Earthquake coverage lacking on paid-for University structures

If an extensive earthquake hit SIU-C and some older, paid-for campus buildings were destroyed, insurance would not cover the loss, Rick Davis, insurance manager, said.

"Illinois has elected not to purchase insurance for paid-for buildings, but if a building is destroyed, the state will allocate money to replace it," he said.

Buildings as Puliam Hall, Woody Hall, Anthony Hall, Shryock Auditorium and Parkinson Laboratory have no insurance, he said.

The state of Illinois has a policy of not insuring paid-for buildings at state-owned universities, Davis said.

Buildings that are still being paid for, such as the Student Center and all campus housing, are insured.

"All Illinois state-owned property, such as prisons and state schools, are self-insured like SIU," risk manager Jefferson Yusko said.

If the state were to insure all of its property with an insurance company, the cost to the taxpayer would be astronomical, he said.

The state decides when the money is allocated and how much money will be allocated, Yusko said.

Old Main Building, which was destroyed a second time by a fire in 1966, is self-insured, he said.

Instead of replacing the building, Yuskos said the parts were added to Faznc Hall, which took several years.

Yusko said that nothing unusual and that several other states in the country self-insure their own property.

Allan Haake, SIUC's supervising architect, said buildings constructed since 1977 — the School of Technical Careers, the Lesar Law School and the Recreation Center — were built to withstand severe earthquakes.

Haake was unsure which residence halls were built to withstand earthquakes but he said he would "bet this week's paycheck" that the high-rise buildings could withstand an earthquake.

Mascots treated royally by alumni Saluki lovers

The University's two remaining Saluki mascots, Khalia and Thunder, had a home in Chester, about 40 miles northwest of Carbondale.

Alumni John and Linda Saunders, Saluki owners themselves, volunteered to care for the dogs after seeing one of the mascots limping at a football game.

and after visiting the University kennels at the Wildlife Annex near McLaugherty Road.

Although the dogs were not mistreated, the care provided wasn't suitable for the proud and temperamental Salukis, they said.

"Salukis are "people dogs" that need TLC (tender loving care), not isolated kennels with concrete floors," Saunders said.

The dogs were in desperate need of a bath and grooming when the Saunders picked them up Oct. 20 after Homecoming weekend. Linda Saunders said the Alpha Phi Omega fraternity, responsible for grooming the dogs and handling them at University functions told the Saunders they had difficulty arranging to bathe and groom the dogs.

Khalia and Thunder now lead the life of Riley. The dog are fed lamb Eukanuba, a meal made of chicken by-products that is 30 percent protein and 20 percent crude fat, instead of soybean-loaded Bow-Wow dog food and a tablespoon of lard. Their diet also is supplemented with steaks and vegetables like broccoli and carrots, the Saunders said.

Khalia has gained eight pounds and his personality has improved. Thunder, in the meantime, has lost four pounds, gained improved muscle tone and acquired a good-looking coat, the Saunders said.

"The kids at Alpha Phi Omega are going to find that Thunder is a different dog and is raring to go," Linda Saunders said.

The Saunders are in the process of arranging with the fraternity to familiarize the future handlers of the mascots with Khalia and Thunder.

John Saunders, attending SIU-C on a track scholarship, said his first exposure to Salukis was a trip to the track sc holarship, said his first exposure to Salukis was a trip to the mascots with Khalia and Thunder.

North, investigators hold 1st meeting

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lt. Col. Oliver North, wearing his Marine uniform with medals pinned across his chest, met for the first time Tuesday with congressional Iran-Contra investigators to be granted immunity in order to review subpoenaed documents.

North made the formal appearance on the eve of his session with Hill investigators to testify in private about what he told President Reagan about the secret sale of arms to Iran and the diversion of profits to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., said North appeared for 15 minutes to deliver the notebooks, telephone logs and other documents to investigators.

North appeared as part of their probe into his role as the kingpin in the Iran-Contra scandal.

North's secretary, Fawn Hall, described North's notebook as being almost like a diary he kept of activities while directing the Iran-Contra operations from his office in the White House.

As part of the formal procedure, the committee formally granted North limited immunity from prosecution after he took the Fifth Amendment in response to a token question from investigators.

