Guyon to step down as SIUC Chancellor

By Signe K. Skinion
DE Government/ Politics Editor

An interim chancellor will be found before August 16, when current SIUC Chancellor John C. Guyon is scheduled to step down. The search for a permanent chancellor will begin soon. University officials say.

SIUC President Ted Sanders said he is currently meeting with University leaders, such as the Faculty Senate president, to discuss what needs to be found in a permanent chancellor. He said he hopes to have a name of an interim chancellor to the SIUC Board of Trustees by its July 11 meeting.

Sanders said if he does not have a name by the scheduled meeting, he will ask the Board of Trustees to have a special meeting before August 16 to appoint and instate an interim chancellor.

He said a committee of University members will be formed to interview permanent chancellor applicants. Sanders said the list of committee members is not finalized, but names should be released later this month.

Sanders said the acting chancellor should not be someone who will apply for the permanent position.

"The interim chancellor cannot behave as a caretaker," he said. "They have to be someone who gets up in the morning concerned with state of the University because we can't wait another year."

Sanders said there are University problems that the interim chancellor needs to deal with immediately. Jack R. Dyer, University Relations executive director, said some of the University problems facing the acting chancellor are low student retention and recruitment.

Guyon, who announced his resignation June 3, said he will not be involved in either chancellor search.

"That is up to President Sanders to determine," he said. "When you step away from one of these tasks, you step away completely and don't stay under foot. I do not want to be in the way at all."

Guyon said he resigned for health reasons and because he felt "it was time."

On June 11, 1994, Guyon underwent a triple by-pass heart surgery at St. John's Hospital in Springfield because of artery blockage. Two weeks ago, the now 64-year-old Guyon suffered from chest pains and was hospitalized for 24-hour observation.

Illinois' high court asked to settle suit

By Signe K. Skinion

SIUC is petitioning the Illinois Supreme Court to overturn an appellate court decision allowing the names and addresses of incoming freshmen to be released to a local landlord. University officials say.

On May 7, the 5th District Appellate Court in Mount Vernon voted 3-0 in favor of Stan Lieber, owner of Stevenson Arms, 600 W. Mill St.

Lieber said he requested the information so he could send incoming freshmen information about living in Stevenson Arms, which is an off-campus, University-approved freshmen dorm.

Appellate Judge Terry Hopkin said that in the court's judgment, SIUC did not prove an overwhelming need to withhold incoming freshmen names and addresses from Lieber.

Students play waiting game with FAO

With sunshine, clear skies and warm weather, the last place Jason Mital wants to be sitting is in front of a Financial Aid office waiting for a tuition waiver application.

But for Mital, a junior in aviation technology from DeSoto, to register for any of his summer classes, he will have to sit and wait to be called.

Although there was a steady flow of students wandering around campus buildings, the waiting lines from fall and spring semesters have vanished. But problems still exist for some students.

Mital said he was dropped from his 12-hour class load because he did not make his pre-payment for his summer classes. He said he did not have the problem in the fall.

City receives grant for new educational project

By Julie Bury
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Carbondale may begin a new trend in educational programs throughout the state because of a $1.5 million state grant, city officials say.

The grant, which was approved by the Illinois General Assembly at the end of May, will be used to conduct a study that could lead to the combination of a new high school and community center for Carbondale.

Jeff Doherty, Carbondale city manager, said the study will focus on the availability of land and the actual design of the new building.

The high school and community

"It's costing the community a lot of money to maintain the old high school building, and it's very important ... to have good quality educational facilities."

Jeff Doherty
Carbondale city manager

center may include baseball and soccer facilities or an outdoor public pool, which Carbondale does not have, he said.

"It's costing the community a lot of money to maintain the old high school building, and it's very important for the community to have good quality educational facilities," Doherty said. "The desire had been expressed in the community for a new high school."

"What we will be focusing on is getting ideas from the community and thinking of creative ways to fund this project, instead of something like a bond referendum or increased property taxes," he said.

Steve Sabens, Carbondale Community High School superintendent, said the high school and community center is a concept that could be used in the planning of other schools throughout the state.

"What caught the eye of the city and state representatives is that it is a new approach, and that it could be made applicable to other school districts," he said.

Elizabeth Lewin, superintendent of the District 95 Elementary Schools, said she applauds the creativity of the city and the high school, and feels it may represent a new wave of education.

Lewin said she cannot be upset that the funding Carbondale is receiving will be used for the high school because they requested the money while the elementary school did not.

"We didn't think of proceeding in that manner, but I hope that the city and the high school are able to make it work," she said. "Hopefully, however, people realize that elementary education provides the basis for the rest of a child's education."

Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, said this project is the direction schools and small governments need to head in to accomplish similar goals.

OFFICIALS SAY BOSNIAN REUNIFICATION HOPELESS — SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Six months into the U.S.-brokered peace process in Bosnia, with the West facing a long list of defeats and struggling for new tactics, some mediators privately concede that the accord's central elements — reunification, the return home of refugees — are all but a lost cause. Officials and mediators, who meet this week in Florence, Italy, to assess these last six months, are not yet willing to publicly write off the Dayton, Ohio, accord. But the landscape they are surveying is as bleak as the empty, devastated front-line neighborhoods around Sarajevo and throughout Bosnia-Herzegovina.

RUSSIANS PONDER RETURN OF COMMUNISM — MOSCOW — At the home of self-made millionaire Konstantin N. Borovoi, it's the same family argument every night. "My wife and daughter want to emigrate to Paris, but I can't see myself living anywhere abroad other than New York," Borovoi says of his domestic debate over what to do if the Communist Party regains power. At the home of another successful entrepreneur, Oleg V. Kiselev, the strategy for that same perceived disaster is completely different. "I will do everything necessary to protect my wealth," says the scientist-turned-financier who plans to stay put. "I think almost all people will fight to save what they have achieved." Will they fight or will they run? The wily and the wealthy who have made Russia's raw democracy work for them see only those paths to survival if the party that once wielded absolute power is restored to supremacy in the June 16 presidential election.

HISPANICS RALLY AFTER IMMIGRANTS' BEATING — LOS ANGELES — Hispanic unity and activism are growing in the face of what many Latinos here say is a darkening climate of scapegoating toward illegal and legal immigrants alike. The irate new activism was the April beating of two illegal immigrants by Riverside County sheriff's deputies, which was videotaped, and efforts by California in the past two years to curtail services to undocumented aliens. One response has been a dramatic increase in the number of people seeking citizenship and an increase in enrollment in citizenship classes, said Andrea Skorepa, executive director of Casa Familiar, a community-based social services agency located at the border in San Ysidro. "They feel they are not protected if they aren't citizens, so they better become citizens."

NEW DIABETES STUDY ANNOUNCED THIS WEEK — The National Institutes of Health this week announced the first study to determine whether the most common form of diabetes can be prevented or delayed. Twenty-five medical centers and 4,000 people will participate in the Diabetes Prevention Program, a $150-million, six-year study designed to test the effectiveness of treating people who have impaired glucose tolerance (IGT). The 21 million Americans with IGT are at increased risk to develop type II diabetes, which afflicts 15 million people. The condition often goes undetected in as many as 50 percent of sufferers until it has produced serious problems, including kidney damage.

