Trucker blames government

By Ray Robinson
Staff Writer

Governor James R. Thompson has appointed Dr. George T. Wilkins as the new chancellor to the SIU Board of Trustees to fill a seat that has been vacant since April.

Wilkins, 46, will fill the position on the board left vacant by the resignation of Carbndale surgeon David Rendell

Rendell won the six-year term on the board in March and resigned in April.

Rendell, who has practiced in the Charleston area for 39 years, had been appointed to the board in 1983. He is a past president of the Charleston Area Chamber of Commerce, and a past president of the Illinois State Bar Association.

Wilkins, a 46-year-old from Chicago, is a former assistant to the chancellor of the University of Illinois at Chicago. He is also a member of the Illinois State Bar Association and the American Bar Association.

Wilkins is a graduate of the University of Illinois at Chicago and the University of Chicago Law School. He received his law degree from the University of Chicago in 1980.

Wilkins has been involved in various community and business activities, including serving on the board of directors of the Illinois State Bar Association and the Illinois State Chamber of Commerce.

Wilkins, who has been a member of the SIU Board of Trustees since 1978, will serve on the board until his term expires in 1991.

Turner memorial fund set up

Relatives of Max Turner, retired SIU teacher and administrator who died last week, have requested that memorial donations be made in Turner's name to an endowment fund in the School of Law. Turner, who retired last summer after 31 years as a political science professor and administrator at SIU, headed a campus committee that researched the feasibility of a law school at SIU.

He later served on the Illinois Board of Higher Education committee that recommended establishment of a law school at SIU and worked for passage of the enabling legislation.

"He worked as hard as anybody on it," Howard Long, former director of the School of Journalism and Government, said of Turner's role in the law school legislation. "His heart was really in it."
Fireworks planned

By Charly Gaudin
Staff Writer

Fireworks and July 4, an American tradition as popular as apple pie and baseball, will be celebrated across the country in honor of our nation's independence.

Carbondale will celebrate with a 90-minute fireworks display that includes the American flag, waterfalls, aerial bombs and ground displays.

Sponsored by Lions Club, the free display will be held at 9 p.m. Wednesday at the Marion Field. Ellis Mitchell, a Lions Club member and chairman of the fireworks committee, said, "The Lions Club has been sponsoring the fireworks every since the city decided to have them 10 years ago." Mitchell said according to Mitchell, the display costs several thousand dollars.

"I usually can raise the money by doing various projects. But this year we are going to pass the hat at the display because it is getting so expensive," he said. It takes about 45 men—all Lions Club members—to set up the fireworks.

Illegal fireworks seized

Agents from the Southern Illinois Enforcement Group and Anna Police arrested William D. Renssau, St. of Carbondale Friday for selling fireworks, which is illegal in Illinois.

The arrest was made after law enforcement officials negotiated a $1,000 fireworks deal with Renssau in Anna, according to Richard Pariser, director of SIEG.

Pariser said Renssau's van and a Carbondale garage were subsequently searched. and about $4,000 in fireworks were seized. He added that the fireworks may have come from Missouri, where they are legal.

Fireworks include any explosive device such as firecrackers, sky rockets, roman candles and sparklers. Persons who use or sell fireworks in Jackson County can be imprisoned for more than 30 days and fined a maximum of $500.

Governors get power to allocate gas

WASHINGTON AP—President Carter Monday granted state governors the power to stuff up to $5 million of a state's gasoline supplies from rural areas to cities.

The move was aimed at correcting an imbalance created by federal gasoline allocation rules, which Energy Secretary James Schlesinger said "put the gasoline where the cars are not."

Carter, during an afternoon of meetings with his advisers, also asked networks for broadcast time at 9 p.m. EDT Thursday to address the nation on the oil shortage.

White House press secretary David Povell said Carter would "discuss with the American people the short-term and long-term energy crisis, the reasons for it, and the steps we will need to take to deal with it."

Saudis to increase production of oil

JIDDA, Saudi Arabia (AP)—Saudi Arabia, biggest source of America's imported oil, has decided to increase its petroleum production temporarily to meet expenses, the state radio reported Monday.

The size of the increase was not disclosed. If substantial, it could act to moderate world oil prices and alleviate the shortages that have plagued the oil market since the Iranian revolution.

"The Saudis will welcome it," U.S. Energy Department spokesman James Bishop Jr. said in Washington. "But we have no official confirmation."

An official source at the Saudi royal palace said the temporary increase is needed to meet expenses in Saudi Arabia's current development plan.

