Networks could speed up

UPGRADES: Information Technology wants to create faster service with new equipment.

WILLIAM HATFIELD
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Christine Tracey says logging on to the SIUC network to check her e-mail can be frustrating because it is too slow if too many people are on the network at the same time.

"It's very annoying," Tracey, a senior in elementary education and special education from Wauconda, Ky., said. "I try to log on and it just freezes up or takes a long time. You've got to do it early in the morning when not many people are on."

SIUC may respond to the network's overcrowding by purchasing equipment to increase the online service's speed, Albert Allen, Information Technology director, said.

Allen said the increase in users on the campus network has slowed the log-in procedure that allows students to dial in to the system. He said Internet travel and e-mail also have been slowed.

"People are having to wait to get mail and mail was backing up, and we received quite a few complaints," Allen said.

Allen said Information Technology and other University

Contract signed for SIU Nakajo

AGREEMENT:

Administration 'tightens belt' by condensing English, core curriculum.

TRAVIS DeNEAL
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The English program and core curriculum at SIU's Nakajo campus is to be condensed to keep the Japanese campus open, according to the draft of the annual contract between SIU and Nakajo.

President Ted Sanders and other administrators are scheduled to review the draft this week, said John Haller, vice president for academic services.

Haller said a representative from the Nakajo campus is scheduled to arrive at SIUC on March 16 to finalize the details of the renewal agreement, which goes into effect May 16.

Rhonda Vinson, executive assistant to the chancellor for international and economic development, said that Nakajo gave less money to SIU this year to pay for the operation of the campus than the $3 million it gave last year.

The reason for the decrease is the 20 percent drop in the yen's value within the past year, and Vinson said that made cuts in the Nakajo program necessary.

"Sometimes you have to tighten your belt a little before you get healthy," she said.

Vinson said the English as a Second Language program will be condensed further, meaning fewer classes will be taught, but the amount of English taught in those classes will be increased.

"They've been condensing courses already, and the intensive English faculty believe it is working better," she said. "It has been tested for one or two years, and they are still getting the results."

Robert Jensen, the College of Liberal Arts dean, said students will be able to take certain core classes during their first year of study at Nakajo. Normally, they only take English as a Second Language courses the first year, he said.

"We want to get students into some of the core curriculum sooner by picking classes with a lower demand for English mastery," Jensen said. "For example, math classes don't require as much knowledge of English as history or art classes would."

Jensen said University administrators want to bring Japanese students to Southern Illinois after only one year of study in Nakajo.

He said Japanese students usually do not transfer to SIUC until they have completed three years of study at SIUC.

Japanese students want to come here, Jensen said, and if they can come here after only a year of study, enrollment at the Nakajo campus would probably increase.

BLACK MAN'S REIGN: Sorority's Esquire Ball lets students display original works, variety of talents.

MIKAL J. HARRIS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

After Delmarcus Collins walked away with the title of Mr. Esquire Saturday night, John Lumpkin said he was awed by the talent showcased at Zeta Phi Beta sorority's 20th annual Mr. Esquire Ball.

"I thought it was quite impressive to see the number of original works presented," Lumpkin, a senior in journalism from Chicago, said.

"It's nice to see that African-American men can do poetry and original works. It shows that these SIUC students have a lot of talent."

More than 150 people at the formal ball enjoyed the talents of three African-American male students competing for the title of Mr. Esquire Saturday at the Carbondale Civic Center, 200 S. Illinois Ave.

Collins, a senior in education from Chicago; Terrence Bothe, an undecided sophomore from Chicago; and Deulon LeSure, a freshman in workforce education from Champaign used their talent to earn prizes including awards, gift certificates and a $500 scholarship for Mr. Esquire.

And ball coordinator Munirah Frye said displaying talent was one of the main objectives of this year's "Black Man's Reign" ball.

"There just aren't a lot of opportunities for black men on campus to display their talents," said Frye, a junior in management information systems from Chicago.

VARIETY OF TALENT:

Dance, comedy, skits make up 50th annual Theta Xi Variety Show.

LA'KEISHA R. GRAY
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

There were no cameras, but there were plenty of lights and action as students were given the opportunity to develop and show off their talents through skits, comedy and dance routines.

The 50th annual Theta Xi Variety Show, sponsored by the Inter-Greek Council, was Saturday at the Shryock auditorium in front of an audience of 1,084.

The event, which was produced by undergraduate students, was a chance for students to show off their talents and to be honored for their outstanding service to SIUC and the Carbondale community.