SMOKING CURBED ON INTERNATIONAL FLIGHTS — The air has really cleared as of this month on about 80 percent of the non-stop scheduled flights between the United States and foreign destinations, according to the Department of Transportation. USAir, for example, has banned smoking on all international flights and American Airlines on all flights to and from Europe, the Caribbean and a number of Mexican destinations. United now prohibits smoking on all flights within Europe and on transatlantic flights (except between Dulles and Milan, Italy). TWA has banned smoking on all flights to and from France, Germany and the United Kingdom; Continental will ban smoking on all flights worldwide beginning Aug. 1; and Delta has been smoke-free worldwide since Jan. 1, 1995.

Southern Illinois may receive ethanol plant

By Jennifer Camden
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Southern Illinois could be the site of processing plants turning corn into fuel if lower taxes on ethanol gasoline stimulate growth in the industry, state officials say.

Ethanol is a fuel derived from corn which, when added to gasoline, makes a fuel known as gasohol. The Illinois General Assembly voted last month to continue collecting reduced sales taxes on gasohol.

Rep. Larry Woolard, D-Carterville, said he co-sponsored the gasohol subsidy bill because it could increase the demand for Southern Illinois corn since processing plants would be near the source.

"Farmers are very excited about expanding the ethanol market," Woolard said. "Many of them would welcome the chance to produce more corn."

Woolard, minority spokesman of the House Agriculture Committee, said continuing the gasohol subsidy could help the ethanol industry firmly establish itself, and expand further into Southern Illinois.

"We're subsidizing it right now to get it up and going," Woolard said. "Hopefully, we'll get to the point where we'll have quality renewable fuel we can sell at a reasonable price."

C. Matt Rendleman, SIUC assistant professor of agribusiness economics, is working on a study on the potential effects on Southern Illinois if an ethanol processing plant were to open in the area. Rendleman said he supports the gasohol subsidy.

"It makes gasohol more competitive, price-wise, with gasoline. They can't make ethanol as cheaply as they can produce gas. This break is one thing that helps," Rendleman said.

Mike Klemens, Illinois Department of Revenue spokesman, said gasohol is taxed at 70 percent of local sales tax rates. Without the subsidy, he said, drivers would pay two to three cents more per gallon for gasohol.

Klemens said in Carbondale the sales tax rate on gasoline is 7 percent, so the sales tax rate on gasohol is 4.9 percent. The difference in tax rates accounts for the two to three cents per gallon savings on gasohol, he said.

Charles Muchmore, an SIUC professor of mechanical engineering and energy processes, said ethanol makes a good gasoline additive because it is rich in oxygen. That reduces contaminants and emissions in car exhaust, including lethal carbon monoxide gas, he said.

According to a statement from Gov. Jim Edgar's office, Illinois leads the nation in ethanol production. About 600 million bushels of corn grown in Illinois are converted to ethanol each year.

The statement said Illinois drivers save $12 million per year because of the ethanol subsidy. The tax break began in 1980 in an attempt to cultivate domestic energy sources as alternatives to foreign oil.

As people ate cake and ice cream in the Roman Room during the Student Center's 35th birthday celebration, they had the chance to reflect on changes that have been made to the building over the years.

Doug Dagggett, Student Center associate director of operations, said the Student Center 35th Celebration Committee, formed from various departments in the Student Center, wanted to make the 35th anniversary celebration fun and upbeat.

"Instead of a formal ceremony we decided to have a birthday party," Dagggett said. "We wanted everyone to dress up like they did in the 60s to get into the party mood."

A local band, 4 on the Floor, played live music from the 60s, prizes were awarded for correct answers to trivia questions, and refreshments were sold for 35 cents. Free cake and ice cream were served.

Marco Nasca, chairperson of the Student Center board, said he enjoyed the 35th birthday celebration.

"The band was great and I thought their rendition of 60s songs was excellent," Nasca said. "I also liked the popcorn and soda for 35 cents."

Clarence "Doc" Dougherty, the first director of the Student Center, who served from 1960 to 1976, said that he Student Center has changed with the times.

"When I began working for the Student Center, the building was coming up out of the ground," Dougherty said. "When the Student Center was first built, it stopped where the Roman Room is now located. In 1968, we started adding to the building and remodeling."

Engineering professor recognized for policy

By Annette Barr
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A civil engineering professor who has constantly kept an open-door policy with his students had his efforts recognized by being named SIUC's Outstanding Teacher for 1996.

Aslam Kassimali

Aslam Kassimali has been named the Department of Civil Engineering's Outstanding Teacher 10 times since 1982, and was named the College of Engineering's Outstanding Teacher three times since 1988.

"What am I doing right?" Kassimali said. "I don't know, if I knew I would probably write a book about it."

Even though Kassimali may not know what he is doing right, one of his former students does.

Ramzi Hodali, a structural engineer from California, said the combination of Kassimali's knowledge and his open-door policy separates him from other professors.

"He deserves it," said Hodali, "so graduated from SIUC in 1986 and had Kassimali as his graduate advisor. "He did all the right things professors need to do."

Hodali said that Kassimali always had a professional attitude with students.

Joseph Lenzini, a studies and plans engineer for the Illinois Department of Transportation in Carbondale, said he remembers Kassimali's teaching style as being very laid back and non-confrontational.

Lenzini, who received a degree from SIUC's Department of Civil Engineering in 1984, said Kassimali is one of the best two professors he ever had.

"He's a pretty cool guy," Lenzini said. "He's probably served as a role model for a lot of people."

Kassimali had recently been named the College of Engineering's 1995 Outstanding Teacher, which made him eligible for the University's 1996 Outstanding Teacher award.

Both the department and college awards are based on undergraduate class evaluation scores. At the University level, the outstanding teacher is selected by the Undergraduate Teaching and Curriculum Committee.

Kassimali said professors need patience and preparation to be effective.

"These are the two basic ingredients, in my opinion," he said.

Kassimali said that sharing his knowledge is what really appeals to him about teaching.

"Keep in mind that teaching is a learning process in the sense that when students ask certain questions they point you to a certain area that you have never thought of before," he said.

"My students, I hope, have learned from me," Kassimali said. "But, I am pretty sure that I have learned from students."

Mosquito numbers increase due to heavy spring showers

By Colleen Heraty
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Heavy rains this spring have caused mosquitoes to breed in larger numbers than usual, Jackson County Health officials say.

"Shallow, stagnate water left over from heavy rainfalls are ideal conditions for mosquitoes to breed," George Browning, Jackson County Public Health environmentalist said.

Browning said to beware, because the mosquitoes are probably going to be very bad this year.

Mosquitoes, such as floodwater and temporary pool mosquitoes, are not disease carriers, but can be a nuisance, according to the Illinois Department of Public Health.

The pests emerge about two weeks after heavy rainfall and can fly up to 20 miles from where they hatch, particularly along prevailing winds.

Carbon dioxide and perspiration from humans attract mosquitoes, especially at their peak biting times - just after sunset and just before dawn, officials say. However, they will feed anytime if disturbed.

Tross Pierson, mosquito pest control public operator, has been fighting off mosquitoes for eight years, and said since the floods in 1993 and the recent massive amounts of rain in this area, there has been a noticeable difference in the number of mosquitoes.

"With 16 inches of rain in April, eight in May, and five already in June, you've got a mosquito problem," Pierson said.