North ducked reporters and did not appear for a photo session, but Hamilton described the session as "cordial and "very congenial." He and other panel members said North appeared in his Marine uniform, repette with medals.

Reagan acaum on U.S. Gulf protection plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, rejecting congressional concerns, forged ahead Tuesday with plans to protect Kuwaiti ships in the Persian Gulf despite warnings of an increased risk of Iraqi reprisals against the United States. Meeting for more than an hour with the bipartisan congressional leadership, Reagan rejected a call by Democrats to delay the escort operation to allow more time for a full assessment of the military and geopolitical consequences.

Reagan seeks opinions on judicial candidates

It's a dog's life for two graduates teamed for support

By Luana Graves
Student Writer

Shannon, the first support dog for the physically challenged in the Carbondale area "has a lot of heart," said owner Leanne Harpole.

A 2-year-old golden retriever, Shannon is trained to be "an extension of me. She's my legs," Harpole said.

Shannon, a graduate of Support Dogs for the Handicapped in St. Louis, was chosen to match Harpole's medical diagnosis of muscular dystrophy. Harpole needs help with opening doors and picking up objects.

Harpole, 33, has been at SIU for six years working on her undergraduate degree in administration of justice. She is a graduate student in the Rehabilitation Counseling Training Program.

When Harpole first heard about support dogs on television two years ago, she thought "Having a dog that helps would be beyond belief." Now, she said, "Shannon's always ready to go. She always has her tail wagging, and she always tries no matter what I ask her to do."

"The things that she does are amazing," Harpole said. Shannon is able to pick up anything from a dime up to 15 pounds.

Shannon, a golden retriever support dog, holds a door open at Carbondale Towers Thursday for her owner Leanne Harpole, a graduate student in the University's Rehabilitation Counseling Training Program. Harpole has had Shannon for six weeks.

Support Dogs is a non-profit organization which provides dogs free to those who need them. The Department of Rehabilitation Services in Carbondale paid for Harpole's stay in St. Louis.

Support Dogs training goes through four phases before placing a dog. They select a dog from donations to the organization, then house and train the dogs for about a year. During the year they review and process applications to match people with the proper dogs. Finally, they bring the recipients and dogs together to train them as a team.

It costs between $7,000 and $8,000 to train each dog. Support Dogs is supported through donations and grants.

"She's a dog at home, but I think that we are partners and a team. I take care of her and she takes care of me," Harpole said.
Crowd keeps cool at Street Nationals

THE STREET MACHINE Nationals is gone, leaving in its wake the smell of burned rubber over on local roads, the feeling of wealth for many area merchants and a taste in the mouths of most area residents.

Promoters and spectators agreed that this year's "Nats" was the best yet. And word has it that there will be more to come: fair officials and event promoters have hinted that the Nats will be back next year — perhaps for a permanent stint.

THE NATS HAVEN'T always fared this well in its 11-year history. The rowdy crowds formed by Nats revelers so infuriated the residents and law-enforcement agencies of Indianapolis, Springfield and Collinsville that the event was asked to leave.

But Du Quoin and the surrounding area seem to like the Nats. In what has proved to be a "one hand washes the other" situation, Southern Iowans have extended all courtesies to our guests, who in most cases returned the gesture by remaining relatively docile and by pouring money into the local economy.

HOTELS, MOTELS, FAST-FOOD restaurants and gas stations found a captive audience in the Nats crowd, and many business owners made a lot of money over the weekend.

Area residents had the opportunity to look at some of the most beautiful cars around. Many of those who couldn't (or wouldn't) pay the $7 admission fee sat in lawn chairs beside the highway in Du Quoin and DeSoto and on the Strip in Carbondale, thrilled at the possibility of seeing the cars of their dreams cruise by.

STATE POLICE had few problems with the more than 65,000 spectators — only 209 traffic arrests and 230 warning citations were issued.

Yes, there were some rowdy fans, but similar to Carbondale's Halloween celebration, the people causing many of the problems were the out-of-town spectators, not the Nats participants, most of whom kept their cars off the street in hopes of winning Best of Show Sunday afternoon.

