Contract plan for faculty to help students

RESCHEDULING:

New idea should offer students more options at summer

WILLIAM HATFIELD

Columbia has been forced to increase the annual number of television and radio stations by more than 800, an increase of 11 percent, and the president has said that the plan would compensate for the loss of programming.

According to Dr. Gerald, the plan was not intended to increase the number of undergraduate courses offered in the summer and that a plan was to allow students who take courses in the summer to graduate at least one year earlier.

Funding for WSIU-TV and radio stations dwindles

REDUCCTIONS: Federal resources restrict stations' air time, programming.

TAMARA L. HABER

Funding for WSIU-TV and radio stations has been reduced from $1,014,200 in 1996 to $607,368 in 1997, and the stations expect to receive no funding by the year 2002, Robert, WSIU station manager, said.

"This fiscal year, our stations are affected in a major way because of reduced federal funding," Geric said.

Reduced funding has been a major issue for the stations to turn to other sources of funding to balance the operations budget. WSIU has asked members, viewers and community businesses to make contributions to the radio and television stations, Richard Kueemcke, WSIU-TV producer, said.

Kueemcke said WSIU-TV channel 5 and WSIU-FM 90.7 in Carbondale as well as WSIU-TV channel 3 and WSIU-FM 90.7 in Effingham serve all 66 counties.

"Both television and radio stations reach all the way from Effingham to Carbondale," Kueemcke said.

Although the stations have been forced to schedule more fund-raisers, Kueemcke said the stations' programming was not affected as much as expected.

Kueemcke said broadcasting times only have been cut by about 10 hours. Previously, broadcasting began at 6 a.m. and ended at 2 a.m.

MIKAI J. HARRIS [DAILY EGYPTIAN BLEND]

A student's unfavorable comment about an avant-garde performance inspired him to wear a furry animal suit and another to wear a lavender of syrup, Saran Wrap on Wednesday to show their school spirit.

On Jan. 23, David Lohman, a senior in English, wore a purple nightgown to have school spirit. Kay Miller, a freshman in computer science from Rockford, made a comment about Lohman's and Buckman's antics, saying she "came to college to get away from things like this."

Lohman issued a breakdancing challenge in a rebuttal against Miller's comments, published in the Daily Egyptian on Wednesday. He challenged Miller to meet at the gallery on Wednesday.

But Miller did not show up to meet the challenge. Instead, Jay Dandurand, a junior in sound engineering from Columbia College in Chicago, said he came to Carbondale to represent his school spirit theme and a performance by Lohman at the gallery.

"I don't know how her one-on-one personal bias, he said. "If I came out to represent her because I knew she wouldn't show up."

Lohman said Wednesday's "Break-Off" and other performances during the week made "Spirit Week" even better than he first imagined. Each day of the week had a school theme and a performance by Lohman at the gallery. "It came out a lot better than I'd planned," he said. "A lot of people came to the performances, which were really amazing."

For Tuesday's "Funny Hair Day" noon art performance, Lohman said he and his friends cut off all of their pubic hair and placed the hair in a pile on the Allyn Building floor. Another person covered his chest with maple syrup and did push-ups into the pile of hair. "I think that was a crowd favorite," he said. "It was humorous and kind of an offbeat way to do 'Funny Hair Day.'"

On Thursday's "Jersey Day" performance, Lohman said he wrapped himself in Saran Wrap, covered himself with soap, baby powder and crayons. "I don't know her on a one-to-one personal basis," he said. "But I came out to represent her because I knew she wouldn't show up."

Dandurand said he rejected Miller's petition to take Miller's place. "I donned a purple nightgown to come out screaming at them to have school spirit."

Candy brings back memories of lost Valentine's sweet gifts

I know women are traditionally the recipients of flowers rather than men, but I've decided to celebrate Valentine's Day this year by sending flowers to the man I love. We parted ways a few years ago, and I gave him every year around this time, and something sad deep inside my cynical shell aches to see it again.

It was the candy this year that made it "all come back to me," as Celine Dion says. Every year, the bravest, kindest man I've ever known would come over, sweep me into his car, and give me a breezy, whisker-itchy kiss on the cheek. Then he'd open the box filled with treats and show me the treasures he had for me: foiled chocolate, raspberry-flavored bonbons and a host of all sorts of conversation sweets, with love of words printed on them in pink, good coloring.