Pierson drives around in his small, white pick-up truck about every three weeks in the evening through Carbondale to distribute the chemicals Fyfanon and Malathion in a fog-like spray, which rids the air of mosquitoes.

"Most people really want these mosquitoes taken care of," Pierson said. "Although, some people with allergies will ask me not to spray by their house, so I don't spray near them."

Beginning in April and continuing through October, during day-time hours Pierson uses an oil-like

Chancellor selection will benefit from SIU community input

IT IS GOOD TO SEE THAT SOME DO LEARN from past mistakes. To avoid the mistake of isolating the SIUC community from its next chancellor replacing John C. Guyon, SIU President Ted Sanders is allowing some members of the SIUC community to have a say in the selection process.

The selection of President Sanders was controversial after he was first chosen from a field of 75 candidates and then interviewed by SIU community representatives. We will never know what the other candidates could have brought to the University because they were not interviewed by SIU constituents. It is encouraging to see that the president recognizes this and is allowing the involvement of the SIUC community in selection of its next chancellor.

SANDERS SAID HE WILL MEET WITH THE representatives of student and faculty governments to receive their input on the characteristics and goals the next chancellor should possess.

Those groups should also be included as members of a search committee that would evaluate the candidates for chancellor. Previous search committees have included representatives that have best exhibited the diverse voices of all of those in the SIUC community and thereby ensuring a complete search for the next chancellor.

Sanders should also include a similar selection process that was used when Guyon was chosen as SIUC president. The final three presidential candidates were interviewed in the Student Center during open meetings. If used, this can allow faculty, Undergraduate Student Government and Graduate and Professional Student Council representatives to see if the final candidates have the qualities needed in the next SIUC chancellor.

THE SELECTION OF A NEW SIUC CHANCELLOR or SIU president is a process that should not isolate those who are under that administrator. If the process isolates the SIUC community, the new chancellor would begin his or her administration under a cloud of resentment instead of receiving cooperation from the SIUC community.

The new chancellor should be able to say he or she was selected with the assistance of the SIUC community which the chancellor serves, and not solely by a handful of administrators.

Children need tougher advocates

By John D. Deardourff
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—For 18 months numerous members of Congress have been pushing legislation that would all but eliminate crucial: federal safety net programs for poor children and turn them into block grants to the states. More recently, they were joined by the Republican-dominated National Governors' Association. Programs such as Medicaid, foster care, Aid to Families with Dependent Children and child nutrition would be stripped of most of the rules that now ensure at least minimal help to hungry, poor, sick, abused or neglected children, regardless of where they happen to live. In place of these guarantees, states would be given reduced federal funds and broad new flexibility—in some cases nearly total flexibility—to operate the programs as they see fit.

Enactment of these proposals in their present form would almost certainly mean grave, irreparable harm to millions of America's most defenseless children. Having just participated in an extensive 18-month study of how state capitol work and how to protect children in the state legislative process, I have personally concluded that some basic national guarantees are essential. Without them, children will be the certain losers when state governments divide up a shrinking pot of federal funds.

It is a cliché by now that children: don't vote or make campaign contributions. But that cliché rests on the powerful truth: that children in fact do not have any direct access to the levers of political power. And their political powerlessness is exacerbated by the fiscal incentives, built into many of these block grant plans, to slash benefits for children. In the National Governors' Association Medicaid plan, for example, children are singled out among various populations for a funding cap that will force many states to toss more and more children out of the Medicaid program. More than 4 million children—most of them from poor working families—could lose their guaranteed Medicaid health care coverage.

Gary Stangler, director of the Missouri Department of Social Services, has predicted that children and pregnant women will bear the brunt of funding cuts in the absence of some basic national guarantees. "That's where we'd have to go," he says, explaining that the greater political clout of the disabled and elderly would make it politically impossible for his state to cut eligibility or benefits for those large groups.

The multi-year study of how children fare in state capitols in which I participated was undertaken by the State Legislative Leaders Foundation. That study had its origin in trying to figure out why state budget cuts in the 1991 recession had their most damaging effect on children and families. As part of the study, my colleagues and I conducted lengthy personal interviews with 177 state legislative leaders, from both parties, in all 50 states. We also interviewed 167 state-based child advocacy organizations in every part of the country.

A legislative leader from a large midwestern state put it to me bluntly: "Hell, funeral home directors have more clout in our state than child advocates." The speaker of the house in a large eastern state was even more explicit. "If we have $20 million and the choice is between spending it for senior citizens or poor kids, it's no contest. The seniors get the money every time."

We learned that while there are dedicated people working hard for children in many state capitols, in state after state these children's advocates are outgunned by richer and more powerful interests, whether home-builders, truckers, nursing home operators, trial lawyers, veterans or the elderly. Children's advocates typically have far less staff, money, visibility—and effectiveness. In most states they have little or no access to the top legislative decision-makers.

Legislative scholarships valuable

For some time I have read of the accusations that Illinois legislators have given scholarships to friends or political allies. Perhaps some have been guilty of such behavior, but it is unfair to condemn either the system or all legislators because of the actions of some.

Some years ago, as the single mother of four, I was attempting to put my children through college. I received no child support from my ex-husband so it was a difficult process. I heard about the scholarship and contacted Representative Davis Phelps' office about my sons, who wanted to be a doctor.

My son was given a scholarship to the University of Illinois for one year. The scholarship was a Godsend to us.

That son is now a pediatrician who will pay in taxes to the state far more than the scholarship was worth, but at the time it was our only hope.

It is important to note that at no time was I asked by Rep. Phelps' office about my political affiliations or even asked to vote for him. I was a constituent who needed a scholarship, nothing more. I hope some reason will prevail and that the scholarships will continue, perhaps with more oversight. It would be sad if some other would-be doctor was denied the chance because of the actions of a few.

 "He (Guyon) had not looked out for the past two weeks," Dyer said.
 Guyon said although he is resigning the chancellor position, he will continue to work for SIUC.
 He said he will continue working on four programs: beginning a Phi Beta Kappa honors chapter at SIUC; continue building the international programs by recruiting more students and increasing overseas programs; becoming more involved in fund raising for the University; and helping with the tenure accreditation program.

 The accreditation program is a self-study on SIUC faculty members to determine if certain members are Dyer said Guyon's current salary will remain in effect for one year from the date he steps down.

 Guyon said he looks forward to his new role with in the University.

Appeal

Shari Rhode, SIUC chief trial attorney, said she wrote the petition appealing the appellate court's decision. She said she expects the decision, on whether or not the Illinois Supreme Court will hear the appeal, sometime late this summer or early this fall.
 "We are asking the Supreme Court to look at the appellate court decision, and reverse it, and reinstate the lower (county) court's decision," Rhode said.
 Jackson County Court, in the initial decision, favored SIUC and said Lieber did not present enough evidence for a trial to be heard by the court. The appellate court in Mt. Vernon then ruled in favor of Lieber.

 However, with the appellate court's recent decision, the Jackson County Court will now have to hear the full case, unless the Illinois Supreme Court overturns the appellate court decision.
 Tom Peters, Lieber's attorney, said he and his client are happy with the appellate court decision. He said he doubts the SIUC petition will make any difference in the case.
 "Certainly they (SIUC) have the right to appeal," he said. "But very few of them (appeals) are granted by the Illinois Supreme Court, and I hope this one is not."

