Plan includes

Splitting SIU campuses recommended

By Rich Davis
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The splitting of SIU's two campuses into autonomous institutions with presidents who would report directly to the SIU Board of Trustees has been recommended by a committee of the Illinois Board of Higher Education (IBHE).

The Committee unanimously adopted the recommendations of its chairman, Chicago management consultant James C. Worthy, Saturday. The committee has been studying the governing structure of Illinois universities for six months and should make a final report in a few weeks, Worthy said in a telephone interview.

Worthy is the same man who last summer presented a management consultant report on the University's governing structure. The report, commissioned by the SIU Board, recommended appointment of a system president through which the two SIU chancellors would report to the Board.

Worthy said Monday the SIU report and the recent committee recommendation for SIU were not inconsistent. He said the SIU Board appointed a University Administrative Council to function in the same capacity as a system president.

Worthy said the SIU report, which was highly critical of the centralization of power in the president's office, also implied that a system president might not be needed on a permanent basis.

"There has been an evolution of the situation at SIU during the interim since last summer," he said. "The Council has proceeded to delegate functions previously held by the central administration to the two campuses."

Worthy said that SIU "is much farther down the line toward autonomy for its two campuses than the University of Illinois," which has held the principal interests of the committee.

U of I officials have opposed any change in the university's governing structure. Under Committee N's plan, the U of I's Chicago Circle campus would be autonomous along lines similar to the plan for the SIU-Edwardsville campus.

Under the present arrangement, the state universities are organized under a "system of systems" in which four boards govern the universities. The four boards are the University of Illinois, SIU, the Board of Regents and the Board of Governors.

Worthy said he was opposed to having a separate board for the Edwardsville campus, or for that matter, all 13 senior institutions in Illinois, which was considered by the committee at one time.

Worthy said he and the committee are opposed to separate boards because this would create "inherently weak boards" which would not have the power to "stand up to the IBHE."

Instead of being a coordinating board, the IBHE would "become a de facto state-wide governing board," he said.

Worthy's committee recommendations are considered moderate approaches to changes in the system of systems. Under the recent adopted plan, SIU and the U of I would be brought more in line with the Board of Regents and Board of Governors in which the presidents of such schools as Northern Illinois, Illinois State, Western Illinois and Eastern Illinois report directly to one of the two boards.

Other committee recommendations are to keep the present four board system, have the U of I trustees appointed instead of elected, and encourage cooperation between public and private universities.

The committee recommended that students, faculty and townspeople serve in advisory capacities to the boards, but not be voting members.

A final recommendation was to "reaffirm" the IBHE's integrity under the new constitution. Worthy said he was recommending that the IBHE continue to "have the same powers, duties and responsibilities as a coordinating body that it presently has and not be compromised by creation of a new board under the new constitution."

The constitution creates a state board of education to control all education not specifically exempted from its domain.

The IBHE meets Tuesday in Chicago, but the committee's recommendations are not listed on the agenda for consideration.

Jacobini to cooperate with recommendations

By Paula Musto
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

H. B. Jacobini, director of the Center for Vietnamese Studies, said Monday he is basically gratified with the Review Panel's report on the Center and would cooperate in implementation of the panel's recommendations.

"The Center will cooperate to the fullest extent to make adjustments to conform to any new policy," said Jacobini, who praised the work of the panel which included five faculty members and three students.

The panel's report, which ended a six-month study of the center, was released Friday by Chancellor Robert G. Lyster. Lyster said he completely agreed with most of the recommendations of the panel.

The report made nine recommendations which include renegotiating the Agency for International Development (AID) grant which funds the center so to emphasize the academic nature of the center.

The report also asked that the center build up its academic staff, replace its advisory committee with a policy committee and formulate an operating paper which would state the goals of the center.

Jacobini said some of the recommendations, such as the policy committee, were in his mind before the panel made its report, but he refrained from suggestions until the report was made public.

He said he would be very much in favor of a policy committee which would be representative of the various constituencies involved with the center.

On the operating paper recommendation Jacobini said he would need to meet with the panel for some "interpretation of what the committee had in mind." Other than this point Jacobini said he found the recommendations to be quite good.

Tom Dempsey, president of the Southern Illinois Peace Committee (SIPC) which is devoted to the cause of removing the center from SIU, was not so pleased with the report.

Dempsey said the panelists ignored the evidence that showed relationship with AID would involve SIU in technical assistance contracts.

"They ignored the whole issue of whether the Center's existence means more technical assistance contracts between AID and SIU," Dempsey said.

As in a position statement SIPC released in January, Dempsey attacked the objectivity of the panel accusing the panelists of not being willing to make any great criticisms of the University.

"We never did expect anything good to come of the report," Dempsey said.

Laos protested

Capitol bombed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A powerful bomb pulverized a men's room and severely damaged adjoining rooms in the U.S. Capitol early Monday 30 minutes after a telephone warning complaining of the Laos invasion. Nobody was injured.

The blast occurred under the U.S. Senate but the historic chamber itself was untouched and the Senate met as scheduled at midmorning, although visitors were not admitted.

President Nixon, speaking in Iowa, said the bombing was intended by "the violence people" to scare him into staying in Washington and to force closing of public buildings. "It won't work," he said, urging increased security measures.

The Senate Public Works Committee scheduled an inquiry into the matter for Tuesday morning.

Senators and congressmen of both major parties described the bombing variously as tragic, deplorable, cruel and the act of a revolutionary or a madman.

The bomb shattered windows in the crumbling West front but newsmen could see no cracks. The Senate barber shop was badly damaged.

Some inside walls were buckled and workmen carted out load after load of rubble.

The bomb site was on the ground floor, one level below the Senate chamber.

Capitol Police Chief James Powell said the bomb exploded at 1:32 a.m. EST, a half hour after a male caller told a Capitol switchboard operator.

"This building will blow up in 30 minutes. You will get many calls like this but this one is real. Evacuate the building. This is in protest of the Nixon involvement in Laos."

FBI agents and Army bomb specialists are aiding in an investigation of the incident.

Gus says the protestors have finally found the perfect strategy. Bomb the Johns and bring Congress to its knees.

Special rates being offered by Grassroots

Grassroots, SIU's quarterly creative magazine, devoted "to exhibiting the best poetry, drama, fiction, essays, photography, drawing and painting produced by members of the SIU community," is offering special subscription rates for the next five issues.

Corky Meyer, Grassroots editor, announced that for $5, a subscriber may receive not only five issues, including the Joe Eddy Brown number, but all accompanying posters.

In addition, he said that a free ticket for the soon-to-come Student Film Festival will be included with orders as well information on the Writer's Platform, the latter to feature such contemporaries as Richard Brautigan, Stanley Elkin, Mona Van Duyn and Al Lewis.

"We are offering this special rate to encourage you to support student creativity on this campus," Meyer stated.

Subscription blanks may be picked up and returned to the Grassroots Office, second floor of the University Center, or persons may send checks or money-orders in care of Grassroots.

Subscribers are asked to indicate if they want posters, the Film Festival ticket, and - or the four previous issues of Grassroots for $2.

Medina accuses Army

WASHINGTON (AP) - Capt. Ernest Medina accused the Army Monday of trying to keep him from challenging the testimony of Lt. William Calley Jr., that orders to kill civilians at My Lai came from Medina.

And another officer, Col. Oran K. Henderson, charged with covering up the My Lai slayings, said the Army is trying to block his efforts to present his side of the story.

Medina, now stationed at Ft. McPherson, Ga., said he "is ready, willing and able" to testify in Calley's court-martial at Ft. Benning, Ga., but that the Army has issued orders that he not be permitted to do so.

'Selfishness, morality correspond directly'

To the Daily Egyptian:

Referring to Jade Mikles' "No ethics, please" letter condoning selfishness:

The degree of a man's selfishness directly corresponds to the degree of his morality. This seems to be such a simple, obvious truism; yet in today's mystic-altruist-statist culture it is necessary to define and explain (at least in this capsulated form) and, in doing so, defend this basic ethical tenet.

First, "selfishness" and "morality" must be defined. Selfishness means simply "concern with one's own interests." Morality means "a code of values to guide man's choices and actions" (Ayn Rand, Virtue of Selfishness, p. 13).

