's Opus' takes second

"Forrest Gump" had a baby and called him Mr. Holland.

Not only in its storyline, but also in the way this sentimental-tear-jerking movie moves through time, "Mr Holland's Opus" tries to win audiences by weaving in the most significant events of the past 30 years along with the story of a focal person, like "Gump." But in this case it is a man and his love for music.

Illustration by Agnieszka Piczonka

Snoop awaiting judgment

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES—In a surprise move, the defense in the Snoop Doggy Dogg murder trial rested its case Tuesday after calling only one witness.

"The reason is simple," defense attorney Donald Re told reporters outside court. "(Prosecutors) don't have a case and we saw no reason to prolong this agony."

Los Angeles County Superior Court Paul G. Flynn adjourned in the early afternoon Tuesday and ordered the jury back at 1:30 p.m. Wednesday in an effort to give the district attorney's office time to prepare its next move.

After listening to nearly two months of sometimes tedious testimony, many of the panel mem-

Audiences will see the same faces in "Holland" as they did in "Gump." Both movies have the Kennedy assassinations. Both have the Nixon resignation.

Both have the senseless death of a young, sweet, naive African-American soldier in the Vietnam War. Both play off of John Lennon's death. Both have a Jackson Browne song on their soundtracks. But "Gump" had them first, which leaves "Holland" far behind, in second place, in a race of two.

But despite these similarities, "Holland" somehow manages to start on a promising note. The movie follows the life of music enthusiast Glenn Holland (Richard Dreyfuss), who dreams but fails to become a rich and famous composer. To pay the bills, he takes a job as a high school music teacher.

Soon after, he and his wife Iris (Gleane Headley) have a baby who is born deaf. From that point on, Holland believes he will never be able to teach his love of music to his son.

However, he can still teach it to his students, whom he ends up spending more time with.

In addition, Holland refuses to learn sign language which not only creates a barrier between he and his son but also between he and his wife who has been weighted by the burden of raising their son almost single handed.

The movie hits an emotional high when Holland's son tells him that even though he cannot hear music, it still has a significant meaning in his life. Holland then makes too swift of a transition from bad guy to good guy without any evolution in between. This creates a disjointed chop that stops the flow of the movie.

Until this point, the movie moves smoothly but slowly. It is filled with many small packages of feel-good and feel-bad segments that manage to keep viewers interested enough to watch until the end.

Dreyfuss gives one of the best performances of his life. He makes the transition from a young ambitious musician (where make-up makes Dreyfuss look as young as he did he did in "Jaws") to an old complacent teacher who has found a love for teaching that he did not feel in his younger years.

"Holland" is a simple movie. It has too simple of a plot and storyline to win the hearts of all who see it. But Dreyfuss will most definitely win an Oscar for this movie.

And even though the movie tackles the important issue of the disappearing arts, the movie's only chance of winning awards itself, relies solely on Dreyfuss' performance, which shines bright. But his performance aside, the movie expects too much from its audiences.

Shirelles

"We've opened the door for many groups," she said. "The Supremes ran right through it, and I'm glad they did. Women like Janet Jackson — 'you go girl,' you can't keep a good woman like her down."

The Shirelles got started on the road to success by harmonizing to radio hits they requested as they baby-sat for neighborhood children back in Passaic, N.J.

An impromptu performance of their at-home act during gym class, caught the attention of teacher Katherine Nolan.

"She told us if we performed, it would fill the whole gymnasium," Lee said.

They did fill the gymnasium at the Passaic High school talent show in 1957.

"Our friend Mary Jane Greenberg's mother, Florence, had a recording company," she said.

"After hearing us perform, 'I Met Him On a Sunday,' at that high school function, she said she might record us. We were signed to a contract with Tiara Records shortly afterward."

The high school gave The Shirelles freedom to perform its newly found gig.

"We'd get special permission to go out on the road," Lee said. "Certain privileges were granted to work around the high school things."

The city of Passaic and Passaic High named Jan. 17 as the official "Shirelles Day."

Lee said the memory will stand with her for a long time, especially since she still lives in Passaic.

"I break out into a smile whenever I pass it by," she said. "It is nice to be honored by your own. It was really special after being honored when the kids sang along with us just like when we started."

Special privileges at an early age didn't corrupt the group as it has so many young people who take on adult-like responsibility. Lee said she has not changed much as far as her roots go.

"I never changed," she said. "We always put God first to take care of us and he always did. We do the same things we have always done — same friends, same church, and everybody still knows me."

Lee said she hopes the community will come share the evening with them.