 Rhode said the petition is not just asking to protect the privacy of incoming freshmen.
 "There are several students who apply to SIUC and are accepted, but have not decided to attend," she said. "In that case, they may not want just anyone to have their personal information."
 Roland Keim, SIUC admissions and records director, said he would not comment on the lawsuit while litigation is pending. He said he is directing all calls on the matter to Rhode.
 No court date has been set at the Jackson County Courthouse to hear the case.

"I went to my classes and found out that I was no longer enrolled," he said. "I had to skip my afternoon classes to re-register and come to financial aid."
 Nicole Pierson, a student worker for the Financial Aid office, said a lot of students do not realize that their financial aid does not cover their tuition unless they requested a waiver.
 "We run the waiver program once a year," she said. "If you miss it and don't make your prepayment, you can get dropped from classes."
 "If that happens, you need to come see us and request a waiver."

 Megan Miller, a junior in zoology from Chicago Heights, was also dropped from her classes because of a missed prepayment.
 She said she does not expect any problems getting into her class when she re-registers.
 "They had me on the list for the class when I got dropped, so I should be able to sneak back into it," she said.
 But other students said that getting into the right class is the biggest problem with summer sessions.
 Karen Michaels, a senior in political science from Chicago, said classes are either full because of limited courses or cancelled because of low enrollment.

 "Either way, it's a headache," she said.
 "Trying to work out your schedule for the summer can be like turning a roulette wheel. You never know what's going to happen."
 Robert Culp, a unclassified graduate from Jacksonville, has worked in the College of Liberal Arts advisement office for two years. He said all the semesters are basically the same in regards to schedule changes.
 "The complaints are still the same," he said. "People still complain as much about closed classes and cancelled classes in the summer as they do in the fall."

News briefs from break

■ Todd McCutchan, a former SIUC aviation student charged with two counts of felony theft after stealing a twin-engine Cessna 310R on December 15, 1995, entered a plea of guilty May 10 to consuming alcohol within eight hours of operating an aircraft.
 McCutchan, after waiving his right to trial by a jury, was sentenced to 24 months probation, a fine of $1,000 and 150 hours of community service. He was also ordered to attend a mental health and substance abuse examination by Circuit Judge David W. Watt Jr.

 ■ John Moro, sentenced to 35 years in prison last month for forcibly taking his daughter, Demetria, from her Giant City classroom on August 28, 1995, got his prison sentence reduced five years by Judge David W. Watt Jr.

 Moro's attorney had argued his sentence was excessive for his crimes. Moro was convicted of armed violence, aggravated unlawful restraint and unlawful use of weapons.

Bugs

Beginning in April and continuing through October, during daytime hours Pierson uses an oil-like spray that smothers and kills mosquito larvae and pupa in stagnant water.

Dr. John R. Lumpkin, state director of public health, said the best defense against these pests is to eliminate places where they breed.

He suggested removing or emptying stagnant water from old tires, tin cans, buckets, bird baths, clogged gutters, and plant pots around the yard to eliminate breeding grounds.

Myrtle Martin, who has lived in Carbondale for more than 30 years, said she filled a hole behind her house with sod to prevent mosquitoes from breeding.

"I haven't noticed the mosquitoes being too bad lately," Martin said, "but the other night when I sat outside, I lit a citronella candle that seemed to chase them away."

Democrats attack Dole, voting record

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—While GOP presidential hopeful Bob Dole has been hammering President Clinton for failing to control illegal immigration, Clinton partisans have prepared ammunition of their own—Dole's long congressional voting record on the issue.

Although Clinton and Dole both have records on immigration, the Kansas senator has grappled with the issue in Washington for more than three decades in the House and Senate.

Dole portrays himself as tougher than Clinton on illegal entry into the United States, voting recently that a Dole administration would declare war on the problem.

However, Dole served in the Senate at a time when illegal immigration was not the heated issue it is today and his votes then do not coincide at times with the hard-line views he is advancing on the presidential stump.

"Dole is trying to ride the wave of anger toward illegal immigration and hope his voting record doesn't catch up with him," said Frank Shary, executive director of the National Immigration Forum, a Washington-based coalition of immigrants rights groups.

Dole's legislative record on immigration illustrates a problem for the majority leader, who retires from the Senate Tuesday but leaves tens of thousands of votes behind in congressional archives.

Dole's immigration strategy is being orchestrated by California Gov. Pete Wilson.

Dole aides said that examining votes from years ago can be misleading because lawmakers sometimes vote against measures that contain elements they support.

For example, Dole voted against efforts in the early 1980s to reimburse states for the costs of incarcerating illegal immigrants because then President Reagan opposed the move as a budget breaker and threatened a veto.

Since then, however, Dole has supported reimbursing states for the cost of illegal immigration and has criticized Clinton for not doing enough to help states recoup such expenses.

Center

Todd Jenkins, a senior in Administration of Justice from Maywood, said celebrating the Student Center's birthday made him realize there is a lot of history in the building.

"This celebration lets students get a flash of the things that have happened and see the changes, such as the addition of McDonald's," Jenkins said.

John Corker, a former SIUC instructor, said the most significant change in the Student Center occurred when student programs were placed in the building.

"It allowed the Student Center to supply cultural and social entertainment for students," Corker said.

There were four main objectives for placing student programs under the control of the Student Center, Corker said.

"It was to supply essential services to help student life, increase social programs, compliment course work and enhance community programs with the University," Corker said.

"I think the center is an exciting part of the campus," Corker said. "It is the one building every faculty, student and administrator will go into at least once a year and I am glad it has been around for 35 years."

Sheets, Langs lead DE staff

By Julie Rendleman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

developed her skills as a reporter so she can be a good editor."

Sheets said if she could sum up the DE in one word it would be workshop.

"The DE is a chance for journalism students to get their articles published and to see how a real newspaper works, since this is how it is going to be in real life," she said.

Sheets said her role as editor this semester is part teacher because there are a lot of new reporters this semester.

Jason Langs, a senior in advertising from Manhattan, is the new DE ad manager this semester.

Langs, entering his fourth semester at the DE, said he plans to get his new student workers up to speed.

"I have been working one-on-one with my sales people," he said.

Langs said he has given his workers hand-outs to give to clients this semester to compare the DE with other newspapers ad sections.

Cynthia Sheets

He said the ad department will also work on producing better designs than last semester.

"Last semester, we started rewarding the workers by having the ad of the week and I am keeping it up this semester," he said.

Sherri Killion, DE advertising director, said Langs was the best choice for ad manager this semester.

"He had a lot of knowledge of our customer base and a lot of creative ideas for the ad department," she said. "I really think he can lead the department."

Langs said he was the best qualified because of his strong sales background and previous leadership positions in his fraternity, Sigma Nu.

He said he would like his workers to do their best this semester and to be enthusiastic.

"If you are not happy when you work, then sales go down," he said.

Jason Langs

The Daily Egyptian student leaders this summer plan on making the newspaper more feature oriented and focus on creating better advertising designs.

Cynthia Sheets, DE editor-in-chief, said she wants to add more features to the DE since summer is often slow on hard news.

"I want to keep up the award winning at the DE since we have done well in the past and I want to keep it up for the fall," she said.

Sheets, a senior in journalism from Cobden, is entering her fifth semester at the DE.

She has been a sports editor and reporter as well as a features reporter and a copy desk editor.