A man's basic value must be to live (since death, the basic alternative, is that state in which all his values cease to exist). The apex, then, of a man's hierarchy of values must be his life.

But this life is not sustained automatically. He must concern himself with thoughts and actions which will support his life. He must necessarily be "concerned with his own interests" or he will negate the value which is his own life.

To be moral, a man must follow his correct moral code of values. His primary moral value is his life—which he must maintain by both rational thought and action in the service of his life. His highest, most moral "concern" must necessarily be "with one's own interests." The degree of his morality corresponds to the degree to which he possesses this selfish concern.

This is the ethical doctrine of individualism. Now, consider the popular alternative, altruism.

While individualism holds that Man is an end in himself (forbidding human sacrifice), altruism holds that he is merely the means to the ends of others—that his "insignificant" life is to be tolerated only if it serves the interests of another individual or other individuals—that man is properly a sacrificial animal. It is both ironic and obscene that such a malevolent, cannibalistic, blood-stained doctrine should be accepted as "benevolent" or as reflecting "brotherly-love."

And concerning Mikles' critics: Their "radical" parroting of spoon-fed archaic bromides is not very inspiring.

SIPC's action reflects ideas on committees

To the Daily Egyptian:

As I write this letter, the so-called Blue Ribbon Committee on the Vietnamese Center has not yet made its findings public. Nevertheless, its conclusions seem obvious: an acceptance of some criticism of the Center and an attempt to reform the Center and make it more respectable. This was obvious from the first day the Panel was named.

In an Egyptian editorial entitled "SIPC hurts self, others," I believe that the writer was rather naive. He seemed to argue that the dismissal of the panel by SIPC amounted to attacking the sincerity of the panel members, calling them names, saying they're lying, etc. But this is not the real point of the SIPC dismissal.

If we look only at the panel's composition, the SIPC point was the following. The member most familiar with the Vietnamese Center was Prof. Randall Nelson, who perhaps more than any other professor helped to establish the Center. He hired Wesley Fishel; he hired Milton Sacks; he previously published a report favoring the Center. Another professor on the panel had served on one of the Vietnamese Center's committees, etc., etc. True, it is not logically impossible that such a "safe" panel would relate to the minimal demands of anti-Center critics but this is highly unlikely.

The points about insincerity, name calling, etc., are irrelevant. If the main professor on the panel were Prof. C. Harvey Gardiner, another member were Prof. Earl Subbitz, etc., the Vietnamese Center would have every right to expect such a panel's conclusion would include the elimination of the Center. This would be a realistic assessment and not an attack upon the sincerity of the members.

The SIPC dismissal really goes far beyond the "safe" Blue Ribbon Panel on the Vietnamese Center (actually, the ROTC Panel is worse) and extends to most committees appointed by the Faculty Council and the administration. If such committees are to have any credibility with students and many younger faculty, they must consist of members who can empathize with the desires and demands of such groups. Otherwise we shall continue to have committees which make slight reforms, legitimize institutions maintaining the status quo, and lack the confidence of much of the community.

Calley trial pits rules against human values

To the Daily Egyptian

There seems to be a different kind of trial in Georgia as the jury listens to all people connected with the My Lai massacres. There shouldn't be the regular pattern of proceedings as usual when a jury listens to both sides, deliberates and comes out with a verdict, with little concern afterwards. The setting sees Lt. Calley on trial for the killing of many civilians at My Lai in 1968. But there is something else involved here which enters the picture besides the mere violation of a law. The issue of human morals also pertains to this particular trial and there is no avoiding it.

Some people will say Lt. Calley is guilty because he actually fired upon and killed many civilians, including women and children. On the other hand, people will say Capt. Medina is at fault for directing the order to Lt. Calley to kill every living thing visible. This is a bigger conflict than actually meeting the eye.

Which person is to blame? The fact that Lt. Calley feels he was always told that women, children and men are the enemy convinces him of the fact that he was not guilty. If by chance he was to disobey Capt. Medina's order, he most likely would have been disciplined for not obeying an order from a superior officer. Where does one draw the line?

It seems to be, at this particular trial, a conflict of rules and regulations that has eventually backed the government up against the wall. The case boils down to armed forces' rules and regulations versus human morals. They threw out the Pueblo case, chalked it up as a big mistake and emphasized avoiding conflicts similar to it in the future. But how many more conflicts will take place before the government decides to either eliminate some of their rules and regulations or rearrange them with consideration of human moral standards?

Actions and issues

Why the difference in selection?

Editor's Note: This roundup of news and comments on actions and issues in the Campus Senate is presented each Tuesday by Daily Egyptian staff writers Cathy Speegle and Chuck Hutchcraft as an extra look at what's going on in student government.

By Cathy Speegle and Chuck Hutchcraft
Daily Egyptian Staff Writers

The Campus Senate's passage of a constitutional amendment to make the office of vice president of student activities appointed, rather than elected, was unanimous. At the same time the Senate defeated a move to have the student body president and vice president selected by the Senate, rather than the student body.

Why the difference?
Buzz Spector, the current vice president of activities, explained quite well the reasons for the change. The office has traditionally been treated as a political job, rather than a specialized position which demands a knowledge of current social trends and how to best implement them for the student body.

Spector has been a notable exception to the usual run of student activity vice presidents. He has performed his job creatively, efficiently and with an impressive amount of expertise. Spector's leadership helped to make such successful projects as the regular publication of Grassroots, the Flash Gordon Film Festival and the Captain Beefheart-Ry Cooder concert. Alternative '71 is now in the works and promises an exciting spring.

The student body has taken its chances with other elected activities executives. It usually ended up with someone who guaranteed regular dances in the University Center and a scattered film program.

Under the new amendment the vice president, or chairman, will be selected by a committee consisting of: the vice president of student activities, who shall act as chairman of the group; four Student Government Activities Council (SGAC) chairmen elected from an SGAC committee of the whole; two senators elected from the Campus Senate as a whole; the student body president; the SGAC staff adviser; and a secretary.

The committee will study the backgrounds of candidates and conduct interviews to select the new chairman of activities.

Some people may cry charges of patronage at this new change in selection but any faults of the system are definitely on the minus side. The student body is assured of getting a capable, concerned activities chairman who knows what he is dealing with, rather than someone elected on a political slate.

Wayne Hudgens, commuter senator, at the Feb. 3 Campus Senate meeting said 29 cases of alleged rape were reported to him to have happened on campus beginning January, 1971.

The matter has been looked into and apparently there are some males in the area who do not take the normal route to satisfy their sexual fantasies. And there is the possibility that some females, too, have odd ways of getting their jollies.

Capt. John Robinson of the SIU Security Police says only 18 sex offense cases have been reported to the Security Police since Jan. 1, 1971. Only two of these cases were actual rapes and only one of these 18 cases occurred on campus.

Robinson said that of the cases reported seven were disorderly conduct or assault, five were obscene phone calls, three were indecent exposure and two were rapes.

Robinson said in the one rape case the defendant was not prosecuted because of insufficient evidence. In this case, he said, the girl did not file charges until her assailant tried to apologize to her.

About the 29 alleged cases reported to Hudgens, Robinson said some girls may be making up stories for various reasons.

He said a few years ago he received reports from a girl of a prowler throwing rocks at her window twice a week for an entire quarter.

Actually, Robinson said, it turned out to be the girl's roommate trying to shake her up.

Robinson did say victims of sex offenses should report what, where and when the incident occurred and a description of the assailant.

Local educators discuss causes

Teacher militancy may benefit all

By Dale McConaughay
Student Writer

There is a revolution going on in education involving teachers in the secondary schools. It is a peculiar "revolution" however, in which everyone may benefit.

During the 1969-70 school year, the National Education Association (NEA) Research Division recorded 180 teacher strikes, work stoppages and interruptions of service. The NEA estimated that 118,000 teachers participated in the strike actions and 911,000 man hours of instruction were involved. The 180 strikes, work stoppages and interruptions of service are the largest number yet recorded by the NEA. With only one such disruption reported during the 1961-62 school year, the figure has continually increased during the past nine years, the figure has continually increased during the past nine years, the NEA reports.

Oliva predicts continuation "Teacher militancy is going to continue," predicts Peter F. Oliva, professor of education at SIU and author of the book, The Secondary School Today. "I do not mean chaos, just strength through professional organizations," he added.

