Orion Fiorino, 10, of Makanda, takes advantage of the snow Saturday to sled on a hill near the SIU Arena. "This is one of the best spots to sled Florence Field. Carbohydrates need between six and eight liters of snow over the weekend — the most the area has seen since this December 2004, said Jayyn Wilson, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Paducah, Ky. Temperatures will warm up by mid-week, but the melting snow she didn't cause any flooding, Wilson said. The next weather system will come this weekend and bring only rain, he said.

Low turnout expected for Feb. 2 primary

NICK QUIGLEY
Daily Egyptian

Experts expect turnout for the 2010 primaries to be less than stellar. A little more than 1.6 million voters turned out for the 2006 Illinois primary, according to a report by D.C.-based, American University's Center for the Study of the American Electorate — and pundits such as Greg Hinz of Crain's Chicago Business predict a decrease in numbers who show up, with fewer than 1 million voters turning out for the Democrats.

Indifference that has existed since the U.S.S 1910 decision to shift the balance of primary voting power from party bosses to voters is mainly to blame, said Dr. Charles Leonard, a visiting professor at the Paul Simon Public Policy Institute.

The unintended consequence of that reform was low voter turnout, he added. "People are generally uninterested in primaries," Leonard said. "For some, it's just a procedural phenomenon."

Hinz wrote Jan. 4 that he also expects "low to extremely low voter turnout."

Ryan Mathews, a freshman from Alton studying radiology, said despite being registered to vote, he wasn't impressed with the turnout. "I don't really know where to vote around here," he said. "Honestly, people don't really care about it." According to http://bwscenter.com, there are more than 7,000 Illinois primary election candidates for 2010, with more than 11,000 polling places. Despite this, Leonard feels voters have their attention directed elsewhere. "A lot of people are just now putting attention into presidential elections, much less focusing on electoral politics," he said.

"It's a good sign," said Mkeya Bates, a sophomore from Chicago studying marketing, "if the primaries are important and plans on voting. "The people you vote for in the primaries are the people you'll have to end up voting for in the general election," she said.

Funding for cross-country bike ride, multiple sclerosis research begins today

DEREK ROBBINS
Daily Egyptian

For Ryan Ferrell, the only difficult thing about traveling across the country on a bicycle is acquiring the money to do so.

The money he needs is not just to support his ride across the United States, he said.

Ferrell, a junior at Southern Illinois University Carbondale, plans on doing a cross-country bike ride from Richmond, Va., to San Francisco starting June 1, to raise money for multiple sclerosis research. They will ride as part of a national group called "Bike the USA for MS," he said.

Ferrell said 65 percent of their fundraising efforts will go toward MS research, and the remaining 35 percent will go to supply the cyclists for the duration of the trip.

"We hope to gather up $30,000 for each rider by the end of our fundraising, and we'll do whatever we can to get it," Ferrell said.

Ferrell added that only rain, he said, would stop him from cycling. The journey across the United States begins today.

"It's not as grueling as you think it is. When you do a day during a day is ride your bike, going 60 or 70 miles in a day is very doable. The most daunting thing about the journey is the idea of the journey," said Geordie Dye, a senior studying business management, who worked on the trip with Ferrell last year. He said he had only been cycling for a year prior to this cross-country excursion.

"Until you do it, you think it's crazier than it really is," Dye said. "It's not really as grueling as you think it is. When all you do during a day is ride your bike, going 60 or 70 miles in a day is very doable. The most daunting thing about the journey is the idea of the journey."

"I viewed cycling as a way to get around town from time to time, but never really as a hobby," Pearlman said. "Joe came back and said the trip was awesome and said I would be doing it again this year, but this time it was for MS. He basically convinced me to go."

Pearlman added, "It's really important. and plans on voting. "The people you vote for in the primaries are the people you'll have to end up voting for in the general election," she said.

Hynes visits rival’s turf in search for votes

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Democrat Dan Hynes is taking his campaign to the hallowed turf of his opponent, Gov. Pat Quinn.

Hynes visited black Chicago churches on Sunday, including some on the West Side near Quinn’s home.

"They teached on religion and policy. He praised God and said he wanted to improve schools and help families struggling to pay bills," said Bob Davis, a Godfrey pastor. "He ministered through the Bible Church, the minister urged worshipers to “take their soul to the polls” and vote for Hynes.

Hynes and Quinn are battling for black votes in an increasingly bitter Democratic primary race.

Several worshipers said they voted for Quinn before but would be a strong advocate for them in Springfield.

Democrats see chance to pick up GOP seat

The Associated Press

HIGHLAND PARK, Ill. — Less than 20 years ago, it was hard to find Democrats running for any office in Illinois’ 10th Congressional District. But now Democrats believe they can finally capture the seat.