Lloyd Goodman, faculty managing editor of the DE, said Sheets will be a good editor because she has good news judgment and understanding of the whole news process.

"Cynthia has a wide range of experience at the DE," Goodman said.

"She has especially sought out different jobs and at the same time

Pinch Penny Pub starts summer with garden party concert series

By Chad Anderson
DE Entertainment Editor

Pinch Penny Pub will start a new series of concerts tonight with the debut of the establishment's Garden Concerts, which will take place every Wednesday night through the summer.

The bar's beer garden will be the site of the concert, which will run from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m., and only local talent from Southern Illinois will be featured.

Cindy Morgan, manager of Pinch Penny Pub, 700 E. Grand, said the concerts will serve as an introduction for many of the bands, but some of the groups will be familiar to local concert-goers.

"This gives us a chance to showcase some bands that are out there, and it gives the bands an opportunity to be heard before they start playing some of the clubs around the area," she said.

Soundcore Music President Joe C., who books the bands for the Garden Concerts, said any band can sign up for a performance slot by contacting him or Pinch Penny Pub, although there has been no shortage of groups from Southern Illinois to fill the spaces.

"We're a local music store, and we're trying to support the local groups through the Garden Concerts," he said. "We've got a good seven or eight weeks booked already, and that's with three bands each night. Also, they're all different bands on those nights, and we haven't started scheduling a rotation yet."

While the line-up for the debut night centers around alternative music, Morgan said there will be a variety of music presented each Wednesday.

"I think we'll have a different crowd every week," she said. "Obviously there will be some of the same people there every week, but the different kinds of music should bring in new people and customers every week."

"It (tonight's line-up) is going to be alternative, and I think it will be a great welcome to the people in town."

The concert's debut line-up consists of three bands: Organic Rain, Wax Dolls and Malificent (formerly known as The Visit). Morgan said three bands should be a constant number for the Garden Concerts.

"In previous showcases, we would book too many bands for one night and we would run out of time," Morgan said. "It was just too hectic moving all the equipment on and off the stage between groups, so we're going to try and keep the number at about three."

"Traditionally, we've always done things on Wednesdays, and we knew we had to do something to follow reggae night from last summer since we decided not to continue it this summer."

All three bands will play original music, although their styles differ. Wax Dolls can be described as a good ol' rock 'n' roll band with a 90s feel, Organic Rain has a 60s and 70s sound and Malificent is only described as entirely original, according to C.

Pinch Penny Pub's beer garden is now fully operational with two outside bars, a privacy fence, a dragon fountain and a stage, all of which were added one year ago.

The Garden Concert Series begins at 9 p.m. Wednesday at Pinch Penny Pub. Cover is $2.

Novices flee seminary boot camp

The Hartford Courant

The Legionaries of Christ, a militaristically styled order of Roman Catholic priests based in Connecticut, calls recruiting candidates for the priesthood "capturing vocations."

The language is more than figurative, say several men who accepted invitations last year to join the Legionaries' novice training program.

They say that superiors of the tightly controlled, boot-camp-like training program would not release them when they decided that priesthood in the Legion was not for them.

They say that the Legionaries tried to manipulate and intimidate them psychologically, refused to return their civilian clothes and subjected them to such intense pressure to stay that they felt they had no choice but to plan escapes and flee.

The Legionaries, who have their U.S. headquarters in Orange, Conn., refused to respond to inquiries from The Hartford Courant regarding the former novices' allegations. The order declines most requests for interviews, even from Catholic periodicals.

Requests for an interview and questions in writing were directed last month to the order's national director, the Rev. Anthony Bannon, through his secretary, Brother John Curran. Curran accused The Courant of stirring up "scandal" and said he did not expect Bannon to respond.

The allegations, if true, violate basic precepts of priestly formation in the Catholic Church, canon lawyers and other church sources say.

"The whole canonical process recognizes the primacy of conscience and free will. The last thing the church wants is for someone to stay because of psychological pressure," said the Rev. Thomas Reese, a Jesuit priest with the Woodstock Theological Center in Washington, D.C. He has written extensively on church governance.

The men making the allegations spent last summer at the order's seminary in Cheshire, Conn., in a program "to test their vocations." In September they were invited to become novices.

At this point everything is voluntary with no promises made or vows taken, in accord with general church practice. Becoming a novice is a first step in a process that might take as long as 13 years in the Legionaries' to be ordained a priest. The Legionaries call priests in training "brothers" from the moment they enter the novitiate, which lasts two years.

The critics portrayed a day-and-night difference between the summer candidacy program, which reinvigorated their commitment to the faith, and their introduction to the novitiate, which they said they found so demeaning and manipulative they decided to leave.

They said the program was intensive. Every second of their time was scheduled from the moment they were roused at 4:30 a.m. until bedtime, usually between 10 and 11 p.m. They had classes in religion, Latin, Greek and Spanish. They also said they had to memorize 368 verses of rules from a red hard-cover book that governed everything they did, from how to eat (never eat an apple whole, pare it on a plate) to how to part their hair (on the left).

They said they needed permission to do everything, even to take an aspirin. They were not to ask questions, they said, but to do as they were told and they were never to speak critically about the Legion. They said their letters home were scrutinized before they were mailed and only positive things could be written.

About 200 young men are reportedly in training at the seminary in Cheshire. Some are finishing high school and others are in the novitiate, doing preparatory studies for the priesthood before further schooling in Spain and Italy.

Some of the students in Cheshire came from the Immaculate Conception Apostolic School in Center Harbor, N.H., a boarding school for students in the seventh- to ninth grades run by the Legionaries.

Two Mexican boys, 15 and 16 years old, are in the novitiate program, the former novices say. They point out that is contrary to canon law, which says that "one who had not yet completed the seventeenth year of age" may not be admitted into a novitiate.

Unusual sister solar system discovered with new optics

Los Angeles Times

Astronomers report they have discovered a solar system far closer to our sun than any of the previous half-dozen planet discoveries. Moreover, the new planetary system has features strikingly similar to our own.

Evidence being presented Tuesday at the American Astronomical Society meeting in Madison, Wis., suggests that the fourth nearest star from our sun has a Jupiter-sized companion orbiting at about the distance of Saturn—and possibly a second, smaller, companion at the distance of the asteroid belt.

If confirmed, the new planet—just over 8 light years from Earth in the direction of the Big Dipper—adds another piece of evidence confirming centuries of speculation that planets are common, and that astronomers don't have to look much beyond their own backyards to find them. Some of these, astronomers hope, might harbor the potential for life.

"It's the beginning of a whole new field," said George Gatewood of the Allegheny Observatory in Pittsburgh, who discovered the planet orbiting a fast-moving star called Lelande 21185. "We've just lifted up the corner of the first page of the book."

After decades of false hopes and dashed promises, astronomers have discovered a string of oddball planetary systems since the fall of 1995. However, up until now, all have had bizarre features: one planet orbited its parent star in just four days; others were much larger than Jupiter—the giant of our solar system—and orbited much faster (and therefore much closer) to their suns. The closest of the previously discovered planets is at least 40 light years away.

Gatewood's planetary system, in contrast, looks much more like our own: The planet weighs in with Jupiter's mass, and appears to circle its star at a similar distance. Both possible planets also orbit in the same pancake-flat plane favored by Earth's planetary companions.