He'd give me a vase for romance after I learned there was nothing magic about February 14th (the only holiday you can abbreviate "V-D.")—but it grew, figured out that federal regulations prohibited watermelon seed shoots from being shot-tested, and realized there was more to love than tearing Star Wars Valentines apart along the perforations. But despite my cynicism, I still miss my noble knight in Big Smile Sweatsuits.

It came back to me that Saturday night at Walmart as I passed a display of conversation hearts. Grandma died when I was 13, but as I looked at those boxes of candy, I suddenly saw him sitting in one of those small, tiny, little brother on one knee and my little sister on the other, looking through his thoughtful to tell them what the letters on their candy spelled. Ever again. Ever again. Ever again. Ever again.

U.S. Army ads misleading

Dear Editor:

"Have you seen these fabulous advertisements for enlistment into the U.S. Army? It's quite a deal: three or four years of your life for between $18,000 to $25,000 for college. This amount is payable during the four years..."

This is an Army recruitment advertisement. The following is a point-by-point analysis of the advertisement:

1. The advertisement claims that $18,000 to $25,000 is payable during the four years of enlistment. However, it is important to note that the actual amount of money receivable is much less than advertised. According to the Department of Defense, the basic pay for enlisted soldiers is $18,000 per year. Therefore, the total amount of money receivable during a four-year enlistment is $72,000.

2. The advertisement claims that the Army is a great place to work. However, it is important to note that the Army is a place where soldiers have to work long hours and perform dangerous tasks. The majority of soldiers are not able to work for the entire four years due to injuries, illnesses, or other reasons.

3. The advertisement claims that the Army is a good place to make friends. However, it is important to note that the Army is a place where soldiers have to work long hours and perform dangerous tasks. The majority of soldiers are not able to make friends due to their busy schedules.

4. The advertisement claims that the Army is a good place to get a college degree. However, it is important to note that the Army is a place where soldiers have to work long hours and perform dangerous tasks. The majority of soldiers are not able to get a college degree due to their busy schedules.

5. The advertisement claims that the Army is a good place to travel the world. However, it is important to note that the Army is a place where soldiers have to work long hours and perform dangerous tasks. The majority of soldiers are not able to travel the world due to their busy schedules.

6. The advertisement claims that the Army is a good place to learn important life skills. However, it is important to note that the Army is a place where soldiers have to work long hours and perform dangerous tasks. The majority of soldiers are not able to learn important life skills due to their busy schedules.

7. The advertisement claims that the Army is a good place to earn a comfortable salary. However, it is important to note that the Army is a place where soldiers have to work long hours and perform dangerous tasks. The majority of soldiers are not able to earn a comfortable salary due to their busy schedules.

8. The advertisement claims that the Army is a good place to help others. However, it is important to note that the Army is a place where soldiers have to work long hours and perform dangerous tasks. The majority of soldiers are not able to help others due to their busy schedules.

9. The advertisement claims that the Army is a good place to make a difference. However, it is important to note that the Army is a place where soldiers have to work long hours and perform dangerous tasks. The majority of soldiers are not able to make a difference due to their busy schedules.

10. The advertisement claims that the Army is a good place to get a job. However, it is important to note that the Army is a place where soldiers have to work long hours and perform dangerous tasks. The majority of soldiers are not able to get a job due to their busy schedules.

It is important to note that the Army is a place where soldiers have to work long hours and perform dangerous tasks. The majority of soldiers are not able to do all of these things due to their busy schedules.
Immigrant law cause concerns

APPEAL: Governors call for the restoration of benefits for legal immigrants.

WASHINGTON — U.S. governors, meeting in Washington on Saturday, expressed bipartisan concern about cutbacks in benefits for legal immigrants under last year's welfare reform legislation, but Republicans immediately began backing away from efforts to push Congress hard to change the law.

GOP governors participating in a four-day meeting of the National Governors' Association passed a resolution Saturday opposing any major changes in the welfare reform law. But with some of their own members fearing the financial burden their states will face, the resolution of the Republican Governors' Association also calls on Congress to make "technical corrections" to ease the impact of the law on some categories of legal immigrants.