For one, it is Illinois’ only open congressional seat. “Incumbent Republican Mark Kirk gave up a shot at a sixth term to instead run for President Barack Obama’s old Senate seat.

The district is a mixture of upscale and working-class communities north of Chicago. It has been moving Democratic, both because of an influx of young families from Chicago and party momentum.

The Democratic candidates for Tuesday’s primary are state Rep. Julie Morrison, business consultant Dan Seals and attorney Elliott Richardson.

But Republicans are also paying close attention, hoping to make a big dent in the Democratic majority in Congress.

Pan-Hellenic Council pays tribute to black culture

Prepare students for Black History Month

MICHAIA CANTY
Daily Egyptian

The SIUC National Pan-Hellenic Council has worked to make sure all students — regardless of race and ethnicity — are involved with Black History Month, which begins today. The National Pan-Hellenic Council hosted events from Jan. 25 to Saturday to unify students and raise awareness of black progressiveness and honor black culture.

Andre Cottrell, an undecided sophomore from Homewood, attended most of NPHC's events. As a minority race on campus, Cottrell said it's good to see other black students make positive contributions to the community.

"From where we were then from oppression, to where we are now in light of setbaks ... we're moving forward," Mosley said. "Our generation is expanding into the corporate world."

When the Greek and campus communities work together much more can be accomplished, said Vanessa Mosley, a junior from Richton studying finance and president of the NPHC.

"There's no limit to success. With positive African-American role models with leading positions, we can help mold students to succeed as well," Mosley said. "Just because you don't have the glamour, doesn't mean the qualities for success is out of reach."

The Rev. Sydney Logwood, pastor of the Rock Hill Baptist Church in Carbondale, talks with a group of students Sunday during lunch at his home following afternoon services. Logwood is also the president of the Carbondale branch of the NAACP and said he is involved in planning events to celebrate Black History Month.

Fashion, poetry and teachings of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. were a few of the topics NPHC's events highlighted. NPHC kicked off with a forum entitled "Loving Your Brother and Sister," co-sponsored by Black Women's Task Force and Speaking and Teaching. Speakers focused on the negative effects of violence on not just one particular race, but the whole human race. Many people don't realize past struggles in the black community still affect today's generation, said Justin M. Murphy, who is in charge of scheduling NPHC's events.

"It's easy for black students to relate at SIU to what they see in the media, but NPHC will help change that," Murphy said.

Mosley said even though the group doesn't have any official events scheduled this month, it wants to continue to play a role in unifying minority communities and helping them succeed.

Barack Obama's $3.8 trillion budget goes to Congress

Andrew Taylor
Martin Crutsinger
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - President Barack Obama's proposed budget predicts the national deficit will hit a record-breaking $1.4 trillion in the current fiscal year, then start to recede in 2011 to $1.3 trillion, a congressional official said Sunday.

Still, the administration's new budget to be released Monday says deficits over the next decade will average 4.5 percent of the economy, a level which economists say is dangerous high if not addressed, said the congressional official. The official was not authorized to discuss the budget before its public release.

Details of the administration's budget that is headed for Congress include: an additional $100 billion to attack painpilly high unemployment. The proposed $3.8 trillion budget would provide billions more to pull the country out of the Great Recession while increasing taxes on the wealthy and imposing a spending freeze on many government programs.

White House spokesman Robert Gibbs said the administration believed "somewhere in the $500 billion range" would be the appropriate amount for a new jobs measure made up of a business tax, credit to encourage hiring, increased infrastructure spending and money from the government's bailout fund to get banks to increase loans to struggling small businesses.

That price tag would be below a $1.75 trillion bill passed by the House in December but higher than an $83 billion proposal that surfaced last week in the Senate.

Gibbs said it was important for Democrats and Republicans to put aside their differences to pass a bill that addresses jobs, the country's No. 1 concern. "I think that would be a powerful signal to send to the American people," Gibbs said in an appearance on CNN's "State of the Union."

Job creation was a key theme of the budget President Barack Obama will send Congress on Monday, a document designed, as was the president's State of the Union address, to refame his young presidency after a protracted battle over health care damaged his standing in public opinion polls and contributed to a series of Democratic election defeats.

Obama's $3.8 trillion spending plan for the 2011 budget year that begins Oct. 1 attempts to navigate between the opposing goals of pulling the country out of a deep recession and dealing with a budget deficit that soared to an all-time high of $1.42 trillion last year.

The Congressional Budget Office is forecasting that the deficit for the current budget year will be only slightly lower, $1.35 trillion, and the flood of red ink will continue for years in coming raising worries among voters and the foreign investors who buy much of the country's debt.

The proposed $3.8 trillion budget would provide billions more to pull the country out of the Great Recession while increasing taxes on the wealthy and imposing a spending freeze on many government programs.