Traveling at light speed (an impossibility), one could make the nearly 50 trillion-mile journey to Lelande 21185 in just over eight years. Prospects for life are dim, however, because all large planets previously discovered are mostly gas, lacking any terra firma. In addition, the star itself is too faint to generate enough heat to support life.

Curiously, the latest discovery was not the result of space-age technology, as much as persistence and patience: The Pittsburgh observatory had been keeping track of Lelande 21185 more than six decades with a 30-inch telescope—small by modern standards.

By plotting the star's course through the heavens, they were able to discern a small wobble in its motion—rather like a car weaving in and out of traffic lanes. Instead of being steered, however, the star was being pulled side to side by the gravitational influence of the planet. Only recently, however, did the telescope get new optics that allowed Gatewood to see the star with 10 times the previous precision. "That's what gave us the nerve to announce this," he said.

Gatewood, however, is most excited by the enormous variety in the planetary systems that have already been found: "We went into this looking for solar systems like the one we have," he said. "And we didn't see at all what we expected."

Olympics bring labor shortage to Atlanta
Employers try to attract workers

Los Angeles Times

" Although low unemployment in Atlanta may be due to the Olympics, other parts of the country with similar unemployment numbers may soon see high positive rates "

*Rosalind Stone
Atlanta businesswoman*

ATLANTA—From upscale boutiques to fast-food outlets, the signs are everywhere. Some are hand-scribbled on cardboard, others neatly printed on banners. Still more fill roadside displays. "Help Wanted." "Positions Available." "Now Hiring." "Job Opportunities." "Join Our Team." Welcome to the Summer of 1996—the time Atlantans have anticipated with excitement and trepidation since September 1990, when this city was proclaimed host to the Centennial Olympic Games.

The new stadium stands ready. The cauldron awaits the torch. But qualified workers are in short supply. And the limited labor pool, a problem compounded by an unexplained rise in positive pre-employment drug tests, has left employers scrambling.

Glen Thomas, general manager of G&K Services, an Atlanta uniform-leasing company, knows what it's like to have an expanding business and not be able to find employees. Hoping to add a second shift, Thomas has been interviewing candidates. He has become discouraged.

"Our dilemma is that there are people out there but certainly not the caliber we've been accustomed to," Thomas said, adding that "there has been a large increase in positives on drug and alcohol screening in the last three or four weeks. I have no idea what is causing this."

Rosalind Stone, vice president for Corporate Wellness Inc., which manages drug-free workplace programs, has confirmed that she has seen more positive drug tests from Atlanta during the past month than in her 15 years in the business.

"Although the specific cause is unclear to us, we are concerned about the relationship between low unemployment and high positive pre-employment drug screens," Stone said. "Although low unemployment in Atlanta may be due to the Olympics, other parts of the country with similar unemployment numbers may soon see high positive rates."

Atlanta's jobless rate is at a 23-year low of 3.5 percent. The service industry, with jobs that tend to be on the low end of the pay scale, has been hardest hit. Companies are competing not only with each other but with the Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games. With about 40,000 paying jobs, that organization in many cases offers higher salaries, bigger perks and the Olympic experience.

To counteract ACOG's appeal, private industry has become creative. Kroger supermarkets are including $200 bonuses in employment packages. Some fast-food restaurants have raised their pay to $6.25 an hour. Temporary staffing companies are offering medical benefits and paid vacations.

Recruitment has expanded across the Southeast. Students, teachers and school bus drivers on summer break are being courted. Some Atlanta hotels are rotating employees in from hotels in other areas of the country.

Randstad Staffing Services, the Olympics staffing sponsor, has interviewed more than 35,000 people. About 12,000 have been hired. The critical shortage Randstad is facing is in bus drivers. Although the company has hired 2,500, 1,000 more are needed to transport spectators.

Beat the Heat this Summer—
Be Cool and earn SIUC Credit

Take an SIUC Course Anytime, Anywhere through the Individualized Learning Program

Individualized Learning Program courses carry SIUC residential credit applicable toward a degree.

ILP courses have no enrollment limits, and students can register throughout the semester. Students use a study guide developed by an SIUC instructor as the course framework and study at a time and place of their choosing. To register in an ILP course, on-campus students need to bring a registration form signed by their advisor to our office at Washington Square "C." Off-campus students should contact the ILP office directly. We must receive payment of $65 per credit hour when you register (Mastercard, Visa, Discover and American Express now accepted) or proof of financial aid. Call the Individualized Learning Program office at 536-7751 for further information.

Avalanches topples over Panthers for Stanley Cup

Los Angeles Times

MIAMI, June 11 —The Florida Panthers stayed at the ball past midnight — until 1:07 a.m. EDT Tuesday, in fact — but the Colorado Avalanche went home with the Stanley Cup.

The Avalanche ended the Panthers' Cinderella season at 4:31 of the third overtime on a 50-foot shot by German-born defenseman Uwe Krupp, winning, 1-0, and sweeping the series in four games.

The third-year Panthers, whose advance to the finals was the biggest surprise in the NHL this season, simply lacked the offense to match the Avalanche, which won its first Cup after 16 seasons in Quebec as the Nordiques and one in Colorado.

"The Florida Panthers were an unbelievable story this year," said Colorado Coach Marc Crawford, whose team held Florida to four goals in the four games. "It's obvious hockey is in good hands here in South Florida."

Colorado center Joe Sakic, who led all playoff scorers with 18 goals and 34 points, was named winner of the Conn Smythe trophy as the most valuable player in the playoffs. Sakic had at least one point in all but three of the Avalanche's 22 playoff games.

"What a feeling. This is unbelievable," said Sakic, who went through many lean years while the Nordiques slowly built themselves into a league powerhouse.

Krupp, who missed most of the season after undergoing reconstructive knee surgery, "is a very special story," Crawford said. "Guys can look to the example he gives and continues to give."

Krupp's goal ended a splendid game in which goaltenders Patrick Roy of Colorado and John Vanbiesbroeck of Florida lifted the 14,703 fans at Miami Arena to their feet countless times with dozens of spectacular saves. Roy, playing on his third Cup-winning team, made 63 saves in a game that began Monday night in steamy Miami and finished in the early hours of Tuesday. Vanbiesbroeck made 55 saves.

"We accomplished a lot this year so we can't be disappointed," said Vanbiesbroeck. "We put up as much (resistance) as we could but we couldn't get anything past Patrick Roy."

Roy extended his winning streak in the Cup finals to eight games, since he lost to the Kings in Game 1 of the 1993 final series while playing for Montreal. "It was a great game. John played outstanding. I just tried to keep making good saves," said Roy, whom Colorado acquired from the Canadiens last December.

The game marked the first time the Cup was won in overtime since May 24, 1980, when Bob Nystrom scored the winner 7:11 into sudden-death play to give the New York Islanders the first of their four straight Cups. Since 1927, 13 Cups have been awarded after an overtime goal.

The game was the third-longest overtime game in the finals. The record is 55 minutes, 13 seconds in Game 1 of the 1990 final between the Edmonton Oilers and Boston Bruins. Edmonton won that game, 3-2, and won the series. The only other longer game in the finals was 53:50 in Game 2 of the 1931 final between the Chicago Blackhawks and the Montreal Canadiens.

ESPN to enter sports-news market with new network

In a move he described as a "logical extension of our franchise," ESPN President Steven Bornstein announced Monday that his network will launch a 24-hour cable sports news channel Nov. 1, about a month ahead of a similar channel planned by CNN and Sports Illustrated.