THE OP-HEARD REQUESTS for women to bar their breasts (in not so subtle terms) and an abundance of litter were the worst the crowd dished out, which is pretty good behavior for a crowd of that magnitude.

Let's hope that future Nats crowds will be as well behaved as this year's crowd. The economy, the people, and law-enforcement officials in Southern Illinois need more events like this one.

SIU headed down evangelical trail

Given the current state of affairs in SIU's administration, someone could easily draw comparisons between the financial "goings on" here and the financial budgetary expertise of the PTL. Or perhaps one might venture to ask if the university is secretly sending arms to Central America.

I can remember when the only question in the mind of the intellectual community was, "What does the chancellor do?" Now the very foundations of this great university are being rocked by what has been termed "Petitgate".

At first glance his record is unimpeachable. He has gotten rid of our president and a vice-president. Now let's be honest — what university needs a president with intelligence and wit or a vice-president recognized by any student on campus because of his personal concern for each student's success?

Furthermore, with Stone House vacant, what better place from which to chancellate than the shores of campus lake. Yes, yes, that's the ticket.

To quote Paul McCartney: "We're so sorry Uncle Albert." Do not think that the chancellor has not been hard at work earning his keep. He has been to a number of social events, given some speeches, and shaken some hands. That, to me, is worth $107,000 a year.

The Board of Trustees surely can recognize a good deal when they see one.

There are new developments happening on campus daily that show Lawrence Technician's determination to make SIU tops. Notice the turf at McKendree Stadium is being replaced?

I understand the new strain-resistant turf will not only be able to withstand the 1987 grid season but will be especially durable during half time shows in which panoply of university members chosen at random will be fed to hungry lions.

I hope I can get such a neat job some day. Lawrence, you are a lucky man. I am surprised that SIU's hasn't already made the chancellor's job Civil Service or, better yet, a graduate assistant's position. However, with such a price tag, why didn't the Board of Trustees give him the job?

I would gladly have taken the job for $25,000 a year. Of course, I would need to pay off my car and student loans, but I would be living above the poverty level for the first time in four years and saving SIU the money.

I have some predictions for SIU's future faculty and staff. Don't be surprised if by fall semester Jerry Fallwell has been appointed president of SIU.

When tuning in WSUI's fundraiser this year, people will see Oral Roberts emerging from Pullathy bell tower giving us only ten days to send in our donations. Let's just say my check will be in the mail.

Goodbye Mr Coppi. Virginia Marmaduke may still be the Duchess of Pickneyville but Tammy Faye Bakker will be WSUI's new spokeswoman. Heritage University, USA...I like that.

Meanwhile, elsewhere on campus, an administrative assistant begins shedding a paper trail which would have led to who knows where.

The news of SIU's possible selection of this University, what's a chancellor to do? I believe I would ask for a raise. — Chris Bridick, Alumnus.

Thompson Woods in a sad situation

I feel sad for all the creatures who until two weeks ago made their home in the Campus Lake woods by Greek Row.

I feel sad for all the hundreds of beautiful trees that were needlessly cut down to make room for a few picnic tables so that the Greeks can party more easily by the lake, and for those who have enjoyed these woods and animals for so many years and never were consulted before a beautiful natural area on campus was destroyed.

I feel sad for the administrator: who made it an absurd decision and the workmen who carried it out for their utter lack of sensitivity and regard for the creatures and the trees and the students and faculty and staff who enjoyed being around them.

Whether the Natural Areas Committee exists or not is not a relevant excuse. Clarence Dougherty should have consulted with the experts before beginning a project with such intense environmental impact.

Why weren't students, faculty and staff who use the woods consulted? Perhaps the project started while students were gone. Why is Dougherty saying that the "PLP Local Plant wanted the area cleared of litter" when anyone who has walked around the lake knows that there is hardly any litter there?

God forbid we should ever clean up the lake itself. Dougherty would probably drain it and turn it into a parking lot. — Marc Cohen, director, Wellness Center expertise," he said. "I want the chancellor and vice president to be aware that they can be. We should be small enough that we know that we need each other.

Students are another group that must be recognized when making decisions, he said. He has been a West Virginia system has a student representative on the board. Studies have shown that student input from a non-voting student trustee is crucial.