Democratic governors — and some Republican governors — want to do more. They are supporting a proposal before the Republican governor's association calling on Congress to restore cash benefits and food stamps for certain disabled and disabled immigrants who entered the country legally before welfare reform was enacted in August 1996.

Some Republican governors from states with sizable immigrant populations have pressed to restore immigrant benefits. But their appeals have met with stiff opposition from Republican leaders in Congress who think any effort to change the welfare law would risk unraveling last year's carefully crafted compromise on the controversial legislation.

"There has to be a clear commitment from the White House that we can come to the table and talk," said Michigan Gov. John Engler, a Republican. "This is a national crisis. It is a national problem. We have got to get a commitment from the president that we are going to really work on this problem and come to an agreement and that he is going to be there when we do it."
African journalist enhances his skills

TEACHING A CRAFT:
African native plans to train other journalists in Malawi.

TAMEKA L. HICKS
DAILY EAGLE REPORTER

An African reporter said he will take the knowledge gained from his visit at SIUC to better his country when he returns to Africa at the end of this semester.

Aaron Akwete Sande, an undergraduate student from Malawi, said that by attending SIUC he will have a more rounded background in the field of journalism. He currently is taking four journalism courses at SIUC.

"Being at this big university is a good experience for me," Sande said.

Sande arrived in America this semester from Malawi, which is a country about the size of Illinois neighboring Zambia. Sande said when he returns to Malawi in May, he plans to teach and train other journalists at the first Malawi Institute of Journalism that was built in September.

Though Malawi had no journalism schools prior to September, Sande said he learned his craft through other humanitarian projects.

"There was a compelling need for change in democracy in Malawi, so I began my devotional writing for democratic change in my country," he said of his country, which gained independence in 1964.

Sande taught history and wrote English and history textbooks for primary schools for six years. He also has reported for a radio station and newspaper in Malawi.

Sande said he was chosen to attend SIUC by the Freedom Forum International Journalists-in-Residence Program.

The Freedom Forum International Journalists-in-Residence Program is a fellowship and international program that chooses international journalism professionals and educators to study reporting techniques in the United States, said Kerstin Denko, administrative assistant of the Freedom Forum.

Denko said people interested from Africa, Asia, Central and Eastern Europe and Latin America are required to submit an application letter to the Freedom Forum. Twelve people are chosen from a field of about 300 to attend one of nine universities participating in the fellowship.

In previous years the stations have had just one drive, but will now have to have four this year, Kuenneke said.

The stations have increased their funds by buying direct mail appeals, telemarketing, member renewals and payroll deduction.

"We have had to make this into a year-long effort," Gerig said.

In March pledge drive, $20,000 was raised. After the February and March pledge drives are completed, an overall $55,000 is expected to be raised with $123,000 coming from local donations, Gerig said.

Since the opening of WSIU-TV in October has decreased from 58 to 27.5 in 1995 and ends.

Full-time staffing at WSIU and WUSI in Olney has decreased, and the stations have been forced to make part-time positions.

Gerig said positions eliminated at WUSI included management, production and the director of technology.

WSU-TV operations merged with WSIU operations in Carbondale to continue its regular programming, Gerig said.

Student workers at WSIU television and radio stations also have been affected by the reduced funding.

WSIU provides about 150 students with learning experience, Gerig said.

Ifs good that I'm not doing this for the money, but for the learning experience," he said. "I'm working about six hours a week now, and I still enjoy it."

WSIU-TV has eliminated special acquisition programs such as music specials and movies, Gerig said that with the cutbacks, the station has been able to maintain its PBS schedule, which includes programs such as the Lawrence Welk Show.

Programming for WSIU radio has cut back on symphony and performance programs because of reduced funding.

Instead of live music announcements, the radio station has turned to using a recorded classical music service, Gerig said.

To compensate for the funding cuts the station will have an increased number of televised pledge drives.

Now the broadcast begins at 6:45 a.m. and ends at 12:30 a.m.

SIUC Library Affairs
February 1997 Seminar Series

Morris Library will offer a series of seminars on electronic research databases and the World Wide Web. Seminars are open to all and will be held in Morris Library. Registration is strongly recommended. To register, please call 453-2918, send an e-mail message to upf@lib.siu.edu, or stop by the Undergraduate Library Information Desk.

