Earthquake coverage lacking on paid-for University structures

If an extensive earthquake hit SIU-C If an extensive earthquake hit SIU-C and some older, paid-for campus buildings were destroyed, insurance would not cover the loss, Rick Davis, insurance manager, said.

"Illinois has elected not to purchase insurance for paid-for buildings, but if a building is destroyed, the state will allocate money to replace it," he said.

Such buildings as Pulliam Hall,
Woody Hall, Anthony Hall, Shryock

The state of Illinois has a policy of not insuring paid-for buildings at state-owned universities, Davis said. Buildings that are still being paid for, such as the Student Center and all for, such as the Student Center and all campus housing, are insured.

"All Illinois state-owned property, such as prisons and state buildings, are self-insured like SIU," risk manager Joseph Yusko said.

If the state were to insure all of its property with an insurance company, the cost to the taxpayer would be astronomical, he said.

The state decides when the money is allocated and how much money will be allocated, Yusko said.

Old Main Building, which was destroyed a second time by a fire in 1969, was self-insured, he said. Instead of replacing the building, Yusko said extra classrooms and of-fices were added to Faner Hall, which Yusko said this is nothing unusual and that several other states in the country self-insure their own property. Allan Haake, SIU-C's supervising architect, said buildings constructed since 1977 — the School of Technical Careers, the Lesar Law School and the Recreation Center — were built to withstand severe earthquakes.

Haake was unsure which residence halls were built to withstand ear-th-quakes but he said he would "bet this week's paycheck" that the high-rise buildings could withstand an ear-

Crowd keeps cool at Street Nationals

THE STREET MACHINE Nationals is gone, leaving in its wake the smell of burned rubber on local roads, the feeling of wealth for many area merchants and a good taste in the mouths of most area residents.

Promoters and spectators agreed that this year's "Nats" was the best yet. And word has it that there will be more to come: fair officials and event promoters have hinted that the Nats will be back next year — perhaps for a permanent stint.

THE NATS HASN'T always fared this well in its 11-year history. The rowdy crowds formed by Nats revelers so infuriated the residents and law-enforcement agencies of Indianapolis, Springfield and Collinsville that the event was asked to leave

But Du Quoin and the surrounding area seem to like the Nats. In what has proved to be a "one hand washes the other" situation. Southern Illingians courtesies to our guests, who in most cases returned the gesture by remaining relatively docile and by pouring money into the local economy.

HOTELS, MOTELS, FAST-FOOD restaurants and gas stations found a captive audience in the Nats crowd, and many business owners made a lot of money over the weekend

Area residents had the opportunity to look at some of the most beautiful cars around. Many of those who couldn't (or wouldn't) pay the $7 admission fee sat in lawn chairs beside the highway in Du Quoin and De Soto and on the Strip in Carbondale, thrilled at the possibility of seeing the cars of their dreams cruise by.

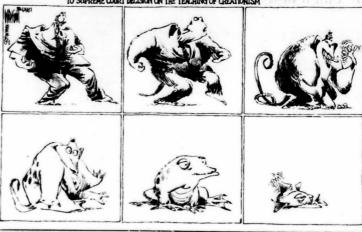

STATE POLICE had few problems with the more than 65,000 spectators - only 209 traffic arrests and 230 warning citations were issued.

Yes, there were some rowdy fans, but similar to Carbondale's Halloween celebration, the people causing many of the problems were the out-of-town spectators, not the Nats participants, most of whom kept their cars off the street in hopes of winning Best of Show Sunday afternoon.

THE OFT-HEARD REQUESTS for women to bare their breasts (in not so subtle terms) and an abundance of litter were the worst the crowd dished out, which is pretty good behavior for a crowd of that magnitude.

Let's hope that future Nats crowds will be as well behaved as this year's crowd. The economy, the people, and law-enforcement officials in Southern Illinois need more events like this one.

Given the current state of affairs in SIU'S administration, someone could easily draw comparisons between the financial "goings on" bear and the financial on" here and the financial "goings on" here and the financial budgetary expertise of the PTL. To quote Paul McCartney:

"We're so sorry Uncle Albert." Do not think that the chancellor has not been hard at work earning his keep. He has been to a number of social events, given some speeches, and shaken some hands. That, to me, is worth $107,000 a year. The Board of Trustees sure can recognize a good deal when they see one. There are new developments happening on campus daily that show Lawrence Petit's determination to make SIU tops. Notice the turf at McAndrew Stadium is being replaced?