"In that sense the students are our bosses and I have to listen. I don't know if you could do otherwise. Students are part of this business, if we aren't success-oriented for students, the business is going to suffer," he said.

West Virginia is attracting more students to faculty positions by using a woman as a recruiter, "dealing them in" to the process and striking deals with women faculty to attract them. West Virginia has arrived at deals such as an offer of $2,000 in extra salary to meet child care needs as an enticement to attract better female faculty.

A supportive environment can also help assure women will stay with the faculty once they are recruited, Powers said.

"I don't know whether President Reagan knew about the diversification, the arms profits to the Nicaraguan Contras."

On July 7, he will break his silence for the first time in public and testify before the Iran-Contra committees in a session expected to last four days.

Limited immunity compels North's testimony under the threat of jail while protecting him from prosecution on any evidence he reveals, meaning Walsh must prove his case against North prepared independent of anything North may say.

A spokesman for Walsh said the independent prosecutor has been filing evidence under court seal at least once a week for the past few months and would continue to take precautions, which could include a further filing late Tuesday or early Wednesday. Walsh also said a court appearance Wednesday afternoon before U.S. District Judge Aubrey Robinson, who is considering his constitutional attack against Walsh's authority to conduct Iran-Contra investigation.

As a result, the congressional Iran-Contra panels expanded to begin questioning him late in the day.

Sen. Paul Trife, R-Va., one of the lawmakers who will question North, said in an interview the session "will go to his relationship with the president, all the evidence as it relates to North and the hearings."

When asked whether he would believe North under oath, Trife replied: "It's fair to say that Oliver North and the others have often been strange, but he's been a man who has told his story."
Award winning playwright inspired by religion, AIDS

By Mary Caudle
Entertainment Editor

Thomas Westerfield first questioned the idea of organized religion while attending a college run by Benedictine monks. It was then that he was surprised to find that compassion of the spirit was sometimes replaced with narrow mindedness, racism and homophobia.

Now a graduate student in theater, Westerfield won second place and a $1000 cash prize for his play about AIDS and this conflict of traditional and spiritual values in the church.

WESTERFIELD WAS runner-up in a national contest sponsored by the University of West Georgia. His entry, "Monasteries," is a full-length, two-act drama about a young priest. Exiled from a monastery, the priest returns five years later, stricken with AIDS and in search of a home.

"For me, part of the thrill of winning isn't just the money," Westerfield said. "This is one of the more mainstream contests, which means that besides having a gay theme the play must be able to say other things, to speak to heterosexuals as well."

"I THINK what makes the play compelling is its tie-in with spiritual matters," Westerfield continued. "Among other things, it deals with how religion, by its condemning nature, can twist a person's sexuality."

Westerfield has rewritten the play since entering the original version in the contest. He has revised "Monasteries" to appear as one of three student plays performed during the Playwrights Workshop later this month.

The characters in "Monasteries," Westerfield said, are based in part on people he met while earning a bachelor's degree in English at a Benedictine college. He considered being a priest, but seminar officials recommended that he not pursue a degree in theology.

"IT PROBABLY had something to do with unorthodox, anti-institutional feelings," Westerfield said. He said he has written stories for the college newspaper about such "unorthodox" subjects as racism in the seminary. "They don't exactly lay that to you out. They tell you to think about it for a while."

Westerfield dabbled in creative writing for years but began playwriting just four years ago in Owego, N.Y., when he was laid off work. Encouraged by friends to pursue a master's degree in playwriting, Westerfield enrolled at Notre Dame in 1985 and won an international playwriting award that year for "Catharsis," a play about

NEW YORK (UPI) — An Army veteran living on $128 a month GI pension won $7.5
million in the state lottery Tuesday, then stood in the street and yelled, "Praise the Lord!"

Willie Little, 53, said he would take his wife to Rome for a vacation, buy a new house and set up trust funds for his four children and four grandchildren. He said his wife, who works in Philadelphia as a nurse's aide, would quit her job.

"I'll be able to get the family back together again. And I've got already got a real estate agent looking for a new place for us to live. Hopefully, we'll be able to move out of the city — to Jersey or upstate," said Little,
who was a mental health therapy aide at Kingsbore Psychiatric Hospital in Brooklyn until he was injured
a year ago.