Most seminars are held in the Technology Demonstration Lab, which is room 103D in the Undergraduate Library; other locations in Morris Library are as noted. Enrollment limits are also listed. Items marked with an asterisk [*] are taught by Instructional Support Services staff, located in the lower level of the Library.

NAKAJO

not been made. Sanders said SIU is negotiating with the Pacific School Entity, a group of NakaJ0 business people who financially back the NakaJ0 campus, to determine what programs can be cut to keep the campus open.

The next round of negotiations has not been scheduled, he said, but the University will make its decision by mid-May.

Selling real estate values in Japan have declined in recent months, Sanders said, and a decrease in the yen means an increase in costs across Japan.

If Japan's economy continues to slide for the next few years, SIU might have to consider closing the campus. Since his last visit to Japan in September, the yen has lost 10 percent of its value against the dollar, Sanders said.

The Pacific School Entity's costs will continue to rise as the yen falls, Sanders said, meaning it will be more expensive to fund the NakaJ0 campus' operations.

Sanders said SIU learned last week that banks in Japan will not lend money to the Pacific School Entity for short-term financing. "As a consequence, we have been asked by our Japanese partners to consider substantial cutbacks in the program during the next year," Sanders said.

In addition, it is unlikely SIU's Board of Trustees would approve of pumping funds into the NakaJ0 program, he said.

"Our Board of Trustees has had a long-standing commitment that we would not spend straight dollars in the delivery of the program in NakaJ0," he said.

SIUC Chancellor Donald Beggs said SIUC was considering every option to keep the NakaJ0 campus open.

"We want to do everything we possibly can to support our partners and to see what other alternatives we can provide," Beggs said.

Jack Dyer, University Relations executive director, said SIU's presence in Japan distinguishes the University.

"It's important to maintain international dimensions," he said. "It distinguishes us from other Illinois colleges."

Last fall, a decline in enrollment and an increase in maintenance costs at NakaJ0 resulted in a report that the campus was closing, but University officials said the report was unfounded at that time.

Last semester, enrollment at NakaJ0 dropped from 327 to 285. The possibility of closing the NakaJ0 campus means SIU's efforts to establish a campus in Malaysia are more important, he said.

"This situation says pushing ahead with our discussions in Malaysia are even more important today than they were yesterday," he said.

In October, SIU announced it will try to open a campus in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, to increase its presence in the Pacific. The University estimated a campus there would be more affordable to students than the NakaJ0 campus.

The program in NakaJ0, located northeast of Tokyo, began in 1988, primarily as an English-as-a-second-language program.

In 1989, the undergraduate curriculum, taught mostly by American faculty, was expanded. An exchange program lets about 15 American students attend the NakaJ0 campus each semester.
Clinton's speech to address balanced budget, welfare

STATE OF THE UNION: Analysts say this will be first time to reset policy agenda.
The Washington Post
WASHINGTON—This is the week when President Clinton gets to claim the prize he won in the November election. It is the chance, for the first time in two years, to again set Washington's policy agenda rather than merely respond to the Republicans.

With the State of the Union speech he will deliver on Tuesday night, and the annual budget he will release on Thursday, Clinton hopes to ensure that the season of bipartisan cooperation he promised in last month's Inaugural Address will be on his terms.

The reality of divided government means there will be plenty of reservations to come: How much should Medicare be cut? Do tax breaks for education make sense? Clinton's annual repositioning in 1995 and 1996 means he already has accepted Republican assumptions about spending and taxes far different than those he came to Washington with four years ago.

For the State of the Union, the goal is to demonstrate that there is concrete policy substance behind the high-flying but vague rhetoric from the inauguration about education and embracing the future.

The speech will begin, aides say, with an appeal for Congress to work with him on "unfinished business": reaching a balanced budget deal, implementing last year's overhaul of welfare and enacting campaign finance reform legislation.

Then it will pivot into a long section on education, in which Clinton will call for "national standards" on education and argue, in more detail than he has in the past, how the federal government can work with states and localities to fashion more rigorous curriculums and testing.

White House aides say they hope the speech will demonstrate to skeptics that the long string of post-season proposals Clinton made during the election campaign, such as encouraging volunteer efforts, wiring schools for the Internet and tax credits for college tuition.

