Campus leaders react to Horton's appointment

Newly appointed interim president will serve SIU for six months

ANDY EGENES
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Frank Horton's appointment as the interim president of SIU has made campus leaders unsure as to how they feel about the decision. Horton was named interim president at a special Board of Trustees meeting last Thursday in Springfield. He will start his duties Feb. 1, with a six-month contract. The search for a permanent president is still ongoing. The SIU president position opened after Ted Sanders announced he would leave Feb. 1 to take the position as president of the Education Commission of the States in Denver. Horton served as SIUC's vice president for Academic Affairs and Research between 1975 and 1980. Faculty Senate President Max Yen said he favors the decision to select Horton on an interim basis. "It seems to be a good choice for the time being," Yen said. "He's been at SIU, so he knows what SIU is about." With interim Chancellor John Jackson, the top two administrative positions on campus are not filled with permanent replacements. Jackson said things should run smoothly with the addition of Horton. "I'm delighted with the choice," Jackson said. "Frank Horton is an excellent choice for interim president." Jackson personally knew Horton when Jackson served as Faculty Senate president. Jackson thinks the present

Faculty Senate will react positively to the decision. The Faculty Senate had been vocal with its negative opinion of Sanders' job performance, but the SIU Board of Trustees President A.D. VanMeter said he hopes this will not carry into Horton's tenure. "He's had a relationship with a good many of [the Faculty Senate]," VanMeter said. "They know his dedication to the University. I trust their interest is going to be in the University and that's what his is."

Donna Post, Faculty Senate member, said she is worried about the administration being unstable, but thinks national searches are imperative for the growth of SIU. The Faculty Senate has disagreed with many of Sanders' ideas, but Post thinks placing an interim in the president's office is a positive act. "This may be a very good time in our history," Post said.

An emphasis on continuing Martin Luther King Jr.'s dream of racial unity for the future of today's youth dominated an annual breakfast Monday honoring his life and accomplishments. A large crowd packed Grinnell Hall for the 17th annual event sponsored by the Carbondale chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. King's birthday became a national holiday in 1986, and is the only one honoring an African-American. King became a national figure following the 1955 Montgomery bus boycott initiated by Rosa Parks' refusal to give up her seat to a white woman. The audience included SIUC students and staff, in addition to area residents. Local youth from churches and community organizations performed in honor of the civil rights leader. Children taking the holiday off from school were also in attendance. Conquerors of Christ, a youth choir ranging from 6 to 25 year olds from local area churches, performed a medley of gospel songs. The Carbondale House of Prayer Church Drill Team marched among the cheering audience. Event organizer Helen Porter said this year's breakfast was especially important because of its emphasis on young people, and she appreciates the community's involvement. "I want to thank the people for coming out and showing the youth their support," Porter said. Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard and SIUC interim Chancellor John Jackson addressed the audience following the breakfast. SIU trustee William Norwood was also in attendance. "An event like this can help bring King's dream of a unified community into the next millennium," Dillard said.

Jackson said SIU has a long history of partnership with community-based initiatives such as the King breakfast. "We have a rich tradition in supporting programs like this which is at the heart of the University," he said. Keynote speaker, the Rev. James Jackson of Shiloh Baptist Church in Murphysboro, electrified the crowd with a stirring message for the youth. Jackson said the biggest obstacle for young people today is realizing Ed Ford, Graduate and Professional Student Council president, said more time is needed before there is a true reaction on the Carbondale campus.

"I would think that an interim president is not going to have a lot of flexibility to start making wholesale changes," Ford said.

Ford said he does not have any reason to think this is a bad choice for the University. "I think most students are concerned with the quality of their education," Ford said. "I think people will be comfortable that they didn't name a full-time person right away. What will happen in that interim period, we'll just have to wait and see."

Horton will follow a controversial legacy left by Sanders when he makes the final arrangements to move into his new office in the Stone Center.

Horton has an energetic attitude about returning to campus and a town he called home for five years.

"It's almost like being a student," Horton said. "Where am I going to be living this year?"

Horton views on his responsibilities as interim president to find the suitable person to fill the permanent post.

Horton will make $20,000 a month, plus $5,000 a month toward retirement benefits, about $5,000 more a month than what Sanders originally made.

Sanders received $180,838 for the fiscal year 1999, but also received $53,000 in additional benefits. Horton returns to SIU after serving as president for the University of Toledo (Ohio) for almost a decade.

"When I was at the University of Toledo, I went there with a series of objectives," Horton said. "We accomplished a great deal in those 10 years. We completed our bargain and it was a great 10 years."

Horton served as the president of the University of Oklahoma for four years, as well, and he is the principal partner of Horton & Associates, an education firm.