Although students were awarded for their service, some said they participated in the variety show in order to make an impression on the Carbondale community.

Philip DiGiacomo, a sophomore in psychology from Chicago and a member of Sigma Pi, said this was the first time in two years his house participated in the event.

He said they chose to perform this year because it was the show's 50th anniversary and they wanted to change the public's view of greek life.

"What it basically comes down to is, the community in general doesn't have a positive view of greek life, but we're all intelligent men and women," he said. "So we just want to show the community it's not all drinking and partying. We wanted to show the community that we like to participate for a good cause."

DiGiacomo said his fraternity is one of many that sponsors philanthropic and service projects. This is why the Theta Xi Variety show exists, to recognize those students for their dedication to service.

And while the competition was stiff by way of service, there was no lack of talent.

There were dance routines that got the crowd clapping to the beat, comedy acts that received a boisterous outburst from the audience, a performance in honor of a former SIUC president and acts featuring songs and dances that sent a wave of nostalgia over the audience.

But aside from all the competition, there were only four awards given.

The grand prize was awarded to Sigma Sigma Sigma, Lambda Chi Alpha and Theta Xi for "The Big Game," their large group performance as a football team who becomes Division I-AA national collegiate champions, but the team's star quarterback is injured on the team's way to victory.

Next was first runner up, earned by Alpha Chi Omega and Sigma Pi for "Anything's Possible," their skit of a nightclub owner who dreams up a success plan that will save his failing business.

Followed by second runner up, which was awarded to Pi Kappa Alpha and Sigma Kappa for their combined group effort in performing the opening skit titled "Grandma's Birthday," which was based on a family celebration and traditional birthday game for the "grandma."

Two students won service awards for their outstanding service and dedication to SIUC.

Matthew Radefeld, the president of the Inter-Greek Council from Kansas City, Kan., and Josh Valtos, a senior in pre-medicine from Shiloh, were recipients of the "Service to Southern Award." This award is given to a student who excels academically in biological sciences.

Another award, "The Kaplan Memorial Scholarship Award," was presented to Robyn Obert, a sophomore in biochemistry from Quincy. This award is given to a student who excels academically in biological sciences.

I think I'm a clone now: Xeroxed men have potential

Modern science — you've gotta love it. I was overjoyed when I heard about the guy who cloned a sheep.

If scientists can duplicate life in a test tube, think of the possibilities.

Oh, I know there are moral and ethical issues at stake here. The very definition of humanity becomes sort of hazy when you start talking about running individuals through a genetic Xerox machine.

No doubt a few people who read "Brave New World" one too many times are running around with crash helmets on to save themselves from chunks of falling sky.

But before we hit the panic button, we should think about the benefits.

Theoretically, if scientists can get this thing perfected, I could go right to the pet store and buy my own copy of Pierce Brosnan ... or Denzel Washington ... or even Sean Connery.

My very own Sean Connery. I get chills just thinking about it. I was discussing this issue with a guy I know the other day.

Attempting to curb my enthusiasm, "Andrew" pointed out a rather obvious fact.

"It wouldn't really be Sean Connery," he said. "It would just look like him and have his accent."

Men.

Sometimes even the bright ones miss the point.

I looked at Andrew.

"So what's the problem?" I asked. Andrew laughed at me, but I doubt even he would be so picky about reality if he could stroll into the mall and pick up a couple of CDs, a Slurpee and Claudia Schiffer.

There are problems, of course. Scientists will have to find a way to accelerate, decelerate and halt the aging process at will.

I don't want to have to diaper a little baby Bond, see him through his terrible twos and endure the white-knuckled fear of teaching him to drive before he's old enough to be really useful.

No, what I want here is instant gratification. I want to walk into the Fish Net, point to a creature resembling the godlike being I saw in "Medicine Man," and say, "I'll take the one with the ponytail."

Really, cloning could solve some of society's biggest problems.

Take the whole jealousy issue. If somebody had cloned Joey Buttafuoco (God forbid), we wouldn't have had to endure all those made-for-TV movies about Amy Fisher.

I could just put a Mark Grace and a couple of Noah Wylies on my credit card and be done with it.

Of course, there are drawbacks.

The sale of clones definitely would raise serious legal questions, especially where the IRS is concerned.

Creatures purchased in stores for the purpose of enriching humans' lives generally are classified as pets. Under our current tax laws, pets cannot be declared as dependents.