Little, who lives in Brooklyn, said he picked the winning numbers by using his birthday, which was last Wednesday, plus Army serial numbers and numbers from his identification card at the hospital.

The winning numbers were 19, 26, 29, 34, 39, and 64.

After a two-week wait, he will receive his first payment of $377,143, less 20 percent withheld for taxes, making the actual check $300,714. He will receive 20 annual payments.

He said that when he saw the winning numbers posted in the candy store in his neighborhood, he at first did not say anything.

Boy testifies to teacher’s abuse, threat

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI)—A day-care center teacher acpreschoolers used a kitchen knife and fork in her assault on one boy and threatened to kill his parents if he revealed the abuse, the boy testified Tuesday.

“Shetheroached in year-old boy told jurors in closed-circuit television testimony in the trial of Margaret Kelly Michaels, 24, Michaels, who now lives in Pittsburgh, is charged with sexually assaulting and threatening 20 children during the 1984-85 school year at the Wee Care Day Nursery in Maplewood, N.J.

The defense argues that Michaels, who is the victim of “a witch hunt” and that the lurid stories of abuse contained in the court records against her are fantasies touched off by suggestive questioning of preschoolers by the authorities.

The boy, who prosecutors said was either 4 or 5 at the time of the assault, accused Michaels of inserting the handle of a knife in his rectum and the tip of a fork in his “in the little hole.”

He said he screamed out in pain, but teachers in the next room did not hear him.

The assault occurred during nap time at the nursery school, the boy said, and two other children were awakened by his screams.

Oral Roberts says 'raised' infant was cold but possibly not dead

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — Television evangelist Oral Roberts said Tuesday the child he declared dead and raised from the dead may not have been clinically dead although "his little body was cold.

"Whether or not the child was consciously alive or dead, I don't know," Roberts said during his son's television program, "The Richard Roberts Show." "The mother thought it was dead. I didn't know what to do," Roberts said. "His little body was cold.

"I held that little thing in my hands. I had a way in those days... I said 'God restore this life. Restore this little baby.' And it jerked in my hand and it was still. And I called out again. It jerked and the little thing opened its eyes. The mother just went into orbit," Roberts said. "I said the demonstration of healing drew 1,000 people to come forward to accept Christ."

House OKs DUI measure

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — On an 111-1 vote, House lawmakers gave final approval Monday to send the governor a drunken driving measure aimed at discouraging repeat offenders.

Under the measure (H2700), those convicted of a second DUI offense, reckless homicide, leaving the scene of an accident in which someone is seriously injured or killed, or any combination of those crimes within 20 years would face a minimum of a three-year driver's license revocation.

Those convicted of a third offense within 20 years would face a six-year revocation and be subject to a one-to-three-year prison term and a $10,000 fine.

State protests Rainbow Family park gathering

ASHVILLE, N.C. (UPI) — Drums are beating in the Shadows National Forest for the gathering of the Rainbow Family — thousands of hippie-like folk, one elephant and a few monkeys — whose presence is disturbing the state a lot more than it is the Forest Service.

The state went before a federal judge Tuesday demanding that the family meet state requirements that a permit must be granted for any gathering of 5,000 or more and the group must post a $5,000 bond and acquire liability insurance of up to $1 million.

The Rainbow Family has no money, and for that matter, no leader.

By Tuesday about 4,000 Rainbow Family members had gathered over 300 acres in the forest's 120,000-acre Cheoah District, said Karen Hughes, spokeswoman for the U.S. Forest Service's North Carolina division.

The meeting, which officially runs from July 1-7, marks the group's first mass gathering in North Carolina.

The Rainbow Family gathering, so far, is a peaceful and environmentally conscious one, Hughes said.

Puzzle answers
Cubs veto temporary lights, opt for permanent solution

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago Cubs are not interested in installing temporary lighting at Wrigley Field despite efforts by the Illinois Senate to allow post-season night games at the nation’s only single ballpark, a team executive said Tuesday.

“We really didn’t even ask for it,” Donald Grenesko, executive vice president of the Cubs, said in reference to the Senate’s 55-1 vote Monday to exempt the Cubs from state noise-pollution laws during the post-season.