SIUC alumnus named vice chancellor

Larry Dietz will take vice chancellor position for Student Affairs beginning April 3

RHONDA SCIARRA
ACADEMIC AFFAIRS EDITOR

Interim Chancellor John Jackson named University of Missouri-Kansas City administrator Larry Dietz as SIUC's new vice chancellor for Student Affairs and Enrollment Management, filling the void left by the Dec. 31 retirement of Harvey Welch. Dietz will earn an annual salary of $145,000. His appointment is subject to ratification by the Board of Trustees.

His stint as vice chancellor will not begin until April 3, forcing an interim vice chancellor for Student Affairs to be appointed until then. Jackson said an interim appointment will be made within the next week.

Dietz, an SIUC alumnus and De Soto native, is currently the vice chancellor of Student Affairs and Enrollment Management at the University of Missouri-Kansas City where he has worked since 1985. Dietz graduated from SIUC with a degree in political science in 1970.

"He has a reputation of being a good listener, a good decision maker and a good team player," Jackson said. "We're glad to have him come back home."

Dietz's acceptance of the position stemmed from the changes and improvements he thinks he can bring to the University, and the impressions administrators, faculty, staff and students made on him during his visits to campus in October and December.

The addition of Enrollment Management to the vice chancellor's title stems from a stronger focus on the recruitment and retention of students; Dietz will also serve as a special assistant to the chancellor and a tenured professor of educational administration and higher education.

"SIU is twice the size [of UMKC], and the challenges that are [at SIUC] influenced me," he said. "Enrollment management is something that I have expertise in. I am really looking forward to it."

Jackson hoped to have someone in Welch's place by Dec. 31, but attributed delays in the selection to down time associated with the holidays and the need for Dietz to visit campus another time following his October visit.

"He has expressed some concern about my position and what may happen to it, but agreed that he wants to come," Jackson said. "I told him I am sure he will be doing a fine job when

Guernsey agrees to remain as interim vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost for one week

ANTONIO YOUNG
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Interim Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs and Provost Tom Guernsey agreed to remain in his position for about one week, until a selection between three candidates has been chosen.

While the candidates are all open-minded about whether to seek a permanent position, interim Chancellor John Jackson said it may take until August before a permanent position is filled.

Jackson named three finalists for the position of provost Jan. 7, SIUC Associate Vice Chancellor Kyle Perkins, Associate Vice Chancellor Margaret E. Winters, and physiology professor Richard E. Falvo. The candidates bring several perspectives to the position including Perkins' job in the planning and budget section of Academic Affairs, Winters' conducting personnel hiring and Falvo as lead of the research field during his time as an associate vice chancellor between 1997 and 1999.

Jackson said Guernsey's performance and efforts as provost were well appreciated, acknowledging that Guernsey handled all academic matters

The three finalists for the interim vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost position will speak separately at an open forum in University Museum auditorium today.

Associate Provost Kyle Perkins, Associate Provost Margaret E. Winters and physiology professor Richard E. Falvo were named as candidates by interim Chancellor John Jackson Jan. 7.

Jackson named the candidates in wake of Tom Guernsey's announcement of his resignation as interim vice chancellor of Academic Affairs and provost to devote more time to his position as dean of the SIUC School of Law.

Jackson will designate who will be the interim provost position. "All three are experienced people with much relevant administrative background," Jackson said.

The person selected will hold the position until a permanent replacement is named, which Jackson predicts will take until at least August.

Falvo, Winters and Perkins said they would remain open-minded about accepting the permanent position of vice chancellor of Academic Affairs and provost, but would first like to experience the interim position.

OUR WORD

Whose word?

Throughout this semester, the DAILY EGYPTIAN editorial board will take stances on various issues. In response to editorials, we receive letters of agreement, opposition and every so often someone writes to ask, "Who writes the editorials?" We begin this semester answering that question.

The editorial board is composed of 11 students representing diverse backgrounds. Each member brings a unique perspective, academic experience, history and political affiliation to the discussions. Different members of the board are chosen to write specific editorials based upon his or her expertise on the selected issue. The chosen author then writes the editorial reflecting the board's collected opinions, regardless of his or her personal views toward the topic.

The board also includes DAILY EGYPTIAN faculty adviser Lance Speere and faculty representative

Jim Kelly. Both serve to advise on issues and have no voting power. Occasionally, the board invites a guest to speak about a particular issue, but the number of voting positions on the board remain constant throughout the semester. Because the board loses students to graduation and job changes each semester, our goal is to become more accessible to readers by presenting who we are and what we represent.

The Y2K computer crash that wasn't

Carbondale and the world make smooth transition into millennium despite fears of technological problems

GEOFFREY RITTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Carbondale spent about $50,000 in preparing for the coming of the millennium in the same way it would prepare for any natural disaster.

At the stroke of midnight Jan. 1, despite fears of power outages and worldwide panic, Carbondale proceeded into the new millennium without problems.