United States. This is the first year SIUC has participated.

Sande said SIUC is almost triple the size of the University of Malawi. The University of Malawi only enrolls about 8,000 students to SIUC's 22,000. The size of SIUC also makes more room for international students, Sande said.

"This campus is so big, there are students here who speak all types of languages," he said. "In Malawi, we cannot only speak English, French, and German."

Sande said there are more things to do in America than in his home country.

"There are more financial problems in Malawi, so we don't have as many activities," he said. But Sande said he has not had the chance to explore all that the area has to offer.

"I'd been expecting good time," said Sande, who is used to tropical weather and cool winters in Malawi, which is south of the equator.

Sande said besides the climate change, there is a cultural difference. He said the leadership women are in high places in Malawi, and women are treated as equals as opposed to in Malawi, where men are considered dominant to women.

"It's great that women are in high places (in America)," he said.

Donald Jugenheimer, director of the School of Journalism, said the school is happy to have Sande this semester and hopes more international students will follow in future years.

Jugenheimer said that in the School of Journalism, 62 percent of students are in the master's program and 38 percent are in the doctoral program. International students in the undergraduate program make up only 2.2 percent.

If Sande is influential upon his return to Malawi, hopefully more students will want to come here, Jugenheimer said.

Now that Malawi has been independent since 1964, Sande is looking forward to the future in the readjustments in his life.

"My primary goal is to advance in education and academically," he said.

SPOKESMAN FROM NAPLES

"I haven't given up on Kay. I don't give up easily on Salukis," he said.

"It's not my job just to perform because there is such a split on this campus. Nobody cares about SU. We are only as great as our school," he said.

Jeremy Anderson, a senior in Spanish and English from Monmouth, said he skipped a meeting to see the "Break-Off." "I was going to stay in at the meeting, but I decided this was more important," he said. "There was a high energy today. I love it; it's a good thing." Lohman said there will be a "Spirit Week '98," and that he hopes other performance artists will take note of what he accomplished.

"I just hope my performances will raise the awareness of other forms of art besides painting and sculpture," he said.

Hudson said he has tried to concentrate more on other areas of his game, especially scouting, to help the team get back on the winning track.

Much like Monday's game against Creighton, the Salukis opened up six runs against the Bulldogs. SIUC jumped out to a 6-0 lead and matched a 2-7 lead that they had in the first half against Creighton.

But while the Salukis blew their 10-point lead against the Bluejays Monday, SIUC built its lead to 43-31 against the Bulldogs heading into the locker room at the end of the first half.

Something Jenkins said may have helped the Salukis get back on track as a players-only meeting that took place prior to Thursday's afternoon to air out some differences and bring the team closer together.

Hudson said the Salukis addressed trying to prevent teams from making consecutive trips, similar to Creighton's at Thursday's meeting.

"We talked at practice that if we get a lead down, we want to continue to do the things that get us there," Hudson said. "Tonight, we were more focused when we got a lead, we took good shots and knocked them down. Drake, whose tallest player was 6 foot 7 inches tall, stayed within 10 points for the start of the second half, but the Salukis' size was enough down the Bulldogs, and SIUC pulled away for an 18-point victory.

The win also marked two milestones for the Salukis. Herin earned his 100th career win in Missouri Valley Conference play, and Hudson broke the conference's single-season record for three-point field goals by hitting six three-pointers against the Bulldogs. He currently has a total of 97 for the season. SIUC now 1-1 in conference play.

LISTEN UP: The Saluki athletes are ready to play on the road, you've got to play even better than you do at home. I know you're going to be ready to play us, but we've got to go in and play our game.

Saturday's win also opened a seven-game stretch in the Salukis' season. After tonight's contest at Indiana State, the Salukis host sixth-place Wichita State University Wednesday and travel to Des Moines, Iowa, for a rematch with Drake Saturday.

Herrin said beating Indiana State by 38 points and having to play them again so soon could present the Salukis with some problems. But picking up three wins could put them right back in the conference race.

"Indiana State comes on us very much," Herrin said. "Indiana State played with a lot of confidence in their next two games. But if we can get the next three, we can be right back in the hunt."