On the anti-recession front, congressional sources said Obama's budget proposal is including the popular Making Work Pay middle-class tax break of $400 per individual and $800 per couple through 2011. They are due to expire after this year.

The budget will also propose $250 payments to Social Security recipients to bolster their finances in a year when they are not receiving the normal cost-of-living boost to their benefit checks because of low inflation. Obama will also seek a $25 billion increase in payments to help recession-battered states.

Obama's new budget will set off months of debate in Congress as Republicans to push their own priorities, especially in an election year in which Republicans are hoping to use attacks against government overspending to gain seats. Obama has argued that he inherited a deficit of more than $1 trillion and was forced to increase spending to stabilize the financial system and combat the worst recession since the 1930s.

Obama's new budget was expected to repeat many of the themes of his first budget. But in a bow to worries over the spiraling deficit, the administration is proposing a three-year freeze on spending for a wide swath of domestic government agencies. Military, veterans, homeland security and big benefit programs such as Social Security and Medicare would not feel the pinch.

The freeze would affect $147 billion in spending and is designed to save $250 billion over a decade. However, it would not fall equally on all domestic agencies. Some would see budget cuts to free up spending for programs the administration wants to expand such as education and civilian research efforts.

NASA mission to return astronauts to the moon would be grounded with the space agency instead getting an additional $5.9 billion over five years to encourage private companies to build, launch and operate their own spacecraft for the benefit of NASA and others. NASA would pay the private companies to carry U.S. astronauts.

Obama's new version of his recommendation for an overhaul of the nation's health care system, the fight that dominated his first year in office, it proposed to get billions of dollars in savings from the Medicare program and again seeks increases taxes on the super-rich by limiting the gifts that they receive from various tax deductions. Both ideas have met strong resistance in Congress.
Drunk? Call the DD Dawg Program

WHAT THE HEALTH IS GOING ON?

Another drinking and driving article? Great! Share same statistics, define the harms and relate the stories of pain and suffering that accompany this behavior. I wish it weren't necessary, but drinking and driving is still an issue that causes significant damage to this and many other communities.

Time and experience are wonderful teachers. I am fortunate. When I was younger, I consumed alcohol and drank and drove without consideration for others. I did not know that whether I felt drunk had little to do with the impairment related to my blood alcohol concentration (BAC), with increased tolerance. At a .10 BAC and more, the depressant effects of alcohol appear, regardless of whether we "feel drunk." These effects include decreased reaction time, and every millisecond makes a difference driving. These effects include blurred vision, poor muscle coordination, reduction in fine motor skills and a decreased ability to make logical decisions.

I did not know these things, I was selfish and arrogant when I would drink and drive. I thought of nothing else but what I wanted to get home, that I was somehow different than everyone else, that I could "handle my liquor." These were all excuses for my behavior. I thought I was exempt from the basic biological rules that everyone lives by. It is a lie told myself. I have seen the pain and devastation caused to families and communities.

I now have a two-year-old daughter. That is enough of a reason to write this article, admit mistakes and personalize imperfections. The Wellness Center and the Jackson County Health Department are expanding the DD Dawg Program, providing designated driving cards to anyone. This allows anyone acting as a designated driver to receive free incentives at various establishments where alcohol is served, including appetizers, two-alcoholic drinks and cover charges. Anyone willing to be a designated driver can have a card — students and community members.

Participation in the DD Dawg Program is recognized by the following community entities, whose support is appreciated. They include: 17th Street Bar and Grill, Applebees, Buffalo Wild Wings, Callies, Callahan, Copper Dragon, El Bajo, El Greco, Garfield's, Gatsby's II Bar & Billiards, Italo, Village, Key West, Mela, Mustang, Monterey, Myer's Southwest Grill, Neill Hall House, Pinch Penny Pub, P.K.'s Quicks, Sinatra's, Six Bar and Billiards, The Hombres, Bogy's at Stone Creek, Cate's Place, Club Crazy, Crazy Joe's Fish House, Pais' Hot (Carnabale and Murphy's), Stadium Grille, Tequilas, Mexican Restaurant, That Taste, The Texas Martin, The Callar, Tom's Place, VFY! Pub, 1190 (Murphy's) and Hoolihan's. The Shawnee Hills Wine Trail wineries also participate, including Alto Vineyards, Blue Sky Vineyards, Newman Vineyards, Hickey Ridge Vineyards, Inheritance Valley Vineyards, Killer Hill Vineyards, Oreground Vineyards, Owl Creek Vineyard, Ponnoma Winery, Royle Hill Winery, StarView Vineyards and Van Jabob Vineyards.

The harm associated with drinking and driving is preventable. It is easy to do. Think before you drink. Don't drink and drive. Have a designated driver. To obtain a designated driver card or for more information, contact the Wellness Center at 536-4441 or JCHS at 654-3543.