However, since these clones would be human, they would require the same type of maintenance as children, who are tax write-offs.

And if polygamy is illegal, would it still be permissible for me to buy a Sean AND a Denzel, or would I have to choose just one?

If Sean got on my nerves, could I drop him off at the humane society?

Or if I chose to adopt a clone from a shelter, would I be required to take him to the vet and have him fixed to prevent unwanted offspring?

Come to think of it, maybe this cloning business isn't such a good idea. Housebreaking a puppy is difficult enough.

The last thing I need is a pet that insists on leaving the seat up.

Our Word

Appreciation

'Awareness' generated by special months should last all year long

GROUPS AND CAUSES ARE SPOTLIGHTED during "awareness" months throughout the year. Women's History Month began Saturday, and Alcohol Awareness Month is April. Black History Month was February. Breast Cancer Awareness month is November, and so on.

BUT WITH ALL THE ATTENTION THESE months receive, we tend to overlook the bigger picture: These groups need to be celebrated and the causes need to be pursued year-long and not just for a few weeks.

Last month, African Americans celebrated their heritage with various exhibits and speakers. Those speakers not only showcased the African-American culture but reached out to all, giving SIUC students a chance to learn about themselves as well as other people and their world.

AFRICAN AMERICANS, LIKE MANY ETHNIC groups, have influenced all aspects of American culture — food, clothing, music, literature, politics — yet we do not celebrate their influence enough after Black History Month ends.

Some have protested that the month is too short; perhaps they do not realize that Black History Month can be celebrated throughout the year and not just during the month of February. In the same sense, women's influences, like many minorities, are overlooked in day-to-day activities, but will be celebrated this month with different speakers and seminars. Their contributions, their struggle and their place in society will be highlighted.

WE NEED TO EDUCATE OURSELVES ABOUT these groups and others who have awareness celebrations at different times of the year. It is important to appreciate these groups throughout the entire year rather than limiting our awareness of and interest in these groups to a single month.

NEXT MONTH IS ALCOHOL AWARENESS Month, during which the Illinois Drug Education Alliance will be campaigning against underage drinking. By sponsoring statewide seminars and conferences on alcohol abuse, the group is emphasizing the idea that it is everyone's responsibility to curb underage drinking.

The focus will be on underage drinking as well as the damage alcohol and alcoholism can have on a person's body and on a person's family. Hopefully the information provided through the seminars, projects and events this month will be remembered and shared during the rest of the year as well.

THIS ISSUE AND OTHER ISSUES THAT TAKE the spotlight at various times during the year are perfect examples of how effective awareness can be for the rest of the year. Not only are the issues spotlighted for a month, but they are emphasized year-round.

It is time to apply that concept to the other celebration months.

Americans free to speak up for legalization of marijuana

Dear Editor:

Voters in California and Arizona have made a statement, and it's time for politicians nationwide to listen.

The passage of Proposition 215 in California and Proposition 200 in Arizona demonstrates that Americans can easily distinguish between the use of marijuana as a medicine for seriously ill patients and legalization for recreational use.

These are separate issues and they must be judged on their own merits. The country has reached a consensus on the former, even as we remain divided on the latter.

Both state and nationwide polls have shown that the majority of Americans favor medical marijuana reform.

There is also an Illinois statute that states marijuana can be used for medical and research purposes (720 ILCS 550/11).

It is time for Illinois officials to uphold the law and make marijuana available for those it is deemed legally appropriate for.

It worries me that people are scared to express their thoughts in a country where people have the right to think.

People are uneasy to attend meetings of organizations created to educate the community and students on the issues of marijuana.

They believe that "narc" or other informants attend these meetings, seeking out individuals and that signing a petition for a pro-marijuana organization will result in government prejudice against them.

The founding fathers created the American government to work for the people. How can the American government work for the people if the people are frightened to tell the government what they think?

The founding fathers created the American government to work for the people. How can the American government work for the people if the people are frightened to tell the government what they think?

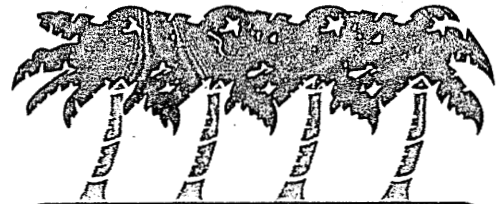

People need to realize that the power lies within them. The government is a puppet to achieve greater goals.

Eighty-five percent of Americans across the nation believe marijuana should be legalized for medical purposes.