"Come out and enjoy the show whether it's cold or raining," she said. "If you want to come out and dance, dance. If you want to come out and sing, sing."

Hall of Fame director resigns

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—Less than five months after the gala opening of the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and Museum in Cleveland, and just a week after the 11th annual Hall of Fame induction dinner in New York, museum director Dennis Barrie announced his resignation. The surprise move, announced last Wednesday, takes effect March 1.

"This is a good time for me to go," Barrie said this week from his office at the museum. "The ideas, conceptions and staff that I wanted in this building—I got them all here and got critical and popular acclaim. That's a nice Jim Brown moment on which to leave," Barrie said, referring to the legendary football star who suddenly retired from the Cleveland Browns at the height of his career.

Barrie, former director of Cincinnati's Contemporary Arts Center, has done a spectacular job since being hired in 1993.

At that time, the function, vision and ultimate mission of the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame and Museum were still essentially unfocused, partly because the music industry captains who created it were concentrating on fund-raising and construction.

Magic and Michael's 'addiction' to game gives NBA sense of class

By Michael Wilbon
The Washington Post

Bless their hearts for coming back. You can say Michael and Magic are addicted to professional basketball and all that accompanies it, and you would be correct. But as much as they needed the NBA, basketball needed them even more. Desperately so. Bless their hearts for coming back to show a spoiled, overrated, egomaniacal generation of little brats what true greatness really is.

You know the Bulls and the Lakers are going to meet in the NBA Finals, don't you? And when it happens, I don't want to hear about it being "fixed" or how there's a "conspiracy" between the league and the TV networks.

The only conspiracy will be one of hard work, of extra practice and dedication, of gamesmanship, of loving something so dearly you work to be better at it than anybody, past or present. Did you see Magic hit those left-handed hooks in his return against Golden State? Left-handed hooks. Magic didn't have that in 1991. He's added more to his game in retirement than some Generation Xers have in the prime of their careers.

It's up to Michael and Magic (and Charles Barkley) to stick around long enough to teach a whole slew of 20-something kids that having commercials and millions of dollars doesn't mean you're a great basketball player. The two conditions can be, and too often are, mutually exclusive.

When the issue arises of why the league is so bad, most people give the easy answer: expansion.

That's not it, not really. Sure, the talent pool is thinned now that there are 29 teams, but that's not the biggest problem. Michael Jordan said, "The guys, the young guys, don't know how to play now." They don't even know how to practice."

Jordan went on to point out how he can take advantage of today's young stars in part because they can't counter certain basic plays he had mastered by the time he was 26. People got all over Jordan's case for saying a year ago that the youngsters lacked professionalism. It was the truth then, and it's the truth now.

The league is less than it should be now because today's stars frequently aren't even fundamentally sound, much less great basketball players.

A coach suggests they work on something, the kid cops an attitude. Practices get interrupted by beepers and cell phones and agents who need a signature. That's why Magic couldn't coach these clowns: Sensitive to the criticism, Jordan didn't name names, but I will. A partial list has to include some of the biggest names like Derrick Coleman, Kenny Anderson, Latrell Sprewell, Shawn Kemp, Gary Payton, Vernon Maxwell, Isaiah Rider, Jamal Mashburn and Todd Day. Shawn Bradley didn't get traded because it appears he doesn't have the potential; the word is he won't pay the price to be great, like Rik Smits did.

So many of the players drafted in the lottery the last five years are much, much less than they should be. That's why the exceptions, like Shaq and Penny Hardaway and Juwan Howard stand in such stark contrast.

relieved to find his shooting touch after struggling in the last few ball games.

"I've been struggling a little bit, and it's always nice to get a few to go down and get your confidence back," he said. "There was a lot of excitement in the locker room. You lose three or four games in a row, and it's pretty easy to get your dober down. Tonight we came out and played well at times, played hard, got the victory, and that was important."

Burzynski also said the team was well balanced, and picked up its game when ISU was concentrating on Hawkins and Hudson.

"I think with this team we have a lot of weapons," he said. "When one guy's struggling, we have another guy to pick it up, and they were keying on Hawkins and Hudson."

Burzynski had nothing but good things to say about the freshman, and hoped they could keep it up for the remainder of the season.

"You can't say enough about them right now," he said. "Tonight James (Jackson) and Watts came up huge. If they continue to play like that, it's going to be exciting down the stretch."

Tucker

"I'll play any position the team needs me to play."

Jaratio Tucker
Saluki forward

the Salukis switched to a full-court defense to shut ISU's offense down. Tucker hit an open floor lay up that sealed the victory and put them up by 16 with 6:58 left.