Malaysia snubs

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP)—Malaysia turned away 1,000 more Vietnamese refugees and towed them to sea Monday, still saying it is up to other nations to accept them. But it reiterated in the case of another boatload—623 people—and let them stay as a favor to the French.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington meanwhile lambasted Vietnam as the source of the problem—and the nation that should do the most to solve it.

"The policy of systematic expulsion which Vietnam is pursuing places responsibility for the current crisis squarely on Vietnam's shoulders," Vance said.

"We have called upon Vietnam publicly and privately, to change the conditions and policies which are forcing hundreds of thousands to flee, and tens of thousands to die."

Courageous Sagan fights political jailings

WASHINGTON - One side of Ginetta Sagan reveals the exultant spirit of her Italian charm, the other shows her resolute drive to empty the world's jails of political prisoners. Together, this unique joining of outer and inner strengths means that no dictator, tyrant or tyrant anywhere in the world -- from Pinochet in Chile to Brezhnev in Russia -- can long get away with his violations without taking the scorn of Ginetta Sagan.

By herself, she is merely a world citizen who has gone among the damned and refused to walk away in silence. But in a decade of work with Amnesty International and, currently, with the Humantias International Human Rights Commission, she has helped create a worldwide network of concern for political prisoners.

In the early 1970s, when Sagan served on the board of Amnesty International and worked full-time in Athens, Calif., she became a fund-raiser, organizer and conscience-prodger for the organization's western region. Amnesty's winning of the first Peace Prize in 1977 helped spread word about the strategies that are successful against jailings and torture; individual chapters adopt political prisoners in specific countries and begin working for their release. This can mean the pressures of letters to the heads of state, rallies in front of embassies, raising money to send observers to the trials -- or what pass for trials -- and visiting the prisoners themselves.

It is slow and wearing work. Criticism can emerge from unlikely places. "These days," says Sagan, "I'm being called a Cold Warrior." She laughs, and then explains that her current campaign, in league with Joan Baez, on behalf of political prisoners in Vietnam, has sparked a row from parts of the far left that think the new government in Vietnam should be off limits to surveillance.

"I am disturbed by this mentality," says Sagan. "Some people seem to think that they can be selective in what they want to oppose -- oppression in Russia, for example, but not in Argentina or South Africa. Others will protest violations all over Latin America, but not in Czechoslovakia or Vietnam. This selectivity suggest that they are more interested in pushing their own ideology than in opposing violations no matter where they occur. Left, right, in the Third World or the West."

As a source of news herself, Ginetta Sagan doesn't command the airwaves or the front pages. But in a decade of work, she and her growing band have gotten word to the dictators that their thuggery may be unreported as news but it isn't unknown as crime. -- Copyright, 1979, The Washington Post Company.

Thatcher's budget redefines state's role

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's style is as jam-packed with significance as is her economic policy. Her first budget, which aims at nothing less than a revolution -- through contraction -- of the role of the state, is economically bold but politically breathtaking. A government is doing, at the earliest opportunity, exactly what it said it was going to do.

Thatcher, unlike more conventional politicians, is thought to have more, and more rigid, convictions that it is prudent to have. She calls herself a "conviction politician," which makes irresistible the comparison with the author of "The Conscience of a Conservative."

When Barry Goldwater won the 1964 Republican nomination, people accustomed to more pliable politicians assumed he would quickly dilute his ideological message. But after hearing a few sentences of Goldwater's fireside acceptance speech, the convention, with a wit in the press gallery exclaimed in mock amazement, "Good God, he's going to run as Goldwater!" Thatcher is going to govern as Thatcher. And why not? She has a mandate. Indeed, she has, in a sense, a mandate, and a half.

She won the most lopsided election since 1945, and the swing she produced was perhaps more impressive than that of 1945 because then there had not been an election for 10 years.

Furthermore, six weeks after Thatcher's general election victory, Conservative candidates dominated the elections for members of the European parliament.

There has been a concerted effort to get people of the "European Community" rather than the "Common Market." But Hugh Thomas, a distinguished historian, notes that the European parliament elections were a victory for those who think of Europe not as a market than as a community.

The conservative mood of the day involves a renewed respect for market forces, and a clear-eyed recognition that markets often are inhospitable to "communisation" values; and a belief that those values have been overemphasized in redistributive as opposed to producing Europe.

The history of Western political thought since 1789 -- since the French Revolution and the implementation of the U.S. Constitution -- is a story of tension between aspirations for liberty understood as the absence of restraint, and its community (which implies restraint). "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity!" The economics, liberty of acquisition, of people acting aggressively in free markets has been considered good for GNP.