It's time now for Illinois and other states to join California and Arizona, but it will only happen if people realize they won't be persecuted for their thoughts.

Believing marijuana should be legal for medical purposes is nothing more than a logical argument.

administrators are examining how to provide better access for students and faculty dialing in from home.

He said there are 180 lines available for dial-in, and that there are no immediate plans to increase the number of lines available.

"The problem is demand grows more rapidly than the equipment in place, and it is expensive to pay for that equipment," Allen said.

He said Information Technology temporarily has increased the speed of e-mail by using some equipment for e-mail that is normally used for newsgroups or online discussion groups. He said this may slow down some newsgroups.

He said a permanent replacement for the mail server will cost between $25,000 and $35,000.

"E-mail has become more and more popular and more and more a part of people's lives," Allen said.

"And we really believe we will need a better system in place as we roll into next fall."

He said Information Technology also could add another line to a central Internet provider in Chicago that will prevent Internet navigation from being slowed by too many users.

Allen said he did not know a cost estimate for the project.

Allen said Information Technology also plans to spend between $14,000 and $15,000 on an upgraded dial-in system to allow users to log in by modem more quickly.

He said that project also will help to prevent users from being disconnected from the system as they log in.

He said the projects could be completed by summer or fall 1997.

Brian T. Dopp, a senior in visual communications from Barrington, said the upgrade will be welcome because the log-on procedure often disconnects users before it allows them to log-onto the network.

He also said it often is difficult to obtain a connection to the network because all the lines are busy.

"But just as much of a problem is that sometimes you can sit there for 30 minutes and not get on the server," Dopp said.

He said money released from the University's $3 million contingency fund could be used to purchase the equipment to speed up the online services.

The contingency fund is a reserve fund that is collected from departments and colleges and stored for emergencies. If there are no emergencies, the money is released by the administration and can be used to purchase equipment.

Haller said this reduction in the number of classes will not mean a decrease in the quality of instruction.

"If students come here after one year of study in Nakajo, instead of two, it means they wouldn't have as extensive a program of core curriculum," Haller said.

"Nonetheless, the instruction they receive will be sufficient to come here after a year and do well."

In January, SIU President Ted Sanders said Japan's economy had worsened and enrollment at SIUN had dropped, meaning cuts in the Nakajo program were necessary to keep it from being closed in the next few years.

Jensen said the current structure of the program made it a financial burden to the Pacific in his hand, were highlights of the competition. But Frye said the talent of commitment is shared by all contestants, who earned extra judging points during the last 1-2 months for talents the audience was not able to see Saturday.

"The contestants had to show they were dedicated, hardworking, motivated, and professional," she said. "They also had to be active in the community and demonstrate leadership skills in campus activities."

And in answering how he would use the reign of Mr. Esquire to influence students, Collins said he would use most of those talents.

"Community service is very important for African Americans," he said. "I believe in community service for the community, and not just for self-preservation," he said.

After winning the title and giving a victory speech, Collins said his commitment to the community was not just for show.

"Community service is very important for African Americans," he said. "If we don't take care of our own communities, then no one else will."

Lingering at his candlelit table after the ball was over, Lumpkin reflected on the evening and said he was happy to have made an important observation.

"I was a really nice event with a variety of African-American talent," he said. "It's nice to see that African-American culture can continue throughout the year, with events like this one, instead of just during Black History Month in February."

UNFORTUNATELY, THIS IS WHERE PEOPLE ARE PUTTING TOO MANY RETIREMENT DOLLARS.

Every year, a lot of people make a huge mistake on their taxes. They wind up sending Uncle Sam money they could be saving for retirement.

Fortunately, that's a mistake you can avoid with SRAs—tax-deferred annuities from TIAA-CREF SRAs not only ease your current tax bite, they offer an easy way to build retirement income—especially for the “extras” that your pension and Social Security benefits may not cover. Because your contributions are made in before-tax dollars, you pay less in taxes now. And since earnings on your SRAs are tax deferred, your money works even harder for you.

What else do SRAs offer? The investment choice, flexibility, and expertise of TIAA-CREF—America's foremost retirement organization.

Why write off the chance for a more rewarding retirement? Stop by your benefits office or call us at 1 800 842-2888 and find out how TIAA-CREF SRAs can help you enjoy many happy returns.

Workshop celebrates Latin dancing, music

TWO STEPPERS:

Community members enjoy chance to learn and practice Latin dance moves.