Julian-Fraulish is the Wellness Coordinator of Alcohol and Other Drug programs and can be reached at wellnessta@shu.edu.

Some states require a person to be a registered member of a party to vote in the primary. In Illinois, voters have to ask for a party ballot.

"Some people feel that it's too public to stand in the school gym and say, 'Give me a Republican ballot,'" Leonard said.

Anthony Halick, a senior from Highland studying economics, said though he's registered to vote, his party affiliation most likely means he won't.

"I tend to lean Republican," he said. "And in Illinois, that's usually not a winning bid."

While only two Democrats are running against seven Republicans for the governor's seat, the split is even 6-6 for lieutenant governor. The same party split exists for the race to acquire Sen. Roland Burris' (D-Chicago) seat when he retires at the end of his term in January 2011.

Gov’t blesses Toyota gas pedal fix

KEN THOMAS
TOM KRISHER
The Associated Press

"DETROIT — Toyota Motor Corp. plans to start sending parts to dealers to repair a sticky gas pedal problem that has tarnished its image and led to the recall of 4.2 million cars and trucks on three continents, according to people briefed on the matter.

Toyota plans to reveal details of the fix on Monday morning, according to people who were not identified because the plan had not been announced. One dealer was told by a Toyota executive that the parts could come by Thursday or Friday.

The automaker told the dealers about the plan Saturday after hearing from the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration that it did not object to the fix, the dealers told The Associated Press.

A Department of Transportation official who also requested anonymity because the announcement had not been made confirmed that the government had no objections.

Toyota spokesman MikeMichels said the company received feedback from dealers and would not say what that was or when it intends to start sending out parts. The company has said it plans to gear up production of replacement parts, but Michels would not give an exact date.

Toyota has recalled 4.2 million vehicles worldwide because the gas pedal system may stick and cause the car to go into a rollover position. The company said the problem is rare and is caused by condensation that builds up in the gas pedal assembly.

Several hundred dealers reported problems involving a shim placed in an area where springs push the gas pedal back to its resting position after a driver has released the gas. Toyota has not commented on the repair.

Dealers have been in the difficult position of waiting on parts to fix the cars ever since the recall was announced on Jan. 21.

The recall in the U.S. covers 2.3 million vehicles, mostly the 2009-10 RAV4 crossover, the 2009-10 Corolla, the 2009-10 Matrix and the 2009-10 Avalon. The 2007-10 Camry, the 2010 Highlander crossover, the 2008-09 Sequoia SUV and the 2008-09 Sequoia SUV. The recall has been expanded to models in Europe and China.

Michels said all the models listed in the recall have the faulty gas pedals, which were made by CTS Corp. of Elkhart, Ind. Dealers can tell which models have the CTS pedal models made for the recalls. Dealers will not be allowed to repair the vehicles by using replacement parts made by another company without the approval of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

Michels said the company submitted the plan to the government agency on Thursday, and it would be unlikely to proceed beyond that without the government’s blessing.

Michels said the timetable for when dealers will be able to start fixing cars has not been finalized. It still has to be cleared with the government, he said, adding that he expects to get letters to owners of the recalled vehicles and ship out the parts.

"It does take a little time," he said. "That’s a lot of effort."

Earl Stewart, owner of a Toyota dealership in North Palm Beach, Fla., said Saturday he had not been notified of the fix by Toyota. But he’s heard about it from dealers that he’ll soon be getting parts, ending a frustrating week with little information to give them.

"We’re just in the dark at the end of the tunnel if that’s what it means to get this thing behind us," he said. "That’s a wonderful news for everybody."

The SIU swimming and diving team failed to connect with a victory as they lost to Western Kentucky via e-mail.

Staying weather conditions made traveling nearly impossible for the Salukis, so they stayed home, "swam at the Recreation Center and e-mailed their results to Western Kentucky," head coach Rick Walker said.

"Traveling would have been too dangerous, but we still wanted to compete, so both Western Kentucky and us... just e-mailed results every two events," Walker said.

"The SIU swimmers and divers had a very good week for me, so I was happy with my times," Groome said. "The diving team this weekend was the best I have seen them look all year," Walker said. "They did a spectacular job."

The SIU women's basketball team put an end to a four-game losing streak with a 63-56 win against Wichita State.

The Salukis (11-7, 3-6 Missouri Valley Conference) had three of their five starters reach double-digit point totals, and freshman point guard Katerina Guzmans made one of them.

Eight of Garcia's 12 assists came in the first half and her total tied for second place all-time in school history for a single-game effort.

The SIU men's basketball team put an end to a four-game losing streak with a 63-56 win against Wichita State.

The Salukis (12-9, 4-7 Missouri Valley Conference) found themselves down 10 points, 16-6 in the first half but would come up just short when sophomore guard Kevin Dillard was unable to make a mid-range jumper at the time expired, leaving the final score at 55-54.