Grenesko, calling the Senate proposal a “band-aid solution,” said the Cubs would prefer the installation of permanent lights.

“There are some questions about whether temporary lights would produce sufficient light for the ball players, and there are a lot of questions about the technical feasibility of the whole thing,” he said.

The Cubs plan to raise the issue of installing permanent lights and playing 18 regular-season games at night during the Illinois General Assembly’s next session, Grenesko said.

In the meantime, Grenesko said the Cubs had made no decision about what to do in the event the team gets in a post-season play-off this year. The team might seek to play all post-season games during the day or possibly play at another stadium, such as Busch Stadium in St. Louis, he said.

II institutions agreed to cut football scholarship limits from 45 to 40. Division II also trimmed 22 scholarships in 24 men’s and women’s sports.

Proposals to reduce the size of football coaching staffs in Division I-A and I-AA were on the afternoon agenda.

University of Washington president William P. Gerberding touched off the debate concerning reduction of football coaching staffs by saying the NCAA convention needed to leave a symbol behind.

“We’ve gone away from this convention with very few symbols,” he said. “But this would be one.”

Nebraska football coach Tom Osborne said he and his colleagues were not interested in symbols.

“We don’t need to worry about symbolism,” Osborne said. “We live in a real world. Since 1974 the number of players on football scholarship in Division I-A has been reduced to 25 to 30 percent.”

After that proposal was turned down, delegates decided not to even consider another which would cut at least one scholarship in 11 men’s and nine women’s sports.

“To refuse to reduce football by a small amount and then cut these other programs would be disgraceful,” he said.

University of Oregon president Paul M. Hoffman said it was one of the agreements in arguing to defer the proposal.

“It would send out a terrible message,” Hoffman said.

Olum received a large round of applause from the normally staid convention and another burst of applause was heard when the proposal was deferred.

— par to the games of other states,” Fallon said. “More people are finding out about the Games all the time.”

New York’s Empire State Games, which began in 1978, attract 80,000 participants at the regional level.

“We’re pretty much right behind them,” Fallon said, explaining that though the 80,000 figure seems high, it’s because both winter and summer games are held in New York.

The Badger State Games in Wisconsin have been held for three years -- just one year less than the Prairie State Games, which started this year. The Illinois version is “light years” ahead.

Fallen attributes much of the Prairie State Games’ success to the willingness of state industries to financially support the project.

A majority of the funding for the games is provided by corporate sponsorship, which Fallon’s company, a Chicago-based sports promotion-management firm, solicits.

Illinois ranks No. 1 among all other states in corporate sponsorship, with over 200 corporations contributing funds to the Games, but contributors aren’t even from within the state, Fallon said.

A small portion of the funding is provided by the state, while an even smaller amount is generated from entry fees paid by the participants.

This year’s games will be operating on a budget of just over $1 million.

Gary Carney, an assistant athletics director at SIU-C, is director of the Southern region, which is composed of the 20 states in the southernmost 37 counties of the state.

CHICAGO, Illinois - The Illinois State Senate has approved a bill that would allow.post-season games at Wrigley Field, the nation's only single ballpark.

The Senate on Monday approved Senate Bill 1115, which would exempt the Chicago Cubs from state noise-pollution laws during the post-season.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Thomas B. Fordham, D-Chicago, would allow the Cubs to play night games at Wrigley Field.

The Cubs have been seeking permission to play night games at Wrigley Field, and the Senate bill could pave the way for such games.

In other news, the Senate passed a resolution approving the formation of the Illinois Sports Commission, which will be responsible for overseeing the state's sports programs.

The commission will be made up of representatives from various state agencies, including the Department of Transportation, the Department of Commerce and the Department of Tourism.

The commission will be charged with promoting Illinois as a sports destination, and will work to attract major events to the state.

The Senate also passed a resolution authorizing the Illinois Department of Transportation to develop a plan for the construction of a new highway in the southern part of the state.

The highway would be a major improvement for the region, and will help to provide better access to the southern part of the state.

In other news, the Senate approved a bill that would provide tax incentives for businesses that create jobs in Illinois.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Tom D. Williams, R-Morton Grove, would provide businesses with tax credits for creating jobs in Illinois.