TRAVIS AKIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Gabriel Cerda stood on the outside of the dance floor for a moment and then finally went out to learn a few dance steps as Latin music filled the room.

"I want to learn about Latin American dance because even though I am Hispanic, I still don't know," Cerda, a senior in civil engineering from East Moline, said.

"I hope I learn fast, so I can teach it to people outside the Hispanic community."

About 40 people gathered at the Java Coffee House, 611 S. Illinois Ave., Thursday for an evening of Latin American music and dancing.

The event, sponsored by the Hispanic Student Council, was a way to teach people about Latin American dance.

While many, like Cerda, went there to learn, others knew how to dance to the Latin rhythms and were excited just to have an opportunity to dance to the music they love.

Liliane Zerba, a first-year graduate student in teaching English as a second language from Venezuela, said the evening reminded her of home.

"This music is on the radio stations and played at parties in my country," she said. "We dance all of the time."

Zerba said her husband and her son will join her soon in Carbondale.

She said she and her son dance together and she would like to see more places play Latin American music so she and her son could dance together.

dance is a two-step dance in which the dancer moves each foot back and forth and uses the hips to shift the weight and glide.

She said if the dancer is good, then a third step could be added.

The people were there for one purpose only, and that was to dance.

During most of the evening, the booths were vacant. The only items there were the coats belonging to the people on the dance floor.

Old and young alike participated and learned from each other as they danced.

Even though Hugh Muldoon, a Carbondale resident, did not dance much, he said he enjoyed himself.

He said it is activities like the Latin American Music night that make it interesting to live in Carbondale.

"One reason I like living here in Carbondale is there are so many international students here," he said.

"Things like inviting people from other countries into your home is such a great experience. I would recommend it to every student."

While the people enjoyed themselves on the dance floor, the only concern for people like Kardinal-Heise when she would have a chance to do it again.

"If at all possible, they ought to do it on a regular basis," she said.

"This music is on the radio stations and played at parties in my country. We dance all of the time."

The experienced dancers were out on the floor helping the novices learn the moves.

The secret is learning to move the hips without moving the upper part of the body, Carman Kardinal-Heise, a Carbondale resident, said.

HAIR-ITAGE: Exhibit designer Alan Harasimowicz and James Fuller, a sophomore in journalism from Chicago, prepared for the "Hair-itage" exhibit that was created in honor of black history month.

28 days of reflection on a culture and its people

HERITAGE: Month of pride, culture and respect on campus in review.

LA'KEISHA R. GRAY
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Although some people believe Black History Month is a time for African Americans to look forward and make progress, Kyle Isma'il says it is a time of reflection.

Isma'il, a senior in history from Chicago, said he believes African Americans should strive for progress throughout the year, and during Black History Month they should celebrate their heritage and culture.

"We're supposed to make progress all year round, but this month is for reflection," he said. "That is the joy of it. It's not a time to study it (black history). It is a time we celebrate our accomplishments we've made, together and as a community."

And throughout this month, various campus presentations exposed students to various contributions made by blacks in America.

The keynote address on Feb. 4 was given by Robert Guthrie, a professor in psychology and the director of Black American Studies.

Guthrie gave a lecture titled "Even The Rat Was White."

He said his lecture was dedicated to three men in his life who taught him a special lesson about humans. These men were his father, his brother and one of his college

Black History

psychology professors.

He said through his speech he wanted to share that special lesson with others.

"I wanted to get across that we are more alike than we are different as humans," he said.

Guthrie set the pace for Black History Month, giving a guiding light and a ray of hope to black students by pointing out things they can learn while at SIUC.

"The purpose of the university education is to learn specific information that we can tie into our livelihood and our everyday lives," he said.

Through lectures, exhibits, art showings and poem and play readings, lessons were learned and memories were recalled during this year's Black History Month.

Upon visiting one exhibit in honor of Black History Month, Angela Davis, a senior in history from Chicago, said she was overwhelmed with memories and recollections from her childhood.

Davis said viewing the "Our Hair-itage" exhibit in the University Museum brought back memories that shaped her self-esteem about her hair as a child.

"It made me recall an incident from my childhood," Davis said. "I was in a department store with my mother, and we got separated. A lady took me to the lost and found. The lady behind the counter asked me what my name was. My mother called me nappy head, so I told the lady behind the counter I was 'nappy head.'"

"She then described what I looked like over the intercom. A few minutes later my mother came to the counter. When she found out why my name was not given over the intercom, she was embarrassed."