The coming of the millennium caused concern when professionals predicted computing problems as a result of computers failing to recognize the transition from 1999 to 2000, interpreting the year as 1900 instead.

It is estimated that the world spent about $600 billion on preparations for the year 2000, while the U.S. Department of Commerce reported the United States spent about $300 billion.

George Maroney, an administrator at Memorial Hospital of Carbondale, said viewing the seriousness of Y2K in the same light as a natural disaster helped the hospital to further learn how to deal with potential disaster.

"In today's environment, the loss of a lot of your information systems can be viewed similarly to a natural disaster," he said. "If you can cope with the loss of systems, you can also cope with the tornado that takes out your system."

SIU students who returned to the University Saturday said they had few concerns about what the new year would mean for computer systems.

"I knew it wasn't going to be major," said Sam Solano, a senior in computer science from Decatur.

Jim Cavanaugh, a junior in history from Orland Park, agreed and said he believes the issue was simply blown out of proportion.

"I think the media just overplayed it," he said.

Most local officials and professionals said they began analyzing the issue years ago and were confident no serious problems would arise.

Paul Sorgen, director of finance for Carbondale, said the city began preparing for possible problems associated with the Y2K issue in May 1997.

The preparations included a complete overhaul of the city's computer system by IBM. In addition, the city took extra precautions by making extra stop signs and positioning extra police officers throughout the city on New Year's Eve to deal with potential problems.

He said the city experienced no technological problems as a result of Y2K, and the police dealt with nothing out of the ordinary New Year's Day.

Maroney said the Y2K issue was never a serious concern for the hospital because knowledgeable people were brought in to prepare several years ago. He said the final cost of preparations was nowhere near the estimates initially offered by consultants.

"We allocated people and money to solving the problem, and the problem was solved," Maroney said.

In fact, the news that attracted the most attention at the hospital Jan. 1 was the birth of Dustin James Dunfee. Dunfee, born at 12:20 a.m., was the first baby of the millennium in Southern Illinois.

Mike Schwartz, chair of SIUC's Y2K Task Force, said the University began addressing the problem four years ago. He reported that a small glitch did occur with the University's Administrative Information System Jan. 1, but said the problem was corrected immediately and the University's computer systems continued to run smoothly.

In a period of three weeks, Schwartz said 6,400 campus computers were checked for Y2K compliance.

"Hours and hours were put into this effort to make sure things went to plan," he said.

Local businesses reported that, while they were well prepared for a mad rush for Y2K-related supplies, sales did not reach anticipated heights. Of the products sold, bottled water and flashlights topped the list.

For the most part, Maroney believe that the fear surrounding Y2K was more a result of media hype than anything else, as he referred to the issue as "unwarranted hysteria."

"It's a commentary on the cynicism that we all have today that people can't do their job right," he said. "We had qualified people addressing the issue, they solved the problem and then it wasn't a problem."

FINALISTS

Perkins, 52, has been an associate vice chancellor for Academic Affairs for planning and budget since 1994. He has had several administrative positions since he came to SIUC in 1975.

"I have a good understanding of how the provost job works," Perkins said. "I would very much like to continue the tradition Tom Guernsey has begun."

Winters, 52, has been an associate vice chancellor for Academic Affairs for personnel and student policy since 1994. She has also had several administrative positions including chair of the Department of Foreign Languages and Literature. Winters has been at SIUC since 1977.

"I think the provost job is the next step for me," Winters said. "I care very much about SIUC and would like to contribute to its success during this transitional time."

Since 1973, Richard E. Falvo, 57, has served as associate dean of the Graduate School, acting chair of the Physiology Department and associate vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and Research.

"I feel that I have the vision to step into the job as provost," Falvo said. "I have a great interest in SIUC — this institution means a

Professors file lawsuit against University, Board

Three SIUC faculty members filed a lawsuit Dec. 13, calling into question the potentially illegal make-up of the SIU Board of Trustees and asking for the reinstatement of former SIUC Chancellor Jo Ann Argersinger.

Joan Friedenberg, linguistics professor; Barry Malik, physics professor; and John Gregory, mathematics professor, filed the lawsuit in Jackson County. Their attorney is Richard Whitney of Carbondale.

The suit calls for the removal of A.D. VanMeter as board chairman because of his potentially illegal appointment to the board in January 1999. State statutes dictate the board be composed of four Republicans and four Democrats. The suit contends VanMeter's reappointment tipped the number of Republicans on the board to five.

Because the board may have been illegally composed at the time of Argersinger's June 5 termination, the suit asks that she be reinstated as chancellor.

Further, the suit calls for a review of all administrative appointments and all budget and financial allocations since Argersinger's termination.

Argersinger's attorney asks for judge substitution

An attorney for former Chancellor Jo Ann Argersinger filed a motion in Jackson County Court Dec. 15 asking for a substitution of judges in her Illinois Open Meetings Act violation lawsuit against the University.