The new channel will be called ESPNEWS and be available on cable and direct broadcast satellite. It also will be closely linked to ESPN's site on the Internet's World Wide Web. Its start comes a little more than two years after ESPN began its second national channel, ESPN2.

Bornstein and other ESPN executives offered no specific programming details for ESPNEWS during a teleconference. But the new channel — like the CNN/SI channel announced in February — will include a mix of scores, highlights, features, interviews, live news conferences and breaking news.

Bornstein insisted Monday that the November launch had nothing to do with CNN/ST's plans and that ESPN has been planning the new network for three years.

Both new networks will be in competition with NewSport, a sports news network now available in 9 million homes and owned by Rainbow Programming Holdings, Liberty Sports and NBC Cable Holdings.

"We wanted to launch this fall," Bornstein said. "It's independent of anything anyone else is doing out there. What ESPN can offer is that we'll be there 24 hours a day with news and information. . . . We know consumers have wanted it and demanded it."

The new channel will be based at ESPN's headquarters in Bristol, Conn., where a $21,000-square-foot production facility and 60,000-square-foot office building are nearing completion. Bornstein said the company will use some current ESPN on-air announcers and production specialists to work on the new network and will add personnel.

"If we were around today, we'd be talking about Marge Schott or Albert Belle, or John Calipari's move to the Nets, or Michael Jordan or the NHL Cinderella story," said John Walsh, ESPN's executive editor. "And in two weeks, the Michael Irvin trial is coming up. There are numerous topics. . . . I don't see us at any time lacking meaningful news stories. . . . We can give a different dimension, in-depth treatment."

Jim Walton, CNN's senior vice president and the executive in charge of the CNN/ST channel, said in a statement: "Sports Illustrated and CNN have not only faced competition in the past, but we've both thrived on it. CNN/ST represents a combination of the strongest brand name in television newsgathering and the strongest brand name in sports journalism."

Another CNN/ST executive said ESPN's announcement came as no surprise.

"It was just a matter of when," he said. "But they're going to be cannibalizing themselves. They'll take audience from their main channel to a new channel. It sounds like they're eating their young."

ESPN executives said they heard the same criticism when ESPN2 launched in October 1993, but ESPN and ESPN2 have both attracted larger audiences since then. ESPN, which started in 1.4 million homes in 1979, is now in 68.4 million homes.

ESPN2, which launched with 10 million, and is now in 33.4 million.

The new channel marks the first major expansion since Walt Disney acquired Capital Cities/ABC Inc. last year. CNN/ST is a venture coming from the recent merger of Time Warner and Turner Broadcasting. CNN is part of the Turner empire; Sports Illustrated is owned by Time Warner.

Bulls to face raging free-agent situation

The Los Angeles Times

SEATTLE — Coach Phil Jackson? About to become a free agent.

Dennis Rodman? About to become a big-money free agent.

Michael Jordan? About to become the biggest-money free agent. And you thought the payoff for the Chicago Bulls' record-breaking season might be coming Wednesday night, when they could complete the sweep of the Seattle SuperSonics and win a fourth NBA title in six years.

When his successful coach and the two most popular players all hit the open market at the same time this summer, the bank account of owner Jerry Reinsdorf will show exactly how the SuperSonics have felt the last week or so.

The flip side, of course, is that Jordan and Jackson helped to build it to where some third-world countries could live off the interest alone.

"Jerry and I have already discussed that, and we're going to spend time doing it," said Jerry Krause, the Bulls' vice president of basketball operations.

That's not all they're going to spend.

Reinsdorf, having accepted as much, and decided that Rodman is desirable in the long run, can at least try and have fun with it.

"The single most important thing I have to do this summer is get the White Sox to the World Series," he said of his other ownership interest.

"With the Bulls, we have to get some players and a coach re-signed. Right now, I've enjoyed the season very much. I'd like to enjoy Wednesday night. If I don't enjoy Wednesday night, I want to enjoy Friday or Sunday or Wednesday. We need one more win. Unless and until we get that fourth win, nothing else is on the front burner."

It could have been a slip, but Jordan praised Krause Monday, a definite policy change.

In years past, Jordan used first names in reference to coaches and teammates, but talked of the Bulls' top basketball man in the front office by last name only, at least when the reference wasn't to "Crumbs" or something worse.

So now that the Bulls have broken the record for regular-season victories and are on the verge of another championship, Jordan was asked if Krause deserves any credit.

"That's a tough question," Jordan said.

Long pause.
"He did pull the trigger on some moves, either out of the pressure he had from Phil or myself or other influences within the city," Jordan finally conceded. "As sadly as I might be to say it, you have to give him some credit. I'm pretty sure he's deserving of some."

Paxson and Bill Cartwright. What happens? The Bulls beat the Los Angeles Lakers for title No. 1.

Next, it's that Jordan could not lead the league in scoring and still lead a team to a championship. Jordan won his sixth scoring title in 1992 and the Bulls repeated as champions, disposing of the Portland Trailblazers in six games.

In 1993, the Bulls were supposed to be too old to stand up to a team of "destiny" like the Phoenix Suns. Chicago eclipsed the Suns and won their third straight title.

Now, it's Rodman. The Bulls are the greatest team of all time, but not just for the accomplishments of the squad's individual players.

Basketball is a team sport and the 1996 Chicago Bulls exemplified that — from Michael Jordan all the way down the bench to Steve Kerr and Jud Buechler.

It was the contribution of all 11 players that allowed Chicago to steamroll the rest of the NBA and march its way to its fourth championship trophy.

Now that the Sonics have all but crashed and burned, what's next for Jordan? He is running out of challenges again. How about an 82-0 season?

MJ would not have it any other way.

a little trouble producing offense last season. Callahan said he also could be used as a pitcher in an emergency situation.

Nunn was hitting .457 and led his team with 32 RBIs in as many games at the time he signed his letter of intent with the Salukis.

Pohlman, out of Prospect High School in Arlington Heights, signed early in the spring of '96 and was hitting .432 with 12 extra base hits at that time. Pohlman finished his junior season with a .484 batting average.

Pohlman was named one of the top players in the state in 1995 by the Illinois High School Baseball Coaches' Association and was named an All-Star in his summer league by the Chicago Sun-Times.

"We feel David can come in and help us offensively as a freshman," Callahan said. "We certainly think he will be a quality player at this level."

Roper is the third freshman outfielder to join the SIUC baseball squad. He was hitting .409 with 12 career home runs at the high school level when he signed.

A standout football, basketball, and baseball star for Marquette High School in St. Louis, Roper has been described as one of the best natural athletes in the St. Louis area by his coaches.

"Cory has fantastic athletic ability," said Marquette head coach Bob Swift. "He is just coming into his own in baseball, and should be a great addition to SIUC."

"We signed three outfielders that are all freshmen, but it is difficult to expect a freshman to come in and be a good everyday player and produce at the plate," Callahan said. "It will probably boil down to who is swinging the bat the best."

Senior

emphasis now is on a more balanced attack, and the Salukis are counting on him to provide maturity and leadership.

"Jamie may not have posted great stats as a junior, but he finished the season very strong and he's gained even more maturity while concentrating on academics last season," Herrin said.

Veach played in 13 games as a Saluki, averaging 6.2 minutes, 0.8 points and 1.3 rebounds per game.