Tucker said he is willing to do whatever it takes to help the team win.

"I'll play any position the team needs me to play," he said. "As far as me going inside, that frees Scottie on the outside, and that opens it up for the rest of the guys, he said."

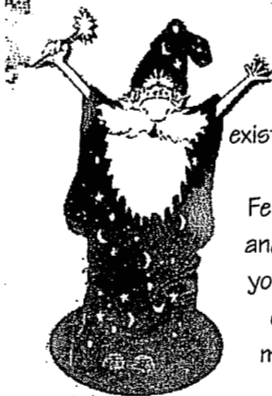

Coach Herrin said he was not sure if Tucker would practice Friday, but was pleased with his effort.

"Tucker was pretty banged up, but he came to play basketball for us," Herrin said.

of tower, but it's starting to pay off."

Andrey said Siracusano will have to place in the top eight at the U. S. Nationals during April in order to get his invitation to the Olympic Trials on the springboard.

"In the five years he was here with us, he did that (placing in the top eight) one time, and he knocked on the door several times.

"He's always hovered around that top-eighth place," Andrey said. Performing well at the U. S. Nationals was not the only achievement of Siracusano's during his stay at SIUC.

Among his long list of accomplishments over the water, Siracusano holds the men's Recreation Center Pool records on the 1-meter and 3-meter boards.

He holds the 1-meter record with 524.7 points and is the owner of the 3-meter record, which is 583.5 points.

Andrey said the 23-year-old Siracusano is taking some of his time and devoting it to platform diving in an effort to qualify in both forms of diving. Andrey also said Siracusano is focusing on the upcoming Olympic Trials, but he will have to make a decision after the Trials.

"Obviously he's got a decision to make after these Trials; 'Do I continue to 2000?'" Andrey said.

"He wants to continue on to 2000."

Siracusano said one of his current goals is to make it to the Olympics in 2000.

"I'm going to go year by year and see how I feel both health wise and mentally," Siracusano said.

Provided Siracusano remains healthy in all aspects and continues to perform well in diving, as Andrey points out, he may have a better chance of Olympic competition in four years.

"I think his best shot will be in 2000," Andrey said.

"Part of that is due to attrition, the fact there are twelve guys ahead of him who are going to retire, and he's going to continue to get better and better."

"He doesn't have to worry about making grades, he doesn't have to worry about getting up and going to class, he doesn't have to worry about the pressures of the NCAA rules, he is doing one thing, and that's diving every day and focusing his attention on a very high level," Andrey said.

taking him in to the trials rather than training here and going home a week-and-a-half right before his trials and finishing up with a coach who hadn't seen him all year, and I totally agree with him," Walker said.

Walker said Weseloh's chances of making the Canadian team are good, and that he made the right choice returning to Canada.

"He has to have a good meet and it's not a given," Walker said. "There are three or four guys fighting for a second spot (on the team), and Liam is one of the guys fighting for that second spot."

Although Herman Louw, a swimmer from South Africa, is not competing for SIUC this year, he will start his Saluki career in the fall of 1996.

"If he has a good meet, he's putting himself close to medalling."

*Rick Walker
men's swim coach*

Walker has high hopes for Louw's Olympic Games bid, and is patiently awaiting his arrival to SIUC.

"I talked to him today, and he is doing some phenomenal times in workouts," Walker said. "If he doesn't make the Olympic Team in South Africa, I'll be shocked."

"If he has a good meet, he's putting himself close to medalling," Walker said. "He's about the best all-around swimmer I've seen in a long time."

Dawgs halt four-game skid, Sycamores 78-65

SIUC outscores Indiana State 43-31 in 2nd half

By Chad Anderson
DE Sports Editor

As the season goes into the final nine games, coaches look for their freshman to gain confidence for tournament time, and SIUC's freshmen answered the call in a 78-65 victory over Indiana State Wednesday night to put the Salukis' four-game losing streak to an end.

Freshmen forwards James Watts, Monte Jenkins and James Jackson all contributed hard minutes off the bench for the Salukis, and helped keep the Saluki tournament hopes alive by improving the team's record to 10-10 overall and 3-6 in the Missouri Valley Conference.

With the Sycamores holding sophomore guards Shane Hawkins and Troy Hudson at bay for most of the first half, the Dawg offense had to come from elsewhere.

Hudson was held to only two points in the first half, and Hawkins could only manage to hustle his way to a hard-earned four points. Both players elevated their games after the intermission, though, as Hudson and Hawkins both finished with 16 points.

James Watts hard-played 23 minutes provided five points and nine boards, and earned him a standing ovation from the crowd as he fouled out late in the game.