Marion attorney Ronald Osman filed the motion, which was granted Dec. 21. The motion requests a substitution for Honorable Judge Thomas H. Jones.

A replacement judge has yet to be assigned, although paperwork at the courthouse seems to indicate presiding judge David Watt may assume the case.

The suit claims the SIU Board of Trustees and President Ted Sanders violated the Illinois Open Meetings Act when Argersinger was terminated. Argersinger says she did not receive adequate notice of a May 26 executive meeting of the SIU Board of Trustees in Springfield, during which she was offered a severance package and asked to resign.

University officials say the trustees did not violate the Illinois Open Meetings Act because Argersinger was officially terminated during a June 5 public meeting in Carbondale.

CRIME BRIEFS

Illegal loans total $42,000

An unreported number of illegally obtained student loans, totaling $42,000 were recently discovered, University police said last week.

A 40-year-old SIUC employee told police several people took fraudulent direct student loans.

As of Monday afternoon, police did not have any further information, but said they were investigating the thefts.

Murderer appeals conviction

A convicted murderer from Carbondale appealed his conviction last week in the 5th District Appellate Court in Mount Vernon and lost.

In October 1997, Labron C. Neal was sentenced to life in prison for the 1996 shootings of two area teenagers. A judge said he was not eligible for the death penalty because of his age.

Neal, 17 at the time of the killings, shot Terrance Mitchell, 16, of Carbondale and James Austin Campbell, 15, of Murphysboro outside a party at the Carbondale Movie Home Park.

His conviction and sentencing came from a second jury after the original jury was deadlocked. Neal testified during the trial, saying he did not shoot either boy.

Man charged with indecency

A middle-aged Carbondale man who allegedly fondled himself in front of another man inside Morris Library was arrested by University Police, Jan. 11.

The witness told police Charles H. Green, 48, of Carbondale, exposed himself in a men's room at the library and began masturbating.

Police arrested Green, charging him with public indecency about 5:17 p.m. Jan. 11. He was later released after posting a cash bond. Green's court date was unavailable as of press time.

their full potential through education and establishing a strong self esteem.

"Your success does not come from your mother or father," he said to young audience members. "It will not come from your teacher or from the classroom. Your success is in you."

Jackson told them to strive for success at a personal, group and societal level in order to achieve King's dream, a message Porter said was for the old as well as the young.

"What the Reverend said was right on track," she said. "I think it was just what the young people needed to here and what some of our older population needed to be reminded of."

The MLK breakfast started as a tradition of the Thomas School in 1983. The NAACP took over the event in the early '90s and moved the breakfast to the SIUC campus.

Steven Haynes, president of the Carbondale chapter of the NAACP, said this year's focus on the new millennium is a culmination of all the past years' events.

"It's gotten greater and greater over the years," he said. "It's become a focal point for the community in getting Dr. King's message across."

with great insight and understanding of the institution.

"He has not been afraid to make decisions and take on all kinds of diversity which can be difficult personally, but you have to do it professionally to get the job done," Jackson said. "I think Tom has tried to do the job as he sees what he believes to be the right thing."

Since being appointed as interim vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost in July 1999, Guernsey has had his hands full and his time occupied. By some degree, his daily occupational duties will be alleviated as he returns full time to the SIUC School of Law, where he has been dean and professor for the past four years.

Guernsey announced in December he was stepping down as provost effective Jan. 15. He has fulfilled both duties since last January. Although his time as vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost has allowed him to gain further insight into administration, he said his position is an isolated one.

"One of the things you really miss in this position is that you have very little day-to-day contact with the faculty, unless you are dealing with a problem," Guernsey said. "You virtually have no contact with the student body, except in the context of a very formal meeting with a constituency group."

Prior to her termination, former Chancellor Jo Ann Angersinger appointed Guernsey to vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost, which brought forth second thoughts in his mind in taking the position due to her departure.

"I had to think about it and talked with John Jackson to get some sense of whether or not I could continue to be effective in the position," Guernsey said. "I had to speak with faculty and other deans to make sure my staying wasn't counterproductive. Ultimately, we came to the decision that it wouldn't be, and I stayed after Jackson asked me to."

With much of his time spent in the provost office, Guernsey said he has found the position to be a good learning experience, as it provided a general increase in his understanding of the University, particularly administration.

"It's been great to find out about the operations of various colleges and their different programs," he said. "In this position, you deal with a much more complex organization than just the School of Law."

Among other things, Guernsey has worked with greek leaders on alternatives to Select 2000, an initiative taken by national fraternities and adopted at SIUC that calls for substance-free fraternity housing. Select 2000 promises to revitalize the greek system by focusing on academics and service aspects of greek life.