"Teachers are more aware of their professional positions today. They have found that by working together they could achieve greater results," Oliva said.

Oliva said he feels much of the current teacher discontent is due to the national over-supply of teachers as compared to the demand for their services, a fact attested to by NEA supply and demand figures. The associations last report says 167,800 teachers were qualified for secondary school positions last fall, an increase of 12.8 per cent over the previous year. The report predicts this supply will exceed the national demand by as many as 50,650 teachers.

However, the NEA report concludes, "The major problem in teacher supply and demand in recent years has been in the distribution of graduates among the major types of assignments rather than shortages in the total numbers prepared to enter teaching." The only fields still in short supply of teachers, according to the report, are mathematics, physical sciences, industrial arts, special education and some vocational-technical subjects.

Illinois, for example, is one of 35 states to report a shortage of teachers in these subject areas and an excess of teacher candidates in all other secondary school subject areas.

Largent suggests guidance program

How does the situation shape up at SIU with prospective 1970 teacher candidates? Herall C. Largent, SIU Placement Service director, conducted a survey last year of the various teaching areas which graduates plan to enter. The survey shows that the greatest number of this year's teacher candidates will enter a field of demand, special education. However, the next three most popular areas chosen by SIU graduates, English, history, and mens' physical education, are already over-supplied nationally.

Largent has expressed concern over graduates entering already over-supplied occupational areas and he feels that the colleges and universities should offer a program of guidance instruction dealing with opportunities in various occupational areas.

This suggestion, however, offers little reassurance to today's jobless teachers. Oliva said he feels that teachers will have to become "more mobile" to find jobs in the current limited market. Yet differing requirements for teacher certification and salary discrepancies among various parts of the country make mobility unfeasible and often undesirable.

For example, the NEA Research Bureau reports that in 1968-69 average salaries for secondary school teachers in California were $9,800 per year as compared to states such as South Carolina and Mississippi with average yearly salaries of $6,025 and $5,912 respectively.

Even greater salary discrepancies sometimes exist in local areas. In research conducted by the Association of Administrative Personnel in West Suburban Chicago, the salary schedules of 21 high schools were compared. The salaries ranged from a low mean of $7,291 per year to a high mean of $10,361 per year for teachers with bachelors degrees and $8,033 to $13,952 per year for teachers with masters degrees. Qualifications for teacher certification are determined by six major regional accrediting associations in the United States as well as by each individual state.

Illinois, for example, requires its teachers to have a minimum of 42 semester hours in general education. A Manual on Certification Requirements for School Personnel in the U.S. shows, however, that Illinois is the only state to require 42 hours while others such as Texas indicate a high of 60 semester hours and New Jersey a low of 30 semester hours.

Because salary differences and teaching requirements vary and thus seemingly restrict teacher mobility, emphasis is being placed on state and local teachers' associations to handle contractual disputes.

Hamilton explains IEA stand

Curtiss Hamilton, an Illinois Education Association field representative from Marion, explained that his association was established in 1853 but only recently passed a resolution allowing support of teachers' strikes.

Hamilton explained that the IEA took a more "militant" stand because it "got clobbered by the unique problems of the city as teachers in major cities began leaving associations and joining unions instead."

He added that the IEA as well as the NEA, primarily offer legal services, financial assistance and negotiators to local teachers' associations if they are unable to settle disputes with their respective school districts.

Whether organized associations have had any bearing upon increased teachers' salaries is difficult to determine. Salaries, however, have increased substantially during the past 18 years.

The NEA's report on "The Economic Status of the Teaching Profession, 1969-70" states, "In 1952-53 only 13 per cent of all teachers in elementary and secondary public school were earning $4,500 or more, while 62 per cent received less than $3,500. It is estimated that in 1969-70 only 2.9 per cent are receiving less than $5,500 and 97.1 per cent are receiving $5,500 or more; in fact, 65.4 percent are receiving $7,500 or more and 45 per cent, $8,500 or more."

Being able to have the most qualified teachers is one of the more important aspects of the teacher supply and demand trend considered by professional educators.

"Surplus teachers can be a valuable thing to the profession," Oliva predicted. "It is difficult for teachers but school districts can be more selective in hiring."

Mrs. Helen Bain, president of the NEA, is evidently optimistic about the teacher surplus. "School boards should use the present increased teacher supply—the greatest in 16 years—to inaugurate a new era of top-notch education for all children in the nation," she urged.

"Replacement of teachers having substandard qualifications" was the first of six firm requests Mrs. Bain made to all school districts.

Freedom to choose an occupation is an "inalienable right" accorded to all Americans. However, freedom to determine the qualifications for that occupation based on supply and demand must also be guaranteed. In this way, as a whole, everyone can benefit.

Learning works two ways

Learning is a two-way street for the pre-school youngsters at the day care center at the Attucks Multi-Purpose Center and for the SIU students who work with them there.

The children learn the alphabet, the colors, their names and other things that will help them later when they enter kindergarten, according to Mrs. Delores Albritton, day care supervisor.

In turn SIU students learn how to communicate with kids two to four years old—a major problem, according to Tom Cravens, education junior from Caseyville.

"One thing you learn quickly," he said, "is when they need to go to the restroom."

The Attucks day care center is one of two operated as non-profit services by Church Women United. The other is at the First United Methodist Church, where university students also serve as volunteers and for credits in elementary education.

The two centers care for nearly 110 children daily. There are 55 to 60 children at the church and about 50 at Attucks.

The students each have one or two children in their care while at the centers. If it is nap time, however, more children are monitored by students.

Most of the children at the centers have working mothers. To accommodate the mothers the day is divided into two parts, or a child may stay all day.

There are some children whose mothers don't work but who are considered hardship cases by the centers. "These children badly need to attend," according to Mrs. Albritton.

When it is determined that a child needs to attend the center, his parents are contacted by the parent co-ordinator, Nancy Aldridge, SIU graduate assistant in home economics education.

Many of the children who attend the centers are from low income families. Mrs. Albritton said. The Aid to Dependent Children (ADC) program pays for children whose families receive ADC payments. Other families pay the nonprofit centers 10 per cent of their income.

"A lot of children from low income families need just to be loved," Mrs. Albritton said. "The students give children love and care," she added.

Most of the students who assist the regular instructors at the centers are majors in elementary education, according to Mrs. Albritton. Other students working at the center are volunteers who just enjoy working with children.

Besides communication, the students sometimes find that disciplining the children can present problems. "Sometimes you have to discipline the same children everytime you come," Cravens said. "At the time, if looks could kill, you'd be dead. But five minutes later they are ready to be affectionate."

The schools are not intended to be strict learning sessions. The children have free play and then lessons. Going to the gym for exercise periods also is part of the program and is one activity in which the men are especially helpful. Mrs. Albritton said.

The day care centers are run basically the same way as Project Headstart, according to the supervisor. However, they are not part of a government-sponsored program.

You'd never suspect there was so much excitement in a nursery rhyme until you watch youngsters like 4-year-old Keenan Kenner (top panel) react, with appropriate gestures, to "Twinkle Twinkle, Little Star." Youngsters at the Attucks day care center also get lessons in the ABC's, as Dennis Harris and Gardeth Bell, both 4, are doing under the guidance of education student Gene C. Dwyer (lower left). Another 4-year-old, Ronald Murray, concentrates mightily (lower right) on a watercolor masterpiece with encouragement from Edna Kranning, education student.

Fuller CCB appointment to be ok'd tonight

The appointment of R. Buckminster Fuller, SIU professor and inventor of the geodesic dome, to the city Community Conservation Board (CCB) is to be officially approved Tuesday night by the City Council.

R. Buckminster Fuller

Fuller, who was notified of his appointment by his secretary, accepted the offer Friday night by phone from New York. He was there on a speaking engagement.

Carbondale Mayor David Keene said Monday that Fuller's presence on the CCB may mean that some officials in Washington, D.C., may take notice the next time the city applies for federal assistance. He said that Fuller's ideas will be of great benefit in urban renewal operations, especially in renovating Carbondale's downtown area. Keene added that the city should begin working on the downtown problem immediately.

Keene said one of the stipulations for Fuller to accept the appointment is that at least one CCB meeting a year be scheduled at Fuller's convenience. Fuller's travels take him away from Carbondale for a good part of the year.