Unfortunately, egalitarian economic policies that were supposed to foster feelings of social fraternity have not always done so. Instead, they have intensified the politics of envy; they have fostered irredeemable social comparisons; they have invested too much social energy in redistribution rather than in producing wealth.

Goldwater said party platforms were packs of lies, a statement simultaneously platitudinous and provocative. But there has not recently been an act of political candor comparable to Thatcher's first budget. Rarely, if ever, has there been such a swift and emphatic translation of promises into policy.

Successful parties usually shade toward prudent vagueness while campaigning, and then find that the public has somewhat sullenly given power without giving real consent to have the power used for anything in particular. Thatcher risked everything, with a highly explicit campaign, and now has an explicit mandate.

American parties, please note.

Students needed on committees

By Charity Gauld
Staff Writer

More than 100 students are needed for Student Government committee appointments.

Students are needed on various committees, including the Campus Judicial Board, Honor's Day Committee, Student Work and Financial Assistance Committee, and Election Committee. A Student Senate secretary is also needed.

Alexander said that students who apply should have at least one year of college experience. "Most of the committees meet once a month. It might look like one individual isn't doing very much, but when you think of 100 students participating in various activities at SIU, then it's truly impressive. Some of the committees haven't had students on them for over three years," Alexander said. "I think this is a bad neglect. There are enough undergraduates to have at least one student on these committees."

Alexander said that if there are more students getting involved with campus affairs, then there will be less room to blame the administration for policies which may have a negative effect on students. "If we students can get in there, we can work with the administration on our problems," Alexander added.

According to Alexander, there are additional committee openings. They will be listed in the "Help Wanted" column of the new monthly Student Government newsletter, The Informer.

The first issue of The Informer is currently being circulated on campus by the Student Government staff. Alexander said that if many mailing services are available on a round-the-clock basis at Self Serve Postal Centers. The centers offer purchasing of stamps, postal cards, stamped envelopes, and currency-changing machines. The self-service facility in Carbondale is located at the Student Center.

Mail delivery takes holiday

No regular or business mail will be delivered Wednesday, in Carbondale. The lobby window service will also be closed on Independence Day. But individuals will be able to get to their post office boxes.

Postmaster Hubert L. Goloff of the Carbondale Post Office noted that many mailing services are available on a round-the-clock basis at Self Serve Postal Centers. The centers offer purchasing of stamps, postal cards, stamped envelopes, and currency-changing machines. The self-service facility in Carbondale is located at the Student Center.

Ashby-Ostermann jazzes up steps

By Jordan Gold
Staff Writer

The Sunset Concert Series ran into a little rain last Thursday night, but all ended well. Ashby-Ostermann performed its special brand of jazz on Shyrock's steps.

Featuring all original material that varies from rock to jazz to avant-garde music, Ashby-Ostermann in Vince Ashby on guitar, Dennis Ostermann on keyboards, Jim Massoth on sax, Jim Bromley on bass and Dave Beach on drums.

The concert started slowly, rain prevented many people from getting there until later. The first set was characterized by borrowed songs, some lost to last forever. Ashby later admitted that the band didn't get going until the second set because they had difficulty concentrating.

"We had a couple of amps blow out and the rain made it difficult to concentrate. The first set was highlighted by two songs, "Charlie Tune," and "Bucintaur."

Butch Tatum proved to be the highlight of the evening. In the middle of the song, the band stopped playing with 1.5 seconds left. Ashby said the band put the rest in a cup of cognac and age because it seemed to fit. "Bucintaur" was the song before the rest. After Ashby called the group's "Mulligan's Stew" song because it has a little bit of everything.

As Tourel was preparing to go to the hotel to meet the mysterious letter-writer, Lucienne's husband, Don Homedes de Hastangua-Breit Lappin, came to visit the Champs Elysées. They were shown the letter. He draws a pistol and rushes to the hotel determined to shoot his wife and her lover. Lappin's portrayal of the lanky, half-crazed Spaniard was hilarious. He rushed around the stage screaming and shouting until the audience was weak with laughter.

The entire cast eventually ends up at the hotel, which is run by a sadistic bear of a man, Ferrailton, (Michael Blum), who is never without his wife, Olympe, (Dorothy Hendel). All the performers, including a guest at the hotel, Rugby (Thomas Hammarschmidt), and Dr. Finache (Timothy Brown) did an outstanding job of portraying the comic characters of the play.