The "Our Hair-itage" exhibit was a display of Kinte (African design) cloths, tools used for straightening black hair, hair care products and combs from African countries such as Tanzania and Ghana.

Nancy Dawson, an assistant professor in Black American Studies and the exhibit coordinator, said she also had authentic slave chains and a lock of her great-grandmother's hair as a part of the exhibit.

She said she chose to present her exhibit during Black History Month because she believes the issue of black hair symbolizes the African-American experience in America.

"I chose to display this month so people can reflect on the black experience, which entails more than hair," Dawson said. "But hair is one of the biggest aspects. We were separated from the main hair-dressing practices in Africa due to a variety of circumstance, such as enslavement."

"We have been pressured into adapting Euro-centric hair-dressing techniques, and some may say it's about choice and manageability. But in this society there are standards of being acceptable, and those do not include kinky hair, nappy hair, braids, afros or any other ethnic hairstyle."

And while some people's preoccupation with black hair may seem trivial, Dawson said it is not to be taken lightly.

"I want people to understand the social, political and economical dynamics of black hair, and that it can't be taken lightly."

While Davis remembered her childhood, others said they choose to reflect on the present day agenda of the African-American community.

James McKinley, a counselor for MEDPREP, said he was grateful for the "Meet The Stars" reception on Feb. 12 because he got the opportunity to network with black faculty and students.

Aside from strides made around the nation for African Americans, McKinley said there are opportunities on campus that can help aid further progress for the community. Yet, he said they are not taken advantage of.

"There are programs on this campus that are world renowned," he said. "Right here on campus there are persons of African-American descent who have a lot of information at their disposal and I don't think they're being utilized. Especially by African-American students who need to take advantage of these opportunities."

The opportunity to learn his heritage is something Isma'il said he thirsts. He said he believes there is a strong need for things like the "Meet The Stars" and the other lectures that were given on campus this month.

"It's fundamental and I'd like to see more of that," he said. "We need more people like them (lecturers) with resources and who can provide information that can change academia."

jumped out to an early lead with a solid first-half effort. The Salukis took a 20-11 lead with 11 minutes remaining in the first half, led by Tucker's eight points.

Indiana State drew within three points with 5:35 left, but the Salukis opened a 39-30 lead and held off a late Sycamore run to take a 44-40 lead into halftime.

But the Salukis fell apart in the second half as Indiana State went on a 14-2 run to open up a 54-46 lead with 13 minutes remaining. SIUC drew as close as five points, but the Sycamores took advantage of a 21 percent shooting performance from the field by the Salukis to roll to the 15-point win.

Veatch, who ended his career with six points and five rebounds, said the Sycamores' desire was stronger than SIUC's. "Whenever it comes down to a tournament like this, they're a little more prepared," Veatch said. "They've got a little more blood in their eyes and they want a little more than we do."

Herrin said the Salukis' preparation for next season has already begun.

"We'll have to go home and evaluate where we are," Herrin said. "Just like everybody else, we'll have to go out and recruit some players and try to get better."

"It's basketball for you," she said. "Sometimes you just have to play out of play. The play was designed for me, but I wasn't open so I wasn't going to force the shot to win the game."

McClendon led the Salukis from the perimeter by hitting 10 of 16 shots in a 22 points effort. The MVC steals leader also had nine swipes, seven assists and five boards in her last game at SIU Arena.

Scott said the loss of McClendon will be hard for her and the team.

"Kasia McClendon has had an outstanding career," Scott said. "In all my years, she would probably rank the No. 1 player I have ever coached, with the intensity she gives night in and night out."

The win over the Lady Braves gives the Salukis a fifth-place seed in the MVC tournament Thursday in Springfield, Mo. SIUC will face fourth-place Indiana State University, who the Salukis split the season with 1-1.

McClendon said the three-game win streak will carry them into the tournament.

"It's a big momentum ride," she said. "I think it will help us toward the tournament."

Tip-off between the Salukis and the Lady Sycamores is 2:30 p.m. Thursday.

DAWGS NAB TITLE:
Salukis take second consecutive NIC title.

BRAD WEBER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC junior Jeff Clark found himself in an unusual position Saturday at the National Independent Championship when he trailed his competitor with only 50 meters to go in the 100 free style.

Clark, who captured second place in the 50 free style at the SIUC Recreation Center Friday, said his competitor had a history of going out and using all of his energy in the beginning of the race.

"I turned on my kick at the end," he said. "I knew he was going to die out at the end, so I wanted to take advantage the last 25 meters of the race."