Fuller will replace Al Ross, who resigned from the CCB shortly before the Feb. 23 city primary election to seek a seat on the City Council. The term expires in 1972.

The CCB was formerly the city's urban renewal agency, but now is an arm of the new city Department of Community Development, under control of City Manager William Schmidt. The CCB's current role is as an advisory body for future urban renewal projects and to complete projects begun before the creation of the new department.

More hard fighting expected in Laos drive

SAIGON (AP) - Enemy tank reinforcements were reported closing in on a major South Vietnamese position in the Laos panhandle Monday and Saigon rushed fresh troops northward to bolster its units.

As the Laos campaign entered its fourth week, the situation still was fluid in the drive to cut off enemy supplies moving over the Ho Chi Minh trail. But more hard fighting was expected.

U.S. helicopter pilots told newsmen they had seen tanks moving around the town of Ban Dong on Highway 9 about 15 miles inside Laos, and a concentration in the area of a South Vietnamese 1st Infantry Division position known as Hotel 2. They gave no numbers of tanks spotted.

Hotel 2 is 11 miles southwest of Lang Vei, and last week was reported under strong enemy pressure.

While U.S. authorities have declared that no American ground combat support will take part in the Laos operation, U.S. helicopters are flying gunship, troop lift, resupply and medical evacuation missions. The U.S. Command has acknowledged the loss of 36 helicopters on both sides of the border since the Laos operation began Feb. 9, Feb. 8.

Other American aircraft, including jet fighter-bombers, also are supporting the operation and pounding heavily along the Ho Chi Minh trail.

An Associated Press correspondent reported from the northern war zone that sources said there were indications that traffic on the trail has been slowed considerably since the operation into Laos began.

Reports from Vientiane said that in other areas of Laos, North Vietnamese forces were putting pressure on military posts.

Heavy fighting in Cambodia

Reds set up new base areas

SAIGON (AP) - The North Vietnamese have set up new sanctuary base areas in eastern Cambodia, and Saigon forces are plunging across the border to try to smash them, a top American field commander said Monday.

Heavy fighting in Cambodia has been overshadowed by the South Vietnamese drive into Laos to cut North Vietnam's Ho Chi Minh trail supply lines that feed the Cambodian sanctuaries.

"The South Vietnamese are tangled up with two North Vietnamese divisions in Cambodia, the 7th and the 9th," said Lt. Gen. Michael S. Davison, outgoing commander of the U.S. 2nd Field Force.

Davison commanded American troops who took part in the first thrust into Cambodia last May. He is leaving soon for a new assignment as commander of the U.S. Army in Europe and the 7th Army.

"There's been some pretty heavy fighting," Davison said in an interview. "Thus far, it looks to us like the North Vietnamese have gotten the worst of it."

The South Vietnamese, however, have been unable to reach the stockpiles because of heavy resistance by the North Vietnamese, Davison said.

He said the new sanctuaries are located in an area called Dam Be halfway between Highway 7 and the town of Chhlong on the eastern banks of the Mekong River. Chhlong is 115 miles northwest of Saigon. The allies did not drive this far north during the major incursions of last May and June.

Davison said that, when the allied drive across the border was launched last May, documentary evidence indicated that the Communist command moved at least 200 tons of war materials out of the sanctuary areas under fire.

The operation is getting the full

Police speak English

DUESSENDORF, Germany (AP) - More than half of the policemen in West Germany's most populous state of North Rhine-Westphalia have some knowledge of English, a study showed. Of the 31,000 policemen in the state, 4,120 said they speak French and 150 had some knowledge of Russian.

range of U.S. air support including helicopter gunships from the 1st Air Cavalry Division.

One aim of the operation, other officers said, is to protect the few U.S. combat troops and the sizable American infantry force that will remain in the Saigon region.

The U.S. Command has already begun phasing 20,000 American combat troops out of the Saigon area, and the move will be completed over the next two months.

Davison feels that by tying down two North Vietnamese divisions, they are kept from launching a dry season offensive either in South Vietnam or Cambodia.

Koen says boycott will be continued

By John D. Towns
Daily Egyptian Special Writer

CHICAGO—The Rev. Mr. Charles Koen, executive director of the National United Front (UF), said Saturday the UF will not support a move to suspend the two-year old boycott of downtown merchants in Cairo.

Rev. Mr. Koen, the main speaker at Phase II of the National United Front Survival Conference at Holy Angels Church, here, said, "We are not giving up the boycott. We are thru begging in Cairo because we have found out that the more you beg and pray, the more they beat you."

About 200 students from the SIU campus, representing the Black Students Union (BSU) and Black Togetherness Organization (BTO), along with students from University of Washington, Kansas, The University of Chicago and the University of Illinois attended the conference.

Koen told the audience of 1200, which included Anna Langford, one of the first two women to be elected aldermen in Chicago's history, pop singer Gloria Lynn and Eva Jefferson, president of the Northwestern University student body, "The United Front is concerned with other phases of the movement than just economics. The UF also is concerned with self-defense, communications and politics."

He said the UF also has reached a decision that they have to hook up to the rest of the black organizations in the nation.

Koen's position conflicted with that of a group of Cairo blacks who met Friday in Cairo with a delegation of white Cairo merchants.

Carl Karcher, a representative of the Cairo downtown store owners, said Friday, "This is the day when blacks and whites unite to begin the task of meeting problems and working out solutions."

James Aveary, a black leader of the newly-formed People for Improvement of Cairo, had said blacks wanted to end the boycott.

"The boycott was a good thing when it was put on two years ago, but it has served its purpose," Aveary had said. "Now only blacks are being hurt."

The Rev. Mr. Albert Cleage of the Shrine of the Black Madonna in Detroit also spoke at the Chicago meeting. "Cairo is a test case and blacks must decide whether to continue in the struggle or give up. In Cairo there is one small group that has been there a long time and is determined not to give up," Cleage said.

Along with barracks

Morris' home to be razed

A date may be announced late this week for the razing of the office and home of President Emeritus Delyte W. Morris, according to I. Clark Davis, special assistant to the chairman of the University Administrative Council.

The two buildings, along with numerous barracks north of the University Center, will be removed to make way for an $11,691,450 Humanities-Social Sciences Building. Authorization for work to begin on the new building came Friday from the Illinois Building Authority (IBA).

Originally, the SIU Board of Trustees, in response to a request from Morris to be reassigned as President Emeritus, said Morris' residence and office would be vacated by Dec. 31, 1970.

Clark said he anticipated a decision after the Council meeting in Carbondale Thursday. He said Clarence Stephens, Council chairman, is presently studying the matter.

No formal Board action would be needed, he said; although he said the Board would be consulted.

Actual excavation may not be possible for another month because of delays in moving existing offices from the 900-foot long site, according to Rino Bianchi, assistant to the chancellor.

The IBA directed Contractor J. L. Simmons and Co., Inc. of Decatur to finish the job by June 26, 1972.

The building will stretch from the north end of SIU's University Center through the present campus homestead of Morris. Among occupants of the 230,000 square-foot structure will be the departments of English, sociology, philosophy, anthropology, government, history and foreign languages.

Some remodeled barracks on the construction strip have been vacated but others—notably those containing the English department and Southern Dancers company, are still being used.

The offices of the Graduate School have been moved to Woody Hall, the campus post office has been switched to the Old Chautauqua barracks area and student government offices in another temporary building have been moved to the University Center.

Bianchi said music department offices in one former barracks are going to a remodeled house on South Forest Street, and the graduate textbook sales office is slated to move next week into the basement of the Communications Building.

Eventual destination of the English department is Woody Hall and the dance group is getting remodeled facilities at Furr Auditorium of Pulliam Hall, Bianchi said.

R. B. Stephens Construction Co. of Carbondale has a contract to remove the eight temporary structures on the site. Bianchi said the Humanities-Social Sciences project may be limited to erection of a construction fence and equipment and materials stockpiling until the site is cleared.

Their days are numbered

A view from the fourth floor of Morris Library shows the site soon to be cleared to make way for the proposed 230,000 square-foot humanities-social science building. The temporary barracks stretching from the north entrance of the University Center (at right) through the home and office of President Emeritus Delyte W. Morris will be vacated within a month.