I understand the new stainresistant turf will not only be resistant turf will not only be able to withstand the 1987 grid season but will be especially durable during half time shows in which pro-union faculty members chosen at random will be fed to hungry lions.

I hope I can get such a neat job some day. Lawrence, you are a lucky man. I am sur-prised that SIU hasn't already made the chancellor's job Civil Service or, better yet, a graduate assistant's position. However, with such a price tag, why didn't the Board of Trustees take bids for the job? I would gladly have taken the job for $25,000 a year. Of course I would need to pay off my car and student loans, but I would be living above the poverty level for the first time in four years and saving SIU $82,000 a year.

"For me, part of the thrill of winning isn't just the money," Westerfield said. "This is one of the more mainstream contests, which means that besides having a gay theme the play must be able to say other things, to speak to heterosexuals as well."

"I THINK what makes the play compelling is its tie-in with spiritual matters," Westerfield continued. Westerfield continued. "Among other things, it deals with how religion, by its condemning nature, can twist a person's sexuality." Westerfield has rewritten the play since entering the original version in the contest, with the revised "Monasteries" to appear as one of three student plays performed during the Playwrights Workshop later

The characters in "Monasteries," Westerfield says, are based in part on people he met while earning a bachelor's degree in English at a Benedictine college. He considered being a priest, but seminary officials recom-mended that he not pursue a degree in theology.

"IT PROBABLY had something to do with unor-thodox, anti-institution thodox, anti-institution feelings," Westerfield said. He thodox, anti-institution feelings." Westerfield said. He said he has written stories for the college newspaper about such "unorthodox" subjects as racism in the seminary. "They don't exactly throw you out. They tell you to think about it for a while."

for a while."

Westerfield dabbled in creative writing for years but began playwriting just four years ago in Owensboro, Ky., when he was laid off work. Encouraged by friends to pursue a master's degree in playwriting. Westerfield enrolled at SIU-C in 1985 and won an international playwriting award that year won an international playwriting award that year for "Catharsis," a play about relationship between sychologist who fought in the lietnam War and his gay Vietnam Vietnam War and his gay client. He's been hooked on playwriting ever since.

"MESTERFIELD SAYS
"Monasteries" is particularly pertinent today, considering the magnitude of the AIDS crisis, but notes his play explores more than the deadly disease.
"AIDS

"AIDS really brings into focus the conflict between traditional and spiritual values in the church," Westerfield said.

Westerfield's current "Honest projects include "Honest Lies," a play centered around a romance between a black female prostitute and a white male prostitute, and "Someone Else's," an unfinished novel that has drawn interest from a publisher.

Performances of "Monasteries" are set for 8 p.m. July 21 and 2 p.m. July 26 in the Laboratory Theater in the Communications Building.
Tickets can be purchased for

'110' musical to offer cool entertainment

"110 In The Shade," the musical version of "The Rainmaker," will open as the second production of the McLeod Theater Summer Playhouse on Thursday and continue July 3 and 5 and July 9 to 12. The musical features Jane Brockman as its dustbowl Cinderella and Bryan Johnson as the breezy con-man who teaches her to practice feminine wiles.

N. Richard Nash wrote this

N. Richard Nash wrote this song-and-dance adaptation of his original comedy about a roving rainmaker's transformation of a prairie wallflower. It features songs by Harvey Schmidt and Tom Jones, who wrote the popular musical "The Fantasticks."

The setting for "10 In The Shade" is a town in the southwestern plans country during a drought. A family of ranchers — a father and two sons — are worried, not only about the lack of rain but also about a lack of suitors for the daughter of the house.

about a lack of suitors for the daughter of the house.
Lilting ballads and lively songs embellish this tale of homespun people in the same colorful plains country that was the background for "Oklahoma!" Tunes range from the slow and indolent first number, "Another Hot Day," to a racy ditty called "Little Red Hat" and the rustic mood number, "Everything Beautiful Happens At Night."

"I'll be able to get the family

"I'll be able to get the family back together again. And I've already got a real estate agent looking for a new place for us to live. Hopefully, we'll be able to move out of the city — to Jersey or upstate," said Little, who was a mental health therapy aide at Kingsboro Psychiatric Hospital in Brooklyn until he was injured a year ago.