Clark did take advantage the last 25 meters and went on to capture first place in the 100 free style.

The SIUC men's swimming team, which was the defending NIC swimming champs, ended its season and repeated as champions Saturday, finishing with 677 points.

As the men took home first place, SIUC's women's swim team came on strong to finish the meet, but finished second with 608.5 points, trailing champion University of Cincinnati by nearly 300 points to end its season.

Other teams that competed at the meet were Florida Atlantic University, University of Southwest Missouri State, Northeast Louisiana University, University of Evansville, Louisville University, University of Houston and Illinois State University.

After grabbing a 55-point lead following Friday's finals, the Saluki men extended their lead when they placed three swimmers in the eight-man final of the 1,650 free. Sophomore Liam Weseloh of Toronto, Ontario won the event in a time of 15:24.71, while freshman Ryan Gallagher finished fourth in 15:56.24 and Will Enoch finished sixth in 16:00.98.

Men's swimming coach Rick Walker, said the team achieved its goal of repeating as champions and showed character by holding on to the lead.

"I think the character of the team, gave us the momentum to over look our competitors and continue on with a winning attitude," he said.

For the Salukis' efforts, Walker was named the NIC's men's coach of the year along with Monty Hopkins of Cincinnati.

Walker said the award is more of a team award than an award for him.

"This award is not so much for me," he said. "It's only as good as the athletes, and it sends a message recognizing our athletes and speaks volumes for them."

Clark said contributing to SIUC's second consecutive title was special because it was a team effort.

"The team performed great," he said. "We pulled together and everyone did their part in the victory."

Making up for its lack of depth, the women's team relied on its heart and desire to pull through for second place Saturday by dominating the 200 meter butterfly — the Salukis' strongest event. SIU placed five in the finals of the event.

The Salukis finished No. 2 through No. 6 in the event with senior Jenn Bobanic grabbing the Salukis' top spot. Bobanic's time was 2:06.02, just ahead of senior Laura Humphrey (2:07.05) in third place. Juniors Katie Burns Nicole Freda and sophomore Kat Flannery rounded out the scoring for the Salukis.

Bobanic said despite being out-manned, the team raced tough against nationally ranked teams all season long.

"We've had a tough season in dual meets because we raced tough, nationally ranked teams," she said. "But we kept our heads up. We have to look at it as a chance to race against the best in the country and that's what we did."

Though the team would have been happier finishing first, women's coach Mark Klumper said he was pleased with the performances he saw.

"We didn't have a good first day," he said. "But we didn't give up, and we regrouped to turn the meet around and finish second."

After a rain delay Saturday against Southeast Missouri State University, the SIUC softball team picked up play Sunday on a grand slam by first baseman Theresa Shields to beat SEMO 8-0 in five innings.

The Salukis then came back to lose to Western Illinois University 2-1 in seven innings.

SIUC then battled Eastern Illinois University (1-3). The Salukis, who committed five errors in the game, gave up five runs in the first inning and eventually lost 6-1 to the Lady Panthers.

The Salukis could only muster four hits in five innings, one of them a double by catcher Marty Calcaterra, who scored SIUC's lone run.

SIUC is now 5-4 on the season and will resume action Sunday against Middle Tennessee State University in Murfreesboro, Tenn.

FIGHTING FOR POST-SEASON SURVIVAL: SIU men's basketball player Shane Hawkins, a junior from Pinckneyville, fends off an Indian State player while en route to make a basket during the opening round of the Missouri Valley Conference Tournament.

IT'S FINALLY OVER:

A frustrating, roller-coaster season finally comes to an end with a first-round loss.

RYAN KEITH
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC men's basketball senior Jamie Veach said he had a feeling Friday's game against Indiana State University in the first round of the Missouri Valley Conference Tournament could be his last.

And Veach's feeling came true as the Sycamores avenged two regular-season losses to SIUC by outscoring the Salukis 46-28 in the second half in an 86-71 win in the opening round of the tournament.

"Two years ago, Illinois State beat us twice during the regular season, and we came into the tournament and beat them," Veach said. "So that was something that was in the back of our heads."

With the loss, the Salukis end its season with a seven-game losing streak, the longest since the 1980-81 season, and a 13-17 overall record. The Sycamores improved to 12-15 and advanced to the second round against Illinois State, where they lost to the Redbirds 72-58 Saturday afternoon.

Saluki coach Rich Herrin said SIUC's lackluster effort cost them the ball game in the second half.