Old ones still cause trouble

Dorms slow to start new hours

By Chuck Hutchcraft
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

University Park is the only on-campus living area to have implemented the recently expanded coeducational study hours, while at Brush Towers there still is a problem enforcing the old guidelines.

Will Travelstead, assistant dean of students at Thompson Point, said Monday that the new hours will not be implemented there until after the beginning of spring quarter.

According to John Evans, assistant dean of students at University Park, five of the nine triad units—Allen I, Boomer I and II and Wright II and III—have approved the hours.

Evans said he expects the remaining units and the floors in Neely to take action before the end of the quarter.

Helen Ellison, resident counselor at Mae Smith, said Monday, a staff meeting will be held Tuesday to decide when to implement the hours.

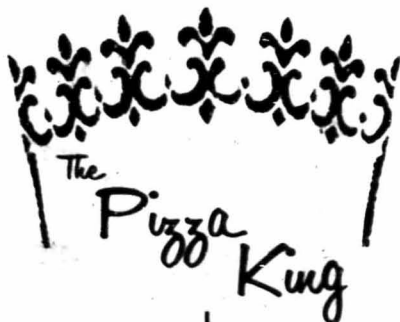

She said present problems of students roaming about the halls and remaining with guests after hours have become "pretty extensive."

The expanded guidelines set the maximum guidelines at seven days a week. The hours Monday-Friday are from 7 p.m. to half hour before the dorm closes and Saturday and Sunday 1 p.m. to one half hour before closing.

Implementation of the hours requires approval by a two-thirds majority of those living on the floor or in the dormitory.

Wintertime at Convo

The Paul Winter Consort will appear at the 1 p.m. University Convocation Thursday in the SIU Arena. The sextet, organized in 1967, is known for its unusual combination of rock, classical and folk music. The Consort has appeared at SIU during the spring quarters of 1969 and 1970 and performed to full-houses both times.

Clause significance belittled

The dean of students and the chairman of the Student Conduct Review Board have both belittled the significance of the clause and phrase that have been deleted from the 1970 Student Discipline Informational Guide, a trifold leaflet which capitalizes the official Student Guide for SIU.

The trifold was mailed to parents of all SIU students as well as to incoming students and to all residence halls at the beginning of the academic year, according to Dean of Student Services Wilbur Moulton. The sentence in the official text which contains the omitted clause states that SIU may review student violations in which civil authorities have already taken action if they represent a serious and clear infraction of SIU rules that are central to its educational responsibilities.

The informational guide deletes the qualifying phrase, "when such violations have also presented a serious and clear violation of rules in the University code that are central to the University's primary educational responsibilities."

The other omission occurs in the official statement that warns students of disciplinary sanctions which may result from specified offenses in University regulated areas. The trifold omits the phrase "in University regulated areas."

Moulton said the trifold is intended to be a summary of rules and he did not see the deletions as "anything substantive at all" despite the fact that some people were trying to make a constitutional issue out of it.

He said the omissions had been brought to his attention before and he did not even know which specific parts had been deleted.

Moulton said he did not know how the 1971 informational guide would be handled, since it was not being composed through his office.

The deletions have not affected the operation of the Student Conduct Review Board, according to Larry Taylor, current Board chairman and assistant professor of English. Taylor emphasized that the Board works from the officially authorized Student Disciplinary Policy as it was originally instructed by Chancellor Robert G. Lyster.

Soviets urge major powers to press Israeli withdrawal

By the Associated Press

The Soviet Union urged the big Western powers Monday to press Israel into an early withdrawal from occupied Arab territory as part of a general Middle East agreement.

At the same time, Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad summoned the Big Four diplomats in Cairo and discussed the Israeli reply to U.N. mediator Gunnar Jarring's peace proposals.

In the talks with the U.S., British, French and Soviet representatives Riad expressed his country's "disarm" over Israel's latest reply, reliable Foreign Office sources in Cairo said.

Riad also asked the diplomats to urge their governments to take "a more effective role" in the current peace negotiations, the sources added.

The Soviet move came in London when the Soviet Ambassador Mikhail Smirnovsky, met at his own request with Prime Minister Edward Heath and argued that Israel's refusal to pull out of territories won in the 1967 war set back prospects for peace.

Soviet ambassadors in Paris and Washington were making similar approaches to the chiefs of the French and U.S. governments, diplomats in London said.

London informants said Smirnovsky in his talks with Heath urged that it was the duty of all countries—and particularly the Big Four—to exercise pressure on Israel to meet Arab demands for full withdrawal.

The alternative, Smirnovsky was reported to have warned, could be a renewal of the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Films about boating available

The boating section of the Illinois Department of Conservation has four films available for loan to boat clubs, schools or other groups. Kenneth E. Gruenewald, boating administrator, has announced.

The 16-mm sound and color movies stress safety, but deal with other boating topics as well, Gruenewald said. Titles and subtitles are:

—"Suddenly Upon the Waters," a 27-minute presentation on the importance of courtesy in safe operation of boats.

—"Find A Float," a 13-minute guide to sensible, easily-obtainable lifesaving devices.

—"Boating in Illinois," a 27-minute department film listing required equipment and showing some of the state's popular boating waters.

—"National Boating Test," which challenges viewers' basic boating knowledge.

Examination forms accompany the latter film. Free literature will be mailed upon request with any of the titles.

There is no charge for mailing or use of the films, but recipients pay the return postage. Gruenewald said. He said the films can be used only on sound-equipped projectors and must be returned immediately.

Requests should be sent to the Illinois Department of Conservation, Boating Section, Law Enforcement Division, 400 S. Spring St., Springfield, 62706.

Water pollution, reclamation topics of survey

Ecological effects of Illinois stripmines studied

By University News Services

Illinois' legacy of stripmining—all 160,000 acres of it—is getting a comprehensive physical checkup.

A survey—still, from SIU's Cooperative Wildlife Research Laboratory has started a county-by-county catalogue on all surface-mined coal areas in the state, past and present.

When it's finished, sometime late in the summer of 1972, it will provide the first detailed picture of where the stripped land is, how much of it has been reclaimed and in what manner and exactly what the acreage is like in terms of terrain, surface material, vegetation, water and wastes.

The job has been undertaken under a contract with the Illinois Department of Conservation in cooperation with that agency's Division of Surface Mined Land Reclamation.

Willard Klimstra, director of the SIU laboratory, said the study will provide a complete "status report" on surface coal mining since it first began in Illinois.

Among questions the survey hopes to answer are —How much water pollution can be traced to coal stripping?

—What kinds of reclamation efforts are completed or underway?

—What's the productive potential of stripped land—for pasture, recreation, reforestation, housing or crops?

—How do mined lands affect wildlife?

—Where are the lands too toxic to support vegetation, and how many of these 160,000 acres are too rocky to reclaim?

When the lands were mined, up-to-date ownership histories and exact descriptions of present conditions will be included in the catalogue.

E.E. Filer, supervisor of the Division of Surface Mined Land Reclamation, said the results will be stored on computer cards for instant reference.

Klimstra said it will be the first such statewide inventory in the nation. The data, he said, will be invaluable for local communities and planning agencies, federal and state legislators, city officials, federal government units and the owners and operators of stripmines themselves.

Another advantage, he said, will be a readily available stripmine data bank when and if the federal government provides money for stripmine reclamation projects.

Since a state law of 1962, Illinois coal-strippers have been required to return surface-mined land to some form of productivity. But about 107,000 acres of land had been stripped before the law went on the books.

"If matching funds become available to restore 'prelaw' land,"

Klimstra said, "Illinois will have all the necessary details for participation."

Stripmining is now confined largely to 16 Illinois counties led by Fulton, Perry, St. Clair, Randolph and Williamson.

Geologists estimate that Illinois, the nation's leading surface miner for coal, has strippable reserves of 20 billion tons, enough to last 700 years at the present rate of recovery.

Illinois Department of Conservation figures show that the giant draglines and continuous wheels used by coal companies are now stripping off 7,000 acres of overburden each year.

The SIU field investigation will be supervised by John Roseberry, a staff assistant at the Cooperative Wildlife Laboratory. He did a 1961-62 study of recreation potential at selected Illinois stripmine fields.

Starting this spring, they'll begin full time data-gathering in Northern Illinois and work their way south.