With his aid, the proposals have gone to interim Chancellor John Jackson and are awaiting further action. Guernsey said as provost he has attempted to open the budget process, hoping to educate more people of how it is created and the need for a fundamental change in Academic Affairs budgeting.

Guernsey's return to the School of Law begins as the Law School prepares for this year's American Bar Association accreditation visit. Guernsey said he is convinced the Law School has made significant strides since the last inspection, yet wants to make sure the preparatory work is complete before the evaluation.

"We have to go through a process... the faculty has to do the self-study and I have to make sure that the process is in place and happens in a timely way," Guernsey said. "The committee that drafts the self-study can then present it to the faculty, who can talk about it sufficiently far in advance of the site visit. We want to put our best foot forward."

Associate deans at the School of Law should also find Guernsey's return to be valuable, because the workload will be lifted from some of their hands.

"It's been a real burden on a lot of people, including my family and the law administration who have had to work a lot harder without me being there," Guernsey said. "I think going back to the Law School should get things back because there will be one more person to do things."

the permanent chancellor is named and will be in great shape for continuing. Life goes on, in other words."

The vice chancellor for Student Affairs oversees five areas: financial aid, student health services, University housing, the Student Center and acts as dean of students.

Dietz identifies one of the goals he will face in the new position is working with and improving the University's enrollment and student services.

"When I mentioned the possibilities, people seemed to be excited and ready for that change," he said. "It will be very productive and exciting."

Students and faculty on the Kansas City campus, as well as Jackson, describe Dietz as a good listener and a productive addition to SIUC's administration.

"He's a good communicator and very open," said Jerry Jensen, UMKC's vice chancellor for Administrative Affairs. "I think those are some very important ingredients to have."

Donny Collins, vice president of UMKC's student body, has worked by Dietz's side for 3 years in student government. He considers Dietz one of the best administrators on the UMKC campus and is sad to see him leave.

"I am really going to miss him," Collins said. "He is a h... of a guy — he has done wonders here."

Technology comes to Carbondale

ANNE MARIE TAVELLA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A mob of children surrounded a miniature television studio Friday as two young girls taped school announcements for the Unity Point Community Consolidated School District 140, demonstrating advancements for in-school technology.

The students gave their presentation at the third annual Southern Illinois Technology Expo. The Carbondale Chamber of Commerce played host to the exposition in the Carbondale Civic Center, 200 S. Illinois Ave., Friday and Saturday.

This year's theme "Living Technology" offered interactive exhibits and seminars to visitors.

Pat Brown, executive director for the Chamber of Commerce, said the exposition is meant to merge several different types of exhibits to allow for community involvement in new technologies.

"The expo combines business, education and personal exhibits," Brown said. "People learn a lot more by doing instead of just watching demonstrations."

For those interested in leaving with a souvenir, the Carbondale Online booth offered free digital portraits.

Chamber of Commerce intern Kate Douglas, a senior in information systems technology from Jacksonville, staffed the exhibit. Douglas said she was pleased with the event, as she glanced at the kids from Unity Point School.

"I think it's really neat to give the children in the area a chance to see new things," she said.

The SIUC Aviation Technology exhibit allowed visitors the chance to use the same software as SIUC aviation students. The software allows students to become familiar with airplane parts and functions, said assistant professor Larry Staples.

"In some cases, we're probably better equipped than some airlines," Staples said.

The purpose of the aviation exhibit was to show the community how the software is used in teaching and to get people interested in the aviation program.

"It really does give our students an advantage over students from other schools," Staples said.

Another SIUC exhibit, the Morris Library booth, emphasized an interactive video program. Heidi Greer,

CORNELL

"I came to SIU as a miler, and [Cornell] ran it in four-flat — that is what I want to do," McClelland said. "He obviously knows how to do it. That is why I wanted to come here and be a part of the team."

One of the four Olympians Cornell produced is Cameron Wright, who has been an assistant coach at SIU since 1996. Wright said he owes a lot of his success to Cornell, whom he has known since he was 7 years old.

"Coach Cornell puts his whole life into track and field, Wright said. "He's been a great success to the program. Hopefully, he will continue to have a close relationship with us. He is not only a great coach, he is a great man, someone who I am greatly going to miss."

The Cornells plan on staying in Carbondale after Bill's retirement. Although Cornell is leaving, Rose Cornell knows the athletes coached by Cornell will always be a part of his life.

"[Bill and I] don't have children, so in our lives, our children have been the track program," she said. "Coaching the kids is Bill's life. It's what keeps him going."

Cross country and track runner Chris Owen still has a year left to compete. Although Owen, a junior from Salem, is unhappy Cornell is leaving SIU, he hopes the next coach will follow Cornell's lead.

"I don't want him to leave, but I must respect him for retiring," Owen said. "He may be leaving on paper, but he will never leave SIU track and field. He'll always be my coach."