"I think it's obvious we didn't contain their dribble penetration in the second half," Herrin said. "We didn't do a good job on the offensive end, and we didn't stop them defensively."

Junior guard Troy Hudson led the Salukis with 20 points, while junior forward Rashad Tucker added 19 points and pulled a game-high 14 rebounds.

The second half told the story for SIUC Friday. The Salukis made just eight of 38 field goal attempts in the half, including making three of 20 three-point field goal attempts for 15 percent.

It took 13 seconds for SIUC guard Beth Hasheider to go from villain to the hero in Saturday's 66-64 win over Bradley University at SIU Arena.

After throwing the ball away to Bradley with 15 seconds to go in the game, Hasheider stole the ball and hit an off-balance shot with 4 seconds left in the tied game on a play designed for senior guard Kasia McClendon to put the Salukis ahead for the victory.

Hasheider said a lot of thoughts were going through her head after the shot hit all net.

"I was thinking I had to redeem myself because I threw the ball away," she said. "I knew the clock was winding down."

"My first thought was we got to get back on defense because there was 4 seconds to go."

The Salukis, 13-13 overall and 9-9 in the Missouri Valley Conference, held a 14-point lead at the start of the second half, but the Lady Braves (15-11, 9-9) fought back with pressure defense to go up 62-60 with 1:13 left to play.

A foul by Bradley's Krishna Green on junior center Theia Hudson with 30 seconds left to play sent the Saluki to the charity stripe for two freebies. Hudson connected on the first free throw but missed the second.

Thankfully, the rebound fell in the hands of McClendon. She dished off to freshman forward Melaniece Bartley, who hit a jumper while being fouled by Bradley's Heather Best. The bucket and the extra point by Bartley put the Salukis ahead 64-62 with 26 seconds left in play.

But SIUC could not stop Bradley's fast break: a jumper by Green tied the ball game with on 16 seconds to go. Hasheider then gave Bradley the chance to go ahead by throwing the ball away on the in-bound pass, but redeemed herself by intercepting the pass and calling a time out with 15 seconds to play.

The final play was designed for McClendon to drive the basket and shoot a lay-up, but a double-team on McClendon forced her to dish off to Hasheider who threw up a jumper as she landed on her back to put the Salukis ahead 66-64.

The game ended even when Bradley's second shot was a brick off the glass.

McClendon said the last-second play did not work as planned, but it had the same

Aaron Jones hit a two-run homer to pace the baseball Salukis to a 7-2 win over visiting Eastern Illinois University in the opening round of the rain-shortened Best Inns Classic Friday at Abe Martin Field.

The win was SIUC's (1-6) first of the season, while Jones' shot to right-center was his third home run of the season.

After a rough 0-6 start, Saluki coach Dan Callahan said Friday's win was a nice change of scenery for the Salukis.

"It has been a rough two weeks prior to this one," Callahan said. "Just getting into the win column feels pretty good."

SIUC was only able to play one of three scheduled games because of rain. During Friday's nightcap, Northern Illinois University edged Western Illinois University 1-0 in a game called after six innings. Also rain shortened Saturday's action as EIU pounded Western 11-1 in six innings. Sunday's games in canceled.

The Salukis got things started in the fourth when center fielder Joe Schley led off the inning with a single, then scored when Jones homered to put SIUC up 2-0. Later in the inning third baseman Matt Dettman singled, advanced to second on a wild throw and then scored on a double by right fielder Carl Kochan.

SIU added two runs in the fifth to give starting pitcher Tory Hattan a 5-0 lead.

Eastern came up with one run in the sixth by scoring on two hits and a wild pitch by Hattan. Callahan decided to pull Hattan when the senior right-hander allowed another run in the seventh that cut the lead to 5-2.

Mike McConnell relieved Hattan with one out, runners on second and third and the tying run at the plate. McConnell struck out EIU's Mike Tomse and got Justin Stone to ground out to end EIU's threat.

McConnell retired the Panthers' final nine batters to record his first save of the season and preserve Hattan's first win.

After giving up a 5-0 lead at Texas Tech Feb. 21, Callahan said he was pleased with how Hattan and McConnell handled things Friday.

"Tory did a decent job," Callahan said. "I was a little discouraged with the way things transpired in the sixth, but I was pleased with Tory today. I thought he did a much better job pitching with a lead than he did at Texas Tech."

The Salukis (1-6) take on the Murray State Racers (0-0) Tuesday at 2 p.m. at Abe Martin Field.