Greeks get 24-hour parking

By University News Services

Round-the-clock parking is now permitted on the SIU Small Group Housing loop road.

It will be on an experimental basis through the spring term, according to a recent resolution by SIU's Parking and Traffic Advisory Committee.

The one-way road had been open to parking from 6 a.m. to midnight on weekdays and to 2 a.m. on weekends. The request for 24-hour parking was presented by Thomas Scherschel, SIU student body president. Red parking permits still will be required.

In other action the committee—Moved up reserved parking time limits from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the Clinical Center patients' parking stalls behind Pulliam Hall.

—Agreed to remove parking meters from a short strip on Grand Ave. south of Woody Hall. The spaces will be made into an unloading zone for University vehicles. No changeover date was set.

More relevancy to students urged

Columbia head seeks academic change

By Claire Cox
Copley News Service

NEW YORK—The nation's colleges and universities are riding out a suspenseful calm in the eye of a hurricane.

That is the view of the campus as seen by William J. McGill, a 49-year-old combat-hardened veteran of student confrontations at both ends of the continent, who took over as president of Columbia University last fall.

McGill, who came to the troubled 27-year-old university as its 16th president from the turbulent chancellorship of the University of California at San Diego, interprets the current respite in campus activism as a lull in the storm of protest, economic crisis and academic reform that is swirling around higher education.

"I can't account for the calmness of the campus except that it is a common observation nationally that although the great alienation phenomenon of the undergraduate student body persists, violent episodes are decreasing in frequency, and I am very grateful for that," he declared in an interview in his large, austere office in Low Library on Morningside Heights.

Whether rampant, destructive violence ever flares significantly again on the campus at San Diego, where rioting students addressed him as "pag chancellor," at Columbia or at other schools, is questionable, he feels. But at the same time he strongly doubts that the deeply ingrained national student disaffection and dissatisfaction can be dismissed as a passing fad.

McGill, a young-looking man who wears his almost white hair in the crew-cut style of his own college days, is convinced that campus protests, although perhaps of a more peaceful nature than in the last few years, are going to be a way of life at least until fundamental changes are made in higher education to make it more relevant to the aspirations of the bright young leaders of tomorrow.

With but few exceptions, he considers most of the cultures to have been tragically destructive of academic life, and at one point he considered quitting his San Diego post because of student protests.

During a wide-ranging interview about campus violence, curriculum reform, financial woes, the tough life of a university president in a metropolis and his homesickness for the view of the Pacific from a cliff-side patio, McGill expressed a determination to draw on his San Diego experiences to see Columbia's current problems through to their best possible solution.

He hopes to help the school, which is in financial trouble though its assets include the land on which Rockefeller Center stands, become a bellwether for its sister institutions across the country, while at the same time adapting some of the University of California's management techniques.

It is also as a former psychology professor and department head at Columbia, where he served from 1956 to 1963, and as a native New Yorker that McGill is approaching his monumental task.

"I don't believe that any of the basic problems that are related to the disaffection of college students with society have been corrected, alleviated or changed substantially," he observed. "I think we are in a very serious time."

"A significant fraction of students are alienated from society. They don't want to enter the business professions. More and more students come to campus as a way of escaping the draft or because their parents expect them to. They are interested in a degree and not an education."

"We don't have any series of flexible mechanisms for dealing with students who come to the university with these amorphous kinds of intentions. Many come to a four-year college because they believe they have to have a B.A. degree in order to get anywhere in life. They are bored. They don't like it."

William J. McGill

"All of the cries for relevancy that you hear from students in colleges across the country are really reflections of their distaste for academic training," he added. "Yet it is essential that people learn to deal with abstractions. It means that many of these students are misplaced in four-year colleges. But we have no alternative educational mechanism."

Curriculum is at the core of McGill's abiding concern for his students. He hopes to lead Columbia in taking a new look at the entire concept of higher education, with the aim of introducing innovations that will shorten the period a young person must spend preparing for a career, but at the same time open avenues for further study later in life.

In that connection, McGill has been trying to formulate a series of flexible steps that would somehow compress the long regime of professional training.

"Why does a man have to go to school for four years if he is going to become a physician?" he asked.

"Why can't he begin to become a physician at the end of his second year in college? Why should he have four years in college and four years in medical school when everyone agrees it is not necessary?"

"It is that kind of ritualistic structure we have built up that I am trying to attack. I think it is very important that American education address that problem now because we have managed through the growth of technology in the last 25 years to build up a set of educational requirements that place inordinate demands on young people."

"Someone who is 16 years old, just finishing high school and who looks forward to the fact that he may not be able to become a physician until he's 35 decides to do something else. He may indeed decide to turn off. That's the problem."

McGill praised the relatively recent development of vocationally oriented community colleges, principally in California, as an experiment that should be supported by major federal programs across the country.

Beyond that, he foresees reorganization of major professional schools within universities to stress a concept of professional training as a life-long effort. A student would move from school or university into a profession, working to attain a certain level. Then he would return to school for more training and go back to his career.

"Consider the possibility of a ladder on which a physician or a lawyer or an engineer would move back and forth to school at regular times as he progressed in his career," McGill said. "That kind of concept is utterly missing in American education, and it must be done."

He added his view that universities have been hampered by the failure of the professions, particularly the business professions, to realize the importance of such programs.

Basil C. Hedrick, director of SIU's Museum, has been named editor for a new series of publications entitled "The Asian Historical Dictionary Series," to be published by the Scarecrow Press, a division of Grolier Educational Corp.

Hedrick said the first group of Asian countries to be treated in the series are those of Indo-China. He plans the first of these to be published within a year and the first six to be out by the end of 1972.

SIU educator John E. King will participate in a special conference of the Association for Institutional Research at a retreat in the eastern United States, March 29-April 1. King is chairman of the department of higher education in the College of Education.

King said the conference has been called to re-examine the role and nature of institutional research in higher education, to re-evaluate and redefine objectives of the Association and to propose guidelines to stimulate and develop the practice of institutional research in colleges and universities. The conference site will be announced later.

A former SIU student's theoretical work proving that molecules are formed from atoms has been published in the Illinois State Academy of Science Transactions.

The article by Charles M. Brown and co-authored by SIU's Boris Musulin, professor of chemistry is titled, "Asymptotic Solutions of the Born-Oppenheimer Nuclear Equation with the Frost-Musulin Potential Function."

Brown is now studying for a Ph.D. at the University of Maryland in stipulate for Molecular Physics.

Three faculty members and about 40 students from SIU's Department of Interior Design attended "Student Design-In, 1971" in Chicago last week. The meeting, sponsored by the Interior Design Educators Council, was held in the Merchandise Mart.

SIU staff members attending were Walter J. Moran, department chairman, Donave Greene and Denzo Sekely.

Dean Elmer J. Clark of the SIU College of Education has been honored for his service to the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education as chairman of its Committee on Consultative Services.

Dean Clark was presented the citation by Paul H. Masoner, AACTE president, during the annual meeting of the association in Chicago. The committee, which Dean Clark has headed the past three years, has established a program to assist member institutions in programs of self-improvement.

Ronald C. Bishop, assistant professor of management and recently selected chairman of the Management Department in the SIU School of Business, has received certification as a psychologist by the Department of Registration and Education for the State of Illinois.

Bishop, who now is able to render psychological services to individuals, is a member of the American Psychological Association and the Academy of Management.

Phil Regan accepts salary cut

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) - Pitcher Phil Regan took a lot of unkind cuts last season from National League rivals who contended he used that greasy kid stuff on the ball instead of his hair.

The veteran bullpen artist also took an unkind cut from the Chicago Cubs this winter—salary, that is.

His reaction to both differs considerably.

Regan, 34, Friday blamed the constant frisking by umpires for evidence of vaseline, instigated by enemy managers, in part for his poor 1970 showing, a .54 record and a less-than-stirring 4.74 ERA.

But Phil was philosophical about his undisclosed pay slice.

"You have a bad year, you take a cut. You have a good year and you get a raise. I have no gripe about that," said Regan in the midst of the Cubs handing out some $250,000 in salaries to several key players, including $100,000 to outfielder Billy Williams Thursday.

Regarding last season's war of nerves over whether his slider was juiced up, Regan asserted: "It bothers your concentration on the batter and it's bound to affect you."