Cubs veto temporary lights, opt for permanent solution

CHICAGO (UPI) — The Chicago Cubs are not interested in installing temporary lighting at Wrigley Field despite efforts by the Illinois Senate to allow post-season night games at the natural season only unlit ballpark, a nauon s only unit balipark, a team executive said Tuesday. "We really didn't even ask for it," Donald Grenesko, executive vice president of the Cubs, said in reference to the Senate's 55-1 vote Monday to exempt the Cubs from state noise policion laws during the post season.

Grenesko, calling the Senate proposal a "band-aid solution," said the Cubs would prefer the installation of permanent lights. "There are some questions about whether temporary lights would produce sufficient light for the ball players, and there are a lot of questions about the technical feasibility of the who e thing," he said.

The Cuts plan to raise the issue of installing permanent lights and playing 18 regular-season games at night during the Illinois General Assembly's next session, Grenesko said.

In the meantime, Grenesko said the Cubs had made no decision about what to do in the event the team gets into postseason play this year. The team might seek to play all post-season games during the day or possibly play at another stadium, such as Busch Stadium in St. Louis, he said.

Herrin to name coach picks today

Saluki men's basketball coach Rich Herrin will an-nounce successors to fired assistants Steve Carroll and Hermann Williams in a press conference at 3 p.m. today in the Student Center's Mississippi Room.

Assistant Athletic Director Gary Carney, head of the selection committee Herrin had requested to assist him in the hiring process, said five candidates were interviewed yet with quite the offer that would suit me," Glenn said. The former Milwaukee Buck guard said last week odds were about 55-45 he would be working under Herrin for the 1987-88 season, but Glenn changed that figure Tuesday to "50-65 percent that it won't happen now." Glenn said SIU-C is at a crossroads and needs someone to help them produce a successful basketball program that will benefit other sports here as well.

"Basketball has to carry Southern. It's important, vital and essential to have a strong basketball program, and the potential for this happening at Southern is definitely there. But SIU has to be willing to go the extra mile, to do what may not ordinarily be expected," Glenn said.

Glenn said when he graduated in 1977, SIU-C began to look to football as the way to improve the overall athletics program. In spite of winning seasons and a national championship in 1983, however, Glenn said football was not the answer.

"Basketball has both the facility and the revenue potential. The Arena could be be filled for games against strong opponents and post-season tournaments. To get that to happen, Southern has to be willing to overcome concern about a couple of obstacles that seem to be holding them back from making that commitment," Glenn said.

Basketball camp showcases quality

SIII basketball women's coach Cindy Scott says the Saluki Girls' Basketball Camp gives participants "a taste of what it takes to become a what it takes to become a quality basketball player." As the coach of one of the Midwest's finest basketball programs, Scott's camp at-tracts campers from far and wide. Having led SIU to two consecutive NCAA ap-pearances, Scott's prominent place on the national women's scene is a major reason why campers are attracted.

Teaching basketball fun-damentals and how to apply them are the chief goals of Scott and assistant coach Julie Beck, the camp's co-director.

"It really is a great way to refine fundamentals that the player already has in her head," Scott added. Scott said her interest in the game's well-being is one reason she conducts the camp.

"Obviously, you want to see the level of area high school play improve," Scott said. "We want to turn out kids who are more interested and more knowledgeable about the game.

Scott said the camp con-centrates on individual skills rather than team-oriented skills.

"It just wasn't designed as a team-type camp," Scott said. "Likewise, we don't offer coaching clinics like some camps do."

While some camps exist with a pretext of serving as a "recruiting combine," Scott said her camp wasn't designed

"There are so many all-star camps and other things designed especially for the purposes of recruiting," said Scott, who has attended such recruiting camps from Omaha to Terre Haute in the past two weeks. "Recruiting from the (SIU) camp just wasn't a goal.

Scott said the public relations aspect of the Saluki camp was tremendous.

"It's something that can "It's something that can provide great exposure for the University," Scott said. "The kids come down, meet our players, set our campus and maybe get! know a little bit more about our total program. Maybe they'll end up being better fans."

Maybe they'll end up being better fans."

While it is a fun week for both coach and the campers, Scott did say the camp conflicted with the summer recruiting schedule and makes a hectic pace even busier for Scott and Beck.

Several Saluki women's basketball players assist in the effort. Anne Thouvenin, Mary Berguis, Bridget Bonds, Dana Fitzpatrick, Cathy Kempwerth and Dee Kibelkis combine their court knowledge with that of graduate a sistant and former Saluki star Marialice