The bill is expected to be signed into law by the governor, and will help to create new jobs in Illinois.
Basketball camp showcases quality

By Steve Merritt

Staff Writer

SIU women's basketball coach Cindy Scott says the Saluki Girls' Basketball Camp gives participants "a taste of what it takes to become a quality basketball player."

As the coach of one of the Midwest's finest basketball programs, Scott's camp attracts campers from far and wide. Having led SIU to two consecutive NCAA appearances, Scott's prominent place on the national women's scene is a major reason why campers are attracted.

Teaching basketball fundamentals and how to apply them are the chief goals of Scott and assistant coach Julie Beck, the camp's co-director.

"It really is a great way to refine fundamentals that the player already has in her head," Scott added.

Scott said her interest in the game's well-being is one reason she conducts the camp. Obviously, you want to see the area have high school play improve," Scott said. "We want to turn out kids who are most interested and more knowledgeable about the game.

Scott said the camp concentrates on individual skills rather than team-oriented skills.

"It just wasn't designed as a team-type camp," Scott said.

"Like here, we don't have coaching clinics like some camps do.

While some camps exist with a pretense of serving as "recruiting cliams," Scott said her camp wasn't designed for recruiting purposes at all.

"There are so many star camps and other things designed especially for the purposes of recruiting," said Scott, who has attended such recruiting camps from Omaha to Terre Haute in the past two weeks. "Recruiting from the SIU camp just wasn't a goal." Scott said the public relations aspect of the Saluki camp was tremendous.

"It's something that can provide great exposure for the University," Scott said. "The kids come down, meet our players, see our campus and maybe get a little bit more about our total program. Maybe they'll end up being better fans.

While it is a fun week for both coach and the campers, Scott did say the camp conflagrated with the summer recruiting schedule and makes a hectic pace even busier for Scott and Beck.

Several Saluki women's basketball players assist in the effort. Anne Thouvenin, Mary Bergius, Bridget Bonds, Dana Fitzpatrick, Cathy Kempwerth and Dee Scholten assist the University with their court knowledge with that of graduate assistant and former Saluki star Marialice Jenkins to help run the camp.

Debra Kelly, a former player under Scott at SIU-C 10 years ago and presently coach of the Jerseyville High School girls' basketball team, also assists.

While the first session of the camp is in progress and runs through July 2, applications are still being accepted for the second camp, set to run from July 15-18. Costs are $166 for resident campers and $75 for commuters. Those interested in further information can contact the Division of Continuing Education at 536-7731.

NCAA budget cuts blocked by gridders

DALLAS (UPI) — The national leaders of college football schools Tuesday ignored the call of the NCAA President's Commission and rejected proposed reductions in some intercollegiate sports.

"I wouldn't say it is true," said NCAA President's Commission Chairman John B. Slaughter, chancellor of the University of Maryland. "You have to be realistic. There are issues here that are very important to a lot of people."

Schools in Division I-A voted 69-39 during the NCAA's special meeting to continue reducing total football scholarship aid to 8.5 percent of the schools that finished among last year's top 26, the budget figures to vote in favor of the scholarship cuts were from the sponsoring Pac-10 Conference, Arizona State, Arizona, UCLA and Washington.

Division I-A schools voted to reject a football scholarship cutoff set from 76 to 65, but Division See NCAA, Page 15

Basketball has to carry Southern. It's important, vital and essential to have a strong basketball program, and the potential for this happening at Southern is definitely here. But SIU has to be willing to go the extra mile, to do what may not ordinarily be expected," Glenn said.

Glenn said when he graduated in 1977, SIU-C began to look to football as the way to improve the overall athletics program. In spite of winning seasons and a national championship in 1982, however, Glenn said football was not the answer.

"Basketball has both the facilities and the revenue potential. The Arena could be filled for games against strong opponents and post-season tournaments. To get that to happen, Southern has to be willing to overcome concern about a couple of obstacles that seem to be holding them back from making that commitment," Glenn said.

Former point guard for the Salukis, graduate assistant Marialice Jenkins takes a turn at coaching during a drill at the girls' basketball camp Tuesday at the Arena.