Evansville hands frosh 100-82 loss

The SIU freshmen basketball team lost to Evansville's young Purple Aces, 100-82, Saturday night in the SIU Arena.

Eddie James, who broke a SIU scoring record over two weeks ago with 43 points, racked up 25 points against the Purple Aces and also grabbed 13 rebounds.

Down, 51-43 at the half, Southern was never a real threat in the final period of the game although four men scored in the double figures.

Behind James in total points for SIU, David Burt compiled 17 while teammates Charles Brown and Don Hoffman scored 12 points apiece.

Cal Franklin made nine points and Cal Franklin scored six. Lew Williams, who joined the young Salukis for the first time in January, made a successful free throw.

High scorer in the game was Irvin Graves who scored 30 points for the aces while Jerry Conrad racked up 21.

SIU was outrebounded 44-35 while both teams made a little less than half of the field goals attempted.

Southern, now 3-11, will end the season against Missouri and bag Gail Wolf of Oklawville at 5:15 Thursday in the Arena.

Saluki gymnasts beat Kansas State

By Fred Weinberg
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

SIU's gymnastics team, making use of a number of good individual performances, completely overpowered Kansas State University, 162.75-153.50, in the SIU Arena Saturday to cap its dual meet season with a 12-3 record.

The gymnasts host the Midwestern Conference meet Friday and Saturday in the Arena. It is a meet they must win in order to advance to the NCAA finals in Ann Arbor, Mich., April 1-3.

SIU's Charles Ropique came up with the best individual score, with a 9.6 in the still rings while teammate Tom Lindner scored a 9.45 in the high bar enroute to winning the all-around title with a 53.55. Kansas State's Dave Mawhorter was the runner-up with a 49.70.

"I was generally pleased with the results," said SIU coach Bill Meade, "in everything but the vaulting. Our vaulting wasn't so good."

The Salukis put together a team total of 26.30 in that event and it was the only event in which they scored less than 27 points as a team.

Freshman Gary Morava, of SIU, won the floor exercise event with a 9.25 and the Salukis Ron Alden came through with a 9.2 in his specialty, the sidehorse, for another SIU first place. Tim Frank scored an 8.9 in the vaulting to win that event and Don Locke notched a 9.4 with a near flawless routine on the parallel bars to complete the SIU sweep.

SIU grabbed an immediate lead after the first event, floor exercise, and strengthened the margin with each event. The only event in which Kansas State scored above a 26 was the high bar in which they totaled 26.35.

The meet left two SIU performers undefeated in their areas of competition.

Tom Lindner, in winning the all-around championship, remained undefeated in that department while Ropique stayed undefeated in the rings in dual meet competition. Both were tied once, Lindner by George Greenfield of the University of California and Ropique by defending NCAA rings champion Dave Seal of Indiana State.

One of the highlights of Lindner's dual meet season was the defeat of arch rival Brent Simmons of Iowa State. It was a rather hollow win, however, as the Salukis dropped their first decision of the year to the defending NCAA runners-up by .45 of a point.

Both Lindner and Ropique notched career high 9.75's in a meet against the University of Arizona and both came up with a 9.6's in front of the home crowd, Lindner in the Iowa State meet and Ropique Saturday night.

SALUKI SHORTS—Friday morning and the phone rings. Mike Haines, the pep band director is on the line with a polite request that the DE "lay off" the band, he was referring to several printed requests that the band entertain the fans at gymnastic meets. Well, the band stayed for the first part of the meet Saturday and Meade was overjoyed with the results. "They did a beautiful job and I thank them for it," enthused the SIU coach.

Portugal keys surge over Evansville

By Mike Klein
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

"Great, great performance by Brooks," said the freak-type male with the long, curly hair.

Indeed, it was a great performance by Marvin Brooks who almost singlehandedly led Southern's astonishing comeback win over the Evansville Purple Aces, 101-98, Saturday in the SIU Arena.

In the final 74 seconds, Brooks scored seven points to bring SIU from a 96-94 deficit, notching the final margin of victory with a layup and ensuing free throw after he was fouled by Steve (Whale) Weiner. Brooks finished the evening with 19 points, three rebounds, three stolen passes in the final 11:32 of the game and hit nine of 15 from the floor. He had a great night and did it all without starting.

But the short, freak-type male with the long, curly hair missed the real star, Don Portugal, a seldom-used forward who plays behind Nate Hawthorne and L. C. Brasfield.

The box score shows Portugal with two points and two rebounds, both right near his average, but his two steals within 15 seconds near the end ignited the comeback for Southern's 12th victory against nine defeats.

The second steal paved the way for Brooks' hook shot which tied the game at 96-94.

When it was all over and the crowd which had expected defeat began filling out, Brooks was the man carried off the floor. Portugal went his merry way virtually unnoticed.

In the lockerroom, Portugal was more than humble. He was downright modest, crediting the late surge to the entire team. His coach, Paul Lambert was a bit more kindly to the 6-4 sophomore from Arcola.

"Portugal did a great job and if it hadn't been for him, we wouldn't have gotten the ball back."

Portugal entered the game for Stan Powles with 2:29 remaining and Evansville leading, 96-85. Powles had done a good deal of work, grabbing 12 rebounds and scoring 11 points.

Explaining the switch, Lambert said, "Don't be a better pressure player. There's no use in playing for the rebound then because it's all over. We've got to have the ball back."

And get the ball Southern did, outscoring the Purple Aces 12-0 in the final 32 seconds. "We went stupid," said Arad McCutchen, Evansville coach.

Brasfield provided the first five points and Brooks the last seven as the crowd of 9,000 roared to a standing ovation.

"They were really concerned about Greg (Starrick) and that's why Marvin was open," Lambert said later. "The thing about it more than anything else is that he went to the basket (two layups in his final three field goals) and this is the thing we've been trying to get him to do."

"Of course, in practice, it's pretty hard to go to the basket when you've got 6-11, 200-pound, Billy Perkins standing there." Perkins is the ex-University of Louisville player who

Lambert claims will really help next year.

A dejected McCutchen, complete with traditional bright red socks, was less than happy about three foul calls that made on blocked shots.

"I'd like to see the officials have a slow motion picture of a blocked shot," the veteran Evansville coach said.

"You can't block a ball and have it go 15-20 feet away and say the arm was hit. He (Aces' Bob Clayton) hit the hand and the hand's part of the ball."

But Arad wasn't making any excuses. He thought the foul call on Nate Hawthorne's second half blocked shot was one of the night's worst calls.

Streak tops Aces, 101-98, Brooks pumps in last seven

By Mike Klein
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

You can't stop a jet plane with a fly swatter. Evansville's Purple Aces found that out the hard way Saturday night in the SIU Arena.

Coasting towards a potential 18th win and holding a 96-85 lead with 2:46 remaining, the Purple Aces suddenly found themselves under an offensive and defensive Saluki barrage that put the orange-suited Evansville squad on the short side of a 101-98 final score.

Southern's come-from-behind win put another feather in the Midwestern Conference's cap as league champion SIU downed the class of the Indiana Collegiate Conference. The Aces were 8-0 in league play this year. SIU is now 12-9 and Evansville finished regular season play 17-4.

The Salukis also backed into an outright conference championship Saturday when Northern Illinois mauled Indiana State, 107-80, in DeKalb.

That makes three league crowns for SIU in the league's initial year. Coach Lew Hartwig's cross-country and indoor track teams both earned league top spots this year, the latter also coming Saturday, at Illinois State.

The remainder of the league has yet to win a crown in any sport with championships, in gymnastics, swimming and wrestling this weekend. Southern is favored in the first two and given at least an even chance in wrestling.

A full court pressure defense turned the trick late in the game Saturday night as Evansville could not penetrate the half-court stripe only once in the final 92 seconds. That came with 30 seconds remaining and Marvin Brooks nullified Evansville's offensive sputter when he stole a looping pass.

No Aggie competition

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP)—When New Mexico State University trounced San Jose State, 114-85, in a mid-December basketball game, the 39 point margin was a new school record. The Aggies forced San Jose State into 47 turnovers.

The explosion began at the 2:17 mark when L. C. Brasfield hit two of his 27 points to draw Southern within nine. Defensive standout Don Portugal followed with a tip, making the score 96-89. Evansville. The field goal was Portugal's only scoring.