Jackson added four points with six rebounds, and Jenkins made the ISU defense cringe with an opportunistic eight points—including a thunderous dunk to put the Salukis ahead 33-30 with 1:41 left in the first half.

ISU coach Sherman Dillard said the Saluki defense wore his team down in the second half, and that was the difference in the game.

"I thought the pressure bothered us a little bit, and took us out of our flow," he said. "They put the pressure on us, and were able to get some transition buckets. I think that was triggered by the fact they were able to score offensively, and it gave them some life."

Senior forward Scott Burzynski scored 12 points, and had the only two Saluki three-pointers in the first half.

Burzynski said the team was excited about ending its four-game losing streak, and was Breaking a four game losing streak was not easy for the Salukis, but a strong hustling effort put forth by senior forward Jaratio Tucker helped the Dawgs defeat Indiana State to end their four game losing streak:

Tucker played 34 minutes and scored 8 points, with 4 rebounds, and one assist in a winning cause. Tucker, who is nursing a hurt leg and did not practice Tuesday, was all over the floor as he shot 40 percent from the floor.

Former Saluki diver in training for '96 Olympic Trials, medal

By Jared Driskill
Daily Egyptian Reporter

As he entered his last season of collegiate competition, former SIUC All-American diver Rob Siracusano had a goal to win an Olympic Gold Medal.

Because of Siracusano's graduation last May, he does not have to think about final exams, and he has no NCAA training regulations to be concerned about.

Now living in Ann Arbor, Mich., Siracusano rooms with 1992 Diving, Gold Medalist Mark Lenzi, and is concentrating on training for the 1996 Olympic Trials.

Siracusano said living and training with Lenzi is rewarding and gives him someone to look up to.

"He (Lenzi) is a great role model to watch train, and I have a lot of respect for him," Siracusano said.

SIUC diving coach Dave Ardrey, who coached every season Siracusano spent at

Rob Siracusano

SIUC, explained what Siracusano is aiming his diving talents toward.

"He (Siracusano) is training springboard as well as shifting his focus on platform diving," Ardrey said. "He wants to make the Olympic Trials in '96."

Siracusano, who had not been able to train platform diving on a regular basis before he moved to Ann Arbor, said he is feeling comfortable with the 10-meter tower.

"I think I'm more comfortable with the tower, which is scary because it's up there," Siracusano said. "It's been rough working a lot

Swim duo has sights set on triumph in Atlanta

By Jared Driskill
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Two swimmers who are just beginning their Saluki men's swimming careers will make their bids for Olympic competition this summer along with Siracusano.

Liam Weseloh, a freshman from Toronto, Ontario, is currently in Toronto training for the Canadian Olympic Team.

Men's coach Rick Walker said there is no restriction on training time per day where Weseloh is, and said that allows him to swim longer distances and more often than SIUC swimmers can.

Walker said competition in Canada is as competitive as competition in the U.S.

"He's got a better shot at making the Canadian team than he does here (in the U.S.)," Walker said. "The swimmers (in Canada) are equally as good as the swimmers here; they just don't go as deep."

Walker explained why Weseloh left early to train for the Canadian Olympic Team.

"One of the reasons he went back was that he would feel more comfortable with the same coach

Between the Lines

Despite a drastic drop in the temperature, the SIUC women's basketball team is hoping to remain hot heading into Des Moines tonight to take on conference foe Drake University.

The Salukis head into Drake hoping to improve its 7-2 conference record and put an end to a string of bad luck against the Bulldogs. During the course of the last three years, the Salukis have compiled an 0-6 conference record against Drake in Des Moines.

SIUC, who's tied with Illinois State for second place honors, have won five of its last six conference games. At 4-4 in valley action, the struggling Bulldogs have dropped two of its last three conference matchups.

Junior center Marcus Camby of top-ranked Massachusetts is the leader in a mid-season poll ranking candidates for the 1996 Naismith Award, which goes to college basketball's top player. Camby, who recently sat out four games after collapsing on Jan. 14, received 35 percent of the total points in voting by 75 Division-One sports information directors. Camby has been a major contributor to the Minutemen's 18-0 start, averaging 20.8 points, 7.5 rebounds and 3.6 blocked shots a game.

The Philadelphia Phillies signed four-time All-Star catcher Benito Santiago to a one-year contract worth $1.1 million, plus incentives. The 30-year-old Santiago hit 286 in 81 games with Cincinnati last season, with 11 homers and 44 RBIs. Defensively, Santiago led all NL catchers with a .996 fielding percentage.