WOMEN'S HOOPS

Bardley, who is averaging 8.8 points and 7.4 rebounds per contest, said the Salukis must get together and work on figuring out what the problem is. The first order of business will likely be to add some life to what has been a sputtering offense — not that that's the only problem.

"For some reason, when we step out on the court, we do not play together. We don't communicate," Bardley said.

"We have to get into our offense and take care of the ball. That is why we keep losing our games. It's not the shots [opponents] make, or the free throws. It's the turnovers, blocks, and steals we make. That is why we are losing games."

SPORTS BRIEFS

ISU, SEMO find new football bosses

Illinois State University's new head football coach has a familiar name to many Midwest football fans. The Redbirds named Denver Johnson head coach Jan. 7 to replace Todd Berry, who recently left ISU to take the Army coaching job. Berry's tenure was highlighted in 1999, when he led ISU to the I-AA playoff semi-finals.

Johnson opted to take over in Normal after compiling a 21-12 record during three seasons coaching at Murray State University. Johnson will have tough shoes to fill, as Berry is credited with turning ISU football into a Gateway Conference power.

"I see no reason why we can't establish the program as one of the premier programs in I-AA," Johnson said upon his appointment. "Todd Berry and his staff accomplished great things here. That should become the norm, not the exception. I want to capture what is there now and multiply it in the years to come and make Redbird football a consistent winner."

Southeast Missouri State University, meanwhile, hired Tim Billings Dec. 23 to replace John Mumford as head football coach.

Billings served as defensive coordinator at Marshall University for the past five seasons, during which time Marshall was 69-6.

Billings, who will be asked to rejuvenate a struggling SEMO football program, was given a five-year contract.

Football Salukis to battle Jayhawks

SIU football will step into the Division I-A ranks for the first time since 1994 when the Salukis travel to the University of Kansas next season. Head coach Jan Quarless said he is not only excited about the revenue the game will bring to the Saluki program, but also said playing the Jayhawks should be a "thrilling experience" for his team.

Quarless, who frequently complained about SIU's difficult schedule last season, may slot a couple less imposing foes to round out the non-conference schedule "to compensate for those tough Saturdays."

In other football news...

Quarless said the Salukis are still pursuing the option of having SIU's all-time leading rusher, Karlton Carpenter, return to action after missing last season because of personal and legal problems. Whether or not Carpenter will return is unlikely to be known before mid-February.

Two Salukis who will not be back are quarterbacks Ryan Douglass and sophomore Tyler Paopao, who plan to transfer in search of more playing time. Douglass, who will be a senior next season, came out on the short end of a battle for playing time last season with Sherard Poteete. Paopao is returning to his home state of California and plans to attend Palomar Junior College.

distance learning coordinator, said the program, by using telecommunications technology, allows students across Illinois to attend SIUC classes without having to come to the Carbondale campus.

The library also wanted to highlight web-based components offered for teaching. The exhibit showed how the library supports the faculty in taking advantage of the World Wide Web.

"Away from the booths cars resembling 'tinker-toys' zoomed across the main stage. This is the exhibition's first year for Challenge 2000, a competition where contestants race homemade cars powered only by balloons, run by the Science Center, 1237 E. Main St. The Science Center, provided car building materials at the exposition, including pipe cleaners, wires and miscellaneous plastic parts, so that everyone could participate.

The contest was focused at junior and high school students but open to all ages.

"This is something anybody can take part in," said Science Center Director Jim Mueller.

MEN'S HOOPS

the lead proved too substantial to overcome as the Salukis dropped their second straight, 76-64.

"[SIU] hit four threes and just got on a terror," Weber said. "We battled back, but we could never make any big shots."

Williams' numbers exemplified the Salukis' shooting woes in the two losses, as the talented freshman suffered his first slump of his SIU career, shooting a combined 2-23.

Saluki forward Chris Thunell would not allow the Salukis to fall deeper into a slide, though, as the senior co-captain regrouped his team and scored a career high 28 points Sunday in a 87-79 road victory against Wichita State University.

The rest of the Salukis played much better as well, shooting 50 percent from the field for the game.

MEN'S BASKETBALL

THE SIU MEN'S BASKETBALL TEAM RETURNS TO ACTION AGAINST MVC LEADER INDIANA STATE UNIVERSITY AT 6:05 P.M. WEDNESDAY NIGHT IN TERRE HAUTE, IND.

Williams broke out of his mini-slump, scoring 15 points on 5-for-11 shooting, as well as shadowing Shocker guard Jason Perez, the Valley's leading scorer. Perez was held to five second-half points.

"We regrouped and played well," Weber said. "Each time [WSU] made a run we kept our poise and never got rattled."

With a date at Indiana State University, which is tied with Southwest Missouri State University for the Valley lead at 4-1, set for Wednesday night, Weber emphasized making up for the home loss to Creighton as a top priority.