Woods comes up short at Pebble Beach

HOLD THAT TIGER: Five-time winner at Pebble sets tournament record, nets $342,000 THE LOS ANGELES TIMES

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif.—In golf, you have something called local knowledge, and Mark 'O'Meara used that place like the back of his swing.

'O'Meara knows every grain of sand, every point of grass, every tree, every sea lion and every pebble at Pebble Beach. He just has to, because there is no other explanation for what 'O'Meara did Sunday on some of the most famous real estate in golf. He held off Tiger Woods and won the AT&T Pebble Beach Pro-am for the fifth time. It's getting so that when you think of this tournament, Bing Crosby, Cornell Ray and Mark 'O'Meara will be mentioned in the same breath as the triple jumpers and the world's greatest golfers.

The 40-year-old with the wry swing batted two of the last three holes, laced with his fourth consecutive 67, set a tournament record with his score of 268 and won a personal-best $342,000.

And if that isn't enough, 'O'Meara proved to be tougher than the ball that bore Cypress tree when he managed to avoid getting tangled with Woods in the stretch.

Woods, who had a 63 Sunday, finished with a 64 and missed a playoff by one shot. Woods and David Duval tied for second, four shots ahead of Jim Furyk.

In the end, the 51st edition of what began as Crosby's clambake and golf outing for his buddies turned into a contest between neighbors from the same resort community in Florida, who go fishing together and play a little friendly golf on the side.

"I love Mark to death," said Woods, 19 years younger than 'O'Meara. "We talked about it back home—'Wouldn't it be great to battle it out down the stretch?' And behold, that's what happened.

Woods batted the par-3 17th to get within one shot of O'Meara, but 'O'Meara answered with his own 64 on the 17th, rolling in a 10-foot putt.

That left only the 549-yard par-5 18th, and Woods knew he needed an eagle, so he went for it. With 200 yards to the pin, Woods smacked a 3-wood to the left front of the green.

He had about 35 feet to the hole to make eagle, but Woods sent the ball rolling about three feet past on the right. He made birdie, but 'O'Meara needed only to par the last to win, which he accomplished easily.

That was his final chance, and he put him himself in those same shoes when, on the 13th hole, he tried an aggressive flop shot after missing the green. But Woods failed to keep the ball below the hole and walked away with a bogey.

'There has been an all-time great career for O'Meara, who has not won a major tournament, but in 17 years owns 13 victories. And now five are from Pebble Beach—1988, 1989, 1990, 1992 and 1997.

What's more, he didn't use Woods wins, which seems to be his news these days.

"He's the hottest thing in sports right now," O'Meara said. "To hold off a young, talented player, well, hey, OK, that's great for the 40-year-olds."

Jackson was the Salukis' main dynamic weapon. He was a point guard insurance policy for an injury, shooting 43 percent from behind the arc, which was third in the conference.

Senior guard and co-captain Kasia McGreggor was held to 12 points and three steals, but her effort was good enough to make the NIV just two points behind and earned her 1,000 points for her career.

McClendon, who was awarded the game ball for her record-setting performance, said the accomplishments were overshadowed by the team's loss.

"It was a big accomplishment," she said. "But it was a little hard to feel happy because we lost two games in a row."

Despite the loss, the captain said she thought the Salukis gave a good effort.

"We didn't shoot well, but I think we are playing better. I am proud of the team because we played better than Indiana State . . ."

"We didn't shoot well, but I think we are playing better," McClendon said.

I am proud of the team because we played better than Indiana State, and hopefully that will carry over Tuesday when the team plays Vanderbilt University, and the rest of the conference season.

Scott said she and the team were disappointed with the loss, but the Salukis are not giving up yet.

"The girls were crying after the game in the locker room," she said. "And I have great appreciation for that because it tells me how much they care.

"We are staying together, and if I have to lose with any team, I would want to lose with this team.

The Salukis will next play 7-ranked Vanderbilt University Tuesday in a non-conference contest Tip-off is 7 p.m. in Nashville, Tenn.

"Baja is our best number in this event (400 meters)," DeNeon said. "Stella Hollins won the event, but if Baja would have run, there was the possibility of more points. But Hollins was in a class by herself in the 400-meter dash."

Stella said her race was mentally tough for her, but she really wanted to win.

"I didn't think that there was any more pressure than usual," she said. "But I was led to feel happy because we lost two games in a row."