"I had a tendency to pick up fouls faster than points back then," Veach said.

The former prep star and all-around inside man for the Rend Lake College Warriors is rejoining coach Herrin's team for the 1996-97 season.

Veach sat out last year while continuing his studies towards a degree in epidemiology, the study of diseases.

"It was really tough sitting out last year, watching the rest of the team on the court," Veach said. "Scott Burzynski (a former Saluki forward) and I had been playing basketball together since we were teammates at Sesser-Vallier. It was tough being a spectator."

Thanks to Herrin, Veach will no longer be forced to merely watch.

"I offered Jamie a scholarship and asked if he was still interested in joining the Salukis and he said, 'Very much so,'" Herrin said.

"We know what Jamie can do and believe (that) in the coming season he'll provide the necessary leadership as well. He can be a real asset, as he enjoys putting his body on people, and can give us some assistance defensively as well as on the boards," Herrin added.

Dawgs sign six to team

By Kevin DeFries
Daily Egyptian Reporter

SIUC baseball coach Dan Callahan landed three pitchers and three outfielders to help improve last year's 18-12, third-place team, which finished only a half game out of second place in the Missouri Valley Conference.

SIUC's pitching staff welcomes three new hurlers including Donnie Chester, a left-hander from John A. Logan. Chester finished 6-2 with a 1.43 ERA last year, and has been compared to Saluki ace Tory Hattan by Logan baseball coach Jerry Halstead. Of the nine games Chester started, he completed eight of them holding his opponents to a paltry .189 batting average, striking out 67 and walking 22 in 63.2 innings.

"Anytime you can add a quality left-hander to your staff, it is something to be happy about," Callahan said. "Donnie was Logan's top hurler last season, usually matching up against the opposition's best."

Callahan is also happy about the acquisition of high school phenom Jim Pecoraro from Belleville East. Pecoraro led his team to the Class AA state quarter-finals, but lost to underdog Waubesa Valley of Aurora on an error in the sixth inning.

Pecoraro faced the best the opposition had to offer all year, and at the time he signed with SIUC his record was an impressive 7-1 with a 0.54 ERA including two no-hitters.

"We saw him throw one of his no-hitters and we were certainly impressed," Callahan said. "Jim should be able to contribute as a freshman."

Also joining Chester and Pecoraro is Dave Anderson, a left-hander from Meramec Community College.

"If Jim comes in and does what Jason Frasier did as a freshman we might have a pretty good staff with Tory Hattan, David Piazza and Chris Shullian coming back," Callahan said.

Callahan's outfield recruiting class is comprised of the freshman trio of Marc Nunn, David Pohlman and Cory Roper.

Nunn, out of Springfield High School, played a dual role for his team. On the mound, he was 5-2 with a 1.66 ERA, but Callahan feels he will be better utilized in the outfield where the Salukis had Jamie Veach's age, once a liability in his playing career with the Salukis, has now become an asset. Veach, a senior who will be 22 in July, was a walk-on for the 1994-95 basketball season, seeing limited playing time toward the end of the year.

Jamie Veach

Unfortunately for Veach, Saluki basketball head coach Rich Herrin said, the coaching staff in 1995 decided to take the team in a youth-oriented direction, leaving Veach without a team.

"We weighed having Jamie for one year against having Shane Wells for three years. I decided to go with the big sophomore (Wells), and basically, he didn't deliver," Herrin said.

Bulls' sweep to finally silence critics, secure spot in history

La, la, la, la... The fat lady is warming up to sing the swan song of the Seattle SuperSonics tonight as the Chicago Bulls prepare to sweep the NBA Finals series in four games.

After tonight's victory the Bulls secure their fourth NBA Championship, and deserve to be called as the greatest team to ever play the game. If, for one, you are holding any breath on that one.

Ever since the Bulls won their 70th game, the media has been quick to hold a stop sign to that honor. The media has even gone out of their way to pull the red carpet out from underneath the Bulls by denying them a title they so richly deserve.

Critics say Chicago won 72 games because the league is thin on talent, due to expansion and the number of teams in the league.

That is silly. I did not realize the Bulls were solely responsible for the expansion of the league into places like Vancouver, Toronto, Miami and Orlando. Besides, Chicago was an expansion team in 1966, and it is now helping some of the smaller cities get some by visiting with its team of superstars.

Other critics say that the 1972 Lakers had Wilt Chamberlain, and since the Bulls have a center by comparison, so to speak, they cannot be considered the greatest team ever.

Really? Granted, Chamberlain dominated the NBA during his career and was no doubt great, but he also played during an era where his closest competition was about a foot shorter than he was.

That is like putting Mike Tyson in the ring with Pee Wee Herman. A third school of thought says that a team with a dominant like Dennis Rodman had no right winning an NBA title, because he doesn't respect the game, his players, or himself as a player.

OK, he may not be the clean-cut, golden boy of the NBA, but they still be a role model. What is is, however, is one of the greatest rebounders the league has ever seen. His questionable antics on the court sometimes border on insanity, but they are the stuff of legend.

Rodman has brought the fan base back into the NBA at a time when it needs it most.

Players in the NBA are never exposed to his intimidating words, so secure fans can't make their own minds up, and provide a temporary cheer league to the youth of America.

The "Worm" — a term to the dismay of those who had enough — does his job as well as any other NBA superstar, and with more intensity than any other player I have seen at the power forward position.

If the NBA is looking to convey a good message — hard work & is Rodman — he should be exposed more frequently. But enough distraction from Rodman.

What is it with these guys? First, the top in the Bulls was that Michael Jordan would never win a championship by himself, so Bulls' General Manager Jerry Krause went out and got Scottie Pippen, Horace Grant, John Former Portland Trail Blazers' assistant coach Johnny Davis was named as the new head coach of the Philadelphia 76ers on Monday. Davis replaces John Lucas, who coached the Sixers to a 42-122 record in just two seasons in Philadelphia.

"We've got a new owner, a new general manager, a new coach and the first pick in the draft. If you can't be excited about that..." Davis said in his press conference Monday.

The Tampa Bay Buccaneers will be playing in a new stadium this season... sort of. WZTM Radio in Tampa reported that Tampa Bay Stadium will have its name changed to Houlihan's Stadium after the chain of restaurants owned by the Bucs team president Malcolm Glazer.

The manslaughter trial of Seattle Seahawks' wide receiver Brian Blades began Monday with the courtroom hearing the 911 tapes of Blades requesting help for his cousin who had been fatally shot.

Charles Blades was shot outside of Blades' townhouse in Plantation, Fla., when, police say, Brian Blades threatened to get a gun after a Fourth of July party ended in a family argument between Brian Blades, his brother Benny Blades (a defensive back for the Detroit Lions at the time) and Benny's ex-girlfriend.

Police also say that Charles Blades followed Brian home to calm him down, when the two had a fight over the gun. A short time later a single shot struck Charles in the neck.

If convicted, Brian Blades faces a maximum of seven to 10 years in prison.

ESPN announced plans Monday that it will begin work on another offshoot network to complement its two other cable networks, ESPN and ESPN 2.

This new 24-hour network, called "ESPN News" will be launched Nov. 1, just about the same time that Sports Illustrated and CNN will be throwing their hats into the television sports news ring. SI and CNN have slated their new networks for December.