"We've proven we can beat anybody. . . on the other hand, we've proven we can lose to anybody too," he said.

Former Saluki star a Chicago Bull

Former SIU star and 1994-1995 Missouri Valley Conference Player of the Year Chris Carr signed a 10-day contract with the Chicago Bulls Jan. 10. Carr, who was drafted by the Phoenix Suns in 1995, has also had stints in the NBA with the Minnesota Timberwolves, New Jersey Nets and Golden State Warriors.

Coach Q orchestrates defensive shakeup

SIU assistant football coaches defenseless in head coach Jan Quarless' objectives for program

SPORTS EDITOR

You don't have to be a football maven to realize something was terribly wrong with the SIU football team's defense last year.

SIU surrendered 432 points during the squad's 5-6 season in 1999 — an average of 39.2 points a game — making the Salukis' one of the worst defensive teams in the nation.

Those disturbing numbers made the coaching staff ripe for change, so it comes as little surprise that change is in the offing.

SIU head coach Jan Quarless will have a largely new cast of assistant coaches on the defensive side of the ball next season. Dave Dunkelberger, who was in charge of the overall defense, along with defensive assistants Joe Tumpkin and Craig Naivar, will not return to the SIU sidelines for the 2000 campaign.

Tumpkin presided over SIU linebackers for two seasons, while Naivar, who coached the defensive line, also had a two-year stay in Carbondale. Quarless said he has contemplated tinkering with his coaching staff for a long time, but did not make his final decision until several weeks after the season ended.

"Any time you make a change, it's difficult for a variety of reasons," Quarless said. "But at the same time, I think you always have to keep a mind-set of exactly what you're trying to accomplish, whether it's in a football program or an area of academia."

"You have to make sure that all the pieces of the puzzle work to formulate a tremendous program, and sometimes that requires change. It's never an easy task, and it's something that we gave a lot of thought to."

While Dunkelberger and Tumpkin simply were not retained by Quarless, Naivar left voluntarily to take an assistant's position at Sam Houston State University. Naivar has roots in Texas, and will also receive a pay increase.

Dunkelberger came to SIU when Quarless was hired, and spent three seasons guiding a struggling Saluki defense. Dunkelberger has more than 30 years in the coaching business, but was unable to get much out of a young defense in '99. The low point came in a 68-27 defeat to Western Illinois University, and during one stretch late in the season, the Salukis allowed 43 or more points in five consecutive games.

Despite SIU's evident defensive woes, dismissing Dunkelberger was not easy for Quarless, especially because the aging Dunkelberger is likely in the waning stages of his career. Quarless described the decision as one of the toughest ones he has made in his life.

Dunkelberger said he harbors no ill will toward SIU, but that some of SIU's defensive ills were directly correlated to youth. He predicted the year of experience will make SIU's young defense better next season, and said he will carry fond memories of his stint in Carbondale.

"I enjoyed being here, working for the school and the players," Dunkelberger said. "You can't let one experience like this change that, because it doesn't."

Dunkelberger said he plans to remain in coaching elsewhere.

Dunkelberger and Tumpkin are still under contract with SIU, which Quarless said may slow the process of hiring new coaches. In the interim, Quarless said he and assistant Tommie Liggins will do extra leg work on the recruiting trail, where they and the rest of the staff will make a concentrated effort to add defensive talent.

The Salukis received on-campus visits from about six prospects last weekend, and more of the same is slated for the upcoming weekend.

Quarless, meanwhile, has not committed to returning next season. He expressed concern after the season about not having enough time with his family, and said Friday he is still mulling his future over.

Women's basketball suffers losing record during break

Salukis start winter break with win against Murray State and Indiana State, but drop three of the next five games for 3-4 break record try, and senior center Melaniece Bardley's two late free-throws sealed the victory.

CHRISTINE BOLIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Beck said both the Murray State and Indiana State games were two games in which the Salukis showed a solid effort.

"I was feeling good about where we were going before break," Beck said. "If anything, [Indiana State] may have turned the season around."

But it did not. The Salukis rang in the new year with a disappointing 59-47 loss at Illinois State University, followed by a home victory against a Bradley University team that has also struggled. Hathaway had a game-high 16 points and Bordley scored 10 points and grabbed 10 rebounds against BU.

"It seems like after [Indiana State], we went into a shooting slump. I thought we could be ready for Illinois State, but didn't have legs up there," Beck said. "We came back and beat Bradley. It wasn't a pretty game, but we fought through it."

A home loss against the University of Northern Iowa, despite junior forward Courtney Smith's 14-point effort, began a three-game losing streak. Following the University of Northern Iowa loss came a dismal 69-41 road loss against powerful Southwest Missouri State University.

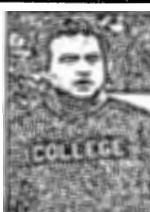

It got even worse Saturday, with a 61-39 point loss to Wichita State University on the road.