Schumacher, who was not only Victor-Emmanuel, but the hotel porter, Piche, as well, did the excellent job of cheating the terriers both people. As Victor-Emmanuel, he played a sober, dignified gentleman and as Piche he portrayed a silly drunken man who loved to be beaten by his boss. Schumacher in a Summer Playhouse veteran, having participated last year. Other facets of the play which added to the audience's enjoyment were the costumes, designed by Richard Boss, who has a master's degree in costume design from SVA, and the magnificently designed sets done by Darwin Payne, chairman of the Theater Department.

Honors director search cut to 13

By Karla Woodrives

The list of applicants for director of honors at the new University Honors Program has been narrowed to 13.

Ed McGlone, chairman of the Search and Selection Committee, said the group of 13 is composed of full and assistant professors from the colleges of Liberal Arts, Sciences, Communication and Fine A and Education.

Commenting on the applicants, McGlone said, "I'm impressed with the quality of applicants. All are of superior quality and several are outstanding."

The Search and Selection Committee will meet Wednesday, and on July 10 to review the applications. McGlone said.

The original bill 454, on Thursday voted 29-14 not to accept House amendments. That action sent the bill back to the House for further consideration.

Sen. Dana Weener, D-Brock Island, said people attending sporting events already have the National Anthem as a symbol of patriotism.

"Enough is enough," Weener said. "I'm a little suspicious of people who make a holy show out of patriotism."
Salukis plan football camp

By Mark Pabich
Sports Editor

The Saluki and Carbondale and SIU sponsor camps and leagues in basketball, soccer, swimming and volleyball but offer nothing for aspiring football players. Saluki quarters Arthur "Slingshot" Williams and 11 other SU football players would like to change that situation. Williams is starting a flag football intramural camp for children 9-14 years of age.

According to Williams the camp will be run by parents with the assistance of coaches of Saluki football players. "The whole idea of the camp is to share our football experiences with the parents so that they can coach the kids a little better," Williams said. "The players would also have to offer some fine points to the kids that parents might not be able to offer.

"The camp, which will begin Aug. 27, will include a schedule of instructional practices and a season of flag play. The Carbondale YMCA, McDonald's, and other SU offices have offered to help support the camp by providing balls, officials and a flag football camp so that SIU offices and the Carbondale community could work together on a project. It's a good idea for the athletes to get involved with a community project," Williams said. "After all, we are citizens of Carbondale."

By helping the youth through the flag football program, Williams hopes to generate community interest in the Saluki football team. "And their parents will come to watch us as they know if they know we are interested in helping the youth," Williams said.

Williams would like to see the league's championship game held at McAndrew Stadium. "Having the game at McAndrew would be a real thrill for everyone," Williams said.

Williams would like to see the kids in the league come to see the Salukis practice and play the Salukis practice and play.

Applications for the flag football league will be available at McDonald's, the YMCA, Burger King and other Carbondale businesses. Completed applications can be returned to the place where they were picked up. The SaluSU football players will meet with parents interested in coaching on July 20 to discuss schedules and league policy. Meeting time and place will be announced later.

"I hope that the league will be a success," Williams said. "We've got the football players interested, and the media interested, now all we need is some potential ball players and more sponsors."

IM refs take abuse, but keep order

By Jan Rotter
Student Writer

Despite the verbal abuse they receive Saluki flag football officials, softball diamonds and basketball referees and referees manage to maintain a peaceful environment. The job of officials, according to Bill Stewart, an official with an Amateur Softball Association certification, "You have to be able to maintain control." Stewart officiates soft ball at intramurals and for the Carbondale City Softball League.

One of the main problems that officials encounter in the fact that in many of the participants don't have the proper knowledge of the rules. According to Dec. Twenhafel, an official with an Illinois High School Association certification, the majority of the hassles that umpires have are from the people who think they know every rule, and when they don't, they will make one up. The job of the officials that work for intramurals officiate a variety of sports. Many of the refer's will officiate softball and basketball on the same day. This requires a knowledge of the rules for each sport. The intramural department trains and tests officials for the sports which they will oversee in order to assure participation of qualified officials.

"Officials must have a thorough knowledge of the rules," Joyce Gover, assistant and principal coordinator of intramural sports, said. "Each official must pass certain tests in order to be scheduled for work."

Not only are officials tested, but they are evaluated from month to month on their performance. "The evaluations are spot on file so that it is possible to place the officials according to their individual potential," Craven said.

"The city would like an official, a student must first have an ACT family financial statement on file. A student must then attend two pre-season meetings. The first meeting consists of salaries, schedules and rules and procedures. During the second meeting, slides and picture presentations about positioning and goals will be shown.

Officials are paid anywhere from $3.30 to $4.25 per game, depending on the officials rating. Officials are rated from no rating to state rated officials.