Don Buse, considered the best Evansville guard since departure of the Chicago Bull's Jerry Sloan, hit the Purple Aces' final points on two free throws after he was fouled by John "Mouse" Garrett.

Then came five straight points by Brasfield to draw SIU within four, 96-94, as 80 seconds remained on the clock. Four timeouts later, the final three called by SIU, Marvin Brooks had hit seven straight as the defense rapidly pushed Evansville to five of its 21 turnovers. SIU had 30.

The winning points came on Brooks' driving layup after a pass from Brasfield, breaking a 96-94 tie. He converted for a three-point play, icing the victory.

"We haven't been able to press all season like I'd like to," Paul Lambert said after the game. "And with four games in the last eight days, that makes it difficult to do anything different but everyday for about five to six minutes, we've worked on our press."

"Not like we did early in the season, but everyday for five to six minutes and I think it helped."

Southern led by seven points in the first half, 37-30, before falling behind, 40-47, at halftime. Evansville showed signs of making the game a rout with a 72-41 lead and 11:57 on the clock. The Aces held an 11-point margin three times in the second half before they were outscored, 16-2, and 12-0, in the final minutes.

The Salukis came up with a balanced attack led by Greg Starrick and Brasfield who combined for 55 points. Starrick had one more than Brasfield, getting 28 on 11 field goals and six free throws. Brooks had 19 in relief and Powles 11, the only others in double figures for Southern.

Only dampener on the victory were Starrick's two missed free throws, giving him three of the last two games. His string of 11 straight conversions was snapped at Ken tucky Wesleyan last Wednesday. Starrick entered the game with a 992 nation-leading percentage which dropped to 910 after the two misses, still good for the nation's top spot.

The Aces shot 565 from the field and were better in the second half that the first, hitting at a .588 clip. Southern shot 453 from the floor, connecting on 39 of 86 attempts.

Southern won the rebounding battle, 52-39, and also had a better percentage from the charity stripe, .793 to .714 for Evansville.

Brasfield led the Salukis in rebounding with 16 while Stan Powles proved again his recent success under the boards has been no fluke, getting 12 caroms. Nate Hawthorne had eight, equalling his point total.

HELP WANTED

Nurses wanted at St. Joseph Memorial Hospital in Mt. Bar

Salukis make themselves at home

By Ken Stewart
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

The sign under the scoreboard overhauled read "Illinois State University, home of the Redbirds."

But the SIU track team was making itself at home anyway as the Midwestern Conference indoor track title became Saluki property Saturday.

A sweep of the meet by Southern was questionable after the preliminaries Friday.

"We knew running would be difficult for our kids on an asphalt track as slick as it was," said track coach Lew Hartzog. "To our predictions, it looked real bad for us Friday night."

Eddie Sutton and Stan Patterson didn't qualify for the 300-yard dash while Eddie Sutton barely managed to qualify for the 440.

Ron Frye also made the hurdle finals by a hair and the long jumpers were not up to par at all.

Larry Perkins, who holds the SIU indoor long jump record at 24-1 pulled a muscle in the Horton Field House.

"He had trouble taking off on the slick runways," Hartzog said. "The kids were just afraid to run the sharp turns in fear they may fall."

"But from a poor start, they came back with great performances Saturday," he said.

Phil Blackiston suffered a pulled muscle but SIU's luck began to change when he took first place in 35-pound weight throw with a distance of 33-3.

Northern Illinois was favored to win.

"That set the pattern for the whole team," Hartzog said.

Then Dave Hill ran an outstanding mile in 4:11 on the same track that Al Robinson, SIU's outstanding distance runner, set a field house record on two years ago.

"I thought that will be a record that will stand for many, many years but Dave missed it by three-tenths of a second," said the coach with a gleam in his eye. "It may still stand for a long time."

"Dave got great support from Ken Nalder who has been sick and I didn't know if he would run or not," Nalder finished third.

Ron Frye came back with outstanding performances in the high and intermediate hurdles placing second in both events.

Southern's eventual championship was becoming more apparent as Sutton won the quarter mile in 50.4 seconds.

SIU broke one of three field house records that fell over the weekend as the mile relay team—Ivory Crockett, Ed Morrow, Terrence Erickson and Sutton—ran off with the event in a record 3:24.3. Erickson tied the 600-yard dash mark in 1:14.3.

Other records fell in the 1,000-yard run by Doug Snyder of Ball State and in the pole vault by Northern's Craig Clendenning.

As expected, Crockett took the 60-yard dash followed by Illinois State's Billy Lewis. Both men finished in 6.3 seconds.

"The time isn't outstanding," Hartzog said, "but on that flat floor, the sprinters can't really get out big in the first 20 yards."

The field house record is 6.2.

Crockett placed fourth in the 300-yard dash after being hampered with a bad lane. He had three full turns compared to two for some of the others.

Greg Martin of Indiana State and Crockett set a new field house record at 31.7 in the preliminaries for the 300.

Southern finished with 87 points followed by Northern with 58 while Illinois State barely edged out Ball State for third with 48 points to the Cardinal's 47. Indiana State was last with 31.

Hartzog said he was a little scared of Illinois State who was running on its home track.

"Those kids know how to run on this track of theirs," he said. "It looked like they were going to be real rough on us."

The Redbirds pulled some upsets but failed to take a first.

Meanwhile, Ball State, who's coach predicted it would place last, was kicking up some dust of its own in the 1,000, two-mile and long jump.

By taking the track title, SIU continues to make the new conference Saluki country.

Southern has grabbed every league championship so far. The cross country title was won in December and the basketball Crown is SIU's despite two more games remaining.

Illinois State hands Salukis first conference defeat; 87-79

By Mike Klein
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Normal, Ill.—The Midwestern Conference's two midwest coaches—Paul Lambert and Will Robinson—brought their teams together here Monday night and the result was a dismal one for the visiting Salukis.

Paced by Doug Collins' 34 points, the Redbirds ran past Southern, 87-79, and were never threatened in the second half after amassing 49-45 halftime lead.

The defeat all but eliminated any dreams of 12-10 Salukis had for a National Invitational Tournament bid and marred Southern's perfect conference record. SIU was 6-0 in loop play before the game.

Robinson's Redbirds closed out their conference schedule with a 3-5 record and a 14-10 for the season. The Redbirds' two other conference wins were over Ball State and Northern Illinois, both early in the season.

Collins owned the Salukis' defense and the capacity crowd cheered all evening as he shot his way into ISU's individual season scoring record with the 34-point performance.

The sophomore from Benton has scored 668 this season exceeding the record of 645 points set by Fred Marberry in the 1955-56 campaign.

The Redbirds had a six point lead, 61-55, when they broke the game open, scoring nine straight points.

Dan Witt opened the scoring burst for Illinois State, hitting one free throw after he was fouled by Southern's John Garrett.

Collins made two free throws and then hit a long jumper from the left side to bring the score 66-55. ISU's first 11-point lead of the game.

After an offensive foul by L.C. Brasfield and an ensuing SIU time out, Collins, did it again, hitting a long jump shot from the right side. Dennis Murray, a 22-point scorer, hit a turnaround shot in the lane to finish the nine-point surge.

Southern fought an uphill battle all evening and the last lead it ever held was a 7-5 margin. That came on Stan Powles' two free throws after he was fouled by Myron Litwiler. They were his only points of the game.

SIU was able to draw within two numerous times and tied the game on six occasions in the first half before finally settling for a four-point halftime deficit.

The Salukis got only one tally closer in the second half when Garrett scored the period's first point on a free throw, cutting Illinois State's lead to 49-46.

But the Redbirds weren't to be caught, eager to avenge their 97-81 defeat Feb. 15, in the SIU Arena.

Collins hit six of his 14 second half points to pull Illinois State away, 55-46. The lead swirled to 13 points, 70-57, on the nine-point spurge. A frustrated Southern team was unable to pull off the late-game magic which netted a victory Saturday night in the Arena against Evansville.

Have a gift

Southern's leading scorer against Evansville with 28 points, Greg Starrick looks for someone to take his pass during SIU's come-from-behind 101-86 win Saturday. Mike Klein's account of the game plus an article about silent hero Dan Portugal appear on page 14.