Hathaway, who is leading the team in scoring with 9.8 points per game, said the Salukis' struggles have been frustrating.

"It was tough losing against Wichita State and Southwest Missouri," Hathaway said. "They came out ready to play, and we weren't. These were two rough conference games for us."

Puerto Rico triumph highlights Salukis' break

Weber's club outlasts North Carolina-Charlotte for third-place finish in Puerto Rico

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

With the exception of two ball-games, the SIU men's basketball team endured a successful break, spanning 10 games and highlighted by a third-place finish at the Puerto Rico Holiday Classic.

A 22-point performance by freshman guard Kent Williams solidified a 66-65 Saluki overtime victory against the University of North Carolina-Charlotte in the third-place game of the Holiday Classic Dec. 23 in Puerto Rico.

However, SIU's most impressive win came earlier in the tournament. En route to third place honors, the Salukis knocked off the University of Massachusetts, 65-63, then dropped a game against the No. 12 team in the nation, the University of Tennessee, 87-74.

"We played very well from start to finish," said Saluki head coach Bruce Weber of the UNCC game. "When you play three games in a row you're very tired, so we were both worn down that second half and the overtime, but we found a way to win that one."

"To win two out of three against good competition [in Puerto Rico] showed what this team can do."

The Salukis (9-7, 3-2) continued playing well following the Holiday Classic, defeating the University of Tennessee-Martin and Southeast Missouri State University at the Arena and holding off Missouri Valley Conference foe Illinois State University, 77-72 in Normal, extending their winning streak to four games.

The Salukis good fortune took a detour for the worse, however, as Creighton University, which was nursing a four game losing streak at the time, handed the Salukis their second home loss of the year, as well as their second MVC loss of the season, with a 72-66 defeat.

The Bluejays broke out of their slump led by the hot hand of junior guard Ryan Sears, who scored 25 points and led CU to an early lead, forcing the Salukis to play catch-up.

"We lost a little bit of our drive, our energy," Weber said. "We were a step behind all game and Sears just had a career game. We were never able to catch them."

The flat play was still evident in the Salukis following game at Saint Louis University, where SIU looked sloppy and did not shoot the ball well for a great deal of the first half and into the start of the second half.

The shooting prowess of Billiken guard Justin Love (26 points) hampered the Saluki defense, and SLU coasted to a large lead early in the second half. Although the Salukis battled back,

Cornell says goodbye after 18 years

Parkinson's disease proves too much for SIU cross country and track coach to keep running

CHRISTINE BOLIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

During winter break, SIU cross country and track and field head coach Bill Cornell found himself in a hospital bed, wondering if the end was closer than he expected.

The 60-year-old Cornell, who in 1991 was diagnosed with Parkinson's disease, a movement disorder that affects various parts of the body, became ill with the flu, causing his condition to worsen.

"For three weeks, I was really scared," said Rose Cornell, Bill's wife of 38 years. "I had never seen him so sick. He couldn't even get out of a chair. We had talked about it before, but it was then, in a way, we decided that it was best for him to retire."

Enough was enough for Cornell. The constant battle with illness drove Cornell to make a heart-breaking decision to leave the cross country and track and field coaching staffs in May, after the 2000 outdoor track season.

"I have been coaching for 37 years. It's time for me to quit," Cornell said. "When you get involved with coaching for that many years, it's tough to leave. I have a lot of stress and worry. It's time to enjoy life."

Cornell has spent a lifetime of enjoying athletics, including his first love, soccer, cricket and racquetball. It wasn't until Cornell was 17 years old that he decided running was his best sport.

Three years after breaking a world-record for 17-year-olds in the mile, then-SIU track and field coach Lew Hartzog recruited the Chelmsford, England native to Carbondale for a four-year scholarship. Cornell and his wife arrived in Carbondale in 1961, just days after they were married.

At SIU, Cornell was a three-time All American and a U.S. Track and Field Federation Champion. In 1962, he earned the SIU Athlete of the Year award.

Cornell's original plan was to compete at SIU for four years, then return to Chelmsford after graduation. Plans changed when he chose to get his master's degree in physical education at SIU while assisting Hartzog for two seasons.

At age 26, Cornell received his first coaching break when Hartzog told Cornell about the coaching job at Murray State University in Kentucky. Cornell accepted the job at MSU, and for 15 years, Cornell led the Racers to three Ohio Valley Conference cross country titles and merited four OVC "Coach of the Year" honors.

Cornell

In 1982, Cornell made his comeback to SIU replacing Hartzog in cross country. In 1985, Cornell took over the entire track and field program and has been doing so ever since, leading one of SIU's most successful sports programs.

One of the most recent all-MVC selection runners is senior cross country and track runner Matt McClelland, who said one of the reasons he came to SIU in 1996 was Cornell.
